Athens, Sept. 9.—The following despatch, diged at 8 o'clock last, evening, has been received from Candia:—"The Bashi-Bazouks are committing excesses and the Christians in the surrounding districts are arming to march to the aid of the Cardians. There are eight warships in the harbor, and a fresh bombardment is expected. The British, German and Spanish consulates have been looted, and thus far three hundred native Christians and sixty-seven British subjects have been killed. Band returned from their visit to the Industrial Exhibition. They were met at the depot by a good number of citizens and warmly congratulated and complimented on all sides. The boys were in the best of spirits and enjoyed their trip immensely.

Principal Brackin spoke very enthusiastically of the visit.

The boys had a royal time, he said, "and earned much generous praise for themselves, their school and the town. They were kept quite busy, but their music was heartily received. At leisure they always managed to have a big old time in healthy amusement. Mr. Hill extended every courtesy to them and did everything in his power to make their visit a pleasant one. The boys all returned delighted with their trip."

It is understood that the London fair management is also negotiating for the services of the Band.

St. Thomas, Ont., Sept. 8.—The Saints took their third successive game from the Hams here to-day. Friske, the much talked of National League candidate, was in the box for the visitors, but did not prove an emigma to loosle. They found him safely six times, including a two-bagger and a home run. S. Stephenson . . Proprieto THE DUTY ON TOBACCO.

The Tobacco industry in Kent and Basex is developing to such an extent that it is to be hoped the Laurier cov-ernment will not dare to carry out its threat to reduce the duty on the imported article. The excuse for the change was that the high duty encour-aged smuggling. Now, we are raising as good tobacco here as the Americans can, and selling it to the manufacturers at from 10 to 15 cents a gound. No one is going to smuggle tobacco into Can-ada at that figure. /The profit is too small and the risk too great. Tobacco is a bulky article, and smugglers could not handle it in quantities suf-ficient to give them an adequate pro-

We imagine the real reason the gov ernment would like to kill the tobacco industry in Canada is, that, if the raw material were all imported the revenue of the country would be largely aug-mented. Formerly, the manufacturers imported all their raw material. Good candidate, Mr. Craig, would have been a thousand votes behind in 1898. Mere partisan enthusiasm is on the wane in many parts of the country, wane in many parts of the country, and East Wellington is a constituency which is used to going its own way. A strong local candidate from Erin township could probably carry the constituency against the Patron Park, or anybody else, and thus give the Ontario Government a good start in the byelection campaign. But, if the Government decides to try an outsider on East Wellington, there is no telling what will happen.

HUNGER IN WARTIME

HOW IT COMPELS EXPERIMENTS UPON QUEER MEATS.

It is only in times of siege and famine that men discover how many different kinds of food there are besides those usually consumed. Hunger drives them to experiments upon substances which they would shrink from eating on ordinary occasions, and they frequently find that these uncommon foods, generally considered unfit for human beings, are not only nourishing but agreeable in flavor once the prejudice against them has been broken and the palate accustomed to the new taste.

Persians, the Greeks and other nations of antiquity.

Later it is recorded that at the siege of Antioch, in the first crusade, the horses of the bestegers were eaten in such quantities that in two months not more than 3,000 of the original 70,000 were left. At the siege of Metz 30,000 horses are said to have been eaten.

But the famous siege of Paris in the Franco-Prussian war furnishes the most interesting example of the variety of meats which may be used in great straits. During that terrible winter of 1870-1, while the German army outside prevented supplies of any kind from being brought into the unfortunate French capital, not only such familiar animals as horses, mules, dogs, cats, rats and mice supplied the tables of rich and poor alike, but even the menagerie of wild boasts in the Jardin des Plantes disappeared gradually, and neither doubt nor surprise was expressed at its destination.

des Plantes disappeared gradually, and neither doubt nor surprise was expressed, at its destination.

Of the horses 65,000 were eaten during the stage. This meat, however, was not new to the Parisian taste—at least not to the taste of the working classes. Since 1866 it had been lawful to slaughter horses for human food, and horse butcher shops were common establishments in the city. But the entire number of horses killed in time of peace was trifling compared to this enormous total in warttime. The Parisians, with their irrepressible levity and disposition to smooth matters over, even under such circumstances as these, called the horse meat "slege venison," and there were few complaints regarding it. According to the general testimony, not only of the French at this time, but of scientists in different countries who have tried the meat under many conditions, horsesters a fleaver about half only of the French at this time, but of scientists in different countries who have tried the meat under many conditions, horsefiesh possesses a flavor about half way between that of beef and game and is variously compared to venison and to haza. It is consuer in grain than beef and in this respect resembles bull beef more than any other. It has a peculiar smell, which is at first a trifle disconcerting, but which soon becomes familiar, and a curtain sweetness of taste. It is darker in color and more moist than beef. Its fat, which is moist and yellow, is not generally mixed with the lean, and it soon melts and becomes rancid. One authority says that horse meat, being richer, is undoubtedly superfor to beef for soup, and he goes on to declare that for roasting the best parts of a young horse are finer than any beef. The chief chemical difference between the two is that horsefiesh has the greater quantity of the nitrogenous substance called creatine.

The chief chemical difference between the two is that horsefiesh has the greater quantity of the nitrogenous substance called creatine.

Besides the 65,000 horses eaten during the siege of Paris 1,000 assess and 2,000 mules are said to have been consumed. The flesh of the latter was pronounced delicious, excelling horsefiesh in its quality. The number of rats and mice used is not computed, but of dogs there are said to have been 1,200 and of cats 3,000. From the testimony of many persons who have eaten the flesh of cats and dogs it is said to resemble that of rabbits and when well cooked to be extremely palatable. Of the animals in the menagerie of the Jardin des Plantes the flesh of two bears which were eaten was likened to pork, both in texture and taste. Three elephants were consumed, and while there is no record of the way in which the Pacisians prepared their elephant meat it is well known that it can be made pleasant to the taste of Handling the Mails.

SPANISH POSTOFFICES.

A foreigner in Spain sees many irregularities, especially in the postoffices. As Potes, a village of 1,300 inhabitants in northern Spain, the postmaster was an old man, who was usually found asleep and resented being stirred up to deliver a letter. In the larger postoffices the height of confusion is reached, because letters are put into pigeonholes, alphabetically arranged, according to the fancy of the postmaster.

put into pigeonholes, alphabetically arranged, according to the fancy of the post-master.

"Mr. John Smith," says Dr. Gadow in his "Northern Spain," "will on inquiry probably be told there is nothing for him, because the letter is safely lodged under J, the postmaster having mistaken Smith for an additional surname. But John Smith, Esq., will as likely be relegated to E, and unless the postmaster is amicably inclined, your letter has a good chance of remaining there until the quarterly or annual clearance, when it may be returned through the dead letter office. I say may because such letters are considered trouble-some and have a knack of disappearing."

Dr. Gadow, having obtained an introduction to the postmaster of Potes and exchanged compliments with him, was invited to look through his shelves and take his choice. He came across a letter addressed to a gentleman in Cabezon, a town at some distance from Potes. On asking why it had not been sent on he received this startling answer: "That man is a foreigner, is he not? Well, numbers of strangurs come to Potes, and he is as likely to turn up here as at Cabezon!"

At San Sebastian Dr. Gadow called at the postoffice twice for a registered letter containing a remittance from his banker and was assured that nothing had arrived. On procuring a note from the English consul, the letter was forthcoming with the excuse that the post had just come in. He pointed out that the local poistmark was five days old; then the postmaster answered that as Gadow ended with w; a letter represented in Spanish by double o or double v, the name was a difficult one to pigeonhole.—Youth's Companion.

THE ARTFUL RAVEN.

Incidents That Aptly Illustrate the Wo derful Sagneity of the Bird.

Incidents That Aptly Illustrate the Wenderful Sagacity of the Bird.

Many stories are told of the cleverness of the raven, a bird that really seems to have reasoning powers. One of these stories tells how a raven by a skillful stratagem got a young hare for its dinner. It had pounced upon the little animal, but the mother hare drove it away.

Then the raven slowly retreated, encouraging the mother to follow him, and even pretending that be was afraid of her. In this fashion he led her to a considerable distance from her young one and then suddenly, before the hare had time to realize the meaning of the trick, he rose in the air, flew swiftly back, caught the young hare in his beak and bore it away. A similar plan was adopted by some ravens that wished to steal food from a dog. They teased him till he grew so angry that he chased them from the spot, but the artful birds turned sharply round, easily reached the dish before him and carried off the choicer bits in triumph.

As to the raven's power of speech, the following story, which is given on the authority of Captain Brown, who vouches for its truth, will show how apily it can talk. A gentleman while travelling through a wood in the south of England was startled by hearing a shout of "Fair play, gentlemen; fair play!" uttered in loud tones. The cry being presently repeated, the travelet thought it must proceed from some one in distress and at once began to search for him. He soon discovered two ravens flercely attacking a third. He was so struck with the appeal of the oppressed bird that he promptly rescued him.

It turned out that the victim was a tame raven belonging to a house in the neighborhood, and the cry that it had used so opportunely was one of many that it had been taught to utter.—Philadelphia Times.

Symbol of the Sunflow

Symbol of the Sunflower. In flower language, is symbolical of false riches, for the following reasons: The Spaniards, when they invaded Peru, belg and on every hand, and when they aw the country covered with golden colored flowers they imagined they, too, must be pure gold—not the only case where appearances have been deceifful. But by a perverse contradiction of this story the Spaniards themselves adopt the flower as a symbol of faith, and one of their poets any, "Real faith is like the sun's fair flowers, which, midst the clouds that shroud it and the winds that wave it to and fro, and all the change of air and earth and sky doth rear its head and lookerth up, still steadfast, to its God." So if you want to grow sunflowers you can take your choice of meanings.—Boston Traveler.

At the little manufacturing town of Lewiston, where Senator Frye has spent his uneful life and Representative Dingley has edited a newspaper for a generation or two, there is a woman who possesses supernatural powers. She is the wife of a druggist. She has a common-school education, but has never been out of her native state and knows little of the world. On several occasions she has displayed clairvoyant powers to the amazement of her neignbors, but shy is not a professional. On the contrary, she shrinks, from publicity. For that reason she will not permit her name to be used.

Last fall a prominent citizen of Auburn, the town across the river from Lewiston, died under the most extra ordinary circumstances. He was sitting at his dinner table when he severed an artery with a carving knife or something like liad. The oruggist's wife in Lewiston had never heard of him. She had never been inside his house, and yet, being in a trance that evening, she described to her husband the manner of his death and surroundings with mavelous accuracy, and next worning, when they read the story as printed in the Journal, Mr. Dingley's paper, they shuddered to think how closely her vision corresponded to the facts. This is only one of many occasions upon which she has shown the same knowledge of events that were beyond her sight or hearing.

The statement was sent to Senator Frye at Washington, He submitted it to the secretary of the navy with a cordinal endorsement of the high character, respectability and honesty of his constituents whom he had known all his life. The officials of the navy department thought proper to suppress the statement for fear that it might add to the public excitement if it appeared in the newspapers.

Chas. Dingman

There is an odd little man named Echnier, who lives in an odd little house in the heart of the busiest portion of San Francisco, who earns his bread oddly enough. His business is the raising of cats, which he puts into warehouses, stores and other places infested with rats and mice, and his income is derived from payment for the services of his pets. "Raising cats is my business," he said. "We get along all right, don's we, kitty?" Kitty settled down on his knee and purred her answer.

ser answer.

"I see enough of them to like them," he remt on, "for I feed between 150 and 200 very morning. This," pointing to a large susket, "I take full of meat, and that can in the corner is filled with milk. I go first to the warehouses on the docks, and then come farther up town to the business houses.

first to the warehouses on the docks, and then come farther up town to the business houses.

"I do not often sell a cat. I raise them, train them for awhile and then place them in some warehouse or store where the services of a cat are necessary. Then for so much a month I take care of them. Would you like to see where they play? If you come this way, I will show you."

He opened a door and took me into a queer little court. Three sides of the inclosure are banked by buildings as old as the house where the cats live. The fourth side is a big brick structure, modern style. An attempt at a garden had been made, but even the lonely green geranium looks sorry and forlorn.

And the cats! If there were many in the house, there are many more out here. Asleep in a box of excelsior is a beauty. He is marked exactly like a tiger. As you pass through narrow, yellow eyes glance at you. If you bend to stroke him, there is a sudden whirl, and the next you see of the tiger he is on the roof of a shed, gasing at you in rather an unpleasant manner.

"Doesn't like to be disturbed," says Mr. Kchnier. Down a pair of rickety stairs into the poor little garden, and you hear a great scampering of little feet, and now the rooms are full of disturbed kittens. They have just been fed and like to sieep a bit.

Then I told her straight from the shoulder that I declined to be made angry by her taunts and odious comparisons, but served pointed notice that I was going to have the respect due the head of the house. There is a curious little tale about Captain Bagot, M. P. for South Westmoreland, which cannot fail to interest those superstitiously inclined. It is said that, some generations ago, a witch cursed Levens Hall, the seat of Captain Bagot, and said that there would be no direct male heir to the estate as long as the Kent—the river which runs through the grounds—flowed. Such has indeed been the case, until in 1895, when, owing to the severe frost, the Kent was, for a time, entirely frozen up, and a few months afterward Mrs. Bagot presented her husband with a little boy.—London, Graphic.

ais especial line of economics did take place on this farm, for I have 'fortunate enough to have the rooks hbor was not so fortunate, and ring the reports of his "shootings" I stover to see him. I found him ut to begin operations on an ugly ring rock that showed about six hes above the surface and which was otheration every time the field was wed, cultivated or cut. With an iron he sounded around it until he found straightest side, then with the baf a e was made, about two feet deep nting enough so that the end of it uid be under the rock. A "stick" of namite (one-half pokad), was crumd in the hands, let un in the hole d pressed lightly down with a broom ndle. Then a piece of these two feet ag was put in, having a cap on the d, and another "sick" was crumbled top of the first. This was so that e cap would explode in the dynamite, hen earth was filled in the hole and maged lightly with the broom handle, match applied, and we all set out on brisk walking match until we got out f reach. There was a report and a hole n the ground, and pieces of broken rock suttered about the field were all that was left of the troublesome rock. The cash outlay was about 9 cents and the gime of making the explosion was about 15 minutes. There was the broken stone to be hauled off, but in this case he sold the stone for 50 cents a perch, so that what he got for the stone more than repaid him for hauling.

Often a small rock, say three or four feet in diameter, will be turned out of the hole but not broken, then a stick or carefully taken from it) is placed on the dynamite, the charge fired as before and a broken stone is the result. The thing dynamite, the charge fired as before and a broken stone is the result. The thing wherein most failures by beginners are made is by not putting enough dynamite under the rock. One blast I saw was a case in point; after the blast the stone was in slmost the same position as before, but we saw by the impression, on the soft earth that the stone had relied to the top of the hole and almost rolled out, and then for want of a half stick more had rolled back again. Put enough under todo the work or you lose all that you do put under. Another caution is to get as far away from the rock as the fuse will let you or else get behind some tree and close up to the trunk. I saw a shutter of a house broken by a blast that was fired fully 100 yards away. This was, of course, an exceptional case, but one does not want to get hit, even by an exceptional piece of rock.

The most common mistake in prepar-ing ground for fall grains is waiting until just before seeding time or about the last week in August and the first in until just before seeding time or about the last week in August and the first in September, according to Orange Judd Farmer, and there are the following reasons why early plowing is the best: The weeds that have started after the cutting of the small grains are turned under and kept from seeding. This is no small consideration where the ground is at all foul. If some of the seeds near the surface should start after plowing, go over the field with a harrow of some kind or a cultivator and allow none to develop. The chief value of early plowing is that the land has an opportunity to become well pulverized and compacted before seeding time. If the land is hard when plowed, the numerous workings which should be given it with the rains of late-summer and early autumn will dissolve the clods and obliterate camage if present when the seed is sown. Many failures with winter grains can be traced to late plowing and imperfect preparation of the seed bed. Begin plowing as soon as the shocks have been removed from the first week in July to the second in August.

Preventing Corn Smut. For most of the smuts of the other For most of the smuts of the other coreals there are methods of treating the seed prior to sowing that, to a great degree, prevent the subsequent attack of the fungua, but there appears to be no such means for preventing corn smut. A farmers' bulletin says experiments have shown that the frequent spraying of the plants and ground with any of the better known fungicides will prevent a serious spread of the disease, but in practice this will hardly be warranted on account of the expense of such treatment. Possibly a more economical and as efficient means to be recommended is the collection and burning of all smut masses before they ripen and scatter their spores. Much could be accomplished in this way if, keeping a sharp lookout for the smut boils at every cultivation and at the harvesting of the crop. If attention be paid to the manure and the smut be collected and destroyed as recommended, but little loss will be occasioned by corn smut. ed by corn smut.

Watering Cabbage In Dry Weather.

The broad leaves of cabbage evaporate water very fast, and, like other leaves, they probably take carbonic acid gas from the sir and store it in the cabbage head. They require a great deal of water, and it is a great help to their growth in a dry time if soil is dug away from their roots and water in which some fermented stable manure has been dissolved is poured in the hole. Then replace the soil that has been taken out. This will leave a dry surface and prevent evaporation. The cabbage will also grow faster than if the manure water is poured on the surface soil around the plant, says American Cultivator.

AWNLESS BROME GRASS.

Observed in Tests.

Two notable claims advanced for Bromus inermia, commonly known as smooth, armiess or Hungarian brome grass, are its excellent endurance of summer heat and drought and its ability to grow on comparatively poor and hard soil.

to grow on comparatively poor and hard soil.

This is a perennial grass with creeping root stalks that send up erect, strong, smooth stems from 1½ to 4 feet high, with a free growth of leaves, and bears an abundance of seed. It has been well recommended for light soils in regions subject to extremes of temperature or long periods of drought, where the finer grasses do not thrive. Some years ago the South Dakota station said of smooth brome grass that it was the best grass yet tried at that station, catching well where properly sown, giving a good sod the first year and a fair yield of hay in favorable seasons. The forage, though coarse, was considered of excellent quality and under ordinary circumstances a large amount of early spring and fall feed could be obtained in addition to a good yield of hay.

Awaless brome grass is reported as remaining green in winter in the south, where it is esteemed for grazing. It grows well in cold climates, and Canadian reports speak very highly of it, both for nutritive qualities and luxuriant habit of growth.

In the report of tests with this grass under the direction of Dr. Samders of the Canadian experiment stations it is mentioned as doing well on alkaline soil. The report further says: "Not only does awnless brome grass thrive in the rich, moist soil of the eastern provinces, but its growth and productiveness are so wonderful even in the dry plains of the west that its cultivation may be said without exaggeration to have solved the problem of fodder production smooth brome grass.

on a large scale in the arid western sections. Under irrigation brome grass has given on 200 acres of land the enormous yield of 4½ tons per acre. One motable feature which distinguishes this grass is that, while most grasses, after the flowering period, deteriorate rapidly while the seeds ripen, awaless brome grass can be left standing until the seeds are fully ripe, yet the hay crop will be heavier without being poorer than if it had been cut while in flower, as should be done generally for all other hay grasses in order to get the best value. This remarkable characteristic of this grass is due to the fact that after the seed bearing stam has grown up a great number of leafy shoots spring up from its base."

What to Do With the Strawberry Bed.
Our usual method of treating a strawberry bed after the first picking season is to invert it and sow either cowpeas or clover, says a correspondent of flural New Yorker. The only profitable crop we have ever gathered immediately succeeding turning under a strawberry bed is medium clovar. Any strawberry bed which needs a plow to assist in cleaning it up should never be run a second season. We would remove the mulch and cultivate and hoe as we did the previous season if we wished to carry over the bed and begin at once after the first hoeing to spray with bordeaux

Ald. Weaver moved, seconded by Ald. Sulman, a grant of $300 be made.—

On motion is was referred to finance, Ald. Sulman, who was appointed with the mayor, to represent the city, paying a tribute to the gathering.

The Mayor—We seems appointed to go at our own expense, and I conductive.

Aid. Cleeve—Why didn't you engage a eab. (Laughter.)

Aid. Liddy, in presenting some scoonnts, took occasion to point out that swings to the departure of ex-Aid. McMbee, the linar-se committee had been suppled, He moved that Aid. Sulman he appointed chairman for the remainder of the year. Aid. Hendershott seconded the motion, which was adopted.

NOT BY CONTRACT.

An account from the Bunner Printing

mided the motops, where we see that NOT BY CONTRACT.

An account from the Bunner Printing Sp. for $1224, raised considerable dissussion. Aid. Burrows, who presented it, pointed out that the figures charged for the printing of by-laws were Sc. per line, instead of $1-2 as agreed when the Bunner was awarded the contract. Ald. Liddy said that, Mr. Ford was abarging this figure because the Planet was also publishing some of the city's arbertisements, and he was charging, the full amount in cansequence. Ald. Piggott objected. Mr. Ford had sendered at a contain figure, and he believed in carrying out his contract. Business was business, and it was not the size of the iesen, but the principle took exception to.

Ald. Liddy—But The Planet gets its state of all the princing.

Aid. Liddy—But the Finance cannot be a fair the printing.
Aid. Sulman—No, it doesn't; the Ban-mer's tender was accepted.
The account was no paid, but referred with power to the Finance committee to consider this item.

INSIDE OR OUT.

In discussing the proposal to extend the granolithic walk on Park St. Ald. Weaver pleaded eloquently that it be extended inside of the trees.

Ald. Sulman pointed out that such pass would destroy uniformity and be contrary to the by-law.

This made Ald. Weaver wrathy. He made and indignantly pointed at Ald. Sulman. "It was him," he declared. He cursed Chatham with that by-law and he will be cursed by the people all his life. Yes, and after they'll visit his grave and curse him there.

The council, however, endorsed the snactments of the by-law.

Ald. Heyward moved, seconded by

Ald. Dyer, that Ald. Sulman, Cleeve, Liddy and the Mayor be added to the Parks committee to remove certain dead and dying trees on Tecumseh Park. Ald. Sulman wanted it understood that the motion read "dead and dying." He was strenuously opposed to the wholesale slaughter of trees. The permission of the Chief of Police had also be obtained.

Ald. Liddy endorsed Ald. Sulman's remarks. "Why," he added, "one night hast year the council signed a petition to cut down the whole park." Laughter.

lies. Ald. Weaver—That's another of your fool by-laws.

The Mayor stated that he had given Engineer Topp leave of absence owing to the death of his brother.

The engineer's reports on the Laroix, Coloorne, Richmond and Cross St. sewers were adopted and it was decided to ask for tenders.

THE FIREMEN.

The matter was left in abeyance until the committee should investigate tha striking of the bell from the electric light station.

A motion by Ald. Weaver to leave the location of the draymen on the market quare alone was carried without discussion.

TO BE APPEALED. TO BE APPEALED.

Ald. Campbell complained that the solicitor was not taking the council into confidence in the case of Atkinson and Stevens vs. Chatham. They were promised the Aylesworth letter but it promised the Aylesworth letter but it never came.

The mayor read a letter from Mr. Dougles and also one from Mr. Aylesworth to him, dated Aug. 6. Both spone favorably of an appeal.
