The other day a prominent political man, in referring to a passer-by, digressed from his politics long enough to basy: "If W women realized how much more dangerons to the masculine peace of mind is a sweet voice than a pretty face they would spend more time upon its cultivation." By the way, have you ever thought what an influence a low-pitched, mellow voice possesses for you ? Five times out of six the influence of the minister who touches the better impulses of your nature is traceable to his deep, rich, magnetic voice. Put sympathy in your voice, not a make-believe sympathy that the listener will at once detect, but the genuine article, based on an honest interest in your listener. About Wedding Rings. There is less change in wedding rings then in anything else in the jewelry line. Cupid's pand is about the same to-day as it was a century ago. At this we do not wonder, for the marriage token can hardly be improved upon. It is a ring of pure gold ; it is softly rounded, and if you hang it upon a piece of string and strike it gently it will ring out an indescribably soft and sweet which carry no significance, except, perhaps, in some instances a hint of the possession of wealth. Twenty-five years ago it was unusual to see a line dame or demoiselle waring more than one ring on either hand, but now the more bejeweled fancies she can crowd on her dainty digits the better she appears to be pleased. GEMS MADE TO ORDER.

A Glasgow Chemist Who Thinks He Can Equal Nature's Work.

Numerous methods have been suggested Numerous methods have been suggestee and extensively employed for the manufac-ture of artificial gems, but the production of orystals having the hardness, durability and other qualities, both physical and chemical, of natural stones has, up to the present time, been one of the unsolved problems of applied chemistry. A Glas-gow chemist claims to have succeeded by a simula method in obtaining precious stones proteins of applied themisty. A chas-gow chemist claims to have succeeded by a simple method in obtaining precious stones, that approach in all their characteristics the noblest products of nature. The details of the process are of course kept a secret. Working on a laboratory scale and using small vessels, stones have been obtained over on-sixteenth inch in diameter, and very large numbers have been formed approaching that zize. These are hard, infusible at all ordinarily attainable temporatures, and insoluble in any acid. The bulk of the gems are white, or rather colorless, sapphires. They are compact and transparent orystals, and many specimens have a splendid lustre. By subsequent treatment some of them have taken on the sapphire blue. gow cher

Apart from the possibilities of the pro-cess in the direction of producing the dia-mond, the chief point already established is that of having found are easy method of orystalizing alumina. The Orlental ruby, Orlental amethyst, and other gems, coming under the heading Orlental are all of thme crystalizing alumina. The Oriental ruby, Oriental amethysis, and other gems, coming under the heading Oriental, are all of them only variously colored sapphires, and alumina forms the chief constituent of the series. There appears to be little doubt that the new process will yield the ruby and other varieties. Apart from ornamentation, their hardness will fit them for mechanical purposes, and their cutting power is remarkable.

To See the Wind. Take a polished metallic surface of two feet or more with a straight edge ; a large handsaw will answer the purpose. Select a windy day, whether hot or cold, clear or cloudy, cally let it not rain or the air be murky—in other words, let the air be dry. Hold the metallic surface at right angles to the wind, i. c., if the wind is north, hold your surface east and west, and incline it at an angle of about 45 degrees to the hori-zon, so that the wind striking, glances and flows over the edge at some minute and sharply-defined object and you will see the air flow over as water flows over a dam.
