For several years my face has been covered with pimples, which caused me much annoyance, and knowing it to be a blood disease, I consulted a number of doctors, and also tried many preparations without obtaining any benefit, until I commenced taking Vegetine, and before I had used the first bottle I saw I had the right medicine. I have used three bottles and find my health much improved, my humor entirely cured. Yours resp'y.

Teachers' Institute.

The third Annual Meeting of the Teachers' Institute of New Brunswick was held at Fredericton com. encing on Tuesday of last week .-The attendance was good and all parts of the Province were fairly represented. There were present also some gentlemen from abroad who are in-present some new and valuable ideas to be applied in daily work, besides esprit de corps, as essential to the eacher's profession as to any other.

The resolution recommending to Trustees the importance of having bound for permanent preservation the copies of the Educational Circular which have been furnished by the Board of Education, is a good one.-These semi-annual Reports constitute the most valuable educational publication in the Maritime Provinces, supplying an excellent history of the growth and character of the New Brunswick Schools, and ought to form a part of every School library in the

The adoption of a uniform Course of Instruction, provided that it embrace the right subjects of study and that these are introduced in that order of sequence most in harmony with the pupil's mental development, would, no doubt, be attended with good results. An able Committee of the Institute submitted a Course which was, no doubt, the result of wide School experiences in our own and other countries. The reports show that it and if, after needed modifications, it tion to the labors of trustees teachers and pupils. In the past, teachers and trustees have often been annoyed and perplexed by the objections of uninformed parents to certain studies on the School programme, and teachers have sometimes given more attention to some studies and less to others than was desirable These difficulties would disappear with the introduction of an authorised uniform curriculum. We are glad to observe that the subject of Inspection occupied the attention of the Institute and that the judgment of our foremost educationists is in accord with the views which we have already expressed on this important branch of educational administration. It is absurd to expect that the Common Schools will ever attain to the perfection possible under our present system so long as the work of nspection remains in the hands of those who have been entrusted with it up to the present time. It would be unjust to say that none of the present School Inspectors are qualified for the positions they hold, because ing the demarcation of their plots of the Sun, however, is at liberty to choose there are several of them whose edu- land. cational attainments and successful teaching experience, as well as Inspectoral work, guarantee their efficiency, but it is also well known that we but it is also well known that we have inspectors who are not at all other Society against interference.

The resolution of the Institute on this subject was That it express its approval of the provisions made by the Legislature at its last session relative to inspection, and earnest-ly expresses the hope that the Board of Education will not commission any persons to officially determine the quality of school work or the standing of the schools who have not had enlarged practical as who have not had enlarged practical as who have not had enlarged practical acquaintance with the profession.

The resolution embodies exactly the right principle. If one of our lumber merchants had a lumberer who was very successful in "running rafts" and, on that account, placed him in command of a ship, it would be looked upon as a very unbusinesslike proceeding. And yet it would be trust that exists against them in England quite as consistent with the condi- they beg that the Imperial Government tions of the relative positions as to will appoint a commission to see that put a half-educated man in the posi they act in good faith. Now, we have not merely to accomplish other reforms which are before us, but we have to retain the old reforms which we have accomplished. We have to prevent any tampering with our Constitution, which has been built up with care, as well as to mend those portions of it which seem to us to require, at all events some repair.

REFORM IN THE SENATE. I have been told repeatedly by friends that they believe that the present constitution of the Senate is a defective one. I have, as an individual, assumed my full share of responsibility as a member of the Parliament that established the present mode of electing Senators, believing at the time that I was doing what was on the whole the best. I believed in having a different constituency for Senators, but I became convinced long ago that the plan we hit upon was a mistake, and the sooner it was rectified the better in the general interests of the country, and the wisdom of our legislation. The Senate, as at present constituted, has no doubt on several occasions done good service.

It has, mostly, however, placed itself in antagonism to the Lower House, and during the whole term of life of the late Administration it was used simply as an instrument of vengeance and annoyance to the Liberal party, and one of the gentlemen who considers himself of the gentlemen who considers himself the greatest, as he is undoubtedly the tallest, man in the Assembly, has been convoking Committees and sitting in indoment upon use every accretion since the convoking Committees are sitting in the convoking Committees and sitting in the convoking Committees are sitting in the convoking Committees and sitting in the convoking Committees are sitting in the convoking Committees and sitting in the convoking Committees are sitting in the convoking Committees and sitting in the convoking Committees are sitting in the convoking Committees are sitting in the convoking Committees and sitting in the convoking Committees are sitting in the convoking judgment upon us every session since we failed to recognize his merits as a railway contractor. (Hear, hear, and laughter.) Why, Sir, nothing can be conceived more ludicrous sometimes than the proceedings of what should be an august branch of the Legislature, and for my own part I think the Reform party can never rest until some change is accomplished which will render that body more independent in its action, more reliable as an exponent of is illustrated Sent post paid by all, on receipt of Price blunder—but of the magnitude of the crime against the people of Canada which is to be committed. Another instance of the Government's recklessness in the management of this railway. It has always been our policy to agree if possible with the engineers as to the cheapest and shortest route. We did that, and in Manitoba they have changed the route so as to make it thirty miles longer, entailing a cost of a million dollars more. You hear the thirty miles longer, entailing a cost of a million dollars more. You hear the statement occasionally made by those who are on the whole perhaps disposed to be fair, that after all there is little use having any great struggle between the Tories and Reformers—that the Reformers have accomplished most of

While I believe that, even if that were true, it would be an absolute necessity in the interests of the country to maintain intact the lines of party in the Government of the country, I believe there is nothing else which can save us from disaster, social and political. We sometimes hear it said that there is no difference between the parties. I think there is a great difference. I believe there is such a thing as a reactionary spirit with many of those who are essentially Conservatives. I am not saying a word in disparagement of Conservative doctrines. I understand perfectly what they mean, although I cannot agree with them. But we know that in all countries where they have had full sway Conservatives have gone back on previous legislation, and we have an instance at the present time in Canada of a gentleman who was distinguished in England not merely as a professor but as a politician, who was there a great Liberal and free trader, but who thinks it entirely consistent with these principles could be changed by the geographical
