

CHURCHILL ON HOME RULE.

CONTINUATION OF THE DEBATE AT WESTMINSTER.

Lord Churchill Declares the Crucial Test of the Bill to be the Unimpairment of the Imperial Parliament—Morrison says the Liberals Will Never Desert the Irish Party.

LONDON, April 18.—In the House of Commons to-day Sir Edward Grey, Secretary Under Secretary of the Foreign Office, stated in reference to questions that the treaty between Great Britain and Nicaragua signed in March 1889 guaranteed to British subjects the "most favored nation" treatment in respect to any canal, railway or other mode of transit that might be established in Nicaragua. The ratifications of this treaty had not been exchanged, however, and therefore the treaty was not in force.

The House has been discussing the debate between the two countries to invalidate the Clayton-Bulwer treaty.

In response to questions as to the outlook for a settlement of the dock labor strikes at Hull, the Hon. J. J. Macdella, President of the Board of Trade, who is seeking to bring about a compromise of the trouble, spoke hopefully of a settlement of the strike.

The debate on the second reading of the Home Rule bill was resumed. Lord Randolph Churchill started the debate by declaring that the crucial test of the bill was the preservation of the unimpaired supremacy of the Imperial Parliament. Ostensibly such supremacy was preserved, as every subject was made to come before the Irish Parliament remained within the cognizance of the Imperial Parliament, but really the supremacy of the Imperial Parliament was rendered impotent by its being deprived of all control of the Irish Executive and control of the vote of supply for raising taxes.

The creation of separate fiscal systems would reduce the British Government to the position of great instability. Then the Irish members, when present in the Imperial Parliament, might make a law or do anything that would harm to destroy a document of that character and be closed by offering an apology to the House.

Lord Randolph then proceeded to consider the functions of the Irish legislature to be created by the Home Rule Bill. The bill, Lord Randolph said, was a mass of blunders. The instinct of self-preservation forbade Great Britain to approve of Irish Home Rule, while the instinct of self-preservation forbade the Irish to accept of the bill. The bill was a mass of blunders. The instinct of self-preservation forbade Great Britain to approve of Irish Home Rule, while the instinct of self-preservation forbade the Irish to accept of the bill.

Mr. Morley, Chief Secretary for Ireland, replied to Lord Randolph's speech.

The Opposition has answered arguments for the Home Rule Bill, he said, almost exclusively with prophecies. The Opposition has answered arguments for the Home Rule Bill, he said, almost exclusively with prophecies. The Opposition has answered arguments for the Home Rule Bill, he said, almost exclusively with prophecies.

Mr. Morley described Mr. Chamberlain as the "most interesting repentant prodigal in the House."

He declared his conviction that Irish civilians would remain at their posts until a murmur in case the Home Rule bill should become law.

His final words were: "The Liberals will never betray the Irish Party. The Liberals will never betray the Irish Party. The Liberals will never betray the Irish Party."

A DUCHESS IMPRISONED.

Dowager Duchess of Sutherland Committed to Holloway Prison.

LONDON, April 18.—The Dowager Duchess of Sutherland was today committed to Holloway Prison under a sentence of imprisonment for six months, imposed by Sir Francis Jeune, President of the Court of Probate, for contempt of court.

The imprisonment of a British duchess in a common jail is probably unprecedented in England.

The Duke died last year, leaving a will highly favorable to the Duchess. This was contested by the present Duke and proceedings have been carried on with much bitterness.

On Saturday last, in a Court of Probate before Sir Francis Jeune, counsel for the present Duke asked that the will of attachment should be issued against the Dowager Duchess on the ground that she had obtained an order to inspect certain papers, she had not been allowed to do so.

When the case came up to-day an affidavit was presented in behalf of the Dowager Duchess, showing that she had been wronged by her late husband before marriage and was now being wronged by him to-day.

She had been wronged by her late husband before marriage and was now being wronged by him to-day. She had been wronged by her late husband before marriage and was now being wronged by him to-day.

THE NEWLISS MURDER TRIAL.

CHARLES LUCKY'S TRIAL COMMENCED AT BROOKLYN.

A Witness Called to Prove That the Bearing of the Home Was Accidental—The Boots Found on the Prisoner Sworn to as Being Worn by His Father.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., April 18.—A great amount of interest is centered around the trial of Charles Lucky, which opened here this afternoon. There are at least 30 witnesses in town on the Lucky case alone.

John J. Lucky, Jr., a brother of the prisoner, firmly believes that his brother is not guilty and tells freely of the evidence to be adduced.

The prisoner was brought into the court room about 2 o'clock and walked firmly to the witness stand.

He was dressed in a neat suit of black clothes and wore a white shirt and tie. He has grown much stouter since his confinement and now wears a mustache.

During the afternoon the prisoner evinced much interest in the proceedings, but only once was he affected by what was going on. This was when the witness, John J. Lucky, Jr., was placed in the witness box. Mrs. Lucky caught the prisoner's eye and they recognized each other.

He testified that he had seen his brother in the yard between Mrs. Lucky and her husband only a short distance from the ill-fated house. She recalled a quarrel taking place between her husband and her brother about two years ago, when Charles was working for them. The prisoner felt the result of the quarrel.

Several witnesses were called to try and identify a set of false teeth found near the scene of the tragedy as belonging to Mary Ann.

It could be proved that these teeth belonged to Mrs. Lucky, who had been long missing and so went to the manager. It turned out, though, that the manager did not know the teeth, but that the victims were not murdered.

The crown hoped to establish that a scuffle took place in the yard between Mrs. Lucky and the murderer, which she lost her teeth.

A number testified that Miss Lucky owned a pair of false teeth, but no one would identify those found as belonging to her.

Andrew Parker, although a crown witness, gave some very interesting evidence for the defense. He was a neighbor of the ill-fated family, residing on the opposite side of the road.

He related an account of a visit to the house in question some time before the evening of the tragedy, when he was in what was known as the summer kitchen, where cooking is done, and at the time of the tragedy, he was in the kitchen.

He testified that he saw the prisoner in the kitchen, and that he saw the prisoner in the kitchen, and that he saw the prisoner in the kitchen.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

A Hamilton Family Has a Close Call in a Burning House—Dragged From a Blazing Bed.

HAMILTON, April 18.—Shortly before 9 o'clock this morning a fire broke out in a Hamilton family. The fire originated in a room on the second floor, and spread so rapidly that Mrs. McCarthy and her two children had barely time to escape in their night clothes.

Mrs. McCarthy awoke to find the room full of smoke. She ran to the room where her boys were, and was horrified to see their white faces in the glare of flames that had already reached their beds. Catching each by a foot she dragged them from the bed and carried them down stairs, all the three making their escape in their night clothes.

The prisoner was brought into the court room about 2 o'clock and walked firmly to the witness stand.

THE BEIRING SEA COURT.

Mr. Carter Attempts to Justify the Terference of the United States With Pelagic Sealing.

PARRIS, April 18.—At to-day's sitting of the Beiring Sea Court of Arbitration, James C. Carter of counsel for the United States continued his speech in support of the American contention. He recapitulated the arguments advanced last week and then proceeded to show that the jurisdiction of the United States had always been based upon property interest, not sovereignty over the sea.

Mr. Carter quoted from diplomatic correspondence and from the opinions of English jurists regarding the rights issued by Russia in 1881. America and Great Britain had jointly protested against this issue, but Great Britain had withdrawn her protest because of the Monroe doctrine.

Mr. Carter's speech was largely concerning the misstatement and other garbling of the Russian documents originally incorporated in the United States.

The motive of the translator in attempting to embarrass the American Government had been struck the more progressive classes with the Radical leader, it is said to have demanded an audience with the King.

Brussels, April 18.—Extraordinary military measures will be adopted to-day to preserve order in this city. Strong reinforcements of chasseurs and carabiniers are arriving with every train. All officers have received a map on which is marked a neutral zone from which the crowds are to be excluded. In this zone are the Palais de Nation, where Parliament meets, all the Ministerial Bureau and the royal palace.

It is reported the Premier has proposed to the King that Parliament be dissolved and a general election be held. Sanson, the Radical leader, is said to have demanded an audience with the King.
