Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organs and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It makes Weak Women Strong. It makes Sick Women Well. Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this not-secret remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a grain of habit-forming or injurious drugs. Is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.

Memoirs of Roustam Are Made Public.

Paris, July 19. It is rather a curious fact that in all the copious Napoleon literature there is not a word written by persons who were in his domestic service. His valet, Merchand, who was the only servant to follow him to the Isle of Elba, bequeathed a bulky manuscript to his family, but so far they have not withheld publication but have not allowed it to be examined. Fortunately the owners of another manuscript have not been so reticent, and it is thanks to them that the first memoirs of the Emperor by one of his servants have been given recently to the public. They were written by Roustam, Napoleon's Egyptian slave, who in constant attendance on the Emperor from 1798 to 1814. No attempt has been made to edit them further than to correct the spelling. They give a plain unvarnished account of the slave's daily observations.

M. Paul Cottin, who wrote the introduction to the memoirs, is the director of the Arsenal library in Paris. "Even the most casual reader," he says, "would know that the memoirs actually came from Roustam's pen. It is surprising that they have not been doctored, because most of the French memoirs written during the first half of the nineteenth century were much retouched. Just now his reminiscences escaped doctored and why they were not published years ago, no one seems to know. They were probably written in Dourlan, where Roustam retired with his wife and two children after Napoleon was sent to St. Helena. According to Roustam's memoirs, he first met Napoleon in St. Jean d'Acree, in Egypt, where Roustam was the slave of a sheik. This sheik sold him to Napoleon, who made him his bodyguard. From the outset Bonaparte bestowed favors on him. At their first meeting he offered him champagne in his tent and presented him with a jeweled sword. The Emperor paid the expenses, amounting to $300, of his slave's wedding feast when he married the daughter of Empress Josephine's valet. Then Napoleon offered $2,000 to an Armenian traveller if he would bring Roustam's mother to France, and he also ordered Isaby to paint a picture of the slave so that he could send it to his mother.

The night Roustam first reached Paris he was allowed to escort Josephine to the theatre. She grew as fond of him as her husband and often proved her interest by intervening in Roustam's favor when his enemies had intrigued to separate him from his master. She even permitted her daughter to paint the slave's portrait, and during these things Hortense whiled away the time by singing to him. Roustam showed equal devotion to both master and mistress—a double devotion that caused him no little perplexity on one occasion. It was at Malmaison. The Emperor ordered him to hand him a rifle so that he could shoot some swans. The Emperor protested vehemently and Roustam was torn between his two allegiances. The Emperor laughed heartily at his confusion.

Napoleon had no reason of his nameless fidelity. For years Roustam slept in a room adjoining his master's and, in time of special danger, he paced his bed across the communicating door. Once he practically saved his master's life on the battlefield, for had it not been for his high white turban, a bullet would have struck the Emperor. It was three years before Roustam received any pay for his services, and yet his devotion to master never faltered, which is saying much for a man of avowed disposition. In spite of Napoleon's many liberties, Roustam's loyalty wavered when it came to following his master to the Isle of Elba. In his memoirs he gives several inadequate excuses for his defection, such as not being able to secure horses for the trip, etc. When Napoleon returned to France, Roustam presented himself for service, but he was not received. "He is a coward," cried the master. "Throw him out and never speak to me of him!"

Asaya-Neurall

THE NEW REMEDY FOR NERVOUS EXHAUSTION
The depression experienced by women during convalescence from childbirth is never forgotten. The sense of utter nerve fatigue blots out interest in everything. "ASAYA-NEURALL" is invaluable at such times. It feeds the nerves, induces sleep, quickens the appetite, aids digestion, and soon buoyancy of spirits and the sense of nervous vitality returns. $1.50 a bottle. Obtain from the local agent. Andrew McCreck, Brock Bay, W. S. R. Johnson, Portland, Maine, Curtis & Co., St. George.

Commercial Union Humbug.

As if the false pretence that Canada is to be bound in tariff legislation by a treaty was not sufficient in that direction, The Toronto World makes a straight declaration that commercial union is the issue. This accompanied by a studied refusal to discuss or even state the real issue, has the appearance of faith in the innocence of the public. There is no movement toward and no possibility of commercial union in any form, nor is there even a treaty by which the tariff law of either country depends on or is controlled by the course of the other. The Government's proposal is simply the relief of the Canadian people from the unnecessary taxation on a long list have been discussed by the opponents, and such discussion as has been carried on was in a way that strikingly suggests insincerity. The changes, having little or nothing in common, have been lumped together as a kind of bugaboo to frighten the credulous. The Canadian tariff relief is effected on imports from Great Britain and the colonies, the United States, and some dozen other important countries included under Britain's favored-nation treaties. It would be better for the Dominion if the reductions were effected on all imports. But the opposition that has been organized against the limited reductions and the successful appeals that have been made to economic delusion show that the Dominion is still a long way from any such measure of commercial freedom. The limited relief is far better than the alternative of no relief whatever.

The opposition to the change is weakened by the fact that the United States has agreed to make similar reductions on imports from Canada. Many Canadians who would have opposed the relief in the Government's measure if made independent by the fact that it is accompanied by simultaneous reductions in the American taxation on purchases from Canada. They can see the advantage of the removal of foreign tariff, but do not concern the greater advantage of relief from their own tariff. The Dominion Government seized the opportunity to make a highly advantageous change in the Canadian tariff and at the same time secure the removal of many American obstructions on Canadian exports. To say that this raises the issue of commercial union is worse than ridiculous. The Americans see the necessity of relieving themselves of some of their tariff and the opportunity to do so. The privileged classes there would be able to defeat the change if it had not been accompanied by similar changes in Canada. It must be admitted that many in both countries find relief at home is described as something given, and the removal of foreign tariffs as concession obtained. This fallacious idea is very persistent. It must be taken into account by legislators. The Dominion Government showed sound judgment in negotiating for the simultaneous removal of tariffs by Canada and the United States. Opponents unable to object to any of the changes try to alarm the Canadian people by the fallacious pretence that is to be bound in tariff legislation by a treaty or that commercial union is the issue. —Tor. Globe.

Reformation Needed.

The statement was recently made that the C. P. R. alone has already carried 211,000 immigrants from the seaboard into the interior of Canada this season. Statistics of crime show that the number of murders in the Dominion almost doubled last year, and that a large proportion of the homicides had occurred among recent immigrants from continental Europe. These two facts taken together indicate one of the greatest needs of the Dominion to-day. The law can punish crime, and by that means determine some measure of the man of criminal instincts. But the law cannot cleanse the heart and purify the life. Education will do much for the second generation of the immigrants now pouring into the country in such enormous numbers, but it is not immediately available as a reformatory force. —Tor. Globe.

Ever-Present Forest Danger.

If the Ontario Government does not speedily put into force regulations requiring clean lumbering there will soon be no forests in the north. The terrible disasters at Cochrane, at the Dome camp, and at South Porcupine, will not be without some compensating benefit if they awaken the people of this Province to the ever-present menace to life and property in the woodlands. In their natural condition they do not burn readily. There is, of course, always danger from decaying vegetation in the forest, and the fires left by the camper and the prospector sometimes destroy large areas of virgin timber.

It is when man begins to slash and hew in the woods that the danger becomes imminent. The railway-builder clears his right of way and frequently leaves huge piles of unburnt "slash" by the side of the tracks. The settler cuts down the spruce in the process of clearing his farm and hauls the pulpwood to a convenient stream or railway siding, leaving the tops and branches to be burned when they become dry. The owner of a mining claim wants to prospect the surface thoroughly, and hews down the trees, clears off the moss and surface vegetation, and leaves the inflammable material to scorch in the sun. He might as well surround his property with barrels of gunpowder. The railways send through the forest locomotives that scatter sparks upon everything near their path, although there are effective appliances for the lessening and prevention of this danger.

But the greatest menace is the "slash" left by the lumberman. Vast piles of this debris are to be found everywhere in the north except on the limits of a few companies that voluntarily and for their own protection follow the policy of cleaning up and burning the tops and branches of the trees they cut down. For years there has been an agitation for the general adoption of this policy in the pine and spruce forests of the north. Mr. Cochrane knows, as all his predecessors have known, that the present system is certain to result in far greater destruction of forest wealth by fire than by the axe. To burn the "slash" under Government regulations and inspection would probably add a dollar and a half a thousand feet to the cost of pine lumber. The lumberman who has cut his limits over and does not expect to hold them permanently has no interest in keeping the fire out after it has passed on, and the movement for clean lumbering has not his active support.

But the forests as a whole belong to the people of Ontario, and they must see to it that everything possible is done to perpetuate them. Properly protected and sanely handled, they will yield revenue, and conserve water-powers, and preserve the existing climatic conditions of the Province for all time. Just these benefits be sacrificed because a group of lumbermen and railway managers and mine owners insist on endangering the lives and property of all the people in the forest region? The Provincial Government—and the Dominion Government who within its sphere—must act with promptness. Clean lumbering, the adoption of all modern precautions to prevent locomotives from vomiting sparks, a material increase in the fire-ranger force, and the penalizing heavily of all offenders against the laws of the forest are partial remedies for forest fires that are within the range of practical politics.

There is no justification for throwing up our hands and regarding the dreadful affair in the north country as a visitation of Providence, one of those unavoidable calamities for which no one is to blame. The intense heat and the prolonged drought were matters beyond man's control, but the raw material on which they operated to produce the terrible result we all lament was provided largely by the folly of men who have left the north country full of decaying forest debris. —Tor. Globe.

Madero Sees Fight in Lieu of Fete.

Mexico City, July 13. The reception planned for to-day by the authorities in Puebla in honor of Francis I. Madero was abruptly abandoned, because of a pitched battle between Maderists and soldiers of the Saragoza battalion stationed at Puebla. When the fighting ceased it was found that at least five Maderists had been killed and ten or more wounded.

The feeling of hostility between the erstwhile rebels was amply evidenced when a passerby fired a shot into the air. Instantly the Maderists assumed that the shot was fired from the federal barracks opposite their quarters and they opened fire without making any investigation.

Later reports from Puebla state that three soldiers of the Twenty-ninth Battalion were also killed in the pitched battle, which raged from 11 o'clock last night until 7 o'clock this morning. Forty Maderists are prisoners in the barracks of the Saragoza battalion. Some estimates place the number of dead as high as thirty. Fighting ceased only when Governor Canete appeared in the streets with a white flag and pleaded for peace.

A special train with Madero on board, arrived in the city while the battle was raging. It is reported that drunken Maderists made an attack on the penitentiary with dynamite bombs, in an effort to release the convicts. The Saragoza troops stationed close by, opened fire and drove the Maderists to rout. Maderist from the hulking barracks attacked the federals and forced them back into their quarters. At daybreak the Twenty-ninth Battalion went to the support of the other federals and used a machine gun to clear the streets. Before this attack the Maderists fled, leaving their dead and wounded behind.

Reports have also reached this city of a riot that occurred yesterday at Tlaxcala, as a result of an attempt by Maderists to kill Felipe Chaoanman, an insurrectionist leader, who had the support of the federal garrison. —Ex.

Sir Max Aitken, says a London correspondent, has changed his mind about becoming one of Mr. Borden's Canadian lieutenants. His knowledge of "cement" might have come to very handy in "cementing" his party together.

Bull Terrier Attacks Baby and Badly Lacerates Face.

Samuel Mayer, about two and one-half years old, of 19 Hawthorn street, Stamford, Conn., was badly bitten in the face by a bull terrier owned by Ferdinand and Hall of 16 Hawthorn street, late yesterday afternoon. The little boy's cheek was chewed and torn by the dog, and Dr. Dichter had to take ten stitches to close the wounds.

The baby was playing with two or three little children and approached the dog with a stick in his hand. The animal growled, sprang upon the boy, bit him again and again before Mr. Hall could get out of the house and beat it off. The Police Department was notified, and Dog Warden Foley killed the animal.

Years In Prison Or Life In Norway.

Alternative Sentence Given Confessed "Gentleman" Burglar.

New York, July 17.—Five years in Sing Sing or life in Norway. Lieut. Carl Von Metz Meyer, gentleman burglar, when offered that alternative to-day chose the life sentence, and on Thursday night will be banished from the land to which he came three years ago, seeking a wealthy bride.

Meyer admits that he robbed eighteen homes on Columbia Heights, Brooklyn, and the police are peeved because they had taken the young night prowler into their confidence and told him the hard time they were having to catch "the mysterious Raffles." Meyers walked the streets at night with detectives sent to hunt him, but they never suspected that the young sufferer from insomnia was the man they wanted.

When finally arrested Meyer pleaded guilty against the advice of the attorney engaged to defend him by his father, a prominent banker in Norway. To-day he was arraigned before County Judge Dike of Brooklyn for sentence. The police and Prosecutor urged that he be sent away for a long term.

"This man," said Judge Dike, "has followed the lead of other impecunious and indigent young foreigners who have come to this country hunting a wife. He stole because he was hungry, and it will be better to banish him from the country than saddle him upon the people as an expense. I will give you the choice of returning to Norway or spending five years in Sing Sing."

"I will sail for Norway on the first boat," Meyer promised.

He will remain in the Raymond Street Jail until the boat sails on Thursday morning.

Prehistoric Village In England.

An interesting discovery recently made in England was the site of a prehistoric lake village near Glastonbury.

The dwelling houses were placed on mounds of clay raised above the level of the water. The framework of a primitive loom was found under one mound, and the number of broken bone needles and bone splinters discovered in another mound led the explorers to think that it may have been the site of an ancient needle factory.

Very few human bones have been discovered, but among the interesting finds is a blue glass bead, with a waving dark line running around it.

What The Bull Couldn't Do.

(Ladies Home Journal.)

Early in the legal career of Joseph H. Choate, the future ambassador was opposed to a hot-tempered attorney, who in the heat of argument, shouted impetuously at his opponent: "Why, I can lick six like you."

Choate looked at the other with profound contempt. "My father owned a bull," he said at length, "that was a wonder to fight. He could lick all the cattle in the neighborhood, and he did it too. But," concluded young Choate significantly, "he couldn't win a lawsuit."

C. P. R. Profit Runs To Over $70,000,000.

Predictions of a money tightness in Canada this coming autumn begin to be verified, remarks the New York Post. It is reported that the banks are curtailing loans in the Western Provinces in order to be prepared to move an immense wheat crop. There has been a great boom in Canada, accompanied by tremendous expansion of loans, enormous speculation in securities and real estate, big dividends, big melons, and big deals and a lot of capital has been used up. Everybody has let his profits run. In Canadian Pacific stock alone the profits since the first of the year have run to over $70,000,000, and apparently nobody wishes to take them yet.

Labor Leader Is Charged With Fraud

Boston, Mass., July 19.—Robert P. Neil, president of the International Brotherhood of Railway Employees and well known in labor circles throughout this country and Canada, was given a preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner Hayes to-day on a charge of using the mails in a scheme to defraud.

It is alleged that some months ago Neil issued circulars, soliciting advertising for a magazine, the proceeds of which were to be used for death and sick benefits for railroad men, and that the funds received were diverted to Neil's own uses.

Strange New Cure For Consumption

Discovery of a Former Collier.

London, July 24.—Following on the heels of the report of the Royal Tuberculosis Commission and the annual conference of the National Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, comes the announcement of a strange new cure for consumption, claimed by a former collier, named Bryant, who while working in the coal pits at Brailford, was attacked by consumption. Bryant has now thirty patients breathing the gas from putrefied meat, with a result, it is said, to be excellent.

John Burns, president of the local government board, ordered the medical officer of the West Yorkshire Health Department to inspect Bryant's establishment and the report showed that its principal constituents are ammonia and trimethylamine, which, even in a weak solution destroy microbes in a few hours' exposure.

The fumes when inhaled, come into contact with the tubercle bacilli, reduce their vitality, and may even kill them without any injurious effect upon the human organism.

The Legend of the Stone of Destiny.

(Westminster Gazette.)

Most persons are aware, in a general kind of way, that according to legend the Lia Fail, or stone of destiny, which rests beneath the coronation chair at Westminster, formed Jacob's Pillow at Bethel. But the details of its legendary history and its connection with the Ark of the Covenant and other sacred relics are less well known. The story is that Jacob handed over the stone to his son Joseph, who bequeathed it to his heirs, and that, along with the Ark of the Covenant, it accompanied the Israelites in their wanderings in the wilderness. In later and more settled days both had places in the temple of Solomon. When in the eighth century B. C. the Israelites were carried off to Babylon, the prophet Jeremiah, it is asserted, escaped with a royal princess of Judah. Carrying with them the stone, the Ark, the Tables of the Law and Aaron's Rod that babbled, they reached Ireland, where the princess married a chief or king of Ulster.

The royal pair were crowned by Jeremiah on the mystic stone. Incidentally it may be mentioned that their are persons who profess to trace the genealogy of our British sovereigns back through the Stuarts and the early Celtic kings of Scotland to this Judean Princess and her Irish husband, and through the Princess to David. When she died, says the legend, the Ark, the Tables of the Law and Aaron's Rod were buried in her tomb, but Jacob's Pillow was preserved as a coronation stone. From Ireland it passed with the Scots and Iona, thence to Dunstaffnage, thence to Seon, and there it was carried off to England by Edward I.

The stone seems to have been held in equally high repute in England and in Scotland, and although after the acknowledgement of the independence of the latter country the Scots were very anxious to get it back, the English to retain it. In the treaty of Northampton, 1328, the Stone of Destiny is not mentioned, but from a writ under the privy seal of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster it appears to have been agreed that it should be returned to Scotland. This, however, was strongly disapproved of by the people, with whom indeed the whole treaty was unpopular, and when the trophy was to be taken from its place in Westminster a riot occurred and a London mob determinedly and successfully opposed its removal.

The authentic history of the stone begins really at Seon; it is very doubtful whether it was ever at Dunstaffnage, or Iona, and still more doubtful that it came from Ireland. Even among those who accept the legend as to the Ark, Jacob's Pillow, etc., having been carried to Ireland, there are some who hold that they were all buried at Tara. About ten years ago some cranks actually commenced excavations at Tara with a view to discovering the tomb of the Judean princess and the sacred relics said to have been buried with her. The excavations in the historic hill were conducted in such a way to rouse great indignation. Antiquaries protested and eventually operations were stopped.

Valley Railroad And The Governments.

Important Statement by the Hon. H. F. McLeod.

Fredericton, July 24. - Hon. H. F. McLeod, who has returned from Ottawa, made a statement today regarding the St. John Valley Railroad conference. He said, "While at Ottawa we had a number of conferences regarding the St. John Valley Railway with the representatives of the federal government. The representatives of the St. John and Quebec Railway were in Ottawa and we had several conferences with them and their counsel, Mr. Fraser, an Ottawa lawyer, and between us we agreed upon a contract, so that now it has been agreed upon, so far as the company and our government is concerned, although it has not been executed as yet. So far as the provincial government is concerned the work would be done tomorrow, and it would be started if we could have it so. Our position simply is that we are prepared to carry out in the form of an agreement the verbal agreement reached at the conference at St. John. When that is done by the party of the other part there is nothing in the world to stop the work going on. Mr. Gould is equally anxious that the work start at once and is prepared to start the construction work as soon as they make it possible for him to do so."

Dredge Lifted.

The Dominion Dredge Company's dredge, which sank in the harbor a few days ago, was successfully lifted by means of her own scoops on Thursday last and towed to a point on the beach where she could be pumped out. The cause of the sinking is not positively known, but it is believed to have been through the want of attention at a critical moment. The accident will entail a heavy loss upon the dredge company, not only in raising her but in making repairs. The tug McNaughton and wrecking crew have returned to Yarmouth, N. S. - Beacon.

6 Year Old Girl Cured of Kidney Trouble.

Mrs. Alex. Moore of James St., Oxford, N. S., says: "Booth's Kidney Pills cured our little daughter, Christian, age 6 years, of many symptoms of kidney weakness. She complained of a sore back, the kidney secretions were frequent and uncontrollable, especially at night. Her stomach was weak and her appetite poor. This caused her to have frequent headaches, and the least exertion would tire her. We had tried many remedies, but she did not improve. We finally were advised of Booth's Kidney Pills and procured a box. In a short time she was well and does not now complain about her back, the kidney secretions have become normal, and she plays around the house with no apparent fatigue. We always recommend Booth's Kidney Pills."

Booth's Kidney Pills carry a guarantee that if you derive no benefit your money will be refunded. Booth's Kidney Pills are a specific for all diseases of the kidneys and bladder. Sold by all druggists, 50c. box, or postpaid from the R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont. Sold and guaranteed by I. Satton Clark.

To Verify Census.

Mr. Archibald Blue, the chief census officer, has done well to issue a notice asking that persons who believe or suspect that they have not been enumerated by the census officers communicate with him. This can be done by sending an unstamped letter to Mr. Archibald Blue, Census Bureau, Ottawa. The letters should give the names, numbers of persons, street and street number, if the persons who believe they have been omitted live in cities or towns, and the concession and number of the lot if in the country. Mr. Blue states that if it is found that such persons have not been enumerated means will at once be taken to remedy the defects through the local census officers, who are responsible if any mistakes have been made.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Blue's invitation will be accepted promptly by any head of a family who has not been seen by a census officer. There were no doubt many cases in which detached persons in boarding-houses were enumerated without being seen personally by the census officers, but in cases where a house was not visited at all the precaution of writing to Mr. Blue is very well worth taking to prevent omission. The census is not an academic thing in Canada. The representation of the various Provinces and of the various parts of each Province in the Dominion Parliament depends upon the figures of the census, and it is the duty of every good citizen to see that the census returns are fair and accurate.—Ex.

Rats Attack Man.

New York, July 22.—Two big rats attacked Frederick Schneider, of No. 5,332 Rockaway avenue, Brooklyn, in the kitchen of his home, and as a result Schneider is under the care of a physician, and is said to be in danger of blood poisoning. He was bitten scores of times. The neighborhood has been much troubled of late with the rodents, and Schneider procured a cat. He had not been a sleep many hours when he was disturbed by an uproar in his bedroom, and, jumping up, saw the cat weakly defending itself from the attacks of the two largest rats he had ever seen. The cat was soon overpowered and killed. Schneider threw a shoe at the rats and pursued them into the kitchen, where they turned upon him. One jumped upon his back and bit his neck. The other ran up his trousers leg and inflicted several bites. Schneider managed to pin this rat to the floor with an ice pick. The other rat he seized by the tail and buried from the windows.

The real objection to tariff relief is the same as the real objection to the British preference—the fact that it was designed by a Liberal Government. Opponents in both cases lacked sufficient economic understanding to formulate logical objections.—Ex.

CAMEO KIRBY

By Booth Tarkington AND Harry Leon Wilson Adapted From the Play of the Same Name by W. B. M. Ferguson

Copyright, 1909, by the Amalee Mizanin Company.

"Oh, yes. Possibly he may come in time to start with me," returned Adele, drawing the General from the window as he again attempted to draw his milk at a draft in order to the window to return to "The Two Princesses—A Romance."

"If Colonel Moreau doesn't come," said Ann Peyton, "that leaves an empty seat in the carriage. How would you ask Anatole to take it instead of riding on horseback?"

"Certainly, I do," replied Miss Haddal, in the same pleasant, lifeless voice. And, although the young creature impulsively kissed her hand, she remained as strangely emotionless and expressionless.

"Come," she added colorlessly; "you and I, Ann, have our packing to do."

"And there is a packing case in the courtyard," sighed Miss Davozac. "Will you see for me if it is secure, dear Anatole?" Then as the two girls left the room she added gravely: "Adele has always been fonder of you, Anatole, than of any other man. You must help to nurse her from this gloom. She wears that mourning now more than a year. Ugh! She looks like a ghost, so full of morbid impulses. Because her father had no one to protect him the poor child thinks she should defend all the world which is in trouble. Last week she was crying home from the cathedral she has given her warm cloak to a ragged woman in the street. That was in the rain. You must help to raise her, dear Anatole, from this gloom."

"It is no secret from all what I would give to make or marry one more," he replied, with glowing sincerity.

When the young creature and his hostess joined the others at their parting the General, unobserved and temporarily forgotten, had taken his book and retreated himself under the table, in which city of refuge he hoped to follow without interruption the further adventures of his two heroes. With all a child's adaptation to environment it was not long before he became completely absorbed in the romance. Presently vague and disturbing cries came stealing in through the open window, and these he impatiently shook off, for momentary impressions in the twilight were trivial compared to the fate of the two princes. But the voices refused to be thus lightly dismissed. Excited cries of: "He went this way! Look in that courtyard! He turned this corner!" certainly merited the sternest attention and searching inquiry of every healthy eight-year-old whose active inquisitiveness cannot be dampened by being dragged from bed before dawn or discouraged by the prospect of an all-day journey. After all, exciting fact is superior to exciting fiction, for the former is but temporary, while the latter is comparatively permanent—to be used as a stimulant or sedative when real life is lacking in appeal.

"Turning around and looking up from under the table, the General's inquiring eyes met those of Cameo Kirby, who, standing motionless by the curtains, was staring at the scene. For a long moment man and boy mutually estimated each other, too surprised to speak. "Come, cheer up," said Kirby at length, unconsciously employing his characteristic phrase. "Don't be afraid."

"I'm not afraid," breathed the General, creeping cautiously under the table.

"Lies the roof of this house touch the roof of the house next door?" pursued the gambler, with a reassuring smile.

"No," said the child, round-eyed.

"Are there people upstairs?"

"Yes, there are."

Kirby considered, no hint of his dilemma in voice or bearing. He felt that he could rely upon this child, who, with all the composure of a self-possessed adult, evinced no alarm or amazement at the sight of an overheard and disarranged young man entering a strange house via the window.

"Does that lead to the street?" he asked, pointing to a door on his right.

The General nodded. He was breathless and terrified with joy. "Are you somebody making a hairbreadth escape?" he stated rather than asked.

"I hope so," admitted Kirby, with a smile. "Do you want to be somebody helping me to do it?"

"Yes, of course. What do I do?"

"Go out on the balcony," Kirby gravely explained, "and look as if nothing was the matter. Lean your elbow on the railing and tell me what you see." He drew aside the curtain as the child, with flushed cheeks and shining eyes, obeyed.

"There are men up on that corner," announced the General at length.

"Don't point," warned the man in the room, "how many men?"

"Five. Two of them all got guns."

"All right! Don't turn your head when you speak to me."

"There's more men hunting through the garden across the street," piped in the boy, wallowing in the satisfying knowledge that at last, by some miraculous intervention of a beneficent providence, he had become an indispensable character in a very real adventure which promised to eclipse the most thrilling hairbreadth escape he had ever read.

"Are any of the men looking up here?" whispered Kirby. "No? Come in, then—quick!" The boy obeyed, he cautiously closed one part of the window, but refrained from drawing the curtain.

"I think," impressively announced the General, approving of these preliminary maneuvers, "that this is better than when the good prince's trusty friend cuts his bonds. Which one are you?"

"Which what am I?" asked Kirby, with a perplexed smile.

"I mean are you the good prince or the bad prince?"

"Oh, I see. Well, I'd like to be the good prince for a few minutes if you'll help me to get away. Suppose you find me a hat, eh?"

The General, with that lively disregard for another's property which every loyal servant of unfortunate princes must possess, instantly seized M. Veaudry's hat, which was reposing on an adjacent chair.

"Thank you," said Kirby gravely, covertly examining the pistol in his breast pocket. "This door leads to the street, you say? And there are five men on the corner, two with guns?"

"Yes. What do we do now?" briskly asked the boy.

The other gravely offered his hand. "Why, now?" he said gently, "we shake hands, and I say thank you. And next we say goodbye."

"All right. Wait till I get my hat."

"That was just said goodbye," remonstrated Kirby.

"Yes, but I'm going with you. You don't know what minute you may need a trusty friend. Besides, I've got to see what happens next."

"That's just what you mustn't," replied Kirby, shaking his head. "Don't you look out of the window when I've gone, and don't you come near the door. What do they call you?"

"General."

"Well, General, I've only known you about two minutes, but I'd hate to get you into any trouble. Now, we both would be in trouble if anybody came in here, so I've got to get out pretty quick, and we'll be in worse trouble if you try to follow me into the street. So I put it to you this way: If you really want to be my trusty friend, just shake hands with me again and say goodbye."

"Will you promise I can be your trusty friend?" said the boy earnestly.

"No matter whether you turn out to be the good prince or the bad prince, I'll always be your trusty friend—always."

"Always," pledged Kirby, with the utmost sincerity.

"Then shake hands," said the General.

They did so gravely. "Thank you, General," said Kirby. "I'll be sure to stay at the sound of a softly closing door. A girl had entered the room, a girl whose color pallor was accentuated by the deep black of dress and hair. She had overheard the boy's last words, had estimated the tableau, and now as Kirby's eyes met her own the warm blood crept into throat and cheeks, and she said impulsively, a little catch in her voice:

"So it is the General who has had the honor of receiving you, after all. I am so glad you have again changed your plans. Now you can go in the carriage with us."

"But you don't understand, Adele," cried her brother, while Kirby looked at his astonishment. "His enemies are after him, and he had to make a hairbreadth escape through our window. He lost his hat in his flight from somewhere."

"Well, General, we'll finish the story after awhile," she interrupted smiling understandingly at Kirby.

"But I tell you he climbed in the window," persisted the excited boy. "I gave him Anatole's hat."

Kirby, his eyes still on the girl, bowed with courteous formality.

"It is entirely true, madam," he said lightly. "Unhappily it isn't a story at all. I have not the honor to be here by appointment, as you evidently infer, but simply by accident—by virtue of the only open window in the street."

"And he doesn't know yet whether he's going to be the good prince or the bad prince," triumphantly added the General, proudly eyeing his hero.

Adele drew back, frightened, un-nerved, her hand creeping to the door-knob. "It—it is a mistake," she breathed, wide-eyed with sudden fear. "You are a stranger!"

"Please don't be afraid of my being the bad prince," smiled Kirby in his most reassuring and light-hearted manner. "If you will permit me, madam, to take this hat, I will vanish as I intended."

"There are men watching the street," she said steadily, holding him with her eyes. "I saw them from my window, is—is it that?"

All fear had vanished, and in her voice there was but apparent a concern for him, the stranger and interloper.

He nodded and turned to the listening child. "General, do you want to be my trusty friend once more? Good! Then do just what you did before—out there on the balcony." When the child, with eager alacrity, had obeyed Kirby stepped in an earnest and steady voice: "I don't know whether or not you can believe a stranger on his bare word, but I'll try. Last night I heard that the worst scoundrel I know was in New Orleans. I met him at sunrise this morning at the docks. I went along, and he came alone. It was a fair meeting. We tried together; he missed, but I didn't, so I had the good luck to come away. Ten minutes later they tried to arrest me for murder. I got away, but I didn't have a long start. When I turned into this street I heard them coming from both directions. There was only one chance to get out of sight—the open window of a strange house. I took it and, he finished with a faint smile, "that's where I am."

She was silent. Then, "But you said it was a fair meeting. Why, then, should they—"

"I can't force it was fair," he interrupted grimly. "I left him lying with his pistol in his hand, but it wasn't there when they found him. They looked each other in the eye, as calmly waiting for her decision, she said calmly estimating him. Then she quietly left the room, quickly returning with a black top hat and a veil. "Take this hat," she said evenly, "it is my brother's."

"Thinking her, he turned to go. But now she was at the window, and after one hurried glance she confronted him with white, drawn face and anger, restraining hand.

"Do you know they are still there, watching?" she cried. "How cruel to hunt a man down like that! You will never be able to get by them. They will kill you."

"If I start they'll know somebody tried to get by," he returned lightly, "and they'll probably finish me one way or the other. This way doesn't involve any legal procrustations."

"That's why I prefer it."

"Don't try it, please don't," she whispered, pushing back her heavy hair. "I cannot let you make the attempt. It is suicide!"

"Why, that's about all that's left to me—to make a good try," he smiled. "Then, suddenly serious and diffident, he added: "May I tell you something? Perhaps the circumstances might excuse it if it sounds overbold for a stranger to say. But it is something mighty precious that the last thing I heard before going out to make my try was the voice of a merciful lady speaking kindly to me and, more precious still, somehow, that it was you. I only wish I was going to have a chance to remember it longer."

"It isn't kindness," she returned simply. "I know that you told me the truth. I believe you are an honorable gentleman wrongly in great danger. I—I have suffered so much myself that it is enough for me to know about you. Listen! Would it be safe for you to cross from our front door to a carriage?"

"Don't try to do anything for me that!"

"If it were a closed traveling carriage—just by the door?" she persisted steadily.

"My story is true, and you have believed it—somehow. But nobody else would," he said grimly. "Please do not try to do anything for me. I don't know your family, but I'm mighty certain that they'd turn me over to—"

"You really must permit me to do as I think best," she interrupted, with an imperious little gesture softened by her eyes. "We must make the best plan possible under the circumstances. It is out of the question for you to boldly leave the house, and that settles it. I couldn't let you make the attempt if you were my worst enemy. ### Busy Times

In Porcupine.

New Buildings of Substantial Character Planned.

Porcupine, July 17.—The forces of reconstruction are hard at work everywhere. If the railway will only ship in timber enough and a sufficient force of carpenters can be obtained, South Porcupine will contain as many houses in two months' time as before the fire. The foundation of the postoffice was laid two days ago, and it should be completed in two weeks' time. M. Cliff Moore of Cobalt, who owns the townsite, has made plans for the construction of a $25,000 hotel in place of the much more primitive structure destroyed in the flames. Nearly every merchant in the little settlement is following his example. Everything that can burn is being cleared off the ground, and the fire engine and appliances ordered before will make the place more secure. The new station in connection with South Porcupine is being now put under construction and the track has been repaired, so that all freight can be carried to its destination.

Military Tents in Use

The 500 tents and 400 blankets brought in by Captain Hannick and ten regulars from Ottawa are now being scattered all round the lake, and South Porcupine bears the appearance of an army encampment. These were especially necessary at Pottsville, where before several families had been crowded into one tent.

At the Preston, East Dome and Standard camps have been swept as clean as West Dome and Dome. The superintendents are for the most part in southern Ontario ordering fresh plants, while the force of men available is being concentrated on the roads, so that supplies and machinery can easily be taken in.

Loss at West Dome $750,000.

The loss at West Dome will be very heavy, probably $750,000. In addition to the plant, the company was using four shot drills, all of which had been destroyed. Until there is a heavy and continuous downpour of rain the danger from a fresh conflagration remains very great.

National Anthem Remodeled.

London, July 12.—A change has been made in the National Anthem. In these days when the main thought throughout the civilized world is peace one of the old verses of the anthem is said to have struck the King as sounding somewhat a discordant note. It runs:

"O Lord our God arise, Scatter his enemies, And make them fall. Confound their politics, Frustrate their knavish tricks, On Him our hope we fix, O, save us all."

"If I start they'll know somebody tried to get by," he returned lightly, "and they'll probably finish me one way or the other. This way doesn't involve any legal procrustations."

"That's why I prefer it."

"Don't try it, please don't," she whispered, pushing back her heavy hair. "I cannot let you make the attempt. It is suicide!"

welve inch gun. For the rifle cordite is pressed into a very thin string, like the finest macaroni, and six of these strands one inch and a half long make the neat little bundle which lies inside the cartridge case. For some European armies cordite is made in flat thin strips like whole-bone. Kept away from fire, cordite can be handled with impunity. —London Graphic.

Great Britain's Drink Bill.

(Springfield Republican.)
The consumption of alcoholic drink in the United Kingdom last year meant an expenditure of $785,000,000 by the consumers; but, while this amount was some what higher than in 1909, it was much less than in 1899, when the drink bill was $930,000,000, almost a round billion. The fact of a decreasing consumption is established also by the marked decrease in recent years in the mortality from alcoholism and cirrhosis of the liver—the scourge of the dipsomaniac.

Indigestion.

If you are suffering from indigestion and the attendant distressed stomach you should give Mi-o-na, the guaranteed remedy a trial. Mr. William Shafer of 230 Queen's St. S., Berlin, Ont., says: "For years I have been a sufferer from acute indigestion, which caused the most distressing pains in my stomach. I decided to try Booth's Kidney Tablets and they have done me more good than anything I have ever used. I am now more free from this trouble than I have been for years. I am pleased to endorse and recommend this remedy to all who suffer with stomach trouble."

Remember Mi-o-na Tablets are guaranteed to cure acute or chronic indigestion and turn the old stomach into a new one in a few weeks. All druggists 50c. a box or postpaid from the R. T. Booth Co. Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont. Sold and guaranteed by J. Sutton Clark.

July 13.—A bulletin on the crops and live stock of Canada is issued to-day. The condition of the field crops of Canada for the month ending June 30, as compiled in the Census and Statistics Office from the reports of a large staff of correspondents, is on the whole quite satisfactory, although on account of uneven rainfall it is not uniform for all the province. Even in parts of the same province, as in Ontario, there is a considerable inequality. For the most part in that province excellent reports are made, but there are districts in which the grains and hay have been badly affected for want of rains in May and June.

For the whole of Canada the condition of winter wheat is only 75.25 per cent as compared with 100 for a full crop. This is ten per cent less than last year, two per cent less than in 1909 and nearly 14 per cent less three years ago. In Ontario it is only 73 per cent of a full crop, as compared with 94.29 last year, 78.60 in 1909, and 88 in 1908. In Alberta, the only other province in which winter wheat is largely grown, the condition this year is 23.22 per cent, compared with 62.62 in 1909 and 95 in 1908. Spring wheat in all the province this year is given the high average condition of 94.78 at the end of June, which is better than in 1910 by 12.62 per cent, better than in 1909 by eight per cent, and better than in 1908 by nearly 15 per cent. Ontario and British Columbia are the only provinces in which the conditions are under 90, and in Saskatchewan and Manitoba it is close to 100.

The average for barley is 93, which is six to ten per cent better than in the preceding three years. It reaches close to 95 in the Northwest provinces, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick, and over 90 in Nova Scotia and Quebec, a point below 90 in Ontario and only 84 in British Columbia.

Oats shows an average of 94.46 for all provinces, which is higher than any year since 1908, and is 95 or higher in Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Quebec and the Northwest provinces. In Ontario, it is close to 90 and over 90 in British Columbia.

Rye, peas and mixed grains are given a condition of about 90 for the Dominion and are higher than many year beginning with 1908. Hay and clover and alfalfa are both below last year's condition, and pasture is a point higher. In the three Northwest provinces the condition of pasture is over 100.

The feature of late cereals is the increase of area in flax, which is nearly 300,000 acres more than last year. The largest increase of flax is in Saskatchewan, where this crop in recent years has grown into great favour.

The numbers of live stock do not show much change from last year, but their condition at the end of June is very satisfactory. All classes are within less than two points of 100, and an excellent uniformity is shown throughout all the provinces.

The newspapers have been reporting omissions on the part of enumerators of the Census, especially in the large cities of the Dominion and notwithstanding the care of the Census Office to ensure the performance of accurate and full work on the part of enumerators it is possible that in some instances persons and even families have been passed over. It is known at the office that many reports of omissions are without foundations, and that generally the enumerator has been well and fully made, although it is yet too early for a final decision. The fact is that the census of a district or enumeration area was often not completed when complaints were first publicly made. The Census Office earnestly desires that the name of every man, woman and child in the country, as well as all other information called for in the schedules, should be recorded as the statute and the instructions require. But lest there should be an inadvertent omission on the part of any enumerator, the Office respectfully invites the co-operation of the public, for the completion of a full census. To this end persons who believe or suspect that they have not taken are asked to notify the chief Officer of the Census at Ottawa, giving their names, post office address, street and number if residing in cities, towns or villages, or concession and number of lot if residing in country places. Letters containing information of this nature are postage free, and if it is found that such persons have not been enumerated in the returns made to the Census Office means will at once be taken to remedy the defects through the local officers of the Census who were employed in the work and who are responsible if any mistakes have been made in their respective enumeration areas.

Building Fireproof Houses.

Concrete, Brick and Terra Cotta Used in Method.
Fireproof construction is not such a very expensive thing and the protection to lives and property is certainly worth the added expense. Every one must realize that if the exterior of a house is of some very permanent and fire-resisting material, a great deal of protection would be afforded to the community and the risk of fire reduced to minimum. It would also work out that the interior of house would be less inflammable for the reason that there would be fewer faces and less woodwork to carry fire. Concrete, brick, and terra cotta tile are all used for fireproof construction.

For the foundation terra cotta tile is laid up in a high wall 16 inches thick. These tiles are tightly laid in cement, and the air spaces prevent moisture from striking through. At the line of the first floor the exterior walls are started of eight-inch tile and built up practically in the same way a brick wall is made. The floor joists rest on the foundation walls and at the line of the second floor are built into a hollow tie wall and carefully anchored. Special blocks are manufactured called jump blocks to form the sides of the window, a d lint and sill blocks to form the top and bottom of the windows, so that the ordinary frame may be set in place very much as a trick wall. These blocks are made of clay burned in a kiln to a degree that produces great strength. They are grooved on the faces which form the exterior of the walls so that plaster, cement or stucco will obtain a firm clinch, assuring absolute bond.

The tile used in the walls of such a house should be eight by twelve by twelve. The floors can be built of this material, but floor construction is found to be somewhat more expensive. However, with floors of this tile the building is practically fire-proof and the permanence of the material will offset its first cost. The interior partitions may be built of four-inch tile. The roof may be constructed of the usual wooden rafters boarded; but covered with slate or asbestos shingles, which are, of course, fireproof. The possibilities of a fire starting and making such headway in any portion of this building are slight. Perfect insulation against heat and cold is obtained by the air spaces in the tile. These terra cotta blocks or tile come in various sizes, the usual thickness is eight inches for outside walls of a two-story dwelling. These blocks are laid in cement on edge, and the walls of the house can be laid up by a mason in a very short time. The exterior of the house may be of almost any style.

A comparison of the steamer Great Eastern, launched in 1860, with the Olympic, which arrived at New York recently on her maiden voyage, is interesting. The former was 600 by 83 by 58 ft., with a tonnage of 19,000. The latter is 822 by 92 by 64 1-2 ft., with a tonnage of 45,000. The Great Eastern was equipped with both side-wheel and propeller engines, while the Olympic has a combination of turbine and reciprocating the greatest failure probably of all history in marine construction, and 28 years after her launching she was broken up.

Knighthood.

(Maritime Baptist.)

The press, without respect to political party preferences, has wondered about some of the royal honors bestowed at the coronation. The note of interrogation has been plain in nearly every reference to at least one of the Canadian knight-hoods. Nobody seems to know why it was. And probably the wherefore and the wisdom of others of the honors have been questioned. Distinguished public service is supposed to be the reason for their bestowment, and when nobody is able to recall the service the public is naturally a little puzzled. The majority of the Canadians who since Confederation have seen some form of royal recognition and had some worthy public service to their credit, though not all. There is, however, a question about the wisdom of conferring any of the titles, even those fairly won and worthy worn by Canadians. For ourselves, we have always felt that the old world titles do not well fit new world men and conditions. Canada is a democratic country. "Democratic to the hilt," to use an oft-quoted phrase, and should remain so. The creation of an aristocracy here cannot be any advantage to the country. Sir this and Lord that may behave very well, and be very much in sympathy with the people notwithstanding their high-sounding titles, but it is likely that a lot of people may foolishly fancy themselves superior beings because descended from or in some way related to titled men. We could wish that every Canadian offered an old-world title would do as Alexander MacKenzie and others, decline it. Let the Sirs and Lords, with all the class distinctions, etc., which attach to the possession of such titles, be confined to the land in which they originated. The "Beyond the Seas" dominions of the Empire would be better off without such things.

A Tribute to London Police.

The tribute to London police force is paid by a correspondent of the New York Post, writing from London:

A starved-looking woman with a child in her arms stood on the curb of Pall Mall, while glittering troops and dignitaries in gold lace marched past. It was the day of the royal progress, the day after King George was crowned in Westminster Abbey. A policeman stood between the woman and the "thin red line of 'eros" who guarded the sole of the route. She began to fidget uneasily, looking at a friend across the street, and the policeman, turning, saw what she wanted.

A group of Far Eastern potentates, with fantastic clothing and headgear had just gone by; a troop of Royal Light Horse was coming on behind, only a minute or so away. The policeman took the woman's arm, guided her between two of the red coats, and escorted her carefully across Pall Mall. A moment later after he had recrossed, the gorgeous body of cavalry stamped majestically between the waiting lines.

For the American onlooker this incident epitomized the whole story of the London police's success in handling one of the greatest crowds that ever gathered. I do not believe that the thing would have happened in New York, and I have seen many parades here.

We hear of the "rule ridden"; people of European countries of the elasticity and adaptability of American institutions. At the coronation the police seemed to be following no rules whatever or else disregarding them with perfect discretion at exactly the right time.

Mud in Maine Now Problem.

Havana, July 18.—The process of removing the water surrounding the wreck of the Maine was practically completed this evening, when the water level in the coffer dam had been lowered 18 feet. The soundings to-night showed nowhere a depth in excess of four feet. The dregs of water remaining in the coffer dam can be removed in a few hours, but it is now apparent that the engineers are confronting a more serious problem, the removal of the mud in which the remains of the battleship are embedded from a minimum of 37 feet to a depth but if an investigation shows that the public are suffering unduly they are granted a measure of relief. The investigation is provided as a means of ascertaining if the relief is necessary.

The working of the system was shown by the investigation of the print paper business. Consumers were found to be suffering unjustly, and a relaxation in the tariff had a relative effect on prices. There is no excuse or justification for leaving the law in such a condition that an investigation can be held up by an appeal to the courts, with all their helpless delays. A complaint made in proper form should be investigated at once, and relief, if necessary, should promptly be accorded. While appeals to the courts are possible, the law may be rendered ineffective at any time. Business is now conducted at such tension that the courts' delays may be sufficient to cause financial disaster. Relief to be effective must promptly follow the disclosure of the need. It may be the manufacturers of shoe-making machinery can take another appeal on new ground, and repeat the wearying progress through the courts. If that is attempted the amending of the law will have to precede its effective operation. If no such obstructive delay is secured it will be the duty of the Department of Labor to act promptly and ascertain if purchasers are in need of tariff relief. If they are the law provides that it can be given by the Governor-General in Council without the slow process of an amendment to the tariff act. It is well as a general principle that taxation should be determined by the elected and responsible representatives of the people in open debate. But where taxation serves purposes other than the collecting of revenue and is liable to facilitate the levying of excessive prices it is necessary to provide a means of according prompt relief at any time.—Tor. Globe.

that can only be conjectured.

Although the water now is only two feet lower than in previous pumping operations, the revelations with regard to the shattered condition of the hull have been vastly enlarged, owing to the lateral outcropping of the distorted frames and plating, especially in the forward section, where the principal force of the explosion was expended. The structure of the bow as far aft as frame 18 has been exposed, permitting of an inspection of that part of the vessel. The double bottom is greatly elevated above its normal position, apparently giving confirmatory evidence of a tremendous exterior explosion.

To this view, however, the engineers in charge decline to commit themselves.

Wild Scenes in English House.

Premier Asquith Unable to Get A Hearing.

CALLED A TRAITOR.

Briefly Announced the Intention to Create New Peers Unless Lords Pass the Veto Bill.

(Canadian Press.)

London, July 24.—After trying vainly for three-quarters of an hour to get a hearing in the House of Commons today Premier Asquith cut short his projected speech and amid a hubbub, declared that if the Lords would not consent to restore the Veto Bill even with reasonable amendments, substantially its original form, the government would be compelled to involve the exercise of the royal prerogative form the creation of new peers.

The House was crowded in a way not seen before for many years. Every seat was occupied. The peers' gallery above the clerk was filled to capacity and the public galleries were overflowing and on all sides were evidences of the intense excitement. The numbers of the lower chamber, usually so decorous, gave vent to their feelings by rising and cheering, frantically and waving handkerchiefs as their respective leaders entered. There were some groans from the Unionist benches intermingled with an occasional shout of "traitor" when Mr. Asquith made his appearance.

The opening scenes of his historic session were among the stormiest ever witnessed in the House. As he arose to speak the Premier was encouraged by a roar of applause from the Radicals, Irish and labor benches, but an opposing volley of cheers came from the opposition while a small group of stand patters busily chanted "traitor, traitor, traitor," until Speaker Lowther warned them to control themselves.

Half a dozen times the premier rose to move consideration of the Lords' amendments to the Parliamentary Bill and each time he howled down, by a din so terrific that the Speaker had difficulty in making himself heard as he appealed to both sides to observe parliamentary decorum. Again Mr. Asquith essayed to speak but he was unable to prevail against the uproar.

Prominent among the disorderly ones was Lord Hugh R. H. Cecil, the Conservative Free trader from Oxford University, who incessantly chanted "Divide, Divide, Divide!" This created fierce indignation on the radical side, from which the members appealed to the Speaker to metaphorically turn him out. Frederick E. Smith, Unionist for the Walton division of Liverpool, injected the claim that the Unionists were entitled to protest in this fashion if they thought that the cabinet had degraded the political life of the country.

This led to a renewal of the outbreak. Meanwhile Premier Asquith stood at the table waiting a lull in the storm. His first word, however, was a signal for another cyclone, and for twenty minutes the premier stood, unable to get in a word.

Cries of "Hurray for Redmond, the real leader," suddenly broke out from the conservative benches. "We will listen to Redmond," they added.

"The British Aristocracy," was the scornful reply of the Radicals. Look at 'em."

Sir Edward Henry Carson, Unionist for Dublin University, moved an adjournment.

The Speaker said that he would be delighted to entertain the motion but the preceding had not yet been started. Again and again Mr. Asquith tried to speak, but a whirlwind of cries drowned his voice.

"Divide, divide," "Let us know the terms of the bargain," "Write another letter," "Toe the line," were among the favorite shouts. A strong appeal by the Speaker finally caused a momentary cessation of the verbal tornado, and Mr. Asquith got out a couple of sentences.

Historic Town Vanishing.

(From the St. Louis Republic.)

Within a few months more the last traces of old "Kaskaskia" first capital of Illinois and one of the first settlements of the white man in the valley will have disappeared. The yellow Mississippi is steadily pulling down the remaining land that was once a part of the town site.

All that now remains is an old building that was once used as a smoke-house by some of the citizens. Houses, stores, ports, church, the remains of powder magazines, stockades, and fortifications have all slid into the river.

Kaskaskia is still on the maps of Illinois, but the town of Tonty, Garvier, Marest, and of the George Rogers Clark expedition is at the bottom of the river. The best efforts of the Historical Society failed to check the river's steady advance

There is a curious lack of exact knowledge as to who settled this old town. Some say that it was established as early as 1682 by men who were with the Chevalier de la Salle. By others it is asserted that Chevalier de Tonty planted the town there years later. Black gowns, as the Indians called the priests, were the first recollection that the savages had of the white men.

State Secrets.

How they sometimes fly Loose. Editor Guessest Right.

Table chatter has led to more than one secret being divulged to the world. When Lord Mayo, the Viceroy of India, was assassinated and speculation was rife as to his successor, Mr. Delane, the famed editor of the Times, was sitting at dinner with Sir Wm. Bull. During the course of the evening Sir Wm. turned to Delane and said, "Lord Northbrook was asking me the other day whether the climate of India would suit him." The Times Editor made a suitable reply, and soon after rushed off to his office. Next morning the paper he so ably managed announced that Lord Northbrook, the Under Secretary for War, had been appointed Viceroy of India. It was perfectly true, but Mr. Delane had merely guessed the truth.

Queen Gave Secret Away.

Queen Victoria once gave important secret away without the slightest intention of doing so. During the Crimean crisis a lady known to her Majesty wrote and said that she was desirous of obtaining an appointment for her boy in the navy, but was afraid affairs would not permit him to be given a post just then. The Queen called upon the writer of the letter and told her that she need not worry about the appointment for her son for "the Fleet is going to the Baltic, and your boy shall go to." The mother, delighted with the good news, repeated it to another lady, who immediately passed it on to a London morning paper.

New London As Rival

Pert to New York.

Hartford, Conn., July 22. Whether Connecticut will go into the business of promoting ocean commerce at New London in competition with New York now depends on Governor Baldwin. A bill authorizing $1,000,000 bonds, on the approval of a commission, has passed both houses, and awaits executive action.

There is talk that this action might be adverse, inasmuch as reports from New York are to the effect that there will be no real dock congestion there for forty years, and that steamship lines and shipers have told Connecticut legislators that they always must prefer New York.

When we hear some people talk we wonder how it is possible for them to change their minds.

An Unhealthy Sign.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

"That the general health condition of the population of Canada is by no means improving and that there is a large percentage of insanity amongst the foreign population recently admitted to the country is the statement made by Edwin R. Rogers, Inspector of prisons and public charities for Ontario, in his 43rd annual report just issued."

"A yearly increase in the number of those who are confined in the different hospitals for the insane shows that the general health condition of the population of the country is not improving and the large percentage of increase of insanity amongst the foreign population recently admitted to the country is a regrettable fact. The institutions are full to overflowing and further accommodations must be provided at an early date," says Inspector Rogers. "Better facilities for the care and cure of the insane are added every year in the institutions and the accommodation thus provided compares favorably with most large institutions for similar purposes in other countries."

Newspar r Space.

(From the Munroe, La. Star.)
Every line in newspaper costs its publisher something. If it is to benefit some individual, he may fairly expect it to pay something. You do not go into a grocery store and ask the proprietor to hand you ten pounds of sugar for nothing, even though the grocer be a personal friend and the gift may not be a large one. If the beneficiary of advertising does not pay for it, the proprietor has to settle the bill.

Nevertheless, many people cannot seem to learn that a newspaper pays its expenses by renting space and that is just as much entitled to collect rent for every day that space is occupied as you are for the house you rent to a tenant.

For Promotion of Business.

Another new steamship connection for the Canadian Pacific Railway was announced today by Capt. Walsh, marine superintendent of the Atlantic lines, who arrived at noon from Montreal. The new route is between the eastern American ports and St. Andrews, and is being inaugurated for the benefit of the sardine business. The service will be performed by one steamer which has been built at Calais. The new craft is one hundred feet beam and will be called the Dozfish. Capt. Walsh leaves for Calais by the N. B. Southern road on Tuesday morning. Speaking of next winter's business through St. John, Capt. Walsh said that the prospects for an unusually heavy crop in the west give promise of shipments through this port when the season opens.

What can be done with HAY? There is another revolution there, with the usual stories of fire and slaughter. President Simon may be a well-meaning man, as his friends assure us that he is, but he cannot keep the people in order. German interference on this continent is not to be tolerated, but neither ought Hayti to be tolerated.--Rx.

The Auxiliary Savings Sloop "Hobo" of Lubec in command of Capt. Hoyt was here on Saturday with several young men from Letete all of whom remained over for the entertainment in the Opera house that evening leaving early on Sunday morning.

The Chatham Gazette of July 24th says that Chas. Fuller of the St. George Pulp Mill was in town last week engaging men to work on the mill, and while there gave them glad talk on the merits of their town, and stated that if he had the time he would have a look over the Mira-Michi Pulp Mill.

At Back Bay on Wednesday at the home of the bride's parents, Miss Elizabeth A. Mitchell and Chas. F. Wright of Beaver Harbor were united in marriage by the Rev. E. A. McPhee. All wish the young couple a pleasant and prosperous journey along life's pathway, they will reside at the home of the groom at Beaver Harbor.

The motor boat Rambler brought the St. Stephen baseball team here on Saturday, and in the afternoon a very interesting and closely contested game was played which in the 8th inning was interfered by heavy showers of rain, in a slight hold up of the rain the St. Stephen's went to bat for the 8th and with the ground, ball and everything wet they managed to get in one run, the rain commencing heavy again the game was called off for 8 innings with a tie score of 2-2.

A sharp and interesting game of ball was played on Wednesday between the town team and the Camp Utopia team which was somewhat marred by the extreme kinky tactics of the Utopia team which resched such a pitch that, Mr. Smith, Coach and Captain, at the conclusion of the game took them severely to task for their conduct which approached very nearly that of the rowdy. We understood that Mr. Ford, one of their tutors, also expressed himself very strangely on the matter. The game ended in a score of 3 to 2 in favor of the home team.

Bad Manners of an Ontario Crowd.

Woodstock, Ont., July 24.--Police were compelled to afford protection to two young ladies during the progress of a band concert. One of the young women wore a Merry Widow hat of remarkable size with veil. Her companion wore a red velvet hobble skirt of unusual skimpiness. They attracted attention from everyone. A crowd of young fellows surrounded them, yelling and the police had to fight their way through to the two frightened girls. The thoroughly distracted objects of the demonstration were hustled and jostled and when the police mounted guard, they were followed down street by a yelling crowd of several hundred.

The latest report has it that the Federal Parliament will dissolve next week and election will take place the first week in October. The reason given for not bringing it on sooner is that the voters lists for New Ontario will not be ready before that time.

The election will most likely be run altogether on the Reciprocity question.

Through the generosity of Mr. Charles Lee, the golfers of St. George have been able to enjoy their favorite game on the beautiful private grounds of Mount Vernon Lodge. Nevertheless, golf has not been a force in St. George until this season, when, all at once, the fascination of the ancient Scottish game seems to strike home. The Mount Vernon golf links on these summer days is the most popular place in town. The summer visitors are enthusiastic over the course, finding it picturesque, with good hazards and long drives. Many a small village has run up to a fashionable summer resort by reason of no other attraction than that offered by its golf course.

Hill Cawley, a well known native and life long resident of the town passed to his rest on Monday morning in his 80th year after a protracted illness of 5 or 6 years during part of which time he was a great sufferer. He was one of the first of St. George's sons to learn the granite cutting trade and worked at it for many years. He was a member of St. Mark's church, and also an active member of the Masonic order of which body he was a postmaster.

He leaves to mourn their loss a wife formerly a Miss Minnie Kilpatrick of St. Andrews, one daughter Miss Kay at home, one son Granville of the Bank of N. S., St. Stephen, an aged mother in her 81st year, one brother F. M. Cawley, two sisters Mrs. Gertie McGee and Miss Hattie, and two half-sisters Mrs. Hugh McLeod and Mrs. Mann, all of whom have the sympathy of the community in their loss. The funeral was held on Wednesday, being conducted by the Masonic lodge was largely attended by that body also by the Forrester's of which he was a member. The Granite mills closed down for the afternoon and most of the employees attended in a body. Most of the stores were closed for an hour during the funeral out of respect for the departed.

HYOMEI! The Treatable Remedy for Catarrh.

The rational way to combat Catarrh is the Hyomei way, viz: by breathing. Scientists for years have been agreed on this point but failed to get an antiseptic strong enough to kill catarrh germs and not destroy the tissues of the membrane at the same time, until the discovery of Hyomei (pronounced High-o-mey).

Hyomei is the most powerful yet healing antiseptic known. Breathe it through the inhaler over the inflamed and germ-ridden membrane four or five times a day, and in a few days the germs will disappear.

A complete Hyomei outfit, including the inhaler, costs $1.00 and extra bottles, if afterwards needed, cost but 50c. Obtainable from your druggist or postpaid from the R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont. Hyomei is guaranteed to cure asthma, croup, sore throat, coughs, colds or grippe or refund your money back. Sold and guaranteed by J. Sutton Clark.

Below we publish an extract from the opening address of A. E. Emery, M. D., President of the N. B. Medical Society, at the annual meeting in St. John last week. This is a matter that should have the careful attention of all, and one that should be taken up by both the Provincial Government and the Municipal Councils, and plans devised whereby one large central home be provided by the province or several smaller ones for 1, 2, 3, or 4 counties as their needs would necessitate.

Advanced Cases of Tuberculosis.

I wish to call the attention of this society to the advanced and incurable cases of tuberculosis. In St. John it is estimated that there are about 1,100 cases in all stages. Several hundred of these must be advanced and incurable. Unless means are taken to educate these to the dangers of spreading the disease, and to isolate them as far as possible, all efforts to cure the incipient cases will be more than balanced by the spread of tuberculosis by the more ignorant and careless of these advanced cases. In order to get good results from the present crusade against tuberculosis much more effort will have to be directed against these cases than is being done at present.

Nearly all the efforts are being directed to the cure of incipient cases, and the incurable are left to go on spreading the disease, especially in homes where poverty, ignorance and carelessness prevail. But more must be done. A large number of those having tuberculosis, require to be removed to hospitals for advanced and incurable cases, both for humanity's sake and for prevention. The public are being educated to be afraid of the disease, and at the same time no provision is made for those advanced cases, who have no homes, and who, in many cases will not be received into boarding houses or hospitals. They are placed in a bad position as if they were lepers. In a much worse position because lepers will be provided and cared for by the province.

This matter is too large to be dealt with by voluntary subscriptions, as they vary greatly from time to time. The prevailing opinion is, that in the end, hospitals for advanced cases of tuberculosis will have to be provided by the Dominion, provincial and municipal authorities, in the same way as they now provide asylums for the insane, general hospitals and almshouses. In the mean time, while we delay, the advanced and incurable cases keep on spreading the disease, and make possible the large yearly death rate from tuberculosis.

The measure passed last year by the Hazen government in regard to the appointment of medical health officers, under certain conditions, in cities and towns is legislation which is already producing good results. The municipality of the City and County of St. John, took immediate action on the new measure. St. John is now provided with an enthusiastic and competent medical health officer who has just returned from Montreal with the degree of D. P. H.

Fortune Gone He Wants To Be Deported.

Montreal, July 14. "Your honor, I came to this country from England, 27 years ago. I've lost $52,000 in this city. I'd like to be deported."

Seventy-three years of age, a drunkard a vagrant, John Vaux is now paying the price that the waster must pay. He was sent to Canada by his relatives because of his drunken habits. He was well supplied with money. During the past five years his little figure, his shabby genteel clothes, his white beard and his little red face have become a familiar sight in the Recorder's Court, in the hospitals and in almost every charitable institution in Montreal. Shaken and weakened by liquor, his attempts to appear dignified, to drag out of the past something of his old-time manner, was pitiable. He was sent to jail for a month. In the meantime an attempt will be made to communicate with his friends in England.

A young fellow from Underwood in town last week when asked what he thought of Reciprocity, replied his mother never used any other than Red Rose. (Port Elgin, Ont. "Times" 7)

Vancouver Man Denies Boom Is Over.

E. J. Oliver, of Vancouver, B. C. takes exception to the statement in the World that "Vancouver's Boom is Past." He says the building permits amounted to over $8,000,000 for the first five months of the year, and that the railway figures show that 1,700 people are going into Vancouver daily to settle and to buy real estate. There is not the slightest indication of the collapse. There are, of course, as the World said, thousands of people walking the streets, but these are men who have come to share in the prosperity and get into real estate. A couple of thousand idle men are striking carpenters.
