MAGIC READ THE BAKING LABEL NO. ALUM POWDER

The Earl's Son;

TWO HEARTS UNITED.

CHAPTER II.

The footman called "Hi!" and the young man looked over his shoulder. He hesitated, then came back with obvious reluctance.

"You want a situation as game-keeper, my man?" said his lordship.

The young fellow nodded.

"I do, sir."

"It's his lordship, the earl," whispered the footman, warningly.

"Go to my head-keeper; tell him I sent you. If you know your work and possess a good character—Where do you come from? What is your name?"

"Australia. My name is Ralph Farrington," was the reply.

The earl's brows grew straight—Veronica's had been straight all through the scene; the two looked singularly alike at that moment—and he scanned the sunburnt face with another flash of his black eyes.

"Go to the keeper," he said, and signed to Matthews to drive on.

The young man raised his hat.

"Thank you, my lord," he said, gravely.

Then he looked up at Veronica with a swift and eloquent glance of gratitude; but Veronica, sitting bolt upright on her horse, gazed straight before her and made no acknowledgment; perhaps she thought that there had been quite enough fuss over the man, prompt and plucky though he had proved himself to be.

As she gathered up the reins she saw a spot of red on her left gauntlet. It was blood. For a moment she thought that, after all, the puppy had been hurt; then the truth flashed upon her; she remembered that she had felt one of the mare's forefeet strike something as the young fellow had darted for the puppy. He had been hurt in body, perhaps badly, in his humane and successful attempt to save the dog, and had been hurt in spirit, still more badly, by the earl's offer of money.

She looked at the red spot and then at the tall, graceful figure striding across the moor with the puppy still in his arms and the dog barking in friendly, foolish fashion at his heels; the color came and went in her face, and her under-lip was caught by the white teeth, as if she longed to ride after him and make some amends. But pride held her back, and with a shrug of her shoulders she rode on.

How should she know that the shadow of her fate was riding behind her; that the curtain of her life's drama was up and the tragedy had begun?

CHAPTER III.

The young fellow who had given his name as Ralph Farrington strode to the cottage. The door was open, and he looked into the neat little sitting-room, in which a young girl was seated with her back to the window reading a novelette. She was a pretty girl with a mass of fair hair and soft, brown eyes, and a small mouth drooping at the corners; this droop and something about the chin, while charming in their way, hinted at weakness of character.

She started as she heard his footstep, and slipping the novelette in her pocket, looked quickly into the kitchen beyond, where a woman was ironing. Then she rose and stood eyeing him with a faint blush.

"I beg your pardon," said Ralph.

"I've brought your puppy; it is yours, isn't it?"

"Oh, yes; thank you!" she said, coming forward to take it from him; then she shrank back.

"Oh, it is hurt—is bleeding!"

"No, no; it is all right," he assured her, with a smile. "It nearly got run over, but I managed to pick it up in time. In doing so the young lady's horse must have struck me. Oh, I'm not hurt!" he added, promptly, at her glance of alarm and pity; "not in the least; a mere scratch."

The woman in the kitchen, hearing voices, came forward with the iron in her hand.

"Mother, this gentleman has saved Polly's puppy, and has got hurt," explained the girl.

"Dear, dear!" responded the mother. "Here, Fanny, take the iron and go on with those collars. I hope you're not much hurt—sir!" She added the "sir" after a doubtful glance at his clothes.

"Not at all," said Ralph. "I'll show you."

He drew back the sleeve of his coat and shirt and bared his muscular arm. There was a nasty gash just below the elbow, and it was still bleeding. The woman uttered a little cry of distress and called out:

"Bring in a basin of warm water and a towel—quick, Fanny!"

"Pon my word, I'm very sorry to trouble you," Ralph said in his pleasant voice; "you'll find there's nothing the matter when it's washed, and he laughed as he held his arm over the basin.

"It's a nasty cut," she said, as she bathed it. "A horse, you said: a young lady riding it?"

"It must be Miss Veronica," murmured the girl who stood by, her eyes fixed on Ralph's face with an intent expression. "I saw her ride across the moor."

"I daresay," said Ralph. "A very beautiful girl with grey eyes and dark hair."

The woman nodded, but looked up at him with a little surprise. He looked like a working-man; but the working-men of the place did not speak of Miss Veronica as a "girl," but as a "young lady."

"That was her uncle with her, I suppose?" he said. "Lord—"

"Lord Lynborough; yes. You must be a stranger not to know his lordship."

"I am," he assented. "Just from Australia. I walked over from Halsey this morning."

"It's a long way. Perhaps you'd like something to eat and drink—you look a little pale," said the woman. "Fanny—"

The girl started as if she had been absorbed in her contemplation of the handsome young stranger, and going into the kitchen brought out some bread and cheese and a glass of milk.

"I'm very much obliged," said Ralph, accepting the hospitality without the least sign of embarrassment or shyness. "It was very nice, not to say kind of you, to guess that I was hungry, Mrs.—"

"Mason's our name," she said. "We do the laundry for the Court."

"I see," he said. "Well, I hope I shall be a fellow-laborer. I am going to apply for a berth as a gamekeeper. His lordship sent me to the head-keeper."

"Geoffrey Burchett," said Mrs. Mason, adding, "Well—I hope you'll get it," she added, so doubtfully that Ralph looked up and smiled.

"That sounds as if you don't think I shall."

She shook her head.

"Geoffrey Burchett's a hard man to please—not that it's my place to speak against him; for he's an old friend. He lives all alone by himself in the hut and keeps himself to himself, as you may say. Fanny here goes over every morning and does for him, so to speak."

Ralph nodded and smiled at the girl as if he thought Geoffrey Burchett highly favored by such ministrations, and Fanny blushed and dropped her eyes before the frank, ready way of this amazingly good-looking young man, who leant back in his chair and drank his glass of milk with the air—well, of one of the gentlemen of the Court, notwithstanding he was only a game-keeper.

"His lordship seems rather a haughty kind of old gentleman," he said after a pause, during which he helped himself to another slice of bread.

Mrs. Mason looked rather taken aback at his free-and-easy way of criticising the great earl.

"Well, yes, he is," she admitted; "but he's got reason. His lordship's the greatest man in these parts. Mr.—"

Ralph supplied his name.

"Mr. Farrington. You've seen the Court, maybe—"

"Not yet."

"Well, of course it belongs to Lord Lynborough, and all Lynborough and most of Halsey as well, not to speak of places in Ireland and Scotland—"

Ralph laughed, the bright, infectious, careless laugh which Fanny found so catching that she found herself echoing it half unconsciously.

"It's kind of him to leave some part of England to other people," he said, "especially seeing that it's so small."

Mrs. Mason stared at him.

"His lordship's a very great man," she repeated, with the helplessness of her class when confronted by something original.

"Well, he doesn't look particularly happy," observed Ralph.

The boldness of the remark seemed to stagger Mrs. Mason; but, with the candour which was characteristic as her dullness, she said:

"Well, now you mention it, he don't. No, his lordship isn't a happy man."

"Is he married?" asked Ralph, with just a trifle more than polite interest.

Mrs. Mason shook her head. "No, his lordship's never been married; and until Miss Veronica came he lived alone at the Court or one of his other places—"

"You people seem to have a liking for living alone," remarked Ralph.

"—And he don't enjoy good health," went on Mrs. Mason, ignoring the remark. "He's very stern and proud—"

"So I observed," commented Ralph. "And his niece—what did you say her name was?"

"Miss Veronica Gresham."

"—Evidently takes after him," Fanny nodded.

"Yes," she said, in her soft, hesitating voice. "She's as proud as—as—Lucifer."

"But she's very kind," put in Mrs. Mason, simply, and with a reproving glance at her daughter. "There's no end to her kindness. The Court hasn't been the same since she came. She goes about amongst the people and takes an interest in the estate, and— and looks after things as they wasn't looked after before she came."

"I see: a kind of Lady Bountiful," said Ralph; but neither mother nor daughter seemed to understand the allusion, and stared at him vacantly.

"And when he dies—I suppose even so great a man as his lordship must die some day, or do they live for ever?—who succeeds him, who comes into his greatness?"

"Mr. Talbot Denby, his nephew," said Mrs. Mason, rather stiffly.

"Oh! And what kind of man is he?" asked Ralph, taking out his pipe, but slipping it into his pocket again with an apologetic gesture.

"Oh, please smoke!" murmured Fanny; and, at a nod of permission from Mrs. Mason, he lit up.

"Mr. Talbot is—is a proper gentleman," she said. "He's a member of Parliament, and very—clever." She spoke the word as if it were a kind of ineptitude to apply the adjective to one of the Lynborough family.

"He don't often come to the Court, because he and the earl don't get on very well together. In fact, his lordship don't get on very well with anybody. He's quarrelled with all his people, and—and that's why he lives alone, barring Miss Veronica."

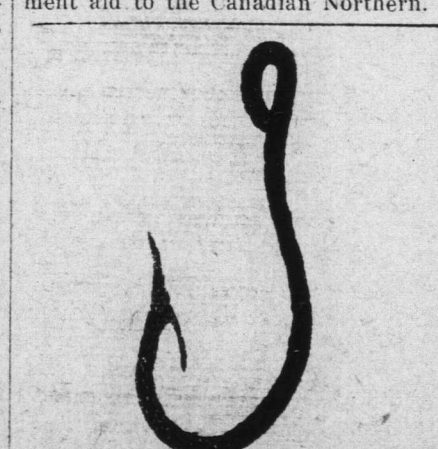

"Amiable old gentleman!" commented Ralph, smiling.

"His lordship is—his lordship," retorted Mrs. Mason, stiffly.

WOMEN CAN HARDLY BELIEVE

How Mrs. Hurley Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Eldon, Mo.—"I was troubled with displacement, inflammation and female weakness. For two years I could not stand on my feet long at a time and I could not walk two blocks without enduring cutting and drawing pains down my right side which increased every month. I have been at that time purple in the face and would walk the floor. I could not lie down or sit still sometimes for a day and a night at a time. I was nervous, and had very little appetite, no ambition, melancholy, and often felt as though I had not a friend in the world. After I had tried most every female remedy without success, my mother-in-law advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and gained in strength every day. I have now no trouble in any way and highly praise your medicine. It advertises itself."—Mrs. S. T. HURLEY, Eldon, Missouri.

Remember, the remedy which did this was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For sale everywhere. It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulcers, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means have failed. Why don't you try it? Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Wasted Worry.

By RUFUS CAMERON.

Don't succumb to grim despair. But remember when you're glum That the hardest thing to bear Are the things that never come. —Life's Advice to Worriers and Ocean Voyagers.

If all the worry over things that never come could be taken out of our lives how little there would be left.

A friend of mine has recently lost her husband and gone home to live with her father and mother. They are elderly people who could not have been left to live alone much longer, and for the past few years their daughter has been anxious about them.

"Why, I never worried about John," she said to me the other day. "I always thought he'd outlive me. But I used to be anxious about father and mother. It didn't seem right with mother so feeble to leave them by themselves—much longer. Besides I was afraid she might break down completely any time, and then what would I do? I'd want to be with mother, of course, but they'd hate to leave the old homestead and John wouldn't want to give up his home either; and I couldn't bear to be away from him. Why I used to lie awake nights and plan and worry about it. And now the trouble that I never worried about has come to me, and the trouble that fretted me so has cleared itself up."

How much worry we waste in this way. If one may speak of wasting a thing which is perfectly futile and valueless.

Worry, even over a thing which does happen, is wasted energy because it cannot do any good. It is doubly wasted when we fret and fume over something which never comes to pass.

You may have heard of Mrs. Silas Bennett's experience. When her neighbours were condoling with her upon a certain misfortune she answered with much philosophy.

"I've raised three girls and four boys, expectin' every time they'd be twins, and red-headed like their Gran-pa Bennett, and yet they ain't. An' I've worried consid'ble over smallpox breakin' out in my big family. So fer, 'tain't."

"Last summer, durin' July an' August, an' mebbe part of September, I was real melancholic, fearin' I'd got an appendix; but I guess it ain't."

"An' through it all, it never once occurred to me that I'd be the one to fall through them rotten old meetin'-house steps an' break my leg in two places but I be."

How many times, like Mrs. Bennett, we worry over the wrong things! How many problems time takes out of our fretful hands and settles for us!

Have you not seen a pool of water so stirred up, and muddied that it seemed as if they would never clear? If you should attempt to sift the mud out and clear the water that way what success would you have? But let it alone, let time and the forces of nature work, and lo the water clears itself!

Men Who Won't Talk.

(Pearson's Weekly.)

"Mrs. Patrick Campbell is the one actress who is never interviewed; she declares it makes her too nervous."

I read that somewhere the other day, and never having tried to interview "Mrs. Pat." I did not know that she was one of the "won't talkers." I do know that there are a number of prominent people who are as shy of an interview as a fox is of hounds.

Four years as a reporter on a London daily paper and another four years of "free-lancing" have taught me that. It is just about as great a waste of time to try to interview certain people as it would be to try to get the king or the prime minister or the Archbishop of Canterbury to "talk."

Rudyard Kipling is one, and I say this fully aware that only recently an American newspaper came out with a two-column "splash" of what purported to be an interview with him. Kipling leads a very cloistered life nowadays, of course, but remembering that he was a newspaper man himself once his horror of interviews is a little hard to understand.

Bernard Shaw, who is certainly not averse to publicity, is another literary man with an objection to being interviewed; in fact an interview with him is almost unknown these days. I know a man who tried to "draw" him once. The result, as I was told, it was amusing and characteristic of "G. B. S."

"Oh, Mr. Shaw," he began, having tracked him down, "I represent the Daily —, and I want to know if you will be so good as to—"

Shaw cut him short. "Mr. Shaw is not at home!"

"But surely you are—" my friend began in astonishment.

"Mr. Shaw is not at home, I tell you; he has gone out. Good-bay!" broke in Shaw, withdrawing, and so bringing the conversation to a forced end.

H. C. Wells is almost impossible to interview, and Sir J. M. Barrie, who, like Kipling, began life on a newspaper, is a "won't talk." The creator of Peter Pan is among the quietest and most reserved of "big" men of the day, and he has successfully eluded would-be interviewers for a long time past.

Another popular author, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, is also shy of being interviewed. I have tried to "get" him four or five times on various subjects, but have always failed.

Sir Herbert Tree, too, though he will receive you with the greatest and most charming courtesy and chat with the utmost geniality, obviously does not greatly care for being interviewed. At least that is my experience. On any subjects except his own plays he is very hard to keep to the point, and if you do persuade him to talk for publication he always likes to see a proof before the interview appears to the world. I have seen Sir Herbert Tree busy with the proof of an interview with himself in the middle of his rehearsal of a new play.

A clergyman who is very much in the public eye, the Reverend A. J. Waldron, vicar of Brixton, and author of that much-discussed music hall sketch, "Should a Woman Tell?" used to be easy to interview, but he is not so accessible now.

"I have had my views so misrepresented in the press that I prefer not to be interviewed," he wrote to me recently in reply to my request for an interview with him.

Soldiers and sailors are, of course, prevented from granting interviews on service matters by the regulations of their enlistment, and very few medical men will lend their names to interviews with themselves. This does not mean that you cannot get doctors to give you interviews, but that you cannot often mention the name of a doctor who "talks," because of the rigid rules of medical etiquette in regard to "advertising."

A lot depends on the subject in all official people to give their views on a light topic, such as "Should Soldiers be Clean-Shaven?" much easier than you can on "Are Soldiers Paid Enough?" for example.

I dare say, caught in the right mood a minister of war would allow himself to be interviewed on the former interviews, in fact, and you can get topics, whereas nothing would persuade him to discuss the latter with a press interviewer.

"And the Journalist"

"I remember it was quite fashionable a year or two back to treat all reference to men's dress in the Press as a huge joke. May I remind them that history shows that men of intellect have for centuries been conspicuous for their dress. D'Israeli was a dandy in his younger days; Dumas and Gautier were lovers of colour and gorgeous attire; Gibbon, Carrick and Walpole were classed amongst the best dressed men in an age of glorious fashions. Nowadays in an age of negative fashions we only possess the possibly dressed man, the badly dressed man, and the 'journalist'—Mr. Dennis Bradley at the Savoy Hotel.

A Study in Hands.

Among the numerous small items which make up the sum total of a good or bad effect, as far as matters of dress are concerned, there is one in particular that many women entirely overlook; that is the "style" of their hands.

Now there is something very definite about the hand. It is so full of personality, so closely connected with the individual characteristics of its owner, that those who are wise will realise it requires setting off to advantage just as much as the face and figure, and therefore its special attributes must be studied, and the sleeves and cuffs worn made to harmonise.

Ruffles and Plain Cuffs.

Long, slender hands look their best set off with dainty white ruffles or falling chiffon frills, while hands that are squarely made and of a workman-like and capable appearance look out of place amid soft lace, the plain sleeve and turn-back cuff setting them far better.

There are people who should never go on any account wear short or three-quarter length sleeves, and yet how often a woman notices the entire effect of a gown spoiled by carelessness in this respect!

Some people, again, suffer from bad circulation, resulting in red and unsightly hands, a defect that is very hard to cure, and this redness is emphasized by white ruffles and cuffs, but will not appear to nearly such a disadvantage if black or dark frills are worn.

An Important Item.

Hands are always an interesting study, and it is a pity that in these busy days they are not often accorded the care and attention bestowed on them when our grandmothers were young, and white and shapely hands were considered a very important part of a woman's beauty.

Though manicure and constant massage and such like take up more time than the average woman can daily indulge in, she can always see that her hands are suitably beuffed, a detail the importance of which, once studied, she will quickly realise.

Quite Funny.

The appointment of Prince Alexander of Teck to be Governor-General of Canada in succession to the Duke of Connaught recalls a story connected with a certain big place of entertainment in London.

One day the manager, who was very anxious to secure some Royal patronage for his show, was informed to his great delight, that Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck proposed honouring the performance with their presence that evening. He was greatly delighted and excited by this news, and as the time for the performance drew near he became very agitated.

He decided that the entrance hall should be cleared so that his august patrons should not be inconvenienced on getting out of the Royal carriage by rubbing shoulders with the common crowd. Most of the people he managed to clear away, but there was one young man who refused to budge. He said he was waiting for his wife.

"But," exclaimed the disgraced manager, "this place must be kept clear because I'm expecting Royalty!"

The young man grinned.

"How funny! So am I," he said, a reply which completely fooled the manager. The young man was, of course, Prince Alexander himself waiting for the Princess, who was coming later.

Bartlett's Story of The Karluk.

We give the substance of Captain R. Bartlett's story cabled to the New York Times. Commander Stefansson left the Karluk on Sept. 29th, 1913, near Colville River. Next day, the ship began to drift westward in the drift ice and strong winds. On Sept. 25th they struck easterly gales and a blinding snow storm. For some time they led a charmed existence, and they had dogs and provisions ready fearing the breaking up of the ship. On Sept. 29th the ship began drifting westward. They eventually drifted out of shallow water and the Eskimos were busy catching seals. The Nome sledges were found too heavy for rough ice work. On October 11th the ice cracked 100 yards away and preparations were made to release the ship by dynamite the next day but the lead closed. On Oct. 26th the ice began to form ratters near the ship, but did no damage.

On Oct. 27th we blew down our boiler. Three days later, on Oct. 30, the ice suddenly cracked with a loud report from the stern of the ship, and a lead opened fifty feet from the port side, separating the ship from our dogs. We succeeded, however, in getting our dogs aboard, and also our sounding machine. The open lead soon closed, and there was no lateral movement. All hands stayed up, as the wind was blowing a furious hurricane, verging to the east.

On Nov. 5— we placed on the ice 250 sacks of coal, 100 cases of biscuits and various other articles we would need after leaving the ship, using the biscuit cases for the construction of a house to shelter us. On Nov. 10, we shot our first bear. The sun left us on Nov. 11, when the water was calm and the ship practically stationary. But the prevailing easterly winds kept the Karluk going constantly westward.

Questions Polar Drift Theory.
The theory of drifting across the pole is questionable. Our drift carried the ship to the point where the Jeanette began her drift, as a glance at the chart shows. The Jeanette, if not lost, probably would have taken the course of the Fram. It is possible that there is adjoining land in an unexplored region.

In the latter part of the month the Eskimos caught five white foxes. On Nov. 22 the dredge brought up eleven species of animal life not previously known.

The drift continued south and southwest until Dec. 15. More, easterly winds took us off westward for the rest of the time.

Christmas Day was spent by us with an old-fashioned celebration, with sporting events on the ice and prizes given to the winners. In the evening we had a big banquet.

New Year's Eve, 1913, found us about sixty miles north by east of Herald Island. We had observed what appeared to be land, looming south by west, at twilight. At noon of New Year's Day, 1914, we celebrated with a big football match between all nations and Scotland, and the festivities continued in the evening.

At 2 o'clock on the morning of Jan. 10 we were awakened from sleep by a sharp report like that of a gun. The ship was trembling and quivering. Going on deck, we found that the ice had opened from the stem of the vessel, running in a westerly direction about 100 yards, where the crack had closed.

Water Pours Into Engine Room.
There was no pressure until 7:30 o'clock in the evening. A corner of the ice sheet struck the ship abreast of the engine room, breaking several of her timber planks. The pressure was not great, but water began to pour into the engine room at once. Realizing that the Karluk was doomed, we immediately began placing on the ice pemican which had been taken from cases sewn in canvas; also milk, clothing, ammunition, arms, oil, etc. The night was intensely dark. No moon, no stars were visible. The air was filled with driving snow, flying before the wind at fully forty miles an hour.

The men aboard worked heroically, doing as much in one hour as ordinarily in sixteen thousand pounds of pemican and other provisions were placed on the ice. The men began hauling supplies on sledges to the solid ice pan a hundred yards away, where loomed the house and other articles we had previously placed there. Into the house we sent an Eskimo woman with her baby, telling her to make a fire in the stove, in preparation for our arrival and setting there.

Realizing, however, the necessities of arctic rations, and that pemican, seal, tea, and milk were sufficient, we left the delicacies aboard the ship. At 10:45 o'clock that night, eleven feet of water had got into the engine room. The ice was holding the ship up for a time, and little water came in. By midnight all the supplies had been placed on solid ice. The coffee kettle was boiling constantly in the galley.

Karluk Sank on Jan. 11.
At this time I sent the men to the shelter house. I remained on the ship until she sank at 4:30 o'clock on the afternoon of Jan. 11. On June 20th I sent Mate Anderson, Second Mate Barker, and two sailors, with three months' provisions and a good supply of ammunition, to look for a game land, and also to make a trail for facilitating the removal of supplies of the main party towards the shore. Every one was busy making skin clothes, the Eskimo women cutting the garments and the men sewing them.

The supporting party, accompanying the mates, consisted of Mamen (the assistant geographer), Eskimos and twenty dogs and three sledges returned on the third day, reporting that they had encountered fairly good ice, with little movement. They accompanied the mates to within three miles of land on January 31st. This land proved to be Herald Island. Open water prevented a landing at that time. Wrangel Island, thirty-eight miles from Herald Island, was not sighted by the supporting party.

In the latter part of the month all left camp for land, picking up supplies along the trail and reaching Wrangel Island on February 13th, landing on an ice spit there. Here we found plenty of driftwood, and the Eskimo women prepared fire for us. She carried along her baby and the ship's cat, which had also been saved when we landed.

On February 17th Monroe and two men left for Camp Shipwreck, in order to fetch additional supplies. We now had with us eighty-six days' provisions for each man of the party. The eight of our men who had previously left Camp Shipwreck had not yet arrived at Wrangel Island at that time, but we were expecting them daily.

Realizing the necessity of immediate relief for the men on Wrangel Island, I left on Feb. 18 for the Siberian shore, 100 miles away, accompanied by Eskimos and Perry, with a sledge and seven dogs. Four bears had been shot on the trail on our way to Wrangel, and plenty of bear signs near the island showed that there was a possibility of an abundance of game.

We reached the mainland fifty miles west of Cape North. Gale after gale, sweeping down upon us and moving the ice, had delayed us in crossing Long Sound, and when we reached the mainland only four of our dogs had survived the trip. We met with very kind treatment at the hands of the natives along the coast to East Cape where we encountered Baron Kleist. He greeted us warmly and with great kindness offered us the hospitality of his house at Emma Harbor, the channel of her timber planks. The pressure was not great, but water began to pour into the engine room at once. Realizing that the Karluk was doomed, we immediately began placing on the ice pemican which had been taken from cases sewn in canvas; also milk, clothing, ammunition, arms, oil, etc. The night was intensely dark. No moon, no stars were visible. The air was filled with driving snow, flying before the wind at fully forty miles an hour.

The American revenue cutter Bear has been ordered to proceed from St. Michael's, Alaska, to Wrangel Island, for the purpose of the rescue of fifteen members of the crew of the Canadian expedition, who are marooned on that island. Capt. Bartlett, of the Karluk, is at St. Michael's and will accompany the Bear on the rescue expedition.

Dan Cusack In Great Sand Dance.

Dan Cusack is the big drawing card at Rossley's, and last night crowds attended to hear his famous Eviction Song, "Oh, Spare the Ould Mud Cabin," and to see his wonderful sand dance, and any one attending Rossley's at the present time will certainly get their moneys worth. The picture will more than compare with the best ever seen here. The great two reel feature, "Blood Will Tell," is certainly one that grips the heart, and many persons in the large audience had tear dimmed eyes at the finish. The Vitagraph Comedy had the house in roars; Hughie Mack and Kate Price and other favourite Vitagraph players are shown. "An Apene Father's Vengeance," a thrilling Indian drama, and two extra pictures to-day.

Excursion to Kelligrews.

An excursion train will run to points as far as Kelligrews this afternoon, leaving here at 2:30, and returning will leave Kelligrews at 8:07 p.m.

There will be no excursion to Petty Harbour to-day, as was at first thought.

SCARCITY OF CODFISH.—Up to date no codfish have been offered in the market by the local fishermen, though several have been caught with herring bait on the grounds during the past few days. At this time last year many of the traps had secured from twenty to thirty quintals on the local grounds. Fishing and farming operations have not been so late for nearly a quarter of a century past.

Workman Seriously Hurt.

This morning Michael King, aged 23, while working on the s.s. Durango at the Furness Wharf pier, was struck by a huge piece of timber falling from the deck into the hold of the ship, striking him in the head and almost decapitating him. He was picked up in an unconscious condition and driven to a doctor, who had to insert 12 stitches to close a deep wound in the man's head, after which he had to be taken home, as he was very weak from loss of blood.

Oporto Letter.

The accompanying letter dated May 22nd, was received yesterday by the Board of Trade from Lind & Couto, of Oporto: "Since we last wrote our market has continued without alteration. The stock of British cure is very limited and should be entirely cleared off in a few days, leaving the market entirely dependent upon supplies from Norway, Iceland and Germany. Certain districts which formerly took exclusively British cure, are now acquiring a taste for those other cures, a point which should not be overlooked by Newfoundland shippers."

Poor Fishery Up West.

The Portia which arrived from the westward last night, brings very discouraging news of the fishery. The weather for the past two weeks has been unfavourable, and this, with an almost entire absence of bait, has greatly hindered operations along the shore. Several of the bankers have returned from the Gulf with good catches, but all report unfavourable weather.

Cod is reported very scarce at all ports along the South West Coast and the boats at Burlin and Marystown have practically nothing. There is no sign of caplin, except near Point aux Gauls where a few buckets were cast on Saturday last. The fishermen of the settlement gave them a trial on the local grounds but did not secure a fish. The little cod that is being taken along the shore is being caught on herring and shell bait.

Fishery Report.

The following reports were received by the Board of Trade yesterday: From R. W. Andrews (Gaulois to Hermitage, June 6th):—The total catch is 500 quintals, and for last week, 25. One hundred dories and skiffs are fishing, but prospects are very poor and the bait supply is short. The lobster catch is small, only about 20 being taken by 100 pots. The fishermen all say it looks like a poor year for Hermitage Bay, and so far it has been the worst on record.

From J. Cunningham (Connore Bay to Red Island, June 6th):—One banker has returned with 400 quintals, but no schooners from the grounds have yet arrived. Sixty dories, skiffs and boats are fishing. The total catch is 4,589 quintals, and for last week, 520. Prospects for the codfishery are poor, but there is plenty of herring bait. There was very bad weather all the week. On yesterday, the 5th, we had a gale with very heavy sea, and great damage was done to nets and other fishing tackle.

The Human Vulture

A Great French Play. The famous French story, "The Human Vulture," will be seen at the Nickel Theatre to-day and to-morrow. It is easily one of the best presentations ever given in St. John's. The film when released in Paris, London and New York as well as other big cities caused much comment and was given extended press notices. It has been very aptly termed "one of the cleverest and best acted productions by the Pathe people. No one should miss it as it is full of action with not a dull moment."

Friends of Prof. P. J. McCarthy will be delighted to know he is able to preside at the piano again.

Highlanders Dance.

One of the most enjoyable and successful social events held for some time was the dance in the British Hall last night, in aid of the Newfoundland Highlanders. About a hundred and fifty persons participated in the dance which began in the artistically decorated ballroom at 9.30, the music being supplied by Mr. Hurst, pianist, and Mr. Ryall, violinist. Teas and refreshments were served during the evening. The dance terminated shortly after midnight.

Regatta Committee.

There will be a meeting of the Regatta Committee of last year during next week. After finalizing last year's business the meeting will be open to the public. Great enthusiasm is being displayed by the rowers, who would have been practising long ago but for the backward weather.

Many of the boats will be launched during the coming week, and the crews will soon begin to settle down to practice.

Constructing "Y" at Tor's Cove.

The Reid Mfd. Co. are now constructing a "Y" at Tor's Cove so that they will be able to turn their trains at that station. Later in the season the excursion train on the Trepansey Branch will run as far as Tor's Cove instead of Petty Harbor as at present.

Up For Trial.

The man White, who has been or remand charged with ten different larcenies that were committed along the railway line within the past couple of months, comes up for trial before Judge Knight at noon to-day. Amongst the series of thefts is the breaking open of a letter box and stealing therefrom letters. The accused has the make-up of a simpleton, and two physicians who examined him allege that he is low minded.

Season Opens—B. I. S. Defeat Casuals By Two Goals to Nil.

The opening game of the League series was pulled off on St. George's Field last evening between the B. I. S. and Casuals and resulted in the latter going down to defeat.

Despite the coldness of the atmosphere there was a good attendance of onlookers. The game on the whole might be termed fairly good. There was nothing especially interesting about it, though there was an occasional spurt of excitement.

Punctually at 7 o'clock the players lined up in the following order:—

Casuals.—H. Foster, goal; Bradbury, Hartery, backs; W. Chaney, Stevenson, Wall, halves; Trenchard, Smith, F. Watts, O. Chaney, Lidstone, forwards.

B. I. S.—W. Clare, goal; T. Duggan, S. Sullivan, backs; H. Brown, W. Duggan, J. Kavanagh, halves; R. Shortall, T. Evans, R. Jackman, T. Woods, J. Kelly, forwards.

The game opened at a lively pace. The B. I. S. began hostilities and kept the back division of their opponents busy. The Irish forwards pressed hard. Some difficult shots were sent over the bar, but each time they cleared well. Several corners were conceded by the Irish but still they failed to find the net.

The Casuals then became aggressive, dashed up field and Watts sent a hot shot to Clare who proved equal to the occasion and sent the ball to midfield where Jackman captured the leather, passed to Shortall, who in turn centred to Evans; the latter sent a scorching shot to Foster that proved too much for him and the first goal for the season was registered to the delight of Irish supporters. For the balance of the half no further scoring was done.

SECOND PERIOD.

Right at the opening the B. I. S. controlled the ball and worked west and before a minute had elapsed Jackman, by a well directed shot, landed the ball safely in the net, scoring the second goal for his team.

This enlivened the Casuals who put up steam. Their forwards, however, were in poor condition as regards combination and their work proved very ineffective. Towards the end of the game the B. I. S. had matters in their favour, but no further scoring was done and the game ended:

B. I. S., 2 goals; Casuals, 0.
Mr. E. S. Passet acted as referee.

NOTES.

The B. I. S.—a surprise—got two points to their credit.

The game was not brilliant but there were parts of it interesting. Fast combination play was conspicuous by its absence, and both teams need practice.

The Duggan brothers and Shortall played a rattling game for the B. I. S., as did also Stevenson, Hartery and Bradbury for the Casuals.

The Collegians and Fieldians will face each other on Thursday evening.

Music Hath Charms.

Dohnanyi, the famous pianist, who is in England at present, tells a story of two Scotchmen who lived in the same flat. Each had a piano, upon which he strummed in his own room, and one day a friend suggested that they should run the two pianos into the same room so that they could play music written for two pianos.

The two men thought it was a good idea, and accordingly the pianos were both placed in the same room. They practised diligently at a sonata for two pianos, but with little success for some time, the difficulty being that one had generally finished his movement two or three bars before the other.

At last, however, they succeeded in finishing one movement exactly at the same moment, and says Mr. Dohnanyi, after having some "whusky" to celebrate the occasion, one said, "Aweel, Donald, now that we've been so successful with the first movement, suppose we try the second?"

Donald looked at him in profound astonishment. "Eh, but, Angus," he exclaimed, "that was the second movement that I was playing!"

Caution to Salmon Purchasers.

Yesterday a man from Broad Cove went into an East End shop and offered a salmon for sale, assuring the would-be purchaser that the fish weighed ten pounds. The shopkeeper, out of mere curiosity weighed the salmon and discovered, to the surprise of the vendor that the fish only tipped the scales at eight pounds and a half, for which weight he was paid.

A series of cases of this nature have been going on of late and whether the cause is due to dishonesty on the part of the vendors, or the lack of proper inspection of weighing machines we are unprepared to say. Still in cases where the fish are offered for sale from door to door, as happens in the majority of cases, and where nothing but the vendor's word will give the purchaser the weight, the consumer is generally a loser.

To Salvage The Empress.

Big U. S. Firm Said to Have Already Begun Preliminary Operations.

Quebec, June 3.—At four o'clock this morning, according to a waterfront rumor, the tug Alde P. of Three Rivers, passed through here and picked up a barge, which it is now said to be towing down the river to the spot where the Empress of Ireland lies on the bottom, two miles off shore in deep water. On board are said to be three expert New York divers, with three sets of apparatus and gangs of air line men.

These men, employees of one of the largest salvage firms in the world, made the preliminary surveys on the old American battleship Maine, in the harbor of Havana, and it is understood will descend to the Empress some time to-morrow, and make a report on how the vessel lies and what are the possibilities of floating her.

Marine men say that the salvage firm has taken the responsibility of acting upon its own initiative and will make an offer to the C. P. R., as soon as they have determined the exact situation in which the vessel lies and the chances of floating her, either by compressed air or otherwise.

Erskine's Retort.

Lord Mansfield received a hard setting down from Thomas Erskine. The latter was arguing a case before the House of Lords—a Scottish appeal relating to a trust estate. In the course of his argument he had frequent occasion to use the word "curator," always pronouncing it in the manner approved in the Scottish Courts—that is, with the accent on the first syllable.

This grated upon the ears of Lord Mansfield, who, though a Scotsman by birth, had taken pains to become Anglicized. At last he broke out:—"Mr. Erskine we are in the habit in this country of saying 'curator,' following the analogy of the Latin, in which, as you are doubtless aware, the penultimate syllable is long."

"I thank your lordship very much," returned Erskine. "We are weak enough in Scotland to think that in pronouncing the word 'curator' we are following the analogy of the English language; but I need scarcely say that I bow with pleasure to the opinion of so learned a senator and so great an orator as your lordship."

New York Embezzler Captured in London.

London, June 4.—An order for extradition on charges of alleged larceny and embezzlement was granted to-day by a magistrate at the Bow Street extradition court, against Thomas Adam Reid, former employee of Chubb and Son of New York. He was arrested here in April. Reid mysteriously disappeared from New York on March 28th this year, and it is alleged that books of which he was in charge at Chubb and Son showed an enormous shortage. He had been ten years in the employ of the firm.

NEWS BY CABLE.

Special to the Evening Telegram. LONDON, June 9.

Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalists, issued a statement to-day, in which he emphatically denies the report that the Irish volunteer movement is hostile to the objects of the Irish Party. "Up to two months ago I felt that the volunteer movement was somewhat primitive, but the effect of Sir Edward Carson's threat upon public opinion in England, the House of Commons and the Government, and the occurrences at Curragh Camp and successful gun running in Ulster, virtually altered the position. The Irish Party took steps about six weeks ago to inform their friends and supporters that in their opinion it was desirable to support the volunteer movement, and as a result it has spread within the last six weeks like a prairie fire, and all the Nationalists in Ireland will soon be enrolled."

Special to Evening Telegram. LONDON, June 9. The American delegates to the World's Congress of the Salvation Army, numbering 700, with Miss Eva Both, Chief of Staff in America, at their head, started this morning from Army Headquarters to the American Embassy, where they were received by Ambassador Page. Later Miss Booth and leading officers were received by the Ambassador, who expressed keen appreciation of the appearance of the delegates and the work of the Army. Miss Booth replied, thanking the Ambassador on behalf of comrades. The delegates will attend the opening of the Congress to-morrow.

The Launch of Shamrock IV.

Sir Thomas Lipton's Wonderful New Yacht--600 Pound Spar 120 Feet Long.

Gosport, May 20.—To-day there was an unexciting start in the quiet little town which at one time boasted the glorious title of God's Port, but which in a less reverent age is known as Gosport.

For a hundred years Gosport has been famous for its yachts and yachtsmen. One firm created the industry, and the same firm continues to this day. The yacht-building yards were established by the late Mr. Benjamin Nicholson, and his son Charles is the creator of Sir Thomas Lipton's latest challenger for the America Cup, Shamrock IV. Little wonder that Gosport should don holiday attire in honor of the launch day.

Like a Green Bottle.

A hundred journalists had travelled from London in a special shamrock-bedecked express. All eyes and all attentions were for the wonderful green yacht which lay naked and ready for the water, with her topsides sleek and shining as a beautiful green bottle. Telegrams and cables announced her launch to all corners of the globe.

Yet what must the ordinary spectator have thought about her? Not so wonderful, perhaps—not so many-voiced. To him she was just a boat and an odd-looking one at that. The peculiar round of her topsides called "rumble-home" by sailor men would pass unmentioned; the swollen bow would have no meaning for him; the hollow near the bostay bolt would never be noticed, and the long, heavy stern would perhaps appear to him as something clumsy.

Under water, the long, easy floor, the deep, thick keel, would express nothing of the designer's mind. Yet these and a hundred other points are full of the greatest interest. Each curve, each line, each almost imperceptible fullness or hollow, were carefully considered before it appeared as it did yesterday.

To the yachtsman several features were evident, and the first, that Mr. Nicholson had designed what is technically known as a "big boat," and one which could and would have to carry enormous sail. There can be no doubt about this latter, for the main stick of the mast was promptly put in place after the launch and cannot have been much less than 120 feet in length, though a bare 7 feet of that was "in the yacht;" that is, between the deck and the stem on which it was stepped.

A Mast in Pieces.

This enormous spar is built of innumerable pieces of fine silver spruce. It was so carefully joined that only close examination could detect the system whereon it was built. In days not so long gone a good stout Oregon tree was dressed and put in place to serve as a mast. There came hollow spars of steel, and then hollow and built masts of silver spruce—wonderfully light, wonderfully strong, and most expensive.

That long, bare stick standing in Shamrock IV. yesterday would probably cost over £600. And as one unexpected puff of wind would put it over the side, two masts are already built. From this it may be gathered that racing for the America Cup is not a poor man's recreation. But return to the yacht as we first saw her. She is a much more remarkable boat than any built in the United States, and the long, heavy counter and the pudding-ended bow will give her an extraordinary sailing length, so that although she may measure 75 feet on the water line when upright, immediately the wind pressure heels her the sailing length will be enormously increased, all of which goes for stability and speed.

To cope with the great hoist of sail the rigging is taken on board. Two huge outriggers stand out on either side, perhaps three feet or a little less, to take the end of the shrouds at the deck. So short is the bowsprit that it appears but a stump, but the fact will be appreciated that this large racing yacht will carry only one headstay; the first yacht of any size to do so on this side of the Atlantic, and probably the largest yacht to do so anywhere.

Throughout the boat simplicity is the most noticeable feature. Nothing that can be dispensed with is included. The deck is bare, save for the few necessary cleats and leads. A little cockpit contains the neat steering gear, connected with a quadrant working the rudder below deck, where, excepting one or two light partitions, there is nothing from one end of the boat to the other; nothing but a series of girders, struts, and beams, bewildering to the uninitiated but full of interest to those conversant with the building of such craft.

Victory Salute Coincidence.

All this might have been noted by the spectator before at noon the old Victory, lying at a few cables off, reared forth a royal salute in honor of Her Majesty's birthday. Almost simultaneously the Countess of Shaftesbury christened the yacht, willing hammers struck at the wedges supporting the hull, and one swinging blow dislodged the dog-shore which kept one sliding way upon the other. With champagne dripping from her bows the new yacht glided from her birthplace. Gathering way, she shot from the open end of the building shed into the blue waters of Port-au-Fort Harbour. Amid ringing cheers she gracefully crossed the shore, and with a gentle lurch pitched over the beach bank and lay waterborne before the cheering thousands, a long, green hull upon which the sun shone with apparent good will.

It was immediately evident that the designer had calculated well. Only naval architects are conversant with the difficulty of making such a yacht float at a proper level and with a proper draught. A slight miscalculation, and henceforth a bother and expense would be incurred to alter the trim of such a boat, weighted as she is, with a concentrated, homogeneous mass of lead. She must float at a certain draught, and she must float at a given trim. Evidently there was no mistake in the Shamrock's design, so far as displacement and allocation of weights were concerned.

Certainly if a good beginning counts for anything, Shamrock of the four leaves has had it.

Charge of Mascots.

In response to the toast of his health at the luncheon which followed the launch, Sir Thomas Lipton said very many people had a great belief in mascots, and when he last attempted to "lift the cup" he had twenty-three horse shoes, including one from Fitzsimmons, the champion boxer. He also got tigers' whiskers, a green hen, partridge, pedigree rabbits, frogs' legs, chickens' wishbones, grasshoppers with legs like dromedaries, and a magnificent American eagle; in fact, his yacht was like a menagerie. A lady wrote to him wishing him to take her son, who was a young man with beautiful red hair. This offer, and also one of an elephant, he had to refuse.

This year he had a monkey given him by Sir Thomas Dewar, but the mascot he was relying on was a four-leaved shamrock.—London Daily Mail.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office, its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modernly and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. Mr. Percie Johnson represents this world known firm in Newfoundland.—ap17.t

Buy at Home.

Keysmith and a dozen clerks or more, who wait on patrons in their store. Our crossroads burg they would upbraid, and see it with glad people filled, and to that end they blow their heads like ruly patriotic lads. But when we need of eggs a few, we send away to Timbuctoo; and when a carpet tack we wish, it's shipped from Ypsilanti, Mich. Each has the notion in his dome that things are best away from home, and so we order hods and hats, and hummingbirds and Melrose cats, from strangers in some town remote, who would not know us from a goat. We ship away our hard-earned kale, and get our fourth rate junk by mail. Say are we seers, or are we fools? Those strangers don't support our schools, or keep the peeler on his beat, or help to pave Commercial street. They do not paint the village pump, or build a fence around the dump. If our old burg were blown away they wouldn't care a bale of hay. Keysmith and Kicksnaw ought to get the local trade, already yet.

Ponderous Personages

GENERAL WINFIELD R. SCOTT.
By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old St. John's." General Winfield Scott, who became famous by strolling across Mexico in 1846, through a hostile army three times the size of his own, was a Virginian who was born in Petersburg in 1786, and became a captain in the army twenty-two years later.

In those days, when the United States was young and was picked upon with great enthusiasm by most anybody, a captain in the army led a busy life. In 1812, Scott was captured by the British at Queenstown, Canada, but was afterwards exchanged. The Yankees always could beat the British trading, but they never beat them so badly as they did at this time. A year later Scott raised such havoc with the British armies at Chippewa and Lundy's Lane that he was brevetted Brigadier-General, and was offered the Secretaryship of War.

Scott declined, however, and kept on doing odd jobs of fighting for many years. He had charge of the Seminole war, and helped tame the Blackhawk in Florida. In 1839, he got 62 votes for president in the Whig convention which nominated Harrison, and when the Mexican war broke out, he was in command of the United States army which went to Vera Cruz.

A great many people have deprecated the cruelty of the United States in pitching onto feeble little Mexico in this war, but it must be remembered that the pitching was done with an army of never more than half the size of the Mexican army. General Scott was of a methodical disposition, and when he set out for Mexico City, he didn't linger by the way. Each day he advanced the usual distance, and if he had to advance through a Mexican army of twice his size or over a citadel perched hundreds of feet above him, it was all in the day's business. He arrived in Mexico exactly on schedule time, and experts in the war business have said that Napoleon couldn't have done a more workmanlike job.

Scott was made Lieutenant-General for his Mexican campaign, and commanded the army until 1861. He ran for president in 1852, but was defeated by Pierce. This shows the difference between the United States and Mexico. When the commander of the Mexican army runs for president the other candidates all run in the opposite direction.

When the Civil War broke out, General Scott was 75 years old, and retired from command. He died in 1866. This was a mistake on his part. If he had died in 1860, he would have been a far greater man in memory. The Civil War got in front of him and hid him from the public view.

Dear Sir,—I have analyzed a sample of Sulphate of Ammonia made at your works and I found 20.5 per cent of NITROGEN, Sulphates of Ammonia and Nitrate of Soda are the two principal Nitrogen manure.

Sulphate of Ammonia is less soluble than Nitrate of Soda, consequently it is a safer manure to use during a wet season.

More Fires.

Fires provoke immediate sympathy for the sufferers and also thankfulness for persons' escape. Another thought should be whether one is personally and sufficiently protected? An insurance policy with J. J. Jones would provide for you this desired security and at small expense. Have you enough insurance?

SERIOUS THOUGHTS.

One of the lessons to be learnt from the awful calamities of recent date—our Sealing Disaster and the loss of the "Empress of Ireland"—is that every man who has the interests of his family at heart should carry an insurance Policy.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE costs only a fraction of Life Insurance.

A THOUSAND DOLLAR POLICY COSTS ABOUT FIVE DOLLARS A YEAR.

We have written up over two hundred of our fellow citizens this year—men who think, "Let us add your name to the list."

When Editors Are Killed.

Twenty Members of One Newspaper Were Destroyed by Dynamite.

The recent extraordinary tragedy in France when the wife of M. Cahiaux entered the office of the Figaro, and shot the editor dead, because he had attacked her husband in his paper, did not surprise French people anything like so much as it did other people over here.

In France, indeed, editors expect to have lively times, though, naturally, they don't expect to be killed. There, however, prominent men are attacked so fiercely and relentlessly by opposition papers that editors are continually being called upon to fight those of whom they have written.

In June, 1911, for example, on the occasion of the visit of the French President to Rouen, the Rouen Dispatch attacked some of the Royalists in an article. Four of the men who objected to the things written about them called on the editor of the paper and thrashed him unmercifully with their walking sticks, and then proceeded to fight the sub-editors who had come to the rescue.

By the time the obstreperous readers of the paper had been ejected, M. Morel, the editor, had been severely injured, as well as two of his sub-editors, and the room in which the fight had taken place was absolutely wrecked—furniture broken, desks smashed, and ink running over every thing.

Captain's Nerve Saved "Royal Edward."

PROMPT DECISION IN TIME OF PERIL PROBABLY SAVED THE BIG LINER FROM MEETING WITH DISASTER.

The following from Avonmouth, tells of the close call the steamer Royal Edward had on her last trip across the Atlantic:—

"On May 23, while the Royal Edward was proceeding at slow speed because of the fog—sounding her horn constantly—Captain Wootton from the bridge saw the towering facade of a huge berg threatening his ship. Only some 1,200 feet intervened between the glowering monster and the Royal Edward. Knowing the iceberg's shelf reached under the water, the captain feared to try to turn his ship. The floating ice monster was too close to allow time for reversal of the engines in an attempt to back away. Accordingly the intrepid captain took the "bull by the horns" and ordered the navigator to proceed dead ahead. As many of the passengers as could be reached in the brief moment before the iceberg would be struck were ordered to stand by for a shock. Moving very slowly, the Royal Edward hit the ice with a resounding crash.

Passengers in Frenzy of Fear.

Passengers who had been below and could not be warned, scrambled, screaming, up the companionway, believing the ship to be sinking. They were quickly reassured by the captain, officers and stewards and when the threatened panic was averted and the men and women understood what Captain Wootton had done they were almost hysterical in their gratitude, believing that the captain's quick decision undoubtedly saved them from going to the bottom.

Examination showed the stem of the liner to be twisted, and several plates buckled, but otherwise the ship was not damaged. Meantime the Royal Edward was backing away from the berg and when clear of it proceeded on her way.

It was believed that the captain took the only chance open to him. Had the ship turned, it might have struck a shelf of ice beneath the water line and been so ripped that the watertight bulkheads would have been rendered useless.

Vigorous Health Restored to Run-Down Women.

Seemed to Have Lost All Ambition, Was Pale and Anemic.

Made Wonderful Recovery When Dr. Hamilton's Pills Were Used.

"I was never actually sick," writes Mrs. Norman La Pierre, wife of a well known resident of Labentiere, "yet I never could get strong like other women. I ate well enough, but somehow rich and red blood I could never make. When I married I took a great pride in my housekeeping, but it kept me tired all the time. Mrs. Lechance, my neighbor, looked well—she told me her health had been made up by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I only thought of pills as a physic, but now I know that Dr. Hamilton's Pills are more for they quickened my stomach, liver and bowels—made me stouter and stronger, gave me such color in my cheeks as I never had before. I sincerely believe Dr. Hamilton's Pills should be used by every woman—that's why I write this letter."

No medicine invigorates and renews health and spirits like Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid from the Catarrhzone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

Well, but you should remember that science is advancing all the time, and that what was not possible yesterday can be accomplished to-day if you neglect to try Zylex—the new and best thing that science has yet offered for the relief and cure of Eczema and other annoying and disgusting skin diseases—you are missing a great opportunity. It may be that it will cure you. It has cured some very bad cases. Price 60c. a box. Zylex Soap, 25c. a cake.

Said the Lady Was Drunk.

In August, 1909, the editor of the Panama Press, the leading paper in Panama, was shot dead for a very similar reason that caused the death of M. Cahiaux of the Figaro.

In this case, however, it was the woman who was attacked in the paper, and her brother-in-law who shot the offending editor and killed him.

The editor, Mr. Chandler, stated in his paper that Mrs. Guyant, wife of the United States Consul General at Panama, was drunk on a certain occasion. Like the recent affair in Paris, the murder of Mr. Chandler created an enormous sensation at the time owing to the high position of all the parties concerned.

America, of course, can cite hundreds of instances where editors have been attacked by outraged readers, though most of the cases are of editors of local papers in out of the way country districts, where the law depends upon one's own fighting abilities.

Some of the big American newspapers, however, have been attacked. In October, 1910, the Times building at Los Angeles was destroyed by dynamite just as the paper was going to press, and twenty of the staff were killed, including the assistant editor.

The explosion was the work of the Labor Union. For some years the Times had attacked the Trade Unions in every possible way, and the labor of General Otis, the owner and editor, was constantly threatened. Whenever he appeared in the streets, indeed, he was pelted with mud and stones until forced to travel continually with a bodyguard.

Risked His Life for a Year.

After the building had been blown up a number of Labor leaders were arrested and their guilt fully proved by William Burns, America's famous detective, though it was not until 12 months after the crime had been committed that he succeeded in proving it against them.

Even in England newspaper editors and proprietors have carried their lives in their hands because they have spoken out fearlessly.

3 Killed; 2 Hurt in Auto Accident.

Street Car Smashed Into Motor at Montreal, Killing 2 People Instantly—Others Removed to Hospital.

Montreal, June 3.—A street car smashed into an automobile owned by Emile Robillard, 255 Hamilton Street, at the intersection of Atwater avenue and St. Antoine Street this evening at 6.30, with fatal results. Mrs. E. Robillard, forty years of age, and a daughter, Miss E. Robillard, were instantly killed. Mr. Robillard and a son, Eugene, were seriously hurt, and are now in the western hospital. They are suffering from broken ribs, general contusions, cuts and probably internal injuries. The motorman of the car, Roscoe Chennevert, 522 St. Antoine Street, escaped with his left arm crushed.

The street car had descended a somewhat stiff grade on Atwater avenue and was just swinging on to St. Antoine street when it left the track. The automobile, with its four occupants, was proceeding along St. Antoine street, at this critical moment, and the car plunged into it at terrific speed. The automobile was jammed against the curb, and the Robillard family were thrown out. The mother and daughter were not so fortunate as the father and son, and were not thrown clear of the car or auto. Mrs. Robillard was caught beneath the automobile. It is thought her skull was crushed, as there were few marks on her, except a wound in the back of the head. Miss Robillard became pinned under the street car, and was badly crushed. It was with some difficulty that her body was extricated.

Wellesley's Eight.

Red McGhee

In tennis, golf and other games like that we men ought to doff our hat to lots of female stars. But in the he-av-y, gruelling games we don't find very many dames out sekin' battle scars. So when the skirts get out on a play some heavy roles I rise an' say, "Let's give ol' Nick his due." Ol' Nick, o' course, in this here case ain't keeper of the heated place—it's Wellesley's eight-oared crew.

There's Shubert, Schmalz, Loyaker, Ladd—they'd make a lot o' men look bad when they slide in an oar. An' then there's Frost an' Balderstone an' Moffatt.—Wait, we've left out one, we near forgot Gilmore. The gals might be put out at this, bein' called their names without no Miss, but chances are they'll not. Miss don't belong. We'd never say that "Mr." Plank will pitch to-day. If we did we'd be shot.

With Coxswain Gorman in the stern those gals'll show you speed to burn—they lift that shell each stroke. Their strokes ain't taffy-pullin' pulls, they're stronger than a flock o' bulls—an' that's no idle joke. Don't git the bunch it's any fun to sit there pulin' in the sun. It's purty doggone tough. An' while I'm not a suffra-jit, I'm frank an' willin' to admit these gals've got the stuff.

Let the Lamps be White

"Off when I feel my engine swerve,
As o'er strange rails we fare,
I strain my eyes around the curve
For what awaits me there.
When swift and free she carries me
Through yards unknown at night,
I look along the line to see
That all the lamps are white."

"The blue light marks the crippled car,
The green light signals slow,
The red-light is a danger light,
The white light, 'Let her go,'
Again the open fields we roam,
And when the night is fair
I look up in the starry dome
And wonder what is there."

"For who can speak of those who dwell
Behind the curving sky?
No man has ever lived to tell
Just what it means to die.
Swift toward life's terminal trend,
The run seems short to-night;
God only knows at the end
I hope the lamps are white."

Resolute Favorite

As Cup Defender After Her Victory Yesterday.

Greenwich, June 4.—As a result of her victory yesterday, the yacht Resolute is now a favorite for Cup defense honors. The Defiance, which has been kept out of the present series by alterations, is an uncertain quantity, but experts declare she will have to show marvelous form to defeat the Resolute when official contests are held in August to pick boat which will actually compete with Shamrock IV.

SHAMROCK OUT TO-DAY.

Portsmouth, Eng., June 4.—Shamrock IV, Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger for the America's Cup, went out to-day for her first salt-stretching spin in the vicinity of Spithead. She was accompanied by Shamrock III. The wind was light and fluky, and quite inadequate to test the capabilities of the challenger. Under her huge mainsail and her sloop foresail she manoeuvred handily, and picked up way quickly after tacking.

The towering mast of the new yacht quite dwarfed that of the old Shamrock. Sir Thomas Lipton was on board the challenger, together with Charles E. Nicholson, her designer, and William Burton, amateur yachtsman, who is to command Shamrock IV during the cup races in American waters.

New Governor for Canada.

Prince Alexander of Teck is to be Governor-General, and Commander-in-Chief of the Dominion of Canada.

The King has approved the Prince's appointment to the post, in succession to the Duke of Connaught, whose term of office will expire in October.

"The Duke and Duchess of Connaught, according to present arrangements, will return to England in the second week of October, and will be given an official welcome on their arrival in London.

"Tall, dark, and handsome, Prince Alexander, the third son of the late Duke and Duchess of Teck, is Queen Mary's 'soldier brother,' and very popular," says the Daily Mirror.

"Princess Alexander, whom he married in 1904, is as clever as she is pretty and charming, always beautifully dressed, and will admirably fill the place of the first lady in the Dominion.

"The Prince and Princess have two children—Princess May and Prince Rupert."

Carpenter Busy Matchmaking.

WILLING TO MEET COLIN BELL.

George Carpenter is evidently determined to make hay while the sun shines. Apart from his forthcoming match with Gunboat Smith, he is still negotiating for a meeting with Dick Smith at the Liverpool Stadium, while there is a distinct possibility that he will take the ring against Colin Bell in the near future. The Irishman has a very good idea of the value of his name on a bill, but given anything like fair terms, he will sign articles to meet Bell.

In that he is the direct contrast to Bombardier Wells, who last week, through his manager, Jim Maloney, turned down a guaranteed sum of £1,250 for a third meeting with Carpenter under conditions similar to that 73-seconds match.

One would have thought that both Wells and Maloney would have jumped at the chance of securing £1,250, "win, lose, or draw," and that the contract would have been signed and stamped before the promoter had a chance to withdraw.

But the cautious Maloney, after considering the offer for several hours, refused to put his pen to paper, and the matter must now be considered as closed.

The luck of the Bombardier is almost uncanny. He has a record which, to say the least, is far from convincing, and yet the promoters seem to tumble over themselves in their endeavours to secure his services.

Chinese State Religion

Remarkable Debate in Administrative Council at Peking.

"WHAT IS HEAVEN?" ASKED.

Peking. A most remarkable debate took place in the Administrative Council on the subject of the state religion.

"What is heaven?" asked the renowned scholar, 80 years of age. Before it can be worshipped it must be defined, so that we can understand what we are doing."

Round this great interrogation the debate fiercely raged. The worship of Confucius was also the subject of the bitterest differences. After a vain attempt to secure that not the President, but a special Bureau of Rites, should officiate at the altars of Heaven another delegate propounded three questions, which only the Delegate oracle could answer:

First: Is Confucius a god or a human being? If the latter, how can he be worshipped?

Second: If Confucian worship were reintroduced into the schools, how can the scholars of other religions maintain an equal standing?

Third: Whether sacrifice to Confucius is similar to sacrifices to heaven?

These things provoked such scenes that the Government Secretary was finally forced to intervene and declare that the Govt. was already absolutely decided upon the necessity of re-establishing Confucian as well as heaven worship and only referred these matters to the Administrative Council for details, which declaration incidentally throws a flood of light on the present rule.

After calm was re-established the Government delegates insisted that symptoms of moral degradation had been noticeable throughout the country for the last two years, due to the discarding of ancient rites and causing the proscription of all Christian missionaries.

Finally, the chairman stated that these matters were purely political and not connected with religions thus using the arguments of the Emperor Kangsi during the famous 17th century controversy between Jesuits and the Dominicans as to whether the Chinese rites were idolatrous, which engaged the attention of Popes Innocent X., Alexander VII., and Clement XI., the latter finally ruling them idolatrous, thus causing the proscription of all Christian missionaries.

It may thus be taken for granted that all the old rites will henceforth be re-established with Confucianism as the State religion swinging back the pendulum to where it was before 1911. One of the most amazing features of this debate was that many authorities, 3,000 and even 4,000 years old were gravely quoted, making the oldest European civilization seem as that of yesterday.

We know who he will buy it for? But who will he buy it from? Hundreds of Engagements and Weddings are sealed yearly in Newfoundland with Trappell's Solid Gold Rings. Hundreds of friendships and tokens of affection to sweetheart, wife, mother, sister and friend are embodied in lasting embrace with Trappell's Rings, the popularity of which is based upon their quality, finish and variety and beauty of design. Rings for men, women, baby and miss for every occasion. Gem Rings, Chased Rings, Signet Rings, Birthday Rings. Should you have a desire to get a ring of such design as you may create yourself, or that you had seen somebody else wear, just take your design to Trappell; there is nothing impossible along these lines for his talented workmen. A splendid assortment of amethysts can be seen if your design calls for a Gem Ring. Ask to be shown the new White Sapphires. They are hard and brilliant like diamonds, so much so that they puzzle experts.

A Welcome Valentine.

On the way to the famous "Watersmeet," near Lynnmouth, North Devon, there is a quaint little hamlet called Middleham.

The River Lyn, on the banks of which the hamlet is situated, threads its way between very high hills that appear to shut in the place from the outside world. So steep are these hills that for nearly four months each year the sun does not rise high enough to be seen, over their tops, by the inhabitants of the hamlet.

If the day is clear, the sun makes its first appearance over the hill-top on the fourteenth of February, and its appearance is hailed with delight by the cottagers, who call it their "valentine." If the day should be foggy or cloudy, so that it cannot be seen, great disappointment is felt especially among the children.

The sun only remains in sight for a short time for the first few days, but the length of time afterwards gradually increases until it can be seen for several hours.

It then appears for a shorter time each day, until towards the end of October it finally disappears from sight until the following February.

MINARD'S LINIMENT USED BY PHYSICIANS.

THE REINDEER

is an inhabitant of the Arctic Region, and it is possibly the most useful of all the animals which dwell in this part of the world. Unlike the Reindeer, SUNLIGHT SOAP is to be found in all parts of the civilised world, and its great utility is vouched for by millions of contented housewives who would not be without it.

SUNLIGHT SOAP

enjoys a well-merited reputation, it is absolutely pure, and will not harm the most delicate fabric. A piece of Sunlight Soap used in your next wash will convince you of its excellence.

Divorced Life

At Luncheon With the Ingenue

"Come on, Winthrop, let's grab some cats. What do you say? I'm as hungry as a wolf."
Marian smiled at the ingenue's spirited way of putting it, but readily acquiesced, and the two, after several hours of hard rehearsal, left the stage door together, and slipped into a nearby eating house. Marian had taken a great fancy to the ingenue. She found the young actress wholesome and refreshing, although obviously hardened by the atmosphere and toll of her profession. Marian envied her her important role in the drama under rehearsal.

"I expected to be playing on Broadway this season instead of out here in the provinces," she sighed, after ordering.

"Well, you'll be having fine parts here," said Marian. "I'd be giving a whole lot to be playing important parts like yours."

"You may have to, at that. It takes a heap of good nature to get along with most of these managers. Some of them want the earth. Then, too, it's a whole lot a matter of luck. Why, I've seen girls with talent galore who had to be satisfied with nothing but bits, and who plugged along for years without ever getting within a thousand miles of a real part. It's discouraging."

"I should think that hard work—"

"Forget it," smiled the ingenue archly. "It's true that you can't get anywhere in this business without the hardest kind of work. But hard work alone don't count a little bit. A girl can work herself down to a shadow, and all she generally gets out of it is to see the new one with a drag of some sort jump right in over her head and run away with the plum. In order to get along, you've got to be a favorite."

"A favorite?" questioned Marian.

A Grey Friar.

In order that he may become a sort of Nonconformist "Grey Friar," the Rev. E. W. Lewis, is sacrificing a salary of £600 a year as pastor of the historic King's Weigh House Church, in Davis Street, W.

In a letter to his congregation announcing his resignation, Mr. Lewis states that he has felt for some time the incongruity between the position of being a man of God and the position of being a comparatively highly-salaried, comfortably-conditioned official in organized religion.

In future he will (so the Christian Commonwealth states) be known as plain Edward Lewis, instead of the Rev. E. W. Lewis, M.A., B.D., and it is his intention to seek personal poverty and the simplest kind of life and he will also engage in an unorganized and irregular form of preaching, a kind of "wayside sowing of the seed." Mr. Lewis is 42.

Battle With Fierce Panther.

London, June 6.—A stirring story of a hunting adventure of a company of the 7th Punjab in Eastern Bengal is reported by the Calcutta Englishman.

Mr. Ross, a subdivisional officer, enlisted the aid of the subadar (chief native officer) of the company, in rounding up a man-eating tiger. With a section of 25 men, armed with rifles, bayonets and ball cartridge, they were guided by a villager to the spot where the tiger was thought to be. Mr. Ross declined to take charge of the operations, saying that he wanted the first shot. He therefore took up his position in front of the men, with a scout to the right and the left. The men were drawn up as if an attack on an enemy's stockade was premeditated. The order was given to load the rifles and to fix bayonets and the party advanced.

Scarcely had they started when an animal broke from cover and with great leaps and bounds charged straight at Mr. Ross, who dropped on one knee and fired. Still the animal came on. One of the two scouts, Haydar Mohammed Azim, jumped in front of the officer and took the charge on his bayonet, firing at the same time. He saved Mr. Ross, but was knocked down at the same time which fell on him.

The second scout, Lance Naik Sak-havat Khan, rushed to his comrade's aid. The animal charged him, too. He also received the charge on his bayonet and pulled the trigger at the same time. But he was knocked down and his leg savagely bitten.

Then the subadar, forgetting that he was in charge of the operations, rushed into the fray with a sporting gun, followed by his men with bayonets levelled. Mr. Ross, too, dashed into the scum. There were shots, bayonet thrusts and shouts. Two more men were knocked down by the animal and mauled. Others were knocked down but got up unhurt. It was a whirlwind of fur, steel and puggres that would have delighted the heart of a cinematograph operator.

Finally the Sepoys killed the animal. It was then seen that it was a panther, and not a tiger, as they had thought. In its body were seven bullet holes and eleven bayonet wounds.

The Murder of The Hindu Chief.

Notes in the Bank Bear the Thumb Prints of Other Hindus Who are Suspected of the Crime.

New Glasgow, June 4.—The authorities here are leaving no stone unturned in their effort to locate the person or persons who committed the hideous crime here last December which was unearthed a few days ago in the discovery of the body of the Hindu, Chanda Singh. Several other threads of importance have been added to the evidence, the first being that the murdered man had explained to the proprietress of a restaurant at Trenton, from whom he desired board and lodging that he feared to remain in the shack with his fellow country men for fear they would murder him. He, however, did not tell what the trouble was about, and evidently contented himself to live with them.

Other evidence which may prove very valuable in case it is found that the other Hindus are the real murderers, is that there is now in the possession of the authorities promissory notes left by the deceased at the bank, which not only bear the signature of the debtors, but their thumb prints, the murdered chief explaining to parties here that these men owed him some considerable sums of money chiefly for their passage out to this country and that he had taken their notes and that the justice prevailed in his country for each debtor to stamp his note with his thumb print. This, he said, was a solemn pledge and which the debtor was duty bound to defend with his life if necessary. Thus if these Hindus are rounded up by the authorities their identity can be proved by the thumb prints on the notes. Very little more evidence of importance has been discovered bearing on the case but each day something new is learned and the authorities feel confident that they will be able in the course of a few days to properly place the blame.

Banks in His Leg.

Denver, June 2.—Harr C. Wise, fifty, uses one of his cork legs as a safely deposit vault, and this afternoon, when he recovered from a debauch at the County Hospital, he set up a yell for his hidden wealth.

Because Wise was belligerent when taken to the hospital, his artificial aids in walking had been taken away. A search was made by attaches, and $8,000 in certificates was found.

You can get a Pretty Engagement Ring ranging in price from $2.50 to $110.00 at TRAPNELL'S.

Two Sailors of Storstad Under Arrest at Montreal.

Two sailors of the collier Storstad were arrested Tuesday afternoon by city detectives at Montreal, charged with the theft of $1,000 in travelers' checks from Lionel Kent, manager of the Energetic Explosive Co., Montreal, who was one of the survivors from the Empress of Ireland. The arrest of the men, Manuel Chute, a native of Honolulu, was made in the Merchants Bank of Canada, when he was cashing one of the checks, and the other was taken on board the Storstad by six detectives. He was Carmel Sperriti, a native of Malta. Suspicions were aroused in the bank and on board ship simultaneously. The cashier at the bank noticed the name of Lionel Kent on the checks he was asked to cash, and a sailor of the collier reported to the first mate that Chute had offered him $25 on Monday night as a gift. The latter fact, it is said, was known to Captain Anderson of the Storstad, but he had not taken any action up to the time the detectives boarded the ship.

A search of the men and their bunks brought to light $550 in checks and $41 cash in the possession of Sperriti, and $400 in checks in the possession of Chute. The latter, who speaks English, said he had been given the checks by a Montreal hotel man. Sperriti has not made a statement yet through inability to speak English or French.

Mr. Lionel Kent said in Rimouski that he had lost $1,000 between the time he left the sinking Empress of Ireland and when he was taken on the Storstad. He had hidden the papers in his shirt, but supposed they had been lost or stolen while he was in the lifeboat in a semi-conscious condition. Captain Anderson stated that his men had found a great deal of money in the lifeboats, which they had turned in, as far as he knew.

The Chief Court of Presbyterians.

The General Assembly Convened at Woodstock Last Night.—Dr. Herridge, of Ottawa, is Elected Moderator.

Woodstock, Ont., June 3.—Rev. W. T. Herridge, the eminent Ottawa divine, is the new moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church of Canada, being elected to that position to-night at the opening session of the assembly in Knox Church here. Five names altogether were submitted, but one of the nominees, Rev. John Neil, of Westminster Church, Toronto, withdrew, and another, Rev. Principal A. B. Baird, of Winnipeg College, was declared ineligible, as his name was not on the list of commissioners appointed to attend the assembly.

The names upon which a vote was taken were those of Dr. Herridge, Rev. Principal Scrimger, of Montreal College, and the Rev. Dr. D. D. McLeod, of Bryon. In accordance with the usual custom a standing vote was first taken between Principal Scrimger and Dr. McLeod, the latter being declared the choice. Then a similar vote was taken to decide between Dr. McLeod and Dr. Herridge, the latter being elected by an overwhelming majority.

Woodstock, the county seat of historic Oxford, within whose bounds there are probably more Presbyterians than in any other district of a similar size in the Dominion, threw open her doors to-night to the scores of divines from coast to coast who are arriving for the annual session of the great Presbyterian parliament.

Three Years For Padding Payroll.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., June 6.—Charged with padding the pay-rolls of the Sault Dredging and Construction Company, Nelson Vanliven of this city was found guilty by Judge Stone and was sentenced to three years in Kingston penitentiary.

Roskelly, an accomplice, who later turned king's evidence, was allowed to go on suspended sentence, while Eugene Guzzio and his wife Maud Guzzio who undertook to cash the fraudulent checks, were also sentenced to two years and one year respectively. The amount alleged to have been secured is about $1,500.

Celebrated Norwegian Jigger

Fishermen should use these Jiggers and rig them with swivels same style as in Norway, then the Jigger acts like a minnow and when spinning attracts the fish, so that instead of jigging they really snap the Jigger and in this manner you never fail to catch them. Ordinary leads can be used but the Norwegian style seems more simple and easily made. Our fishermen should try this great Norwegian fish killer.

"Love in the Ghetto" is a Vitagraph drama of Jewish life; "Gambler of the West," an Essanay story, very interesting. Two comedies: "Too Many Cooks," a Powers, and "When Roaring Gulch got Surfrage," a Frontier, are producers of fun. Mr. Earnshaw who leaves here on Sunday for Canada, is singing some of his best successes during this his farewell week. To-day he renders Mother McCree. New Wonders in Electricity.

Housewife May Start Her Cooking While She is Absent From Home. Philadelphia, June 1.—Most of the five thousand delegates to the thirty-seventh annual convention of the National Electric Light Association, arrived in Philadelphia to-day on special trains from all sections of the country. Special trains arrived with delegates from California, Georgia and Illinois. The convention will continue throughout the week.

Thomas A. Edison as well as Dr. Charles T. Steinitz, who is regarded by electrical experts as his successor in the first place among American electrical scientists; Theodore N. Vail, who is spoken of as the head of the telephone trust, and Chas. Strague, who invented the present system of electric street railways, and others almost equally prominent will be among the delegates.

A revelation in street lighting is promised by one of the inventions shown to-day at the current exhibition. It is an incandescent light, which burns in a great large bulb, filled with nitrogen gas. The light is so powerful that if unshaded, it is injurious to the eyes.

The latest in electrical ranges, is an appliance regulated by a clock. The housewife of the future endowed with one of these models, may be out for the day and setting the range may return when she pleases in assurance that her dinner will be waiting her, ready cooked. All that is necessary is that the food be placed properly in the oven. At an appointed time the range turns on its own power. A clockwork arrangement turns the power off automatically when the cooking is done.

Electrical toasters of almost human intelligence that reverse the slice of bread automatically also are shown. In the large division of the electrical display the most important of the new inventions are the instruments by which breaks may be located in underground cables by merely running the apparatus along the ground of the cable. When the break is reached the instrument gives the signal through a telephone receiver. Pressed wires in electrical circuit may be placed with the same instrument which is a scientific revelation of the old diving rod.

Kinema Targets.

"Live targets," an English invention by which one may shoot at kinematograph reproductions of human beings and animals, are to be introduced into the German Army and Navy in consequence of experiments just carried out at Dohertz camp by the Kaiser.

The newspapers state that the apparatus is to be installed at the military schools and naval training ships for the purpose of improving the marksmanship of cadets. The Kaiser, fascinated by the "sport," spent half an hour at the "range" fitted up at Dohertz this week. His Majesty particularly enjoyed "shooting" deer, seals, and men and women on the tops of omnibuses and elsewhere. He said that the scheme was undoubtedly valuable for military purposes.
