Miramichi Advance.

CHATHAM, OCTOBER 20, 1881. The Liverpool Timber Trade.

In their trade circular of 1st inst., Messrs. Farnworth & Jardine of Liverpool, say:—

The arrivals from British North America during the past month have been 46 vessels, 29,648 tons, against 78 vessels, 50,000 tons during the corresponding month last year.

Business during the month has been very active; there has been a small import, and the consumption has been correspondingly small, as is invariably the case when there is little landing.

Stocks generally are ample, Baltic Fir and Spruce Deals being almost the only exceptions, and these are unusually light.

CANADIAN WOODS. OF THE TIMBER IMPORT has been chiefly Wainy Board, the stock which is rather large; for both this and Square Pine no corresponding advance in price can be obtained at present to that ruling at Quebec; therefore holders are inclined to firm.

Hard Pine: Sales have been quite nominal. The consumption has been rather small, but prices have been selling at very low prices.

ELM AND ASH have been in fair demand, and prices are unchanged. PIPE AND PUNCHON STAVES are more inquired for, and prices are advancing.

NEW BRUNSWICK AND NOVA SCOTIA SPRUCE AND PINE. Notwithstanding the light import and very light stock the demand during the month has been very languid, and the price has not shown any improvement in value; there is still a great want of confidence on the part of buyers, consequent upon the delay in the building trade in the manufacturing districts around; therefore it is hoped the imports will still continue to be moderate.

PIPE DEALS: The demand is limited, and prices are low. BRICKS meet with ready sale on arrival, and prices are well maintained.

The tables showing the supply, consumption, &c., of wood goods are very full the following being some of the items of supply from 28th January to 1st October, 1881, compared with the corresponding period of the previous year.

REPORT OF 1880 1881. Quebec Pine, 1,421,000 feet, 1,383,000 feet. St. John Pine, 79,000 " 85,000 "

Some of the items of consumption for the period from 1st February to 1st October, 1881, compared with the corresponding period of 1880 are as follows:—

Stock. 1880 1881. Quebec Pine, 1,421,000 feet, 1,383,000 feet. St. John Pine, 79,000 " 85,000 "

It may be said that the business of the year, so far, has fallen far short of the expectations entertained early in the season; but the trade on both sides of the Atlantic. Last year, when prices recovered somewhat from the very low figures that had been ruling during the period of stagnation, the trade became too sanguine and many even anticipated something like the booming rates of eight or ten years ago.

Buyers on the other side, too, were misled by reports of very heavy operations in the woods going on in various quarters both in Quebec and New Brunswick, which tended to prevent very large purchases being made in advance.

Considering the light consumption, as shown in the above table, it is fortunate that the production here was not excessive. What the prospects of the future are it is not easy to forecast in view of the disappointments of the past and the uncertainties of the future, complicated as they are by the disturbed condition of the Mother Country, owing to the troubles in Ireland. It is probable however, that prices will not fall, because the importing season is nearly closed and freights and insurance are higher than they have ruled during the former part of the season.

A Timely Letter. The Archbishop of Quebec publishes the following letter from the Cardinal Prefect at Rome in several papers in that Province. It is timely in view of the degraded use which the Conservatives there are constantly endeavoring to make of the Church to aid their party. The Holy See makes it not with their consent the Liberal-Reform Party, by endeavoring to refund its name with that applied to a class of religious or irreligious tenets contrary to the Catholic faith and practice.

The letter also condemns undue interference in political matters by which the interests of the Church are sometimes injured by those to whom they are committed. The following is the letter of the Cardinal Prefect:—

To Monsignor Alexandre Tachereau, Archbishop of Quebec. Most Illustrious and Most Reverend Lord: It has come to the knowledge of the Sacred Congregation of the Propaganda, that in your Province certain members of the clergy and of the body of seculars continue to intermeddle in political questions by making use either of the pulpits or of the public newspapers or other publications.

It is equally to the knowledge of the Sacred Congregation that a certain suffragan of your Grace is actually trying to have recourse to Parliament with the object of having the election Laws relative to the so-called "undue influence" modified.

Now, concerning the first point, I hasten to call your Grace's attention to the instructions which the Supreme Congregation have already issued in the year 1876. It must be made understood by the suffragan that the Holy See recognizes the extreme gravity of the facts reported by them, and that particularly it is to be deplored the damage being suffered as regards the authority of the clergy and their own holy ministry. Therefore, in order to repair such great evil, it becomes necessary to extirpate the root. Now the cause of so great inconveniences is to be found in the divisions existing between those bishops themselves in political as well as on other questions which are to be resolved in Canada. In order, therefore, to put an end to such regrettable dissensions, it will be necessary that those bishops, in concert with Monsignor of the Apostolic Delegate to be sent to Canada, agree and determine on a uniform line of conduct to be followed by us and each of them with regard to political parties. Another cause for the same inconvenience is found in the excessive interference of the clergy in political affairs without consideration for pastoral prudence. To remedy properly this excess of zeal, it is necessary to recall to these bishops what was recommended to them by the Supreme Congregation on the 29th of July, 1876, to wit: That on the occasion of political elections they must conform themselves in their advice to election to what was decreed by the Provincial Council of 1868. It must be understood that the Church, in its political action, is not to be understood to indicate each and every one of the political parties which by accident are called liberal, because the decision of the Holy Synod refer to certain errors opposed to the doctrine of the Catholic faith, and not to any political party whatever. And, in consequence, those do wrong who, without other foundation, declare condemned by the Church one of the political parties in Canada, namely, the party called Reform, a party heretofore warmly supported even by some Bishops. Finally, concerning the principal object of the doubts referred to, namely, what steps are to be taken relating to the Catholics, who are subject to civil courts, the Holy Synod subject a general rule for the bishops, and it will, therefore, rest with whomever the civil courts have jurisdiction over, to take the necessary steps to be taken; therefore, let the bishops take the necessary measures to guard the honor of the Church, taking care above all to prevent as much as possible the necessity of ecclesiastical penances being obliged to apply to the civil courts. The same rule should be asked to observe the greatest reserve in regard to political affairs, especially where there is danger of the clergy being already prejudiced and irritated against the clergy of the opposite party, and in consequence of the excess of undue influence in political elections.

Conformity to these instructions, Your Grace is requested to inform the Holy Synod, to the clergy and to all whom it may concern, that it is the intention of the Holy Synod, in the instructions mentioned precepts of the Holy Office be vigorously observed. In relation to the ground point Your Grace will notify your suffragans that each of the individual precepts is to be observed with the same care as if they were addressed to each of them in the present, the question of the modification of the law concerning said undue influence in the building trade in the manufacturing districts around; therefore it is hoped the imports will still continue to be moderate.

It is quite apparent that the good example of the Bishops of the Roman Catholic Church in the Province of Quebec and of those of Quebec, even since the visit to them of Monsignor Conroy, who was specially commissioned by the Holy See to personally enforce the doctrine laid down in the above letter upon the Archbishops and Bishops in Canada.

The invidious and dishonest character of Conservative Party is significantly suggested in the fact that a letter as of that of the Propaganda is necessary at the present time.

GIVING HIM UP.—The Sun and Telegraph appear to have dissolved partnership, after uniting to defend the poor Fisheries Inspector. The Telegraph's reason is, doubtless, because it ventured to assist the Sun without making sufficient enquiry, while the Sun does not care to pursue the subject further, as it is not worth the paper's respecting the other rottenness of fish management under its proteges to be unassailable. Both papers ought to know by experience that when a tramp professing to be "an old newspaper man" comes to interview the staff he has an axe to grind and ought to be treated accordingly.

Another Lesson. The delay in getting the steam fire engine to the fire on Sunday night is another reminder of the necessity for incorporating the town of Chatham. Under our present system the town, with its varied interests, and having within its limits a leading part in the population of the County, has a very inadequate organization for the management of its affairs. Every town in the Province now incorporated suffered as Chatham has done, until the necessity of better government forced itself upon their people, although no other town ever reached the population Chatham has—some 5000—without being incorporated. It is impossible for the Municipal Council to afford the town the organization necessary to control all its local affairs to the best advantage, and the question of incorporation ought to be taken up at once. Cannot all interests unite over the matter and consider it with the single purpose of arriving at a just and practical conclusion. We have plenty of men among us quite capable of being a leading part in the management about the desired end, and if a public meeting were called the result would, no doubt, be that Chatham would have a much more efficient control of its own affairs before this time next year than it now has.

thoughts already vorded by a master hand to one immortal form, with which to tamper is profanity. To labour with elaborate care to render into elegant prose some lines from Shakespeare or Shelley, is a little, a funny proceeding. The mistake is to grasp the idea except through the medium of that process will lose little by remaining unenlightened.

After some discussion of Mr. Roberts' remarks, Mr. Hutchison read a paper on Sight Singing or Practical Music for Schools. Mr. Hutchison stated that in the selection of this subject he was influenced by a promise made at last Annual Meeting. It was sufficient for his present purpose that Music occupies a place in courses of instruction generally, and that teachers are required to conform to their requirements. He observed that to a person possessed of a musical voice and moderate musical aptitude this exercise, in the Primary Departments presents few difficulties. But even then a knowledge of "sight singing" would materially assist in making selections for the class as well as afford considerable pleasure to the teacher in conducting the singing exercises.

Since singing is a part of our curriculum teachers should, as far as circumstances will permit, qualify themselves for its satisfactory discharge. He thought that all who gave instructions in the practice of singing should be able to apply the "look and sing" method to the notes of a simple melody.

He observed that in the study of tone, the first thing to be understood is that in every tone there is a certain sound which governs all the other notes of that tone. A tone may be sung in a higher or lower pitch, but the relation between the notes and the governing tone or note is unaltered. He illustrated this principle by the voice and on the organ in different keys or pitches of the tonic.

He showed that the seven notes (the 8th being a repetition of the first) may easily be acquired, and developed them in their natural connection, preferring syllables to figures. He dwelt at considerable length on the mental effect of notes to key relation, and gave illustrations vocally and on the organ which was played by Miss G. Thomson of Newcastle. He held that the mental effect of notes in key relation is a valuable aid in acquiring the modulator or alphabet of tone.

ALPHABET OF TONE. In key relation. Doh—Strong or firm tone—higher replicate. So—Sensitive or piercing tone. Loh—The weeping or sorrowful tone. Soh—Grand or clear tone. Soh—Sweet or calm tone. Moh—Steady or calm tone. Hah—Hopeful or roving tone. Tah—Strong or firm tone.

He held that after a knowledge of the modulator or alphabet of tone, was acquired, simple melody in the old or established notation should form the basis of future instruction. He noticed that to teach the subject in this manner it is necessary that the teacher should know it.

Mr. Siveright asked if the pitch of the Doh alters the mental effect of tones in key relation.

Mr. H. answered that a slight difference in the pitch of the Doh, but not so much as to affect the general principle. Meeting then adjourned.

THIRD SESSION, 7.30 P.M. Philip Cox, Esq., Inspector, delivered a lecture on Educational matters. The Vice-President occupied the chair. The Chairman said that it was provided by law that a lecture on Educational Matters should be given in connection with the proceedings of the Teachers' Institute. The lecturer on the present occasion was a gentleman whose official position and qualifications fully qualified him for the duty. He then introduced Mr. Cox, Inspector of District No. 1.

The lecturer dwelt on the duty incumbent on all to educate to the highest degree the youth of this Province in order to compete with the subjects of other Governments. He referred at length to the Educational Policy of the Government to render the establishment of schools permanent and their support secure. He gave an elaborate exposition of Reg. 41, relative to School Inspection, &c. He dwelt on drawing as a branch of instruction in our Public Schools. Botany should also have its place in our curriculum. The thanks of the meeting were tendered to Mr. Cox, the Chairman regretting that the audience was not larger.

Friday, Oct. 7. FOURTH SESSION—9 A.M. The subject "How to teach Canadian History" was introduced by Miss Williston, who thought it was most expeditiously taught by introducing first her pupils into the study of a short story, and then giving them the paragraphs she had made familiar with as lessons, to study at home that evening, and making them reproduce the substance of their lesson in a short paragraph on their slates next day.

Mr. Moir then read a thoughtful and carefully written paper on School Discipline. Mr. Moir said—Students of inanimate nature admire the wonderful and exquisite harmony which they everywhere observe; but the student of human nature, particularly child nature, generally observes that with a degree of harmony, margin, hope, love, sin, shape, petiole, color and surface. He would pursue the same method with the Stem Root, &c. At the conclusion of Mr. Siveright's paper, the meeting adjourned for dinner.

The Ghost's Will

BY MARY KYLIE DALLAS. "The first time I ever made a will I made it for a ghost," said a lawyer, pouring out a glass of port. "At least that was the opinion of many people for a long while, and no doubt is yet. If you care to hear the story I will tell it. And first, please open the window behind you and tell me what you think of the prospect of property under the handsomest house and the handsomest garden in the place; a piece of woodland behind it worth a fortune, and the town growing up about it fast. "When I first came here and went into business for myself, a young fellow whose name was Busch lived in that place, with a couple of servants. He was an old man of ninety, but looked no more than sixty. He had about the county, gave big dinners to his gentlemen friends, and dressed elegantly. "It was not thought—being a miser—that he had become so rich. He came of a wealthy family, and legacy after legacy had been left to him. He had married, but his wife died, and so did his only daughter. He never thought of marrying again, but he took a nephew to live with him; and everybody believed that he would make him his heir. But the nephew was no time-server, and did as he pleased; and somehow or other they had a falling out. "There was a sneaking fellow named Potter about the house a good deal, a regular Urah Hops, perpetually fawning on old Busch, and always 'soumble.' He told lies about young Allan, I think, and made his uncle think him a reprobate; and when the young man went down to New York and became an actor, the uncle was led to believe that he had gone to the dogs. And now it was well known that a will had been made in favor of Potter, and that the nephew was left without a penny. "That had been a good many years before, and Potter was waiting for old Mr. Busch's shoes yet. The nephew was a man of forty years. It doesn't take long, after all, to change from young to middle-age in this world, and Potter was quite grizzled and had lost most of his teeth. Old Busch had never lost one yet, and his cheeks were like pippins. For all any one could see, Potter might be fifty, but he had lived at the mansion for twenty years, and had all he needed and more than he deserved, and no doubt thought himself a lucky fellow. "No one knows what the day may bring forth. One morning, to the great surprise of everybody in town, a servant from the mansion was seen rushing hot haste for Dr. Duckwood, and soon the news spread through the village that Old Mr. Busch was dying. Potter went about trying to look cheerful, and lots of people were really sorry. I was, though I had never spoken to the old gentleman, he was such a hale, happy, bright old fellow. The first day he was worse. The next better, then worse again. Then they said he might live; then he was pronounced dead. "It was just after this report, late in the evening, that I sat here, exactly where I was sitting now, quite alone, when the door opened and I saw a figure enter leaning on a cane. It was a great surprise to me to see the next minute that it was old Mr. Busch. He was in dressing-gown and slippers and had a night-cap on, one of those pointed affairs that old gentlemen used to wear; I'd seen him in it many a time. "Good Heaven, Mr. Busch," I cried. "You know me, I see," he answered, in a hollow, rattling voice, "and you look astonished. "I thought you too ill to leave your room, sir," I answered. "I'm glad to see you better. "Don't waste time in compliments, Mr. Van Buskirk," said the old gentleman. "I have very little left, and I want to get back to the house there before they know. "Can you make a short will for me that will stand?" "Yes, sir," said I. "Write this, then," said Mr. Busch, "that I leave everything I possess to my nephew, Allan Busch, my sole and only child. I have made one will, I want to retrieve it by a will of later date. That's my object, you know my wishes. Go to work. Go to work." He fell back in his chair. I set to work. When the will was written I left my office a moment, and called in my neighbor the hairdresser and his apprentice as witnesses. Both knew Mr. Busch well. They stared at him, and looked at each other, and said their respects in faltering voices. The old man seemed to grow weaker and weaker every moment. He signed his name in a hand that trembled so that the letters were barely legible, but we all saw him sign it; and when all was done he turned to the hairdresser, and said, faintly: "Mr. Farren, you were evidently terribly excited," he said to me. Will you please sign my name. "Well, sir, you've been so ill, I failed Mr. Farren." "The truth, Farren," said the old man, sternly. "It might be considered an impertinence, or it might be a check to the nervous system, Mr. Busch, replied Mr. Farren. "Go on," said Mr. Busch. "Go on," said Mr. Busch, "and sign my name, sir, not ten minutes ago," replied Mr. Farren. "Ah! he reported that, did they? I thought as much," said Mr. Busch. "Mr. Farren, Mr. Van Busch, I should like to see your will, sir, and I'll sign it as soon as I can," said Mr. Farren. "I'll sign it as soon as I can," said Mr. Farren. "Eight," I repeated, looking at my watch. "I'm always fast," said the boy; "but I've five minutes past eight." "Remember that, all of you," said Mr. Busch. "Mr. Van Buskirk, give me your arm to my door." "There was a path at that time across the lawn from my father's door to his back porch, and we went that way. It had been a darkish night, but just as I opened the gate the moon shone out.

"A peremptory way that could not be resisted. "I said 'Good-by,' and turned, but I hid behind a tree to see that he got on safe, and there I saw this thing happen: "The porch lay white in the moonlight, and as the old man was about to open the door some one pulled it from the inside, and out walked Potter, with a grin upon his weazen face. It changed as he saw the old man to a look of abject terror. He shrunk aside, clasped both hands over his eyes, uttered a terrible cry, and flew down the path, stumbling in his confusion, and falling flat upon his face among the petunias. I looked back again toward old Mr. Busch. He was gone. "The next morning we all heard the news. Old Mr. Busch had breathed his last at seven o'clock. I confess I was startled, but that was no ghostly sign that I had seen when I walked up the path with Mr. Busch the night before, and I could not agree with my neighbor, the hair-dresser, who declared that it might have been an 'appearance.' "Lawyer Thursday had a will in his keeping that left everything to Potter, but the date of mine was his safeguard. They tried to prove the old gentleman of unsound mind, but were merely laughed at. My neighbor confessing that he was not sure but that Mr. Busch's ghost made the will that he signed, but swearing to the night-cap and dressing-gown as facts in silk and linen, caused much laughter, but the property went to the nephew. He was generous and made a present to Potter which prevented him from suffering anything, and he was a better heir to the old property than Potter would have been. He made me legal manager of his estate and we became great friends. My friend, the hair-dresser, however, had a certain trouble on his mind which he confided to me. "It did not come up in court," said he; "but did you notice Mr. Busch's face when he signed that will that night? Close-shaved, not a spot on it, not even blue." "Yes," said I, "I did." "I shaved him after he was dead, Mr. Van Buskirk," said the hair-dresser, in a hollow voice. "I was called in to do it about midnight, and he had a beard about an inch long. It had been growing ever since he was taken down." "If I were you, Mr. Farren," I said, "I would not mention that to any one, or permit Samuel to do so. I know it to be a fact; but it is not fashionable to believe in ghosts." "A year ago," continued Mr. Van Buskirk, "I was going into port, and a bear saw Allan Busch die. He lived too high in my way, wild life—though he was a good fellow to the last. He never married. The day before he passed away he sent for me. "I shouldn't be alive to-morrow," he said, "and I want you to know the truth. "My Uncle Busch died at half-past six. I came down to see him on the five o'clock train, and went up to his room without being seen. No one was there. He was awake and going fast. "Allan," said he, "you have come to see me." "Yes, uncle," said I. "I only heard you were ill yesterday." "If you had only come sooner, Allan," said he. "I've been a fool. I want to change my will. Potter is a sneak. He's anxious to have me die. I want you to have my money now. Ada's only son." "No matter about the will," said I. "No matter about the money. I can live by my profession." "I've been a prisoner," said the old man. "I have not been allowed to see my friends. The doctor is a tool of Potter's. I—I am neglected, Allan. I've been alone two hours, and I want some water, dreadfully." "I gave him the water, and he put his head on my arm and kissed me. He died that way. Nobody came near us, and I kissed him again and crept down stairs; but as I passed the dining-room I saw Potter and the doctor stuffing themselves, and laughing; and then there, what with contempt of them, and a wish to see my uncle's last wish carried out, as well as the natural longing for money that seemed mine by right, I hit upon a plan. I was an actor, as you know, and my line was 'old men.' Moreover, I'm very like my uncle. I went back to his room, gave him one more kiss—he was already cold—took his gown and cap and slipped from the wardrobe, made myself up, and came to you. You know the rest. I've nobody to leave my money to. Potter is dead. You are a rich man yourself. I'd have been the heir in course of time, probably at my rate. Suppose we give this money to the orphans at the asylum. Nobody has a legal right to it." "I'll make a will for you to that effect," said I, "and so I did." "Van Buskirk," said he, after the will was executed, "you don't owe me a grudge for having been fooled, do you?" "Allan Busch," I answered, "I was fooled; I don't deny it, but I'm dressed in a week, and I'll get my share of a good many years. I'll keep the secret. Get well, boy—get well, old friend." "But he died, and the orphans have the property, and Mr. Farren still believes that he and his apprentice witnessed the will of Mr. Busch's ghost."

MECHANICAL ORGUNETTE. An Automatic Reed Organ. "THE ORGUNETTE may now be called a celebrated instrument. In tone it is akin to the Cabinet Organ, but the organ must be manipulated by an artist in order to produce music; the ORGUNETTE, on the other hand, entirely mechanical in its action, and requiring no skill, can be made to furnish an unlimited supply of all kinds of music." Toronto Globe. "THE ORGUNETTE is indeed a musical wonder. It is a miniature reed organ, with as strong and melodious a tone as the Cabinet Organ. It surpasses the Cabinet Organ, for the reason that the organ in music can play it as well as the most accomplished professor. The ORGUNETTE is strong and accurate in its mechanism, and consequently not liable to get out of order." Montreal Register. "THE ORGUNETTE is the most perfect automatic musical instrument yet invented, its operation is unlimited, and the tone is remarkably good." Montreal Star.

Manuf's., Builders, etc. Standard Portable Grist Mill. Specially adapted to the wants of the Maritime Provinces. Wm. CURRY, writes from Windsor, N. S. Dec. 78. "The 20 inch Standard Flour Mill works well. The mill cleans well. The 12 inch Standard chaps 12 bush per hour. The mill looks with surprise to see a mill so small work so well. I enclose letters from two large farmers. Mr. CURRY—I have had about 20 bush of wheat ground by your new Standard Mill, and I am glad to say it's the best flour I have had in my house for years. I have no hesitation in saying that ground by your new Standard is 'Canada,' that I have had done for me. It will do for others, which should stimulate farmers to grow more grain, and should stimulate farmers to grow more grain, and should stimulate farmers to grow more grain. JAMES DILL, Windsor, N. S. Send for particulars. Address, W. H. CURRY, 28 John, N. B. Waterloo Engine Works, Brantford Canada.
