Disasters.

New York, Oct 30—Steamer Western Metrapolis, while coming up the bay morning of 28th, came in collision with brig Village Belle, lying at anchor off the battery, carrying away the brig's bowsprit and cathead: the steamer sustained no damage.

The Newburyport Herald says an English steamer, lumber loaded, came into Ipswich bay on unday, during the storm, with loss of rudder, and drifted on the bar, where she remained for three tides, the sea breaking at times entirely over her. The deckload was thrown overbeard, and she succeeded in getting off on Monday morning, and floated upon the flats at the bluff. She must have been a very strong vessel or she would have gone to pieces. She is badly strained.
