FIIFTEENTH YEAR

A WAR PANIC IN ENGLAND.

Newspapers regard war as imminent and unavoidable and are engaging Press correspondents and War Correspondents. The outbreak will occur on the Mediterranean.

New York, Jan. 14.—The London correspondent of The Sun cables as follows: "The authorities were quite recently warned through their most trustworthy sources of information that a war might be trust upon England at any moment."

This startling announcement was spread before the country on Thursday morning with all the emphasis that could be given to the words by The London Telegraph, a most conservative journal, which enjoys the largest circulation of any newspaper in Great Britain.

Yesterday the same newspaper in a remarkable leader practically declared its belief that war was imminent and unavoidable. It even went so far as to urge the Government to require and to take aboard an armament at once. It argued that war will break out among the nations like lightning from a clear sky, and it was necessary to save the valuable time required for mobilizing the army.

At no time in this generation has the English press used such extraordinary language on the subject of a threatened war as has filled their columns this week. I have practical assurance that the panic is genuine.

Newspapers making preparations are being pushed forward for covering the campaign. Not only are war correspondents being engaged, but certain London journals are arranging for press correspondents to accompany the British fleet on its voyage to the Red Cross or American flags in the English Channel and Mediterranean and for correspondents on battlefields.

It is strongly believed in Fleet-street that Lord Rosebery shares the darkest foreboding. In fact, the war panic in certain circles is reaching a more acute stage than at any time since England last sheathed her sword.

Disbelieved by financiers. England at large, however, does not share this alarm. The financial barometer, the most sensitive of all to genuine danger, shows no sign of disturbance. The leaders in monetary affairs, from Rothschild down to those that they do not believe that the peace of Europe is seriously threatened. The cry of war has been heard only in the circles where it no longer has any terrors when coming from an unofficial source however prominent.

As regards the specific cause behind the situation, day is distinctly better than a week ago. The fatal mistake of the French troops at Verdun is probably being studied by a committee of honor. France is still silent on the subject, but the disposition to treat the matter in a proper and liberal way is being expressed on this side of the channel.

Russia's persistent aggressiveness. Every day brings a new story of plots by aggressive continental powers. It is again asserted that Russia has practically accomplished her purpose to get possession of Mount Athos and its harbors and roads in the Turkish peninsula with the design to make it the headquarters of its Mediterranean fleet.

Russia's persistent aggressiveness. The Pall Mall Gazette asserts that Russia has purchased all the monasteries on Mount Athos, formerly occupied by Greek monks, and that the district has been converted into Russian territory. The locality is in the hands of Russian troops and is now performing their special military service.

Not long ago the Turkish Government discovered suspicious correspondence between the monk soldiers of Mount Athos and political agitators in Macedonia. The Russian Embassy in Constantinople called the Turkish officials to deliver up the detailed letters.

Spain and France. A good deal of attention has been attracted this week to reported utterance by the Queen Regent of Spain to the effect that the friendship which she maintains with France is the most precious of her life. These words have been re-printed by the official organ in Madrid of the Government, with the result that the news has been widely disseminated and has been much exercised over the matter.

Severe Criticism of Gladstone. The Gladstone Government has again the subject of severe criticism because of its failure to adopt the great naval program. The "partial announcement" of the Government by the News and other newspapers a week ago is pronounced premature, and it is now known that the Cabinet this week failed to agree on the recommendation of the Lords of Admiralty. This plan called for laying down six battleships, ten cruisers and a number of torpedo boats during the current year.

The Empire Betrayed For $ 1,000,000. The Telegraph concludes a denunciation of the Government's hesitation with this strong language: "The more for the sake of the Empire, which is being betrayed for pounds, shillings and pence, and for the sake of a Ministry who are letting slip the last chance of honest popular, we counsel the Government to be wise in time. If the Cabinet cannot find a redemptive course, let the next Parliament be called in the next year, and let the Government be held responsible for the failure of the Empire."

Plan Proposed to Meet Naval Expenses. LONDON, Jan. 14.—The St. James's Gazette says it is reported that influential supporters of the Government are urging the Government to meet the cost of increasing the navy by the sale of £5,000,000 worth of British shares in the Stock Exchange.

MASSACRE OF WILSON'S PARTY

THIRTY-FOUR BRITISH TROOPERS KILLED 1000 MATABELLES AT BAY.

Entrapped by Lobengula the Detachment of British Troopers, Fighting to the Last—The Little Force Wiped Out—Bodies of the Dead Troopers Horribly Mutilated.

CAMP TOWN, Jan. 14.—Details of the massacre of Capt. Wilson's party by the Matabelles were received here yesterday. The news from Bulawayo shows a hard fight and a gallant stand by the British.

These maties say that Capt. Wilson, who was in pursuit of King Lobengula, suddenly came upon a strong detachment of Matabelles, headed by the king himself. The latter was able to mount a horse and fly before the British advances. But without diplomatic circles in Washington, make information was conveyed to the king that the Wilson party were few in number, some reports placing the detachment as only 40 British troopers and 100 or so auxiliaries, the king managed to get the Matabelles to make a stand and prepare to take the small British force in a trap.

Along the north side of the river, the British retreated before the British troops who were pressing their horses across the Matabelle ranks in the hopes of capturing the king.

Taken On Both Flanks and Rear. The right and left flanks of the Matabelles were instructed to deploy to the right and to the left and then to gradually converge inward so as to take the British force on both flanks and the rear. The British angle of 163 yards long by 108 wide, surrounded by clusters resting on pillars of granite, marble and limestone. The mosque itself extended along the whole of the north and its interior dimensions were 43 by 125 feet. In the centre was a dome resting on four massive pillars. Underneath was a cave, in which the bones of the Baptist were preserved in a golden casket. The mosque had three openings according to Moslem traditions, one to the east, one to the west and one to the north.

When it was too late, Capt. Wilson saw the trap into which he had fallen, owing to his over-confidence and to the impression of the British force to capture King Lobengula. He gathered his men together and prepared to retreat, upon the Matabelles, who were in the hands of the British. He was too late to avert complete defeat, and the fire of the Matabelles began to fall on the British. SPEAKERS AND AUDIENCES.

If the Press gave a little gentle criticism now and then on the methods of our public speakers there is no doubt that there would be fewer in the ranks of the speakers who are now passing on the time of from two to five hundred listeners ought to know that if he wastes or oversteps one minute he wastes in the aggregate two to five hundred minutes of the time of his audience, and if he continues an unnecessary hour he has trifled with five hundred hours of the time of his audience.

When there are three men in a program to speak for one hour, the time ought to be given to the speaker who should be the most important (in the mathematical sense) to him. At the Board of Trade dinner every one knows that Mr. Foster was the talker of the Government present, moreover the most appropriate as to his department, and the one the audience wished to hear, and the other of his colleagues should have had the foreword to fit him. It is the lack of such foresight that mars so many of our meetings.

At the unveiling of the portraits at the University on Saturday, though the proceedings covered just two hours, there was also a recitation of the history of the University, a speaking of the late Prof. Young many good things were said; but Mr. John A. Patterson's excellent address covered the same ideas. Also it was a little too sombre. Prof. Hutton is, we take it, a model speaker. He is earnest and real, but an audience has nerves and is alive and always human, and hopefully addicted to all-Atis whist! It is to be had—whist!

A FIBRE OF LIVE BIRCH BARK. When was there such another day in January as we enjoyed yesterday. The brooks and streams were running through the fields, rivers were showing their spotted and brown faces and the snow was melting in the ditches and the Jack-knife in hand, to cut a piece of live birch-bark from the tree. Did you ever feel a piece of live birch-bark cut fresh from the tree on a sunny winter day? It is so delightfully warm, soft and so comforting to the touch. To the hunter and the Indian it is the most useful product of the woods. The epic of the settlement of the Northwest is being sung the Song of the Axe and the Clearing of the Forest; and all through his swining verse there will be a note of the burning of the burning history and birch bark and the part the latter played in the economies of the first settlers.

BARNEY KING'S MOVEMENTS. HONORED THE HEROES OF INTELLECT.

The portraits and busts of William Blake, Francis Bacon, George Foxton Young, and others, were unveiled at the unveiling of the monument to the heroes of intellect...

Barney King, of more properly speaking Barney Roy, now confined in the Napane Jail charged with the murder of Angus McLeod at Napane on Sept. 14 last, has authorized his solicitor, Messrs. Harrington & Warner, to make public the following statement in order that his friends may have an opportunity of verifying its accuracy...

I arrived in Kingston that evening about dark and stopped at night with Mr. Tellechea. On Thursday I engaged with Mr. Prevost at $9 a week, but did not go to keep this engagement as I hoped to do so by passing the night in Kingston street with a broker whose name I think is Taylor. I proceeded to Napane, where I arrived about 4 o'clock on the morning of the 11th...

Staturday morning I saw an advertisement in the paper for a tailor at a village about 28 miles from the place, but from an examination of a railway map I think it is Norval. In order to get there I walked to Parkdale and took the train. The ticket had been secured by another applicant, but the tailor, whose name I forgot, gave me one to make, and sent me to the hotel to remain over Sunday. I think it is the only hotel in the place.

Next day I went to London. While there I fell in with a young tailor whose name I think is James Hickman, and on Monday, Sept. 11, we set out together and walked to the next station and seat on my way to London, stopping at one large town on the way, where we applied for work, but failed to secure any. We arrived in London on Tuesday, Sept. 12, where we also applied for work and I left my name with several tailors. That night we slept in a freight car near the station, and the next morning, Sept. 13, we went west to Wyoming, from Wyoming on foot to Petrolia and back again to Wyoming, and from there by foot to Fort Huron.

We passed through the tunnel about 6 and about 9 o'clock a train for Detroit, the next morning (Sept. 14) we were up in the Detroit freight yards and walked to the city. We spent that day in the city looking for work, but failed to secure any. We were in Detroit I remember visited by me in Detroit I remember breakfasting at the corner of Randolph and Cedar streets, where I secured a job in Michigan-avenue and left my name with a firm of merchants in Jefferson-avenue, the junior member of the firm was named Brock, and his name had been burned out. That night we advised me to go to Jackson. That night we advised me to go to Jackson. That night we advised me to go to Jackson.
