Macdonald School Notes

The Faculty wish to thank all those who helped in any way to make the Christmas Concert a success. We are especially indebted to Mr. Armour for the use of Armdale Theatre. The sum of fifty-four dollars was taken from which we will realize about forty-six which is to be used to pay for the set of Maps in History.

The boys and girls of the Prep. Dept. followed the custom which they observed last year: distributing of their abundance to those less fortunate. Eighty parcels including clothing especially, and also books and games have been forwarded to Mrs. Croaker's house for the local committee to distribute.

The School Board have our hearty thanks for a new Union Jack. It is six by three feet and was received on Friday, the 14th inst.

We have never acknowledged before our indebtedness to Mrs. W. G. Parsons for her splendid essay on Thanksgiving Day which appeared in the Chronicle. It has been the basis of lessons in our schools.

The Faculty recently took the opportunity to replace the old Edition of the Book of Knowledge by one of recent date. It is bound in half leather. The old books may be rebound for further use by the students.

Keep fresh dear old memories of the old home town: Send "The Outlook" to a distant friend. It's a regular conscience gift.

United Church Notes

A largely attended meeting of the Official Board of United Church was held on Wednesday, Dec. 11th at 8 p. m. in the Church Parlor, the Rev. J. G. Hockin, presiding.

The financial statement for the half year was submitted. It was decided to continue the 11 o'clock morning service with a special word for the children to be followed by Sunday School and Bible Classes at 12 (noon) to continue one hour.

During the winter months if it is expected that a series of special services will be arranged to be addressed by the Clergymen from other towns. The first of these will be on December 25th, when Rev. Dr. R. S. Quigley will preach at both services.

Mr. E. S. Goudge was unanimously elected treasurer in place of Dr. J. A. Spongale who asked to be relieved.

Ven. Archdeacons Vroom's Visit

The congregations of St. Andrew's Church, Lawrencetown and of Holy Trinity, Middleton, had the pleasure of hearing the Ven. Archdeacon Vroom last Sunday. Dr. Vroom preached in the morning on "ministers of Christ and stewards of the mysteries of God," while in the evening he spoke on "the Kingdom of God." He showed how the coming of this kingdom could be taken in three senses; in one sense it was already come, having begun with Christ; in another it was coming now; and in a third sense it had still to come and would be ushered in on that great day when Christ will come again to judge the quick and the dead. He showed how the same process held true of earthly kingdoms. The Archdeacon referred to the Forward-Movement held a few years ago and he explained that the funds from this movement had not been lost but were doing good work now. Some $40,000 had been returned to the diocese and had made possible the presence of a coadjutor bishop; the Widows and Orphan Fund, the Supernatural Fund and Missionary enterprise had all greatly benefited and were in very much stronger position now than before.

He urged every Christian to work for the extension of God's kingdom, and he showed how the influence of God's kingdom was at work in health-lands and a powerful force in world politics.

In the afternoon the Rector conducted service at the Union Church, Wilnot.

He is indebted to Mr. Kelly Mr. C. L. Foss and Mr. Pine for their kindness in driving him on the occasions of these services.

Enforcement of Liquor Law is Strongly Urged

ANNAPOLIS COUNTY SOCIAL SERVICE COUNCIL.

OTHER URGENT SOCIAL PROBLEMS DISCUSSED — REV. P. R. HAYDEN IS NEW PRESIDENT.

Bridgetown, Dec. 11—A rally of the Temperance and Social workers of Annapolis County was held here yesterday with afternoon and evening sessions, in Gordon Providence United Church. There was a good attendance of clergymen and a fair proportion of laymen and a thorough discussion of temperance and social matters was carried on. The principal speakers were Rev. H. R. Grant, secretary of the Provincial Service Council, and Rev. W. D. Wilson, pastor of Middleton Baptist Church, and for four years Chief Temperance Inspector for New Brunswick.

Mr. Grant made an eloquent plea for delinquent and neglected children and for those who were blind of whom Sir Frederick Fraser had said that there were fifteen out of a hundred in Nova Scotia uneducated. He also referred briefly to the menace to the community of the feeble-minded girl and discussed also the matter of aid for the children of widowed mothers. Nova Scotia was behind other provinces, Ontario, for instance, in this regard, prison reform was needed. In dealing with the liquor question, he said prohibition had failed through the laxity of the officials. In eight years of open bar in Halifax there had been 2345 arrests; in eight years of prohibition only 395.

He strongly condemned the presence of export houses and said their effect was detrimental to the cause of Temperance. They were an injury to Nova Scotia and an injury to a friendly country, the United States. Fast motor boats were needed on our coasts to prevent smuggling and rum-running and the co-operation of the federal authorities was essential if any effective efforts to put down this form of lawlessness.

Rev. W. D. Wilson also spoke of the matter of export houses and declared they should be closed, as they had been in New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. There was a great deal of argument at present as to which was best — prohibition or government control. From testimony which he had secured in New Brunswick from lumbermen and other large employers of labor, prohibition was considered best. With the introduction of government control in British Columbia crime had increased 90 per cent. In Vancouver the police force had to be increased seventy per cent. Taxes had increased forty-five per cent. Results of the same kind were apparent where government control had taken the place of prohibition. In Quebec it was said that the provincial debt was very much lower than in other provinces, but here debts were saddled on the municipalities which in other provinces were assumed by the provincial governments. In the county of Annapolis, the Inspector under the Temperance Act was given $300 per year salary. What could a man be expected to do for that? Prisoners convicted of liquor offences should be provided with suitable work and there should be real punishment involved in imprisonment, he declared.

Liquor inspectors in New Brunswick wick received salaries of from $1200 to $1800 per year, with expenses paid. He strongly urged that the enforcement of the Act be removed from political and social influence. There was too much pressure brought to bear on inspectors to go slowly and keep down costs to the minimum.

PRESCRIPTIONS

Resolutions were presented to the meeting and passed and considerable discussion took place, during which it was said that the Vendor's Commission could now refuse requests for liquor which were considered excessive. In United States the number of prescriptions which doctors could issue had been cut down to about thirty five a month.

Rev. A. W. L. Smith of Antigonish, said they should look to the government to remedy the abuses in connection with the sale of liquors.

Mayor Hicks spoke briefly in connection with the vendor question and sales in Bridgetown. He said that, under the laws at present, the hands of the towns were tied. The people know his personal views on the question and whatever had been done in connection with any sale of liquor in the town had been done under legislation.

Rev. A. J. Prosser thought, while it might be all right to get after the government in connection with these matters, it was better to begin at home, putting up the question to the towns and municipalities.

The election of officers for the Social Service Council of Annapolis county resulted as follows:

President, Rev. P. R. Hayden; Vice-Pres., Rev. W. H. Rackham; Sec.-Treas., Rev. W. D. Wilson.

An executive board of seven will be added to this list of officers.

SEVENTEEN

A tale of youth and summer time and the Baxter family, especially William.
By BOOTH TAKINGTON.
Copyrighted.

"Why, he?" Genesis began slowly, "he ain't no laundryman." He came to an uncertain pause. If she chose to assume, with quick feminine intuition, that the dog was William's and that William was a laundryman it was not Genesis's place to enlighten her. "The 'lary,'" he reflected, "since she talks so free about gittin' people 'rested'! He became aware that William had squirmed through the hedge and now lay prostrate on the other side of it, but this, likewise, was something with neither his duty nor his inclination to reveal.

"You stop them, or I'll have you arrested!"

"This here laundryman," said Genesis, resuming—"this here laundryman what own the dog, I reckon he must 'hopped on 'at street car what went by." "Well, he ought to be arrested!" she said, and, pressing her cheek to Flop's, she changed her tone. "It's rum's ickle heart a-beatin' so floppity! Up's own nummy make 'ums all right, up's p'ebus Flop!"

Then, with the consoling Miss Parcher's arm about her, and Mr. Watson even more dazed with love than when he had first met her, some three hours past, she made her way between the tubs and passed on down the street. Not till the three and Flop were out of sight did William come forth from the hedge. In silence then they resumed their journey. Clematis was waiting for them at the corner ahead.

That evening, at about half past 7 o'clock, dinner being over and Mr. and Mrs. Baxter (parents of William) seated in the library, Mrs. Baxter said: "Do I have to dress?" Mr. Baxter asked plaintively, "I'm getting old enough not to have to, don't you think, mamma?" he urged appealingly.

"When a man's my age?" "Nonsense!" she said. "Your figure is exactly like William's. It's the figure that really shows age first, and yours hasn't begun to." And she added briskly, "Go along like a good boy and get it over."

Mr. Baxter rose submissively and went upstairs to do as he was bid. But after fifteen or twenty minutes, during which his footsteps had been audible in various parts of the house, he called down over the banisters:

"I can't find my evening clothes! They aren't anywhere in the house!" "Where did you put them the last time you wore them?" she called.

"I don't know." "All right, I'll come," she said, putting her clothing upon the table and rising. "Men never can find anything," she observed.

Search high, search low, no trace of Mr. Baxter's evening clothes was to be found. "Perhaps William could find them," said Mrs. Baxter, a final confession of helplessness.

But William was no more to be found than the missing apparel. William, in fact, after spending some time in the lower back hall, listening to the quest above, had just gone out through the kitchen door. And after some ensuing futile efforts Mr. Baxter was forced to proceed to his club in the accompaniment of business.

As he passed the house of Mr. Parcher he noted the fine white shape of a masculine evening bosom gleaming in the moonlight on the porch. A dainty figure in white sat beside it, and there was another white figure present, though this was so small that Mr. Baxter did not see it at all. It was the figure of a tiny doglet, and it reposed upon the black masculine knees that belonged to the evening bosom.

Mr. Baxter heard a dulcet voice. "He is indifferent, isn't he, sweetest Flop?" Seriously, though, Mr. Watson was telling me about you today. He says you're the most indifferent man he knows. He says you don't care two minutes whether a girl lives or dies. Isn't he a mean ole wicked sing, p'ebus Flop?"

The reply was inaudible, and Mr. Baxter passed on, having recognized nothing of his own. "These young fellows don't have any trouble finding their dress suits, I guess," he murmured, "not on a night like this."

Thus William, after a hard day, came to the gates of his romance, entering those portals of the moon in triumph. At one stroke his dashing, ruminant gave him high superiority over John Watson and other rivals who might loom.

William's period of peculiar sensitiveness dated from that evening, and Jane in particular caused him a great deal of anxiety. In fact, he began to feel that Jane was a mortification which his parents might have spared him, with no loss to themselves or to the world.

For one thing, her passion for bread and butter, covered with apple sauce and powdered sugar, was getting to be a serious matter. Secretly William was not yet so changed by love as to be wholly indifferent to this refection himself, but his consumption of it was private, whereas Jane had formed the habit of eating it in exposed places, such as the front yard or the sidewalk.

Mrs. Baxter was pleasantly engaged with a sprinkling can and some small flowerbeds, and Jane, having returned from various sidewalk excursions, stood close by, her hands replenished with the favorite food and her chin rising and falling in gentle motions. Upon this calm scene came William, plunging round a corner of the house, furious yet placid.

"You've got to do something about that child!" he began. "I cannot stand it!" Jane looked at him dumbly, not ceasing, however, to eat, while Mrs. Baxter thoughtfully continued her sprinkling.

"You've been gone all morning, Willie," she said. "I thought your father expected you to put in at least two hours a day on your mathematics and—"

"That's neither here nor there," William returned vehemently. "I just want to say this: If you don't do something about Jane I will just look at her! Look at her, I ask you! That's just the way she looked half an hour ago out on the public sidewalk in front of the house when I came by here with Miss Pratt! That was pleasant, wasn't it—to be walking with a lady on the public street and meet a member of my family looking like that? Oh, lovely!"

In the anguish of this recollection his voice cracked, and, though his eyes were dry, his gestures went for him. Plainly he was about to reach the most lamentable portion of his narrative. "And then she hollered at me! She hollered, 'Oh, Willie!' Here he gave an imitation of Jane's voice, so damning that Jane ceased to eat for several moments and drew herself up with a kind of dignity. "She hollered, 'Oh, Willie!' at me!" he stormed. "Anybody would think I was about six years old," she hollered. "Oh, Willie," and she rubbed her stomach and absented apple sauce all over her face, and she kept hollering, 'Willie!' with her mouth full. 'Willie, look! Good! Bread and butter and apple sauce and sugar. I bet you wish you had some, Willie!'

"You did eat some the other day," said Jane. "You ate a whole lot. You eat it every chance you get."

"You hush up!" he shouted and returned to his description of the outrage. "She kept following me! She followed me, hollering, 'Willie!' till it's a wonder we didn't go deaf! And just look at her! I don't see how you can stand it to have her going around like that and people knowing it's your child! Why, she hasn't got enough on!"

Mrs. Baxter laughed. "Oh, for this very hot weather I really don't think people notice or care much about it."

"Notice!" he wailed. "I guess Miss Pratt noticed! Hot weather's no excuse for-for outright obesity!" (As Jane was thin, it is probable that William had mistaken the meaning of this word.) "Why, half of what she has got on has come unfasted, especially that frightful thing hanging around her leg! And look at her back, I just beg you! I ask you to look at her back! You can see her spinal cord!"

"Columbus," Mrs. Baxter corrected; "spinal column, Willie."

"What do I care which it is?" he retorted. "People aren't supposed to go around with it exposed, whichever it is, and with apple sauce on their ears!"

"There is not!" Jane protested, and at the moment when she spoke she was right. Naturally, however, she lifted her hands to the accused ears, and the unfortunate result was to justify William's statement.

"Look!" he cried. "I just ask you to look! Think of it—that's the sight I have to meet when I'm out walking with Miss Pratt! She asked me who it was, and I wish you'd seen her face. She wanted to know who that curious child was, and I'm glad you didn't hear the way she said it. 'Who is that curious child?' she said, and I had to tell her it was my sister. I had to tell Pratt it was my only sister!"

"Willie, who is Miss Pratt?" asked Mrs. Baxter mildly. "I don't think I've ever heard of her."

Jane chose this moment to interrupt.

The C. P. R.'s New Issue

COMPANY DECIDES TO INVITE DOMINION INVESTORS TO TAKE ITS SECURITIES SECURED BY LAND SALES

BEATTY EXPLAINS DESIRE TO EXTEND CANADIAN HOLDINGS OF RAILWAY'S SECURITIES.

MONTREAL—An official announcement was issued following a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway of the last week by the company of $30,000,000 4 1/2 per cent. not certificates, secured by deferred payments on lands.

NOT IN NEED OF CASH.

Following is the statement as sent out from the office of President E. W. Beatty: "The company is not short of funds by any means, its bank account being of very comfortable proportions, but it has for many years been the company's policy to maintain a strong position in its cash resource, and, considering the magnitude of the enterprise, this is manifestly prudent. Works of improvement in contemplation to provide for its traffic and for the betterment of existing facilities will require a considerable sum in the near future, and to meet these expenditures and to provide ample working capital for other purposes the directors of the company have decided to make an issue of not certificates in much the same way as was adopted in 1914, save that the issue will be of a public character instead of being restricted to participation by its own shareholders."

"In the belief that more extensive holding of the company's securities in Canada is desirable from all standpoints, the company has sold the issue to a strong Canadian financial group consisting of the Bank of Montreal, the National City Company, the Royal Bank of Canada, the Canadian Bank of Commerce, the Dominion Securities Corporation, the Wood, Gundy & Company, and A. E. Ames & Company."

DECIDED TO PASS UP U. S. MARKET

"Already a very wide distribution is assured at a price to the public which will make it an attractive investment. It was quite open to the company to secure the requisite funds in the United States on terms equally favorable, but in view of the interest in the company's securities by Canadian investors, as evidenced by the increase in the holdings of its common stock and bonds, the directors were glad to be able to make the issue a Canadian one."

These 4 1/2 Secured Notes are one of the highest grade and most thoroughly protected securities ever offered in the Canadian market. They are a direct credit obligation of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and in addition are specifically secured by Trust Agreement, under which the Railway covenants to pay to the Trustee land payments coming due to the Railway Company totalling approximately $66,000,000.

This offering is the largest single piece of corporate financing ever undertaken in Canada. Prior to the present year, all Canadian Pacific Railway financing has been done abroad, principally in Great Britain or in United States, in which markets the company's securities rank as 000 Collateral Trust Bonds. In the market leaders. For example, in 1902 the company's 4 per cent debenture stock sold in London at 118 3/8, to yield only 3.37 per cent at a time when direct Dominion of Canada long term bonds were selling at approximately the same basis.

Following upon the success of the Dominion Government in refunding its maturing War Loan issues in the domestic market, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company issued $12,000,000 Collateral Trust Bonds in the spring of the present year. Although new to the average Canadian investor, these Bonds quickly reached a price comparable to the price of Dominion of Canada Victory Loan Bonds. It is not surprising, therefore, that the company has arranged to offer this larger issue in Canada. The offering is timely, inasmuch as the Dominion Government issued only $50,000,000 of long term bonds to replace $107,000,000 of maturing Victory Bonds and it is evident that there is available large sums of money whose owners desire the highest grade of security. The present offering of Canadian Pacific Railway securities will meet these requirements.

It is expected that the issue will be quickly absorbed by all classes of investors.

"Nerves in Bad State Could Not Sleep"

Mrs. H. N. Tardell, Harrowsmith, Ont., writes:

"My nerves were in a very bad state, and for nearly six months I did not know what it was to have a good night's rest. I could not eat, and never felt well. I heard about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and thought I would try it. After taking it for a few days I began to feel better, and soon was able to sleep well at night. My appetite also returned, and I felt stronger and better, and after taking three boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was quite well. I have also given the Nerve Food to my little girl, with good results."

More Power Is Turned On

Extension to the Municipal Hydro-Electric Plant Provides Additional 400 H. P. For Our Progressive Town

Official opening of the extension to our hydro-electric plant took place on Tuesday afternoon of last week at 3 o'clock at Nictaux Falls.

Mr. Sponagle, Mayor of our town officiated at the putting into service of the addition to the plant. A large number of ratepayers and visitors were present, and all were pleased to note the smoothness of operation of the new unit, its simplicity and general appearance of stability.

Mayor Sponagle referred to the history of the undertaking, how the plant had been purchased in 1917 from the Canada Iron Corporation by the town, at which time the plant was capable of developing 200 horse power, which seemed ample for the town's needs for many years; how, in the hands of a strong committee and progressive Board of Trade, a 24 hour service was inaugurated and a low rate for power uses established, which together with the town's natural advantages of being located on a competing railway was sufficient to attract a number of small industries.

These new industries, with the influx of families produced thereby, soon loaded up the electric plant, and an increase in capacity became necessary. E. M. Archibald, of Halifax, who had designed and erected the old plant, was appointed Consulting Engineer, and under his direction plans were prepared and contracts placed for the installation of an additional 400 horsepower unit, together with a re-arrangement of operating conditions of the old plant, and the erection of a huge concrete storage dam, all tending towards more effective and efficient operations.

The new storage dam can later be used to duplicate the present development at a minimum expense. H. C. Johnson, of Halifax, Chief Hydraulic Engineer of the N. S. Water Power Commission, was one of the consulting engineers.

The entire development has been installed at a very moderate capital expenditure, and is today one of the cheapest developments in Canada, per horsepower installed. The Town is now in a position to entertain propositions for users, and is prepared to offer a reasonable rate and a reliable service. All its utilities are self sustaining and prospects for its hydro electric are particularly bright.

All the machinery is of Canadian manufacture. The main contract for dam, power house and other work was carried out by H. Wright, of Wolfville.

E. M. Archibald, W. F. C. Parsons and G. F. Freeman spoke briefly on the installation of the new unit, and the increased possibilities of Middleton.

The official turning on of the power took place at 3.10. An opportunity was then given the visitors to view the interior of the plant and inspect the new work around the lower dam.

The electric light committee in charge consists of W. F. C. Parsons, chairman, Geo. F. Freeman and Geo. N. Reagh, who deserve the highest praise for their untiring

OBITUARY

Mrs. W. Asaph Fancy, Harmony

This community was shocked on Friday evening, Oct. 24th, 1924, to hear that Mrs. Fancy had passed away. She had been afflicted with rheumatism for a number of years, and suffered a great deal by those having some times to use crutches and other times a cane to get around at all; yet, during it all, she ever kept cheerful and seemed to enjoy all that was going on around her, although she could not join in as she would like to. She was only confined to her bed a few days. All that loving kinds and kind friends could do was done for her. But in answer to the "Masters' Call to come up higher," her spirit passed quietly over the river to the Great Beyond.

Deceased was born, June 12th, 1855 at Harmony and had lived practically her whole life in this community. She was a member of the Baptist Church. She had kept the Post Office ever since the death of her father, the late Austin W. Spinney in the year 1891. From her youthful days she had been a member of the choir and sang there as long as her health would permit her to. She leaves to mourn their loss, a sorrowing husband, one step-daughter, two sisters and three brothers, besides a large circle of relatives and friends.

The funeral service was held at the Church on Sunday, Oct. 26th, 1924. Her pastor, Rev. H. Phinney, assisted by Rev. E. H. Howe, spoke very comforting words. The choir sang her favorite hymns and the male quartette "A Beautiful Land on a far away Strand" also a duet by Mr. Phinney and Mrs. B. A. Spinney. The burial was in the family plot at Greenwood Cemetery.

The pall bearers were four of her nephews, Messrs Arthur and Noble Saunders, Austin and Lester Spinney. The floral offerings were beautiful and in great abundance.

From afar, Middleton White Way can now be seen. With 400 additional horse power, all the bobs can be curled at once, without bothering to turn the winding machine, or to interfere with the flying of the panicles. Mr. Mason preached at the Baptist church last Sunday. We understand, Mr. Melsner, has been called to this circuit for a settled minister. Mrs. (Dr.) Herman is at home after an absence of two years in Boston. Dr. Herman, also son, Charles, of "Avalia" were recent week end visitors at home.

Mrs. Drehan and grand-daughter, Elsie Morris, of Lowell, Mass. are occupying J. E. Dunn's house for the winter.

We are glad to report Joe Annis is recovering from his recent illness.

BERT JOHNSTON AT THE ARMDALE THEATRE, MIDDLETON. FRI., SAT., DEC. 19 and 20

It is very seldom that the management of the Armdale theatre is able to secure as an attraction, such a popular and well known showman as Bert Johnston.

At present Mr. Johnston is just completing his fifth transcontinental tour, since 1919, for four years previous to that he was enlisted in the Canadian army, and he was the only man on the Western front that was issued a pass from the French Government to travel their railroads free in order to entertain troops. His experiences while making his tour of all the English speaking countries in the British Empire, helps to make his entertainment far superior to anything that has ever been attempted on the vaudeville stage. This show carries a half ton of baggage, its own scenery, etc. and the patrons of the Armdale are assured an entertainment of real enjoyment.
