"The Slave"

By ARTHUR STRINGER

It was whispered about, it is true, that among other things a large and ugly-looking revolver had been taken from his clothing, and that he had denied the use of the ship's wireless service. A steward outside the Captain's door, it was also whispered, had overheard the shipmaster's angry threat to put the stowaway in irons for the rest of the voyage and return him to the Canadian authorities. It was rumored, too, that late in the afternoon of the same day, when the new prisoner complained of faintness and was seeking a breath of fresh air at the foot of a middle-deck ladder, he had chanced to turn and look up at the stowaway standing on the promenade deck above him.

The two men stood staring at each other for several moments, and for all the balmly air about him the great body of the stranger just up from the engine-room had shivered and shaken, as though with malice aforethought.

What is meant, so one quite knew, nor could anything be added to that rumor, beyond the fact that the first-class passenger, who was known to be a doctor and who had stared so intently down at the quiet-eyed stranger, had turned the color of ashes and without a word had slipped away. And the bewilderment of the entire situation was further increased when the Trunella swung in at Calloo and the large-bodied man of mystery was peremptorily and none too gently put ashore, was noted, however, that the first-class passenger who had stared down at him from the promenade-deck remained aboard the vessel as she started southward again.

It was further remarked that he seemed more at ease when Calloo was left well behind, although he sat smoking side by side with the operator in the wireless room until the Trunella had steamed many miles southward on her long journey towards the Straits of Magellan.

CHAPTER XV.
Seven days after the Trunella awoke southward from Calloo Never-Fall Blake, renewed as to habits and replenished as to provisions, embarked on a steamer bound for Rio de Janeiro.

He watched the plunging bow as it crept southward. He saw the heat and the gray sea-shimmer left behind him. He saw the days grow longer and the nights grow colder. He saw the Straits passed and the northward journey again begun. But he neither fretted nor complained of his fate, after communicating by wireless and discussed the situation as it relates to New Brunswick.

Q. 2. Why was the action been taken and how does the question stand at present?

Ans. As the embargo of the United States is against all Canada, the question is one to be dealt with by the federal authorities. The Department of Agriculture has made representations to Ottawa, as a result of which negotiations have been taken up by the Department of External Affairs with the government of the United States, through the British Embassy at Washington. The Agricultural Department here has been advised from time to time as to the progress of these negotiations, but the communications have been confidential in their character.

No. 1—Answers:
Hon. Mr. Murray, in answer to Mr. Pelletier's inquiry, said:
Question 1. How much money has been spent by the Farm Settlement Board, since its organization, in the purchase of farms?

Answer: The Farm Settlement Board has spent for actual purchase of farms $141,165.66.

Question 2. How many farms have been purchased and how many have been sold?

Answer: The Farm Settlement Board has purchased 184 farms and sold 155. Quite a large number of those on hand are engaged to be taken over in the near future, for which we will receive initial payments.

Question 3. Who were these farms bought from? What was the acreage of each? Where were they situated, and what was the price paid for each?

Answer: The following is a list of farms purchased, showing from whom bought, where situated, and price paid for each:

Daniel Healey, 200 acres, Charlotte county—$650.
Nancy Goode, 150 acres, Carleton county, $1,100.

SHORTS AIM FIRE AT STEEL GROUP

Decline in Stocks Encouraged Speculative Selling on Saturday.

C.P.R. EARNINGS DROP MILLION LAST MONTH

Time Money Rates Easier on Wall Street on Account of Inflow and Slack Demand.

New York, Mar. 28.—A decline in stocks which had proceeded steadily though slowly since the first of the week, bringing no increase of buying as quotations receded, encouraged speculative selling today. Traders on the long side were disheartened by the new bearish influences and the lack of outside support.

Railroad statements submitted today were of the same unfavorable nature as those previously presented. Canadian Pacific reported a decrease of more than $1,000,000 in its net earnings for February. Erie's operating income was reduced from $970,000 in February of 1913 to $210,000 last month.

Time money rates were easier today, owing to the inflow of money recently and the slack demand. These conditions at a season of the year when ordinarily there is renewed activity in almost all branches of business.

CAMBRIDGE DEFEATED OXFORD CREW

London, March 29.—After five consecutive defeats in the annual inter-university boat race Cambridge on Saturday amply recovered by reaching the winning post with four and a half lengths to spare.

Notwithstanding the fact that most of the morning papers expressed the opinion that they were showing fairly the even merits of both crews, public opinion as manifested by the preference of light blue colors showed that Cambridge was expected to win.

The race proved, however, that Cambridge was both faster and had a more uniform stroke, and also that the members of the crew were in better form with more reserve strength.

HISTORY OF THE CAUSE IN ST. JOHN

Quietly, But Surely the Movement Has Been Advanced.

FIRST ASSOCIATION FORMED HERE IN 1894.

Since Its Formation Many New Members Have Been Enlisted and a Persistent Growth in Popularity of the Cause is Evident.

The history of organized woman suffrage in St. John is comparatively uneventful, and as far as I am aware, ours is the only association in New Brunswick, though here and there are communities where at women's clubs the subject is often discussed. I am sure that throughout the province our women are coming to a realization of their duty as citizens to claim the outward symbol of citizenship and will no longer accept the shadow for the substance.

Our first meeting was held at the residence of Mrs. Edward Manning, and the ladies gathered there numbered eighteen. Mrs. Manning being elected to the office of president.

In September, 1895, Mr. J. Rupert Elliott, of Lawrence town, U. S., a member of our society, was a delegate to a prohibition convention held in N. S. during the autumn and he was requested to represent us at the convention, and to ask that woman suffrage be made a feature of the prohibition creed; not only to extend the influence of suffrage. The convention subsequently did as requested.

In 1897 a bill was prepared by our association and sent to the Legislature, accompanied by a letter to Dr. Stockton, our advocate, asking that the women now in possession of the municipal vote might be duly qualified to vote at provincial elections and begging a reply. This elicited an answer from Mr. Tweedie, who declared himself opposed to woman suffrage, and one from Dr. Alward, favoring the measure.

In 1898 again the same demand on the Legislature was being prepared for, but a letter from Hon. Mr. Emerson suggested that a general petition from the whole province be sent up in 1899. The W. C. T. U. having decided to move in the matter we confined our efforts to the city alone, the result being that in 1899 a petition of 2,700 signatures from the whole province was sent in charge of a delegation from our association. The minutes of a subsequent meeting a motion for a vote of thanks to Mr. Emerson and others who favored us was duly put by the president. At a subsequent meeting of our association a motion for a vote of thanks to the Legislature towards the petition did not commend itself to the association.

REQUEST FOR THE BALLOT JUSTIFIABLE

A Desire to Bear Share in Remedying Conditions, and Working for Uplift of All the People.

(Emma S. Fiske)

When the question of establishing a federal children's bureau was first discussed in the United States Congress four or five years ago, a certain senator from the west brought down his closed hand very forcibly on the desk before him as he exclaimed: "What has the Congress of the United States to do with women and children anyhow?"

I think this senator has scarcely been heard from since, and Congress has answered his question by creating the children's bureau and appointing a woman, Miss Julia C. Lathrop, at its head. Although the annual appropriation for the department is somewhat inadequate considering that one of the high rates of infant mortality which amounts to 300,000 per annum. Miss Lathrop has a grant of $29,000 a year, while $2,500,000 are spent on the bureau of chemistry and over half of that amount is spent on the bureau of entomology.

Now, why should the government of any country assume the attitude of this senator towards the women of that country? Women have at last broken clear from them all and are coming out into the open field and claiming the right to participate in the framing of the laws by which their countries are governed. "One just law," said John Bright, "is worth a million soup kitchens."

What are the things for which women are seeking the right to legislate? So far they are almost exclusively matters concerning the everyday needs of the people.

Unless we refuse to accept the testimony furnished by the countries where women have exercised the franchise for more than a quarter of a century, we must in all fairness acknowledge that they have put the emphasis on questions connected with the physical, moral and intellectual improvement of the people around them, all the people, not a selected few. In these countries women are proving themselves to be true economists, they are helping to make laws that shall conserve the humanity of the state, and dissatisfied with their long continued efforts to work reforms among the adult population, they are at last going to the root of the matter by dealing with the children.

Hang on, sisters, You'll win yet. Rah, rah, rah, for the suffragette

Women Suffrage a Practical Means For Improving Social Conditions

Progress of Movement in Half Century Proves It a Factor—In Many Phases of Civic as Well as in Religious Affairs the Help of Women Has Been Found Essential.

The present edition, in which so much space has been generously given to familiarize readers with the strong expression of the progress of St. John. It shows that our people are alive to the great questions of the day, and that they are taking a practical interest in every policy which has proven its claim as an element in better social organization and progress. St. John has been a progressive city, for true progress consists chiefly in the enlightenment and activity of our population with the high standard of citizenship they attain. The sympathetic investigation of the claims of a new power in civil government is another indication that our people wish to secure the progress of every movement which has reasonable hope of making our city and country better places to live in.

The participation of women in the works of one society so as to make for progress, efficiency, and stability, strongly indicates, even proves, that their help in another society of similar nature would be attended with beneficial results. This is the prevailing situation. In the church there are very many spheres in which women makes its work of proper scope and kind. The church's work is helped by women in many departments. The various charitable societies in parish work are practically kept alive by the work of women. The funds of the church are largely secured through

THE AWAKENING IN OTHER COUNTRIES

SOME REASONS FOR ASKING THE BALLOT

Women as Recognized Citizens are Subject to Society's Laws, and Should Have a Voice in Making Them.

Why do women desire the right of suffrage? Because they are recognized citizens, and are subject to the laws of society. They should, therefore, have a vote in establishing and making those laws.

But here is one half of our adult population who are neither infants, imbeciles, lunatics nor criminals, and yet are denied the privilege of exercising the ballot.

Is there any good reason for this flagrant injustice? Can those who have the power to confer this right upon woman assign any reasonable excuse for not doing so? Let us see. Let us ask the average male voter to state the reasons.

Well, twenty-five per cent will say that the women of the community in such high esteem have such an exalted opinion of their characters, that they refuse to allow them to descend to the low level of "dirty politics."

This is an astonishing confession, as if the politics of today were in the hands of the women of the community. If this be true, our freedom, that we boast of in this 20th century, certainly hangs by a slender thread, that may be broken at any time and the government precipitated into anarchy and chaos.

A Mere Subterfuge.
But let us be true, the ballot, the great palladium of our liberty, the foundation upon which our perpetuity depends, the sacred instrument that expresses a freeman's will as lightening does the will of God, has become so polluted, so dirty, and unclean, that one-half of the population dare not touch it for fear of contamination? No; emphatically no; this excuse is a mere subterfuge, and the government precipitated into anarchy and chaos.

Now if ninety-five out of every hundred voters do honor to the sacred institution of the ballot, while only five out of every hundred are willing to barter their birth right for unrighteous gain, need we look upon the ballot as a dirty and unclean thing? I think no fair-minded person will say so; but even if the five per cent be considered a filthy and unclean influence, let me suggest that the purity, honor, and nobility of women, if brought into the arena of politics will sooner or later drive the hoodlums and professionals out; woman cannot be bought. It has been tried, every business man knows that he can safely trust woman in every avenue of useful endeavor. There are no defaulters, no betrayers of trusts, no disclosures of vital interests where women are interested or employed. How much more than may she be trusted when the responsibility of government shall be placed in her hands, and she shall be given a voice in all matters affecting her home and the community in which she lives. But I hear some one say if women are given the ballot it will simply mean the multiplying of votes, while the general results will be the same. I certainly must take issue with this statement. Women in this 20th century are already far enough along in their emancipation from the degradation of the middle ages to exercise independence of thought and action in all matters of importance. Let us inquire of the rest of the lords of creation. Twenty-five per cent more will say that women are not capable of exercising the franchise; another twenty-five per cent.

What Granting of Franchise to Woman Has Accomplished.

NEW ZEALAND THE WOMAN'S UTOPIA.

The Beneficial Results Accruing to Enfranchisement of Women, Prima Facie Evidence of the Justice of the Demand.

(F. W. Musgrave)

"The right is far spent, the day is at hand, let us therefore cast off the works of darkness and let us put on the armor of light."

Yes, the light is beginning to shine. In the report of the vice commission of Chicago of 1911 appears this paragraph:

"Prostitution is a commercialized vice. The first truth that the commission desires to impress upon the citizens of Chicago is the fact that prostitution in this city is a commercialized business of larger proportions, with tremendous profits of more than fifteen million dollars per year, controlled largely by men not women."

It is abhorrent to the moral sense of a community like Chicago, the second largest city in the country, that there should be within its borders a group, or groups of men vicious and ignorant to a degree, who are openly and defiantly breaking the laws of the state, and bringing into ill repute the honor of the city.

These statements may seem exaggerated and highly colored, but a careful ultra-conservative study of conditions has put the commission in possession of absolute facts upon which to base these conclusions.

And if it is so in Chicago; what about New York, San Francisco and other large cities? And how has this commercialized business arrived at such a far spreading system of gigantic proportions? Because the laws are all made by men, and because, as Chambers' Encyclopedia said long ago:

"History teaches that women must have votes in order to protect their interests. Men have through all the vicissitudes of history shown constant references to their own interests."

And so these one-sided interests have finally led to this terrible cancerous commercialized business—the "white slave traffic"—ill every good man stands appalled before the hideous fact that can no longer be shut out of sight.

This vice commission took place in Chicago before women had the vote. Lord Broughborough, the distinguished statesman, orator, author and Lord Chancellor of England, summed up the whole truth by declaring:

"There must be a total reconstruction of the law, before women can have justice."

How Remedy This?
From the report given by the vice commission in Chicago we see that a great reformation must take place. How is this to be accomplished? Surely by every good citizen—man and woman—standing shoulder to shoulder, hand to hand and heart to heart, in the great fight for moral reform. Wherever women have had franchise granted to them, there in every country a very real reformation has taken place.

But when injustice abounds, there misery and suffering will always abound.

New Zealand
Now let us have some facts. Let us take some of the countries where women first obtained the vote, and let us see if women have worked for the betterment of the world—for a reign of righteousness. New Zealand gave franchise to women in 1893. She is indeed a pioneer colony—our utopia. Today with the right arm of prohibitory liquor laws, she safeguards the young and with the left arm of the age pension she protects and cares for the aged.

No trusts, no multi-millionaires in New Zealand. No grinding poverty in New Zealand. New Zealand realized that the Premier Session of 1902 was fundamental if he was to bring in certain reforms so his first act on coming into office was to push through the Woman's Suffrage bill. In the parliamentary election that took place about a

Progress of the Cause in Finland

Has Been an Accomplished Fact Since 1905, and Many Measures of Interest to Women Have Been Adopted Since the Extension of the Franchise.

(By Baroness Alletta Korff)
Before her marriage Baroness Korff was Miss Alletta Louise Van Reyren of Pennsylvania. She graduated from Bryn Mawr in 1909, where she took special courses in economics and political science. In 1905 she married Baroness Alexander Korff, official of Finland. The women of Finland have the vote and Baroness Korff is taking an active interest in the political life of her adopted country.

Writing of the advance of the cause in Finland, she says:
"Woman suffrage has been an accomplished fact in Finland since 1906. Previous to that time there had been a considerable amount of agitation for the franchise carried on by individual women and also through the agency of the various women's clubs and organizations scattered throughout the country. So long as the system of representation was based on the medieval system of class representation, however, there was little possibility of the enfranchisement of women, but in 1905 a proposal was sent to the Diet asking for certain changes in the fundamental law of the country.

When the women heard that universal manhood suffrage was one of the reforms proposed they at once sent a petition to the Finnish Diet asking that a proposal for universal manhood suffrage be also included. In the lower house there were two counts and in the Senate only one, so the women's proposition was included in the Imperial proposal submitted to the Diet and signed by him on the 25th of May, 1906.

These bills do not by any means represent the entire extent of the women's activity and interests, as there have been women members of almost all the numerous parliamentary committees, not only committees dealing with questions of public health, sanitation, inspection, housing the poor, etc., but also committees having to do with commerce and labor, railroad extension, the pilot service, etc.

The first elections took place in the autumn, and in spite of the sudden enormous increase in the electorate the elections were conducted in a perfectly orderly and systematic way. There was no disturbance of any kind or any single case reported of any woman who had been subjected to annoyance at the polls. As there were a number of people in attendance at the larger cities each citizen was able to vote in the immediate neighborhood of his or her own residence and the act of voting required an absence of only twenty minutes to half an hour.

However, the chief interests of the women are, as one would expect them to be, questions concerning the regulation of the social life of the community. In support of bills dealing with questions of social reform they have voted together as women and many of the most important projects of law proposed during the last five years have been due to their initiative and energy. They have not yet brought about the millennium or legislated the country into a state of complete righteousness, but they have passed laws which probably would not otherwise have been passed for at least several decades—laws which in some cases had been platonically contemplated by their advocates but promptly and effectively pigeon-holed by their opponents.

When I was a very little boy living in St. John I have several times heard my father say to a tenant settling his rent account on Saturday night—"Oh go along home and bring your wife, I cannot get the business through your head." And she had not on Saturday night the wife would come with her man and the differences about a few shillings were made plain to her judgment.

In short, women have raised questions of social and moral significance to a level which commended and political attention and they have been responsible for the passage of a number of laws which are already helping to elevate the social life of the community.

Women Suffrage a Practical Means For Improving Social Conditions

the assistance of ladies' societies. Foreign missions would be greatly neglected but for the funds and equipment supplied through the efforts of the women's societies. Social service organizations, movements for social reform, temperance, and charity find their work facilitated to a large extent by the activity of the lady members. In the church, then, and in its allied works, it is found that the help of women in administration and executive work is necessary.

Can the Women's Suffrage bring about this condition? Not entirely but it can help a great deal to advance beyond our present condition. The reason for this is that the women's political influence could attain its twofold. First, because in carrying on the commercial, industrial, political and educational work of the world men have their hands full. No particular man can develop every line of human activity and government of the world as controlled by every man cannot be expected to make vast progress along every line of governmental activity. This is a reasonable thing to take. There are certain things now taking up our time in government which must be done by women.

There are certain lines which we have not thought about which will think of and put into effect. Social service organizations, the revolutions of industrial abuses in England—the same condition prevails elsewhere—show that poor hard working women are overworked and underpaid. They suffered industrial and social evils which are considered as disgraceful to so powerful and civilized a nation. Having no direct influence in legislation the women receive inadequate protection. The people of England are in favor of the same measure of Women's Suffrage. The technicalities of procedure have prevented a bill, so far from our shores, from coming into existence.

These bills do not by any means represent the entire extent of the women's activity and interests, as there have been women members of almost all the numerous parliamentary committees, not only committees dealing with questions of public health, sanitation, inspection, housing the poor, etc., but also committees having to do with commerce and labor, railroad extension, the pilot service, etc.

The problem of the high cost of living is one which would undoubtedly be solved if women had a direct influence in the legislation of the day. This problem is more than a question of money and wages to remedy the great load which is crushing down the proletariat in poverty, and its degrading conditions.

Some reasons for asking the ballot. The world is impregnated with an uplift movement. So long as there are millions of semi-barbarous, uneducated people in the arena of politics it will be at the expense of the home, and that that great bulwark of our national life, the family, will be destroyed, while another twenty-five per cent will say we have always been in favor of woman suffrage, and will look at the second reason, the first reason to have already discussed in this opinion. The second reason requires no refutation. The creature who is competent enough to stand side by side with man in all other walks of life, in the management of the house, in business, in all social and religious affairs, in fact in everything that pertains to our well being is certainly qualified to stand side by side with man in the matter of making the laws that govern society.

the movies. No. This is another subtlety. The reason like the rest of them falls because of its own unreasonableness, but they say that woman's sphere is the home, and while I deny this statement for the reason that I believe no limit should be placed upon any human being, male or female, let us say it is her sphere because she wills it so, and if she wills it so, if her nature prompts her to do so, and she finds her greatest happiness therein, who will be so bold as to say that the mere privilege of voting upon public questions is going to lessen her interest in it. It is preposterous to think that the mere fact of voting is going to estrange the wife from her husband or her children, or the girl from her sweetheart, or that it will destroy that spirit of maternity which is the hope of mankind.

Why Some Are Indifferent.
But there is another twenty-five per cent who say they are willing to support woman suffrage when women universally demand it. This is the most important statement of all to consider, for it must be admitted that a large per cent of the women are either indifferent to the question or else openly oppose it, and it may well be asked, why is this?

Well as to those who are indifferent, I would say that many are afraid to be expected to influence the world's peace. It may be expected to do something to increase the protection, now sadly lacking, from unseasonable weather, the nation, and to decrease the waste and ruin occasioned by too much protection against external and possible enemies. It will, I doubt, be a long time before such changes are brought about, but a start may be made now.

It is a reasonable thing to consider on the ground of the good accruing to the state, there is another phase of the question which makes its adoption necessary. Women workers need greater protection in the way of minimum wage laws, shorter hours of labor, and better working conditions. The revolutions of industrial abuses in England—the same condition prevails elsewhere—show that poor hard working women are overworked and underpaid. They suffered industrial and social evils which are considered as disgraceful to so powerful and civilized a nation.

One thing is true of all: there has been no organized effort to repeal the grant. Whatever may be isolated opinions, the general mass of the voters are satisfied, indeed a few have expressed antagonistic views. If the citizens of these states find nothing objectionable in the measure, they will introduce a reforming and uplifting power into our political life.

In No Hurry
White—Now that your son has graduated, has he decided where he is going in the summer? Our first parents, guilty of a mutual sin, were, according to the allegory in Genesis, driven out of Eden, that garden which gave men all things to live with and nothing to live for. Hand in hand, they went out of Eden; hand in hand they must enter the new paradise grander and nobler than the pristine Eden, because wrought out of the thorn-growing earth by their united labors.

Give Your Dressmaker a Chance!

Your dressmaker cannot give you good lines unless your corset gives them to you to start with.

The Spirella corset is the delight of the best dressmakers. Its flexible boning—found only in this corset—moulds the figure into the long, soft lines of fashion without the artificial stiffness of the average corset.

Yet it will not take a permanent bend and is guaranteed to never break nor rust. The corset always keeps its splendid lines. The Spirella Corset is fitted to measure in your own home by one of our professional corsetiers. She studies your figure and so adapts the corset to your needs as to correct faults and develop your best lines. Spirella gives you not only perfect poise and the easy grace of the modish figure, but absolute comfort under all conditions.

We have new models to suit all types of figures. The Spirella Corset Parlors 66 Sydney Street E. S. EMERY, City Manager Phone Main 658-11.
