Colonial Representation.

London, July 11.—The Daily Chronicle this morning says that Mr. Chamberlain, finding that his plan for colonial representation in the House of Commons is out of the question, wants Canada, Australia and South Africa, each to have a representative in the House of Lords, and for this reason wished Sir Donald Smith, the Canadian High Commissioner, raised to the Peerage. Mr. Chamberlain hopes that when the Premiers return home and consult their governments they will arrange for the nomination of these representatives. Mr. Chamberlain also hopes, eventually to constitute the colonial agents-general into a sort of advisory council, meeting regularly at the Colonial Offices and giving the Colonial Secretary the benefit of their counsel. In addition to the fact, however, that the conferences held did not run as smoothly as Mr. Chamberlais, would have liked, a majority of the Premiers expressing surprise at the dilatory, easygoing methods of the Imperial authorities and the colonials towards the new problems created by the United States, whose instant action regarding Hawaii and Samoa as expanding their power, instruduced a totally new element into Australian politics.

A GAME OF FREEZE OUT.

New York, July 11 .- The fierce under-which the greater portion of the country has sweltered since the first of July, moderated in many localities to-day, and predictions from the Weather Bureau at Washington indicate that lower temperatures will bring general relief within 24 hours. The record of prostrations and deaths resulting from the loss-heated term approaches in magnitude that of a general epidemic. Reports from all sections of the country received by the Associated Press show prostrations numbering in the neighborheod of 2000, with fatalities close to 350. In addition to this there were scores of deaths resulting indirectly from the intolerable heat, the death rate in many of the large cities showing a fearful increase over previous years. The Central States suffered more severely than other sections, the heat being most deadly in Chicago, Cincinnati and St. Louis. In number of fatalities Chicago heads the list with 87 deaths, Cincinnati and St. Louis 42. Throughout the South the heat was intense, but the death rate much lower than in the North. In New York City to-day there were 31 prostrations, four fatal.

Best Fight is Barrie Jast.

Barrie, July 11.—About 9 o'clock hast night, Maloney and Clark, the burglars, who have been doing the safe cracking in these parts, and who are lodged in jail here, attacked Jailer Sissons and Turnkey Caldwell, when the latter entered the corridor to put them into their cells for the night. The weapons they used were legs of a cell stool, which they had divested of its bars and seat, using these legs as clubs. Sissons was struck over the head, and Caldwell on the right arm, which carried a revolver. A prisoner quite properly closed the corridor door, leaving the four men inside to fight if out. Caldwell covered Clark with a revolver and locked him his cell. Maloney refused to surrender, fighting viciously all the time with he jailer, and the turnkey at the jailer's request fired a shot into Maloney's right leg. He at once gave up and entered his cell. Doctors worked for considerable time to find the bullet, but did not succeed. The jailer used a large key freely on Maloney's head, leaving an ugly wound.

Mrs. Maioney, Teronto Junction, by Detective Davis at 2 o'clock on Saturday morning, on a charge of attempting to murder a Detective Beardsley of Barrie last Wednesday night. He was locked up at the jail and was yesterday brought to headquarters, handcuffed to a notorious their named Bob MoFradden. He was arraigned and verbally remanded to be taken to Barrie in the afternoon.

Awaiting the arrival of Detective Beardsley from Barrie, McLean was locked up in the cells and at about 1 o'dock Policeman Munro, who was on station duty, took him his dinner. Policeman Charlton went down to the cells with Munro, being curieus to see the prisoner, who was seated with the work of the cell and started to eat his dinner at once. In less than half an hour afterwards the prisoner had gained his liberty, and in the closet adjelning his cell an iron growbar about seven feet long, in addition to a beat bar in the cell and a lock wrenching the clock from the corridor, bore mute but strong testimony as to the manner in which the escape had been effected.

After wrenching the lock from the corridor door, the rest of McLean evident of poportunity when the station would be equity. Policeman Munro was alone in charge, Sergt. Archer, who is on station duty, being away at his dinner. The policeman had occasion to go to the guard room once or twice, and the door leading to the cells was left open for ventilation. This gave McLean all the chances he completed for the corridor. thence to Britain, and a third went northward through what is now Germany.

The branch of the church which was established in Rome became the all-powerful one, and, in the early centuries up to the reformation, wielded a potent and controlling influence in all matters of state and church in the early history of Europe.

In that time all adherents of the church, fike the soldiery, were characterized by an indomitable will bordering on ferociousness, and spared seither life mor interests in advancing the cause of the church. At the same time the mode of living practized by the priests and manks was simple in the extreme. They ate barely enough to sustain life, and the food was of the coarsest. They spent most of the time in fasting and prayer, and underwent all kinds of hardships in order to exemplify by daily action their humbleness and constancy. Of this class was Augustine, of whose early life but little is known. He was educated in a monastery on the Coclian bill, of which his patron, Gregory I. was subbot. He was soon made prior, and became famous for him to undertake, and he was never known to complain. His meckness and humility won for him the respect of his conference, even in a time when nearly everyone was jealous of another's success. The more the honors were showered upon Augustine the more humble his manner. His physique also stood him in stead, for he was nearly six feet three inches in his sandals, and was of commanding presence. Like all Romans, he was of swartly complexion, and was possessed of a flashing pair of black eyes, which was nearly six feet three inches in his sandals, and was of a commanding presence. Like all Romans, he was of swarthy complexion, and was possessed of a flashing pair of black eyes, which could lemit a fiery glow when he was angered, for angry he could become if messating demanded it.

The circumstances which led to the seeding of a missionary expedition to Brittany are best told by a legend which has been incorporated in some form in nearly all of the histories of the early church bas been incorporated in some form in nearly all of the histories of the early church struggles. When Gregory, who occupied the Papal chair from A. D. 500 to 694, was about of St. Andrew monastery on the Coelian hill in Rome he happened into the lave market one day in the year 585. Here he saw three beautiful young men of about 18 years exposed for sale. They were different in feature and form from any men Gregory and ever seen. He went toward them with an ineffable smale on his countenance. Their fair hair, which hung in profusion down over their shoulders, and the look of sadness which was enhanced to him as he had never been appealed to becore.

Approaching their owners, he said to the merchant:

"Whence come these fair captives?"

"From the Isle of Brittany."

"Are these islanders Christians?" asked Gregory.

Are these islanders Christians?' asked Gregory.

Oh, no. They are pagans."

'They are pagans."

They are pagans."

"They are called Angles."

"They are called Angles."

out of the evangelization of the Anglo-Raxon race in England. After Gregory became Pope, he began looking about him for a suitable person who should head the enterprise, and he could think or none who would answer the purpose better than his old colleague. Augustine. The latter was a prior in the monastery of Coelian hill when he was the abbot. He approached Augustine with the proposition, and was delighted to find the proposition, and was delighted to find the proposition, and was delighted to find the the proposition, and was delighted to find the proposition and was delighted to find the proposition of love and mercy, and it is just right for bread and the heavier kinds of cake; if a light brown, it is just right for bread and the heavier kinds of cake; if a light proven and the heavier kinds o OLD FALSTAFF INN AND WEST GATE. beautiful," he said, "Still I cannot leave the good of my father and my people without consulting my elders. Give me time to consider."

He told Augustine to so back to the Isle of Thanet and await his pleasure. Food and shelter were furnished the Christian crusaders and the privilege accorded them of preaching and converting whom they could. In a few days another meeting was held and Ethelbert embraced the Christian faith, being baptized with several of his followers, on Whitsunday, 597. The King's apparently-quick conversion has been disbelieved by many, but when it is observed that his wife Bertha was a Christian there can be no doubt that he had been instructed in the doctrines of the Church by his Queen. Bertha was the grand-daughter of Clovise of Gaul, and the daughter of Claribert, King of Paris, both of whom were Christians. One of the church of the control of the contro substance. They have lasted the raw ages of time down to the present and can still be seen in the building in Ganterbury.

By Christmastide, 597, Augustine and his followers had baptized 10,000 Anglo-Saxons, who seemed more than willing to accept the new doctrines. On Nov. 16, 597, Augustine went to Gaul, not to Rome, as has been reported by some blographers, and the Archbishop of Ares ordained him "Anglorum episcopes" of the English. Later on Cregory sent him the pallium of an archibishop; and so was created the first Archbishop of Ganterbury. At first the metropolis of the church was London, but the bishop, fearing that the greatness of London's King might overtop the church, had the seat of the church removed to Canterbury. Augustine then began the erection of a church, but before it was dedicated he had died, and his successor, Laurentius, completed it.

Augustine pushed his work into the West of England, going into Wales and Cornwall. Here he secomplished wonderful things for the church.

During all this time the church, the most important of which were the questions he propounded to Gregory, as to the conduct of the church and clergy, as well as his own. He also made a study of the races about him. He found that the Anglo-Saxons were idolaters and had many barbaric customs. The number of their gods was large, over which Thor was the omnipotent me. It took years of hard labor to tru these worshippers of inneges and nyths to his religious views, but how well he succeeded can be attested by the ecclesiastical history of England. The ecclebration of the 1300th anniversary of Augustine's landing will be observed from June 30 until Aug. 2. At the same in the decennial conference of bishops of the Protestant Episcopal. Church of all parts of the world will take place, instread of in 1898, the year when it seen shortened one year so as to have it simultaneously with that of the Augustine anniversary. Already bishops from every branch of the church, wherever it may be established, have congreated in Canterbury, wh THE DUCHESS OF KENT QUEEN VICTORIA'S MOTHER.

Hardly less awkward was it for her to have to amnounce her engagement to the Privy Council and to Parliament; but, in the opinion of every one, she went through the ordeal with perfect dignity and modesty. The wedding took place on Feb. 10, 1840, and a happier marriage it is impossible to conceive. The union was based on affection, and the Queen's wedded life was unclouded. In Prince Albert she had a devoted busband and a valuable, adviser, to whose wisdom and good sense much of the success and happiness of her reign may be attributed. But the match was not popular in England, and the Prince Consort's true worth was never appreciated till after his death. His foreign manners, his desire to improve the people, his very love of letters and art, were irritating to the British mind, but it is clear that his influence was a thoroughly wholesome one, and that England owes no small debt of gratifude to the man whom she once distrusted, and even disliked.—From the Diamond Jubilee number of St. James*—Budget.—The Human Life Line.

Starting from the base of the big toe there is a distinct line, says an exchange. This is the life line. In one foot it will curve along until it terminates under the instep far toward the lower base of the little toe. This means long life. If broken in the hollow of the foot it denotes a sickness at middle age, and if it terminates in the hollow of the foot it means a short life. This line is the most interesting one on the foot. The experiments that have been conducted lately have proved this to be an almost unteresting of longevity.

A Physician of Promineuce Says Haved Seats Are Not Injurious.

Among veteran wheelmen and wheelwomen the opinion is not at all uncommor that of all saddles the hard one is the best. The novice takes naturally to a soft seat, but not infrequently comes round after a season of two to the experienced rider's way of thinking. Some wheelmen in the medical fraternity have given this matter close attention, recognizing that if injury come from wheeling it will probably be traceable to the saddle rather than to anything else. Dr. L. C.
McElwee of St. Louis is among those of the medical profession who have studied this matter carefully. So interested was he in determining for himself as to the results of the bicycle exercise that he joined a century club, and in this way was able to acquire a great amount of valuable information regarding wheeling and its effects. Being brought into familiar touch with men accustomed to ride anywhere from one to fifty miles at a single sitting, he drew on their experience for matter on which to base an intelligent opinion. The results of his investigation have been laid before a medical society in a paper read by Dr. McElwee. The doctor, after a brief but emphatic general declaration in favor of bicycle exercise, said he proposed to deal particularly with the question whether the soft or hard saddle was the better. In the course of his remarks
he said:

Stockholders subscribed $4.000,000 toward the work, and from some of the promoters of the old company a further sum of $3,400,000 was forced. The remained of the commission of Dutch, Relation and French engineers, submitted in Max, 1890, estimates that a lock-canal could be built for $150,000,000, including interest on the investment and twenty per cent. for contingencies. Science and the Mosquite,

There are grour truths respecting the mesquite which modern science has established.

First—A mosquite cannot live in air free from malarial poison. Untainted air has the same effect on him as a healthy community on a doctor. It deprives him of patients, and he must go to less favored localities to practice.

Second—The lymph, which flows through an automatic valve when it inserts its probestis, contains a modified germ of the malarial fever, and, according to the well-settled law of inocculation, the introduction of the weak germ renders harmless an attack by the strong germ. tien, the introduction of the wax your renders harmless an attack by the strong germ.

Third—The mosquito never swallows human blood. It cannot. The fact that its body becomes discolored and swells, while probing, is caused by the discolored and the swells, while probing, is caused by the off inserting the probe.

Fourth—A mosquito will never insert its lancet in a person not susceptible to an attack of malaria. In this respect the sense is more accurate than the most skilled and experienced pathologist. This also proves not only its unerring instinct, but that it never wounds this provides the suspense of a skilled and humane surgeon, and even more 'anselish, for hope of a feel exercity of his patient deter him in the fulfilment of his ext.—Botton. Making of Towns Depends Upon Trivial Circumstances.

Great cities, says The Chautauquan, are seldom pre-eminent for any particular line of manufacture. Their industries are too large and diversified for any ohe of them to show marked, superiority over all the rest. Now and then a great industry of some city is taken from it. When ships were made of wood London was the great shipbuilding ceatre of the workl. Then iron ships came into use and London has lost her shipbuilding trade, which has been transferred to the Olyde, the Tyne and the Wear, right at the sources of iron and coal supplies.

The great vessels in which most ocean commerce is now carried have severely affected the interests of some ports. Cities that once were scaports are now inland so far as any great amount of cean traffic is concerned. The largest ships of commerce could once sail up the Avon to Bristol and the Severn to Gloucester. The far larger ships that now carry commerce cannot reach these places, but are compelled to stop at Avonmouth and Cardiff. Cargoes were formerly landed as far up the Thames as London bridge, but stammers now have to toop at the docks, some miles below that point. Breenen was once one of the work!'s greatest commercial cities, but her water front is now too shillow-for-deep-sca vessels, and her port is an Breenerthaven, several miles below. Hamburg, accessible to all classes of vessels, though 60 miles from the sea, has reaged the benefit of Bremen's misfortune, which, however, has not deprived the latter city of a large carrying trade.

The making of a town or city may sometimes depend upon what seems at first a trivial circumstance. Silk weavher is confined to towns where the streams are particularly fee from impurities. Some waters are better than others for silk dyeing, and this fact gives Leek, England, its pre-eminency water for brewing purposes is its sole advantage.

Colonel H. H. Heft, the chief electrical engineer of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, demonstrated in the recent inauguration of electricity for railway purposes that a direct current of electricity can be sent without serious loss from leakage for a distance of nearly thirteen miles; this means a radius of twenty-five miles from the central power station. Taking in this case Berlin, Conn., as the centre, it will be possible to replace steam locomotives and cars for Hartford, New Britain, Meriden, Waterbury, Middletown, Wallingford and other cities of the Nutmeg State, comprising a population of over 200,000 inhabitants.

The directoral of the New York & New Haven Road have gone into this work in earnest, says The New York and New Haven, will be equipped with electricity on the third-rail system instead of steam.

The present power-house in Berlin contains two engines and dynamos directly connected, capable of being worked up to 2000 herse-power each. This power-house is only half its full size. When the building is complet it will have six times as much power.

The third-rail system, in which the "live" rail is in the centre of the track, was adopted by C. P. Clark, president of the New Haven Road, after his experience with the third rail at Rast Weymouth, Mass. Mr. Clark made one great saving in laying the track between Perlin and Hartford by deciding that creo-sored wooden pegs were sufficiently non-conductive to replace the expensive insulators of procelain and glass which halitherto been employed. The central rail weighas 33 pounds to the yard, and on the part would be equal to 15 1-2 pounds of copper to the yard, an amount which is never used in actual practice.

The care are fifteen-bench open care, each equipped with two 125 horse-power motors. A controller is on each platform and on one platform is an electrical ir pump for the electric brakes and whistle. This pump is stopped and started by an ingenious automatic arrangement which comes into play as the pressure in the tanks rises above a

A Flexible Metallic Tubing.

The Committee of Science and Arts connected with the Franklin Institute, says The Philadelphia Record, have completed their invesigation of the merits of a recently-patented metallic tubing and report favorably, awarding the John Scott legacy medal and premium.

This tube consists of the helical coils, one inside the other, so disposed in relation to each other that the outside colliss originally wound perfectly close, and as the outside coil is wound over it, its convolutions are forced apart, the resulting tenison effecting a close Spint between the two coils. In the samples submitted for examination the inside coil is of circular section, and the outer one of triangular section, the base of the triangle being on the outside and the apex on the iffside of the coil.

Tubes which are not required to be air-tight (those, for instance, intended to support incandescent electric lamps) have the outside coil made of wire, the section of which is an acquilateral triangle, while a more obtuse vertical angle is used for tubes intended to conduct fluids or gases, so as no obtain a greater normal pressure on the joint. These tubes are designed for use as adjustable supports for incandescent electric lights, for conducting oil or other lubricating fluids to drills, boring tools, etc.; for supports for incandescent electric lights, for conducting oil or other lubricating fluids to drills, horing tools, etc.; for conducting air to blow-pipes, etc. The tubes designed for conducting fluids were found to be perfectly tight against leakage and well adapted for their intended purpose.

The Strongest Chain.

The greatest and strongest chain ever made has but recently left the Tripton Green Iron Works, of Parkes & Co., in England. The gigantic chain is intended for the British Government wharf at Chatham, and consists of oval links forged severally of three and one-half inch rods, each link being 20 inches long and 13 wide. In order to strengthen the chain each link received a cross-piece, hand-forged, and brazed to both sides. The chain will be used with the large crane at the wharf, which will be employed in loading and unloading the heaviest ordnance or steel forgings into or from the British men-of-war. Since there was no machinery available for testing a chain of such dimensions the test was made by actual suspension of a weight of 400 tons, or $96,000 pounds from each link.

Parts of It Suggestive of Scenes in the Old World.

From Quebec, Canada, a correspondent writes to The Paris Daily Messenger: "Ici on parle francais: "might be written on the portals of this quaint and picturesque old city. Strolling in lower Quebec you might easily fancy yourself in Amiens or Dieppe. In the upper town there is more English, but everywhere an amusing mixtu. On the same card you will read. "Maison a louer," and "House to let:" on one side of the door "Pas d'admission sans affaires," and on the other "No admittance except on business." This bilingual necessity causes a little extra painting and printing. Each "railway crossing" must be marked likewise, "Traverse du chemin de fer." and every official "notice" must be printed also in full as an "Ayis." The blending is often curious, as when ements one in French and the other in English. Alons, the Grande Alle, running right across the Plains of Abrahum, you might be in Brussels or Paris, only that "Olifton Terrace" seems to recall you to Kensington Travelers for whom Europe is too distant are advised to go to Quebec there to find a bit of the medieval Old. World transplanted to the new, but still embalmed in its ancient religious sentimen talism, upon which the rush and roar of modern unrest produce as little effect at the Atlantic breakers on the cliffs of Cape Breton. French continues unpermost until you pass Montreal, but from Oftswa and Kingston to the Pacific the legend of the nearly universal tongue is like that of the Paris shookeepers, who announced "Braglish spoken." In most of the medieval Did when announced "Braglish spoken." In most of the medieval Did when announced "Braglish spoken." In most of the medieval Did when announced "Braglish spoken." An International Postage Stamp,
If you write a letter to a correspondent in the United States, you can enclose a stamp for cepty. But suppose you write to someone abroad, and wish to prejay the answer! How are you to do?

The International Postal Union is in sension in Washington, this mouth, and it is dealted that it shall authorize the issue of an international postage stamp which will serve this purpose of prepaying the reply to a letter to a foreign our-respondent. Such a stamp should avail to carry a letter from any, one, of the countries in the Postal Union to say other, it should be for sale in all countries, but need not supersede the or, dinary stamps, as its cheft use would be this one, of prepaying, replies. The need of this stamp has been suggested before, thin six American resident in London, who writes from there to The Evening Post about the matter, talls of the queer little detail that has herefore prevented its issue, It eccum that at present the various stamps which carry fetters between the countries of the Fostal Union are not of precisely the same value. The amount of gold in an English sovereign with buy 96 stamps for foreign postage in Bugtand, 100 in France, 101 in Gesmany and 97 in the United States. One way that is suggested to prevent this inequality from making trouble is to charge a little more for the instrumental international stamp, because it would interfere with a country, insteand of 2 pence hasf-penny. But whether this precaution in needed or not, there ought to be an available stamp by which the reply to a foreign letter may be prepaid. This is clearly a matter of business convenience that the International Postal Union should provide for. It is said, but seems altered insufficiently prepaid.—Harper's Weekly.

How Sugar Is Whitened.

The way in which sugar is made perfectly white, it is said, was found out in a curious way. A hen that had gone through a clay mud puddle went with her muddy feed by some one that wherever the tracks were the sugar was whitened. This led to some experiments. The result was that the wet clay came to be used in refining sugar.

It is used in this way: The sugar is put into earthen jars, shaved as you see the sugar load. The smaller ends have a hole in them. The jar is filled with sugar, the clay is put over the top and kept wet. The moisture goes down through the sugar, and drops from the hole in the small end of the jar. This makes the sugar prefectly white.

A New Wav to Get a Seat.

There was a scene on one of the long-distance electric cars the other day which, while it turned out to be a concedy, had all the elements of a tragedy in it while it lasted, says The Chicago Times-Herald. It was occasioned by a bright but purely selfish action on the part of a man who had been defrauded of his seat 4n the car in this wise:

The conductor had taken his fare and given him his change, but something evidently was wrong with it, for he got up and rused to the rear of the car, leaving an opening for a fat woman whe was standing up and who immediately plumped down into the vacated seat.

When the man returned he was mad clear through. He looked at the woman, cleared his throat and said:

"Madam, if you will let me get my things you can keep the seat."

"Nein," said the woman, "dere is worms here."

"You are covering them up, madamif you will kindty move."

"Nein! I move nozsins," and she settled herself for a ride to the end of the But the man got his possessions. As the car approached a railroad crossing, and the conductor waved to the motor.

Cool, cloudy, with occasional Scotch mists, describes the weather that pre-vailed on the 12th, and while interested at the celebration here, it was clearly demonstrated before the noon hour arrived that it requires more than unfavorable weather to dampen the ardor and restrain the loyal Orangemen of Leeds County from honoring the anniversary of King William's great achievement. London, July 12.—The visit Saturday to Hawarden of Sir Wilfrid Laurie Mr. R. J. Seddon and Mr. George I Mr. R. J. Seddon and Mr. Gerge at Reid, Prime Ministers respectively of Canada, New Zealand and New South Wales, was a great success. The Fre-miers were much impressed with Mr. Gladstone's mental alertness and physical vigor, and also by his magnetism and charm of manner. They declare it is no wonder that he exercised such influence by MR. Grandouter Vision to the con-reminiscences and his knowledge of col-onial affairs from the time 62 years ago when he was appointed Under Sec-retary of State for the Golonies, Several group photographs of Mr. Akdstone and his visitors were gakep.

A REBELLION IN BORNEO

evernment Station at Gays Locted, Treat Labuan, Island of Labuan, northwest coast of Borneo, July 12.-Matsalley, the rebel leader, with 60 followers, at tacked and burned the Government sta-tion at Gaya at daybreak yesterday. He looted the town, sacked the treasury, securing about £2000 on deposit, im-prisoned the officers in charge and prisoned the officers in charge and others, and killed a corporal of police. The British Resident here has gone to Gaya with a small force of Dyaks. There are no Duropeans at Gaya, which is a mere collection of rude huts in charge of an eurasian (half-breed) officer and a few police. Matsalley has already been proclaimed an outlaw, and it is believed that his following is small. The Dyaks and Sikhs who are being sent to huat him out of the jungle will probably capture him easily.
