CHAPTER XXXIII.
A DISCOVERY.

"I've brought you back your charge, madam," said Eliot.

Miss Deborah was engaged in an animated conversation with the old dowager beside her, and Eliot had to repeat his little speech before he could attract her attention; then she turned her head, looked up at him with a smile, and to his amazement and discomfiture, rose slowly, and stared at him, her face working.

"What's your name?" she demanded, after an embarrassing pause.

"Eliot Graham," said Eliot.

"Graham!" she echoed with a gasp. "It's all right, man," said Stripley, soothingly. "Come with me and get a cup of tea. I'm hankering for one myself."

Miss Deborah still stared confusedly at Eliot; but Mr. Stripley, gesticulating warningly to Nora, drew Miss Deborah's arm within his and led her off, leaving Eliot Graham standing, like a stock of stone with bewildered, watching them disappear.

Eliot felt the beautiful eyes of the Lady of the Night flashing through her mask at him inquiringly, as if she, too, were wondering at Miss Deborah's agitation; but she did not speak, and a gentleman coming up to claim her for the next dance, she went away with him, leaving Eliot still gazing, first after her and then after Mr. Stripley and the old lady.

He was so absorbed that Wedderburn, coming up, had to address him twice before he could attract his attention.

"You look as if your wits were wool-gathering, Eliot," he said, with a laugh. "Listen to your late partner, eh? I'm not surprised; I'll wager anything that the face behind that mask is one of the most beautiful in the room. The affair is going with a swing, isn't it? Sir Joseph really is a wonderful man—of course, it's his doing, he has stage-managed the whole thing; that poor little wife of his is only a lay figure. And, of course, people are influenced by social success, especially such as this. You see he'll float that Company, and the shares will be at a premium before the week's up."

"What Company?" asked Eliot.

"Good heavens! do you mean to say you don't know!" said Wedderburn. "Why, the great Byworthy Copper Company, of course!"

Eliot did not start, but he stared at Wedderburn. "Tell me about it," he said.

Wedderburn laughed again. "That would be rather a long story," he said. "But, my good fellow! I thought everybody in London was talking and thinking of nothing else but the great Byworthy Copper Company. There is just that touch of romance in it that catches the public. It appears that Sir Joseph while botanizing—down in Devonshire, found indications of copper on the land of one of his neighbours—I can't think of that man's name for the moment.—Of course, Sir Joseph kept the discovery to himself and bought the land for a mere song. That's the way it usually done; but the romance comes in on the fact that the land belonged to this neighbour's daughter. I've got his name now! Rival. It's rather hard on her, for, of course, if she had known of the existence of the copper she could have sold the land for an immense sum, or, indeed, seen anything of her.—What's the matter?" he broke off, for Eliot's face had grown still grimmer, and he uttered a stifled exclamation.

"Do you know any more?" asked Eliot in a queer voice.

"No," said Wedderburn. "You seem rather interested. Look here, if you want all the particulars, you should look up a man named Stripley, a kind of clerk of Sir Joseph's. He's here tonight; going about advertising this Company, so to speak."

Eliot rose, his lips tightly shut. Without a word he went in search of Stripley, and found that interesting individual in a small ante-room; he was alone, and seated in front of a huge raised pile, beside which stood a bottle of champagne. Mr. Stripley was devouring this rich fare with evident gusto. At sight of Eliot's grave, grim face, Mr. Stripley's mouth opened and his jaw dropped, and he rose obediently, as Eliot said firmly and in a tone Mr. Stripley had not yet heard him use.

"I want a word with you, Mr. Stripley. I won't keep you from your supper for more than a minute or two. I want to ask you about the copper mine at Byworthy."

"Don't!" exclaimed Mr. Stripley, clutching Eliot's arm in a frenzy of appeal. "Don't ask any questions, my dear young girl! Pray, pray, let things go on! They are going all right, I assure you. Just put your trust in Stripley; he's doing his best—"

At that moment Mr. Selwyn Ferrand entered the ante-room. He was dressed as a cavalier, and, at a glance, Eliot saw, by Selwyn's nifty gait, flushed face, and blinking eyes that he had been drinking. He had a bottle of champagne in one hand, and a glass in the other, and was looking for some quiet corner in which he could rest and take his drink.

At sight of Stripley and Eliot, Mr. Selwyn stopped short, and bestowed a sneer on each of them with liberal equality.

"What the devil are you two—blowing here?" he demanded. The question covered both, but his eyes were fixed insistently on Eliot. "Things are coming all right—a pretty pass what our servants dress themselves up—hic—and have the impudence to appear in the ballroom! You've no business—hic—here on the stairs, or the hitchen or the stable or wherever it is—hic—you belong. You can eat and drink there till you burst; but you shall do it upstairs here while—hic—I'm master."

He waved his hand with an air of insolent command, and, his fingers being as unsteady as his legs, he dropped the tumbler.

"Here, you! pick this up," he said to Stripley, kicking the broken glass towards him; "and you," he nodded as insistently at Eliot, "go and bring me another glass."

CHAPTER XXXIV.
THE TEMPTATION.

Eliot's face flushed, and he took a step towards the tsey idiot; but Mr. Stripley clung on his arm, his eyes shooting direful glances at his master's son.

"No, let him alone! Not yet, Mr. Eliot, not yet! Go away, sir, go away, sir—it's tempting, I know; but you mustn't do it, not here, not now!"

Howling and scraping, he slid up to Selwyn and murmured, with his usual meekness, "Certainly, Mr. Selwyn; come with me; I'll get you a hot glass, and find you a nice easy sofa to rest on."

Looking over his shoulder at Eliot, and omitting a loud gasp, he disappeared, less than to be one of scorn, Mr. Selwyn suffered himself to be led away by Mr. Stripley.

Eliot sank to the chair and rested his head on his hands. This affair of the Byworthy Copper Mine had not only startled him, but filled him with vague forebodings of uneasiness. He told himself that Nora was nothing to him now; she had married and disappeared from his life; but, notwithstanding, he felt that he had heard of her, and he thought upon the piece of knavery by which Sir Joseph had robbed her; for it was nothing short of sheer, bare-faced robbery, and he felt that he had heard had awakened his memory, his love for Nora, which, somehow or other, had slept during the time she was in London. And strangely enough, as he thought of her, the figure, the voice, of this lady of the night, crossed his mind and joined the figure and the voice of Nora, as form and objects are merged in a dissolving view.

Suddenly he felt a soft touch on his shoulder, and looking up, with a start, he found Florence Bartley leaning over him; leaning so closely that her face almost touched his.

Stop Any Corn
any minute, in this simple way

You can end any corn when you will. You can stop it any minute by a touch.

Apply Blue-jay—the liquid or the plaster. The pain will cease. In a few days the whitest, corn will loosen and come out.

This happens to at least 20 million corns a year. It will happen to yours when you say—

The way is modern, gentle, scientific. It is not like the old harsh treatments.

It ends corns—removes them—while paring only keeps them.

It is made by a surgical dressing house which every physician knows.

You do yourself injustice if you let corns spoil one hour. Millions have learned to avoid them. Frye out their way tonight.

Surely you don't mind: you don't care for such a thing as that!" she murmured, in which he unjustly attempted to convince his audience that the yearning tenderness in her eyes, in the whisper which had almost sunk to a voice.

The Two Unfortunate Princes.

On June 23, 1483, Dr. Ralph Shaw, brother to the then Lord Mayor of London, preached a sermon at St. Paul's Cross, in which he unjustly attempted to convince his audience that Edward IV. had been previously married to a Lady Butler, in consequence of which Edward V. being his son by Elizabeth Woodville, was illegitimate, and, therefore, not the rightful heir to the Crown. The congregation received this sermon in amazed silence, but London was practically overruled by the presence of a large number of retainers, of the Duke of Gloucester and the Duke of Buckingham, who were anxious to get rid of Edward, and his brother Richard, Duke of York. When Edward IV. died, leaving behind him two sons, and several daughters, the need of a regency was obvious. The young King was at Ludlow in the hands of the Queen-mother's brother and son, Rivers and Grey, and the young Duke of York was with the Queen herself in London, so that the advantages lay with the Queen's family for securing the regency to her. But they were unpopular, and Gloucester, who was in the north knew that he could count upon strong support in securing the regency for himself. So in company with the Duke of Buckingham he overtook Edward and his escort on their way to London, and forthwith arrested Rivers and Grey. The boy King was then led with a mockery of public honours to the city, and cast into the Tower. The Queen-mother was forced to part also with Richard, who was later committed to the same prison, and there the two boys, bused with their sports, lived all unconscious of the dark web which was slowly enfolding them, and which later led to their assassination.

Made Him Fed Up.

Three doctors were operating on a man for appendicitis. After the operation was completed one of the doctors missed a small sponge. The patient was opened, the sponge found within, and the man sewed up again. Immediately the second doctor missed a needle. Again the patient was opened and closed. Then the third doctor missed a pair of scissors.

"Gentlemen," said the patient, as they were about to operate again, "for heaven's sake, if you're going to keep this up, put buttons on me!"

Why There Must be a Plebiscite.

Editor Evening Telegram

Dear Sir—As a Prohibitionist of ardent conviction I plead for a plebiscite. By a plebiscite Prohibition will be saved. Without a plebiscite Prohibition will steadily lose ground until only a memory—and that a bitter one—will remain of it. Prohibition failed because—Mr. Warwick Smith says—it was a law given to the people to obey, when as a matter of fact there was not that sympathy and support essential to the workableness of any law. What happened? A temporary sentiment was whipped up and the plebiscite taken. The necessary vote was secured. The law was placed on the statute book and certain machinery set in motion. Prohibition was ostensibly the law of things. But was it? Let each answer for himself. The law once on the statute book, the Prohibitionists hurriedly wiped their brows and sat placidly with a "Now-see-what-Prohibition-will-do" look. We know what it did do. Great benefits resulted—especially in the city. Great evils resulted. But clearly Prohibition didn't do what it was to have done. Why? Because the sentiment on which it was constructed was a temporary sentiment—and when that crumbled Prohibition crumbled. The moral is this: that a law cannot succeed unless the people want it to succeed and are anxious that it does succeed—in other words, unless public opinion is with it. Especially so is this the case in a law which by the nature of it radically changes the habits of many people.

The Prohibitionists sat by. The law, forced out of an unwilling and reluctant Government, was left in the hands of that, and succeeding Governments to be carried out! Crazy. Years go by. The law has gotten steadily worse. Suddenly, (Prohibitionists having had it forced on them that the law had't gone right) with a flourish of trumpets, and much ado, there is held a meeting to demand that the Government "carry out the law." A year rolls by. Things have gotten steadily worse and a plebiscite is mooted—to ascertain what the people think of all this. Prohibitionists get scared. They don't want a plebiscite—at least, some of them don't. "There is the Royal Commission's report; follow that," they cry. Why is this? Is it that they don't relish the idea of getting to work to save things? Or is it that they don't or won't see that Prohibition has petered out? Or is it that they really and genuinely believe that the Commission's recommendations, if carried out, will work the required trick?

The Prohibitionists should have taken a leaf from the American book of examples. When Prohibitionists in America wanted a law put on the statute book they worked for it—and it was some work. After heroic effort in lobbying in all the states, after sending out convincing of legislators, after enormous massing of forces, the law was placed. But it was then that the Prohibitionists got to work! Having gotten the desired law placed, did they leave it to the Government to carry it out? Not they! They carried it out and do carry it out. They see that the law is observed—they don't leave it to wets or half-drys to carry out a dry law. No! A continuous stream of educational propaganda flows from their headquarters—and by it the American people are kept Prohibitionists. The wets, too, propagandized—but, shied by sheet, pamphlet, by pamphlet, book by book, paper by paper, they are blocked by the dries. In this country it was not so. The wets, it is true, fell down on the job of fighting the Prohibition bill in the beginning. But it was when it became law that their fight began. By constant, insidious sabotage and propaganda, they helped make the law unpopular and therefore unworkable; the dries were still smiling the beatific smile of contentment and waiting for results; and the act was never carried out. How has Prohibition failed? How could it help failing?

As I have said before, Prohibition has less hold on the people now than at any time since the law was made. If nothing radical is done it will lose and lose its hold until there is none left. This is the psychological moment. Prohibition is at the parting of the ways. It must go on or it must go back.

To sum up: Prohibition failed in so far as it did fail because it was obtained on a temporary sentiment, and that sentiment was allowed to die out; hence the law became unpopular and in some cases distasteful; hence it was not carried out. Three reasons: No favorable sentiment, faulty construction of act, no attempt at carrying out. Attend to these, friend Prohibitionists, and Prohibition will be saved. Ignore these and Prohibition is wrecked. To-morrow I will, with the Editor's permission, outline what appears to me to be a good working programme for prohibition forces.

Yours sincerely,
J. R. SMALLWOOD.

A COMFORTING FORECAST.
LONDON, June 23.
Speaking to-night in the House of Commons Premier Lloyd George said that from slight material and information received, he expected there would shortly be a substantial trade boom.

COALITION REVOLT ABORTIVE.
LONDON, June 23.
Proceedings in the House of Commons to-night afforded the best test of the reality of the so-called Coalition revolt against Premier Lloyd George. On the vote on Cabinet offices, occasion was taken to discuss Dr. Christy's position as Minister with portfolio, whose £5,000 salary is proposed to be the main grounds of protest by the reactionaries against the Government. There was certainly some criticism, but no evidence of organized revolt. The Government was never in danger. Premier Lloyd George, however, while defending the appointment of Dr. Addison, announced that it would be discontinued.

ULSTER'S RECONCILIATION POLICY.
BELFAST, June 23.
In line with his expressed desire to meet Esmonde de Valera, the Council of all Ireland, provided for under the Home Rule Act, Sir James Craig, Ulster Premier, was to-day nominated by the Ulster House of Commons, prior to adjournment of Parliament to-day. Other members for the Commons and Senate were nominated. At a business session of both houses, this morning, the King's speech, distinct from the message received yesterday was read. It emphasized the provisions of an All-Ireland Council with the hope it might lead to the establishment of peace throughout the country. The speech suggested, as subjects of legislation, remodelling of the Educational system throughout the country, amendments to the licensing law, improvement of Agriculture, and trade development. The speech urged the duty of protecting the safety of persons and property, to furnish such an example of wise and just Government, that shall inspire confidence throughout the country and thus contribute to healing the difference that have long disturbed Ireland.

MAY POSTPONE DISCUSSION.
LONDON, June 23.
Lord Curzon, Foreign Secretary, announced in a speech in the House of Lords to-day, that if, as he expected, the League of Nations decided to postpone its discussion of the mandate in deference to the wishes of the United States, and suggested entering into communication with the Washington Government, the British Government would willingly agree.

INTIMIDATION PREVENTS RETURN.
LONDON, June 23.
In all British coal fields, where the miners have returned to work, they are subjected to intimidation by strikers. So far there has not been much actual violence, but fear of it is preventing the re-opening of many pits. The miners' leaders will assemble in London to-morrow to prepare for the conference of representatives of Unions threatened with a wage reduction, which has been called for Saturday. At this conference the miners will press for a general strike involving five million additional men, but it is generally believed their plans will prove abortive. Much re-orientation has developed within the Miners' Federation itself. A leading member of an important Nottinghamshire Branch of the Federation publicly declared last night that all suffering which the strike had imposed could be laid at the door of the element among the Welsh miners, who were out to exploit the capitalistic system. They should produce coal, not try to exploit others, he added.

SOVIET VS. SANE.
DENVER, June 23.
Government ownership of railways and nationalization of mines are the two major issues on which John Lewis hopes to win the presidency of the American Federation of Labor, it was learned to-day. On the other hand President Gompers was driving for re-election upon his record of the past forty-one years as leader in the Labor movement of the continent. The issues between the two candidates are clear, as Gompers has already gone on record as against Government ownership, unemployment, insurance, health insurance, and other similar proposed legislative measures, all of which Lewis has declared for.

A BOMBING.
LONDON, June 23.
A despatch to Press Association from Dublin says there is good reason for stating that Esmonde De Valera was arrested on Wednesday night at Black Rock, County Dublin, but that he was liberated to-day without a charge having been preferred against him.

BANK RATE FALLS.
LONDON, June 23.
The Bank of England sprang a surprise upon the money market to-day by reducing its rate of discount from 4½ to 4 per cent. It had been thought that the bank would abstain from any reduction in the rate pending settlement of labor troubles, and it is believed the chief reason for deciding the lower rate was the necessity that the Treasury be able to borrow money more cheaply.

GREENWOOD ADDRESSES FORCES.
BELFAST, June 23.
Sir Hamar Greenwood, addressing mixed Crown forces here to-day, said the final phase of the struggle in Ireland was being fought by the forces, he said, had no quarrel with the Irish people, but wanted to rescue them from a criminal minority, which held life cheaply to the cause of civilization. He exhorted his hearers to stick to their duty in the "murder campaign" and to maintain discipline regardless of provocation.

The Melrose Abbey Heart.

NO ASSOCIATION WITH BRUCE.

An authoritative statement has been issued by the Ancient Monuments Association as to the result excavations at Melrose Abbey, which should dispose of the many wild and misleading stories which have been given circulation regarding the alleged finding of the heart of Robert the Bruce. The experts state emphatically that there is no indication whatever to suggest in whose bosom the heart originally beat.

The nature of the cone-shaped vessel of lead in which the heart was found, and the position in which it was found, do not suggest reverent burial, and, as a matter of fact, there was recently found empty a similar cone-shaped vessel, but slightly larger, along with some mediæval vessels of pottery which were taken in fragments from a water channel. These fragments, which have been pieced together and classified, comprise the most complete collection of mediæval pottery so far recorded from any locality in Scotland.

HOPELESSLY INCAPABLE.

Before the House of Assembly adjourned on Friday last, Sir M. P. Cashin gave notice that unless the Government came down to the House with a concrete policy the members sitting on the right hand of the Speaker would block all attempts at speculative legislation introduced by the Prime Minister.

Mr. Coaker was undoubtedly beguiled. Such a statement has to be made advisedly, because there are so many people searching the newspapers to-day, and making an extra scrutiny in order to discover if there are any causes for libel, by which they can make a few dollars on the side, without material expense to themselves.

A most peculiar situation arising out of the present is that there is an attempt made to stifle the right of free speech. During recent months no newspaper dares to tell the truth as it exists, because in so doing it lays itself open to suit at law for libel, and there are those who are only too delighted to come down heavily upon an ordinary expression of opinion, made without malice or prejudice.

Opposition, and that their first business is to embarrass and criticise the Government, not to build a ladder by which the Premier and his erudite following may ascend from the pit into which they have cast themselves. The members of the Opposition who voted for the indemnification of the Government on the Argentina Railway Bill, might just as well cross the House and align themselves with the apostles of silence who without saying a word, have bulldozed certain members opposed to the Government, ostensibly to grant absolution for a deed, for the perpetration of which the chief criminal should be hanged summarily.

Newfoundland's Natal Day.

Four hundred and twenty-four years ago to-day, the good ship Matthew, which was chartered by one Jean Cabot, a veteran sailor, and fitted out by Bristol merchants, arrived off the coast of Newfoundland. Of Cabot's trip we know little to-day beyond the fact that he set sail from Bristol on May 2nd, 1497, in the Matthew with his son Sebastian and 18 companions, and that they discovered our island on June 25th of the same year.

The Unemployed Soldiers.

Major B. Butler takes the Telegram to task, in a communication addressed to the editor to-day, for a reporter's item appearing in yesterday's issue, in which it was stated that up to that hour none of the men had received any work. Of his own statements we leave it to the editor or himself to tell whether that which he wrote was correct or incorrect.

Celebrating Natal Day.

The Unemployed Workmen's Committee are holding a meeting and concert in the L.S.P.U. rooms to-night for the purpose of celebrating in a fitting manner the Natal Day of Newfoundland.

McMurdo's Store News.

FRIDAY, June 24. Nuxated Iron seems to be more and more popular and appears to be one of those preparations of iron which on account of their portability are easily taken, and which because they are quickly assimilated, show effects almost as soon as the patient begins to take them.

The Squires Tariff.

It was rumored to-day that the Government had accepted the suggestion made by the Trade to impose a straight tariff and that it had placed the tax at 60%, which would cover the present surtax, super tax and sales tax. We learn, however, that it is the Government's intention to continue the present sales tax with certain amendments. This sales tax is generally regarded as an abomination, and from it nothing is heard. To-day a gentleman passing entries at the Customs House had to pay this tax on a commercial service. The tax is also being collected on salt used by the fishermen. The Squires tariff, it would seem, has gone the limit. Flour is now taxed 115% on the original duty, and harrowed, seed, and more than that was a few months ago.

Methodist Conference.

THURSDAY, June 23. The morning was devoted to Committee work, several committees meeting to consider the various memorials of the several Districts. The afternoon session opened at 2.30 o'clock. The report of the Church Property Committee was presented and its recommendations accepted by the Conference.

OUR VISITORS.

At this stage the visitors of the Conference were introduced to the members by the President. The first visitor to receive the greeting of the Conference was Rev. S. Dean from the Department of Toronto. Briefly replying, he expressed his joy at being present at the Conference. He will have an opportunity of speaking during the work of the Department which he so well represents, later.

DELEGATIONS.

The Conference very kindly welcomed a delegation from the Woman's Missionary Society. Mrs. E. Lindsay, the President, addressed the Conference in his behalf and in a very lucid way spoke of the work done by the organization during the last forty years. During that period three and a half million dollars have been raised for Missions. The past year has been successful in every way, and they are able to report increases in membership and finances. To-day there are 27 Auxiliaries, 41 Bands, 4,880 members in Newfoundland. Mrs. Lindsay pleaded for sympathy and co-operation, and in her concluding remarks referred to two Newfoundland ladies who have recently completed their lives for work in the Foreign Field—Miss I. Winsor of Wesleyville, and Miss W. Harris, daughter of Rev. Wm. Harris of this Conference. The President of the Conference, at the close of the address, briefly asked God's blessing on the work which they were about to undertake.

BIBLE SOCIETY.

The delegation consisted of Rev. Canon Bell, D.C.L., Rev. Mr. A. Mews, Esq., C.M.G. Mr. Mews spoke first and appealed for the wholehearted support of the minister and lay members of the Conference. In his brief address, Rev. Mr. Clayton pleaded for the Society, bringing his appeal on the beneficent work of the Society amongst the soldiers, and commending the work of the Society in the judgment of the conference for united service, an opportunity for the several denominations to work together. Dr. Bell is always a welcome visitor to our Conference, and his members were delighted to greet him again.

REPORTS.

The report of the Committee on Social Service and Evangelicalism was submitted. The report was so important that it was deferred until the hands of the Conference, and it will be the subject of debate again. LECTURE BY PROF. FAULKNER. A representative congregation assembled to hear the first lecture in the series announced. The President presided. Prayer was offered by Rev. D. B. Harding, and the lesson was read by Rev. C. Blount. The lecturer addressed himself to the task of showing "How Jew and Greek prepared the way for Christianity."

House of Assembly.

THURSDAY, June 23. The Argentinia Railway Bill and the amendment to the Road Act passed the House yesterday after one of the longest sittings for the present session, adjournment not being taken until 3 o'clock this morning. The greater part of the session was occupied with a discussion on the Argentinia Railway Act. Amongst other things which occurred during the session, a new phrase, to wit, "buccannery practice," was coined by Mr. Sullivan, whilst Sir Michael Cashin addressed Mr. Coaker's already innumerable titles, that of "Minister of Railways."

was through with it. Instead of its present name the Bill should be called an Act to legalize the improper actions of an incompetent Government. Mr. Sullivan said he was voting for the Bill because otherwise the people of Argentinia would have to suffer from the "buccannery practice" of the Government. Mr. Bennett was also of the opinion that the Bill would have to be passed no matter how unwilling members were to whitewash any actions of the Government. He said that there could be no justification for the expenditure on the Argentinia Terminal. The building of this terminal was only another step made by Mr. Coaker towards making the grass grow on Water Street. He had seen himself, what destruction had been done on people's lands through the building of the terminal, but if these people were to be compensated the Bill would have to go through.

Newfoundland.

Oh, Newfoundland my native home Land of the brave and free I love thee by thy rugged coast Thy sparkling clear blue sea The caves and bays that girt thy shore Thy hills that like sentinels stand And guard the entrance to our home The Isle of Newfoundland. As nature in her onward course The seasons changes round From the bright dew of autumn's morn To winter's snow clad ground. So shall we all with one accord In freedom's path will stand And live or die for our old home, The Isle of Newfoundland. The waters of thy inland lakes With fishes do abound Thrive on thy mossy tableland The Caribou is found. Around thy coast in winter time The vast ice-fields expand And guard the entrance to our home, The Isle of Newfoundland. So shall we all as days go by Our hearts be glad and true And ask that God will bless our Isle And gifts of plenty bring. Then over yon horizon Will sound the trumpet grand And we'll bless the land that gave us birth. The Isle of Newfoundland. ELI CURTIS. King Cove, B.B.

Archibald Endorsed by District.

HARBOR GRACE STANDS BY INDEPENDENT REPRESENTATIVE Special to Evening Telegram. H.R. GRACE, June 23. Mr. F. C. Archibald, M.H.A., addressed a public meeting at Spaulding's Bay last night at 8 o'clock. At its close the meeting passed a vote of thanks to the member, and by a unanimous vote passed a set of resolutions approving of his action. This was then signed by every man present. Mr. Archibald then proceeded to Island Cove, where he found the Hall crowded, including galleries, waiting for him. He addressed the audience from 8.30 p.m. to 11.30 p.m. Resolutions of approval were passed and signed by all present, absolutely unanimous. Legislative Council.

THURSDAY, June 23. The session opened at 4 p.m. The Bill entitled "An Act to amend the Law Society Act" and "An Act to confirm an agreement between the Government and the D'Arcy Exploration Co., Ltd." passed third reading. The Bill repealing the Codfish Exportation Act, passed the third reading. Before the Bill went through its final stages, Hon. Frank McNamee availed of the opportunity to say a few words on the Act which was being repealed. He said that he was much surprised to find that the Government was proposing to repeal the Act. He believed there would be universal rejoicing throughout the island at the passing of a measure which wipes the infamous Codfish Exportation Act of the Statute Book. He said that whilst the Bill was in the Council, the principal movers were our business concerns which had practically been brought to the verge of bankruptcy, and he could but sympathize with them and offer his sincere condolence in their bereavement. The Hon. gentleman in reviewing the Bill, had referred to the Bill since its inception said he was always firmly convinced that it was an impossible and therefore unworkable piece of legislation. He had argued that it was impossible to regulate the price of an article of food by legislation, and unless we controlled all the fish in the world, we were not in a position to dictate prices to our customers. All the countries in the world were working their utmost to increase their exports of fish. He said that the Government were throttling our exports by exacting export taxes on our fish, and by quoting fixed and arbitrary prices in the market place. He asked by what right the Government were asked by our competitors. Is it any wonder that we could not do any business he asked. The conditions unfortunately brought about by the ill-timed fishery legislation and which has been our undoing, might have been foreseen by any sane person who gave the country some thought. It would not call for much commercial or business acumen to see that if we do not export we cannot import, or in other words, if we do not export we could not buy, said he. There has been one benefit derived from this measure and that is the advantage of knowing that Government control of business affairs has been a lamentable failure, and that in taking the business of the country out of the hands of the people who have successfully and profitably conducted it for generations and generations, the harm done has been greater than anything that could be done by any Government. He said that the Government should be congratulated for having taken this step. He said that the Government should be congratulated for having taken this step. He said that the Government should be congratulated for having taken this step.

To-Night's Meeting - A Test.

Dear Sir, - To-night's meeting in the Casino will be a test of public opinion. It is a public, not a committee meeting. Those who favor a bottle a week should attend in large numbers. We have no orators nor do we wish a subscription to bring your money to support the cause. If you have no money, come all the same. It is a Party meeting with no politics in it. Your true friend, I have faith enough to think that there are enough decent people in this town to fill the Casino at half-past eight. WARWICK SMITH. June 24th, 1921.

Why Abandon Placentia?

The illegal and altogether unwarranted construction of a railway to Argentinia accomplished by Hon. W. F. Coaker, that exponent of all the political and mechanical arts, and who whilst a subscriber to the Prime Minister and a corrupt Government passed an indemnity Act in the early hours of the present day, will have the effect of making the once prosperous town and port of Placentia look like a deserted village. No more cold-blooded attempt to abandon the Argentinia Capital could have been made. Our political tyro, Squires and Coaker have accomplished more mischief during their short tenure of office, than any business-like party can repair within the next decade. For that reason is it not time to turn them out, ere more damage is done? The solution of the present problem is in the power of the Opposition. Any day they can break the Government. Let Crobie go to it, and earn the everlasting gratitude of the people of Newfoundland. There can be no compromise with the political tricksters who compose the Government. Let the Opposition heed this! - COM.

With the Rod. Most of the Western rivers are in good fishing shape. Joe Ford landed a 15 pound salmon from Robinson's River on Tuesday. Numerous salmon are reported in Robinson's River, and the river is in good condition for fishing. Mr. Vandame is fishing at Robinson's River. He goes north to Hawke's Bay by the next steamer. H. Barrett and H. Brownhill, of Sydney, arrived in Curling by Sunday's express for a few days trout and salmon fishing. Allan McEwan landed five salmon from Crabbes River last week, averaging 12 pounds each; he has taken 13 fish to date. C. W. Hinman got out at Stephen's ville Crossing on Sunday to spend four weeks whipping the waters of Harry's Brook. The first salmon taken from upper pool of Harry's Brook was landed by J. L. Farooq last Thursday, and up to Sunday he had two. P. Anthony and party of three, from Sydney, N.S., fishing on Robinson's River, landed 22 salmon the past week, weights ranging from 9 to 15 lbs. It is reported that some poaching has been going on at Crabbes and Robinsons River, and we understand an investigation is being made of the matter. G. A. R. Rowlings, D. J. Buckley, A. A. McIntyre and P. Anthony, all of Sydney, are fishing on Robinson's River. They had 30 salmon up to Friday and landed two other on Saturday - Western Star, June 22. Novelty in Auctions. To Mr. Walter O'T. Kelly is due the novelty of introducing night auctions, which so far have proven popular. At 8.30 last night he auctioned a house on Franklin Avenue. The sale was attended by some 40 persons, many of whom would be unable to be present in the day time. League Football, St. George's Field, this evening, at 7.30 o'clock: B. I. S. vs. Briton. Notes from Salmonier.

A few items about our little doings in Salmonier may find space in your daily paper. The fishery, notwithstanding its discouragement this spring, has started with an active and hopeful prospect. Capt. Mike and Will MacDonald, as well as Capt. Fowler, have returned from the grounds with bumper crops. We hope that kind Providence will mete out to all engaged in this precarious, but staple industry a bountiful supply during the coming season.

An event occurred a few weeks ago which has cast a shadow of sadness over the settlement. Two young fishermen with Capt. Mike MacDonald, left the schooner to haul their trawls and failed to get back. Doubtless they are held by the crew, but the day being thick with a heavy fog, they may have got astray and will probably be heard from later. If not, we must willingly submit to the One Great Will. To the friends of these poor boys, as well as to the captain, we offer our sympathy, and trust their suspense will be raised with timely news of their safety.

During the second week in May, our people received a great spiritual treat, thanks to our good Pastor, Rev. J. Enright, who through his zeal and earnestness had arranged for a mission by the Redemptorist Fathers. The Retreat was given at St. Joseph's and Mount Carmel Churches, every member of the parish and many from nearby settlements availed of the great privileges granted to them. This first and fruitful Holy Mission of two weeks, ended with the erection and blessing of a Mission Cross at both places.

The teachers and pupils of the various schools are working hard, preparatory to the C.H.E. Examinations to be held a week hence. May their hard work and hopes be crowned with success.

The Summer with the bright sunshine and cool breezes is tempting the tourist and pleasure seeker from the busy city to the enjoyment of a holiday at Riverside Hotel. The bracing air, and the restful quiet of the place, not to speak of the cuisine of the house, are most invigorating and re-energizing.

Coffee Called Syrup of Soot.

The antagonism with which coffee was received, when it was introduced into England, two hundred and seventy years ago, was not without humor. It was said that it caused impotence, resulting not only in a decrease in the size of families, but that it was likely to make "the offspring of our mighty ancestors dwindle to a succession of apes and pygmies." In a biography of John Evelyn it is told how fun was poked at the new craze. It was declared that if you drank the dreadful black broth of "kaufi or coffee," you might just as well proceed to the consumption of old shoes. The first description of coffee to arrive in England was sent by a traveller to Constantople, who described how the people there "drank a drink called coffee, as they call it, which is black as ink, and tastes not much unlike it." The popularity of coffee grew, and Harvey, who discovered the circulation of the blood, is said to have been the first coffee-drinker in England, and its introduction decreased drunkenness in London. To quote a chronicler of the times: "The coffee drink has caused a great sobriety among all nations. Formerly apprentices, clerks, etc., used to take their morning draughts in ale, beer or wine, which made them unfit for business. Now they play the good fellow in this wakeful and civil drink."

IN BED EIGHT MONTHS

Cause—Change of Life. How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Got Me Up

Afton, Tenn.—"I want other suffering women to know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. During the Change of Life I was in bed for eight months and had two good doctors treating me but they did me no good. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did and in a short time felt better. I had all kinds of bad spells, but they all left me. Now when I feel weak and nervous I take the Vegetable Compound and it always does me good. I wish all women would try it during the Change of Life for I know it will do them good."
—Mrs. A. K. K. Afton, Tennessee.
Women from forty-five to fifty years of age should take warning from such symptoms as heat flashes, palpitation of the heart, giddiness, or fainting spells, or spots before the eyes, and prepare their system for this perfectly natural change by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has helped many, many women through this trying period, just as it did Mrs. Keller.

Alaska's Reindeer Queen

In the year 1893 Mary Antisarlok, half Russian and half Eskimo, was a pretty, round-faced, bright-eyed, sleek-haired young woman, and a newly-married bride. The United States Government had just decided to import reindeer from Siberia to Alaska and had sent Lieutenant Berthoff, in the revenue cutter Bear, to negotiate the purchase. He needed an interpreter, speaking Russian and Eskimo, and Mary was engaged.
She was glad of the opportunity, but unwilling to leave her husband; so he was engaged, too, as a sort of odd job man aboard; but Mary was the recognized head of the Antisarlok firm. She made herself intelligently and successfully useful among the natives with whom it was necessary to deal, and on returning to Alaska she was well paid with a goodly number of reindeer.
These animals were the origin of a herd that flourished and increased amazingly and became, indeed, several herds. Mary is now raiser-keeper enough to supply thousands of consumers; and reindeer meat is tender, palatable and delicious, so much so that, but for the difficulties of transportation, it would probably become a staple food throughout the country. Mary is a rich woman, but she lives simply in a cluster of cabins perched upon a rocky promontory thrusting seaward, fringed with ever-beating surf.

It is known that, although open-handed and free, Mary is a shrewd bargainer and possesses remarkable commercial sagacity. Few traders, if any, have been able to get the advantage of her in a business deal.
Family of Neglected Waifs.
Toward the hungry, the helpless and little children her tenderness is unflinching and her bounty lavish. She has no children of her own, but she has adopted a numerous family—not a pretty baby or two, carefully selected for health and charm and promise, but such forlorn, abandoned and neglected waifs and strays as came under her notice in a remote and lawless zone. There are all races and colors, declares her biographer, Nono Marquis Snyder, but Mary is mercifully color blind!

One deed of generosity, dating back to the earlier years of her prosperity, will never be forgotten in Alaska.
In 1898, only five years after the founding of her herd of reindeer, word came that more than 400 whalers and been caught in the ice packs of Point Barrow and were slowly freezing and starving. They were 500 miles away from Mary Antisarlok's snow-covered cabin, they were many more miles distant—and miles of the northern wilderness, icy, rocky, storm-swept and terrible—from sources of civilized supply.
Quite simply and as a matter of course, Mary, reserving only a few head for domestic necessity, started her whole herd of reindeer northward to the rescue. She received no personal appeal, asked no advice, awaited no instructions, made neither bargain nor effort to protect her interests. She saw her chance for first aid, and gave it, instantly and whole-heartedly.
Later the government replaced the sacrificed deer with interest and gave her the thanks she deserved. But since that day it is for more than her business ability that the reindeer queen is respected throughout Alaska.

Piety and Pandemonium

TOO MANY RELIGIONS RUIN A HAPPY HOME.
Alleging that his wife's constant changes of religion had "made a pandemonium of his happy home" and ruined his nervous system and his business, Mr. Charles Macdonough, a silk salesman, is petitioning the New Jersey courts to dissolve his marriage.
Mr. Macdonough told the court he had done his best to please his spouse, but that her religious activities had been too much for him.
They both started married life as Episcopalians (says the Daily Mail). He followed her faithfully in her progress from the Episcopalians to the Economites, Mind-readers, and Spiritualists. Faint, but plucky, he then went through the maze of Theosophy and Christian Science.
"There was nothing in our home but oceans of talk on theories and dogma. My wife argued all day and most of the night," he told the court. Then came New Thought, followed by the creed of the Angel Dancers. By this time Mr. Macdonough was hopelessly outdistanced and mentally staggering, while, according to his story, his wife harassed him incessantly.
The break came when Mrs. Macdonough, discovering flaws in the creed

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

ISN'T IT INCOMPREHENSIBLE.

The other evening I saw an unusual thing—a moving picture which did not end happily.

The hero of the story, a young lumberman, in every way likeable, is in love with a pretty little country girl. He "wins" her, at least, try-and-love him and then goes off to his lumbering. Comes a young city chauffer to the country to fish, and falls in love with the girl. She struggles against responding but cannot help it. He is not a villain but a decent young chap. The lumberman hears of their affair and instead of fighting the city chap, as his lumberman mate expects him to, gives the girl up because he sees that she really cares, and then goes off in the forest by himself and gives himself up to an abandonment of grief pitiful to witness.

One Cannot Help Pitying.

His mates call him a coward and are about to drive him out of camp when he proves that he is the opposite. The girl starts out in a canoe and finds to her horror that her paddle has been left ashore. She is borne toward the rapids and flung on a rock in the middle of them; her city lover can do nothing, but the lumberman saves her by one of those superhuman (but not supermovie!) feats of daring. Then he carries her to her city lover and gives her back. She is grateful, of course, but she loves the city man and stays with him. The final fade-out of the hero shows him standing by the rapids from which he had just rescued the girl, evidently struggling with the wish to throw himself back into them. The captions indicate that he conquers himself in the struggle, but one cannot help aching with pity for him.

But Why Must He Feel That Way!

And then, even as I pitted him there, swept over me the strangeness of it all. I don't mean the strangeness of these pictures of something that never happened and our breathless absorption in them—though that is surely a marvel and deserves a chapter of its own. But the strangeness of the thing pictured, and all that it stands for. Here is this man, young, strong, healthy, with the world before him and some millions, or is it billions, of other women in it, and yet just because he cannot have this one, it seems to him that there is nothing in the world worth while.

How does he get that way?

I don't mean that cynically as one who stands aside and watches the experiences of the rest of the world without sharing them.

I just mean how do we all get that way? How is it to be explained? The physical does not explain it for the physical can find itself another mate as easily enough.

You Can't Explain It.

Nor do any qualities possessed by the individual explain it. And whenever a lover wears his heart out for the love of some man or woman there are always plenty of others just as desirable, so far as the rest of the world can see, whom he or she might turn to.

Because it is the way of the world we take it for granted that it shall be so—but if you try to explain or analyze it, isn't it really one of the most extraordinary, inexplicable things in the world?

Wasn't Having Any.

A very rich man has a beautiful daughter. A young fellow, with no resources but his salary, fell in love with her, and asked the old gentleman for her hand. The father at once told him that he had hardly enough money to keep himself decently clothed.

"Well, sir, what you say is true; but when you married you were struggling along with even a smaller salary than mine. How did you get along?" asked the other, who thought he had made a good defence.

But not so. The crafty old money-bags thundered forth: "I lived on my father-in-law for the first ten years, but I'll be hanged if you are going to do it."

THE GLOOMY MERCHANT.

The man who's selling bacon, or sugar, shoes or shirts, should not look God-forsaken, for that appearance hurts. You talk about your losses, and mourn, while the many grievous crosses you are obliged to bear; and lo, the weary buyer will think you are a bore, and he will take a flyer to 'tother fellow's store. Be cheerful, gay and sunny, if you have things to sell, and you will cop the money, in Easy street you'll dwell. I go to buy some collars where Johnson plays his game, for I spend many dollars in doling up my frame. And Johnson is a dealer who sells me spats and pumps, for he's a gladsome splinter who never has the dumps. I go to buy a collar, a necktie and a cuff, but when I've heard him holler I buy a ton of stuff. I buy me silk suspenders, and blow all kinds of kale, lured onward by the splendors of his uplifting tale. But now and then I sally to Jimpson's necktie store, which is across the alley from Johnson's cheerful door. And Jimpson's so depressing I hasten from his hall, and leave him sadly guessing why I went there at all. I buy no collar, but I buy no spangled hose, for I am not a glutton for other people's woes. The man who's selling notions or squashes by the peck, must curb his wild emotions and not weep on my neck.

Gloving the Tongue.

A glove for the tongue has been patented by an inventor of Indiana. It is called a "tongue shield," and is designed to enable the wearer to escape the unpleasantness of castor oil or other bad tasting medicines. The contrivance might be said to have the shape of a miniature slipper without any heel-portion, but when placed over the tongue is inverted. The tongue is inserted into the "toe" part and the back part of the "sole" extends over the top of the tongue toward the throat. The device is made of thin rubber, so as to be liquid proof, and is so constructed as to fit the tongue snugly without discomfort. When medicine is taken it passes into the throat without affecting the sense of taste, so that all unpleasantness is obviated.

Our Impressions

Politically.

(Wellington, N.Z.)
Of course we visited the House when in St. John's recently on more than one occasion. We had the privilege of being in both the Government and Opposition room and of seeing the men who mold the affairs of the country.

In the House of Assembly one thing struck us most forcibly, and that was the utter silence of the Government members. Mr. Squires, now Sir R. A. Squires, had our sympathy at any rate. There he stood as sponsor for the Premier, Colonial Secretary, Finance and Customs, Agriculture and Mines, Marine and Fisheries, and beside him sat the Government members with not a word in their cheek. Of the whole time we were present, and that was several hours altogether, the only speaker from the Government benches, aside from the Prime Minister, was Mr. Jennings. How these gentlemen content themselves to sit silent hour after hour under the criticism of the Opposition passed our understanding.

On the Opposition side are a number of good speakers (we can say nothing of the ability of the Government members because they were silent) and because criticizing is always easier than constructing—they made good hits at the Government. Sir Michael Cashin has none of the heaviness of the old time speakers. He does not clasp as an orator; yet as a debater he is ready and keen, and causes the Prime Minister many uneasy moments. Mr. Bennett is heavier; speaks very loudly and without the easy conversational method of the leader of the Opposition. He seems dead in earnest. Sir John Crosbie approaches more nearly to Sir Michael's tone. He sits right up in the corner behind the Opposition Leader and leans his hands on the bench before him as he addresses the Prime Minister. He has a marvellous knowledge of business and finance, and the Premier must find his a dangerous opponent.

Mr. Higgins is another debater approaching the type of Sir Michael; very able, and quick witted. Mr. Macdonnell has a full measure of native Irish wit and uses it most effectively on occasions.

The Prime Minister looks very boyish, in spite of the burden he carries. He loves to appear in the gallery, and when he allows his scorn to appear in his voice his invective on the Opposition is always echoed by the galleries or some portion of it. The galleries are rarely silent long and there is much applause, the weight of it, however, chiefly for the Opposition; though Sir Richard gets quite a bit, too, on times.

Along the street our experience was that the clerks in the Water Street stores were nearly all Squires supporters, while the artisan and laborer was generally for the Opposition. Our orders may differ, but the conclusion they may draw from this.

It is not our purpose here to discuss politics. That will keep for future issues. This is simply meant to be a word picture of the legislators of this country on their native heath.

Politicians generally are good fellows. We had the pleasure of hobnobbing with both sides; and the picture of the Representatives of this District and ourselves discussing an ice cream soda, with the political weapons of war sheathed, would have been an excellent object lesson for men who allow their political feelings to color their every action.

Even the Chairman of the Food Control Board, who has received more than his share of attention from us was ready to shake hands and let bygones be by-gones.

Dear Sir,—The statement has been made that the bottle every three months, recommended by the Royal Commission, is only intended for medicinal purposes. The words of the Report are as follows:

"Your Commissioners consider that some quantity should be obtainable for a household, without a prescription from a medical practitioner, under as strict a safeguard as can be provided by rules and regulations not to exceed the rate of: (here follow the quantities, namely, 24 oz. spirits and 24 oz. wine and 2 doz. beer or equivalents) every three months, or the same proportion monthly or half-yearly, as the Board may deem circumstances warrant."

What I wish to call attention to specially are the words "or half-yearly." When I was giving evidence before the Commission, Dr. Jones made a statement to the following effect: (I regret that the rev. gentleman is not now in the country, but Dr. Lloyd or Dr. Curtis can bear me out.) He said that the evidence taken down north showed that people there wanted to get "a drop for Christmas and for weddings," and they wanted to get that drop in the Fall—some of them both Spring and Fall. Perhaps this will explain the "half-yearly" clause.

Quite appropriate, is it not, to drink the HEALTH of the bride in MEDICINE?

"Watch Your Feet"

Expensive But Worthless

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir:—Ever since the Government announced that it was going to place engines on the road that would be able to move mountains, there has been much speculation and many claims as to the pulling power of those engines. Some said 25 cars would be easily handled by the engines, others were not so optimistic and cut out 20 cars as a fair load, which predictions prove nothing but the ignorance of those expressing them. Why such extravagant claims were made for those engines can only be explained on the supposition that those who made them (claims) fall very short on the understanding of certain fundamental mechanical principals, laws and rules as applied to railway and locomotive engineering.

There is no formula, that I am aware of, which will enable you to calculate the "traction power" of a horse. A horse may weigh, say, 900 pounds and yet be able to pull more than a horse weighing 1000 pounds. I don't know whether it is possible to determine the strength of a horse by multiplying its length by its breadth and extract the square root of its tail. But I do know that the traction power of an engine can be found by the following fundamental powers: capacity of cylinders, boiler pressure, length of stroke and diameter of wheel. As there is no mathematical way to ascertain the actual strength of a horse, speculation about its power is permissible, but since we can mathematically demonstrate the actual tonnage that an engine can pull, speculation is, to say the least, very unmechanical and is a reflection on those who call themselves mechanical engineers. Now let us take the case of those men who put forward such wild claims for those engines and see whether we can find out on what basis those claims were made. As I stated above, the tonnage any engine can pull can be determined by means of a formula, which is well known to all good mechanics, before the engine turns a wheel. This being so, our brilliant engineers could not have based their claims on this sound mechanical basis. We must, therefore, look for some other reason for their claims, and the only conclusion I can come to is that they regard the engines in the same way that you would a horse. The engines looked big, they have difference mechanism about them. Cylindrical valve chambers replace the old rectangular valve chambers, etc. This filled their mind with a kind of awe and made them think that in some way, though they couldn't explain why, this would add to the power of the engines, which would enable them to pull twice the load of the old engines, in spite of the fact that the old engines have actually a higher drawbar pull than the new engines. This will be news for the promoters of the new engines and they will be inclined to think that I am an error, but in my next letter I will mathematically prove the truth of this assertion. It has already been proven in practice, and to the one who wishes to place recommendation the Government squandered, directly and indirectly, $300,000,—that the new engines are an utter failure. This was demonstrated at St. John's a few days ago when 15 cars were placed on one of the engines, as a light load, though it proved to be too heavy for the engine, with Merchant Says It Made Marvelous Change in Mother.

Gull Island Man Says His Mother Had Suffered Ten Years But Is Now The Picture Of Health.

"Every time I look at mother now and see her looking so well I feel like going out and telling everybody I meet about Tanlac," said Allen G. Stockwood, a prominent merchant of Gull Island, Bay de Verde district, N.F., while on a visit to St. John's.

"I never in my life have seen anything to equal the marvelous change this medicine has made in her. She had stomach trouble for ten years and for the past five years she had been suffering tortures from indigestion. She didn't dare to eat meats, fish or anything of that sort. She was so broken in health that she was practically an invalid and we had almost given up hope of seeing her well again.

"When I heard so many good things said about Tanlac I made a special trip to St. John's and got some for her. While I hoped it would help her I was not prepared for the wonderful change this medicine brought about in a short time. She eats and everything she wants now, sleeps fine and says she feels as good as she did twenty years ago. Knowing what I do about Tanlac I feel like I am doing a good turn to those who suffer when I recommend it."

The result that it staled at Bowring Park curve, which necessitated the backing up to St. John's and dropping the cars, which brought the load down to eleven cars, which still proved to be too heavy for the engine as was proven by the engine having to double all the hills between St. John's and Brigus Junction. The number of cars that an engine may have coupled to it is no indicator of the power of the engine, for my one knows that an engine can pull more empty cars than loaded cars. I mention this because I note a tendency to place a few loaded and a good many empty cars on the new engines in order to make a good showing and to try and bolster up those who brought the engines in here. Had Billy Butler, or any other Newfoundland showed such ignorance in matters such as this, and committed the country to such an unneeded expenditure for engines that are both useless and unnecessary, they would be denounced both by pulpit and press, but as long as you are a foreigner you can come in here and bring a wheelbarrow with you and tell the Government it is worth $50,000 and the money will be handed out without a quibble. But let our starving workmen ask the Government for work to enable them to feed their hungry children, and they will be told that they are unreasonable agitators and Bolsheviks.

In practice those engines have proved an economic failure. Two of them are now running between St. John's and Clarendville, and I have seen the old engines coming down from Bishop's Falls with 12 cars, and 3 of them had to be set off at Clarendville in order to make 10 cars out for those wonderful and mysterious engines. Now, supposing that each of those cars was loaded at $50, this would mean that the new engines left $150 at Clarendville, which they should have pulled to St. John's. This is more than enough to pay the expenses of running the train from Bishop's Falls to St. John's, and is a good example of the economic worthlessness of new engines, which have cost the people of this country in the neighbourhood of $600,000. In my next letter I will show why those engines laid down on their job.

Yours truly,
W. L. BUTLER,
Shoal Harbour.

The Most Ancient Order.

Freemasonry is decidedly the oldest order—it has existed from time immemorial. The precise origin of the order has yet to be ascertained, but it is not likely to be, as the early records are lost; there is, however, ample evidence to establish the claim for its antiquity, and its honorable character. An old rhyme has it that:

"If history be no ancient fable
Free Masons came from Tower of Babel."

The Mother Grand Lodge of English-speaking Masons is that of England, which was inaugurated in London on St. John Baptist's Day, 1717, by four or more old lodges, three of which still flourish. There are other lodges in London at the time, also lodges in Scotland and Ireland. Before that, in the Middle Ages, there was a guild of Masons specially engaged in building churches, the guild being called "free" because exempted by several papal bulls from the laws which bore upon common craftsmen and exempt from the burdens thrown on the working classes. Among the churches built by the guild are St. Paul's Cathedral, London, St. Dunstons, Bishop of Rochester, who built White Tower, was a grand master, so was Peter of Colchester, architect of old London Bridge. Henry VII's Chapel, Westminster, is also the work of a master mason. The order has greatly changed since those days, members of every trade and profession being now eligible for membership.

HEART'S DESIRE.

What is it the heart desires, beyond the peace of happy fires.
The kettle's merry song?
And what can gold and silver buy or all the pomp of fame supply
Which man need mourn for long?

What is there in life's luxuries, and all the drowsy ways of ease
That man should sigh to miss?
If but the home he keeps is glad with laughter, why need he be sad,
Or seek a greater bliss?

And yet men sigh from day to day,
And frown where merry children play,
And tell their tales of woe,
Because they have not come to fame
And have no lands or gold to claim—
Oh, why should this be so?

With health and laughter where he dwells,
No man should sigh for gold,
Who sits by happy fires,
And hears the kettle's merry song—
To his life's joys of life belong,
He has his heart's desire.

Then the Congregation Smiled.

Sir Harry Lauder, whose reappearance at the "halls" has been hailed with delight by his numerous admirers, has many new stories to tell.

One of the best concerns a dour old Scots minister who (says Sir Harry) arrogated to himself the right to correct openly in the presence of the congregation any member of his flock whom he deemed to have offended.

His pet aversion was seeing people leaving the church before his sermon, and one Sunday he preached a lengthy discourse condemning this unseemly practice.

On the very next Sunday his daughter, feeling faint, was forced to quit the desk as her father mounted the pulpit steps.

Seeing a young girl departing, and enraged at what he deemed her open flouting of his expressed wishes, he called out after her, "Farewell, child of the devil!"

His daughter turned round with a smile. "Good-bye, father!" she said.

LONDON GOSSIP.

PEARLS—SEE A DOCTOR.

The London pearl merchants who have just discovered that "faked pearls" which cannot be distinguished from the genuine jewel, have been made by placing artificial pearls into pearl oysters, and have been imported to England, are not resting content with a protest to the Board of Trade. Specimens of these false-hearted pearls have been taken to a Harley Street physician to see whether, under expert treatment, their fraudulent origin can be discovered. This physician has been making a study of ultra-violet rays, and has demonstrated that they can be used to distinguish between real and artificial diamonds. The pearl merchants are, therefore, paying a fee like other private patients in order to have their pearls tested by ultra-violet light or by X-rays. The need for some ready method of detecting these fakes is essential, because, failing it, all genuine pearls will be under suspicion, and will immediately deteriorate in value.

DEARER FURS.

After falling by leaps and bounds from the artificial height to which America speculation forced them in January last year, thereby involving many firms to heavy losses, and sending others into bankruptcy, fur prices have commenced to ascend again. This is evidence of returning confidence to trade, and recognition of the fact that during the slump values fell below an economic level because of absence of buyers, financial stringency, and unloading operations. At the London fur auctions now proceeding most descriptions of skins have advanced in price. Russian sable beaver, and cross and red fox have increased 10 per cent; ermine and silver fox, 15 per cent; Australian wallaby, marten, musquash, wolverine, and blue fox, 20 per cent; mink, otter, and white fox, 25 per cent; lynx and grey wolf, 35 per cent; and Australian opossum 45 per cent. Buyers from Leipzig have purchased considerable quantities of skins, while the United States has also competed keenly for certain of the pelts. As the bulk of the furs for sale in the shops next autumn were bought at the auctions last October and January, and manufacturers have reduced their profit margins, retail prices next September for fur coats, muffs, neckties, stoles, and fur-trimmed garments should be a great deal lower than they were a year earlier.

CHEAPER FURNISHED HOUSES.

An estate agent with one of the largest businesses in the West End tells me that the people who took flats, often at fantastic rents, put furniture in, and expected to draw a steady income by letting them furnished for the next ten years, are now wondering if their reasoning was sound. The anticipated American invasion is said to have started, but the visitors are not spending any length of time in London and their presence is not making any material difference to the furnished flat slump. Many houses and flats are actually being let furnished for less than 10 per cent, more than the rent, and often stand empty at the end of a tenancy. In the country the number of furnished houses on offer is also much in excess of the demand.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST PORT.

When, on July 8, the new extension of the Royal Albert Docks is opened by the King, the Port of London will stand pre-eminent as the possessor of the largest dock system in the world. The water area of the Port's docks will then exceed all areas, with a quayside of 32 miles. These figures, impressive enough to the expert, perhaps convey less to the lay mind than the statement that they double the quayside of Antwerp. The great extension which His Majesty will open has been the work of several years. It was put in hand as far back as 1912 as part of a vast scheme involving an expenditure of £14,000,000. ($56,000,000) The new dock is entered by a lock-way 1000 feet in length and 120 feet wide, and will permit the passage of the biggest vessels afloat. It has 68 acres of water with 2 1/2 miles of quayside. On the south side there are several jetties, each capable of berthing 600 feet vessels, and equipped with modern "luffing" cranes for the expeditious handling of cargoes.

A REALISTIC REHEARSAL.

M. Andre Brule, the French actor, who is appearing with his Paris company at the Prince's Theatre in a season of plays, told me to-day of an unfortunate incident that occurred whilst he was rehearsing "Coeur de Moineau." There is a boxing scene in which he became so thoroughly worked up that he knocked out his opponent, who was unconscious for five minutes. Andre Brule is an intimate friend of Carpenter, with whom he often has friendly bouts. Recently a French weekly paper organized a heavy competition for money by pitting Brule and Carpenter in a very close, towards the end, and finally Brule was voted the handsomest man in Paris.

THE MAN WHO MADE THE KINEMA.

Mr. W. Friese Greene, the man who invented the kinema thirty-two years ago, and who died suddenly last week after addressing a meeting of the industry, had shared the experience of many inventors. He opened a door which led thousands of people to fortune and he himself lived and died in poverty. The first camera he invented in 1889 for taking moving pictures was provided with glass photographic plates, but he soon hit upon the idea of using sensitized paper. He displayed the moving picture taken at Hyde Park Corner before a photographic society at the Chester Town Hall, but there was no machine for showing the photo in motion. By the following year he had invented a celluloid film and the War Office showed amatory interest in his work, but took no notice of his suggestion that film photographs taken from a balloon would be valuable in war. I am told that one of Mr. Greene's sons, who is now partner in a company for taking scenic films from aeroplanes, did good work in this line as an R.F.C. officer in France. The same informant tells me he believes that Mr. Greene, who, so far from making a fortune through his successive inventions, lost thousands of pounds over his research work, never seemed to care about this failure. He was a gentle, kindly, very sincere man, entirely engrossed and happy in his researches. He did not know how to turn his inventions to profit, and other people, developing his ideas, reaped the fortune. His ambition was to devise an inexpensive, effective method of colour photography, and three weeks before his death he said he believed he had solved the problem. I believe the invention had been patented. The film people are arranging to give him a public funeral. Perhaps they will give him also a monument.

THE MIKADO'S HEIR.

The Crown Prince of Japan, who is to include in his itinerary of British visits to Edinburgh and Rosyth, comes to this country as the royal herald of the new order of things in the land of the Rising Sun. By his very visit he has thrown to the winds an ancient tradition—that no member of the Royal House of Japan should leave his native shores—a tradition said to have been respected for over 2000 years. If this characteristic of the Prince, he may be expected to react to himself to the cheers which await him both in London and in Scotland. He comes to this country unaccustomed to this form of popular demonstration, for in Japan it is not regarded as polite to cheer royalty. As in other things, so in dress. The Prince will land in this country attired, not in the chromatic robes of the Orient, but garbed in a relatively sombre-hued suit turned out for him by a London tailor. His Highness brings with him a numerous entourage, including several of his own cooks. However Westernized this Prince may be, he is apparently taking no risks with our unaccustomed climate.

THE WAR GRAVES IN FRANCE.

I have heard of late some criticism of the condition in which some of the cemeteries in France are found. Much of this criticism is without doubt based on personal observation, and it would be strange if a great organization like the Imperial War Graves Commission should be entirely blameless, but a little information which I have got from a friend who has recently visited a considerable part of the grave area should help to disarm this criticism by explaining something of the procedure of tidying-up, planting the cemeteries, and completing the enclosures. It is a task of the magnitude of which the lay observer has little idea. There are thousands of these cemeteries, large and small, scattered throughout the country, and many are in remote districts badly served by roads. Each cemetery has to be surveyed and located, the owners traced, boundaries to be agreed upon, the land to be acquired. Parties of working gardeners are carried round the outlying cemeteries, and these are levelled and sown with grass and planted with flowers and trees. There is a great deal of ground to be covered by these travelling gardeners and in the intervals between their visits the remoter cemeteries are liable to become rather overgrown, but as the work advances into the forward areas and there are better facilities for billeting the permanent gardeners this temporary and periodical untidiness will disappear. Behind the lines the condition of the cemeteries gives less cause for criticism. The gardening work is more advanced and is maintained in excellent condition, the turf is level and well kept and of a quality comparable to some of the best English lawns. In some cases where the work of construction is now proceeding it is not possible always to avoid damaging the turf, but exceptional care is taken by the contractors to protect it.

The "Winking Madonna."

The Cardinal Archbishop of Naples recently reconsecrated the historic little church of Madonna del Rosario. Women who worshipped there one evening recently, suddenly exclaimed that the reputed miracle-working image of the Virgin, standing above the high altar, was opening and shutting its eyes. Several hundred people in the church forthwith confirmed the report and for half an hour afterwards excited crowds flocked from every quarter of the city so that Carabinieri forces had to be summoned to preserve order. Thousands now hear personal testimony to the miracle.

The authorities have appointed a special commission for a rigid inquiry into the phenomena of "The Winking Madonna." Opinion is divided among the commissioners. Some claim to have seen the eyes darting fire and the pupils revolving in their sockets. Doctors Conti and Altamura witnessed partial manifestations, during which the pupils seemed to vary in color at short intervals from lustrous white to an intense dark shade, but they do not admit optical illusion, especially as the phenomenon becomes much more marked at evenside. Count Starace on the other hand, is convinced that it is a case of collective suggestion. "This latter theory, however, is discredited by experts sent by the local Carthage newspaper. "We took a good house," they say, "to allow our way toward the high altar, but came away convinced that the phenomenon was not one of the 'crowd hallucination.' The eyes of the image were clearly visible to fair sighted spectators some distance away. We kept up long observation and did not note any movement of the eye brows, but only the changing light emanating from the pupils which made them appear now white and now other tints."

That a great many of the garments that we have received in the past month were from new customers who had those garments misshapen by other dressers and were sent to us as a last resort before a settlement was made with the owners. We were able to doctor up the majority of these crippled garments to the entire satisfaction of those owners. If you have any sick garments of this character send them to us. If our customers don't accept the garments after we doctor them, don't pay us. No cure no pay. We have received a new shipment of dye, the best on the market. PYORRHEA.
Pyorrhea is the most destructive, the most difficult to treat, yet one of the commonest of all the diseases of the teeth. It is present in the mouths of countless thousands of adults who fondly think their teeth are in perfect condition. It progresses slowly, and in its early stages, painlessly. The gums become soft and bleed easily, then they grow sore and become inflamed. Pus forms at the roots of the teeth and they loosen in their sockets. When the disease reaches this stage it affects the general health and usually extraction is the only remedy.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

GOMPERS EULOGISES HEARST.

DENVER, June 23.—William Randolph Hearst was denounced on the floor of the Convention of American Federation of Labor to-day by President Samuel Gompers as a traitor to the cause of America, and to the cause of freedom, an enemy of Labor and of Ireland. This statement, together with many other denunciatory remarks regarding Hearst, made by President Gompers in reply to a question from the floor as to his stand on the Irish Question, was cheered and applauded by the delegates. The veteran Labor Leader declared that Hearst had attacked him because he had declined to be chairman of his mad chariot for the Presidency of United States, and because he had tried to get to it that Mexico shall go undisturbed, and not be overrun by United States forces. Defining his stand on the Irish Question, President Gompers declared that he had carried out every declaration of the Federation, extending sympathy and aid to the Irish Republic. "The only real charge against me is that I plead guilty to it, that I have not freed Ireland," he said.

WHO REPRESENTS NEWFOUNDLAND?

Express Passengers.

The following passengers are on the incoming express due here early tomorrow afternoon: Miss Devereaux, E. J. Myers, B. W. John, E. H. Kevier, W. A. Kevier, F. W. Brenner, Hall, F. G. Mean, H. Young, E. H. Tarten, H. W. Vanoragner, C. H. Moore, D. P. Jones, F. C. Raymer, L. R. Churchill, J. O. Carey, Miss S. Carey, R. A. Stronard and 3 children, Miss B. Hooper, C. Martin, St. Mary Assumpta, Sr. Mary St. Anthony, Miss E. News, Miss P. C. O'Driscoll, Miss S. Jerrett, Miss F. Goss, Mr. J. Taylor and daughter, Leo King and Mrs. J. T. Shroves.

Stormy Session Anticipated.

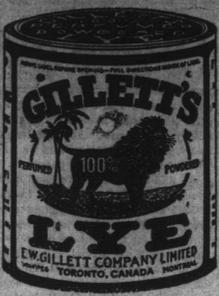

It is anticipated that to-day's session of the House will be a stormy one as the Opposition intend to oppose any attempt on the part of the Government to appoint a Commission to enquire into the future operation of the railway. If this motion for a Commission goes through it will mean that the operation of the railway once again be placed in the hands of Committee in Council, with results which would probably be as disastrous as those of the past year.

Railway Expert Coming.

Sir George Bury, formerly Vice-President of the C. P. R., is a passenger on the incoming express. It is understood that he is coming at the request of the Government to assist them in solving the problem of the future operation of the railway. Sir George, who is 82 years of age, was Vice-President of the C. P. R. from 1911-1915, but it is doubtful whether his experience in the handling of a railway in Canada will be of any value to him when looking for a solution to Newfoundland's railway difficulties.

How Heavy Title Has Changed

SINCE SULLIVAN'S DAY.
New York.—The history of the modern prize ring, generally considered to have started with the defeat of Paddy Ryan by John L. Sullivan at Mississippi City, Miss., February 7, 1882, was divided roughly into two eras. The first, 20 years in length, ended when Jeffries stopped Bob Fitzsimmons for the second time on July 25, 1902 at San Francisco. "Jeff," having beaten all logical contenders was starting down the list for the second time, preparatory to retiring and handing the title to Marvin Hart. Sullivan's "reign" lasted 10 years, during which the "Boston boy" defended his title in two major bouts. His memorable 75-round battle with Jack Kilrane was the last championship contest fought in America with bare knuckles. This fight, one of the most bitter in the history of the American ring, was preceded about a year by Sullivan's 39-round draw with Charley Mitchell at Chantilly, France. The introduction of gloves changed the game. It suited Corbett's style of fighting and on September 7, 1882, "Gentleman Jim" was the victor over Sullivan in 21 rounds at New Orleans, La. Corbett's next important battle in which he successfully defended his title came when he stopped Charley Mitchell in three rounds at Jacksonville, Fla.

Then "Ruby" Bob Fitzsimmons loomed up. "Fitz" met Corbett at Carson City, Nev., on March 17, 1897 and Corbett's supremacy was at an end. The heyday of Fitzsimmons, too, was comparatively short. He met James J. Jeffries in a Coney Island ring on June 9, 1899 and a new champion was enthroned who was to meet the greatest men of his day and retire undefeated until coaxed out of retirement. Jeffries beat Fitzsimmons in 11 rounds. On November 3, 1899, "Jeff" won a referee's decision over Tom Sharkey at Coney Island in 25 rounds. In 1902, the big Californian headed Fitzsimmons' demands for a return match and again stopped the lanky Cornishman, this time in eight rounds at San Francisco.

It was another battle of champions when Jeffries met Corbett at San Francisco a year later. Again Jeffries was invincible, knocking out "Gentleman Jim" in 10 rounds. After stopping Jack Munroe in two rounds at San Francisco in 1904, Jeffries retired, handing the title to Marvin Hart after the latter had defeated Jack Root in 12 rounds at Reno, Nev. That paved the way for the conquest of Tommy Burns the following year, bringing astic history down to the present era.

Bell Island Old Comrades.

President Harry Peckham of the Old Comrades Lodge No. 1, St. John's visited Bell Island last week to make preliminary arrangements to organize a Bell Island Old Comrades' Lodge at Wabana. A large attendance was in evidence at the meeting in the big C.L.B. Armoury there, presided over by Major Lindsay. President Peckham in a business like speech outlined the aims and objects of the Association, and a large number signified their consent to be enrolled as members. An election of officers was held and resulted as follows:—

The Man Who Painted Africa Red

One day some years ago a sumptuous seven-year-old boy stepped ashore at Furbas, in South Africa from a sailing ship that had been seventy days to make the voyage. The doctors had given him six months to live. But for once the doctors were wrong. The dry, burning climate worked wonders with the young youth, so that he developed into a big, broad-shouldered, hefty man.

Cecil Rhodes was the name of the new-comer, and at first his career offered little from that of scores of other young Englishmen of good family who had come out there to try their fortune in the newer land.

He started cotton-planting, and failed. Then came the discovery of diamonds, and Rhodes joined in the rush with hundreds of other diggers. He made money and prospered exceedingly, buying up mines after mines.

A Bucketful of Diamonds.

His only serious rival was one Barnett Isaacs, the son of a Jewish shopkeeper in Whitechapel, who had come to Kimberley from England with sixty years' savings. These he sold at an enormous profit, invested the proceeds in mining claims, changed his name to Barney Barnato and was a millionaire almost before he realized it.

So, too, was Cecil Rhodes, and the two men engaged in a dog-fight battle—the prize, the virtual control of the whole diamond-mining industry in South Africa. Eventually, each realizing that neither could get the better of the other, they joined forces.

Afterwards Rhodes, at Barnato's request, took him to lunch at the Kimberley Club, into which he had never previously been able to secure admission. Then, turning to his guest, he said: "Well, Barney you've had your whim; now I should like to have mine. It is one which you alone in Kimberley can satisfy. I want to see a whole bucketful of diamonds."

His One Great Dream.

Much flattered, Barnato—Basil Williams tells us in his newly-published life of Rhodes—shovelled all his available diamonds into a basket, into which Rhodes plunged his two arms. Lifted out hundreds of the glittering gems, and luxuriously let them stream back through his fingers like water.

The action is typical of the man. Diamonds represented wealth, and Rhodes was greedy for wealth because wealth meant power—power to achieve great things. He was dreaming even then of his pet project, "painting the map of Africa red."

Six years sufficed for Rhodes to make his dream a reality. In that brief space of time he accomplished more than had been done during the centuries that had preceded his advent on the scene.

And it was no mere painting of the map. More than 750,000 square miles were added to the British Empire, a territory larger than Spain, France and the former German Empire put together.

His Warning to a Savage Chief.

In order to achieve his end, he allowed nothing to stand in his way. A good example of his method of dealing with the native races is afforded by his treatment of Sigean, the paramount chief of Pondoland.

This truculent savage had treated the British High Commissioner, Sir Henry Loch, with studied insolence, keeping him waiting for three days before granting him an interview. Directly Rhodes heard of it he went into Pondoland, although warned of the risk, and summoned Sigean to his presence.

Then he kept him waiting three days in his turn, and afterwards took him for a walk towards a mesquite field, on which some machine-guns had been trained. At a given signal the guns opened fire and laid low the mesquite crop.

"That is what will happen to you and your tribe," grimly remarked Rhodes, "if you give any further trouble. You are unfit to govern. Your country is annexed." And so he said, so it was.—Pearson's Weekly.

Words at Sea.

Cat is not an animal; it is a tackle used to hoist the anchor. Chains are not chains, but plates of iron bolted through a ship's side, to which the rigging supporting the masts is fastened. Coat is not a thing to be worn, but is a piece of canvas placed round the mast where it enters the deck to keep out water. Dog is not an animal; it is a short iron bar with teeth at one end and a ring at the other. Dog watches are not portions of time consumed in watching dogs, but they are half watches of two hours each from 4 to 6 and 6 to 8 p.m. Draught is not a drink of water, but the depth of water in which a vessel is required to float. Duck is not a thing that swims and quacks, but is a light canvas used for small sails. Eye is not an organ of sight; it is a circular part of a shroud or stay that is looped over a mast.
