

ROSEBERY BEAMS!

His Horse Wins the Derby for the Second Time.

An Enormous Crowd of All Classes Travels to Epsom—The Premier Congratulated.

London, May 29.—Derby day opened with brilliant sunshine and unusual interest was taken in the chief event, owing to the uncertainty as to the result. Hundreds of vehicles of all sorts and sizes, from the gorgeous drags of the rich to the donkey cart of costermongers and the crowded omnibuses of the Strand, covered with the usual placards, raised a cloud of dust all the way down.

Racing parties were leaving the hotels and private houses at an early hour, and an unbroken series of special trains were leaving Waterloo and vicinity all morning. The weather was hazy in the morning, but the haze soon afterwards dispersed.

Lord Rosebery entertained a large party of friends at Durdans, and afterwards drove to the race course. The Salvation Army Brigade arrived at Epsom this morning and pitched a large tent, from which they handed out tracts and leaflets announcing that they would pursue an anti-sin campaign between the races, remaining over-night to resume their labors on the occasion of the Oaks stakes tomorrow.

The royal train left Victoria station for Epsom at 12.30 o'clock. The saloon contained the Afghan Prince, Nasrullah Khan, the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg, the Duke and Duchess of York, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, the Duke of Cambridge and the Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz.

Among the countless vehicles conveying persons to the races were 24 horse coaches filled with Americans.

SIR VISTO WON.
The horses finished as follows: Sir Visto, owned by Lord Rosebery, 1; Curzon, 2; Kirkconnell, 3.

The betting on the first three horses before the start was: 5 to 1 against Sir Visto, 23 to 1 against Curzon, and 12 to 1 against Kirkconnell. Sir Visto was ridden by Sam Leeves.

ROSEBERY BEAMED.
Lord Rosebery beamed with delight as Sir Visto came in a winner, and shouted with everybody near by. The Prince of Wales and Sir F. Johnston, the owner of Levant, were among the first to congratulate the Premier.

OCEAN HORROR!

Over 100 Lives Lost by the Sinking of a French Steamer.

Vigo, Spain, May 28.—The French steamer Dom Pedro has been wrecked off Cape Corredo. She was bound from Passages for Carril. She struck the Bajos Corredo at 6 o'clock last evening, when her boilers exploded, sinking her in a few minutes. Part of her passengers and crew were saved.

Havre, May 28.—The Chargeur Reunis, which company owned the wrecked steamer Dom Pedro, has received a dispatch stating that 105 passengers were drowned.

London, May 29.—The Standard gives the following particulars of the wreck of the Spanish steamer Dom Pedro. The captain of the Dom Pedro was lost. The survivors were saved mainly by local residents, who went out in boats to their assistance. Twenty-four survivors have arrived at Carril, and others at Villagarcia. These confirm the statement that the boilers of the wrecked vessel exploded. Many of the passengers and members of the crew jumped overboard when the disaster occurred and tried to swim ashore. The gunboat MacMahon has been sent from Marin to the scene of the wreck. Advice received confirm the report that 105 lives were lost.

A GORGEOUS FUNERAL.

Last Rites Over the Corpse of Secretary Gresham—Military Display.

Washington, May 29.—The funeral of the late Secretary Gresham occurred this morning and Washington has not seen a more gorgeous pageant since Cleveland's inauguration. There was a large military display. The body was conveyed to the east room of the White House. The floral offerings of the President and others were magnificent. Bishop Harst conducted a short service in the Methodist Episcopal ritual. The President and wife were present.

BASEBALL.

THE ALERTS LOSE.

"Doc" Sippi and his Toronto Eastern League ball tossers swooped down on the Alerts at Tecumseh Park yesterday afternoon and carried away a victory in their inside pockets. It was the first appearance in the city of Sippi since he joined the Toronto team, and naturally enough the old favorite was greeted with an enormous crowd—probably 1,000 or 1,200, including many ladies. The grand stand and the bleachers were crowded, and hundreds stretched themselves out on the grass. The greatest portion of the crowd went with the expectation of seeing London's Alerts very badly beaten, but they were pleasantly disappointed. In the first two innings the home team practically lost the game, for Carney was not in his usual trim. That puzzling left-paw twirl of his was not up to the standard, and Toronto pounded out eight runs.

The visitors went first to bat, and as Doc Sippi approached the plate stick in hand the crowd gave him a hearty reception. He was presented with a beautiful bouquet of roses and lilies, and after acknowledging the gift by doffing his hat, showed his admirers how highly he appreciated their kindness by hitting Carney for two bases. Freeman followed and made his only hit of the game, but the ball went over the fence and is now en route to Detroit by water. Sippi and Freeman both crossed the plate. Lutenburg, Smith and Lake went out in quick order and the side retired.

Toronto's second innings netted six runs. Demont set an example to the following batters by making a three single and scored Demont. Blake gave Carney a fly which was well caught. McGarry got a base on balls; Sippi followed with another two bagger, and Casey and Blake scored. In trying to cut off Sippi at third Tierney threw wild to Player, and McGarry, McGarry and Smith also tallied on each.

The Alerts had done nothing for themselves in these two innings, and Burton replaced Carney and Thorpe with Sheere and Quinn, and in the remainder of the game they held their own. The Alerts had five hits, but the Alerts had their turn in the eighth and ninth. Although they had hit McGarry quite freely up to the eighth, the home team failed to score, and when Hynd opened the eighth by flying out to left, the hearts of the cranks began to sink, and visions of nine goose eggs were before their eyes. But when Burton stroled slugged the ball over Lutenburg's head for two bases, the hurrah commenced, and "that tired feeling" of the spectators was dispelled. Farnworth sent Burton home by a drive to right. Player hit safely, but was forced out at second by Sheere, who hit a fly to short, but which was purposely dropped. A safe hit by Ball sent Farnworth across the plate, and Tierney, with a beautiful hit to left field, made Sheere score. Total, three runs.

The ninth of the Alerts was opened by Hiscott, who got his first; Hynd, who had previously done nothing with the stick, made a three-bagger, and Hiscott came home. Hynd made the fifth run on a hit by Farnworth. Thus the Alerts had five earned runs and five errors to their credit, but the latter were nearly all costly. They also had fourteen base hits, while Toronto had eleven—but Toronto played a better fielding game and without an error. The visitors did their very best, but Sippi vowed before the game began that they would, if possible, shut the Alerts out.

Appended is the official score of Mr. C. G. Moorehead:

England is greatly interested in the cricketing record of Frederick C. Holman, who at 19, has made 123 runs for Surrey in the recent match against Essex. It was a performance due more to genuine skill than to luck, and added to his youth and his staying powers, it makes him a promising successor of the veteran Dr. Grace.

ONLY HALF A CROP.

Toledo, Ohio, May 28.—During the past four days King & Co. have received replies from 4,578 reliable grain dealers and millers, covering every important wheat county in the six principal winter wheat States, which generally raise two-thirds of that crop in the United States. The present prospect in the six States, reduced acreage considered, is for about half a crop. Ohio and Michigan promise about two-thirds of a crop. Missouri about half a crop. Indiana a little below half. Illinois worse, and Kansas about a quarter. The past three weeks has done the damage. The acreage harvested will be materially less than last year. More is being plowed than usual. Reserves of old wheat are very small.

MR. EMON WAS HONORABLY ACQUITTED.

On Dec. 7 last there appeared in the "Advertiser" a telegraphic dispatch from Toronto, in which it was stated that Charles W. Emon, agent for Radam's Microbe Killer, had been arrested the previous night charged with the forgery of labels and trade marks. In the same dispatch details of the alleged misconduct were given. The dispatch came to the "Advertiser" by telegraph, in the usual way as dozens of telegrams come nightly, and the editor in charge had no reason to suspect that it was in any respect incorrect. Though Mr. Emon was arrested at the time stated, he was subsequently honorably acquitted of the charges made against him, and the "Advertiser" so chronicled the fact in the same news columns as those in which the first dispatch was printed. But as Mr. Emon has notified us that he considers the original dispatch did him an injustice, the "Advertiser" frankly expresses its regret at the unwitting publication, and to once more emphasize the fact that before the proper tribunal he was found not guilty of the charges made against him.

SOUSA'S BAND.

The much-heralded Sousa's band gave two performances in London yesterday. The Princess Rink was well occupied in the afternoon, while the evening audience was an overwhelming crush, so much so that more than one dress was ruined in the rough and tumble effort to pass a number of people quickly through one small door. We think the authorities should be held responsible for seeing that these outrageous crushes are controlled and properly provided for by a sufficient number of entrances and exits. As for the programme, it was of its kind perfect, but its kind was different from what was generally expected. It was mostly of the "popular" order, no doubt thoughtfully rendered; but of a class of music, in general, not to be reckoned in the same breath with the "class" of music, for example, rendered by the Theodore Thomas Orchestra. In the afternoon, the familiar overture to "William Tell" was daintily given; and in the evening Wagner's Tannhauser overture was magnificently rendered. The two ladies who took solo parts acquitted themselves wonderfully well. Miss Marie Barnard, the soprano vocalist, and Miss Duke, the violinist, Sousa is a great conductor, beyond question, and in his hand has some unusually talented instrumentalists. When he comes again to London, where he will appear in his programme to a greater extent than to that large section of London's best citizenship capable of appreciating the best music.

Nothing impure or injurious contaminates the popular antidotes to pain, throat and lung remedy and general corrective, Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil. It may be used without the slightest apprehension of any other than salutary consequences. Coughs, rheumatism, earache, bruises, cuts and sores succumb to its action.

METHODISTS IN SESSION.

The Annual District Meeting Convened in the Askin Street Methodist Church.

The business was concluded with the afternoon session. The election of lay delegates to the annual conference, which convenes in Stratford next week, resulted as follows:

London—T. McCormick, C. J. Beal, W. H. McCutcheon, H. Pratt, J. Friend, R. Windrim, Robert Green, G. Robinson, W. Bowman, Wm. Jeffrey, N. Tackaberry, Geo. Calcott, J. H. Dickson, Thos. Brenton, C. W. Fawcett, W. M. Spencer, John Caldwell, Wm. Gerry, A. Caldwell.

Ferguson—John Ferguson. The circuit schedules were all reported as correct by the auditors. On the whole the receipts for all purposes during the year showed a decrease of $4,104.95. The greatest shrinkage was in the amount raised for missionary purposes. The loss of pastoral care at Queen's Avenue no doubt accounts for the falling off there. The following is a comparative statement of the amounts raised during 1894 and 1895:

It was decided to hold the monthly ministerial business meetings at Dorchester during the year and the next annual meeting in the Wellington Street Church.

CHINA AND ITS CARE.

For General Use a Good Earthenware Dinner Set is Unsurpassed.

Notwithstanding the fact that entire sets in earthenware and china have somewhat fallen into disfavor, the housekeeper of limited means will find that, for general use, a good earthenware dinner set of English manufacture is unsurpassed. This ware comes in such a variety of coloring and design, that the whole of taste cannot fail to be gratified. It does not chip easily and its glaze and durability surpass that of any ware of domestic manufacture.

In the best grade a set of 127 pieces will cost from $30 to $35. The same number of pieces in lighter weight can be bought for $18 or $20.

With this set as a nucleus, keeping in mind color and design, additions may be made at leisure, until the whole constitutes an individuality of taste as clearly as should the owner's wardrobe. Small fancy dishes for olives, bonbons, etc., are pretty and useful adjuncts to the sets proper. A chop set, consisting of a round platter and a dozen plates; the salad, ice cream and fish sets are also all desirable additions to the china closet.

In selecting the last, however, avoid those displaying trout, perch or salmon swimming on hooks or entangled in nets. A delicate plate is not likely to be stimulated by such representations, no matter how cleverly executed. Select one which confines its ornamentation to the rims of the plates and platter, leaving the centres plain.

If one's income justifies the purchase of handsome table ware, nothing is prettier or finer at the price than Haviland porcelain. Its cost varies according to the decorations, which are painted in every style known to the craft. Of late great favor is shown to china showing dull-gold lace-like borders.

Plain white china is preferred by some housewives, as a broken piece can be easily replaced at small cost. When white ware is used colored Bohemian glass and odd pieces of decorated ware are introduced with it to give color to the table.

A nice Carlsbad set can be had for about $38. A new combination shows maroon edges, over which are green oak leaves. This is preferred by many to French ware, it being stronger and capable of bearing rougher handling.

To preserve china fresh and intact requires more intelligence than many people suppose. The common method of washing dishes in almost boiling water and rinsing them in cold, will ultimately crack the glazing on almost any earthenware. It is practical ruin to fine grades of china. The only safe way to wash china is to have two dishes filled with water of the same temperature. This should be just hot enough to feel comfortable to the hands. Water that is too hot for the hands is too hot for fine porcelain. Add a little ammonia to the first water, wash quickly through this and rinse in the other pan, which should hold only clear, warm water. Wipe quickly without allowing the dish to come in contact with the hands. If the china has much gilding it is better to omit the ammonia from the first water. Should the gilding become tarnished, chamois skin, with a little whiting on it, may be used in polishing.

China cared for in this way need not end its days of elegance and usefulness with the death of its first owner. Like precious heirlooms, it may be handed down from one generation to another, to be an unceasing source of delight and utility.

A New Remedy in General Use in Manitoba and the Northwest.

Winnipeg, May 27.—The effects of the regular waves of sickness which sweep over this portion of the Dominion in the spring are noticeable in the increasing amount of the druggists' sales. There has been quite a run on the kidney remedy of Dodd's Kidney Pills. The recovery from Bright's disease of Mr. Arthur Coley, of Somerset, through their use, an account of which appeared in the papers, gave a considerable impetus to the sale, and the remedy has become indispensable in many Manitoba households, its fame having penetrated into the remotest parts of the Province and Northwest Territories.

HON. EDWARD BLAKE IN ENGLAND.

Our fellow-countryman, Hon. Edward Blake, is in great demand as an advocate of progressive Liberal principles in Great Britain. He has now addressed large public gatherings in every part of the United Kingdom, and we understand that he has more calls than,

with his duties as a member of the Imperial Parliament, he can find it convenient to answer. The latest great meetings which Mr. Blake addressed were held in Hull and in Bradford, two of England's representative manufacturing cities. In Hull, Mr. Blake was the chief speaker at the opening of the new rooms of the Irish Nationalists;

he was entertained at a citizen banquet;

and in the evening he addressed a mass meeting.

Mr. Blake made no apology for his appearance as an advocate of home rule in an English constituency. He said that he had from an early period felt the deepest interest in the country from which he sprang, and that he could conceive no nobler occupation, no nobler ambition for any man in the nineteenth century than to bear his part, however insignificant, in the reconciliation of the two great peoples—when love would be substituted for hate, hope for fear, union for separation.

Mr. Blake is fully convinced that the future of the democracy of Great Britain and Ireland is bound up in their unity to secure the triumph of common aims—the betterment of living conditions. For this reason he and his fellow representatives of Irish constituencies did not hesitate to join hands with the Liberal party in the promotion of the bill to secure for Ireland local self-government and at the same time to aid in the removal of class laws and popular disabilities in England and

Scotland. At Bradford, Mr. Blake

thus briefly referred to the union:

"What was the basis of the alliance?

They of the Irish Parliamentary party knew perfectly well before 1892 that the Liberal party had decided that it was proper and necessary to present

before the people of the United Kingdom a large programme of popular and democratic reforms, though home rule was to retain its place at the front of the Liberal programme. All that man could do, and more than man had ever done before, was done to get home rule through Parliament, and when the House of Lords rejected the measure, as everybody expected they would, the Irish party had it in their power to force the Government to a defeat and dissolution in a few hours, or in the alternative to assist the Government for a reasonable period to carry out other features of the programme upon which they had gone before the electors of the kingdom."

Every intelligent student of public affairs knows this to be a true statement of the case, though some avowed friends of Irish self-government, both at home and abroad, seek to cause dis-peace in the ranks of the democracy by arguing that it is not enough for one

Parliament to carry a Home Rule bill as far as it possibly could, and then turn to the promotion of other planks in the democratic programme. To such, Mr. Blake must have intended the following queries with regard to the measures passed by the present Parliament or in progress through the House:

"What was the Parish Councils Bill but the giving of home rule to the parishes? What were the Welsh and Scottish Disestablishment Bills but a recognition of the proposition that the nationalities of Wales and Scotland had a right to have their own views recognized with reference to the question of an established church."

At Hull Mr. Blake explained to the workers the international interdependence for progress and prosperity.

"In his opinion a wider view of the complex condition in which the workers were engaged—of all the conditions which really affected its successful prosecution, and of all the elements which ought to be considered in adjusting the relative share of labor and capital—was of the first importance, and in that some advance had been made in the trade statistics. In international work he believed the influence of the workmen would be of great consequence. He rejoiced in any effort to do international work. He believed that the greatest amount of their misconception in sections of society was due to their ignorance of one another, to their not coming in contact with one another, to their not knowing one another better. No nobler task could be conceived than that international work in which workmen might be engaged—first of all, by making some effort to put down the insane increase of the armaments in Europe, which was weighing down all the peoples of the world, besides the constant misery it engendered by the risk of the daily explosion of the volcano beneath us; and secondly, the laborer in England occupied relatively to the workmen elsewhere, an enviable position, and his energy might be applied to raising the standard of the workmen abroad. The better standard of life, of wages, of shorter hours, and of the condition generally of the foreign workman would make the competition in some trades less severe than it was now as between the British laborer and the foreign producer. (Applause.) What was it the workman wanted? He wanted a greater security of regular employment; he wanted fair wages—better wages in some trades, although in some trades the wages bore most favorable comparison, all things taken into consideration—not only the money, but what he got for his money—he wanted shorter hours; in some cases he wanted proper provision for decent homes, food, water, and proper sanitary conditions; and in short he wanted opportunities of rational and comfortable enjoyment in this life—(applause)—and these things set before him would induce habits of thrift and temperance. All these matters received the sympathetic attention, and were endeavored to be dealt with as rapidly as the condition of business would allow, by the Liberal Government and Liberal Parliament."

There is food for thought in this statement of present-day political conditions in Great Britain. Mr. Blake's plea for the continued unity of the various forces that make up the Liberal party was a strong one. It applies to the progressive political elements of the world over. It is not, as he pointed out, good sense to lightly part company with a powerful party, which has done much and may be relied on to do much more in the future to forward objects which are held in common by the component elements of the organization. A section of a party may not, by alliance with its friends, get all that it wants as soon as it may desire, but it is more apt to achieve its objects by co-operation with those who have proved friends than by playing into the hands of enemies. Hence, Mr. Blake's advice to the democracy of Britain and Ireland is timely.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF.

It is now established that as a result of friendly hints from high quarters, the Canadian sugar refiners imported enormous supplies just before the duty on the raw article was put on. This reminds us that at least one Conservative leader, who has been much in evidence recently, owed his early good fortune to a tip which he received that the duties on whisky were about to be largely increased. He acted on the information, and coined many thousands of dollars. It is too bad that such leakages are possible.

THE LATE SECRETARY GRESHAM.

The somewhat sudden death yesterday of Walter Q. Gresham, Secretary of State in Mr. Cleveland's Cabinet, removes one of the brightest ornaments and exemplars in American public life. Whatever may be said of his abilities as an administrator, friends and opponents alike respected him as a man of spotless integrity. His loyalty to conviction was shown in his fearless dissent from the McKinley trade restriction policy at a time when he was a leading member of the Republican party and a Presidential possibility. He was of a retiring disposition, and had little desire to leave the congenial quietude of the bench for the turmoil of political life. It is said that only his admiration and friendship for Mr. Cleveland induced him to undertake the arduous position of Foreign Secretary at the President's urgent solicitation. His selection was a surprise to himself and the public, but Mr. Cleveland has always exercised a rare independence in his official appointments. Mr. Gresham had a difficult position to fill. He was subjected to incessant attacks by jingoistic opponents because of his foreign policy, which they denounced as weak and unpatriotic. Mr. Gresham did not pander to the jingo element like his brilliant and arbitrary predecessor, the late Mr. Blaine, but by a wise and conciliatory course he did much to elevate the standard of national dignity and win the respect of other nations for his country.

In the list of colonists honored with titles by her Majesty, at least one distinguished name will be missed—the gentleman who so worthily represented the Government at the Columbian Fair. One of the notable gentlemen who maintained the dignity of the Imperial Government was not overlooked in the distribution of honors on the Queen's natal day, and yet we are sure that among all the subjects and servants of her Majesty there was none who carried himself with a loftier bearing or who was more earnest in the desire to excel in making a profound impression upon the world in Chicago than the gentleman from Canada. In his own country and in his own city he is well and widely known. No other carries his head quite so high, and in making choice of him as its representative the Government of the Dominion had an eye for the proper fitness of things. Mr. Cockburn, M.P., is a gentleman of birth and breeding, and with the instincts of a noble lineage he filled the place to which he was appointed with as much grace of manner as if he had been a born Norfolk Howard. It is true that Mr. Cockburn came high, and some plebeian folk are actually hinting at the extravagance of his hotel bills. "Just fancy," they say, "a man running a hotel bill of $120 to $150 per week for regular board for months together, besides $10 to $15 per week for extra meals and wine, and $2 to $3 per week for blacking his shoes and laundrying his linen!" It does look big when put in that way, we allow; and it would be large for any other man in Canada. But besides looking the nobleman, and so making his country and her people large in the eyes of the world, Mr. Cockburn is a large man. He has a large foot, a capacious chest, and a "boundless stomach," as Shakespeare said of Wolsey; and when account is taken of these things it is only wonder that the bills for blacking, laundrying, and boarding and lodging should be large correspondingly. "When I think of my opportunities," Warren Hastings said, "I am amazed at my own moderation." So may Mr. Cockburn say, we apprehend; and out of pity for his feelings under all the circumstances of time and place we think the Queen might have made him a baron, or a K. C. M. G. at the least.

Secretary Carlisle talks of retiring from the United States Cabinet because politics have made him poor, and he desires to earn some money by returning to law. Mr. Carlisle is in direct contrast to some of our public men at Ottawa, who have made lots of money in politics, but little or nothing at their own professions.

President Cleveland says that a "sound and absolutely safe money is the life blood of a country's prosperity." As money is a circulating medium, the President's simile is very apt.

A London alderman says that vitrified brick will never do for this city, because it is too noisy. One thing is certain, new pavements must be provided for on the principal business streets this summer, and the time to put it down is while the electric railway track is being laid. Whether the alderman agree upon vitrified brick, or Trinidad pitch, or content themselves with cedar blocks, a good foundation must be insisted on. Solid substratum on which to lay the roadway proper, is a prerequisite to a lasting street.

House and Lobby.

The Langevin Block—Arbitrament of Claims Delayed—Labors of the Senate—Debate on the Budget Resumed—Government Malfeasance Shown Up in a Strong Light.

Ottawa, May 28.—Returns were laid on the table of papers respecting the Inverness and Richmond Railway Company, and the Boston and Nova Scotia Railway Company, respecting the pier at Morden, N. S., and respecting the harbor and river at Liverpool, N. S.

Papers respecting the Langevin block at Ottawa show that on Jan. 12, 1893, Contractor Charlebois put in claims amounting to $100,000, and objected to the decision of the chief architect disallowing $53,691 of the claims. On Jan. 30, 1893, Charlebois asked that the claims be submitted to the Minister of Public Works for his arbitrament. On March 20, 1894, the Minister notified him that he would be ready to hear the case on April 10, but the last of the correspondence, dated Nov. 23, 1894, shows Charlebois still asking for the Minister's decision.

When the House resumed today after the holidays the attendance was small. Mr. Laurier was in his seat as usual, watching every move on the Parliamentary board. Bills were introduced by Mr. Amyot respecting the Quebec, Charlevoix and Montmorency Railway, and by Dr. Sproule respecting the Clifton Suspension Bridge Company.

In reply to Mr. Davies, Controller Wallace said that between July 1, 1894, and May 1, 1895, 6,068,000 pounds of cleaned rice were imported, and 4,334,000 pounds of unhulled rice. This is the article of diet upon which the rate of duty last month was 80 per cent.

Mr. Foster said that the Government did not permit permanent employees, civil engineers or surveyors to engage in outside work and compete with outside men. The trouble is that nearly all such officers are temporary and not permanent.

Mr. Rider resumed his speech on the budget, and the amendment of Sir Richard Cartwright. He accused the Government of gross extravagance, and instanced the salary bill of civil servants drawing over $1,000, which was $694,000 more than in 1878. Even in the smaller items of civil government the same recklessness was seen. Ministers' traveling expenses, which in 1878 amounted to $6,341, were in 1894, $38,629.

Mr. Ryckman, of Hamilton, glorified the National Policy, and quoted Hamilton as an example of what it had accomplished. He cited the Hamilton cotton mills and the rolling mills as examples, and credited the same policy with the projected iron smelting works in Hamilton, and also with the Guelph rolling mills. In his own business he had no bad debts, and this he took to mean a prosperous condition of the people in the Hamilton district. He belittled reciprocity with the United States.

Mr. Gibson, in reply, ridiculed the claims for the N. P. set up by Mr. Ryckman. The Hamilton rolling mill was established long before the N. P. by the Great Western Railway Company, and only abandoned in 1878 because of the substitution of steel rails for iron in constructing railways. Mr. Gibson dwelt on the undoubted depredation on the value of land under the National Policy. Instead of pursuing a policy of protection he advocated a policy which would leave capital its most lucrative investment and industry its own reward. Public opinion today condemned the policy of protection, and no wonder the late Minister of Militia appealed to bullets if ballots failed. Mr. Gibson advised the Government to husband the resources of the country and to get rid of the corrupt jobs. For the price paid for stonework on the Curran bridge he, as a practical man, could have cut the faces of every man in the Cabinet to eight months' imprisonment for stealing half a cord of wood, but for the theft of a million feet of lumber from the Curran bridge the culprit went scot free. It was the fashion now for the Government to run down Great Britain as a free trade country, and dwell on her fallen greatness, but where, he asked amid Opposition cheers, did the Finance Minister go to borrow the money necessary to replace the stolen millions? He went to England, a country collecting $165,000,000 in interest on foreign investments per annum, a country owning 60 per cent of the ocean carrying trade of the world, and a country whose foreign investments had of late years enormously increased.

What then became of the statement of the Minister of Justice that England was reduced to forcing her wares into the civilized markets of the world by force of arms? (Hear, hear.) Alluding to the boast that the condition of the banks showed the prosperity of Canada, Mr. Gibson stated that the circulation of the banks with which he was connected had diminished by 50 per cent. This was evidence of hard times, as was also the fact that the money of the people was allowed to remain idle in the banks. He looked forward to the general election to replace the present Cabinet with better men and inaugurate a better policy.

Mr. Rosamond, himself a highly protected woolen manufacturer, followed, but made no attempt to reply to Mr. Gibson, rather combating some statements by Sir Richard Cartwright. He claimed that the condition of the country was better than in 1878, and that the per capita tax derived from customs was only 30 cents greater than in 1878. It was unfair to blame the National Policy because some factories had been obliged to close down. The N. P. had inspired business men with confidence, and business had greatly improved. Mr. Rosamond defended the rebate of 95 per cent of the duty on raw material used in manufacture by saying that it enabled manufacturers to be produced cheaper in large quantities, and the farmers consequently got the benefit.

Mr. McMillan, of Huron, rose to make a statement on this point, and Mr. Rosamond courteously gave him the floor, but the Ministerialists, led by the Secretary of State, refused to allow Mr. McMillan to be heard.

Mr. Rosamond admitted that farm property had fallen in value, but he claimed that it had fallen also in England. In Canada goods were not as cheap as they were in 1878, notably woolen goods. Mr. Davies, the Maritime Liberal leader patriot, here took up Mr. Rosamond's argument as to the cheapness of goods. He called attention to the fact that prices had fallen very much the world over, and the protectionists in Canada simply took advantage of every fall in prices to maintain their own large profits by means of heavy duties. Mr. Rosamond's defense of the rebate system gave Mr. Davies the opportunity of emphasizing the point that under this system the farmers of the Argentine Republic were enabled to buy Canadian-made implements at a lower price than the farmers of the Canadian Northwest, and the member for Queens, P. E. I., rubbed it in well. Coming to the pretense on the part of the Government supporters that the Liberals had no definite policy, Mr. Davies referred them to the clear enunciation of the Liberal policy as laid down in the published platform of the Liberal convention held in Ottawa. It was pretended that the Liberal policy was to impose a number of taxes said to be imposed by England under free trade, such as taxes on guns, on carriages, on houses, on window glass and probate duties. Mr. Davies ridiculed the ignorance of the Controller of Customs, among other Ministerial speakers, and showed that these and similar taxes in England do not form any part of the revenue of the Central Government, but are collected by imperial officers and distributed among the various municipalities.

Mr. Hughes—That is not so.

Mr. Davies—It is so, and the honorable gentleman is only reflecting the ignorance of his colleagues by denying it. As to the income tax itself, there was not an income in England under $800 which was taxed. He merely quoted these facts, not because they had any reference to the Liberal policy, but to show Canadians how far the Government and its supporters could descend in misrepresentation. They knew well what the Liberal policy was, and knowing it had retired from the edge of dissolution frightened to face the electors. (Cheers.) Canada would for years to come have to raise a revenue mainly by customs duties, but these duties should be so levied that they would represent the taxes paid by the people, and yield to the public treasury the means of carrying on the government efficiently and economically. The Liberals did not intend, when they attained office, to act like a bull in a china shop, but would proceed with due regard to vested interests and with prudence and statesmanship. Circumstances did not permit the full application in Canada of the British system of free trade, but they

For five or six years I had Dyspepsia in its worst form, sometimes completely prostrated; so much so that it was impossible for me to work more than half an hour at a time. I had tried various remedies but did not receive any benefit, when I was recommended by a friend to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I have taken two bottles and feel like a new man. I can eat and drink anything and enjoy my food. I never feel better. I cannot praise Hood's Sarsaparilla too much for not only has it cured me of dyspepsia but also of rheumatism.

WHEELMEN'S WHEELS SHUT OUT

How Cyclists Are Affected by the Tariff Regulations.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 28.—Several of the Canadian cyclists who are entered in the Martin road race arrived in this city this morning. They had a sad tale to tell. It seems that only yesterday a new provision of the tariff law applying to bicycles went into effect. By its terms a duty of 35 per cent of the listed price of the machine must be paid at the customs house. Worse still, a duty equally large must be paid when the wheel is reimported. Most of the Canadians, rather than submit to any such tax, will endeavor to obtain machines in this country.

adopted the principle and made it the goal to which they would move. A tariff for revenue only was the Liberal policy in a phrase. Under such a policy Canada had prospered greatly, her manufactures flourished, and the value of real estate was well maintained. The Liberals were not satisfied with a growth in population far less in the last ten years than during a period of revenue tariff. They were not satisfied with the paucity of their Northwest population or with the slow progress of the country in every department.

Turning to the evils of the protective tariff, he gave as a result of careful calculation that since 1879 the N. P. had extracted $75,000,000 or $80,000,000 from the people under the present tariff more than would have been paid had the Mackenzie tariff been continued. This did not take into account the amount which did not go into the treasury, some of which went to the manufacturer, but some of it was wasted on the rottenness of the system of trying to maintain and create manumour industries. This was one of the minor evils. The system also prevented Canadians from sharing in the cheapening of goods throughout the civilized world, and Mr. Davies read a tabulated statement he had prepared showing the increased production in Great Britain of textiles along with the reduced price for which they were sold. The cordage and the protection to the extent of 2-1/2 cents a pound sold their product to the fishermen of Newfoundland 2 cents cheaper than they sold it to our own fishermen. (Hear, hear.) Taking up the protection to the cotton combine, Mr. Davies recalled the factories formerly established in the Maritime Provinces having over $3,000,000 invested capital, and with the single exception of the Gibson mill, the men and the capital had all disappeared. In the Courtney Bay mill, of St. John, $300,000 had gone down under the protective system. The Parks mill told the same story, and it was almost the same in reference to the Moncton mill. In the west there was the Dundas (Ont.) cotton mill. The tariff enabled the sugar trust to control that necessary. Mr. Davies gave figures to show that today the protection to sugar refiners in the United States was $1.60 per barrel less than in Canada. The rate for taxation in the Maritime Provinces on coal oil was 1.50 per cent. The rate shown to have been actually paid last October on invoices, certified copies of which Mr. Davies produced. Leaving the tariff and the combines, Mr. Davies criticised the finances and the deficits produced by extravagance and corruption. To show that corruption played a large part in the bad showing Mr. Davies read a list of scandals, all of which convicted the Government of criminal neglect and want of business capacity, and some of them convicted them guilty of much worse. In eloquent language Mr. Davies predicted the speedy downfall of the worst and most incompetent Administration that ever existed. He was loudly cheered on resuming his seat.

Mr. Davin followed, and on motion of Mr. Frechette the debate was further adjourned.

The Senate sat for half an hour this afternoon and gave a second reading to a number of bills from the Lower House. An act to amend the Copyright Act was passed through committee and read a third time. The Minister of Agriculture, in explaining the bill, said its object was to increase the number of copies deposited with the department of all works for which a Canadian copyright is applied from two to three. The reason of this was that Lord Ripon, the Secretary of State for the Colonies, had asked that Canada conform with the custom universal throughout the empire of forwarding a copy of all works for which an application for copyright is made to the British Museum. The extra copy provided for in the bill was for the British Museum.

NOTES.
Hon. W. H. Montague has received an invitation to attend the meetings of the Pan-American Congress, which are to be held in Toronto between July 18 and 25, and to deliver an address. The Secretary of State has accepted. He will also likely accept the invitation of the Canadian Club at Hamilton to deliver an address on Dominion Day.

The annual report of the Postmaster-General was brought down tonight. The total expenditure for the department for the past year was $3,517,261, and the revenue $2,899,341, leaving a deficit of $706,920. On July 1st there were in existence 8,664 postoffices in Canada, an increase of 187. The mail routes were increased by 2,240 miles and the annual mail travel by 355,456, the total amount of mail travel being 30,851,179 miles.

ONTARIO BAPTISTS.

The Mission Fund Deficiency of $10,000 Wiped Out—Several Londoners Elected Officers

Toronto, May 28.—The annual meeting of the Baptist convention of Ontario and Quebec commenced last night in Bloor Street Baptist Church. The 29th report of the foreign missions board shows that in 1894, estimating on a basis of converts baptised, an average of 312 was spent in making each convert in the home field, and only $14 in the foreign field. Dealing with the deficit, which last March was found to amount to $10,000, this has by special effort been wiped out without affecting the regular income for current needs, the receipts during March and April last exceeding the expenditure by $23,000.

At this morning's session the election of officers resulted as follows:
President—Rev. John Dempsey, D.D., Ingersoll.
First Vice-President—Rev. T. S. Johnston, Brantford.
Second Vice-President—A. A. Ayer, Montreal.
Treasurer—Rev. D. M. Mitchell, M.A., London.
Committee of Arrangement—W. E. Norton, W. T. Tapscott, A. E. De St. Pauls, Committee of Arrangement—O. C. S. Wallace, S. S. Bates, T. S. Johnston, D. Bennett.

Obituary Committee—John Trotter, Dr. Newman, A. Murdoch, H. P. Laflamme, Sautelle.
Committee on Resolutions—Dr. Goodspeed, William Harley, Dr. Wilton, G. B. Davis, J. Buchanan, W. R. Stroud, James Baird.
Auditors—A. J. Watson and J. W. Westervelt.

This afternoon John Firstbrook, Rev. E. W. Dudson and Prof. Farmer were elected on the foreign mission board. Ten-minute papers were read on "What can be done to make our foreign mission work more efficient?" by Rev. R. McKay, Mr. F. L. Fowke, and Rev. Wm. Walker, of London.

At the evening session the chair was occupied by Hon. John Dryden, and addresses on educational matters were given by Frederick Tracey, Prof. Thos. Trotter and Rev. Galusha Anderson, of Chicago.

NEXT GREAT GATHERING.

The Coming General Assembly in This City.

What the Presbyterian Supreme Court Will Have Before It.

Meeting Rev. Dr. Cochran, of Brantford, one of the veteran Presbyterian representatives yesterday, an "Advertiser" representative requested of him to give some idea of the business likely to be brought before the General Assembly at its meeting in London, beginning on June 12.

"I cannot speak officially, of course," replied Dr. Cochran, "but to two or three important items that are coming before the assembly I may refer. A large amount of time will necessarily be taken up in receiving the reports of the various committees for the past year. The home mission committee, through the generosity of the British churches and the response made to a special appeal last April by the Canadian churches, have enabled the committee to pay all their missionaries or continuous workers, have had to report a deficit to the assembly of over $20,000. The amount given for home missions this year in one way or another will exceed, I believe, any former year in the history of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. This is satisfactory, but at the same time it should be noted that congregations are not giving as they did some years ago for this important scheme, and unless these are increased there must be retrenchment or continuous deficits. The augmentation committee will also be able to present a clean sheet, having been able to pay all the assisted ministers in full. The French evangelization committee will also be able to report that their funds are in good condition. It is very likely that the assembly will be taken up in regard to college matters, especially in connection with the proposed appointment to Knox College. There is no one man upon whom the church is likely to support their own nominees. The question of the new hymn book will also occupy considerable time. As I am not a member of the committee I can hardly tell what is to be recommended to the General Assembly, whether the hymnal proposed by our own committee, or the hymnal at present being prepared for the Scottish Churches will be adopted. The assembly also is very much divided in regard to the matter of the whole book of Psalms being included in any hymn book, or only selections.

"I am not in a position to state the financial condition of the foreign mission committee, but I presume with the large contribution of the ladies, amounting to some $45,000, in addition to congregational contributions, they will also have a clean balance sheet. A considerable number of applications from ministers in other churches to be admitted, will be considered by the assembly. It is hoped that this will be more carefully dealt with than in former years. Many of these, I fear, are not from conscientious change of views, but from some difficulty in connection with the church with which they are connected. In connection, there will be brought before the assembly a case that is pretty well known to the people of London. In connection with St. Andrew's Church, I refer to the appeal Mr. James Munro against the action of the Synod of Hamilton and London in his case."

"HUNTER RED" WALL PAPER.

A Fashion in Room Decoration that Has Just Come Over From England.

The very latest fashion in wall decoration is a bizarre, staring shade of purple known as hunter's red. It comes in plain all-over red, and again variegated with figures and pictures. The grotesque and fantastic designs suggest the headless dragons, centaurs, and puzzling eccentricities of the old-fashioned paperings of our grandmothers' day.

The paper is used to decorate bachelors' dens and the bed chambers of country houses. It is essentially English in character and design, many of the designs depicting red-coated hunters in English fields.

So vividly green is the grass, so impossibly blue the water, so distorted the image of the wounded stag, repeated over and over again on yards and yards of papering, that the beholder wonders alike at the artist's powers of invention and the taste which makes such a display possible. Fashion decrees that with this wall decoration must go old-time English prints of hunting scenes.

With such wall decorations for bedrooms and bachelor apartments, the old-fashioned chintz bed curtains and valances of three generations ago have disappeared. Every imaginable variety of big-flowered pattern and prin design is shown in these cottons, and many of them are as delicate in tint and texture as the prettiest silk draperies.

It is stated that the Queen is almost an invalid, and that her rheumatism has so increased that she can hardly walk.

Three hundred canal boats are lying rotting in the water in Buffalo, and have gone so low on grain that the canal boats are unable to make excursions.

In the British House of Lords, Lord Halifax's bill to empower church officials to refuse to marry persons who have been divorced passed its second reading.

President Cleveland has issued a proclamation announcing the death of Secretary Walter Q. Gresham, and ordering the usual display of mourning at the various United States embassies and military and naval ports.

Three injunctions have already been granted by the Canadian courts and many in the United States restraining merchants from selling cheap and inferior imitations, heavy damages being allowed.

Fashion's Edicts.

The white evening petticoat of the moment is an absolute cascade of lace on the inner as well as the outer side, with equal frothiness.

Box-plated, kilted, gathered and gored skirt backs are all popular, and the fashion of trimming each of the gored seams is still popular.

Riding habits are becoming short-tailed again. The pretty basque that fell to the saddle is giving way before the dresscoat-shaped double-breasted bodice.

Silk and wool moire is a modish fabric for walking dresses. It is woven in changeable effects and is very stylish. Chambray is once more in favor. For trimming frocks of this pretty stuff are foundings of batiste with stiletto embroidery.

Rough straws in two colors, as cerise and heliotrope or old rose and green, are trimmed with reversible ribbons and shaded ostrich tips in colors that match the straw.

Black moire, dotted or shot with a color, is used for revers, crush collars and belts, blouse vests, etc., on handsome costumes. Another favored material is croise crepe, a silk guaranteed not to crack or break in wearing. It comes in stylish and pretty effects.

A pretty dress for a little girl is a cornflower blue crepon. A yoke of cream lace, from it the dress is box-plated and falls in one piece. Between the pleats are insertions of lace, and the bottom of the skirt is faced up with insertion. The sleeves are ornamented with tabs of lace, and finished with deep lace cuffs to the elbow. Three and a half yards of double width material is required.

Some of the new black satin brocades across each width that closely resembles raised passementerie scrolls. All moire and satin fabrics in black find a ready sale this season, for they are used for elegant skirts and redingotes. Moire also is offered, moire Francaise in smaller waves, moire miroir, fancy figures, dots, blocks and stripe combinations.

Sun platted chiffon is very pretty and costs enough to make it popular with the class of women who are always worried about the price of the millions. This new kind of plaiting makes the folds spread in rays from a centre. Whole skirts are made in this way, the rays starting from the belt. Bodies of chiffon to be worn over a silken lining are plaited so that the folds form two sun ray centres, one on each side of the bust line.

Laced shoes are to be very popular and are not only seen for ordinary walking shoes, but are found in the most dressy shoes as well. They possess the advantage of always fitting the foot until they are worn out. As the shoe stretches it can be laced tighter and feel comfortable to the very last. There is nothing so comfortable for walking and for ordinary wear. No matter how short the foot is, the shoe must be long and narrow to give an idea of slowness.

"I find," said a young artist the other day, "that people do not seem to understand that a man paints pictures for the purpose of selling them. They come to my studio, drink my tea by the quart and go away. I often wonder if the run of people think that a man goes to Paris and works like a dog just for the pleasure of coming back and brewing tea."

STRANGE FUNERAL OF A PERFECTIONIST.

Cincinnati, Ohio, May 28.—Mrs. Hannah Martin, leader of a religious sect, the "Perfectionists," and who professed to have attained the divinity of God, died Thursday and was buried Sunday.

No return was made to the health department, and every effort was made by those concerned to keep the news from the public. Even her husband was kept in ignorance of her death and burial.

Gambling Without Limit.
"O, George!" she exclaimed, as they gazed seaward, "there seems to be no limit to ocean's broad expanse. And the waves, how they gamble along the shore."

"The waves are very foolish," said "How foolish!" "To gamble where there is no limit." But not half so foolish as are thousands who, dying with consumption, are staking their last chance on this or that remedy which has never yet been known to cure, and refusing to try that which certainly brings them back to life and health—Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

In the earlier stages of this terrible disease it gives great relief and prolongs life. For weak lungs, spitting of blood, lingering coughs, asthma and kindred ailments, it is guaranteed to cure or benefit, or money paid for it will be returned.

ECONOMY IN COOKING.

THE PRIMARY CONSIDERATION IS TO PLEASE THE CONSUMER.

Each Dish Should be Perfectly Prepared and Intrinsically Eatable—Every Housekeeper Should Apply Herself Seriously to the Study of Cookery.

The primary consideration in cooking is to please the consumer. All of us have fancies in food that are easily attainable. The wise housekeeper will bear in mind all such inexpensive dishes and procure them for the lovers thereof. She will also see that they are daintily served. A bit of garnish, or a nicely moulded form, goes half the way in creating the attractiveness of the viands. An experienced epicure said once: "You sit down to one of my niece's breakfasts and you see halved cantelopes at the corners of the table. CHAPTER XXXIV.

DISSENTMENT.

Lady Valencia waited and wondered in vain next day, when at the hour fixed for the drive Mrs. Hannington did not appear. Later in the afternoon a little note from Molly reached her, couched in very cold and ambiguous terms. The writer was unable to drive out that afternoon, she said, and she neither gave a reason nor expressed any sorrow for her defection. This was rather a rude way of treating the proposal, and Lady Val flushed with vexation as she read the note.

"What does the child mean?" she said to herself. "She seems to have forgotten her manners—she never was distinguished for them, after all." Then came a sharp, stinging thought. "Can she have found out?—can he have told her that I—that I offered myself to him on his wedding day? Surely he would not do that. But as he is—said Lady Val, bitterly, "he would not forget so utterly that he loved me once!"

But in spite of these doubts and fears she turned a bright and smiling face on Captain Rutherford, when she met him at a dance that evening and gave him question in his eyes that he did not like to put into words.

"I have called," she said, with a little nod. "I am doing my duty, you see."

"You are the very kindest person in the world, Lady Valencia."

"I'm afraid it won't be of any use, Charlie. She does not like me."

"Oh—impossible!"

"Quite possible, on the contrary. There are numerous people who don't like me," she said, with a little laugh.

"Never mind: I will do what I can for her; and even if she does not come to me, I'll get some other people to call on her, and she can go to their houses."

"But why shouldn't she like to come to you?" said Charlie, in a puzzled tone.

"Ah, why, indeed? She associates me a little too much with her old home-life, perhaps," said Lady Val, coolly; "she used to see me at Torrensburg, and she may think that I sympathize with her dear little stepmother, who is the sweetest and gentlest young thing whom I have seen for a long time."

"Indeed! I had an idea that the stepmother had been unkind to her, or something."

"I don't think Molly told you that," said Lady Val, with a flash of honest indignation.

"Oh, no, no; she said nothing about her. Some one said so at the club, I believe; I suppose it was a mistake."

"Quite a mistake, Mrs. Moncrieff is a charming little woman, with the kindest heart in the world; but she was not experienced enough to keep a tight hand on her stepchildren. It has been a great trouble to her. But Bertie adores her," said Lady Valencia, catching herself up with a sense that it was not becoming to talk of the Moncrieffs' affairs to their friend's son, "and I am glad of that, for he is really a nice boy, although a little weak in character."

"He is either coming or coming shortly. You might look him up, Charlie; it would be a kindness."

"I shall be delighted."

"I will get his address for you. Keep him out of mischief, if you can."

Captain Rutherford was only too pleased to undertake the mission. As soon as Bertie was settled in London, therefore, he found a very congenial and a very desirable friend ready to hand; and Mr. Moncrieff was grateful to Rutherford for thus making himself known. It had been one of Alan Moncrieff's initial mistakes in the training of his children to keep them secluded from acquaintances; the consequence was that, debarr'd from suitable friendships, they had made unsuitable ones for themselves, and the lives of both had been darkened and saddened through evil influences. Bertie was sincerely anxious to mend his ways and regain the confidence of his father, and it soon became a pleasure to him to spend as much of his time as possible with a man like Charles Rutherford, whose frank and honorable spirit was a perpetual spur and stimulus to his own.

Rutherford's regiment was quartered at Aldershot, but he found it easy to get frequent leave, and was as much in London as possible. He kept his word to Lady Valencia, however, and was careful not to go too often to the Hanningtons. He had found it necessary, for his own conscience's sake, to pull up, as he said to himself, "in time" for it was becoming a pain and an irritation to him to see Molly's pale and unhappy looks. He still maintained that he was interested in her solely because of his father's wishful eyes, but he could not forget Molly's wistful eyes, that her wan face haunted him night and day, and that he was possessed with such a desire to do her service that he would willingly have gone to the ends of the earth for her if she had so desired.

But it must also be said that Charlie Rutherford's admiration for Molly was of the purest and most reverential kind. If he had never seen her distressed or lonely, he might never have thought twice of her, save as an ordinary acquaintance; it was just because he often saw tears in her eyes that his chivalrous nature was so stirred. He vowed to be her friend, her brother, to the last days of his life, and he told himself that it was well for her that she should have one trustworthy "servant," to use the parlance of an older world, one who would be always faithful and helpful, and ready to maintain her cause against all comers. Having made up his mind in this way, he did not keep entirely from the Hanningtons, as Lady Valencia would have advised him to do, but went there discreetly, dining with John Hannington, and even playing cards with him when asked, but never for one moment altering the gentle respect of his manner towards the woman who—although he hardly knew it—now occupied the first position in his heart and mind.

The summer came to a close, and people began to leave town for their holiday rambles. Rutherford was due at his father's house before the end of July, and he was going to travel north with Bertie Moncrieff. Lady Valencia Gilderoy was bound for Norway with a select party of friends. Charlie came to see the Hanningtons before his departure. He wondered what they were going to do; he had not heard their plans, and Bertie had been unable to give him any information. Bertie was not very fond of going to his brother-in-law's apartments. He had developed as strong a dislike to John Hannington as his father and his friend had done.

Captain Rutherford found both husband and wife at home. Molly was looking exceedingly white, he thought, but she professed herself quite well—only a little tired by the heat. Hannington seemed to listen to his visitor's remarks with suppressed impatience, and answered almost rudely when Charlie once turned towards him. The flush of shame or alarm which instantly suffused Molly's pale face made the young man indignant for her sake, and yet all the more anxious to keep the peace. He asked her where she was going for the autumn.

"I don't know yet," she answered timidly, glancing at her husband. "We have not decided."

"It will probably end in our going nowhere at all," said Hannington, irritably. "And I hope you will like it if we do." The last words were addressed to Molly, who again flushed vividly and painfully.

Charlie began to wish that he had not come. He could not run away just yet, however, for Molly had given him a cup of tea, and he could not put it down untasted. John Hannington also seemed to feel some embarrassment at the turn the conversation had taken, for he pulled out his watch, declaring that he had an important engagement to keep, and that he was sorry to say he really must be off. And then he quitted the room, but as Charlie noticed, without a word of farewell or apology to his wife.

It struck Captain Rutherford that the two grew colder to each other in manner every time he saw them, and such was indeed nearly the case. For after that revelation made by Hannington of the real state of his affections—a revelation which could never feel to be anything but unspcakably brutal and degrading to herself—Molly's childish love for her husband had died a painful death. The veil of romance was torn from her eyes, and she saw him for what he was—or, rather, she saw the very worst side of him, and nothing else. She was not strong enough by nature to dominate and make a fairly good man of him, as Lady Val had declared to herself that she could have done. She was helpless; she trembled before him with the nervous timidity which harshness or injustice had always excited in her. She saw that he was selfish, sensual and hard, and she was too much shocked by her discovery to look for the few scattered rays of gold which existed in the baser metal of his character. It seemed to her that her whole life was ruined; she had shattered all possible happiness for herself, and she looked for nothing more.

City Manufacturers Petition for a Rent Water Rate.

A Reduction in the Present Rates Will Probably be Made—Springbank Electric Privileges.

The water commissioners received a petition yesterday afternoon from many of the leading manufacturers of the city asking for a reduction of the water rate to 5 cents per 100 cubic feet. The rate at present charged is 15 cents per 100 feet up to 20,000 feet. Between 20,000 and 30,000 feet the rate is 12 1/2 cents; from 30,000 to 100,000 the rate is 10 cents; above 100,000, 8 cents. According to a schedule prepared in the water commissioners' office, only four consumers in the city range above the 100,000 mark. The Tecumseh House gets away with $86,775 feet per quarter; D. S. Perrin & Co., 128,250; Parisian Laundry, 125,600; and McClary's, 124,600. The London Furniture Company uses about 75,000 feet, and a great many manufacturers use over 50,000 feet.

The petition set forth:

1. The present rates are so oppressive that we feel it a hardship to pay them.

2. We believe that the above rate will more than cover the actual cost of supplying water.

3. Taking into account the many disadvantages the manufacturers of the city are under compared with those who are located where they have the advantage of lake freight rates, we think that the city should do all that is possible to assist the manufacturers in turning up their trade and thus give employment to a greater number of men, and by so doing increase the population and importance of our city.

(Signed) Wortman & Ward, D. S. Perrin, Reid Bros. & Co., John Ferguson & Sons, Kensington Furniture Company, London Furniture Company, Patterson & Joly, A. Beck, Geo. White & Sons, W. J. Thompson, McCormick Manufacturing Company, John Campbell, Stevens Manufacturing Company.

Action was deferred on the matter, although Chairman Cowan dropped a hint that some reduction would at least be made, if not quite as much as asked for.

Manager Carr, of the street railway company, renewed the company's offer to open a year for the entrance to Springbank Park, and the British Road Company also sent in a communication asking that exclusive privileges be not granted to the London Street Railway Company. Both matters were laid over.

The solicitor will be instructed to alter the law to conform with the recent resolution, confining the watering of lawns within the hours of 6 to 8 a.m. and 6 to 8 p.m.

There were present Chairman Cowan, Commissioner Judd, Engineer Moore, Secretary Ellwood and Inspectors Platt and Plastow.

MIDDLESEX.

On the evening of May 24 the pupils of school section No. 10, Westminster, gave their annual entertainment in the school room, when the room was tastefully decorated with cut flowers and plants, presenting a very pleasing appearance. The building was packed, many being unable to find seats. The chair was taken by Rev. E. H. Savers, Wilton Grove, whose well-chosen and humorous remarks drew greatly to the enjoyment of the evening. The recitations, solos, dialogues, callisthenics, etc., rendered by the pupils reflected great credit upon themselves and upon Miss F. McColl, the efficient and successful teacher of the section. The auction of the evening was conducted by Mr. Sawell, who was especially delighted with the artists from a distance—Mr. McDonald, London, and Miss Saywell, Alma College, St. Thomas. Mr. McDonald rendered a number of very humorous solos, and he was warmly applauded. Miss Saywell received equal applause for her elocutionary powers. The proceeds of the evening were over $30.

Jackson, Running race—1 Sidney Deacy, 2 John Guest, Hop, step and jump—1 J. Guest, 2 Wm. Jackson, High jump—1 S. Deacy, 2 J. Guest. The program concluded with the climbing of the pole by J. Jones; a football match between the Oak school and all comers, resulting in favor of White Oak; and tug-of-war between the married and single men, which was very interesting and resulted in a tie. The whole day's sport concluded with a grand ball, the committee are to be congratulated on the able manner in which the arrangements were made and carried out. Special credit is also due to Mr. Shaver, of White Oak Store, for his efforts in making the afternoon's entertainment a success.

Sleeplessness is due to nervous excitement. The delicately constituted, the financier, the business man, and those whose occupation necessitates great mental strain or worry, all suffer more or less from it. Among the pains and aches cured with marvelous rapidity with Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is earache. The young are especially subject to it, and the desirability of this Oil as a family remedy is enhanced by the fact that it is admirably adapted not only to the above ailment, but also to the hurts, disorders of the bowels and affections of the throat, to which the young are especially subject.

THE EDITOR'S WIFE

A Sufferer from Headaches and Dyspepsia for Years.

A Frank Statement from Mr. N. Page Editor of Le Spectateur, Hull, Que., in Which He Tells How His Wife Regained Health and Strength.

The editor of Le Spectateur has often been asked whether he thought entire reliance can be placed in the statements appearing each week in the newspapers with reference to cures brought about by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and can unhesitatingly say that he believes the half has not been told, and that for each cure that has been made public through the press there are scores of others, no doubt quite as remarkable, of which the general public never hear. Many people shrink from permitting the publication of a statement of their cure, and for this reason it is never heard of outside the circle of their acquaintance. We believe this to be all wrong, and think it is a duty those who have recovered health and strength owe to others less fortunate to make the means of their restoration public. This at all events is the spirit that animates the editor of Le Spectateur in making known, for the good it may do to others, the fact that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have, in his own household, proven worthy of the high praise awarded them elsewhere. Mme. Page was for upwards of seven years an almost constant sufferer from Pink Pills, pain in the back and dyspepsia. As a result her appetite was feeble, and she was reduced to a state of great weakness. It was in 1887 that she first began to be troubled, and this condition of affairs continued until 1893. At that time, as the result of having read so much of the cures wrought by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, a few boxes were secured, and it was soon observed that she was regaining her old-time health. The continued use of the pills for a time had the most beneficial effect. The headaches left, so did the pains in the back, and the stomach, and when she discontinued the Pink Pills it was with a feeling that her health was entirely restored. During the past winter Mme. Page had another somewhat similar attack, but, resuming again to Pink Pills, she was soon on the road to recovery, and we have no hesitation in commending them as an unequalled blood builder and nerve restorer, having seen their good effects in other cases than the one above noted.

AN ELGIN PIONEER GONE.

Sudden Death of Mr. Daniel Macpherson, of Fingal—A Useful Life.

Mr. Daniel Macpherson, of Fingal, whose death occurred suddenly on Saturday, in his 79th year, was born in Helmsdale, Sutherlandshire, Scotland, Feb. 1, 1817. He came to Canada with his father in 1839, when three years of age, and first settled in Dunwich township, the family afterwards removing to Southwold township. When a young man he was engaged for some years in operating threshing machinery, and he and the late Hon. Arch. McKeellar, being among the first to introduce in this district improved machinery of this class. He was married in 1848 to Mary Ferguson, daughter of Duncan Ferguson, of Yarmouth township. Her death occurred in 1859.

In the year 1848 he, with Wm. Glasgow and Matthias Hovey, started the Fingal agricultural works, and engaged in the manufacture of agricultural implements, engines, saw and grist mill machinery, etc. After nearly fifteen years of successful business, they started a branch establishment at Clinton. Both factories are still actively carried on. The original partnership continued until dissolved by the death of Wm. Glasgow in 1882, when the Fingal business was purchased by deceased and his sons.

In addition to manufacturing, his fondness for farming pursuits, which adhered to him through life, led to his always being actively engaged in this line.

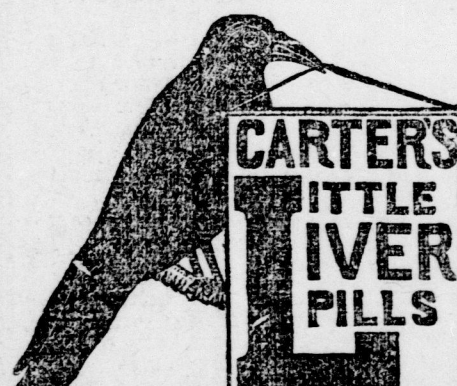

He was a man of the highest character and integrity, of generous disposition, and warmly attached to his friends.

Although of Conservative antecedents he was from his first participation in politics a staunch Liberal. He engaged actively in the early political contests of this district, and was an intimate friend and co-worker of the late Hon. Alexander MacKenzie, Hon. Geo. Brown and Hon. Arch. McKeellar in many hard-fought political battles in which they participated in this section.

In religion he was a Presbyterian and connected with the church of that denomination at Fingal, of which Rev. George Sutherland is pastor.

Seven sons and one daughter, Mrs. W. J. Coates, of Clinton, survive him. The funeral took place from his late residence to the Fingal cemetery on Tuesday, May 28.

While attempting to make a flying switch Monday morning at Hawthorne, Wis., fifteen miles south of West Superior, Conductor R. H. and brakeman Shoopman, of the Omaha road, were killed.
