One of the entertainers in an attraction outfit which held forth at Leamington last week was a snake charmer. Three of the snakes are reported to have escaped from his collection and there is much concern among the citizens that the reptiles might be of a venomous nature.

Dr. David Friday, Director of Research in the National Transportation Institute at Washington, predicts that wheat will sell in the United States at $1.25 a bushel before election day and at $1.35 before Christmas, and that agricultural discontent in the West will be greatly lessened.

More than 150 Essex county farmers met at Essex Thursday afternoon with the provincial agricultural committee to inquire into farm conditions in Essex county, and while the usual amount of depressing talk was heard, the consensus of opinion seemed to be that the danger point had been reached and passed.

Owners of unlicensed radio receiving sets are warned that, beginning July 1, the Department of Marine and Fisheries will take steps to seize all such apparatus and to prosecute the owners. The penalty on summary convictions is a fine not exceeding $50 and forfeiture of all unlicensed radio apparatus to the Government. Broadcast listeners are advised by the Department to obtain their licenses immediately.

The establishment of an old age pension scheme for Canada is expected to be recommended to the House of Commons by the special committee which has been investigating the subject. The annual pension payable, according to the plans of the committee as far as indicated, is to be $240, payable in monthly instalments of $20. The residence qualification is stated to be twenty years of continuous residence. The pension age is not finally settled, but will be either 65 or 70.

NEWBURY BEAT MT. BRYDGES

RACE MEET ATTRACTS MANY

Glencoe races and horse show, held on Wednesday of last week, attracted a large gathering, the gate receipts being considerably larger than at last year's meet. Had rain not threatened during the day there would no doubt have been a much larger attendance. The various events were keenly contested and created as much enthusiasm as has ever been noted on the Glencoe track.

Results as follows:—

A baseball match in the "Big Four" league series was an interesting feature of the afternoon. The game was a splendid exhibition of ball up to the sixth innings, when the score stood 1-0 in favor of Glencoe. Quite unexpectedly Glencoe then went to pieces, allowing Walkers to score some twenty runs.

Splendid music was rendered by the Strathroy brass band, and in the evening a play put on at the opera house by the Alisa Craig dramatic club attracted a large audience.

COURT OF REVISION

At the Glencoe court of revision on the assessment roll of 1924 the following appeals were dealt with:

Canadian National Express Company.—Appeal against business assessment under legislation passed June 13, 1923. On motion of Munroe and McAlpine appeal was allowed.

Catherine Rey craft.—Assessment too high. On motion of Parrott and Irwin the assessment was lowered $100.

Lambton Creamery.—Assessed too high. No action.

Russell Newport.—Wrongly assessed for two lots instead of one and one-half lots. On motion of McAlpine and Irwin assessment reduced $60.

P. E. Lumley.—Wrongly assessed, also too high. On motion of Parrott and Irwin it was decided to lower the assessment of part 5, half lot, block D. E. s., one-sixteenth of an acre, to $375. On motion of Parrott and Munroe the assessment on his house was lowered $150.

On motion of Parrott and McAlpine, Mrs. Robert Clananah was assessed as owner of part lots 6, 7 and 8, block P. E. s., and Gordon Dickson was assessed as tenant of lot 22, Dean survey.

W. M. S. CONFERENCE

The Presbyterian W. M. S. conference of the Glencoe district was held in Tait's Corners church on Tuesday afternoon, June 10, with about two hundred delegates in attendance.

Mrs. Gauld gave a fine address on her work in Formosa. Mrs. J. M. McEvoy, of London, brought a message from the General Council meeting recently held in Montreal. Mrs. Paton, of Glencoe, and Mrs. Boling broke, of Newbury, gave reports of the provincial meeting in Hamilton.

Miss Hazel McAlpine, of Glencoe, gave a cello solo, and vocal numbers were given by Miss King, of Glencoe, and Mrs. Iermain Galbraith, of Appin.

An offering was taken which amounted to over $27.

DEATH OF MRS. JAMES DOUGLAS

There passed away at the family residence in Mosa township on Friday, June 13, Susannah Adair, widow of the late James Douglas, in her 72nd year, following a brief illness.

Mrs. Douglas was a daughter of the late James Adair, of Glencoe. She was born in Ireland and came to this country fifty-five years ago. Her husband, who was one of the leading residents of this section and prominent in municipal affairs, died in February of last year. Surviving are three daughters and four sons—Mrs. A. D. Campbell, of Metcalfe; Elliott, of Windsor; Andrew, of Mosa; Robert and Helen, of Fleming, Sask., and Ross and Flossie, at home.

The funeral was held from her late residence on Sunday afternoon, with service in Burns' Presbyterian church, Mosa, of which deceased was a member. Interment was made in Kilmartin cemetery.

Mrs. Douglas was very highly esteemed in the community, as was manifested in the large attendance at the funeral and the many beautiful floral tributes from friends and neighbors.

ODD FELLOWS' ANNIVERSARY

The 195th anniversary of Odd Fellowship was observed on Sunday by Glencoe Lodge No. 133, when at eleven o'clock members of the Order to the number of forty-five assembled at the lodge room and marched to the Methodist church, where a special service for the Order was held, Rev. A. S. Whitehall, pastor, officiating.

The Scripture reading was John XV, and the discourse on the three links of Odd Fellowship—Friendship, Love and Truth—three of the cardinal virtues, the speaker stated, of the Christian religion. It was pointed out that if all societies were consistent in their obligations the church would have few perplexities. Christ, he said, was a great Odd Fellow, inasmuch as He was odd enough to set up the high standard of the Christian life in the world.

Special musical numbers were an anthem, "O Be Joyful in The Lord," by the choir, and a selection, "Eden Land," by the male quartette, Messrs. Smith, Trestrain, Whitehall and Singleton.

A number of visiting brethren were present from Newbury and other lodges.

In the afternoon the brethren met at Oakland cemetery and decorated the graves of deceased members of the lodge, twenty-six in number. T. A. Craig, acting noble grand of the lodge, read the memorial service and was assisted in the ceremonies by Dr. Freele. A Union Jack and wreath of flowers was then placed at each grave.

McCALLUM—LEITCH

A quiet but pretty marriage was solemnized at the Presbyterian manse, Kilmartin, on Wednesday, June 11, when Alana Mayhelle, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Leitch, of Walkers, was united in marriage to Ernest Cornell McCallum, son of Christopher McCallum, of Ekfrid. The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. Robertson. The youthful bride wore a handsome gown of pearl grey canton crepe, beautifully embroidered in cut steel beads and blue crystals, and carried a bridal bouquet of Ophelia roses and maiden hair fern. Miss Olive McIntyre, cousin of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, while Charles McCallum, brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man. After the ceremony a dainty luncheon was served at the home of the bride's parents, the happy couple leaving later on a honeymoon trip to Detroit and other points. The bride travelled in a tailored suit of navy poret twill, with hat, shoes and gloves to match. On their return they will reside on the groom's farm in Metcalfe.

THE WEEK IN TENNIS

Wednesday—Mrs. Mac, McAlpine and Chester Bechill defeated Olive Watts and Bruce Armstrong by a draw.

Thursday — Marjorie Gillies and Roy McLean defeated Mrs. Ed. Mayhew and H. I. Johnston.

Friday—Margaret Morrison and R. D. McDonald defeated Betty Grant and Harry Moss. Lorna Luckham and T. A. Craig defeated Joan McLachlan and Arnold Aldred.

Monday — Margaret Morrison and R. D. McDonald defeated Marjorie Gillies and Roy McLean, and Lorna Luckham and T. A. Craig defeated Betty Grant (sub. for Mrs. Mac, McAlpine) and Chester Bechill in the semi-finals.

The feature game of the week was the final played on Tuesday evening when Margaret Morrison and R. D. McDonald defeated Lorna Luckham and T. A. Craig.

Some splendid tennis and hard-fought games were played.

NARROW ESCAPE OF MOTORISTS

A motor car accident which fortunately had no serious results occurred on the Provincial Highway near Strathburn Monday forenoon. T. J. Wallace, of Detroit, was driving with his daughter and grandchildren to their summer home in Muskoka, speeding along at a good clip, when a tire blew out, causing the driver to lose control of the car. Striking an obstacle, the car, a large Hudson touring, rolled once and a half over, making almost a complete wreck of the top, windshield, and side plate glass. No one of the occupants of the car, seven in number, was hurt beyond a few cuts from broken glass and nervous shock. The car was brought to the Central Garage here and restored to running order to be taken back to Detroit. Two of the lady passengers were taken aboard the car of fellow travellers and the others continued the journey by train. That no one was killed or seriously hurt in the accident is considered miraculous.

OUTLET DRAIN IMPROVEMENT

At the court of revision on the assessment drain for tiling the outlet drain in Glencoe the following appeals were dealt with:

F. A. Shaw.—Assessed too high on part lot 39, McKellar survey. On motion of McAlpine and Munroe the assessment was reduced $2 and amount of reduction added to streets.

R. Hicks.—Assessed too high on part lot 24, con. 1, Ekfrid. On motion of Irwin and Parrott the assessment was reduced $5 and amount of reduction added to streets.

Mrs. T. C. Rey craft.—Assessed too high. On motion of Irwin and Parrott the assessment was reduced $20 and amount of reduction added to streets.

John Currie.—Assessed too high. On motion of McAlpine and Munroe no action was taken.

CAMPBELL—BLAIN

BLAIN—WINTER

Wardsville, June 17.—A pretty but quiet double wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Blain, Wardsville, on Wednesday, June 11, at high noon, when their daughter, Lily Mae, was united in marriage to Ernest Bruce Campbell, and Florence Almene Winter, daughter of George Winter, Glenside, Sask., to Thomas Roy Blain, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Blain, Rev. S. J. Bridgman and Rev. R. J. Murphy performed the ceremony under an arch of evergreens. The brides were given in marriage by Mr. Blain, and wore gorgeous gowns of sand canton crepe, sand slippers completing their costumes. They carried sweetheart roses and sweet peas. The bridal party entered the drawing-room to strains of Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus, played by Mrs. George Blain.

Following the ceremony the guests were invited to the dining-room, where dinner was served to fifty, the room being decorated with lilacs and valley lilies.

The brides donned sand shade coats and hats for travelling, leaving for a motor trip through Michigan. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Campbell will reside on their farm, second concession, Aldborough, and Mr. and Mrs. Blain on their farm on the first concession.

Roy and Lily, who are twins and general favorites, received many beautiful and useful gifts.

WILL ABANDON SHORT COURSE

The winter agricultural short course which has been an institution in Middlesex county for the past three years will now be discontinued as a result of the county council refusing a grant towards the course. Three years ago the Middlesex branch of the department of agriculture conducted a successful short course at Strathroy, the county granting $150. Two years ago the department conducted a similar course at Parkhill, when another $150 was granted. Last year the grant was cut to $75, and this year it was cut out entirely by the agricultural committee of the council. The department went $90 in the hole on last winter's course, R. A. Finn stated in addressing the council. If a grant from the council was not forthcoming, the course would have to be abandoned, he declared. It was intended to have next winter's course in Glencoe.

The indications of worms are restlessness, grinding of teeth, picking of the nose, extreme peevishness, often constipation. Under these conditions one of the best remedies that can be got is Miller's Worm Powders. They will attack the worms as soon as administered and they pass away in the evacuations. The little sufferer will be immediately eased and a return of the attack will not be likely.

HOW I MADE IRONING EASIER.

When my iron was dragging one day, a good friend, trying to cheer me, explained that there was no way to make this work easy. I meditated over her words a long time. Finally, I drew a conclusion of my own, one which is a little more cheerful. It is: Ironing can be made easier in most households.

I have found five ways to reduce the toll connected with this weekly task. The work is simplified:

1. By purchasing clothing for the family and house which may be ironed quickly.

2. By avoiding unnecessary wrinkles.

3. By considering it proper to use sheets, tea towels, and crepe garments folded from the line without being ironed, or with a light pressing.

4. By using the best up-to-date methods and equipment.

5. By planning the housework so the ironing will not fall on the day when baking and many other duties must receive attention.

I'll have to admit that I sit on a stool when ironing. It was rather awkward for me at first, for I learned to iron while standing. Now I am exhausted if I spend Wednesday, my ironing day, without my high chair.

The height of the ironing board also is of importance. There is no definite rule to be given about it. If the surface is too high, the worker will feel pains between her shoulders; if it is too low, the small of the back receives the strain. I like an ironing board that is firm, and one which is covered either with several layers of a soft old blanket or one thickness of quilted table padding. I use muslin for the outside covering. This is fastened on with thumb tacks. These may be removed with less effort than pins, and they are efficient in holding the cover in place.

As to the iron, the self-heating kinds are cheap-savers. In homes where electricity is available, of course, the electrically heated ones are fine. However, I have tried many other types of these irons and have found them quite satisfactory.

Ironing machines also are helpful, especially for use in large families.

I know of one farm woman who has one of these appliances; she rents it by the hour to her neighbors after her own ironing is done. I have used two kinds of ironers—those operated by hand in which the cold rolls remove the wrinkles by pressure, and the electric ones with heated rollers.

There are several rules or practices that I follow carefully in ironing, all of which make for good results and the comfort of the worker. They have helped me so much that I have decided to tell you about them.

Every surface is ironed dry before another one is given attention. Wrinkles form in materials that are not ironed dry. I iron as large a surface as possible at a time. This makes for speed.

The sleeves and other parts of a garment that hang off the board are given first consideration.

Aprons hang the best when they are ironed lengthwise, instead of crosswise, from the hem upward to the gathers. I iron the bibs and strings first.

Hems, bands, tucks, folds, and every double thickness of material require extra pressing to remove the moisture and to prevent a rough-dry appearance. When ironing tucks, I pull them taut and iron them lengthwise and downward from the upper part of the tuck to the bottom.

Colored clothes are ironed on the wrong side. I find that this prevents the shine which otherwise makes its appearance on the seams and hems. It is well to remember that too hot an iron has a tendency to fade dyes.

Woolens are covered with cheesecloth when being ironed. I prefer to have the wool fabric half-dry, so the cheesecloth need not be moistened. An iron hot enough to scorch the delicate fibres is not to be used.

To present a shine on silks I iron them on the wrong side with a warm but not hot iron. I work with taffetas and crepes when they are quite damp; to the first type of silk this treatment gives the desired finish and it keeps the latter from shrinkage. If a silk is too wet when ironed, it will be papery.

Table linens are ironed partly dry on the wrong side, then the ironing is completed on the right side.

Ruffles are ironed straight on the hem edge, and then the iron is worked up into the gathers. I like to use a small pointed iron for this purpose.

Embroideries and laces are ironed on the wrong side over a soft padding of Turkish toweling. I pin a Turkish towel over one end of the board when I start ironing, so it will be ready for use when needed.

The garments which need mending are arranged in a pile as ironed. I do this to avoid sorting them out afterward.

Folding is given careful attention; in fact, I consider it of great importance. No matter how beautifully ironed a garment is, it may be wrinkled by improper folding.

I fold rectangular and square table covers with three or four lengthwise folds, pressing them in; if crosswise folds are necessary for storage, they are made without the use of the iron.

Sheets are folded in the same way. Round table covers are a little more difficult to handle. I fold them in half, as he said. It's the simplest explanation, and in my experience one need not search for the obscure.

"You think you can use it—honestly?"

"Of course you can, my dear. But there's one thing—"

"Gaunt bent over and knocked the bowl of his pipe against his boot. 'This matter of a dowry for Alice—I hang it all—am I to do nothing, give nothing? Am I a mere nobody, while Hugo is allowed to strut and—'

"Hector, you know how things were; that I wasn't really your wife."

He went on as though he had not heard. "And I loved you then; I love you now. Perhaps you think it's easy for me to stand aside always. I've a good mind to reach out my hand and take you. You belong to me. Why shouldn't I?"

"Please—please don't say any more."

Hugo's head popped out of the dining room door. He might have heard every word they said.

"I'm ready," he piped.

CHAPTER XXII.

Mrs. Carnay was decidedly upset by Gaunt's outburst. She had not expected such a thing and was caught unawares. It was as though she had been strolling quite placidly down a country lane towards the sunset, a little saddened because the day drew to its close, a little pensive for things that might have happened differently, when suddenly from behind a familiar tree dashed a highwayman demanding the treasure in her purse.

She had not been thinking of the highwayman—she had been thinking of home and the sunset. And, oh, there was so very little in her purse.

This was a little penurious. This was a little gold piece for Contentment—if the fates were kind and would sell so cheaply; that big silver dollar, he represented the price of Fortitude, the possession of which was so necessary for a lonely woman; and the little coins, the sixpences, and threepenny bits, they represented the cigarettes and chocolate of Good, Patience, Good Humor, Smiles. Well, the highwayman had snatched her purse and all that was in it.

In effect he had said: "Having used up the real stuff, I will refresh my empty heart at your expense."

As Hugo and she drove away crowded into the cart with Carlo, she looked back and saw the highwayman standing on his mountain-top, a tall, strange figure, silhouetted black against the sunset, every line distinct—the point of his beard, the bulge of his shirt where the wind caught, and blew out its loosely tucked folds, his arms upraised waving the old panama, his negligently graceful body—all etched against the hot sun.

The dear familiarity of him brought a lump to her throat and tears to her eyes. She waved back, and Hugo, twisting about so that he nearly dislodged her from the crowded seat—must needs wave too.

"I don't know when I've had such a good time," Hugo said, with a happy sigh. "Not for years. Old Hector hasn't changed much, much as you'd think. Only he doesn't seem to care for adventure any more. I tried to talk him into a voyage somewhere, but he didn't enthuse a bit. With my money we could easily fit out a small boat. Of course, there isn't much left in the world to discover, but it would be fun. You could have come, too, Jean. You'd have loved roughing it."

Just the three of us, with quite a small crew," Hugo went on. "But, no—old Hector won't do it. He says he's anchored on Monte Nero and there he means to stay. He might almost be in that Place for all the change he gets. I'm afraid such a life wouldn't suit me. All very well for awhile, but a fellow must do something or stagnate. I shall be doing something, soon."

Jean's heart sank with a sickening sense of helplessness.

"Hugo, surely, surely you won't mind living quietly just—just at first," she said anxiously.

"Oh, well, just at first," he conceded. "That's what I am doing. Been doing it for—"

"Not quite a month," Jean reminded him.

He looked peevish. "A month's a long time, and I've lost so much time already. Fifteen years, Jean. I'm not growing any younger, you know."

"But what do you want to do?"

"Perhaps I'll go into business. Twenty thousand won't last for ever."

"Hugo, you know you're not a bit of good in business. Do, please, for my sake, leave it alone. We shall be rich on what you already have. Really quite rich."

Hugo relapsed into one of his sulky silences. She knew how stubborn he could be if he wanted to.

She began to wish that he had not been successful with his claim upon Mrs. Egan. But, oh, how they needed that money, or even a small fraction of it.

Carlo drove them straight to the Italian bank and Hugo made his arrangements and sent his telegram. On the strength of it, they allowed him to draw 10,000 lire.

Here, again, Jean was faced with worry. Suppose something happened and the money didn't come through? Shouldn't he have waited? Suppose Mrs. Egan changed her mind or—?

Hugo stared at her haughtily. She had shown her apprehension before the bank officials a little too plainly for his taste. He reproved her coldly, begged her to remember that he was not a fool and disliked being made to look like one.

Having said good-bye to Carlo with a generous present, their progress back through the village was marked by the wildest extravagance. A jeweller's window first arrested Hugo's attention and he remembered that he had to buy a wedding gift for Alice. Also a present for Jean.

Jean tried very hard not to be a drag on this freshly-wheeled, but it was difficult. If only he actually had the money safe in his possession she would not have said a word. Of course the lawyer's letter seemed genuine enough; the bank officials—none too scrupulous as a rule—had accepted it as such, and so did the jeweller to whom Hugo gave a cheque for his expensive purchase. That $5,000 cash would not last long if he went on at this rate, even assuming that everything was all right. A pearl necklace for Alice, nothing wonderful, but real pearls are never cheap, and an immense solitary diamond ring for Jean.

Shop after shop they visited all along the Rue Vittoriosa. Emmanuelle, and they returned with silk shawls and stockings, embroidered, laces, fine lingerie, and half a pound of yarn cut—the latter being Hugo's present to himself.

During the climb up to the foot of the Old Town he told his wife what he thought of her. It had been so difficult, on occasions impossible, to get her to enter into his game, the only purchases for which she had shown the slightest enthusiasm being half a dozen yards of glass towelling and some kitchen cloths.

But when they reached the Villa Charnail Alice made up amply for her mother's shortcomings.

"Oh, mummy, how wonderful of him to buy us all these lovely things! Isn't it just like a fairy tale. Think, mummy dear—look back. Why, two months ago we were still in Florence wondering if we'd got enough saved for our poor little splurge, feeling like a pair of conspirators—no, adventures, we called ourselves. And now I'm going to be married to the best man in all the world—don't laugh, mummy, because he is—and Uncle John has come into a fortune and is being so kind to us! Pearls, mummy—real pearls! Oh, aren't they just too sweet! And your ring's a perfect treasure. You ought to have heaps of rings, mummy. Your hands are just made for them."

A great light gleamed in Hugo's eyes—Rings for Jean; heaps of them! That was true. Jean's hands were just made for rings.

Jean hastily choked off the flow of mad suggestion.

"We mustn't let Uncle John spend another penny," she said crossly. "He won't have anything left if he goes on like this."

Hugo glared and thrust his hands into his pockets. "Your mother!" he spat out, in sheer, awful disgust.

But Alice finally restored him to good humor. They went off together to her room and spread everything out on the bed, deciding which was for Jean and which was for the little bride. Most of it turned out to be for

"When Hearts Command"— By ELIZABETH YORK MILLER

"When hearts command,
From minds the wisest counsellings depart."

"And how could Hugo have black-mailed Mrs. Egan?" Gaunt demanded.

"Perhaps she's afraid that he's still mad and might do her an injury if she refused," Jean said. "You see, he—he killed her husband. Probably Mrs. Egan, more than anybody else in the world realizes what Hugo is capable of."

Gaunt pursed his lips.

"That's not altogether likely. No doubt the money was owing to him, as he said. It's the simplest explanation, and in my experience one need not search for the obscure."

"You think you can use it—honestly?"

"Of course you can, my dear. But there's one thing—"

"Gaunt bent over and knocked the bowl of his pipe against his boot. 'This matter of a dowry for Alice—I hang it all—am I to do nothing, give nothing? Am I a mere nobody, while Hugo is allowed to strut and—'

"Hector, you know how things were; that I wasn't really your wife."

He went on as though he had not heard. "And I loved you then; I love you now. Perhaps you think it's easy for me to stand aside always. I've a good mind to reach out my hand and take you. You belong to me. Why shouldn't I?"

"Please—please don't say any more."

Hugo's head popped out of the dining room door. He might have heard every word they said.

"I'm ready," he piped.

CHAPTER XXII.

Mrs. Carnay was decidedly upset by Gaunt's outburst. She had not expected such a thing and was caught unawares. It was as though she had been strolling quite placidly down a country lane towards the sunset, a little saddened because the day drew to its close, a little pensive for things that might have happened differently, when suddenly from behind a familiar tree dashed a highwayman demanding the treasure in her purse.

She had not been thinking of the highwayman—she had been thinking of home and the sunset. And, oh, there was so very little in her purse.

This was a little penurious. This was a little gold piece for Contentment—if the fates were kind and would sell so cheaply; that big silver dollar, he represented the price of Fortitude, the possession of which was so necessary for a lonely woman; and the little coins, the sixpences, and threepenny bits, they represented the cigarettes and chocolate of Good, Patience, Good Humor, Smiles. Well, the highwayman had snatched her purse and all that was in it.

In effect he had said: "Having used up the real stuff, I will refresh my empty heart at your expense."

As Hugo and she drove away crowded into the cart with Carlo, she looked back and saw the highwayman standing on his mountain-top, a tall, strange figure, silhouetted black against the sunset, every line distinct—the point of his beard, the bulge of his shirt where the wind caught, and blew out its loosely tucked folds, his arms upraised waving the old panama, his negligently graceful body—all etched against the hot sun.

The dear familiarity of him brought a lump to her throat and tears to her eyes. She waved back, and Hugo, twisting about so that he nearly dislodged her from the crowded seat—must needs wave too.

"I don't know when I've had such a good time," Hugo said, with a happy sigh. "Not for years. Old Hector hasn't changed much, much as you'd think. Only he doesn't seem to care for adventure any more. I tried to talk him into a voyage somewhere, but he didn't enthuse a bit. With my money we could easily fit out a small boat. Of course, there isn't much left in the world to discover, but it would be fun. You could have come, too, Jean. You'd have loved roughing it."

Just the three of us, with quite a small crew," Hugo went on. "But, no—old Hector won't do it. He says he's anchored on Monte Nero and there he means to stay. the bride, since Jean had behaved so badly and Hugo thought it just as well to teach her a lesson.

They got to talking about Jean in the privileged way assumed by close relatives. Alice stood up for her mother, but at the same time there were little holes here and there which she admitted could be picked in even so fine a fabric. For instance, mummy did worry a lot and was apt to cross bridges before they were actually in sight; and of late this tendency seemed to have grown worse instead of better.

"She's getting old," grumbled Hugo. "That's what it is. Old and set." He was determined to insult Jean in every way he could think of.

"Mummy old! Why, Uncle John, she's only thirty-eight or nine. But I'll admit I never noticed how young she was until we came to Bordighera. Uncle John, do you think mummy will ever marry again?"

Hugo started so violently that his eyeglasses tumbled off. "I never thought about it at all," he replied as he stooped to retrieve them.

Foolish Slaughter of Birds.

It is declared by the best French authority that swallows and other small birds during their migratory passage are slain in thousands by every conceivable device, including metal perches charged with electricity by which enormous numbers are killed by a single stroke, to be afterwards plucked, roasted and served up to gourmets in the French restaurants of towns and cities bordering on the Mediterranean.

LAUGH YOUR WAY TO HEALTH

A moderate amount of fitness in a man or a woman has a steady effect on the nervous system. Fatty food is most valuable in building up the nerves, for much of the substance of the nervous system is chemically of a fatty nature. Fat people are rarely "nervous" in the sense of having irritable nervous systems, though we must not jump to the conclusion that because a person is fat his nerve-centres are necessarily well nourished.

There is more than one kind of obesity, some kinds indicating anything but good nourishment! But as a rule, it is thin people who are nervous. Julius Caesar, who was a good judge of reliable men, liked to have about him men that were fat, "sleek-headed men and such as sleep o' nights." As a rule, such men are good-natured, reliable, comfortable fellows. Now, are these folk so abundantly nourished because they are so contented, or are they so contented because they are so abundantly nourished?

Cultivate a Cheerful Mind.

The new physiology dealing with the functions of the ductless glands, the thyroids, the adrenals, the pituitaries, and the others, and their external secretions, supplies the answer. It is the minds of these cheery souls, and the emotions that spring from them, that control and regulate the operations of their bodies, by increasing or diminishing, by starting or stopping, the secretions of these various glands which operate what we may call the machinery of digestion, assimilation, the building-up of tissues, the elimination of waste—even the processes of thought itself.

A cheerful mind, then, is a direct stimulus to adequate-nutrition of the body. And that human experience had recognized the connection between gaily and plumpness is evidenced by that old adage, "Laugh and grow fat."

"Hearty laughter" is in itself a species of physical "jerk," which, when repeated at frequent intervals, has all the effects of fairly strenuous muscular exercise.

Don't be a Pessimist.

That is to say, the hearty laughter takes a great deal of exercise, does a surprising amount of deep breathing, floods his entire system with vivifying oxygen, develops a healthy appetite, burns up a remarkable amount of waste matter, and does much other fine physiological work—all without knowing it. When not laughing outright, thick-kitch folks are in a sense of humor is given to that inward form of laughter termed chuckling, which operates in the same way as open laughter, but in a proportionally smaller degree.

Now, just as joy, happiness, contentment, and similar emotions augment the intensity of the vital processes, improve nutrition, and fortify the body against disease, so do such mental states as moroseness, despondency, pessimism, and the like, by their action on the internal secretions of the ductless glands, depress vitality, pervert nutrition, permit the formation of toxins in the body, and render the various organs an easy prey to self-developed and infective diseases.

Do You Fear the Future?

The ill-nourished, gaunt, cadaverous folk who appear to be starving in the midst of plenty are very often the victims of their habits of mind. They are "eaten up" with jealousy, envy, and uncharitableness; "devoured" by worry over trifles; "worn to a shadow" by unfounded fear of the future. The saving grace of humor has been denied them, and they are unable to see life in its true perspective.

Those who are denied or deny themselves the gift of easy laughter are to be pitied.

SUMMER CARE OF YOUR HORSE.

More men fail in the care of their horses during the hot weather than at any other time of the year. We have gathered together a number of suggestions which will be found to be valuable for the benefit of your horse, and your pocket, during the hot summer season. Remember that cleanliness always travels side by side with kindness.

The horse, like yourself, is subject to the troubles, diseases and pains of life. Therefore, be merciful.

GENERAL RULES.

1. A clean stable. No manure should be allowed to gather. The cleaner you keep the stable the better for the horse and yourself.

2. Screens on doors and windows. Plenty of fresh air (most important) can thus circulate, and flies can be kept from your horse.

3. Sponge your horse often where he sweats the most. Rub him dry. Fluffy towels are good and cheap. Do not use the hose on your horse.

4. Cleanse eyes and nostrils, and occasionally the ears.

5. You cannot be too careful of the hoofs. Never allow yourself to leave the stable at night without thoroughly cleaning the lower portions of the legs and fetlocks. Where clay can easily be obtained, it will pay to pack the hoofs at least three times a week, making the clay into a stiff paste.

6. Watch the shoulders. If, while working your horse, you find the shoulders getting sore, far better for the horse, and yourself, to stop working for a half hour, rub down the shoulders and apply the following hardening lotion:

Tannic acid 1½ oz., powdered alum 2 oz., carbolic acid 1 dr., water 1 qt. (I saw a span of horses last year that had been working on railroad construction for seven years, and had not been laid off for longer than two hours during that time on account of sore shoulders. The owner always had a jug of the above lotion right on the job and kept his horses in condition in the manner as advised in this article.)

7. Occasionally, during the day, sponge the head, neck and eyes.

8. Do not fasten a sponge on top of the head, unless you keep it wet.

9. The straw bonnet is of some service, if there are ventilation holes through the sides. If the holes are not there, the use of the bonnet increases the temperature at the top of the head, just where it is least wanted.

10. Give your horse small quantities of water many times during the day.

11. When your horse comes in from a day's work in the hot sun, give him a chance to "cool off" before putting him into the stable, and give him plenty of water in small quantities. Then put him into the stable and feed. The above is a particularly helpful method during the hot humid weather, such as was experienced in this country for some days last summer. If you fail to treat your horse, as just advised, he is liable to start out tired the following morning and may collapse before the day's work is done.

12. Give your horse a chance to roll. It is oftentimes better than a dose of medicine for him.

13. If your horse is off his feed, give him a few carrots, or a bunch of clover, then two quarts of crushed oats mixed with a little bran and moistened, and add a little salt or sugar.

WHAT IS A BALANCED RATION?

The balanced ration idea is about twenty-five years old. That is, the talk of balanced rations was a comparatively new thing among farmers of twenty-five years ago, and it meant at that time, that a certain percentage of protein, carbohydrates and fat, must prevail in the ration to make it balance. Too much protein would cause the animal to grow muscle and frame or give milk, at the expense of flesh, and too great a proportion of carbohydrates and fat would produce fat at the cost of growth.

The world keeps moving on, we live and learn, and our ideas change as they are influenced by the information we take on. We have learned that there are many things essential to the well-being and normal development of an animal besides protein, carbohydrates and fat. We hear a great deal these days about minerals in the ration, and the newest thing we talk about in connection with proper food is vitamins. We all understand what minerals are and can readily see the connection between lime, phosphate, and salt, and strong bones, vigorous constitution and good digestion.

But these vitamins, what are they? What do they look like? Where do you get them? One needs a good imagination and a little scientific knowledge to comprehend them. But they have always been prevalent in greater or lesser degree in the live stock foods of the farm.

For all practical purposes we may consider them, along with minerals, as some of the "other things" that are essential to make a perfectly balanced ration. We understand then, that a balanced ration means a ration that contains, in correct proportions, all the elements that go to build up a perfect animal body, keep it in perfect health, and functioning after the manner of its kind. The horse must produce energy, the cow, milk, the sheep, wool and mutton, the hog and the steer, meat, and if the ration is thoroughly and completely balanced, they will do these things in a creditable manner and at the same time keep physically fit. Providing, of course, that such action is not made prohibitive by conditions of heredity, or disease with which the ration has nothing in common.

There are a great many combinations of minerals that are good, from a plain home mixture of wood ashes and salt, to those that are prepared by others and placed on the market at $5.00 or more per hundred pounds. A very efficient and easily provided mixture may be prepared on most any farm by combining wood ashes, barrel salt and rock, bone or acid phosphate that comes in the fertilizer sack. The self-feeder offers a convenient way of feeding them, and it only takes a little to go a long way.

The leafy portions of clover, alfalfa and other leguminous hays and grasses, are rich in the life-giving and health-promoting vitamins. Bright, clear hay in winter, and fresh forage in summer are as essential to the welfare of our domestic animals, even the hogs and the hens, as are the concentrated grains. They and the minerals are needed to round out the ration and to satisfy the animal's natural appetite, which is the most accurate balance of the ration.

semidarkness, which the sheep like to use during the heat of the summer day when flies are too aggressive. When furnished a dark room against the flies, both ewes and lambs thrive.

Concrete Facts.

The common practice is to use old lumber for building concrete forms. Many buy new, seasoned lumber and use this with a view to using it again in building the structure above when the walls have been completed.

But when the lumber is to serve no other immediate purpose after the walls have set, green lumber is, in many respects, better than cured lumber. All wood absorbs some water when used in this way and if dry boards are nailed tight and then allowed to absorb water from the concrete they will buckle and warp.

Green lumber, since it is already impregnated with an above-normal supply of moisture, will draw less from the concrete, and board dimensions will remain practically unchanged.

Before tearing off the forms in cold weather, remove one or two boards first and then apply hot water. If the water is colored or if rapid erosion takes place it is a sign that the concrete has not set but is frozen. If the forms are then removed, thawing would ruin the wall. But if the forms are left until the wall has thawed and then set, the concrete, though of an inferior quality, will usually give service.

When concrete work is carried on during freezing weather, either use hot water and pour the mortar quickly, or heat the sand and cement before mixing. If the concrete is more than 100 deg. F. when placed, it will set before freezing.—D. R. V. H.

How To Hang Our Pictures

BY DOROTHY ARNOLD.

"Pictures are for art museums, not for the walls of a house," a prominent lecturer declared recently. Such a statement draws instant protest from us, for how uninteresting our rooms would be without the relief of pictures! But when we consider the pictures on some walls, we see his point. For a room "full of pictures" means a cluttered and varied assortment of shapes, sizes, colors and subjects unrelated to each other or to anything else in the room.

A good rule is not to purchase a picture until we are sure just where it is to go and how it will look in that place. Most of us, however, have pictures on hand, inherited or given to us. Those should be hung which "fit in"; the others put away. This sometimes takes courage but after all our homes are ours!

Very often we come upon pictures which we wish to have framed. Many popular magazines print full page pictures lovely in subject and color, and very suitable for framing. Bright, gay covers from fashion magazines make delightful pictures for bedrooms and there are photographs which we wish to preserve by framing.

A narrow moulding of wood in old-gold finish makes the best possible frame for color prints. It is good to omit the mat and to have the frame come up close to the picture. Prints or photographs in sepia or grey and white are good in narrow frames of brown or grey wood. These should be of about the color of the next to the darkest spots in the picture. Black is not so pretty as it detracts too much from the picture, something which the frame must never do. For photographs, a mat may be used or the picture framed up close. Most photographs are best in frames with a stand placed upon a table, bookcase, or bureau rather than hung upon the wall. An accumulation of photographs is not in happy choice. I shall never forget a house in which I once lived where the walls were covered with hundreds of photographs of friends and relatives. Clustered about the mirror in one bedroom alone there were thirty-six of all shapes and sizes! The effect was almost that of a nightmare.

The manner in which pictures are hung can mar or make the looks and "feel" of a room. They should never be hung high. As one notices pictures mostly from a seated position, this should be taken into consideration. A good rule is to establish a line directly opposite the eyes when one is standing, and to hang all pictures so that this imaginary line will pass through their centres. This brings them into the line of vision from all parts of the room whether one is seated or not.

Every farmer should have one. Often narrow strips of board are needed; to rip them with a handsaw from a board is slow and tiresome work. To make a trip to town every time some are needed takes time and the cost is high; you can buy the saw, also shaft and bearings, for the price of a few pieces already ripped out, at dealers' present prices.

Make a substantial frame from 2x3-size lumber, spiked or bolted together, with braces of boards nailed on; from the junk dealer you can get a suitable shaft and bearings with a matter of a dollar or so for one of five-inch size, which is large enough. Fasten the bearing to the frame with bolts or lag screws, cover the top of the frame with boards, allowing an opening between them for the saw. A strip of wood can be used for a gauge, having holes bored in top boards or in which to insert bolts of gauge. For power, a small gasoline engine will pull it or if you have electric power a quarter-horse motor will pull the saw through inch boards and rip up a lot in a hurry. Try one; you will wonder why you did not make it before.

Some people grieve two dollars' worth every time they lose a dollar.

A soft handful for the girls who hold them, these fluffy pups may prove a tough handful later for the driver of the Chateau Frontenac dog team. Mountie, the famous leader of the popular team, is the father of this quartet and four beside, Wabeka, another member of the team, the mother of them all. Arthur Beauvais will give them their first lessons at Quebec next winter, a job being their first lead.

Home Education

"The Child's First School is the Family"—Proebel.

"Comparisons Are Odious"—By Edith Lochridge Reid.

Clifford dislikes his cousin Frank—in fact the dislike almost amounts to hate—and the only reason is that ever since the two boys were old enough to distinguish right from wrong Frank has been held up as a "shining example" of behavior.

"Frank wouldn't sit down in the dirt with his best clothes on," is the way Clifford is reprimanded for his carelessness. "Frank doesn't take such big bites of food," is offered as an incentive toward good table manners. The truth is that Frank is naturally disposed to be neat. His temperament is entirely unlike Clifford's and it isn't an effort for him to be clean and polite. Clifford has many good wholesome qualities, but he is husky and decidedly boylike, an altogether different make-up. But these things are not taken into consideration by his mother.

There is just one reason why a child should be asked or expected to act in a certain way or follow a given line of conduct, and that is because such a course of action is right and proper, not because some other child does thus and so. If you are going to set up an ideal for a child to attain, be sure the ideal is infallible. He will not reach this perfection of course, as no human being ever does, but it will be worth striving for. He should be inspired with an inward consciousness of right and not directed to act like some other child.

Julia's mother was very much crushed one day to find that her small daughter had stolen a bag of popcorn from the peddler's wagon.

"How could you do such a thing and make your mother feel so bad?" was the first reprimand Julia received for this misdeed—a remark which in itself was very bad psychology. A child should be taught to be honest because stealing is wrong and not because it makes mother feel bad.

"Betty took a bag first," said Julia defending herself.

"That's no excuse for you, my dear; you can't take things that belong to someone else even if your friend does."

"But mother, you always tell me Betty is so nice and quiet and good to her baby sister, so now why don't you put the blame on Betty?"

Can you wonder that Julia showed this resentment?

This case illustrates the fallacy of holding another child up as an ideal of behavior. Perhaps Jack does keep his hands clean but he may be deplorably deceitful. Suppose Mildred does go to bed without putting and picks up her playthings without being told, she may be a very disagreeable, selfish little girl when she plays with other children. So beware of holding Mildred up to your little Mary as an ideal, for Mary knows all about Mildred's faults. It all comes back to what Julia insinuated to her mother about Betty, that if an ideal is set up it should be followed in all points—and yet there never was a child so perfect that you could say you wanted your child to be like him in every respect.

The only safe way, then, is to comment favorably on the good traits of your own child, and by thus stressing his best natural characteristics, inspire him to develop other good ones, not because some playmate has these qualities, but because they appeal to him as desirable. And, whenever you are tempted to set up "shining examples" before your children, remember the old saying, "Comparisons are odious."

Handling Natural Swarms.

To facilitate the handling of natural swarms, clip the wings of all laying queens early in the season, preferably during the first honey flow. Clipping the queen's wings does not stop the colony from swarming but prevents the queen leaving with the swarm, which will return as soon as the bees realize that the queen is not with them. When the swarm issues, the queen will usually be found on the ground in front of the hive. Place her in a small box or cage and while the swarm is in the air move the old hive from its stand, replacing it with a new hive fitted with empty drawn comb or foundation. Over the new hive place a queen excluder and on top of this, all the supers from the old hive. The swarm will return to the new hive and as the bees enter the queen can be released among them at the entrance.

To prevent after-swarms, the combs in the old, parent colony should be examined at once, all queen cells destroyed, and a young laying queen introduced. If queens are available, leave one capped and one uncapped cell. The parent colony is left standing by the side of the new hive, but with its entrance facing at right angles to that of the new. Turn the parent colony a little each day so that in about six days its entrance will be facing in the same direction as the new hive. On the ninth or tenth day, when the bees are flying freely, move the parent colony to a new location, this will cause all the workers to unite with the swarm.

If by accident a swarm issues with a flying queen, it will usually cluster on some nearby tree or bush. After the bees are all settled, the limb on which they cluster can be cut off and the swarm carried and shaken down in front of a hive prepared for it, or it can be returned to the hive from which it issued, first destroying all queen cells. The old queen also should be killed and the colony queened ten days later with a young laying queen.

Loss of Milk.

In an experiment conducted by the Dairy Dept. of the Ontario Agricultural College to find the loss in weight, if any, in the process of pasteurizing milk, the following conclusions have been reached:

1. In commercial work probably over one per cent. of the weight of milk heated and cooled is lost when the pasteurized milk is placed in cans.

2. On the average, about thirty-quarts and one pint of bottled milk may be obtained from 100 lbs. of pasteurized milk.

3. From 100 lbs. of raw milk about thirty-seven quarts of bottled, pasteurized milk may be expected.

4. The volume of cream which rises on the milk decreases with a rise in the heating temperature above 142 deg. F., when pasteurized for the city milk trade.

Old stovepipes make excellent cat guards for small trees and poles. Open the seam, pass the pipe around the tree and then clamp the seam together again. For larger trees two pipes can be used. The pipe should extend about five feet from the ground. No cat can get over this.

In burning rubbish out of doors, build the fire in a safe distance from buildings, and never light fires on windy days. Two serious fires were recently started in a neighborhood by burning rubbish.—C. P. S.

SELLING SURPLUS PRODUCE

How can the farmer turn his excess produce into money? A farmer finds that he has on hand twenty-five more Hubbard squashes than he can use at home. He asks the village storekeepers about taking them, but they are all stocked up with squashes. The thing that naturally suggests itself is a canvass of village or nearby city families, selling from door to door until the squashes are sold.

This door-to-door method of selling is sure to result in some sales, but it is an unpleasant method at best and it takes time and brings many unpleasant experiences at the outset. There are better ways of getting results.

Here is a suggestion about those squashes. Get a supply of stamped envelopes and post cards at the post office. Write ten or twenty short letters about like the following, and mail them, enclosing with each one of the postal cards addressed to the farm:

Dear Madam—You use some Hubbard squashes. I have a few mighty nice ones, good sized and perfect. The big ones are twenty cents, the medium-sized ones fifteen cents.

Mail the enclosed postal card, telling me how many you want and I will bring them to you. They will keep for months. Now is a good time to buy for winter use.

Twenty letters would cost about seventy-five cents to send, postage included. If they sold the squashes, the money would be well spent because, with a man's time worth anything, he would use more than seventy-five cents worth of it peddling the squashes from door to door.

But little consideration, however, is necessary to show that it will pay better to group as many different kinds of produce as possible in order to make sales larger, thus reducing the cost of selling. The farmer who goes from door to door with squashes, pumpkins, potatoes, eggs, poultry or what not, will find that he has something of interest to almost every housewife. Those who do not care for squashes want something else. In the same way his letter, in which he gives a list of all these things and the prices, brings a good many more orders and costs no more to send out.

Just a word about the naming of the farm. If the farm has a distinctive name and it is used in letters offering produce, or in any advertisements, the value will be just like that of a well-known name for a store. It comes to stand for reliable products in the minds of the public.

If this name is to be used in connection with the advertising and selling of the farm's products, it is wise to use such a name as really stands for the man behind it. A name like Prettyvale may sound well and look nice on paper, but it has no value less than that of "Hopkins Farm," which combines the sturdy character of a generation of Hopkins with the location. This matter of a good farm name is something to be studied for a while, not decided off-hand. The name, when chosen, ought to appear on the farm barn, or at the farm entrance, and on the farm truck or lumber wagon, as well as on the farm stationery. It can be made a sort of trade mark for reliable products.

The popularity of the automobile works both ways for the farmer. It enables him to get his produce into town quickly, and it gives him a different opportunity, based on the ability of townspeople to come out to the farm.

All over the country farmers are cashing in on the fact that hundreds of people are passing their doors. Everywhere are springing up roadside stands where the farmer or his boys and girls sell everything from livestock to "hot dogs." Many a farm boy or girl is making the money for a college education in that way. A little touch of originality, a cleverly arranged and attractively placed stand, will bring in many dollars on bright days. In front of a certain good-looking farmhouse is a very good-looking refreshment and lunch stand with the sign above it: Sister Sue's. A few hundred yards down the road in each direction is placed a plainly lettered sign, "300 Yards to Sister Sue's," or something similar. Originality is what attracts attention in these cases.

The other day I passed a farmhouse in front of which, by the road, set a half-bushel of apples with a card, "Good Cooking Apples, 75c." That was all. It was enough. Sufficient motorists stopped and went into the house and bought apples voluntarily to take up the surplus supply.

The Life of Inoculation.

If a legume has been grown successfully on a field, grown with full nodule development, and then is grown again for a long period, how about inoculation?

Many of the students of the question put the dead line at about seven years. After seven years better re-inoculate on seeding. Considering the relatively small percentage of our land that goes into legumes, and the long intervals between plantings on a field, probably many slips are made through overlooking inoculation precaution.

A green salsman sells more than a blue one.

THE CHILDREN'S HOUR

LAST DAY OF SCHOOL IN WOODLAND.

Only four days more before the last day of school. Hurray! Hurray!" sang Jimmie Fox.

"Yes, Hip! Hip! Hur-ray!" answered Jackie Rabbit. "School's been fine, but I'll be glad for vacation, too."

"Wish we could have a picnic like the boys and girls over in Frog Hollow did," wistfully spoke little Fanny Fox.

"Let's ask teacher. Maybe he'll let us," they all chimed in.

When the plea was put to Teacher Fox, he wrinkled up his long straggly eyebrows, peeped over the top of his glasses at the group, and consented.

So that was how on this bright sunny day all the little animal boys and girls of Woodland happened to be by the big lake in the woods, with their lunch baskets packed full of so many goodies. Everyone was ready for a good time, and that's what they had.

"Let's play train," suggested little Jennie Squirrel.

"Tell us how," asked all her playmates.

"It's easy and lots of fun," she said. "First we'll get in a circle and I'll choose Sandy Squirrel, Fanny Fox and let's see—Willy Woodchuck, I guess—to be the 'engine'."

"When I say 'go,' each 'engine' must go up to some one in the circle and make a noise like an engine. Too! Too! To-oo. The one he faces must do the same and then turns and 'hitches on' to the engine and is the first coach of the train. Each engine keeps on doing this until there is a long string of cars behind."

"Teacher Fox can be conductor, and when he says 'all aboard' each train starts for the big oak tree by the lake. The first train to arrive with all its passengers wins."

"A fine game, won't that be fun?" they all shouted.

What fun they all had playing train and trying to see which train could be the first one to the station.

But it wasn't long before they found themselves very hungry. Teacher Fox called them all together and how good that picnic lunch did taste—

—heaps better than when at school. After lunch they played some more games and each one got home just in time for supper. Every little boy and girl in Woodland thought they had the most fun they could remember.

"I'm awfully sorry this is the last day of school," said little Winnie Woodchuck to Teacher Fox. "Now we'll have to wait a whole year before we can have 'the last day' again."

Too Much Oil.

The generator on a flivver showed no charge until the car had been driven for at least five miles. Then apparently it worked all right. The armature was cleaned and the generator tested without discovering anything wrong, yet the trouble persisted. The brushes appeared all right but finally a new set was installed and the trouble disappeared.

Overhauling of the generator causes the oil to collect on the commutator from where it works onto the brushes. This has the effect of insulating the surface of the brushes until the frictional heat of the running generator has had time to melt and break down the oil film and the brush again acquires its conducting properties.

A. E. Sutherland, Publisher.

Lorne A. Eddy, editor and proprietor of the Walkerton Telescope, was elected to the position of president of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association at the annual convention held in Toronto. The Association is to be congratulated on having the young and energetic Eddy at its head.

"In crossing Canada on my way back to England, after a tour of Australia and New Zealand, I find that this country is in need of a great awakening, and a full realization of its tremendous possibilities," said General W. Bramwell Booth, commander of the Salvation Army, in an interview.

As an illustration of how little sentiment gets into business, The Financial Post, of Toronto, points out that investigation shows that immense quantities of German arms are being imported into Canada by wholesalers and find a ready sale. It is pointed out that statistics show that in 1923 the value of German shotguns imported increased to $78,000 from $4,731 for the year previous. The fact is that these guns are really German rifles made for and used in the Great War, and that they have been converted into double-barrelled shotguns. "On account of the conditions under which they have been bought and converted they are able to undersell other and more standard makes of guns, and the fact that they were some time ago used to kill and maim soldiers of the Allies has not hampered their sale."

It is too early to speak with certainty of Canada's western wheat crop. The news to the present is quite favorable, which is not the case in regard to the United States. In the latter country the government forecast is 693,000,000 bushels of wheat, which would be $3,000,000 bushels below the actual yield last year. Conditions according to this forecast are worse than for some years past. Canadians do not wish misfortune to any other country, but cannot shut their eyes to the fact that a poor crop in the United States and a good one here would give the Dominion a big advantage in the export market for hard wheat. In spite of the agricultural depression of last year the farmers of Canada have faith in themselves and in their country. Everyone will wish for them better crops than they had hoped for and price conditions which will be fair recompense.

Many mothers can testify to the virtue of Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator, because they know from experience how useful it is.

COUNTRY HOTELS

The automobile, and the good roads movement it inaugurated, have added a good many millions to Canada's annual income. Thousands of foreign tourists now make their way to the numerous beauty spots and resorts of quietness or of sport which make the Dominion unique as a recreation resort. And touring automobiles leave welcome money all along the trails behind them. Business receives a greater quickening from this source than many are aware of. Estimates range between seventy-five and one hundred and sixty million for the total left in our country last year by such visitors, and the volume of travel is steadily on the increase. Next to good roads, beds, the most important aids to this really important business are good, well-managed country hotels. The average tourist prefers to put up in the cooler, quieter country, but will nevertheless push on to the next town rather than lodge over night in an uninviting, badly kept, unaccommodating, mosquito-infested wayside hotel. Many a village has lost thousands of dollars its business men and food producers could have made good use of, because of its poor hotel accommodation. Municipal councils would be but helping their constituents if they gave serious attention to this matter. The day has gone by when the hotel was the nightly meeting place of a noisy, swilling, rag and bobtail of loafers, with its bar as its principal source of revenue. Now it is needed as an inn for the comfort of travellers and transient visitors. The whole community has an interest, a friendly financial interest, in the country hotel today. It is, or might be made, quite an important asset to the neighborhood.—Montreal Star.

CANADIANS FLOCKING HOME

Almost 9,000 Canadians who had been residents of the United States for a period longer than six months have returned to Canada during the months of April and May, according to figures announced by the Department of Immigration and Colonization. It was only at the end of March that the immigration officials at the 171 entry points along the border began to make a check of returning Canadians who had been in the States longer than six months. In April 148 of these points where immigration inspectors are stationed reported that 4,084 Canadians had returned to their own country. In May 129 points reported the return of 4,839, leaving 42 points yet to report.

Immigration inspectors have been instructed to make a statement to the department each month showing the number of Canadians who left Canada to obtain work or who had been resident in the States for a more or less extended period. The figures do not include those who have returned but had been in the States for a period under six months.

Many mothers can testify to the virtue of Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator, because they know from experience how useful it is.

GOOD LAW FOR ANY TOWN

If transient traders who make a practice of importing a few cases of goods and then go about from house to house selling them want to do business in Windsor, they must first pay a license fee of $250, in accordance with an Ontario statute regulating such practices. Mayor Mitchell explained to an applicant for such a privilege on Friday morning. The applicant, who left without his license, explained that he wanted to do business in town for about a week only, and was willing to pay a small fee for a license. "You don't get it unless you come across with $250," said the mayor. "We have to protect merchants, who are here all the time, pay big rents and help support the town with their tax contributions. The $250 is required by law, and you fellows will either have to pay or stay out of Windsor." The mayor explained that he had received an unusually large number of such applications lately, and that not one of them had been willing to pay the $250.

A LESSON FROM THE PAST

There is an old story the moral of which is applicable to many small communities.

It is said that in a certain Old World village the inhabitants had a custom of meeting on the village bridge once a year. On the day of the meeting every person paid his debts to each and all of his fellow townsmen. The day closed with feasting, merry-making and goodwill. One year when all the villagers had assembled, it was found that each had come to pay his debts but was depending on the payment of accounts to him to provide the necessary cash. Not one had brought any cash with him. Standing nearby was a traveller. He was curious enough to come to see this strange custom carried out. Seeing the bewildered looks of the villagers he enquired as to the cause. He provided the solution of the difficulty. Going to one man he said: "Friend, what is thy debt?"

"My debt," was the reply. "Is fifty florins, but my neighbors and I together owe me a like amount and I had hoped to get it and pay my debt." "Now," said the curious traveller, "I will lend thee fifty florins. Pay your debt." So this money began to circulate. Each in turn as he received money paid his own debt. In this way the debt village received the fifty florins due him. Turning to the traveller he said: "Here, friend is thy money. All of us have paid our debts. We are no richer but wonderful to relate we are no poorer."

Is it possible that in this and other communities safety is lost, circulation is strangled and goodwill beclouded because each looks to the other to perform a duty which he avoids carrying out himself?

What would have been the position of those villagers under a modern Bankruptcy Act? Each one owed a definite sum—each one had a collectible account due from a debtor who had nothing with which to pay. Each villager was apparently hopelessly bankrupt.

In all communities the Golden Rule when applied to financial obligations not only acts but also reacts to the benefit of each patron. The fulfillment of such obligations is like the granting of mercy, which, according to Shakespeare, "Blesses him that gives and him that takes."

DOBBYN GETS A NEW THRILL

Peter McCarthy, in the Globe:—This morning a neighbor told me that his thoroughly seasoned driver, which never bats an eyelid when meeting automobiles, oil trucks, moving vans, well-boring outfits or any of the awesome mechanical contraptions that now use our public roads, got a real scare yesterday, and he didn't blame the brute a bit. Neither do I. He was jogging along the road when he saw a big truck coming along and throwing up the usual cloud of dust. He turned out to give the truck the right of way and his horse showed no alarm until they were abreast of the juggernaut. Then the horse "lost all holes" and tried to run away. On the big truck there was a platform, and on the platform a couple of aristocratic-looking horses were travelling in state. They looked as much at home as if they were occupying stalls in a stable. It was a couple of racehorses that were being taken to a racing meet. The driver had become accustomed to all kinds of horse-drawn vehicles and horseless vehicles, but when he saw vehicle-drawn horses he apparently felt that was going too far for even this mad, topsy-turvy world, and was willing to jump off into space to escape from it. To a horse accustomed to travelling under his own power the arrangement must have looked crazy. Probably life will never be the same to him after this experience.

"Cappy Ricks," Sparkling Comedy, a Chautauqua Feature

"Cappy Ricks," notable comedy success based upon Peter B. Kyne's "Cappy Ricks" stories in the Saturday Evening Post, will be one of the big features of the coming Dominion Chautauqua. Here is a story of high finance on the high seas. Keen character types, a delightful love story and a fund of pathos combine to make it thoroughly enjoyable. The humor of the play is irresistible. "Cappy Ricks" will be presented by a cast of metropolitan actors.

Upper left, Taj Mahal, Agra, India, one of the most beautiful sights on the "Empress" cruise. Right, "Canada" passengers on one of the elephants that took them from Jaipur to the old City of Amber, India. Lower left, Lama Priests in the Market Square at Darjeeling, India. Right, the Canadian Pacific S. S. "Empress of Canada," recently returned from world cruise.

It would be hard to find a happier, healthier and back with them a host of souvenirs and impressions aboard the palatial Canadian Pacific liner "Empress of Canada" when she docked in Vancouver harbour on May 24th at the close of her epoch-making cruise around the world. Since leaving New York on January 30th, these fortunate folk had sailed for four months in the wake of Drake, Magellan and Marco Polo, seeing all and more than all that those adventurers saw, with none of their discomforts. They had viewed the frowning, gun-flecked rock of Gibraltar, the hallowed ports of Greece and Rome, on the blue Mediterranean, had ridden camels in the shadow of the Sphinx, threaded the Suez Canal, crossed the sparkling Indian Ocean, walked the teeming streets of Indian cities, the gardens of the glorious Taj Mahal and the ramparts of the grim fort of Agra. Ceylon, the ravishingly beautiful, palm-crowned Manila, the hoary antiquities of China, the dazzling loveliness of the Flowery Kingdom of Japan, the immensities of the Pacific—all these had passed before their eyes in a gorgeous pageant of eighteen countries and fifty races. They saw idols, monkeys, palanquins, palaces, mosques, temples, geishas, mandarins, fellahs, sheiks, troubadours, fakirs, pyramids. They had adventures with elephants in Kandy and a volcano in the Hawaiian Islands. They brought to be treasured all their lives and they say to the world at large "Go thou and do likewise." Every port called at was thrown open to the cruisers, and the reception afforded them at Victoria, B. C. on their return was no less cordial. Thousands lined the wharf on the arrival of the cruise ship, and Union Jacks mingled with Old Glory in the enthusiastic waving of flags which Victoria extended to the returning travellers. National airs and marches played by the Naval Brigade band were echoed on shipboard in the strains of the Philippine orchestra.

Interviewed in Vancouver as to the success of the cruise, President E. W. Beatty said, "I spoke to several passengers while crossing from Victoria and without exception they all expressed their complete satisfaction with the ship, its officers, and the arrangements made and carried out since the day she left Vancouver almost five months ago. That is good enough for me. It is ample demonstration that the Canadian Pacific can successfully conduct cruises in competition with any organization in the world and maintain that Company's standing as a credit to Canada."

The "Empress of France" will carry the Canadian flag on a similar globe-encircling tour from New York on January 14th.

Willie was fishing.
"Willie!"
It was his mother's voice, but he was sheltered from the house by trees, and she could not possibly see him.
"Willie!"
Still Willie went on fishing.
"Willie!"
Willie began re-baiting his hook. He had just secured the worm when his friend, Bert, approached.
"Don't you hear your mother callin' you?" said Bert. "That's three times she's shouted. Aren't you goin' in?"
"No," responded Willie, impatiently.
"Won't she whip you?" asked his friend.
"No," repeated Willie, disdainfully. "She ain't going to lick nobody. She's got company, so when I go in she'll just say, 'The poor little fellow's been so deaf since he had the measles.'"

A PIED PIPER

In Billy's job, as in many positions where men have won fame and distinction, it is personality that counts. It is his mission in life to inspire confidence, and to lure innocent sheep and lambs to their destruction with as great alacrity and lightness of gait as if they were skipping to the fields of Elysium, and this he does to the King's taste; he was born for his task. Though but two years old he has a substantial beard, and long white hoary locks. His mien is gentle and there are no horns visible which might give rise to fatal suspicions. But in his eyes there is an air of command, backed by the force of a portly frame, which enables Billy to do what he will with the sheep and lambs which come within his ken, and even influences calves to keep a straight path. In the busy season he saves the salaries of five men; in ordinary times he does the work of two or three.

He was three months old when he arrived at the Canadian Pacific Stock Yards, Montreal, but he took to the work at once. He followed the heels of the men, and while other animals tried at the work had to be coaxed to labor by rewards of cake and biscuits, Billy needed no such spur, but in three months time would glance at the sheep comfortably, start off at a cheerful trot and without hesitation the doomed animals would surround him and happily ascend the winding runway to the abattoir nearby. Then at a command he would go back and coax any stragglers, till he had all at hand ready to be slaughtered.

Now to look at Billy, it might seem that he did this work in all innocence, and that he was quite unaware that he had led his charges to any harm; but that would be doing an injustice to Billy's mighty intellect. He leads the flock right to the edge of the platform where they are killed, but then he carefully edges to the wall, keeping as far as possible from the danger point till he reaches the only spot of safety, then he slides back from the helpless sheep, wriggles out and goes back for another lot.

His treachery does not weigh on his spirits, he is utterly complacent and self-satisfied, impatient to be on the job.

The contract for the construction of a permanent road from Lambeth to Delaware on the Windsor highway has been finally let to the Warren & Chalmers Construction Company, of London, for $150,000. Owing to the fact that the roadway is very bad from a drainage standpoint, it has been necessary to let the contract for drains to another firm.

Mr. and Mrs. George Adams and son and daughter, of Harbor Springs, Mich., were visitors at Isaac Walker's on Saturday. They are taking a motor trip through Western Ontario. Mr. Adams is a native of Glencoe and resided here up to some thirty years ago, when he went to Michigan and has since built up quite an extensive business at Harbor Springs. While here on Saturday he called on many of his old friends, who were glad to see him and exchange reminiscences.

An impressive ceremony marked Sunday afternoon when members of the Major-General McRae Chapter of the I.O.D.E. held their annual decoration service at Oakland cemetery. Rev. Wm. Williams, rector of St. John's church, offered prayer, after which Mrs. M. Knox, acting regent of the chapter, read the memorial service and the members placed a Union Jack and flowers on fourteen deceased soldiers' graves. They also placed flowers on the graves of two deceased members of the chapter. At the conclusion of the ceremony the "Last Post" was sounded by Trumpeter George Grant.

SELF POISONING TODAY'S DANGER!

Hurried and improper eating, nervous worry and lack of abdominal exercise clog up your system and overload your liver. The result is self poisoning! No longer can your liver do its work properly and the result is you wake up dull and tired, coated tongue, bad taste and offensive breath. Often you suffer from loss of appetite, bad digestion, gas on a sour, weak stomach, improper movement of the bowels and a run-down condition of your whole system.

Cleanse and tone your liver! Put your system in condition! Feel your very best again! Try just a spoonful of Dr. Thacher's Liver & Blood Syrup after the next few meals and notice the quick improvement in the way you eat, sleep and feel—the return of strength, vigor and energy. You will be completely satisfied; otherwise there will be no cost.

Dr. Thacher's Liver & Blood Syrup is sold and recommended by P. E. Lumley in Glencoe.

EXPLOSION ON U.S. DREADNOUGHT TAKES TOLL OF FORTY-FOUR LIVES

Disaster Occurs During Naval Practice Off California—Between Ten and Twenty Injured and Burned.

A despatch from San Pedro, Cal., says:—Three officers and forty-one men of the battleship Mississippi were swept to death, at 11:45 a.m. on Thursday, on the San Clemente fleet drill grounds, off this port, when a shell in one of the 14-inch guns, turret No. 2, exploded prematurely, according to semi-official information given out from the United States steamship Mexico, flagship of the Division Four, of the fleet.

Nearly a score of men were injured by the flare-back that carried the terrific charge through the breach of the gun instead of out through the muzzle.

The gun crew were preparing to fire as one unit the great sea fighter's powerful broadside, when a sailor called for the electricity to be turned on for the charge.

The switch was thrown on to ignite the shell before the breech was locked, and in another moment the interior of the turret was littered with dead and dying.

Ensign D. Smith from the U.S.S. New Mexico was the first man to enter the turret No. 2 following the explosion.

Upon entering the turret, Ensign Smith took with him an air hose, which immediately caused flames from the burning debris to shoot forth. After flooding the turret with water, Ensign Smith was able to enter. All the men were dead at that time, their faces swelled and puffed almost beyond recognition by the intense heat.

Identification marks on the clothing, however, was still discernable. Three-quarters of an hour lapsed after the fire in turret No. 2 was observed from the quartermaster's deck before entrance into the red-hot chamber containing the charred bodies of the entombed men could be made by Ensign Smith.

Had the turret, which was revolving at the time the explosion on the battleship Mississippi occurred, remained in the position in which it was at the time of the explosion, the hang fire from the left gun would have gone into the centre of the City of San Pedro, witnesses aboard the ship said. When the gunner's hand guiding the controls was wrenched away by the explosion, the guns kept revolving and stopped as they pointed directly aft.

CANADA STILL RETAINS MUCH ALIEN PROPERTY

Custodian Has Paid Claims of Over Four Million Dollars.

A despatch from Ottawa says:—Alien property worth $9,782,232 is still in the hands of the Canadian custodian, who has paid out claims totalling $4,727,000 to date. Figures dealing with alien property were tabled in the House of Commons on an order for return. It is shown that Canada received in cash from Germany, Austria-Hungary, and other alien countries, $5,216,000. On account of indebtedness to enemy nationals, Canadian citizens paid into the custodian $3,207,000. In securities, real estate, uncollected property, and other sources, $5,897,451 was realized.

Disbursements out of the fund are divided into four heads. To Canadian creditors, 250 in number, $709,500 was paid; to 61 Canadian claimants a total of $1,592,000; cash releases to 950 people totalling $1,151,000, and $1,273,248 was paid to the central clearing office for enemy property.

Of the amount still in the hands of the custodian $3,687,786 is in cash and $200,000 is invested in treasury notes, $5,460,811 in securities and $433,635 represents value of property.

COOLIDGE PRESIDENT DAWES VICE-PRESIDENT

Republicans Choose Candidates for Big Political Campaign.

A despatch from Marietta, O., says:—Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes has accepted the nomination for the Vice-Presidency.

"I accept the nomination by the Republican party for the Vice-Presidency," he said in a formal statement when informed of his nomination. "I deeply appreciate the honor conferred."

A despatch from Convention Hall, Cleveland, says:—Charles G. Dawes of Illinois was nominated for the Vice-Presidency by the Republican National Convention, after it once had nominated Frank O. Lowden, former Governor of Illinois, and he had refused to accept the place.

In a brief and spectacular fight, in which William M. Butler, President Coolidge's campaign manager, had said to Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, "It must be Hoover," and Sen. Reed had replied, "It can't be done, it must be Dawes," the Dawes supporters marshalled their forces and put the General across for the nomination.

Earlier in the day Mr. Butler's forces had passed the word that the Administration men desired the nomination of Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, and in the voting which followed the supporters of Frank O. Lowden of Illinois ran away with the nomination for their man, only to have him decline it. The nomination of Dawes came as the climax to one of the most spectacular scenes in Republican party history, in which the convention, once having nominated a candidate, was obliged to undo its work and find another.

Calvin Coolidge was nominated for the Presidency on the first ballot taken in the Republican National Convention.

He received 1,065 of the 1,109 votes. Robt. Marion La Follette got 34—28 of the 29 from Wisconsin and 6 of the 13 from North Dakota—and Hiram Johnson got 10 of the 13 votes from South Dakota.

As usual, the galleries received every mention of La Follette's name, and the report of the votes cast for him, with jeers and hisses, but they had only laughter for the name of Hiram Johnson.

GASTON DOUMERGUE ELECTED PRESIDENT OF THE FRENCH REPUBLIC

Descendant of Old Calvinistic Family Succeeds Millerand as Head of State—Premiership Accepted by Edouard Herriot.

A despatch from Paris says:—Gaston Doumergue, President of the Senate, Protestant and moderate radical, was elected President of the Republic by the National Assembly at Versailles on Friday.

He defeated Paul Painleve, a candidate of the Left bloc and president of the Chamber of Deputies, by 615 to 309. The solid Left phalanx, led by Edouard Herriot, for the radical Socialists, and by Leon Blum for the Socialists, did not even poll the full 360 votes it expected from the Chamber for Painleve.

Voting in secret, a portion of Herriot's forces broke away and voted for Doumergue with all the Senate, both Left and Right, and that portion of the Chamber which is not "pure Republican."

M. Herriot will take the premiership from President Doumergue which he refused from President Millerand, although it will not be the triumph anticipated if M. Painleve had won.

M. Doumergue is the descendant of an old Calvinist family of Nimes and is the first Protestant President France has had. He is anti-Vatican and classed with the Left, although he has otherwise little in common with the Chamber majority.

He has had thirty years' service in the Chamber and the Senate, and is an old office holder. He has been a member of six different Cabinets and has held eight different portfolios. He was Premier when the radicals carried the country just before the war and resigned because he favored the three-year military service law, in opposition to which the radicals had just won the election.

Since the war he has opposed resumption of relations with the Vatican, but later, as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Upper House, he supported Premier Poincare's foreign policy.

There has not been a military demonstration since the war such as that which accompanied the election. All the roads around Versailles were filled with soldiers because of a threatened demonstration by Communists, which did not materialize.

RUSSIANS ALARMED BY OUTBREAK OF PLAGUE

Bubonic and Lung Diseases Spread by Rodents Destroying Vast Crop Areas.

A despatch from Moscow says:—Outbreaks of the bubonic plague and its variant, the lung plague, occurring year after year in the steppe region east of the Volga, and the appearance of the plague in Black Sea ports and the Don Valley of the Ukraine, are causing alarm in Russian medical circles.

The extension of the plague area is due to the spread of field mice and the rodents known as susliks, which are destroying crops on millions of acres of the best farming land in Russia.

A micro-biological institute has been opened at Saratoff to study means of combating the plague and to train personnel for medical expeditions being rushed to infected areas.

One of the greatest difficulties in the warfare is the question of transportation, as the regions affected are usually without roads and railroads and hours are precious in preventing the spread of the outbreak. The introduction of the airplane has gone a long way toward solving this problem.

The plague appeared early this year in four steppe provinces—Astrakhan, Ural'sk, Bukhara and the Kalmyk district. There were 473 cases, of which 484 were fatal, before the disease was got under control. Since then it has broken out anew in the Amu Darya region. A congress of bacteriologists and epidemiologists at Kiev late in April, after listening to a report of Prof. Zabotny on the penetration of the bubonic plague in the Ukraine, decided that it was necessary to establish a station at Odessa.

MANY CANADIANS RETURNING FROM U.S.

Statistics Show 9,000 Have Come Back in Past Two Months.

A despatch from Ottawa says:—Evidence that many Canadians are returning from the United States, is shown by statistics now being compiled by the Dept. of Immigration and Colonization, the total for the last two months being nearly 9,000.

It was not until towards the end of last March that the immigration officials began to make an accurate check on the number of Canadians who were coming back after being in the United States for six months or longer. In April returns from 148 out of the 171 points along the international boundary at which there are Canadian immigration inspectors, showed that 4,084 Canadian citizens returned to their own country. In May the number from 129 ports was 4,839, with 420 ports still to be heard from. The figures above quoted do not include Canadians who have been in the United States for a shorter period than six months.

British Trade Shows Signs of Brisk Revival

Favorable signs all along the line have renewed confidence and promise better business, says a cable from London. The British Industries fair at the Empire Exhibition at Wembley are in full swing. The budget removes the corporation profits tax and leaves the income and death duties unchanged. The continued high exchange value of the franc reduces Continental competition. Resumption of work in the mines and shipyards and increased bank clearings and relative firmness of prices are other favorable factors.

SHOT DOWN BY CHIEF OF BAND $3,000,000 ROBBER CONFESSES

Man Near Death and Others Implicated in Chicago Train Robbery Arrested—One of Accused Identified by Mail Clerks.

Chicago, June 15.—An anonymous telephone message to the police early to-day began clearing up the $3,000,000 mail robbery perpetrated Thursday night on the North Side.

J. H. Wayne, with several bullets in his body, was identified in the County Hospital by two mail clerks as one of the bandits who held up the mail and express train of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad.

Wayne, with three other men and a woman, was arrested earlier in an apartment on the North Side.

A confession was obtained, it was stated by Chief of Detectives Hughes and Capt. Schoemaker, who started for the place where the loot, money and bonds was said to be buried.

The confession is said to have been made by Wayne, who was at the point of death when the announcement was made.

The telephone tip sent the police to the North Side address, a house occupied by Walter McComb.

There they found McComb, his wife, Wayne and a man who said he was Paul Wade of Tulsa, Okla. In Wayne's pockets the police found $1,000 bills and in Wade's possession were new $500 bills.

While the police were at McComb's a man who gave the name of J. Mahoney knocked at the door and was arrested.

James H. Watson, another early caller at the McComb flat, was arrested. In his pockets were found twenty one-thousand-dollar bills. These are said to have been identified to-day by serial numbers. Mrs. Catherine McComb, wife of the lessee of the flat, gave the police valuable information.

In the flat were found names, letters, incriminating articles and documents. Wayne and Wade were hiding under a bed. Wayne had been shot twice in the head and had gunshot wounds in the arms and chest.

King George Displays Excellent Horsemanship

A despatch from Aldershot, Eng., says:—The excellent horsemanship of King George got him out of a tight place and saved him from a possible serious mishap. As the King was leaving the parade grounds on his charger, after reviewing the troops, the horse became frightened at the cheering crowd. The animal "bucked" and nearly collided with a horse ridden by the Duke of Connaught, beside the Queen's carriage.

The King made a second attempt to force his horse to accompany the procession, but the animal, terrified, plunged until its royal rider was forced to turn back and ride home along a quiet route.

You can't travel far on a lame excuse.

Gypsy Moths Menace the Forests of Quebec

A despatch from Quebec says:—While elation is felt over the fact that forest fires this year have affected an area set at only 33 acres by an official report received from Forest Rangers, another danger is threatening the National domain. The Forest Protection Service without delay has taken means to meet and try to prevent invasion of the southern forests of the province by a fly known as the gypsy moth.

In the last five years the gypsy moth has been playing havoc with the forests of the United States, first in the southern sections and in the last two years toward the northern sections causing losses which are set at hundreds of millions of dollars in value by experts.

Natural Resources Bulletin.

The Natural Resources Intelligence Service of the Department of the Interior at Ottawa says:

Many of our most serious forest fires can be directly traced to the carelessness of berry-picking parties. The season will shortly be at hand when berry-picking will be popular. Fires will be used to prepare the party lunches, and these are the most active fire menaces at this season. The camp fire should be avoided if possible, but if necessary care should be taken that a clear spot be selected, and that all leaves, branches and other inflammable material be cleared away from the spot to prevent the fire spreading. Before leaving every precaution must be taken that the fire is extinguished. If water is not available earth should be thrown on the fire to assure that the wind will not fan the fire into action and scatter embers into dry material.

Carelessness with smoking material, cigarettes, pipe ashes, etc., causes fires to start. It is not necessary to have a large fire for ordinary camp purposes. A small fire is more easily controlled, and more readily extinguished.

Nature has provided the berry bushes, and the berries, and a little care on the part of the berry-pickers will preserve the bushes for future crops, as well as obviate the danger of fire running into the forest growth and causing enormous destruction.

Rewarded for Trusting Betelated Member of Parliament

Does it pay in these materialistic times to play the "Good Samaritan"? There is a London coffee house stall keeper who is of the opinion that it does. A few weeks ago, in the early hours of the morning, a well-dressed man ordered a cup of coffee and a sandwich at his stall, only to find later that he had no money to pay the check.

The proprietor not only gave him a second cup of coffee on trust, but also advanced him sixpence for his fare home. The generous act was rewarded the following day by an invitation to dinner at the House of Commons. The "broke" stranger turned out to be J. Toole, M.P. for South Salford. He had been kept late in the House of Commons and chose this means of showing his gratitude to the man who had befriended him.

"Dining Car," Scene of Armistice Signing, Going to Pieces

A certain "wagon-restaurant," wherein a part of history—the armistice—was once inscribed, is now reposing in the court of the "Invalides," says a Paris despatch. It is going to pieces so fast that nobody, not even Marshal Foch, could at first recognize it. The roof on which the rains and suns of five years have beaten has great holes in it, the wheels have gone askew and the interior, with its tables and chairs and lamps, is unrecognizable for the dust.

The plenipotentiaries who five years ago recorded for all time the fact that the Germans had been beaten in the World War, would to-day find no need for paper and ink to sign the terms of an armistice; it could be more simply done in those layers of dust. The few sightseers who have had the hardihood to climb into the car have proved that in their usual manner by scrawling names all over the inside, and even the outside, where the words "Dining Car" still remain visible as a reminder of the armistice car's once humble identity, an identity which was perhaps not as humble as it is now.

There has been some protest over the government's allowing the "wagon restaurant" gradually to crumble away as it is now doing. Action may be taken by the authorities as a result of newspaper publicity.

Sunny Days in London Bring Crime Decrease

The fact that the sun has been making quite a show in England is held as the true cause of the decrease in crime lately. Since the opening of the last sessions at the Old Bailey there have been only twenty-five cases (they have been open three weeks), against more than a hundred in the same time at previous sessions.

A prominent London specialist is convinced that the lack of sunshine has a marked effect on certain phases of crime, and that sun-starved persons are more prone to morbidity than peoples of sunnier climes. Sun-starvation, says this medical man, produces nerve starvation and lowers the national vitality. Suicides increase in certain months probably because dull, dreary days produce depression.

It may be possible, says this specialist, that a combination of good housing and sufficient sun will one day banish serious crime from the world. He does not, however, pretend to have any plan for the forcing of the sun to shine when it won't, and it generally won't in England.

A despatch from Honolulu says:—The British naval squadron, headed by the battle cruiser Hood, which has been visiting here for the last week, steamed out of Honolulu on Thursday and headed for Vancouver B.C.

STORIES OF WELL-KNOWN PEOPLE

The Soldier Duke.

Fifty years a duke! This month marks the half-century since the Duke of Connaught was raised to his present rank by Queen Victoria, whose third son he is; and he has thus been a duke longer than any of his contemporaries.

Termed the "Soldier Duke," he has won an abiding affection in the hearts of the British people for his work for the empire here, in Canada, and South Africa. He is now seventy-four years of age, and has been connected with the army for fifty-six years.

Perhaps the best index to the duke's character was provided by an old resident of Bagshot, where the duke resided, who once declared: "There's no la-di-da foppishness about our Duke. 'E'll stop and talk to you in the street, and you can talk to 'im pretty straight, as man to man, without being ate up!"

Greatest Living Musician.

The appointment of Sir Edward Elgar, O.M., as Master of the King's Music, is a well-deserved one, for Sir Edward has been fittingly described as the greatest living musician. The son of an organist, he has won at Broadheath, Worcestershire, nearly sixty-seven years ago. He was apprenticed to a solicitor as a boy and gave lessons on the violin in his spare time.

A British Woman of Affairs.

Mrs. Arthur Croxton, M.B.E., who selected the British beauties for the great Palace of Beauty at the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley, has done many things in her time. For a period she was editor for "Fashions and Fancies"; she is also a prolific writer on fashions and designer of dresses, and created some excitement some years ago by a series of cartoons of contemporary characters which appeared in "The Tatler."

Mrs. Croxton is best known for her work during the War, when she assisted in the organization of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps. She received the special personal thanks of their Majesties the King and Queen for her organization of the great review of members of the Women's War Workers at Buckingham Palace in 1918.

She is the wife of Mr. Arthur Croxton, the manager of the London Coliseum, who, in answer to a question put to him by the Queen on some work done by Mrs. Croxton, replied: "I am merely Mrs. Croxton's husband, your Majesty."

For a time Mrs. Croxton did much to keep the League of Nations Union in the public eye. She also arranged with her husband a great scheme of entertainments for women workers throughout the whole of Britain. Her greatest designing feat was, at the invitation of Sir Oswald Stoll, the decoration of the London Coliseum on the occasion of a Royal performance in 1913, when millions of golden leaves and thousands of electric lights were employed.

Tim-buc-too.

They say that it is wiser far To live your whole life out In one small place, Where what you are Your friends know all about, Because they knew your childhood's face Quite well without a doubt.

But I would go to Tim-buc-too If anybody asked me to!

They say that life is fine and deep For stay-at-homes who chatter Of one thing and another thing; Who never lose an hour's sleep For love, who just grow fatter And clean their houses in the spring— But, oh! what does it matter?

For I will go to Tim-buc-too If anybody asks me to!

Ruth Fitch Bartlett in "Harper's."

Remember, It Was Her Holiday.

A dear old lady, says the Tatler, was spending a holiday at Southampton and with some friends was being shown over one of the big transatlantic liners just before its departure. "What's that down there?" she inquired of the captain. "That's the steering, madam," he replied. "Dear me," she exclaimed in astonishment, "and does it really take all those people to make the boat go straight?"

Oh!

The steamer was only a few feet from the quay when a man came running madly. Without pausing he flung his bags on the boat, took a desperate leap and landed on the deck with a crash.

"Good!" he gasped. "Just did it. A few seconds later and I should have missed it!" "Missed it?" exclaimed a passenger. "This boat is just coming in!"

MRS. KNOX SUFFERED FOR OVER THREE YEARS

St. John Lady Was Nervous and Had Severe Indigestion That Caused Intense Pain.

"It has been nearly two years since I took Tanlac, but I am more grateful to the medicine than ever for I have felt just fine to this very day," recently declared Mrs. Lena Knox, 51 Hill Street, St. John, N.B.

"For three years indigestion and nervousness caused me such agony it beggars description. I was actually afraid to eat; at night I would lie awake nervous and sleepless for hours and finally became so weak and thin I was almost a shadow."

"But Tanlac gave me a splendid appetite, calm nerves and a digestion that is simply perfect. I sleep the whole night through and have gained such weight, strength and energy that I always feel at my best."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Surnames and Their Origin

MacKENNA
Variations—McKenna, MacKinney, McKinney, Kinney.
Racial Origin—Irish.
Source—Given names.

There are two forms of this name, or rather two separate names in Gaelic, from which the anglicized family names in this group have been derived. It is unfortunate that in so many family names the Irish and the English forms should be so different as to cause confusion in the translation of the name from one language into the other.

Here is another case where you'd have some genealogical record to make sure whether your ancestors were members of that clan known as the "MacDonagh," which played a vivid part in the wars of Irish rebellion in the early seventeenth century, or of the ancient "Clann Clonnotha."

The early records of this latter clan are clear. It was founded by a chief, named Clonnoth (the meaning of the given name being "without servile work") about the year 250 A.D., thus establishing this family name as about twice as old as the majority of English family names. The stronghold of this clan was in Tironeen.

The name "MacDonagh" is derived from the given name "Donagh," which means a "dunk." It is not certain at just what period the clan was established, but it was a branch of the ancient clan of the O'Harts, and it was well established in Ardmore, County Waterford, as well as in Dundalk and in Truagh, County Monaghan.

ELLWOOD

Variation—Elwood.
Racial Origin—English.
Source—A locality.

This family name, of English origin and development, is one of those which have been derived from place names. There are many places to-day in England named Ellwood. All of them don't trace their history back to the medieval times, but, on the other hand, it is fair to assume that there were also places called Ellwood in the medieval ages which since have been called by other names.

So unless you can follow the individual family history definitely back to the first use of the name, you have little certainty from which particular Ellwood it has been derived. Ellwood was the sort of a place name which might be applied locally. It meant simply "Ellis' wood." "Ellis," "Ellice" and "Helyas" being the medieval English spellings of the biblical name of "Elijah" or "Elias." This, of course, was a Hebrew given name, popular with the medieval populations not only of England, but of other Christian countries through its biblical associations. The name means "The Lord God," or "The Strong Lord."

BABY'S OWN TABLETS ALWAYS KEPT ON HAND

Mrs. David Gagne, St. Gedeon, Que., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my three little ones and have found them such an excellent medicine that I always keep them on hand and would strongly advise all other mothers to do the same thing." The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which quickly relieve constipation and indigestion, break up colds and simple fevers and promote that healthful refreshing sleep which makes the baby thrive. They are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Poem You Ought to Know.

How Do I Love Thee?
The marriage of Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett was an ideal union. Before her marriage the poetess wrote a series of sonnets, which she gave to her husband after their wedding. Here is one of them:

How do I love thee? Let me count the ways.

I love thee to the depth and breadth and height
My soul can reach, when feeling out of sight

For the ends of Being and Ideal Grace
I love thee to the level of every day's
Most quiet need, by sun and candle-light.

I love thee freely, as men strive for Right;
I love thee purely, as they turn from Praise;

I love thee with the passion put to use
In my old griefs, and with my childhood's faith.

I love thee with a love I seemed to lose
With my lost saints,—I love thee with the breath,

Smiles, tears of all my life!—and, if God choose,

I shall but love thee better after death.

Rediscovered Port on Persian Gulf.

The site of Jerra, the mysterious port on the Persian Gulf mentioned 2,000 years ago by Ptolemy, geographer, and since lost sight of, has been rediscovered in ruins by Captain R. H. Cheeseman, former private secretary to Sir Percy Cox, British High Commissioner at Bagdad, who has just returned to civilization after a trip into unknown Arabia.

He reached the oasis of Jabrin in the Great South Desert, the first European to penetrate there, and found it inhabited by a tribe living in Stone Age conditions. Captain Cheeseman's exploits were made possible by the relations of the British with Ibn Saud, Sultan of Nejd, whose guest he was.

Minard's Liniment for Sprains.

Her Mistake.

A philanthropic woman was visiting a lunatic asylum. There was one old man there who roused her special compassion.

"How long have you been here, my poor man?" she asked.

"Twelve years,"

After several more questions she passed on, and her guide informed her that the old man was the medical superintendent.

"I'm so sorry, doctor," she cried, hurrying back. "I'll never judge by appearances again."

"Well, mum, I'll tell ye. Since me childhood never a job I have t'old, and when ye don't have to be taxin' yer memory to be rememberin' what ye told this one or that, or how ye explained this or that, shure ye don't overwork it an' it lasts ye, good as new, till ye die."

Salt Springs Near Madrid Are Among Richest in World.

Probably one of the most characteristic landscapes in Spain is that of the central steppes. With the exception of Hungary's "puzstas" there is nothing like the Spanish steppes in all Europe. They are vast tracts of territory with a soil that contains excessive quantities of clay and lime, and which will not give growth to vegetation of any kind. The air and under-soil are very dry. There are no trees, and bushes are scarce. If the soil contains salt, the steppes are called saline, and this name is applicable to most of the Spanish steppes territory.

Moisture is entirely lacking in the surface layer of the soil, but the under-soil often contains water, which, however, is not always drinkable. When calcium carbonate, plaster, clay and a white loam predominate in the soil the steppes are called "Calveros," the bare lands. If red plasters, and clays and loams containing iron predominate, they are commonly called the reddish steppes. Either kind has a few typical plants, and if the same plant lives in both areas it is of different appearance.

Not far from Madrid are the most typical spots of the central steppes. Tarancon is perhaps the most interesting place in this area from the point of view of its flora, its climate and its soil. The barren hills near Tarancon on the road to Bellinchon should be included in a national park, for there are no other hills like them in the entire world.

The vegetation of these hills consists of grasses, lilies, orchids, sunflowers and crucifers. They make excellent pasture for goats and sheep. Trees have been planted here, and if the soil is carefully tilled it loses its desolate character.

Most remarkable, however, are the salt beds in this district. They are shallow patches or sheets of clayish soil, extending over wide areas. Water is conducted through the pits and by a simple process of evaporation the salt is obtained. It is mixed with small quantities of sulphates and magnesia.

The salt springs of Bellinchon are among the richest in the world. There are 200 grains of salt in each quart of water and about 30,000 quarts run through the springs every hour.

How Plants Are Pollinated.

There are seven main agencies by which plants are pollinated, namely: Wind and gravity, water, insects, special devices for search of nectar, agencies or cleistogamous flowers.

The wind carries the pollen and at length, it falls, due to gravity. Water, in the case of water plants, carries the pollen from plant to plant. Insects are great pollen carriers. They pass from flower to flower in search of nectar, and carry away pollen upon their bodies. When they visit the next flower, some of the pollen is accidentally rubbed off, and thus the flower is pollinated. Man may bring about pollination by artificial means. He merely transfers the pollen from the plant where it is born to the plant where it is wanted. This is done, usually, in the greenhouses of upon special plants. In some plants there are special devices for the explosion of the pollen containers which throw the pollen out to other flowers. Self-pollinating or cleistogamous flowers are those that never open and must be self-pollinated. That is, the flower can fertilize itself and does not need pollen from another flower.

GREEN TEA IN GREAT DEMAND.

Twenty-five years ago, Green Tea was more popular than Black, but due to the heavy importation of poor quality Japan and China Green Teas, the demand fell off. Ceylon and India started producing Green Tea on a large scale only in recent years. They were of such fine quality and delicious flavor that Green Tea drinkers immediately recognized their superiority and demanded them in ever increasing quantities. Salada Tea Company is practically the sole importer of Ceylon and India Green Teas in Canada.

Vita Nuova.

Now is the time once more. Dear and desired of old. Spring at the will at the door. Slender and young and cold. Scarcely the heart can hold. The joy long waited for. Now the magical word is told. And the young Spring's at the door.

When all the folk are asleep.

Save only the feathered folk. She goes by the hills of sheep. By the lambs and the grazing flock. Flowers in the fold of her cloak. And the grey dawn at the peep. The trumpeter DaDodd! wakes. The thrush and blackbird asleep.

Now in the East and the dark.

The heart trembles and sings. Sings with the linnets and lark. New songs of immortal things. It wakes, it quivers, it springs. You can get the pills from your drug-gist, or they will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Bacteria of Benefit.

Bacteria are the world's best manufacturers of fertilizers. The rays of the sun take eight and a half minutes to reach the earth.

No Monkey Business.

Send no money. Just drop us a card; we will mail you Die-Lice medicine to treat you. When it arrives pay postage and return. Money back if it fails. Show how to tell one of us was before. Satisfaction, and residential. See service how to fill your place of rats, mice and squirrels without the use of traps or poison and free with each box. Agents wanted.

Swat the Adam and Eve Flies.

The time to swat flies is right now, while they are still in their garden of Eden, and have not started out to devastate the nations. Flies are the greatest little propagators of evil in all the world. Science says, "If each egg of the common house-fly should develop, and each of the larvae should find the food and temperature it needed, with no loss and no destruction, the people would suffocate under the plague of flies."

A fly lays 150 eggs in a batch and is equal to six batches. It only takes ten days from egg to adult. Begin with two flies May 1 and let them continue their merry game right along through September, and mathematicians can only express the figures in terms of German marks. It runs something like 1,095,181,249,310,720,000,000,000,000 and since no one can comprehend such figures it makes little difference what ciphers you add from that time forth.

Swat the fly early and swat her thoroughly. We say "her" because the female is more deadly than the male but swat all kinds without bothering about sex determination.

Now that the automobile has supplanted horse in cities and towns, and the manure box is no longer a familiar object in every alley, it is a comparatively easy thing to keep the town home free from flies. The country home needs equal immunity and it can be given. Look to your screens, both doors and windows. Make sure that no garbage is allowed to accumulate near the house. Keep the stables clean, and locate the manure piles as far from the house as possible.

The most efficient chemical to apply to manure piles to check the breeding of flies is borax, which does not injure the fertilizing properties of the manure. As soon as the manure is removed from the barn sprinkle the borax over it, using a fine sieve such as a flour sifter. Apply it around the outer edges of the pile as the maggots seem to prefer that location. Then throw a few gallons of water over the mass.

TOO WEAK TO WALK

The Sad Condition of a Brandon Lady—How Relief Came.

"I owe my present good health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills," says Mrs. Annie Treherne, Brandon, Man., who tells of her new found health as follows:—"Some years ago I had an attack of pneumonia and it left me in a terribly weakened and run-down state. I was unable to walk for a long time as I had practically lost the use of my legs, and had to be carried upstairs. For I had not the strength to go myself. I became despondent over my condition for I had tried many remedies, which failed to help me. While in this wretched condition a lady friend urged me to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial and I procured a supply. After taking the pills for a while I could see that I was growing stronger, and I gladly continued their use until I had fully regained my old-time health and strength. Now if I feel at all run down at any time I at once take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they never fail me. I can therefore warmly recommend them to others who may be run down."

There is no better tonic than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to improve the blood and bring back strength after acute diseases such as fevers, pneumonia, influenza, etc. Given a fair trial they will not disappoint you. You can get the pills from your drug-gist, or they will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

What People Call Success.

Deny yourself the pleasures youth would claim. Count every moment precious, never rest; Let profit-getting be your only game; Be sure to banish pity from your breast; Chose eagerness for money as a goal To drive you daily to new enterprise; Don't pause to gather flowers beside the road. Be quick to see where your advantage lies.

Break briskly through whatever bars your way; If sentiment assails you, fling it back; Be sure to be some richer every day; Let greed be not among the things you lack; If you can get refinement as you rush It may not hurt your chance to be refined; But never hesitate to crowd or crush; Have one intention always in your mind.

Let love, if you must love, be nothing more Than incidental to the end in view. Or use it as a key to Fortune's door. Adjust it to the purpose you pursue; Beware lest golden hours be vainly spent In setting tender loveliness to rhyme; See beauty only where a charm is lent By wealth enough to make it seem sublime.

Be selfish when you must; be friendless, cold; Let nothing keep you from the goal you seek; Where boldness offers dividends, be bold; And miss no chance to pounce upon the weak; Become a driving power, a mighty force; Be firm, be strong, be keen, be pitiless; You'll miss the finer things of life of course; But you may win what people call success.

Mrs. Arthur Gough is seriously ill. Mr. and Mrs. Archie Carruthers, of Windsor, spent the week-end here, the guests of Mrs. Geo. Richards.

Rev. Andrew Boa, pastor of the Methodist church here, preached a most interesting and instructive sermon Sunday morning on "Evolution," which was much appreciated by many members of the congregation who have been making a study of the subject but were not clear on many points. The speaker took up both sides of the question. After making the statement that he did not believe in evolution, he gave ten convincing points, giving clear proof for his argument and making the subject clear to his people.

Rev. Mr. Boa will conduct anniversary services at Springfield (Appin appointment) next Sunday afternoon and evening. Rev. Maxwell Parr, of Appin, will preach at the Sutherland appointment in the morning, and Rev. Mr. Jewitt, of London, at Melbourne in the evening.

Ready-made Medicine.—You need no physician for ordinary ills when you have at hand a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. For coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchial troubles, it is invaluable; for scalds, burns, bruises, sprains it is unsurpassed; while for cuts, sores and the like it is an unquestionable healer. It needs no testimonials other than the use, and that will satisfy anyone as to its effectiveness.

J. C. Perce had a birthday party Saturday afternoon. All the little boys on the street were there and report having had a good time.

Born on June 5th, to Mr. and Mrs. Rayburn Laughton, a son—Donald Rayburn.

Mr. and Mrs. Nagel, of Mt. Brydges, were the guests last week of Mr. and Mrs. Webber.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kettlewell motored from Windsor and spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Ben Patterson.

An Oil of Merit.—Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is not a jumble of medicinal substances thrown together and pushed by advertising, but the result of the careful investigation of the healing qualities of certain oils as applied to the human body. It is a rare combination and it won and kept public favor from the first. A trial of it will carry conviction to any who doubt its power to repair and heal.

KILMARTIN

The W. M. S. of Burns' church, Mead, met in the church on June 12. Mrs. D. Galbraith and Miss Mina Munro had charge of the meeting. They read papers on "The Pathfinder of North Formosa," taken from the third and fourth chapters of the study book, "The Island Beautiful."

Mrs. J. R. A. B. McEachren and N. Urquhart attended a meeting of the agricultural enquiry committee in London on Friday.

Strangled with Asthma is the only expression that seems to convey what is endured from an attack of this trouble. The relief from Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy is beyond measure. Where all was suffering there comes comfort and rest. Breathing becomes normal and the bronchial tubes completely cleared. This unequalled remedy is worth many times its price to all who use it.

REV. M. C. PARR

Who has so successfully carried on the work on the Appin Methodist circuit, and has been stationed by the annual conference at Tilbury. Mr. Parr leaves the first of July and takes up the pastorate at Tilbury on the first Sunday in July.

The Business of Entertaining

Mr. Ives had just been telling his wife about a business associate whom he would like to entertain some time at his home.

"No, sir," replied Mrs. Ives, "I certainly shall not invite him and his wife here."

"Why, my dear! Why not?" queried Mr. Ives.

"Because," explained Mrs. Ives, "I entertained her once and she never recuperated."

of Halifax

IN Halifax during the distracting period of 1869, seven men to whom other men could turn with assurance and confidence, founded a sound banking institution.

From that Bank—then called The Merchants Bank of Halifax—has expanded the powerful institution to which men and women, in private affairs as well as in large business undertakings, turn to-day with confidence in its strength and power. You know this institution as—
