Baby Eczema

Develops From Neglected Chafing and Skin Irritation.

If every mother could realize the danger which lurks in the neglect of chafing and skin irritation she would not take chances on being without Dr. Chase's Ointment to apply after the bath.

This ointment is so clean and pure, and so delightfully soothing and healing, that it affords prompt relief to the little one's discomfort. It arrests the development of eczema, and makes a complete cure. Unlike pore-clogging powders, it promotes healthful action of the pores of the skin, and therefore leaves the skin in perfect condition.

A Child of Sorrow.

CHAPTER XXXII.

His brain, not very acute, set to work. After all, she was here, unprotected, far away from civilization, subject to no other man's influence; could he not so wrest circumstance as to gain possession of her? He vaguely formulated a dozen plans, but none of them proved acceptable. That night he did not join the ladies under the verandah, but sat and drank until a late hour, and then went unsteadily to bed.

When he awoke the next morning, after a half-drunken slumber, he realized that it behoved him to be cautious. He had promised Maida that he would say nothing more of his love for her; he must be discreet and watchful. Something might turn up to help him, to place her in his power. Accordingly, the next day, he almost avoided her, and when he met her at meals and at other times, he was just friendly and no more, and, naturally, Maida was reassured. She thought that he had accepted her refusal, that he had become resigned. But, all the same, she worked up her old recitals and studied some new ones.

On the third day Robert Broseley rode out to one of the out-stations. He was to be away three days; his mother, and even Carrie, who found him amusing, deplored his absence, but Maida was more relieved than words can tell. The out-station lay at a considerable distance from Milda Wolda, and Robert met with an adventure. That is to say, he came upon a sundowner, who was tramping, with his bundle over his rifle, towards the hut in which Robert was to sleep that night.

The sundowner wore a rusty, black coat and the fragments of a white necktie, and had an appearance, an expression about him different to the ordinary tramp.

He pulled up beside Robert's horse, and regarded him askant.

"Any station near?" he asked.

"Yes; Milda Wolda," replied Robert. "Are you in search of work?"

The sundowner nodded, and sat down on his haunches by the roadside, and Robert eyed him interrogatively.

"What can you do?" he asked.

The man looked round vacantly and wiped his mouth with the back of his hand.

"Most things," he replied. "I can turn my hand to most anything."

"You look like a new chum," said Robert. "What was your lay over there?"

He nodded his head in the direction of England.

"Over there, and over here, too, I am a parson," said the tramp. "I've seen evil days. I was a missionary, but things have gone wrong with me."

Robert regarded him contemptuously.

"There's no room for parsons here," he said. "It's a poor trade in these parts."

"I daresay," responded the man. "But I'm good at sheep-washing and cattle-running. In fact, I'm useful at most things."

Robert leant back on his horse's hind-quarters and regarded him as the well-to-do man regards his brother in misfortune. Then, suddenly, an idea shot into his head: he was always thinking of Maida.

"You are a parson, are you?" he said. "A regular parson, I mean? What's your name?"

"My name is Ronald Smythe. And I am in Holy Orders," said the tramp, with a ludicrous assumption of dignity. But it was not ludicrous to Robert Broseley.

"You mean that you can christen and—marry, and all that?" said Robert.

"Of course," assented the man, with increased dignity. "Don't I tell you that I'm in Orders."

Robert Broseley, still leaning back on his horse, gazed across the plain vacantly. A nebulous plot was forming in his brain.

"Look here," he said. "I can give you some work—it's only out-station work; but I'll pay you well: you are sure you are a parson?"

"I am a member of the Established Church of England," said the man, with an air of pomposity which, even at that moment, tickled Robert.

He tossed his flask to the man.

"Have a drink," he said. The Reverend Ronald Smythe took a long drink at the whiskey and waited expectantly.

"Look here," said Robert. "I'm thinking I can find you something to do. You might look after an out-station of ours—I'm Robert Broseley, of Milda Wolda."

"I've heard of you, heard of Broseley," said Mr. Smythe.

"And heard no harm of us, I daresay," said Robert, with a touch of hauteur.

"That's so," responded Mr. Smythe, taking out a pipe and hunting for his tobacco-pouch, which proved to be empty.

MOTHER OF FOUR CHILDREN

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Kept Her Well and Strong.

Lincoln, Illinois.—"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for ten years with good results and I have four healthy children. This summer I was in a very run-down condition and the very hot weather seemed more than I could stand, but I commenced taking your Compound in June and from then until September 25th, when my last baby was born, I got along much better than I had before. My baby was a girl and weighed 14 pounds at birth, and I recovered very rapidly which I am sure was due to your medicine. I am well and strong now, nurse my baby and do all my work. I had the same good results with your medicine when needed before my other children came and they are all healthy. My mother has taken your medicine with equal satisfaction. She had her last child when nearly 44 years old and feels confident she never would have carried him through without your help, as her health was very poor."—Mrs. A. F. CLOYD, 1355 North Gulick Ave., Decatur, Ill.

Robert tossed him his own well-filled one, and, as the man leisurely crammed his pipe, scanned him keenly.

Robert was not a very acute person, but he saw that the man was a scallywag, and judged that he would prove an easy tool.

"Well, Mr. Smythe," he said, "I can give you work on one of our out-stations. You'll find it a bit lonesome, but I'll look you up occasionally. And, look here, if I want you to do a stroke of work in your own line—I mean the parson line—I shall expect you to do it."

The man bowed with an absurd air of condescension.

"I shall be most happy, Mr. Broseley," he said. "Anything in the way of baptisms, funerals, or marriages—"

Robert Broseley nodded, the colour rising beneath his tan.

"That's all right," he said. "Now, I'll show you the way. Put your hand on my saddle."

They went slowly towards the shepherd's hut, where Robert and Carrie and Maida had made picnic, and Robert installed the Reverend Ronald Smythe in due form.

"I'll ride over to-morrow and see how you are getting on," he said; "and I'll bring you a horse. I may leave you alone after that for a few days; but I shall turn up again shortly. I may not come alone; I may want you, in your capacity of parson; you understand?"

The clerical tramp regarded him for a moment with some surprise, then shrugged his shoulders and nodded.

"At your service, Mr. Broseley," he said. "Is there—is there any whiskey here? I suffer from neuralgia and toothache."

Robert Broseley tossed him the flask and rode away laughing.

He thought deeply and profoundly as he rode homewards; and as depth and profundity of thought were novel to him, he was extremely quiet as he dismounted; and very quiet all that evening.

Maida played and sang in the drawing-room and Carrie was busy fashioning a blouse, and Robert sat in a corner pretending to read a newspaper, but, more often than not, gazing over it at Maida's beautiful profile.

He scarcely spoke to her that evening, scarcely addressed her the next day; and the morning following he rode over to the shepherd's hut. He found the Reverend Ronald Smythe fairly contented, but politely clamorous for whiskey, and, as before, Robert gave him a flask.

The days passed, and so little obtrusive was Robert that Maida, with the modesty of a woman devoid of vanity, was almost convinced that he had forgotten her; for he spoke to her but seldom, and seemed to avoid her. The cloud lifted somewhat from her mind; but she was none the less determined to leave Milda Wolda and take to reciting in Melbourne and the other large cities.

On the fifth morning Robert strode into the parlor where the girls and Mrs. Broseley were sitting, and, addressing Carrie, said:

"What do you say to a ride, Miss Carrie? I'd ask Miss Maida, too, but her horse has cast a shoe and the smith has gone to one of the stations."

"I'm willing," said Carrie. "My motto is like that of the MacCleod of MacCleod. "Ready, aye ready." "It wasn't the MacCleod's," said Maida, gently.

"Never mind," said Carrie. "It's a good enough motto anyway. "Where are we going, Mr. Robert?"

"I thought of going to the shepherd's hut," he said.

"Oh, no more picnics!" remonstrated Carrie. "I was nearly suffocated with the smoke last time."

"Oh, no," he said, quickly. "We'll just ride there and back; we shall be in, in time for lunch."

"It will be a sharp ride," remarked Carrie, as she left the room to put on her habit.

They started half an hour afterwards. Robert strove to be amusing as they rode along side by side; but every now and then he fell into profound silence and his dark brows gathered over his small black eyes.

When they had got about half-way to the hut, he pulled up and said:

"There'll scarcely be time to reach the hut. What do you say if we make for the point and go round that way?"

"I'm willing," said Carrie. "I'm ready for anything so that we are back for lunch, for I feel the premonitory signs of absorbing hunger."

He laughed grimly and they rode on. When they had come to the point to which he had referred, he said:

"We'll dismount here and give the horses a rest."

Carrie leapt from her saddle and as usual began to gather some of the flowers which starred the plain.

Robert Broseley watched her with knitted brow. Then he said, suddenly:

"They're only scrubby things you have got; there are better in the valley beyond. You wait here, and I will get you some."

He rode away from her, and when he was hidden from her sight by the bend of the hill he turned his horse and rode, still out of her sight, towards Milda Wolda. He reached there an hour later. Maida was sitting under the verandah, thinking deeply, wondering how she should break her departure to Mrs. Broseley, who, she knew, loved both her and Carrie as if they were her own.

Robert Broseley pulled up his horse on his haunches and leapt from the saddle, and Maida rose intending to avoid him by going into the house; but he stopped her by a gesture.

"Don't go, Maida—Miss Carrington. I've something to tell you; it's bad news."

"Bad news!" echoed Maida. "Oh, what is it—Carrie, where is she?"

"It's about Carrie," he said. "Don't be alarmed; there's nothing to be frightened about. She has met with an accident—sprained her ankle—she is at the shepherd's hut—where we were the other day, you know."

Maida pressed her hand to her heart and bit her lip.

"I must go to her. Mrs. Broseley—"

"No, no," he said. "Don't alarm my mother. It isn't safe to frighten her—a sudden shock—she is not strong—as you know. If you'll come with me—you can take care of her."

He stood before her, his lids hiding his burning eyes, his lips tightly compressed.

Maida had no suspicion of his evil intent.

"I will come at once," she said, struggling to calm herself and keep her self-possession.

"Right," he said. "Just slip upstairs and get your habit on without my mother knowing. Don't be frightened—it's only a strain."

"I am not frightened—but—Oh, Carrie!" breathed Maida.

She ran upstairs and slipped on her habit and came down to him. No one had seen her; Mrs. Broseley was in the kitchen. Robert had got her horse saddled and was waiting for her round the corner of the house.

She mounted—his great hand shook as he lifted her into the saddle—and they rode off.

Capt. LeDrew Defends Himself

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—I am writing you in reply to an anonymous letter which appeared in your paper of August 4 in which I was accused of leaving passengers behind at Portugal Cove. I am writing this in justice to myself and wish to state the facts of the case as they really were. Previous to doing I wish to say that I consider to be a most cowardly way to attack a man in the public press by using either an assumed name or a non-existent name. It is possible that the party (or parties) who wrote the letter have not got the courage of their convictions? If not, why not be manly and sign their name (or names), then I would at least have the satisfaction of knowing to whom I am replying. As it is I am in the dark, as it were. However, the true facts of the incident are as follows: On the day in question I waited at the wharf in Portugal Cove until the returning passengers and mail on board. On receiving the said passengers and mail (and there being no prospective passengers in sight) I backed the steamer into the stream, which has always been (and still remains) the custom. After having backed away from the wharf and being turned around, thus heading for Bell Island and at the time being fully one-quarter of a mile on my way to Bell Island, I was notified that "cars were coming over the hill." This was the first and only notification I received regarding any "prospective passengers" having been left behind. Had I been notified previous to leaving the Cove that evening that returning passengers and others were on their way, I would have most willingly accommodated them; but as it was, I was notified, and as I said before, when I got the passengers and mail on board I went about my business. I trust that this explanation will be satisfactory to everybody concerned. It is truthful in every particular. You are all liable to make mistakes in this (apparent) on-the-wharf business, and I have been notified in time. I shall be grateful if you will be kind enough to give this reply the same amount of publicity as that which was given to my accuser (accusers).

I beg to remain,
Yours truly,
JOHN E. LEDREW,
Master S. S. Other.

Bell Island, August 6th, 1917.

EASY WORK.

It's easy for the man who's rich to talk like some sages to fellow toilers in the ditch, to beg for meager wages to tell them that a 11 wealth dress, a frost-pretty near that everything a total loss spirit. Now, I've earned one honest day of honest grinding labor; so I feel honest with I say wise things to toiling neighbors. It's easy for the man who's hale, who ne'er had yallar janders, to hand out bunk to those who all with hollow mumps or glanders; to tell them that they ought to smile and wave their hats and chortle, when toothache disordered but is caused by pain immortal. But I, who write this cheer-up rhyme, to brace some aching brother, have rheumatism half the time, and jumping god the other many giving us advice and optimal chatty things to tell how to cut when busted flat or flatter! And most of them have never known the lack of ample riches, the toiling for a wretched ed on in quarries, fields and ditto. And few of them have been, I trust, from humble homes evicted, and few of them, methinks, have seen the count of the afflicted. It's easy work to do the bunk when you are clothed with plenty, to one who, sweating for plunk, is sore in need of twenty.

An End of the Farce.

Following the defeat of the Profits Tax Bill in the Legislative Council yesterday, a defeat which we predicted from the beginning, comes the astounding announcement that the House is to be dissolved this afternoon. Why? The country, desperately in need of funds, must go without them until the next session. Why? Because the Government, pricked severely in its self-conceit, rather than perform a piece of elementary justice, rather than listen to reason, rather than accept offered amendments to the Bill which would produce a much greater revenue, rather than admit itself in the slightest degree in the wrong, closes the House and the discussion at the same time, knowing that to continue will compel it to climb down from its impossible position. This high-handed and unprincipled action, which no reputable Government would dream of committing, is a clumsy attempt to place a responsibility upon the Council which rests solely on its own shoulders, and to bring into disrepute the courageous members of that body who voted the measure down. The attempt will fail. The country knows who is responsible, and the honourable gentlemen in question stand in its highest esteem. It has found in them a safeguard against the arbitrary will of a couple of demagogues in complete control of "the elected representatives of the people," who have not even the intelligence to understand the measures offered for their obedient consent and lack the backbone to oppose them if they did.

We have not time to-day to examine in any detail the important debate in the Council and the position resulting from it, but will mention the salient points. The Government threaten an election. That is mere sound and fury; they know what will happen to themselves if the threat is carried out. But a great deal will be made of the action of the Council in overriding a sacred principle of the constitution.

Profits Tax Bill

Turned Down in the Upper House Last Evening after Hot Debate—Disastrous Consequences Threatened by the Government—Bill Defeated by Nine Votes to Seven—H. E. the Governor Closes the Legislature This Afternoon with no Revenue Bill Passed.

The curtain of the mid-summer session of the Legislature rang down last evening under the most extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances in the history of the country, when the Revenue Bill or what is now locally famous as the Business Profit Tax Bill was defeated in the Legislative Council by a vote of 9 to 7. With Hon. Dr. Skelton in the chair the voting went thus:—

FOR: Hon. P. T. McGrath, M. P. Gibbs, R. A. Squires, J. J. Murphy, S. D. Blandford, M. Power, W. J. Ellis. AGAINST: Hon. Sir Edgar Bowring, J. Harvey, M. G. Winter, A. Goodridge, G. Knowling, J. D. Ryan, Jas. Ryan, S. Milley, J. Anderson. (Majority against 2).

The Council met at 4.15 p.m. and the Bill respecting the Bay of Islands Steamship Service was passed without amendment. Hon. Mr. Squires, after tabling the report of the Nfld. Methodist School Board, moved the House into Committee of the Whole to discuss further the Business Tax Bill.

Hon. Dr. Skelton was moved to the chair. Hon. Mr. Anderson took occasion to repudiate the scathing indictment made by Hon. Mr. McGrath (President), at the previous sitting upon members of the House because they voted against the second reading of the Bill. The attack, he considered, was unreasonable and uncalled for, and there was no precedent for such parliamentary conduct. He believed in the principle of the Bill and that the Government required all the money they could get and he would be one of the first to assist in getting it. The reason, he said, that he and other hon. members opposed the second reading of the Bill was because no guarantee was forthcoming for such amendments as would be accepted by the Government. Upon that vote, which was given fearlessly and conscientiously, he was prepared to receive either the approbation or condemnation of the country, but he was not prepared to submit to the condemnation of the President of the House.

Hon. Mr. Harvey asked the hon. gentleman in charge of the Bill if he was prepared to make any statement regarding any substantial change likely to be made in section 3. Hon. Mr. Squires replied in the negative. He said that was the section which outlined the general policy of the Bill. The section called for 20 per cent. on all net profits in excess of $3,000. This he thought was reasonable and just as a war tax, as he did not think it unfair to ask the wealthy people to give one-fifth of their profits over $3,000. Regarding the second paragraph of the section, placing a one-half per cent tax on Bank deposits, he pointed out that the Government were only willing to consider the suggestion that Banks should pay a proportionate tax to the mercantile concerns, that they could have their choice of paying the percentage asked for under the section or pay 20 per cent on their net profits as others were called upon to do.

Hon. Mr. Harvey said he was disappointed at the attitude of the Government and was at a loss to understand what they meant, as they had been prepared to make a reasonable alteration, which, in his opinion, was only common ordinary justice and the Government had refused to consider it. He asked "why is the National Government so petty, so contemptibly mean that they cannot give an explanation and cannot take into consideration a simple, fair and honest request of this sort?" He did not blame the Government as a whole, but as a faction because there was a faction with control in the Government who were either too petty or too ignorant to consider a matter of ordinary justice. He did not object to class legislation provided there was honour in it and not dishonour, as there was in this Bill. The Bill, he said, would be lost, but lost on the responsibility of the Government and an unfortunate feature was that it would be misrepresented to the country, though he thought it would be difficult to convince the man on the street. He was satisfied to pay 50 per cent tax provided there was an interest allowed on capital. If this allowance was made he was prepared to waive all other objections to the Bill. He wished it to be clearly understood that he was not opposing a tax upon profits and was willing to support a half honest tax, but not a dishonest and dishonourable one. He moved that the Committee rise to give the Government an opportunity of further considering the matter and getting themselves out out of the hole they were in.

Hon. Sir E. R. Bowring seconded the motion, standing exactly in the same position on the matter as he did the previous day. He was opposed to the Bill, not because of the amount of taxation that would have to be borne by him, but because there were injustices in it that could be remedied if the Government saw fit to do so. If all were taxed equally he would have nothing to say against the measure, but he did not see how he could vote for section 3.

Hon. Mr. Squires said he felt sure that the House was indebted for the courteous and straightforward criticism made by the mover and second of the motion and regretted exceedingly that it was termed a dishonest and unjust measure. He thought there was a misunderstanding about the scope and object of the Bill. He did not wish to contend that the measure was perfect or that it would bear equally and justly on all business men, but when the fact was regarded that the Empire was at war those who could best afford were being asked to pay the heavier burden. He failed to see why such a minor inequality or injustice justified any one for voting against the measure and that although it was not absolute or perfect he thought it should receive the consideration and support of the House.

He said that there were inequalities in every system of taxation and because a capitalist was not allowed 6 per cent interest for his own pocket first before his net profits were taxed, it did not constitute an injustice, he thought. He was afraid that some business men, because their pockets were touched, were resorting to mathematical problems and scientific finance to use as an argument whereby they would be able to escape the taxation they were called upon to pay.

Hon. Mr. Harvey congratulated the last speaker on the case he had set out. He said it was not a case of mathematical or scientific finance, but that one business man was asked to pay more taxation than his neighboring business man. He was anxious to see the Bill go through, but was not prepared to allow the Government to ram injustices down his throat.

Hon. Mr. Squires replied that there was no intention on the part of the Government to use any violence towards any member of the Council. He repeated that there was no gross inequality or injustice to justify the House attempting to defeat the measure.

Hon. Mr. Harvey asked if there was anything to justify the Government in refusing to consider the amendments suggested.

Hon. Sir E. R. Bowring pointed out in support of his argument that there should be an interest allowed on capital, that there were widows and orphans in his firm and depending on the dividend derived each year and he was not prepared to see them robbed of their dividend.

Hon. Mr. McGrath said before the curtain rang down on what he believed would be a tragedy in the life of the Legislative Council, he would like to refer to the extreme stand taken by certain hon. members and wondered if they realized what the outcome would be. He stated that the Business Profits Tax was a Money Bill and that the fundamental principle was that the elected body in the Lower House controlled taxation. As he judged the sentiment of the Legislative Council the motion was going to be put and the Bill was to go out. He showed instances of how that decision could be overruled by an appeal to the country. He urged the Council to go slowly in the matter or the end would be disastrous. He said the world was at war and the participants therein were contributing largely; Newfoundland had contributed six thousand of its manhood. The opponents of the Bill might think they were right and he would not say they were wrong, but the gospel of social justice demanded that those who had plenty should give most. He thought that if this bill was defeated the Government could come back with a bill that would levy a tax on profits for one or two years back. Regarding Mr. Anderson's statements he said he was sorry that he offended him, but liked to point out that the attitude of Hon. Mr. Anderson yesterday and to-day reminded him of an English quotation: "It's all very well to dissemble your love but why did you kick me downstairs." Continuing, he thought it idle to talk of conscripting men in view of the vigorous protest offered against this Bill.

Hon. Mr. Winter again favored the Bill in principle but opposed its method. He voted for the second reading because he thought there would be some effort made to amend it. Now the Government refused to do anything, so that if the Bill was defeated, he thought the onus was to be on the Government. He had no objection to being taxed with reason, nor would he object to the Bill if it was framed after the Canadian Profits Tax Bill. He thought all should be taxed alike.

Hon. Mr. Harvey said in answer to the suggested consequences referred to by Hon. Mr. McGrath that the Government had shown enough pettiness for that, but that he was not going to vote against what his conscience dictated supposing it brought him to the Penitentiary. Hon. Mr. Bowring suggested that the Government take a leaf out of the book of Canada, England or the United States regarding the taxation measure.

Hon. J. D. Ryan next spoke briefly in opposition to the Bill. Thereupon the debate on the Bill ended and Hon. Mr. Harvey asked for the motion to be put.

Hon. Mr. Squires rose and reiterated what he had already stated, pointing out mainly the inequalities in sacrifices of parents who had sent their sons to fight and shed their blood for us. He thought it a severe blow to Newfoundland's position in the world war.

Hon. Mr. Harvey's motion was then put and carried by a vote of 9 to 7.

Before the House adjourned the President stated that His Excellency the Governor would be pleased to procure the Legislature at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Mr. Murray Anderson Wins Laurels.

Author of Many Popular Productions. John Murray Anderson, the producer of "Frocks and Frills" at the Palais Royal in New York, is one of the few university men who have been drawn to what is known as Broadway in theatrical parlance. He was educated at the Bishop Feild College, St. John's, Nfld., Rugby, and later studied in Edinburgh and at the University of Lausanne. After qualifying as a lawyer, he abandoned that profession to take up stage directing, somewhat along the Beechcroft Tree line. Meanwhile he was a pupil of the veteran English singer, Sir Charles Santley. Until recently, he has confined his attention to staging masques and other productions in which the fashionable world took active part—"The Seven Ages" in Denver, last season's affair at the Bar Harbor Swimming Club and so on. His father, the Hon. John Anderson, of St. John's, introduced the recently passed Daylight Bill. A younger brother, Hugh Anderson, is attached to the Newfoundland War Office in London. There he has been entrusted with several important missions and not long ago he was entertained at Buckingham Palace by the King and Queen.

We understand the clever author is engaged at present preparing a much more elaborate production for presentation in September or rather beginning the first of October. It is to be called "Venus on Earth."—The Star, July 15th, 1917.

Obituary.

It is with the deepest regret that we record the death of Walter Abbott, which sad event took place at Musgrave Harbor yesterday, August 7th, after a brief illness. He was in the prime of manhood and leaves to mourn their very great loss, a mother, two sisters, wife, daughter, two sons, and a large circle of friends at Musgrave, Dotting Cove and Bonavista. His younger son John, becomes the mainstay of the family at home, whilst his elder son Fred, a teacher of Associate Grade, who resigned his post last year now serves his King and Country in the trenches in France. Walter Abbott, a hardworking, industrious, and most successful planter, exemplary citizen, is an irreparable loss both to his family and the community. The family and relatives have our deepest sympathy. A FRIEND.

The Stars of De Sonis.

London Daily Express: At a certain country mansion not far from the firing line in France, hospitality was offered some time ago to a party of French officers, among whom was one whom his friends addressed as "General," though he wore a colonel's uniform. It was General Petain.

"When I am at war," he explained, in reply to the curiosity of his hostesses, "I am not disposed to worry much about uniform, and elsewhere—what does it matter? It so happened that these two ladies were daughters of General Gaston de Sonis, the hero of Patay, whose insignia they had inherited tenderly since 1870. In the morning when General Petain resumed his uniform he found that these dear old ladies had sewn the stars of de Sonis on his tunic.

Household Notes.

Whole cereals are the starchy foods which supply most iron. The most valuable meat for anemic people is said to be beef. Stale cake can be soaked in milk and made up into gingerbread. When making bread with dry yeast begin the work in mid-afternoon. The water in which rice is cooked will make a good foundation for soup. Tile-fish is an excellent fish, which should be more popular than it is. When stewing very acid fruits a pinch of borax will correct the acidity.

ADMIRALTY CHANGES.

LONDON, Aug. 6. Official announcement was made at the Admiralty to-night that Admiral Sir Cecil Burney, Second Sea Lord, had been replaced by Vice Admiral Sir Rosslyn Wemyss, Alan Garrett Anderson, hitherto Vice Chairman of the Wheat Commission, succeeds Sir Eric Campbell Geddes, the new First Lord of the Admiralty, as Controller of naval construction.

OVERHAULING THE ADMIRALTY.

LONDON, Aug. 7. The changes in the British Admiralty are attracting much attention and are interpreted as the first step in a reorganization, which it is supposed Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty was appointed to carry out. In quarters where the existing Admiralty methods are regarded as unsatisfactory, the present step is denounced as a procrastinatory half-measure, and it is declared that the change ought to have been so complete as to give the country a resolute and energetic Admiralty permeated by an energetic spirit. There is no implication of incapacity against Admiral Sir Cecil Burney, whose services as Admiral Jellicoe's second in command of the grand fleet are recognized in the official announcement which states that he will be employed on special duty. It is assumed that as his record was made in active command he may welcome the change. An official statement contains the announcement that an opportunity is to be taken of the appointment of Vice Admiral Sir Rosslyn Wemyss to rearrange the duties of the Second Sea Lord of the Admiralty, who will be relieved of detailed administrative work connected with the personnel of the fleet. This is interpreted as meaning that the Second Sea Lord will not be trammelled by details which a subordinate can handle, but will be associated more closely than was his predecessor with the preparation of war plans. Another change in the Admiralty is the removal of Sir William Graham Green from the permanent Secretaryship at the Admiralty to a Secretaryship in the Ministry of Munitions under Winston Spencer Churchill. Sir William's departure from the Admiralty is regarded as of considerable importance, as the post of permanent Secretary, which he has held since 1911, always has been largely responsible for the continuity of Admiralty traditions and policy. It is this continuity which is regarded by many as a most dangerous factor, in that it hinders initiative and adaptability to current needs.

WHY ZIMMERMAN FELL.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 7. When the news of the retirement of Zimmerman, German Foreign Secretary, was received it caused a general feeling among prominent Mexicans that his downfall was due largely to the failure of his plan to have Herr Heinrich Von Eckhardt, German Minister to Mexico, attempt to embroil Mexico and the United States, and to use Mexico as a go-between in an effort to alienate Japan from the Allies.

CANADIANS MAKE FURTHER ADVANCE.

British Front in France and Belgium, Aug. 7. (By Associated Press.)—The British lines continue to advance on the French city of Lens. North of Arras the Canadian troops who on Saturday night pushed their position forward approximately two hundred yards along a front of a thousand yards in the western part of the city, yesterday added six hundred yards front of a similar depth to their defences south and west of that mining centre. The Germans are showing signs of decided uneasiness in Lens sector for several days, as has been evidenced by their practice of throwing curtain fire on the British trenches each morning at dawn. Vimy and Farbus towns, behind the British lines south of Lens has been shelled by the enemy batteries. The rest of the front conditions state comparative calm so far as infantry is concerned.

DRAMATIC AUTHOR DEAD.

LONDON, Aug. 7. Capt. Basil Hood, dramatic author, was found dead in London to-day. Capt. Basil Hood was 53 years of age. He served fifteen years in the British army and wrote copiously for the stage, mostly in lighter vein, and made the English translation of the Merry Widow.

THE WORK OF A GERMAN SUB.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Aug. 7. One German submarine during a three weeks' period ending July 19, sank 19 vessels aggregating 66,000 tons, and was still in condition to remain longer away from its base according to reports brought here to-day by Harold Pensen, of Detroit, a member of the crew of one of the 19 ships, who said he received his information from a U-boat commander. Hansen said he belonged to the Norwegian sailing ship Artensis, a vessel of 1,789 tons gross register, sunk while on her way from Glasgow to Hampton Roads. His ship stopped when ordered to do so by the submarine commander. A crew from the U-boat came aboard and removed all food supplies. The crew were then ordered into boats and given a course to the nearest land. The Artensis was then torpedoed. The captain of the submarine, Hansen said, told him and other members of the crew with pride that he had sunk 18 other ships in three weeks and was after more.

GERMAN PLANE ALIGHTS; CREW INTERRED.

LONDON, Aug. 7. A despatch to the Times from Rotterdam says a German seaplane alighted at Texel, Holland, yesterday, after being fired at by Dutch soldiers. It was short of gasoline. The occupants were interned.

AIR RAID AT POLA.

ROME, Aug. 7. A detailed report of the air raid at Pola, the Austrian naval base, on Friday night, shows that it began at 11 o'clock and ended shortly after dawn. Each machine carried eight bombs and six grenades. The first arrived over Pola an hour after departure, and the last at 4 a.m. The squadron carried out the task, which comprised a flight of 320 kilometers, 106 of which were over enemy territory, without the loss of a single machine. Dammunzo, the poet, was aboard one of the larger planes, piloted by Capt. Gari. The damage effected was most important, and in addition to bombing the arsenal, the Naptha Depot and seaplane station were set afire and burned like paper. The Italian aviators, who kept at an average height of 2,500 to 3,000 yards, were able to judge the extent of destruction by the enormous speed of flame and columns of smoke which shot up to a height of 5,000 yards. The Austrians were unable during the bombardment to extinguish any fires started by bombs, but they kept up a furious fire with their anti-aircraft guns, and thirty of their most powerful searchlights threw a dazzling light over the space where the Italians were flying. Notwithstanding this, the latter cruised over the city for nearly five hours and escaped unhurt and victorious.

NEW NAVAL CONTROLLER.

LONDON, Aug. 7. Alan Anderson, the new Controller of the Navy, who will be responsible for the Admiralty's shipbuilding requirements, has a close knowledge of both shipping and railways. He was long associated with a company of shipping brokers, and is a director of the Midland Railway.

GERMANY'S FOREIGN POLICY.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 7. Will Dr. Von Keuhlmann or Dr. Karl Helfferich, Vice-Chancellor, be the real director of the foreign policy under the administration of Dr. Michaelis? This is the political problem of the hour in connection with the shake-up of cabinets. In Germany it is known that the versatile Dr. Helfferich has decided to have a hand in steering Germany's new course in world politics after the war, and it is rumored that the new Chancellor, unacquainted as he is with international affairs, desires to retain the ex-bank director, Dr. Helfferich, as his special adviser and mouth-piece particularly for this field. In fact, one of the avowed reasons for Dr. Helfferich's retention, despite his present unpopularity in the Reichstag, was that his services are indispensable in peace negotiations. The Gazettab Lokaleizer and the Vossische Zeitung all refer to the possibility of a conflict, as Dr. Keuhlmann, it is understood, is inclined to permit himself to be relegated to a subordinate place.

Criticises Star Team.

St. John's, Aug. 7, 1917. Editor Evening Telegram. "Dear Sir—As one of the disappointed ones who went to St. George's Field on Monday night, I am writing you in support of your strictures in to-day's edition on the action of the Star team in not showing up. This is not the first time this season that this team has turned football into a fiasco. They should at least have patriotism enough in their bones to smother any selfish or personal motives of a petty nature, when all the members of the other teams in the Football League are endeavoring to do their little bit for the Patriotic Fund. There is only one thing for the League officials to do, and that is demand a public apology through the press; falling this, then demand their absolute withdrawal. Even their own supporters are disgusted with their actions this season.

AN OLD TIME FOOTER.

Constancy. (From the Argonaut.) A story about Lord Kitchener, who was often spoken of as "the most distinguished bachelor in the world," is being told. A young member of his staff, when he was in India, asked for a furlough in order to go home and get married. Kitchener listened to him patiently, then added: "Kenilworth, you're not yet twenty-five. Wait a year. If then you still desire to do this thing you shall have leave."

Grenfell Association to Lose Dr. Little.

Thousands of people in Northern Newfoundland and along the coast of Labrador will learn with deep regret that Dr. Mason Little, the well known surgeon at St. Anthony, is shortly to resign his post with the Grenfell Association. Dr. Little has for over ten years laboured in that mission, where he and his good wife have won the love and affection of the hardy toilers of the north, and in leaving our shores they will take with them the best wishes of their numerous friends in Newfoundland and Labrador. In future Dr. Little will practice at Boston, of which his father is one of the leading citizens.

Your Boys and Girls.

The first three months of a baby's life he should sleep 22 hours out of 24. At six months he sleeps twelve hour at night and he has a two hour nap both morning and afternoon. After six months one nap, preferably in the afternoon, is sufficient. Until the seventh year every child should have twelve hours sleep at night. Cathartics should not be given unless a physician advises. An attempt should be made to regulate the bowels through a proper diet. During his second year a baby should not be given so much milk that he will not want to take the proper amount of solid food. Children with poor appetites should not have sweets, nor should they be allowed to eat between meals. Milk and eggs are important elements in a child's diet up to the tenth year; the latter should never be given fried. Meat should be given after the third year, once a day, preferably at noon. Little children should not have ham, bacon, sausage, pork, liver, kidney, game or dried or salt meats. Most meats should be rare and either scraped or cut fine so as to be digestible.

A Special Garden.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

I want to tell you about a garden. Doubtless you have heard of good deals about gardens this summer. But this is a very special garden.

In a way there was nothing remarkable about it and in another way it was quite remarkable. Some folks may find it commonplace because they have had similar experiences, and other folks, not having boys in their family, may not be interested on that account. But for the sake of those who have boys and haven't this kind of a garden I want to tell you about it. (And also for the sake of neighbours of garden-less boys).

The Father Didn't Butt In.

This garden was a boy's garden par excellence. It belonged absolutely to him. His father had a garden of his own (and he showed the boy some things) but he didn't butt in to the boy's garden with any bossing or helping.

There was one important point another was this: When the plan was made his father said, "New doing things alone is work and doing things with someone is fun. We'll let the boy pick out two other boys and let them all three have the garden together."

The Other Boys Were The Best Feature.

His mother looked a bit doubtful about having all these boys around the place but his father overrode her doubts. The other two boys were duly invited and proved the very best feature of the scheme. It was fun for the youngsters to all get out and grub together whereas it would have been the hardest kind of work for any one to leave the rest playing ball and go out and dig by himself. Also it stimulated them by producing healthy rivalries. And best of all, perhaps, it taught co-operation and team work.

He Outstripped His Father.

Another somewhat unusual feature about this boy's garden was that it outstripped the grown-up garden. Junior was so much interested that he went to several lectures on gardening, and having youth's willingness to try the new, he tried out some of the methods suggested by the lecturer and actually outstripped his father in early production of several vegetables.

The boys are now co-operating in marketing their produce and getting a practical lesson in book-keeping, besides earning (and saving) some real money.

And the nation's stock of food is increased. Ever so slightly? Yes, but what was it we used to write in our copybooks about little drops of water, etc.?

THOMAS A. EDISON.

Thomas A. Edison is a sleepless genius who invented the short-watt method of measuring electricity, which has made the electric light business in this country more profitable than running a hot tamale booth at an Old Settlers' picnic.

Mr. Edison is conceded by both press and public to be one of the best and most fertile inventors the United States has ever produced. He formed the habit in early youth and has never gotten over it. He began life as a train boy, and sold the unexpurgated yellow-backed novel and the plastic gum drop with great success. But he was not satisfied. Something within him ever since, impelled him on and led him to become a telegraph operator, when he first came in contact with the kind of electricity which produces head-end collisions.

Edison has made the electric light business in this country more profitable than running a hot tamale booth at an Old Settlers' picnic.

After Mr. Edison had learned the Morse alphabet so that he could tell a dash from a semi-colon, his inventive genius began to break out faster than a fat boy with the measles. Whenever he wanted something that nobody else had thought of, he would go out and invent it and then cry "Eureka," after having it patented in several different

Not So Fast.

(Chicago Evening Post.) We can appreciate in some measure the feeling of those Germans who want peace. We all want peace. There are things, however, that we desire more than peace, or as preliminary and indispensable to it, or we should never have gone to war. And that is true of every nation to-day fighting Germany. It is important to emphasize that fact. The peace seekers of Germany cannot be allowed to get away unchallenged with the assertion that they are seeking peace as an aggrieved and injured nation. The only grievance Germany has against the world is that the world refused to lie down and be trampled under foot when Germany began trampling.

The Gas Range!

The Gas Range means comfort for the housewife; shorter kitchen hours for her, and a cleaner kitchen. It is a great mistake to think that cooking with gas is expensive.

Whenever a woman becomes used to gas for cooking, thoughts of a coal or wood stove fill her with gloom. A Gas range is so much easier to operate, and so much cleaner, that the idea of going back to the old style methods is decidedly unpleasant. Yet in winter many housewives think they must use a coal or wood stove, because there is no other way of heating the kitchen. THERE IS ANOTHER WAY AND IT IS FAR BETTER THAN THE OLD. The name, as the author admits, is not altogether a happy one; but we agree that it is a very difficult to devise a general term which will press the essential unity of the world without any undue implications. The author devotes pages to a vivid presentation of essential points of similarity, identity, between nations in language, thought, in governmental procedure, social tendencies. He has to do with that which has many thinkers in our day. It is an obsolescent and a shift, tolerable only, as a use. The relations between the Dominions, the States, and the United States, in a standing invitation to the might well lead to a war, while he realises, as others this regrettable state of affairs within the great family of 150,000,000 people, allows for us with population, and the growing danger to the family from within, we be remembered, before the outbreak of the German force numbering nearly the Pan-Angle total, and organised for aggression, as that in the East, a powerful and well-organized force of fifty millions, bursting the horizons of the Pacific, stirring fronting on the Pacific, flung her tentacles as far as (and we may add) to Russia. Finally he brings us to a vision which is, in his view, not blinded by the conflict, the most important, China, with four millions, brave and industrious, stirring, when he was in the ferment of Western, to know how far she has advanced. Russia he saw, in 1914, a vast dormant power of a hundred million Slavs; and it would be a bold man to predict what will happen in the morning. Where man-made armaments are easily And so, sitting aside to-day as a mere profligate one can with almost unaccountable figure out, Armageddon, hundred and fifty million, two hundred million Slavs, and fifty million, broken up into seven million in birth-rate than after

'The Pan-Angles'

"A family appeal, in terms familiar to the family here, called the Pan-Angles." In these prefatory words Mr. Sinclair Kennedy, of Boston, U.S.A., describes his own book "The Pan-Angles." (Longman, Green & Co., New York, 1915.) The words of the title, denote the seven English-speaking self-governing nations of the world: Britain, Canada, Newfoundland, Australia, South Africa, New Zealand and the United States of America. The name, as the author himself admits, is not altogether a satisfactory one; but we agree with him that it is a very difficult matter to devise a general term which will express the essential unity of our peoples without any undesirable local implications. For the present the word will serve.

Published two years ago, the book has but now come to our notice, and we lose no time in bringing it to the notice of our readers as an invaluable contribution to the literature of these troublous days. We have of late years a plenitude of commonwealth-devisers; but few are more lucid, more striking or more judicious than Mr. Kennedy; and the American origin of the book puts it somewhat out of the usual run.

The author devotes his earlier pages to a vivid presentation of the essential points of similarity, or rather, identity, between the seven nations in language, thought and ideals, in governmental practices and in social tendencies. He has been struck with that which has impressed so many thinkers in our own Empire, the fact that the present constitutional machinery of the Empire as a whole is an obsolescent and perilous makeshift, tolerable only, as he says, in disuse. The relations between Britain and the Dominions do not differ greatly from those between Britain and the United States, and in both cases offer a standing invitation to friction which might well lead to disaster. And while he realises, as others have done, this regrettable state of disorganization within the great "Pan-Angle" family, of 150,000,000 people, he visualises for us with photographic clearness the growing dangers which menace the family from within. Writing, as he it remembered, before the present war, he points out to us the impending outbreak of the Germanic peoples, a force numbering nearly two-thirds of the Pan-Angle total, and far better organised for aggression; it reminds us that in the East Japan, with an efficient and well-organized force of fifty millions, has been crowding the horizons of the three Pan-Angle nations fronting on the Pacific, and has flung her tentacles as far as Hawaii (and we may add New Caledonia). Finally he brings us face to face with a vision which is, to those whose eyes are not blinded by the dust of to-day's conflict, the most disquieting of all. China, with four millions of hardy, brave and industrious citizens, was stirring, when he wrote in 1914, with the ferment of Western ideas. We know how far she has traveled since. Russia he saw, in 1914, as the nucleus of a vast dormant power of two hundred million Slavs; and to-day it would be a bold man who would predict what will happen in Russia tomorrow. Where man-power is available, armaments are easily obtained. And so, setting aside the combat of to-day as a mere preliminary center, one can with almost mathematical certainty figure out Armageddon. Four hundred and fifty million Mongols, two hundred million Slavs; one hundred and fifty million Pan-Angles, broken up into seven units, far lower in birth-rate than either of their swarming rivals, and holding at present vast areas of empty fertile lands, which the Eastern hordes must covet. Is it not time, says Mr. Kennedy, that Britain and American might read this book.

Into the closer details of such a union Mr. Kennedy, wisely does not go; and the march of events is now so rapid that any detailed suggestion offered might pass rapidly out of date. He considers, however, that a federal system, already well tried in four of our nations, offers the best solution of the problem.

We should have been glad to see him deal with one of the great outstanding difficulties of union between our Empire and the United States. We refer to the monarchy. A Crown is essential to our Empire; it is the golden link between the six free nations, and the only head to which our vast majority of dark-skinned fellow-citizens can as yet give allegiance. There will have to be a vast change in the balance of the Empire before a majority of its white inhabitants are willing to relinquish the Crown, which never stood firmer than to-day. Then could America accept it and remodel her system to ours? For ours is in some ways the better. Mr. Kennedy himself recognizes the greater flexibility of the British system, where public opinion can remove a Prime Minister any day while the American President is irremovable for four years and his ministers are not, in the British sense, responsible to the Legislature.

But this, and similar criticisms, deal after all only with matters of detail. The machinery can be arranged without difficulty when once our statesmen and peoples receive the vision. Meanwhile Mr. Kennedy says "to the Pan-Angle reader, wherever he be . . . these pages are addressed in hopes of helping each of us better to understand each other, and to remind

Flashes and Crashes.

Hits About Thunder and Lightning.
A wet winter means a thunder-and-lightning summer.

Lightning travels nearly a million times faster than thunder. Lightning does not generate heat in its path unless obstructed. Sheet lightning is but the reflection on the clouds of a flash elsewhere. Forked lightning is due to the dividing of the flash by certain objects it approaches.

Keys, watches, rings and brooches increase the danger of being struck by lightning. The cause of death by lightning is the destruction of the nerves by the electric current. Thunder is the noise made by the concussion of the air closing after being parted by a lightning flash.

The safest place in a thunderstorm is 25 feet from some tall tree or building, if running water is not near. When lightning fuses metal it is because the latter is too small to give a proper path for the electric current. "Rolling Thunder" is the echoes of the peal reverberating among cloud masses or terrestrial objects. When thunder comes as one vast crash the earth and the sound reaches our ears at the same moment. A person is actually killed by lightning only when the current passes through his body on its way to the earth.

A thunderstorm rarely succeeds wet weather; the electric fluid being carried by the rain gradually to the earth. The danger spots in a thunderstorm are near a tree, a lofty building, a river, any running water, or in a crowd. When lightning strikes a tree it runs between the bark and the wood, and if resisted by knots, strips the former off. An electric shock is felt most at the elbow joint; the latter obstructs the current, which leaps from one bone to the other.

Lightning is a great sanitary agent; it produces nitric-acid in the air, which destroys putrid exhalations from the earth.

Lightning is the rush of one kind of electricity from a cloud to unite itself with another kind, in a cloud or in the earth. An iron bedstead is not dangerous in a thunderstorm. The electric current would choose it in preference to the human body.

Summer lightning "without thunder" is because the disturbance is so far distant that the thunder sound is lost before it reaches us. It is safer to be wet than dry during a thunderstorm. Wet clothes would conduct the electricity harmlessly over the surface of the body.

Lightning conductors are made of copper, that metal being the best conductor, not easily fused, and less liable to injury by the weather. Fulgurites, sometimes mistaken for "thunderbolts," are hollow tubes caused by the fusion of the flinty matter in the soil by lightning. Lightning is prevalent in the summer and autumn because of the great evaporation, the conversion of water into vapour developing electricity.

Lightning clouds may touch the earth with one of their edges, or be four or five miles up. They rarely discharge when more than 700 yards above the earth. Zig-zag lightning is caused by the flash seeking a path of least resistance, the air in front of it being condensed. It thus flies from side to side, or "zig-zags."—Pearson's Weekly.

Will Help Build Trenches Where Relatives Died.

Henry B. Steer, Albany High School Boy, Joins Tenth Reserve Engineers and Expects Immediate Service in France.

Anxious to serve under the Stars and Stripes, Henry B. Steer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred T. Steer, of 2 Leonard Place, is ready to go to the battlefields of France where five members of his family have found graves while serving under the British flag. Young Steer graduated from the Albany High School in 1909, spent two years in the State College for Teachers and then secured the degree of M. F. from Cornell in 1915 and has since worked for Uncle Sam as forest assistant in the Indian service.

Steer's father is a native of Newfoundland but has made his home in Albany the past 25 years. Four cousins of the young Albany volunteer, Captains Bernard P. and Eric S. Ayre (they were brothers) and Second Lieutenants Gerald and Wilfrid Ayre lost their lives with the Newfoundland troops in the deadly struggle at Beaumont Hamel July 1 last year. Young Steer's father speaking of that battle to-day said that 1,600 men went into the struggle and only 67 came out alive.

The other member of the family who gave up his life in the great war for democracy was Private George H. Hayward, a nephew of the elder Albany Steer. He belonged to the First Royal Fusiliers of London and enlisted while studying for the ministry at Oxford, where he held the Rhodes scholarship for Newfoundland. He met death as a member of a bomb throwing squad in the great drive on Messines Ridge a few weeks ago.

The Albany boy who now offers his services to his father's adopted country has been stationed at various Indian reservations in North Carolina, Montana and Minnesota and for the past year has been at the Quinalt reservation in Washington. He has obtained a furlough from the Indian service and has enlisted in the Tenth reserve engineers and is now at Vancouver.

This regiment is composed of 2,000 men skilled in woods work and picked at large from the country by the United States service. It is officered by men selected from the government forestry service, and from private concerns who are experts in the milling and lumber business.

The regiment, which is organized at the request of the Allies, will have as its task the supplying of trench timbers and other wooden construction materials, also railroad ties, etc. The training and equipment of its men will be the same as that given the United States regulars.

The regiment is now being assembled at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and after a brief period of training will be sent immediately to the front in France.—Albany Journal.

Allied Powers Must Aid Russia Without Delay.

No Time for Diplomacy, Says Representative in America—Russia Means to do Full Share.

New York, July 24.—"The Allied countries—and especially the United States—fighting with Russia for a common cause, must help Russia, and help immediately. There is no time for the usual diplomatic ceremonial. A moment now lost cannot perhaps be made up in years."

"Help the new Government of Russia—the new Government which is supported by all the people and is strong and authoritative enough to make Russia once more a fighting power for democracy. Help this Government to organize and reconstruct the country. Relieve the enormous suffering of the Russian people and believe in Russia, believe in the creative instinct of democracy struggling for life."

A. J. Sack, Director of the Official Russian Information Bureau, thoroughly aware of Russia's present situation, voiced this appeal to the world's democracies to-day in a special statement written for the United Press.

The statement follows:
"By A. J. Sack, Director of the Russian Information Bureau.

"The key to the Russian political situation is that the Russian Socialist parties are the rulers of the country. The All-Russian Peasants' Congress proclaimed as their party the Socialist revolutionists—Kerensky's party. The workers in the cities proclaimed the Social-Democratic party as theirs. Since the Russian peasantry alone constitutes about 85 per cent. of the entire Russian population, you may see that the two great Russian Socialist parties are the predominant factor in the present political situation.

"The first coalition Cabinet, in which only one Socialist, A. P. Kerensky, participated, was not successful, and logically had to fall because the structure of the Cabinet did not correspond with the structure and proportionate power of the political parties in Russia.

"In the second Cabinet, six Socialist leaders participated, and therefore this Cabinet had more power and was able to pursue a definite military policy which culminated in the offensive led by the Socialist Minister Kerensky.

"This offensive will continue, because the overwhelming majority of the people, including almost all the Socialist elements and the most prominent Socialist leaders, support it. Against it is only a negligible noisy element, consisting in part of irresponsible political fanatics and in part of German agents, spies and provocateurs.

"The task before the third Coalition Cabinet, which includes eight Socialist leaders, with Kerensky at the head, is to pursue a definite internal policy—a policy of quieting the noisy elements endangering Russian liberty. The Government of Russia, feeling full responsibility to the country and to humanity, will be fronthanded in dealing with the internal enemies of Russia. They can no longer be tolerated. They will no longer be tolerated.

"Russia will accomplish its duty to the Allied democracies and to herself, but the gravity of the situation must not be underestimated. The real difficulty, however, is in the disorganization of the country, exhausted after three years of war and the terrible crimes committed by the old regime.

"The transportation system is inefficient; the food situation is so acute that there have been many cases of death by starvation in the interior provinces; the financial system is tottering. These are the real problems confronting the Government—not the issues raised by a few noisy elements. These latter can be quieted overnight.

"The Allied countries, and especially the United States, fighting with Russia for a common cause, must help Russia, and help immediately. There is no time for the usual diplomatic ceremonial. A moment now lost cannot perhaps be made up in years.

"Help the new Government of Russia—the new Government which is supported by all the people and is strong and authoritative enough to make Russia once more a fighting power for democracy. Help this Government to organize and reconstruct the country. Relieve the enormous suffering of the Russian people and believe in Russia, believe in the creative instinct of democracy struggling for life."
