LATE PICTURE OF AMBASSADOR REID AND MRS. REID TAKEN IN LONDON

Ambassador Whiteley Reid, who died in London, had been in failing health for some months, suffering from asthma since October. He had been confined to his room for several weeks. This month his illness became serious, and in the last few days it was recognized that the end could not be long delayed. He died in the presence of his wife and other members of his family. Mr. Reid was seventy-five years old. The flag on the embassy is now flying at half staff.

Little Beauty Chats
By BLANCHE BRACON

Care of the Complexion in Winter

DURING the next month the complexion is liable to receive a setback that it will suffer from the entire winter, so it behooves you to "watch out."

Don't sally forth into the chill air without protecting the face and neck, as the result will be a chapped skin—which no woman likes—a scaling of the cuticle, and a freckling and general breaking up of one's skin beauty. When the skin is no longer a credit to one, then, indeed, is the outlook dreary and forbidding. Am I not right?

What should you do? For one thing, cream your face thoroughly before going out in the wind, then apply powder with a lavish hand. This is not all. Before you stop out of your house door, envelope your face in the folds of a heavy chiffon veil. There is no other way of effectively protecting the complexion when one is out combating the elements.

A folly which is dear to the heart of maid and matron, apparently, "consists in washing the face just before going out or coming in. Nearly all women plead guilty to this habit, and yet they grumble because their skin chaps so readily." The reason why the facial skin should not be moistened with water, either immediately before a constitutional or after, is because the skin recently relaxed by water and friction, will contract too suddenly when exposed to chilly winds and "chaps" will be the result.

There is still another way of looking out for the complexion in winter. If you are at all observant you will have noticed that the facial outline is not so pretty in winter as in summer. The cold and wintry blasts never fail to give one a hard and rugged outline. The remedy? Keep the muscles of your face exercised. Don't let them grow stiff and hard, thus aging you. Pluck the cheeks gently and fill them with air until they resemble nothing so much as toy balloons, then let cheeks firm but not hard—there is quite a distinction—and the tiny parentheses that in winter disfigure the sides of the mouth, will be noticeable by their absence.

Christmas Season Booms Business For New York Vendors Who Deal in Peaky Luxuries and Necessities

(New York Herald.)

In the United States the dollar is the standard of value. This is not so on the east side. There the standard of value is the one-cent piece, and there the one-cent piece is value for a multitude of things.

Geographically the east side lies between the East River and Fourth avenue and north of the Bowery to Forty-second street. Figuratively it is a sort of borderland lying between Paradise and despair. The persons that live in its labyrinthine streets come from all parts of the world. It is the melting pot of the races, and during the holiday season the million-dollar bubbles everywhere are popping.

Economic and sociological theories on the high cost of living become flimsy and diaphanous when compared with a list of the articles displayed for sale in windows and on pushcarts along Henry street. Grand street or Hester street, or in a hundred other streets in that region. The east side is a busy place at any time, but now it is busier than any other time. From the little wrinkled woman who waits beside a fruit stand on which nearly every article is labelled one cent to the diminutive merchant four years old who offers to the passerby a "Santy Claus for a cent," they are all busy. The expression "atmosphere of trade" here takes on a pungent realism, for it is an atmosphere that makes a definite attack on the senses, a thing that might be measured, weighed, labelled—and removed, but not sold.

The articles of food at one cent each are not all what are termed necessities. There are luxuries, too—olives and dates, which can be bought for a cent apiece.

At a push cart in Hester street the fop can have his handkerchief perfumed with attar of roses at one cent a treatment. The man who vends this delight is a Greek, and he guarantees his wares to keep "for all night." The Greek designated himself a "seller of the good smells."

The persons who buy the "good smells" walk away with handkerchiefs to their noses apparently well pleased. The recent vendor does a lively trade. He appears to have a monopoly of the business, the idea for which he probably imported.

A hair curler can be bought for a cent in Allen street, where a cent's worth of rouge is a common purchase. Here a cent's worth of hairpins numbers twenty-four. In the same street a sign displayed in a window told the prospective customer in three languages that "Ladies' hairpins are shortened here" and "Ladies' broken combs mended" for the sum of one cent. Sunflower seed, known to the children of the east side as polly seed, and which I was told forms the chief article of diet for parrots, is a cent a bag.

In the home of one cent purchases one would not expect to find a trout, but he would be mistaken, for the trout has wrapped its tentacles around the sweet potato man. The sweet potato vendors just now are fighting the sweet potato trout. The sweet potato man sells sweet potatoes at one cent each from a sheet iron oven on wheels. These ovens are rented by the vendors. Recently, it is said, the owners of the ovens have begun selling sweet potatoes and requiring the vendors who rent an oven to buy their sweet potatoes from them at a price agreed upon before the oven can be rented.

The sweet potato vendors have rebelled. Their hatred of the trout has found lyrical expression. One of them, brooding over the evils the trout has heaped upon him, has written a poem in protest. The poem is printed in Yiddish on one side of a card and in what is intended for English on the other. The author sells it for a cent a copy.

Much of the east side selling from pushcarts is done at night. On cold nights trees are lighted in the streets, and the sellers take turns at warming themselves before the fires. Hot coffee and hot tea also are sold from portable samovars at one cent a glass. Other drinks may be purchased for this price. One enterprising dealer in soda water invites the public to "Drink this soda—the pure—come right out of the ground."

Outside of theatres and moving picture halls cough drops and chewing gum are sold at one-cent a package. And pickles—there are pickles everywhere at one cent each and some two for a cent. There are peanuts and candy for a cent a bag. Many other things to eat and drink and for personal adornment are sold at this price, the names of which are unpronounceable to most persons, but look at a skilled violinist might be able to play them.

"Buy a little camel, sir; a little camel for Christmas, only a cent."

The request came in dialect tones from a young Persian woman with a manner so gentle it was almost obtrusive and quite incongruous in this seething, bubbling melting pot.

Why buy a camel for Christmas, even at one cent?

Among the Oriental Christians the camel takes the place held by Santa Claus

Daily Hints For the Cook

LEMON PIE WITH TWO CRUSTS.

One cup boiling water, one tablespoon of flour, one cup of sugar, one tablespoon of butter, juice and grated rind of one lemon, one egg. Put water in a pan on the stove, dissolve the flour in a little cold water and then stir into the boiling water. Cook for a minute, stirring it all the time, then take off from fire and add sugar, butter and grated rind and juice of lemon and, lastly, the beaten egg.

STUFFED APPLES.

Take good, firm, sound cooking apples, wash, rub, dry and remove the core. The space is filled, in with chopped nuts, a dessert spoonful of sugar, the whole moistened with a teaspoonful of brandy. Lay in a pan with a little water and bake until done. Serve in a glass dish heaped with whipped cream and garnished with preserved cherries.

ATTRACTIVE SIGNS OF PROGRESS.

King and Prince William streets have taken on a more up-to-date appearance in the new ornamental electric light poles erected in front of several of the business houses have added much to the attractiveness of these thoroughfares. Macaulay Bros. & Co. are having erected two of the five light poles, similar to that in front of the store of T. McAvity & Sons. Ltd. Waterbury & Rising, Ltd., have had one of the ornamental poles erected in front of their King street store, and Allison & Thomas, the Prince William street real estate brokers, have one just erected in front of their office. The lights are a good advertisement for the firms erecting them as well as a help in lighting the streets. The city insists that the lights shall be kept on until midnight, a wise regulation.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF LONDON STAGE

George Alexander Preparing a Gorgeous Affair For Metropolis

TO PUT ON CHINESE PLAY

Jerome K. Jerome to Provide Next Vehicle For Marie Tempest's Appearance — 200th Performance of "Find the Woman"

(Times Special Correspondence)
London, Dec. 7.—As his next production George Alexander has chosen Carl Vollmoeller's Chinese play "Turandot." It is the story of a beautiful Chinese princess, blessed or cursed with an invincible hatred for men and their ways. Her father, the emperor, naturally wants to see his daughter comfortably settled in wedlock. She hits upon the idea of promising to marry any prince who may succeed in guessing three riddles proposed by her. Here you have something very similar to the riddle that set her lovers by their wits in "The Merchant of Venice."
"Turandot" is founded upon, or perhaps I should rather say suggested by, a comedy by the old Italian dramatist, Gozzi. It is the story of a beautiful Chinese princess, blessed or cursed with an invincible hatred for men and their ways. Her father, the emperor, naturally wants to see his daughter comfortably settled in wedlock. She hits upon the idea of promising to marry any prince who may succeed in guessing three riddles proposed by her. Here you have something very similar to the riddle that set her lovers by their wits in "The Merchant of Venice."
Turandot, as the princess is called, goes a step further, however, for she adds the condition that whosoever fails to pierce the mystery of her questions, shall at once have his head struck off and placed upon the city gates.
It need hardly be said that in due course there comes a suitor who not only gives the correct solution to the princess's riddles but who in the end succeeds in awaiting her love for himself.
Manifestly there is in the tale nothing of a novel character, but the author has embroidered it with so many original details as practically to give him the right to claim it as his own. "Turandot" was produced in Berlin more than a year ago by Reinhardt who made of it a most wonderful spectacle. This he was the better enabled to do, inasmuch as the action is supposed to take place long before China had assimilated European notions or customs. Alexander is having all the scenery and dresses made in Germany, on the exact pattern of the originals, so that his production will be on equal scale of splendor as that presented in Berlin.
The piece itself is cast in Shakespearean mould, all the serious dialogue being in blank verse, while the comedians, who play an exceedingly prominent part in the story, speak in prose. The work has been rendered into English by Dr. Jekubo Biel, a professor of German in London, and from all accounts he has acquitted himself of a difficult task with the greatest dexterity. Oddly enough, although the character of the prince seems well adapted to him, Alexander has decided not to play it. He says he wants a rest.

Marie Tempest will soon start rehearsal of the new play specially written for her by Jerome K. Jerome, which she, in conjunction with Frank Curzon, hopes to produce at the Prince of Wales about the end of the third week in January. Her present attraction, Harold Chapin's comedy "Art and Opportunity," although a witty and delightful piece of work, has proved just a little too fragile for the public, who are every day showing an increasing tendency to demand more substantial fare for their money. Jerome's play should satisfy them in this respect at any rate. "Art and Opportunity" will come off a week hence; the theatre will then close until Boxing-Day when the triple bill composed of "An Imaginary Conversation," "The Dumb and the Blind" and Sydney Lewis Ransom's wordless play "The Mal-pointed for its first performance and we are all looking forward now with the keenest interest to that date as a crucial test of what may be expected in the future from Macdonald Hastings. He, like Stanley Houghton, has reached a critical point in his career; neither is any longer to be measured by the standard set up for beginners.

Arthur Boucher will finish his season at the Garrick tonight. He will also celebrate the 200th performance of Charles Klein's play "Find the Woman." This, as things go, is a very fair run, although I do not think Boucher has made a fortune out of it. He will reopen early in February but with what he is not yet able to say. He has fallen greatly in love with a piece, now being written for him, but as he has heard only the first act so far he cannot yet form an opinion as to whether the completed manuscript will be to his liking or not. Meanwhile he and his wife, Violet Vanbrugh will go into months. The interval is being utilized by Charles Hawtry for a revival, at the Garrick, of the children's play called "Where the Rainbow Ends." When that is fairly launched, as it will be next Wednesday, Hawtry will turn his attention to rehearsals of George Birmingham's new Irish comedy "General John Regan" with which he will start his season at the Apollo early next year.

HIT THE NAIL ON THE HEAD.
"What," asked the Sunday school teacher, "is meant by bearing false witness against one's neighbor?"
"It's telling falsehoods about them," said one small maid.
"Partly right and partly wrong," said the teacher.
"I know," said another little girl, holding her hand high in the air. "It's when nobody did anything and somebody went and told about it."—Lippincott's.

IRON WORKERS' OFFICIALS ARE SEVERELY ARRAIGNED

Indianapolis, Dec. 18.—Walking delegates and officials who do not work but who use the funds of labor union to enhance their own power even if they must resort to crime, was the government's description in its argument to the jury at the "dynamite conspiracy" trial today of the forty men charged with complicity in the McNamara dynamite plot. Olaf A. Treimoe, of San Francisco, was charged with helping to expend $30,000 "collected from honest working men" in connection with a strike at Los Angeles, which culminated in the wrecking of the Los Angeles Times building, and all of the defendants were declared to have used the funds of the Iron Workers' International Union in violation of the by-laws of the union, to pay dynamites to blow up non-union jobs. "These men committed a crime not only against the laws of the land, but they committed a crime against their own union," said James W. Noel, special assistant district attorney, and these defendants are not workmen who work with their hands. They are the walking delegates with high salaries who have brought the Iron Workers' Union into disrepute. The government makes no charge against labor unions, whose purpose is legitimate and lofty, but it accuses those monsters of crime who stand at the head of the union and deceive the workman and use their funds for unlawful purposes. It has been shown that $200,000 was collected from toilers all over the country to be used to defend the McNamaras after these defendants knew they were guilty, and these defendants, including Frank M. Ryan, president of the union, announced they were guilty, stood up for one minute at their Milwaukee convention and with uncovered heads turned their faces toward the wall as a tribute to the McNamaras locked in a Los Angeles jail charged with murder. "If jurors cannot allow these men to attempt to stir the country into a state of social chaos, upon which they were determined. You cannot allow brazen men like Treimoe, who has the ability to raise hundreds of thousands of dollars, or Eugene A. Cliney, or J. E. Minney, who harbored the Los Angeles dynamites for two weeks in Salt Lake City; you cannot allow them to put all the responsibility upon the McNamaras."

MORNING NEWS OVER THE WIRES

Fraser, Ltd. of Fredericton, have engaged Contractor Moses Mitchell to overhaul the Victoria mill, which they recently purchased from the Scott Lumber Company, preparatory to installing new machinery. The physicians of Fredericton will adopt, on January 1, a new schedule of fees for medical attendance. The schedule will be higher. Moses Jones, assistant under-ground manager of No. 2 slope at Springhill mines, N. S., was fatally killed and his body badly mangled yesterday when he was struck by the full weight of twelve casks going up to the bank head. He is survived by his wife and four children. Scott Act officials in Woodstock yesterday seized a large quantity of liquor. William Bragdon, who shot and killed Woodman McCluskey in Woodstock, Feb. 3, 1911, and who was sentenced by Judge White to two years in Dorchester, has been released on parole. A. L. Holyoke yesterday bought the Charles Carman farm near Woodstock on the line of the St. John & Quebec Railway.

RALPH ROSE, GREATEST OF SHOT PUTTERS, RETIRES FROM GAME

Recently Rose tipped the beam at 370 pounds.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 19—Ralph Rose, giant athlete of this city, is the latest one to announce his retirement from the athletic game. The greatest of all shot putters says business and increasing trouble will prevent him from competing in the future. At that time he weighed around 240 pounds. The one on the left shows him as he appeared aboard the steamship Finland, bound for Sweden, last summer.

BENEFITS IN KANSAS UNDER PROHIBITION

A Remarkable Statement of Results Given Out by Attorney-General. (Montreal Witness) The Attorney-General of Kansas (the Hon. John F. Dawson), gives interesting facts with regard to that state. Not the whole of the property he reports can be ascribed to prohibition. Some of the figures are the result of natural growth. But there is enough that is distinctive in them to make other countries envious and bid them imitate. Under prohibition, he says, frontier villages of Kansas have grown into splendid cities. Almost a third of the population is employed in public or private schools. With more than eight hundred newspapers and magazines, less than a dozen carry white advertising. Illiteracy has been reduced from forty-five per cent to less than two per cent, and that trifling proportion is almost entirely among the foreign element in the southeastern mining districts. In the state eighty-eight and eighty-five counties have no paupers. Sixty-four have no feeble-minded. There are no insane asylums.

MAMA WAS WILLING. When the minister, a handsome and unmarried man, made his first pastoral call at the Fosters he took little Anna up in his arms and tried to kiss her. But the child refused to be kissed; she struggled loose and ran off into the next room, where her mother was putting a few touches to her adornment before going into the drawing room to greet the clergyman. "Mamma," the little girl whispered "the man in the drawing room wanted me to kiss him."

RUNS FROM COURT REFUSING EVIDENCE AGAINST THE MAN

Young Boston Girl Traced by Father and Detectives to New York—Companion Married. New York, Dec. 19—A dramatic scene occurred in the Jefferson Market police court, when Ebel Silverman, a fifteen-year-old girl, who eloped on July 13 with John L. Warren, a married man, from her wealthy father's home in East Boston, escaped from the custody of her father and a detective and fought hysterically when they tried to bring her back into court.

The three men in the office were Detectives Dittman, McDonough and Hyland of the 4th Avenue Station, Brooklyn. The man outside was Max Silverman of West street, East Boston, who has spent thousands of dollars since July 13, searching for his fifteen-year-old daughter, Ebel, who disappeared the day after her graduation from public school. On the day Ebel disappeared Warren left his home in the neighborhood, deserting his wife and two small children. Mr. Silverman, who has large means, suspected his daughter had gone away with Warren.

In Boston Warren had a responsible position in the office of the Cunard Steamship Company. So suddenly did he leave that he failed to send in his resignation, and Ebel did not have time to take any clothes, except those she wore. More than a week ago Mr. Silverman learned that Warren was employed as a clerk at the Bush Terminal in Brooklyn. He came here and enlisted the services of the police. But Warren had got a better job and was traced to the milling company's office.

turned from her father and cried "You needn't try to separate me from John. I love him. He told me he would get a divorce and marry me. He loves me and I trust him." Silverman took his daughter to the home of a friend, Warren was locked up. THEN THEY COMMENCED. An aged, grey-haired, and very wrinkled old woman, arrayed in the outlandish calico costume of the mountains, was summoned as a witness in court to tell what she knew about a fight in her house. She took the witness stand with evidence of backwardness and provincialism. "If I am ready to go with you," she said. He was taken to the West 30th street station, where Mr. Silverman and the girl awaited him. On seeing Warren she

BLAZE IN ROOM OF MAGEE BUILDING; CAUSE A MYSTERY

Had Been No Fire Lighted There in 20 Years and No One is Known to Have Been There at Time of Outbreak

In a room in the Magee building in Water street, adjoining the offices occupied by J. T. Knight & Co., and in which there had been no fire lighted for at least twenty years, and with nothing to indicate what had caused a blaze broke out this morning which resulted in the department being called upon to respond to a call from No. 9. This was about a quarter to nine o'clock.

The firemen and apparatus were at work for some little time before getting the fire out, and while some damage was caused by the flames, more resulted from water. The damage is not very much however, and Major Magee said this morning that the insurance would cover it.

He was at a loss to understand how the fire started. So far as he knew there was no one about the building at or just before the time of the blaze and he knew no way in which it could start, so that it was a distinct surprise when it was learned where the fire was.

TROLLEY WIRE BROKEN; SERVICE INTERRUPTED

Street Railway Power Shut Off For While This Morning Because of Danger

Early morning travel on the street car lines was held up today in Main street, when two sections of the trolley wire gave way, one opposite St. Luke's church, and the other between Sheriff and Simonds streets. The trouble happened a little after six o'clock and for about an hour no cars were run in the morning. Haymarket lines as the power was shut off for protection. Many men going to their work had to walk or wait.

It was thought better to shut off the power owing to the fact that the live wire ends were hanging down over the roadway, and this was dangerous to people or teams passing. In a little while the wires were cut and later in the morning the broken sections were replaced. Power was resumed before the wires were again placed in position, and when the cars going to the city came to the spot where there was no wire overhead the trolley was lowered and they coasted down the hill from just below Douglas avenue to Simonds street.

THE POLICE COURT

Frank Quinn was arraigned in the police court this morning, having been given in charge by Daniel Mitchell for holding him by the arms while another unknown man struck him in the face. He pleaded not guilty to the charge. Quinn said that he saw Mitchell and another man in a fight in Sydney street last evening and merely tried to separate them. He did not know who the other man was. The complainant testified that Quinn caught hold of both his arms and allowed the other man to strike him in the face. Mitchell's eye was covered with a bandage this morning. Chief Clerk told of arresting Quinn. The prisoner was remanded until other witnesses are secured. Two prisoners, charged with drunkenness, were each fined $5 or two months in jail, and another, charged with the same offence, was fined $4 or ten days in jail.
