The Gravity of Sin.

The world continues to go on in its old and wicked course, offending God, careless of the malice of sin, as well as the dreadful punishments which have been meted out to sinners in all ages. Yet were people only to consider a moment in their hearts, they would easily see that mortal or grievous sin is a thing to be avoided at all costs of mental or bodily pain or trouble. For consider who is the subject of the attack made by the sinner. He is God the Almighty Deity, Who created the world, and Who made man out of the slime of the earth. He it is Who made all the wonders of the world for the use and for the pleasure of man. The vast seas, the towering mountains, the rivers, and the plants with their products in the animal, mineral and vegetable kingdoms, all were freely bestowed on man by this beneficent Maker. All his faculties of seeing, hearing, feeling, etc., so admirably adapted to the uses for which they are intended, are gifts from the same Divine Benefactor.

This God Who has done all this for man is infinite in His power and infinitely to be revered. Sins committed against Him therefore are of infinite malice. But what we owe to God is made more manifest when we consider what the Son has done for us. He has come down from Heaven and has for our sake lived in poverty and misery. He has faced humiliation and suffering, and wounds and death, in order that we might be redeemed, and might not suffer the pains of hell. Consider His agony in the garden, His most cruel scourging, His carrying of the cross, and finally His Crucifixion between two thieves, and then think how wicked and how diabolic is the action of the sinner who sins previously and makes void the Savior's shedding of His precious blood. And who is it that thus dares to raise his guilty hand against the Almighty? A miserable creature, destined to live but a few short days, and afterwards to die and his body become again the dust of the earth. A creature full of weaknesses and unworthiness, feeble of intellect and unstable as water. This creature of an hour dares to rebel against the Creator Who is to be his judge at the end of the world. Ah, how severe shall be that judgment if the sinner does not do penance!

How terrible to think that the God Who so loves that sinner must condemn him to pain and banishment forever. People say, "God is too merciful to punish sinners, and they shall all be saved as well as the just." Fool and vain saying! God would not be true to His own very essence if He did not banish impenitent sinners from His presence forever. The relation of the human soul to God is fairly well illustrated by the analogy of the relation of the eye to the sun and its light. As long as the eye is healthy and normal it loves to see the rays of the sun and the scene illuminated by its beams, just as the soul in sanctifying grace loves to contemplate God and the things connected with His worship. But let the eye become hurt or diseased, or let the soul lose grace by falling into mortal sin and a change comes over the scene. The sun has not changed a particle, but suddenly its rays become hurtful and painful to the diseased eye and in a paroxysm of fear it seeks the darkness where its rays cannot penetrate. To that diseased eye the sun has become a thing of fear and terror, forever threatening pain and destruction. So it is also with the soul that is diseased by sin. God has not changed, but it has itself changed, and because of this change the countenance of God is terrible to it and fills it with fear and consternation. That soul no longer loves the presence of God or seeks for His glory. That soul flies in terror from God, as the diseased eye flees the ardent and unbearable rays of the sun. God Whom the soul so loved before becomes intolerable to it now, and it is driven away from the luster of His face to dwell in that "exterior darkness" where the blinding rays of His love and mercy never shine. Sin therefore is a terrible and an unmitigated evil, and nothing in this world can compensate us for the loss of sanctifying grace in the soul. Sin is the one thing in the world to be avoided and shunned as one would shun some terrible leprosy. We all love God and do not wish to offend Him Who has done so much for us. We should therefore seek to realize more and more the gravity and enormity of sin that we may sincerely repent of it and ever afterwards walk in the newness of His grace and love.

Little Sisters in China.

The Little Sisters of the Poor have houses in all principal cities of Europe and America, for these countries are Christian, and charity flourishes there. In the Far East conditions are very different. The religions of Buddha and Confucius have produced, in the course of centuries, some humanitarian works, but these lack the efficiency and the stability of genuinely charitable institutions.

It remains for the Little Sisters of the Poor to go with a supernatural courage into these countries and establish their work, which counts only on the free gifts of charity. In 1904 they began work in Shanghai, China, under great difficulty, with seventy-two old women housed in rickety Chinese dwellings. Two years later they were able to accommodate 150 women and 100 men in cottages built for the purpose. The following year they had 300 beds. At Shanghai, as elsewhere, the Little Sisters go humbly two by two, from door to door, to beg for their old people. They go to the consulates, the large stores, hotels, barracks, schools, and gratefully receive supplies, clothes, money or whatever else the charitable may be moved to contribute.

All people of every religion and no religion aid the Little Sisters of the Poor. Only once in Shanghai has a man closed the door in their faces saying: "I am not of your sect." But on their next round they went again to the house and this time he subscribed a large sum of money. Since then he has contributed regularly every month. Thanks to the zealous, self-sacrificing labours of these good Sisters, Christian charity is gradually working miracles in Shanghai, the city of business and pleasure, the very centre of pagan materialism.—Sacred Heart Review.

Calmness at the Hour of Death.

I have always been puzzled at the extraordinary calm, peace and freedom from anxiety that I have observed in the dying, even in those who have not been models of virtue, says the Right Reverend Bishop Vaughan, and since it is a subject which has always possessed a certain fascination for me I have again and again questioned other priests regarding their experience, which has in no case differed from my own. Well do I remember proposing this fact as a difficulty to the late Cardinal Manning. Stated one winter's evening in his room, almost roasted by the huge fire before which he was wont to toast his meager wasted form and chatting upon all kinds of engrossing topics, he began to refer to his declining strength and advancing years. This turn in the conversation soon gave the opportunity I sought for. "How," I asked him, "do you account for the strange circumstance that when death really comes people seem to fear it so little? It seems to me that however good a man may be, the mere notion of falling into the great unknown and of meeting God face to face, and of having one's fate definitely and irrevocably settled for all eternity, ought to cause any one on the brink of the grave the most indescribable apprehension and the most acute anguish."

"Well, dear fellow," replied this Cardinal, "the vast majority of persons do undoubtedly die calm enough, and my explanation is briefly this: So long as God intends a man to live He wisely infuses into his soul a certain natural dread and horror of death in order that he may be induced to take ordinary care of himself and to guard against danger and needless risks. But when God intends man to die there is no longer any object for such fear. It can serve no further purpose. What is the result? Well, I take it, God then simply withdraws it." This explanation of the old Cardinal pleased me well and seemed not only to account for the singular phenomenon, but to be in a peculiarly apt and convincing light.

Monks of St. Bernard.

St. Bernard of Meuthon (923-1008), a rich and highly educated young man of Meuthon, near Anancy, in Savoy, after adopting the religious life devoted himself to the conversion of the people of the Alps, and this he did for forty-two years, during which he converted countless souls and worked many miracles. It was he who founded the famous Hospice of St. Bernard.

From most ancient times a path ran across the Pennine Alps leading from the valley of Aosta over what is now the pass of the Great St. Bernard. This pass is covered with perpetual snow from seven to eight feet deep, and sometimes drifts piled up as high as forty feet. Because of avalanches and for other reasons this pass was dangerous at all times, still it was much used by French and German pilgrims on their way to Rome.

For their convenience and protection St. Bernard established a monastery and hospice at the highest point of the pass, 8,000 feet above sea-level, in 962. Later he established another hospice on another dangerous part of the pass. He went to Rome and received pontifical approval, both establishments being placed in charge of Augustinian monks.

The work of St. Bernard and his companions have accomplished its known the world over, and is immortalized in song and story. Accompanied by their well trained dogs, the heroic monks have rescued countless victims of the severe weather that prevails in these regions. The rescued receive food, shelter and clothing, and the dead are consigned to Christian burial. This is all done gratuitously, from pure Christian charity. The work is supported entirely by gifts from the faithful.

At present there are forty monks in the hospices, some of whom have charge of neighboring parishes. St. Bernard was canonized in 1681. His feast-day is June 15.

Prejudice in the South.

It is a pity that there exists in the South an un-Christian race prejudice against the negro and the possibility of his being educated and uplifted. Such a prejudice is found, however, and the missionary must first overcome it before he can make much progress with his work. Father Dahleat, S. J., of Macon, Ga., says he dispelled this dark cloud somewhat, and where a year ago he met with cold glances, he now receives a noisy welcome from the children and a friendly greeting from the grown-ups. The Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament are coming to help him next year, and they will be a blessing to the mission.

For 7 Years Was Troubled With Her Liver.

Milburn's Lax-Liver Pills
Cures Constipation

Mrs. E. L. Hurst, 81 Symington Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have been troubled with my stomach and liver for the past seven years; also have had constipation, causing headache, backache and dizzy spells, and I would almost fall down. I tried all kinds of remedies without obtaining any relief. I commenced using Milburn's Lax-Liver Pills, and they have done me a great deal of good. I have never had any more of my ailments, and they are all very much relieved. I feel like a new woman, and I can do my work as usual."

Monks of St. Bernard.

Henry Miller in the following story proves how wit can effectually save a man from humiliation.

"During the Civil War, at a camp in Ohio, a captain fresh from civil life and grand in a brand new uniform, happened to observe two men shooting at a target.

"Here, boys," said he, "let me show you how to shoot."

"Taking a gun in hand, he fired and missed.

"That," said he to one of the soldiers, is the way you shoot."

"He fired a second shot and hit the bull's eye.

"And that," said he, "is the way I shoot."—Young's Magazine.

BEWARE OF WORMS.

King's County Exhibition

The King's County Exhibition held at Georgetown on Wednesday last was of a high order of merit...

The formal opening of the building took place shortly after noon. Mr. W. W. Jenkins, President of the Exhibition Association, presided and conducted the ceremonies.

His Honor expressed his pleasure at having the opportunity of opening this exhibition. He thought Georgetown, all things considered, had good reason to congratulate itself on the show represented within the four walls of the building.

Hon. M. McKinnon, Commissioner of Agriculture, said it was rather discouraging to have such unfavorable weather for the exhibition both this year and last year.

Major Leigh, recruiting officer, delivered a brief address, explaining the conditions of the service and expressing the hope that some would come forward and enlist on the spot.

Excellent meals were served in the Town Hall by the ladies of the Red Cross Society. Visitors were courteously treated and served with abundance of the very best of eatables.

The Western Crops

Evidence of the unfair way in which the Liberals play the game is furnished by a cartoon which has been doing duty in Liberal newspapers in the western part of Canada.

asked to grow. Now what am I to do with it? In this way the western farmers are being told that as they responded to the request to grow larger crops they have a right to demand that the Government or the Empire should take the crops off their hands.

The average farmer has as much sense as the average Liberal politician and that pays no compliment to the agriculturist. It is not apparent that the farmer of the west who specializes in grain is less well provided with grey matter than his brother in the east who raises garden produce and engages in mixed farming.

The heavy wheat crop is a benefit to the west and to Canada at large even though the supply of wheat in the United States and Argentine is larger than usual and the price for wheat this year may not be as high as in former years.

Germany already knows a wheat shortage. Britain should never know it. Instead of seeking to ensure the Government for asking that the crops be increased, fair men will be inclined to praise them for their patriotic and wise foresight in seeking to add to the Empire's food supply.

Progress of the War.

London, Sept. 29.—The Allies' great offensive in Artois and the Champagne is still being persevered in, and, according to French accounts, which however are contradicted by the German official reports, further progress has been made in both areas.

London, Sept. 30.—While the Anglo-French troops in Artois apparently are now simply engaged in consolidating the ground won and opposing the German counter-attacks, the battle for the German second line of defence in Champagne—the collapse of which would scotch the menace of the greater part of the German position in the west—is proceeding with the greatest stubbornness.

were captured or exterminated. The Germans, however, admit the loss of Hill No. 191, to the north of Massiges, where the French are not far from the railway triangle, the possession of which has been of the greatest advantage to the Germans, as one of the lines has been used for supplying the Argonne army.

Paris, Oct. 1.—New progress for the allied troops in the Givency wood, the capture of additional German machine guns and prisoners in the Champagne region, and the stopping of a German bombardment in the Argonne by a French counter-offensive are recorded in the French official communication made public tonight. The communication says: "Some new progress has been realized in the southern part of the Givency wood (Artois)."

Paris, Oct. 4.—Trench fighting of a violent nature in Artois throughout the day is reported in the French official communication issued tonight, which adds that to the south of Givency the Germans have gained a footing at the crossing of Five Roads, but were repulsed everywhere else.

Service for the Dead

The annual procession to the Catholic Cemetery, and service for the dead therein, took place on Sunday afternoon last. The initial service was held in the Cathedral at 2.30, his Lordship the Bishop officiating, assisted by the Cathedral clergy. The Miserere and Libera were sung by the choir, and the absolution pronounced by his Lordship.

The musical part of the service was rendered by the Cathedral choir, accompanied by the band. The Bishop and clergy officiated on the stand erected near the Calvary group. His Lordship Bishop O'Leary recited the Litany for the dead, and his Lordship Bishop McNally, arrayed in Cope and Mitre, pronounced the absolution. After the choir had rendered the "Benedictus," and "De Profundis," Rev. J. J. McDonald preached the sermon.

His text was from the 21st verse of the XIX chapter of the Book of Job: "Have pity on me, have pity on me, at least you my friends; because the hand of the Lord hath touched me."

The Rev. preacher pointed out that the appeal contained in the words of the text came forth continually from the holy souls in purgatory to all those brethren in Christ who had the power of helping them. It was a doctrine of our holy faith that souls quitting their bodies might be detained in the next life for a certain time before they could be fitted for union with their Creator.

enter into union with God in heaven.

That this doctrine was held by the Jews, under the old law, we have a most striking proof in the action of Judas Maccabees, the valiant general, who after a battle, ordered a collection and ordered the money to be sent to Jerusalem for sacrifice to be offered for the souls of those who had been slain.

If we go back to the times of persecution we would find evidences of this belief in purgatory. In the catacombs of Rome were to be found inscriptions indicating the belief that existed in the early Church regarding prayers for the dead. It is sufficient for us to say, so far as the doctrines of the Church are concerned, that it was emphatically declared as an article of faith by the Council of Trent. On every penitent sinner guilt was recorded and a debt of eternal punishment. It was for us then enough to know that the Church had ordained this holy doctrine of prayers for the dead.

Was it proper that Almighty God should allow them to possess the joys and the privileges without having given some satisfaction for these blessings. Would they join hands with the Arch Fiend himself in saying "I will not serve?"

The service concluded with the singing of the "Libera." The weather though very threatening all through the afternoon remained fair and the homeward march, enlivened by the music of the Band, was accomplished under favorable conditions.

The second annual exhibition for Eastern King's County was held at Souris yesterday and was an eminent success. The weather was beautiful and the attendance was large. The formal opening took place in the drill shed about noon. Hon. John McLean presided and introduced his Honor the Lieutenant Governor, who delivered a pleasing speech and declared the exhibition opened. We will refer to the exhibition in our next issue.

The Canada Gazette of Saturday Oct. 2, contains this notice of appointment: Austin Levi Fraser, of Souris, in the Province of Prince Edward Island, Esquire, Barrister-at-law; to be Judge of the County Court of Kings County, in the Province of Prince Edward Island, aforesaid, in the room, place and stead of Stanislaus Blanchard, Esque, deceased.

With the exception of having saved some of the furnishings from the lower part of the house all is a total loss and much sympathy is felt for Mr. McDonald.

Entire Family Stricken With Cholera.

Youngest Child Died.

The chief symptoms of cholera are vomiting and purging occurs either simultaneously or alternately, and are usually sudden and very violent, and the matter ejected by the stomach has a bilious appearance and a nasty bitter taste. On the first symptom appearing Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry should be taken, and the trouble cured.

Mrs. E. Slade, 376 Logan Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "When I first arrived in Canada, nearly four years ago, my entire family was stricken with cholera, from which the youngest child died. Soon after a friend recommended Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and acting on this advice I administered it to all who were suffering, with the most gratifying results. Since that first attack my children have been subject to stomach troubles, but on the first symptoms I resort to 'Dr. Fowler's' and it always brings relief. I have immense faith in this medicine, and always keep a bottle on hand. Also I never fail to recommend it to anyone who is similarly troubled."

When you ask for "Dr. Fowler's" see that you get it.

It has been on the market for over 70 years. There is nothing "just as good."

Across the Sands.

BY MARION AMES TAGGERT in Benziger's Magazine.

To the woman living in the tiny house beneath the protection of the dunes the sands were at once the drama and its theater...

An Ancient Foe

To health and happiness is Scrofula as ugly as ever since time immemorial. It causes bunces in the neck, disfigures the skin, inflames the mucous membranes...

sewn before their solitary discoverer; sea creatures lay at her mercy till another tide should rise to take them back to their lost world. No day was without its incident, wonderful absorbing; no day but brought to the sands its special gift of beauty which they shared with her who lived beside them, dependent upon them for all that made up the sum of life.

Whether she was old or young it would have been hard at first glance to have said. Solitude shortens youth, yet daily contact with the infinite prolongs it.

The little woman brushed back her hair with a girlish gesture and straightened her slender figure to the brisk wind, still blowing inward from the east.

The little woman's eyes widened and laughed, her face shone like her sands in the fresh morning sunshine after the storm. The beach spread its glories before her and her spirit accepted them.

"Magnificat anima Domini," she murmured. But what was this, shining among the brilliance of the sands? Nothing like this had ever before risen to greet her across their plain. It was golden, burnished gold. It turned toward her and slowly across to a greater height, then advanced upon her. A child's head, the golden shining fineness of a little child's hair.

The child came steadily toward the little woman across the sands. It did not hesitate; its pace was purposeful and unwavering, remarkably purposeful for a tiny creature who bore that radiant

"Dear heart," cried the little woman, gathering this marvelous blossom of the sands into her arms. "Where did you come from? What's your name?"

"Out of the big boat. Blessing's my name. What is your name?" said the baby.

"Margaret. Come, Blessing, come home with me; I'll feed you," said the little woman, not certain yet whether this gift of the sands with the significant name was living or a dream, even when the little petal fingers clasped her.

"I'm hungry. Dave-dear fed me all up just before. I want Dave-dear," said Blessing. "Come home with me, little Blessing whispered Margaret, guessing a tragedy.

"Now warm milk, Blessing, even if you are not hungry," suggested Margaret, and Blessing accepted it gratefully in long breaths, till for the last time the baby's lips, all red and white and milky, quitted the edge of the old-fashioned silver cup, that had been Margaret's own, and Blessing remarked: "There" with the satisfaction of repletion.

"What's your name?" demanded Blessing. "A scrap of a nap" cried Margaret, enveloping the child in a toasted blanket from before the fire.

"After what, little Blessing" asked Margaret. "After I was on the beach, when the water put me on the beach," explained the baby wearily as if the density of the adult mind wore upon her.

Margaret wrapped her close in the warm blanket, shuddering, her joy crushed down by the swift rising image of this little body beaten, then tossed to safety a toy of the sea's caprice.

A few minutes later a man came striding up the beach from the direction where the coast-
