EXECUTION OF OFFICER STIRS PEOPLE TO REBEL

British Flag Raised on Island of Corfu in Protest Against Acts, While Demonstrations Occur in Western Portions of Country.

BROTHER OF KING ON TRIAL FOR LIFE

Rome, Dec. 2.—A serious Greek counter-revolutionary outbreak has occurred in Patras and Missolonghi, on the Gulf of Patras, in Western Greece, and on the island of Corfu, where the British flag is reported to have been raised as the result of indignation over the execution of a Greek officer, Constantinos, an officer of the Near East Relief will take over each ship.

Ten Greek steamers have been sent from Piraeus to Samos for refugees, under orders to be on guard against the seizure of the ships by the Turks. Constantinos, an officer of the Near East Relief will take over each ship.

The trial of Prince Andrew, brother of former King Constantine of Greece, was started today before a war tribunal, according to unofficial reports here. A former announcement said the trial would start Monday.

General Vlachopoulos is president of the council before which the prince will appear on a charge of disobeying the orders of General Papoulas at the battle of Sangaria. The trial is expected to be brief.

WIT AT LAUSANNE.

Lausanne, Dec. 2.—Gloom hangs heavily over the conference most of the time, but there is an occasional smile. When Bulgaria and Greece were presenting rival claims for the possession of Dedagatch, Miss Stancioff, acting as spokesman for the premier of Bulgaria, said in part: "Bulgaria has only two ports on the Black Sea, and no outlet southward. Greece has scores of ports. Surely she can spare us one."

M. Venizelos interrupted with great earnestness: "God Almighty Himself placed Greece with water all around her. Please don't blame me for that."

CITY RAILWAYMEN POLI RECORD VOTE

City Clerk Reports Ballots Trebled Over Last Election.

With the polling booth at the city hall open until 5 p.m. today, three times the number of railwaymen have already voted during the past two days as voted during the entire three days last year.

City Clerk Baker explained Saturday morning that he had found it necessary to furnish an additional bundle of ballots for the purpose, so far in excess of expectations had been the vote to date.

Mr. Baker expressed regret that the Ontario legislature had not granted the same privilege of early voting to the commercial travelers. They managed to include the railway clerks and expressmen this year, but we have been told that strenuous objections were forthcoming from Toronto when the vote for the travelers was urged.

ELUSIVE MASQUERADER TROUBLES JOHN M. SYKES

Local Man Arrested in Place of Another—Error Is Regretted.

A man masquerading under the name of "J. Sykes" has thrown much regrettable and unpleasant reflection on John M. Sykes of London.

A few days ago provincial police authorities stationed in London were telegraphed by the Smith's Falls police to arrest a man who called himself J. Sykes, wanted on various charges. John M. Sykes of London was thereupon clutched by the law and taken to Smith's Falls. On arrival there, the persons who were alleged to have been defrauded declared that Mr. Sykes bore no resemblance to the suspected culprit, and the London man was, of course, immediately released.

The humorous side of this comedy of errors is fairly apparent. Unfortunately, however, Mr. Sykes has been in good faith in the Advertiser, name being published in the Advertiser in good faith in connection with the arrest here and the charges alleged in Smith's Falls. This error the Advertiser now corrects, and expresses its regret for any embarrassment which may have been caused to Mr. Sykes.

400 FAMILIES HOMELESS IN MILLION-DOLLAR FIRE

Flames Sweep North Carolina Town—Extensive Use of Dynamite.

Special To The Advertiser.

Newbern, N. C., Dec. 2.—Four hundred families here were homeless today, as authorities started an investigation of the fire which yesterday caused damage estimated at a million dollars. The fire started in the lumber mill of the John L. Roper Lumber Company. Practically the entire negro section of the city was wiped out, and more than a hundred white families were made homeless.

A dozen or more persons have been treated for painful burns, but hospital authorities say none will prove fatal. Dynamite was used in an effort to check the spread of the blaze, but heavy winds drove the flames across the gaps opened by the explosives. The Newbern fire department, unable to cope with the flames, called in the surrounding cities for aid when a second fire in the negro section broke out.

Vancouver, B. C., Dec. 2.—Mr. Justice W. A. McDonald yesterday granted a stated case in the case of Fred Deal, negro, convicted of the murder of Constable McBeath, V.C., and sentenced him to be hanged on January 26. An application for a new trial, to be made by Deal's counsel, C. S. Arnold, on the ground that the trial judge in his charge to the jury did not fully instruct the jury.

SEES SOLUTION FOR PROBLEM OF LANGUAGE

Inspector of Separate Schools Claims English Taught in Classes.

DECLARES DISPUTE ENDED

Says Solution For Bilingualism Was Desires, Not Law.

That the separate schools in Ontario are observing to the letter, regulation 17 of provincial educational rules, which provides for the teaching of English after the fourth grade, was the prevailing opinion voiced locally by persons familiar with the bilingual question in Ontario.

Expression of authoritative views was obtained as a result of the interest manifested in the report of Dr. James L. Hughes of Toronto, who has investigated the situation in the city of Ottawa. Dr. Hughes, as announced this morning, was warm in his acclaim of English teaching in French schools. He was appointed to the task by the United League of Ontario which has adopted for its motto, "The promotion of goodwill, better understanding and respect between the English-speaking and French-speaking people of Canada."

The unfortunate dispute which has many a connection with the language question in English-French schools of this province is gradually being overcome, said Father Foley, inspector of separate schools for the district. "But the application of rule 17, and all the efforts of boards of education, is compulsory, but rather because Frenchmen appreciate the necessity of it."

"In mixed communities, such as Ottawa, each French parent realizes the necessity of having their children taught the two languages. English is a prime essential in both commerce and social life."

The reason for much past discussion was the fact that the provincial educationalists sought to impose the teaching of English by force. This was naturally resented by the French element. Now, however, English is spoken as fluently as French, and because it is compulsory, but rather because Frenchmen appreciate the necessity of it.

At Adelaide Street Baptist Church, Rev. G. A. Leitch will speak from the subject "Chickens, But What Kind?"

An interesting after-service musicale will be the rendering of the Mendelssohn's oratorio "Elijah," at 8:15, by the choir of First Methodist Church, under the leadership of Mr. C. D. Jordan, with soloists, Miss Hilda McMillan, Miss Ruth Betzner, George Sweet and Carmen Leach.

SWITZERLAND VOTES TO DECIDE LEVY ON CAPITAL

Geneva, Dec. 2.—Switzerland is greatly interested today in an election which will decide whether a levy shall be made on capital to meet the government's needs. The voting begins today and will conclude Sunday afternoon. It is expected the results will be in favor of the levy. The bill would impose a levy of 33.3 per cent upon all fortunes of more than 80,000 marks about $14,000, and a heavier tax on larger estates.

SEES EXTENSION OF HUMAN LIFE BY TREATING WITH RADIUM

Special To The Advertiser.

New York, N. Y., Dec. 2.—Extension of human life to far beyond 100 years, is a possibility within the next few years, as the result of radio-active treatment, according to Dr. C. Everett Field, director of the radium institute.

Field bases his prediction on the experiments with radium by European experts as outlined to him in data from Prof. Barton Scammell of the British radium society.

TONIGHT ENDS CIVIC CAMPAIGN

Masonic Temple To Be Scene of Final Bout.

The battle is drawing to a close, and opponents of the proposed purchase of the London Street Railway gather in the Masonic Temple tonight to hear the last message from the respective candidates.

Sir Adam Beck, chairman of the Hydro-Electric Commission, who during the course of his address Friday night at Ealing, "staked his reputation on his prediction of a 4-cent fare," will be a speaker during the evening. It has also been suggested that the two majority candidates be given a final hearing, while the claim has been registered at one or two of the more recent public gatherings, that the opponents of the suggested purchase should also be allowed to present their views.

In any event it is believed that the Masonic Temple will witness the liveliest pre-election gathering in the history of the city.

Mayor Cameron Wilson, who has been "stumping" the city during the campaign, on behalf of the street railway and other bylaws, will also be on the platform, and is expected to deal briefly with the former issue.

Questioned Saturday morning, following several inquiries from interested ratepayers, City Clerk Sam Baker gave as his opinion that the vote Monday on the street railway proposal was a plebiscite. "This is where the people vote 'yes' or 'no,'" he explained, "rather than where the ratepayers vote 'for' or 'against,' and a city council is not necessarily bound by the result of the former, despite the fact that a big majority might be registered for the affirmative."

22 Heirs Fight for Share of Great Fortune of Late Sultan of Turkey

Untermeyer will sail for Lausanne immediately, it was announced by Samuel Untermeyer, well-known attorney, his father.

The heirs of the late sultan, princes and princesses, will go before the Turkish-Ally conference and fight the great oil companies seeking to gain control of the oil fields of Mesopotamia and surrounding territory. The fight of the Turkish claimants will be based on the claim that Abdul Hamid paid for the territory passing through the Panama canal in one month, as well as for tolls collected, were broken in November. Reports show that 312 vessels used the waterway. The tolls amounted to $1,264,441.

GOVERNMENT TO STOP GRANT TO CLASS B FAIRS

A. M. Hunt Makes Announcement After Toronto Convention.

LONDON FAIR IS CLASS A

Western Exhibition Will Continue to Receive Support From House.

Government grants to fairs throughout Canada will remain as they are for the next two years. At the end of that time it is likely that all class "B" fairs will be dropped from the Dominion government list, and greater assistance given to class "A" fairs.

That was the substance of the information brought back to this city by A. M. Hunt, secretary of the Western Fair, who attended a convention at the Carle-Rite Hotel, Toronto, called by Dr. W. R. Motherwell, minister of agriculture.

Mr. Hunt stated that Dr. Motherwell explained his stand on the reduction that went into effect last winter. The total amount of money for division had been $200,000. This amount he thought should be cut in half. On further consideration, however, the half was increased 25 per cent, so that Western Fair received $235,000, instead of $200,000. All fairs with a prize list of $4,000 or over were given grants in proportion.

After a discussion which representatives of practically every fair in Canada joined, Dr. Motherwell stated that he had decided on the basis of the information received, that no more fairs would be taken on, and the second, that grants would be continued for a period of two years.

Any of the smaller fairs to get their accounts in shape. After that time, however, only class A fairs would be carried for by the Dominion government.

In order to benefit by the grants, the fairs in the west raised their prize list until it was of the necessary $4,000 standard, and then claimed their share. Some provision was made for the smaller fairs, he said, and it is understood that a number of them are considering taking the matter to the provincial governments at an early date.

Acting on a motion, it was decided to confer with the department and appoint a committee of three or five members from the secretaries and managers of the class "A" fairs to confer with the department when any question of grants arises.

At the 32nd annual meeting of the International Association, there was a very good attendance. Mr. Hunt stated. The meeting was held at the King Edward Hotel, Nov. 28, 29 and 30, and there were representatives from 47 of the largest fairs in both the United States and Canada.

MOTHER DENIES ASSAULT STORY

Mrs. Harding Declares Daughter Did Not Know the Alleged Attacker.

The alleged assault on the 17-year-old London girl, Dorothy Harding, of 1574 Dundas street, received further light this morning in a statement to The Advertiser by Mrs. R. Harding, the young girl's mother.

Mrs. Harding emphatically denied the story of a witness who reported that he had seen Miss Harding leave the street car in company with a man, the alleged culprit. Later, however, her daughter recognized the man's voice, and he ran away, disappearing before the police arrived.

"The detectives promise results in a few days," said Mrs. Harding, "and we are anxious to have justice done."

Mrs. Harding said that her husband found a man walking quietly down the street, but did not suspect him of being the alleged culprit. Later, however, her daughter recognized the man's voice, and he ran away, disappearing before the police arrived.

NEAR EAST WAR WAS HOPELESS, SAYS GAZETTE

British Government Attacked for "Criminal Levity" in Backing Greece.

SECRET ARRANGEMENTS

London Chronicle Blames the Greeks for Recall of Constantine.

BY HENRY SOMERVILLE.

Cable to The Advertiser, Copyright, Oxford, England, Dec. 2.—Only two London papers, the Gazette and the Chronicle, comment editorially on the documents published in Paris, revealing secret arrangements between Lloyd George and Venizelos for the Greek war against Turkey. Documents show what has long been known, that the British war office always predicted Greek failure.

Whilst the Gazette condemns the British government for criminal levity in encouraging a hopeless enterprise, the Chronicle puts the whole blame on the Greeks, saying that at the time of the Sevres Treaty Venizelos was in power, and if he had remained the ambitions of Greater Greece were not so readily realizable. The Greeks, however, were warned by King Constantine, and were warned to this effect by the allies. One of the Greek leaders, however, was not warned, and he was the one who was the cause of the war.

George W. Wickersham, former attorney-general, Samuel Gomper, president of the American Federation of Labor, and Guy Oyster, Mr. Gomper's secretary, also were mentioned by Mr. Keller as other witnesses he would ask the committee to summon as to this particular allegation.

1200 HOMELESS AS FIRE SWEEPS QUEBEC TOWN

Terrebonne Partly Wiped Out With Estimated $1,000,000 Loss.

BLAZE SEEN 25 MILES

Victims Pray as Sacred Host Paraded Through Stricken Area.

Terrebonne, Que., Dec. 2.—One hundred and seventy-five houses destroyed, 1,200 persons rendered homeless, and a million dollars' damage done, is the latest estimate of the losses sustained by the fire which swept a large section of this place last night. Firefighters, men and apparatus from Montreal are present in large numbers and have dynamited buildings to prevent any spread of the fire to the west end of the town, although the flames are now pretty well under control. The refugees are being cared for at the College St. Louis, which was not reached by the flames. No lives were lost.

Scores of firemen and a great quantity of apparatus were dispatched from Montreal last night, and early this morning. The flames were engaged in blasting many of the dwellings in the western end of the town in order to render it impossible for the flames to spread to this small, undamaged section.

The fire had its origin in the explosion of a boiler in the saw and door factory of Joseph Limoges, and from there spread with amazing rapidity to the town hall, the town hall and the provincial bank branch were destroyed in that area and four hundred people were rendered homeless, in all over 75 houses were burned to the ground.

Fire Brigade Inadequate.

The fire-fighting apparatus of the town was wholly inadequate to battle with the flames. Most of the apparatus was lost in the destruction of the town hall. The fire trucks were brought from Montreal, 25 miles away, and local volunteer firemen of the Greeks, saying that at the time of the Sevres Treaty Venizelos was in power, and if he had remained the ambitions of Greater Greece were not so readily realizable. The Greeks, however, were warned by King Constantine, and were warned to this effect by the allies. One of the Greek leaders, however, was not warned, and he was the one who was the cause of the war.

A picturesque incident of the fire was the parading through the streets of the Sacred Host, while the popping knelt and prayed on its passage.

It is the smaller proprietors of the town who are the hardest hit, they having lost their all, including their furniture. Little or no insurance was carried by them.

Owing to the tremendous velocity of the wind, flames spread with amazing rapidity among the wooden buildings, and several lumber yards were ablaze shortly after fire broke out, about 8:45, and before local volunteer fire fighters were able to do anything to check it. The fire raged from Montreal arrived here about 1 p.m., and were able to assist the local men to establish a cordon along what is called Rue St. Pierre. The fire forced its way toward the river, destroying everything in its path. The sparks, which fell in showers, set out houses and barns in the fields alight, and there was no hope of stemming them in the direction of the river. The flames are still burning fiercely over that area this morning.

TO GIVE PUBLIC OWNERSHIP OF C.N.R. FAIR DEAL

Premier King Declares Government Will Do All in Its Power.

DEFENDS TURK ATTITUDE

States Party Will Continue To Consult People of Canada.

Perth, Ont., Dec. 1.—(By Canadian Press Staff Correspondent.)—Declarations that the government intend to do all in its power to give public ownership of the National Railways a fair deal; defence of the government's attitude on the Near East situation, and further assurance that Canada would continue to have government in which the people would continue to be consulted were features of the premier's election speeches in Lanark today. Night Hon. Mr. King addressed three meetings in addition to a gathering of school children at Lanark village.

Mr. King appealed for the election of David Findlay, on the ground that this would make for greater freedom of action and freedom of debate. Purely party questions and affiliations could well be laid aside in this contest in the patriotic endeavor to give the government greater strength to fulfill its promises to the electorate.

Reviews Situation.
Reviewing the situation as he had found it on taking office, Mr. King said he had sought to give a proper medium of expression to the voice of the West by inviting the Progressives to name some of their members for cabinet portfolios. This they had declined, but they had promised, and had given last session, honorable co-operation to the government. In their recent convention they had promised continuation of this honorable co-operation.

The public debt was now over the two billion dollars, and the annual in-

Witness At Garneau Probe Declares Inquest Was Joke

Henri Delisle, Uncle of Murdered Quebec Girl, States Investigation Was Adjourned to Let One of the Jurors Attend Horse Races at Three Rivers.

Quebec, Dec. 1.—(By Canadian Press.)—"The inquest held by the coroner was a huge joke," was the remark made by one of the witnesses at the session of the royal commission this afternoon. Henri Delisle, uncle, Henri Delisle, said that several important witnesses had not been heard by the coroner's jury, and that the inquest had been adjourned to allow one of the jurors to attend at the horse races at Three Rivers.

At the morning session counsel for the attorney-general's department produced the death certificate of Henri Delisle.

Interest on this amounted to $140,000,000 more than the total debt had been some two years ago. The present government had not made all its tariff changes, said the premier, but reductions had been made and legitimate business was not impaired thereby.

Trade Conditions Brighter.
Trade conditions were looking more hopeful, Canada's exports were increasing month by month, and there was a better spirit with increased signs of prosperity. Canada had risen from twelfth to fourth place among importing exporting countries, and there was a better feeling abroad because of increased confidence in the government, he declared.

Dealing with the National Railway Board, Premier King said the government had been compelled to go outside Canada for a president. Had they taken a man from the Canadian Pacific Railway, someone would have cried "C. P. R. domination."

N. R. the charge of Mackenzie and Mann influence would have arisen, and had a Grand Trunk man been chosen there would have been jealousy among employees of the other sections of the system.

ASSERTS CANADA IS UNITED IN THOUGHT

Vice-President of Eddy Company Optimistic Regarding Nation's Future.

Hull, Dec. 1.—Anybody who is the least bit pessimistic about Canada's future should visit the Canadian West, according to J. T. Shirreff, vice-president of the E. B. Eddy Company, Limited, who has recently completed an extensive western tour, accompanied by John F. Taylor, secretary and sales manager.

In the opinion of Mr. Shirreff, there is not the slightest ground for the belief entertained by many that there exists a cleavage of thought or of interest between the eastern manufacturer and the people of the west. First-hand observation in every quarter of the prairie and coast provinces only served to prove that eastern problems and the problems of the west are essentially the same. Mr. Shirreff found everywhere in the west a spirit of optimism and an ever young ambition that augurs well for the future prosperity of the entire Dominion.

The trip was undertaken with the object of studying western conditions, with a view to developing still further the western business of the E. B. Eddy Company. Messrs. Shirreff and Taylor visited the Eddy agencies in every corner of the Great Lakes, and expressed themselves as very optimistic regarding fall and winter trade.

It is very interesting to note that despite so-called depression in some quarters, the Eddy plant is working at capacity, and capacity production at the Eddy plant is truly enormous. A daily output of 125,000,000 matches, 125 tons of paper, 100 tons of wrapping paper, besides fireware tubes, washing boards, butter tubs and various other products, keeps between 2,000 and 2,500 Canadian workmen busily employed.

With their own business steadily expanding and consequent upon their impressions of general trade conditions during their western tour, both Eddy officials are confident that a new era of prosperity is just ahead.

CANADIAN FARMERS WILL COMPETE AT CHICAGO SHOW

Grain Growers Backed by Government to Battle for Honors in Crop Division.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—Spurred by the official backing of the government, Canadian farmers will put up a determined contest for supreme honors in the crop divisions of the 23rd annual international live stock exposition, which opens at the stock yards here on Saturday morning.

After winning the wheat championship of the world at the 1919 and 1920 shows, on samples of hard red spring, exhibited by J. C. Mitchell of Dairland, Sask., the Canadians lost the honor, but this year will strive to regain it. The last two years the Dominion has held the oat championship, John W. Lucas of Alberta winning both times.

ROYALTY MAKES QUILTS FOR POOR IN LONDON

London, Nov. 30.—Princess Mary has made six remarks about her queenly mother's hats, but she has joined the Queen in making knitted quilts and jumpers, which were among the 43,000 garments donated to the sick and poor of London exhibited by Queen Mary's London Needlework Guild at the Imperial Institute.

The Queen's quilts were made with her own hands in triple-shell pattern of pink and white wool, finished with dainty rosettes and bows to match. The semi-silk linings show that Queen works the sewing machine or plies the needle as neatly as most of her feminine subjects. The princess uses a plain ribbed pattern for the jumpers with a puri and a plain design for the collars and cuffs.

RESUME DEBATE ON UNEMPLOYMENT

Laborite Declares Government Proposals For Relief Painfully Inadequate.

London, Dec. 3.—The debate in the House of Commons on the unemployment problem was resumed today.

Philip Snowden, the well-known Laborite, declared that the government's proposals for the relief of unemployment were painfully inadequate and did not promise work for more than 200,000 out of 1,400,000 of the unemployed. The Laborites, he said, would co-operate in any practical proposals, but the government must do more than had been proposed so far.

A plan for assisting in the solution of the unemployment situation, involving the emigration of 200,000 young men yearly to the dominions, was put forward during the debate on the address by Lieut.-Col. Henry Page Croft.

During the debate former Premier Asquith said that over the whole scene of the economic area of Europe there still loomed the spectres of reparations and indebtedness, and until they were finally laid to rest would be useless to hope for economic stability. He trusted and believed that the present government had a freer hand in the disposal of the "not troubled by the fetters of the Balfour note—the most unhappy diplomatic adventure which we have seen, even in the course of the last four years."

DRAG NOTED BANDIT FROM SICILIAN CAVE

Italian Police Track Famous Highway Robber to Seaside Cavern.

Rome, Nov. 20.—The Sicilian bandit is no invention of the story book, as the weary police who have just captured the notorious bandit, Andalo, can testify. Using the tactics of the Mafia and the Camorra, for six years Andalo ranged the island robbing, murdering and terrorizing the citizens to such an extent that they dared not budge from their houses when they knew he was in the province.

Andalo killed several police officials and private enemies, but his worst crime was the murder of nine members of a family with whom he had lived, where Andalo was brought to justice. He was captured by the police of Sicily, the police organized an elaborate hunt, tightening the circle around Andalo till he was traced to a cave near the sea.

He blocked the entrance, but the police used pickaxes to good effect. Then none dared enter the cavern while the police waited outside. He forced an associate of Andalo to enter, but her fear of the bandit was greater than her fear of the police, and she ran out of the cavern. The police then entered the cavern and captured Andalo. He was a man of about 35 years of age, of medium height, with dark hair and eyes, and a mustache. He was wearing a dark suit and a white shirt. He was captured by the police of Sicily, the police organized an elaborate hunt, tightening the circle around Andalo till he was traced to a cave near the sea.

DECLARES HIGHER SOCIAL LIFE PERIL

London, Nov. 30.—The modern girl who leads a life of unrestrained excitement, smokes cigarettes, drinks cocktails and whiskey is denounced as an unwholesome influence upon civilization by Dr. Agnes Savill, who has had twenty years' experience in hospital work in Glasgow and London. Lecturing before the Institute of Hygiene she severely criticized the higher social life as a destructive agency to the nation's health.

"The girl who commands the resources of parent wealth has a round of continual excitement which results in mental and physical deterioration," said Dr. Savill. "This girl dispenses with the chapter on, and even if she retains the old high standard of chastity her mind often becomes poisoned, her ideals recede and she accepts an inferior outlook upon life, and when she is married the standard of her relations to her husband, her home and her children is not a high one."

"I have seen these girls, after a few years in society, aged by ten years, and already before the age of 20 as worn out and tired as if they were 40. Although the physical consequences are disastrous, of even greater importance is the effect of this life upon character. Then, in view of the absence of repose and time for meditation, and unwholesome meals, it is no wonder these girls become a prey to disease. Society life encourages unwholesome habits and upsets the rhythm of the body."

Dr. Savill said it was largely the responsibility of the parents, who should "apply their minds to post-positive downfall of our modern civilization."

CULLODEN CHILD ILL WITH INFANTILE PARALYSIS

Special to The Advertiser.

Culloden, Dec. 1.—There is a very serious case of infantile paralysis at the home of Mrs. Jesse Wilson, who lives 1-2 miles west of the village of Culloden. Her little granddaughter, Jessie Mitchell, 13 years of age, has been ill about a week. The disease has now assumed a very severe form and there are grave fears as to her recovery.

There are no other cases reported in the community, and adequate precautions to prevent the spread of the disease have been made.

VESEL GROUND WHILE BATTLING HEAVY GALE

Detroit, Dec. 1.—The storms sweeping Lake Superior today and the severe weather approaching the lower lake region will find more than 150 vessels north of Detroit, 88 steamers having passed here upbound since Monday. Reports received to date tonight indicated a large number of vessels were in sheltered harbors awaiting more favorable weather.

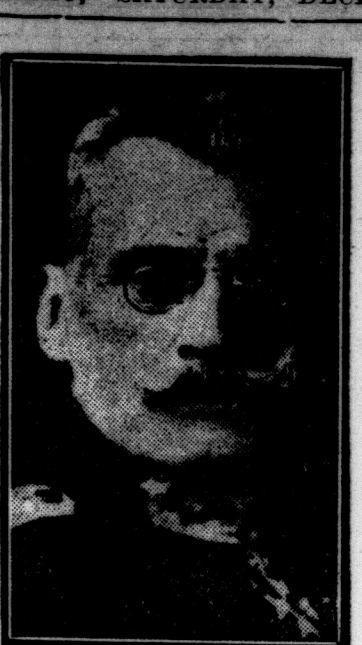

Only one vessel had been reported in difficulties south of the St. Mary's Canal. The steamer G. B. Leonard grounded in Mud Lake during the day, while battling the gale. She was coal laden. A wrecker and tug have gone to her assistance from Sault Ste. Marie.

Continued heavy coal movements have kept the unusually large number of vessels in service during the late shipping season.

CIGARETTES NO LONGER ITALY'S OFFICIAL GRAFT

Rome, Nov. 30.—The government's strenuous economy program lost some of its popularity with government officials when the minister of the treasury announced this week that free cigarettes would no longer be issued to all state authorities.

The government's munificence in this regard cost nearly 500,000 lire a year, as the Italians are almost as assiduous smokers as the Russians.

WINDSOR IS SCENE OF BITTER CONTEST

Majority Race One of Keenest Fights in City's History.

Special to The Advertiser.

Windsor, Dec. 1.—Windsor is in the midst of one of the hottest fights in its political history, with a bitter fight for the mayoralty, and an even more heated controversy over the question of filtration.

Ald. E. Blake Winter, an ex-mayor of the city, is seeking the mayoralty against Mayor Herbert W. Wilson. He is seeking a third term in the chair. Ald. Winter is basing his campaign mainly on opposition to what he claims are exorbitant expenditures on the part of the board of education, while Mayor Wilson is standing solidly on his past record.

The filtration question has to do with two proposed plans, one for the building of a filtration plant to serve the city of Windsor, and the other for the building of a joint plant to serve the border municipalities, by the Essex board of utilities commission. Ald. Winter advocates the rejection of both plans and the continuation of the present plan of chlorination, while Mayor Wilson is urging support for the Windsor plan.

PARIS SOCIETY WOMEN WEAR FASCISTI BIRETTA

Paris, Nov. 30.—Mussolini's advent to power in Italy is reflected in France by the appearance of a new fashion in women's headwear. Fascinated by the Fascisti biretta, the French women have decided to introduce it into society. The ordinary hat has been out for two years ago, failed, but the new model is expected to prove popular, especially as the leading milliners intend to decorate it with long ribbons hanging over the left ear.

As yet there has been no mention of wearing black shirts, either by men or women in France. The students of the Latin Quarter alone will rival the women in wearing the biretta, but there it is not decorated.

CATCH TOWN MARSHAL IN HOGSHEAD OF WINE

Berlin, Nov. 30.—A wine maker in the little town of Lorchfeld, in the heart of the Rhine region, where the wine harvest is at its height, heard a gurgling noise behind his house one night recently. Going out with a lantern he discovered the town marshal floundering about in a hogshead of new fine wine. The guardian of the village was pulled out just when he was nearly drowned. Later, when he was resuscitated, the marshal confessed that he had been sampling all the wines in the village, and that he was nearly drowned. Later, when he was resuscitated, the marshal confessed that he had been sampling all the wines in the village, and that he was nearly drowned. Later, when he was resuscitated, the marshal confessed that he had been sampling all the wines in the village, and that he was nearly drowned.

During the same night in Berlin a robber entered a confectionery store and after having filled his bags with loot tasted some delicious looking chocolates. He ate one after the other, each tasting better than the first. When the police arrived a few hours later the robber lay on the floor thoroughly intoxicated. The chocolates were a new connection containing brandy and other varieties of liquors. Candy dealers say they have been having endless calls for the brandy chocolates from American tourists leaving for their boats.

FEAR BOMB PLACED IN CELLAR OF DEAD MAN

Hamilton, Dec. 1.—Several months ago, while a relative of Dr. J. W. Gray, who was killed on the high seas last Saturday, was lying dead at his home, thieves broke into his cellar and stole some liquor. After the theft Dr. Gray took out burglary insurance for $5,000, and announced that he had placed a Mills bomb in one of the cases in his cellar. The bomb, he said, was guaranteed to explode within five seconds of the time the box was opened. Whether he actually carried out this threat is not known, but his friends are afraid to touch his cellar for fear that a bomb was placed.

A returned soldier, who claims to be an expert on Mills bombs, has volunteered to examine the cases. The result of his examination is being watched with interest.

TO PRESENT PLAN OF RURAL CREDIT

President Harding Will Give Annual Message To Congress Tuesday.

Special to The Advertiser.

Washington, Dec. 1.—President Harding, in his annual message to Congress next Tuesday, will present a comprehensive plan of rural credit and financing legislation, worked out by Republican senators and the agricultural department. Mr. Harding approved of the legislation in principle at a conference at the White House Thanksgiving Day attended by a dozen senators. The plan is the work of a Senate group headed by Senator Watson, Indiana, who has lately become active in demanding that the administration meet more fully the needs of agriculture as outlined in an official White House statement. The legislation to be suggested will cover these points:

1.—Provisions for increasing the maximum loan limits of federal farm loan banks from $10,000 to $25,000.

2.—Provision for the revolutionary creation of livestock and agricultural associations, primarily to deal with loans on livestock.

3.—Amendment of the federal farm act to provide for the rediscout of agricultural production and marketing paper, and to add two members to the program, "with a means of discount on longer time notes than are eligible to discount by federal reserve banks."

"Credits to the maximum of three years are to be provided where the turnover covers that period."

When the blood becomes impure it is only natural that pimples, blotches, boils or some other blood trouble will manifest itself by breaking out of the system.

THE REAL HENRY FORD Does Not Like Beggars, But He Finds Them Employment

Detroit Commissioner of Police Declares Plan of Motor

Young Meadow Larks Delay Threshing on the Ford Farm

By OLD DETROITER.

Behind the former Ford tractor plant at Dearborn are acres spread with farm equipment, mostly wagons and trailers. Several great sheds are filled, row on row, with farming implements and machinery—mowers, tractors, binders, cultivators, threshing machines. When, in summer time, this aggregation moves to the fields, it has the appearance of an army in motion.

On a Saturday afternoon last July, Mr. Ford and his farm superintendent made a tour of the Ford lands under cultivation. The wheat appeared ready to cut.

"Better get into those fields next week," said Mr. Ford. "Bright and early Monday morning the agricultural men were ready to move. Out of the sheds came tractors, binders, wagons, two or three threshing machines and threshing machines in seemingly endless procession. But just before the harvest began, the weather turned, and the wire-wheeled Ford coupe which all about Dearborn is known as 'the chief,' stepped out of the clouds, head-on, as usual.

"Better hold up awhile," he said to the farm superintendent. "The crop's just right—the weather may not hold good. We're all ready to shoot," said the superintendent.

"Yes—I know, I know," was the chief's only comment. "But I was over in there for a week. I found a lot of meadow larks over in there. They've got a lot of young ones—they're still in the nests—can't fly yet. Better wait a week—guess the wheat won't spoil—and by that time the young larks will be able to fly away and not get hurt."

So the army of the fields was disbanded to do other work for a week to give Mr. and Mrs. Lark's fledglings time to learn to fly.

fare Department.

CHAPTER X.

Henry Ford, Dives, Lazarus and Others.

Henry Ford is a rich man, but he is not a Dives. Dives went to his office every morning, saw Lazarus lying at his gate as he passed on and did nothing about it. He accepted the beggar as a necessary evil, the outgrowth of a disease in the industrial order for which there was no cure.

It will be recalled that the rich man died and that the beggar died also, and then the tables were turned. It seems that in the hereafter we live on the things we have laid up on the inside of us, not on the things we have piled up outside. This being the case, Dives found himself in bad shape. Spiritually he was in destitute circumstances, and the beggar was rich. The tables, as I have said, were turned, and Dives found himself begging favors of a man who himself had been a beggar.

I am not going to preach a sermon. I have called to mind the parable of the rich man and Lazarus because it will help me to illustrate some things I want to say regarding Henry Ford in his handling of the 'meadow larks' in whom in the past he has shown great interest.

Lazarus would not live unnoticed any longer at the gate of Henry Ford. He would not be accepted as a fixed part of the landscape and be permitted to remain there. Something would be done to put him on his feet, something more than giving him a crumb and a coin.

Henry Ford does not believe in beggars; he does not believe in the social and economic order that creates them; does not believe in the sentimental charity that encourages beggars to remain in the business of begging.

Work, Not Charity.

To the hagar at his gate Henry Ford would say, "Millions for work, but not a cent for charity. You go to the employment office, tell them that I sent you there, and that they are to give you a job. Then go to the doctor's office and have him fix you up. If you would prefer work to begging, you are going to have your chance. What follows will be up to you."

And so, unless the beggar was one of the professional sort and belonged to the ancient and dishonorable order of voluntary mendicants, he would be given a job—a light job—till he got on his feet, and then he might be transferred to the foundry just to see if he really meant business, really preferred honest work to begging.

If he should develop a yellow streak, that is, ask for a clerical job in the main office, or for a light sitting-down job in the museum department, he would be back on the street collecting pennies in a tin cup in no time at all. But if he showed that he had the right kind of stuff in him he would be living in a home of his own in a few years and paying an income tax along with the rest of us. If a man is paid six dollars a day in the Ford factory he is expected to earn it, and conveyors turned up to a six dollar speed leave him to the will of the operator. It's a great system, but needs careful supervision by human beings.

When the beggar at the gate of Henry Ford is picked up and given a job, his past history is carefully looked into—or there would have been when it would have been. It might be so now. I can not say as to that. There was a time, however, when the beggar hired into the Ford Motor Company, if he had a wife and six children in Chicago whom he had deserted long ago, and toward whose support he had contributed little or nothing in recent years, would have been told to bring his family to Detroit on the next train, or lose his job. Mr. Ford believes the reconstruction of a man is not complete so long as he neglects his home. Money would have been advanced to defray the expense of bringing the family to Detroit and later taken in easy payments from the man's wages. He would have been given assistance in finding a house in which to make a home for his wife and children. He would have been encouraged to start a bank account. In case he proved a little careless in the handling of his money, his wife would have been turned over to his wife. If the two had showed a tendency toward extravagance, the profits of him who had been a beggar would have been withheld until the lesson of thrift had been learned. If he were taken ill, a job would have been given his wife, or a son or daughter, at six dollars a day until such time as he was able to return to work.

Care for His Welfare.

If it were found necessary to send him to a hospital the cost of his care there would have been guaranteed by the company.

If by chance he received an injury while at work he would have received compensation as required by law, in addition to that a weekly allowance equal at least to half of his wages.

If at any time he showed signs of slipping back into former ways and habits, if he were found to be living in an undesirable neighborhood, he would have been helped to find a house in a better quarter.

If he filled up his house with roomers or boarders, he would have been warned to get rid of them forthwith. His home must be a home. His wife and children must be given a fair chance.

So Henry Ford would have treated Lazarus.

Henry Ford has his faults, but they are not those of Dives. And I cannot think of him as going finally where Dives is. Neither can I quite picture him with Lazarus on the bosom of Abraham in view of what he has recently been saying about Abraham's descendants. It seems to me the situation would be mutually embarrassing. I think St. Peter will pass Mr. Ford at the gate, but following that I fear that he and Abraham will have to iron out some personal misunderstandings.

The principles underlying the Ford way of dealing with his employees following the establishment of the profit-sharing plan were as sound economically as they were humane. Mr. John R. Lee, through the sociological department, worked out a plan whereby a close, friendly, man-to-man contact was made between the company and its employees. But the advisory system, as he established it, no longer exists. It was criticized as paternalistic. It was not that. It was friendly, fraternal, but not paternal.

There were employees who objected to it as subjecting them to humiliating experiences. They said that it interfered with their personal liberty and independence. So far as my experience went, I found such complaints came from men whose individual liberties had been interfered with, but they were such liberties as getting drunk and beating up one's family, and wasting one's money.

Community a Gainer.

There were certain men in the city of Detroit, not connected with the Ford Motor Company, who were in a position to judge of the value of this work to Ford employees and to the community as a whole. A judge of the recorder's court wrote in regard to the work done by the company for its men:

"In my opinion the community has been a considerable gainer, in that a large number of its citizens have been benefited financially; their standards of living have been raised, and the physical condition of the workers and their families has been improved thereby. I believe their moral condition has also been elevated as a result of the above and also from the necessity for the employees to conduct themselves in a proper manner in order to retain their much prized situations."

"Formerly it was no uncommon occurrence to hear participants in brawls and other offenses testify that they were employees of the Ford Motor Company. Of late it is my impression that I have heard this much less frequently."

From another judge came this:

"I have noticed with sincere pleasure the progress and success of your co-operative plan. Particularly have I been impressed with the system of supervision and investigation which you have established for the purpose of making certain that only the worthy shall participate in the Ford Motor Company. The quality of this service, due in large measure to the painstaking and efficient corps of investigators that you have gathered together, is an object lesson in rational industrial development."

"There would be little social unrest, little industrial discontent, if every employer approached the problem of his relation to his employees, not only with your spirit of fairness and consideration, but also with your system of rational supervision and direction."

The commissioner of police declared that the work done by the company had "decreased in number the cases against your employees," and that the work done by the company had "improved the housing conditions in this community, resulting in many thousands of men becoming better and more dependable citizens."

Henry Ford, Detroit's famous billionaire, in his hothouse.

The spirit of co-operation and service was contagious. The doors of executives were open in those days to the humblest of employees who chanced to be in trouble. The desire to help the other fellow spread through the whole organization.

The following story told by a man, who was not in the employ of the company, will serve to illustrate what I know was the effect of the spirit of the company upon its employees in hundreds of instances:

"Beside me in a street car," so the story runs, "there sat a man past 50 years of age. He was a foreman, and by the badge he wore I knew he was a Ford employee. A woman entered the car with two small children. Both children were poorly clad. Their stockings were full of holes, their shoes worn. The mother took the smallest of the children on her lap and by so doing exposed two large holes in the knees of the child's stockings. She made attempts to cover these holes, but the little dress was too short to conceal them. Each time the mother tried to hide the holes the other man next to me shifted restlessly in his seat. Presently the woman got off the car and the old man followed her. My curiosity was aroused and I also followed. At the curb he spoke to her. I could not hear what he said, but from gesture made toward the little ones I gathered that he was interested in them. After talking with the woman for a few minutes he accompanied her to a nearby store. I followed and stood at a distance so that they would not know they were being observed. Stockings, shoes and rubbers were purchased. Also some underwear and a coat for the smaller child. He left the store with the woman, doffed his cap to her at the door and said 'Good-bye.' The woman stood dazed, apparently unable to express her gratitude she felt. I followed the man and spoke to him.

"That your daughter?" I asked.

"Who?" he said.

"The woman with the babies."

"No, I don't know her. But did you see dem poor kids? I got myself four children, and was poor like that. Now I work at Ford's and make good living. When I see dem poor kids it make me think of mine, and I help 'em a little bit."

"What was the woman's name?"

"I don't know."

"Where does she live?"

"I no ask her."

"What is your name?"

"He looked at me sharply and said: 'You one of dem newspapermen. You write it in de paper. My wife find out, and I catch hell. She no believe me and get jealous. I no give my name.'

"I endeavored to convince him that he was mistaken. He was no use. He hurried away, looking back occasionally to see if I were following him."

There was something in the spirit of those days that called out of men the finest and best in them. One caught a glimpse of a new era in industry. And perhaps the dawn is there—behind the clouds.

Defeat of Andy Gump Causes Slump in Pocketbooks of City Enthusiasts

"The greatest men of yesteryears. The ones beloved and trusted. Were those who covered up their fears, and smiled when all was busted."

—Hank.

Andy Gump has been gyped out of his chance to show the people of this and all other worlds how a real congressman should perform for the benefit of mankind; however, he is not discouraged but rather determined to come back strong in the next election and rout the capricious cohorts of Sylvester Skink by throwing the w. k. monkey-wrench into their political machinery. Andy says he may be down and out now, but when his shoes wear through he will be on his feet again.

Of course Min and Chester are down-hearted to a certain degree, but their faith in Andy remains unshaken and they still continue to consider him the greatest man that ever trod the boards of this life's stage—a man in comparison with whom Napoleon, Charlemagne and all the rest of the oldtime butlers were only preliminary kids.

Andy is a fatalist and he says that "if he does not go to congress now that he will reach that goal eventually." This is one of the most "floury" phrases he has uttered in some time, and a favorable indication of his self-confidence and high hopes for the future.

It is rumored that the defeat of Gump may cause a financial depression in Wall Street, but it certainly has caused a depression in the hearts and pocketbooks of local youths who have been putting up money on the success of Andy Gump.

Help Burned Ontario Over the Winter

MEN and women of Ontario—it is time that we should all realize the terrible completeness of the fire calamity that devastated Northern Ontario in the early days of October. Fires and calamities we have had before, but never such complete destruction as this.

Over 1,200 square miles laid desolate, town after town nothing but a bleak expanse of ruins, hundreds of farms swept bare, thousands of your fellow citizens "cleaned out" and thrown abruptly back into man's primeval struggle against nature and her grim forces: fire, hunger, ice and the stark northern cold.

Give 1,800 families a fighting chance to get on their feet.
Temporary relief must go on. We must not fail the North.

Winter—the relentless foe

Coming as this terrible fire did, in the autumn, with the harvests in, with the townspeople already preparing for the rigors of winter—the complete destruction wrought is the harder to overcome.

Thousands of people at first had literally no place to lay their head, little to wear and nothing to eat. They had to be taken care of at first, somehow, and then, desperately as the days went by, and the cold grew more intense, rough but serviceable standard shacks, 16' x 20', have been replacing tents, old street cars, packing boxes and sheet iron—a regular food supply has been established, and rough clothing is being distributed.

What can a man do with his house a blackened hole in the ground, his barn a charred heap, his work shop a twisted pile of rubbish—and a northern blizzard raging over all?

To give immediate relief the Committee must secure actual cash without delay. If each municipality or county would devise some means of raising an amount equal to one half mill on the total assessment the relief can be continued. The raising of relief funds could be undertaken by public spirited citizens, clubs, churches or councils and provides a most deserving cause for Christmas giving. Now it is up to every community in Ontario to help a neighbouring district in its hour of trial. Make cheques payable to—

NEW SYSTEM OF FAT REDUCTION

Here's a new way for all fat people to laugh together at that old bugaboo—Obesity. The saying that "there is nothing new under the sun" does not now apply to fat people any more. Here is something new for them—a new sensation, a new pleasure, a new graceful figure, easily found by anyone who is passing beyond the limits of slimness. Everyone has heard of the Marmola Prescription; that harmless combination of fat-defying elements perfected by one of the greatest physicians. Now, from the same high authority, there comes another idea—the idea of condensing these same pure, harmless ingredients into a pleasant little tablet. Taken after eating and at bedtime, they help the stomach to dispose of all the fatty foods, convert them into compact, solid flesh, muscle and energy, without dieting or exercise. Marmola Prescription Tablets regulate the entire system—do for you what bodily exertion and self-denial can not do, and the fat, once reduced, is gone for good. You can prove all this at a trifling cost. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists or sent postpaid by the Marmola Company, 412 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich. A case—sufficient to bring results—is but one dollar.—Advt.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Drink Lots of Water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the kidney uric acid and stimulates the entire urinary tract. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 600 grains of acid and waste, so we can regard it as keeping the blood clean.
Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in the morning water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to cleanse and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus often ending bladder weakness.
Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

The Remedy of 100 Uses

Many London Families Have Already Adopted Vicks.

Vicks is good for common cold, sore throat, bronchitis, catarrh, croup, sinusitis, grip and all inflammations of the nose, throat or lungs. The ingredients—Camphor, Menthol, Eucalyptus, Turpentine, Thyme and Juniper Tar, make Vicks equally effective for inflammation of the skin, such as cuts, burns, sores, bruises and skin itching.
Mr. C. Phoenix of 755 Grey street, London, Ont., writes: "I am very pleased to recommend Vicks Vapo-Rub. I am a hunter, trader and trapper, also a fisherman. I use Vicks Vapo-Rub in place of liniments, because it is very handy to carry and gives such quick relief for small animal and insect bites, and for chapped hands and lips. My boots would blister my feet, and I rub it on them, and it made them just right. When I go trapping next fall I will have plenty of Vicks Vapo-Rub in my kit. I call it the 'Trapper's Friend.' I have not had a cold all winter, and I go out all the time, and sometimes stay out all night with my traps."
Thus Vicks is a valuable family remedy, kept on hand in millions of homes and used constantly for all the daily hurts and ills of all the family. 50c a jar at all drug stores.—Adv.

ADOPTS SYSTEM OF RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION

St. Thomas Board of Education Indorses Bible Lessons For Schools.

HOMES NEGLECT TRAINING

Special to The Advertiser.
St. Thomas, Dec. 1.—During the most recent discussion of the question of religious education in the schools in the United States, and other places in Canada, the fact that St. Thomas has a good graded system of religious education in its public schools, of which many of its citizens are unaware, has been announced by Trustee Mrs. J. McCulley.

Although there has been no regulation against the teaching of religious matters in the schools, some have done very little and this year a system for religious instruction was introduced. The question was brought up by Mrs. McCulley and had the support of the majority of the other members of the board of education and the enthusiastic backing of Inspector Taylor. As a result, this year, a graded system of religious lessons which had been worked out previously by the London Board of Education, and found to be very satisfactory, was adopted here.

The training consists in a certain period of time in school to be devoted to reading the Bible and memory work from the Bible, and that it is not waste time is testified by a clergyman of the city, who states that he has noticed a marked improvement in the clearness of answers to questions in his Sunday school.
This work should not have to be done in the schools. It is the privilege and the duty of parents to see that their children are instructed in matters so vital to their physical and welfare, but it is a well-known fact that in many homes, such things are never mentioned, and some of these school children have even stated that they never saw a Bible in their homes and don't think there is one. The Sunday schools cannot do everything, the time spent in Sunday schools in a year amounting to hardly five school days. It is therefore left to the schools to see that all the children are given a fair chance to learn the great things of the spiritual world as well as being instructed in the care of the mind and body.

MAY BECOME HEAD OF KENT REGIMENT

Major P. K. Marley Unofficially Reported As Successor of Lt.-Col. Smith.

Special to The Advertiser.
Chatham, Dec. 1.—Unofficial reports current in the city are to the effect that Major P. K. Marley is to succeed Lieut.-Colonel Neil Smith as officer commanding the Kent Regiment.
Major P. K. Marley joined the Kent Regiment many years ago and has worked his way up through the ranks, having every position except that of regimental sergeant-major. During the late war he commanded a company in the 16th Infantry battalion, which was formed by the Kent Regiment, and saw service in France for some time. He is very popular with the returned men in the city.

Lieut.-Colonel Neil Smith also worked his way up from the ranks. He commanded the 16th battalion overseas, being transferred later on to the Canadian army dental services. He has been in command of the regiment since his return from overseas.
John H. Oldershaw, 78 Raleigh street, died suddenly last evening following a brief illness at his home. He was born in this city 73 years ago and has lived here all his life.
He conducted a builders' supply business on Thames street in North Chatham for many years and was well known among the contractors of Western Ontario. He is survived by his wife, one daughter, Miss Lorene, at home, one son, Barville Oldershaw of this city, and five sisters, Mrs. Andrew Smart of Detroit, Mrs. William Rutley of Toronto, Mrs. James Paxton of Dover, Mrs. Samuel Smyth of Harwich, and Miss Eliza Oldershaw of this city.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at half past two o'clock from the residence of the family at Maple Leaf Cemetery, where interment will take place.
The city police are investigating the source of supply of cartridges, which were in the hands of the boy whose rifle accidentally shot William Murdoch, the son of Alderman Murdoch, on Wednesday evening last. The boy, with his parents, was required to appear at the city police station this morning, and after a consultation with the chief of police, it was decided that the shooting was purely accidental.
President Schoen and other officials of the Peninsular Sugar Co. are meeting with a special committee of sugar beet growers in the city today for the purpose of preparing a sugar beet contract that will be suitable to growers and company alike. The conference lasted a greater part of today, but nothing was given out for publication. In an interview President Schoen stated that the results of the conference would be given out in a few days' time.

HOLD SPECIAL SERVICES AT FIRST METHODIST

The services in First Methodist Church on Sunday next will be special. In the morning Rev. A. Lloyd Smith, M.A., of Toronto will speak on "The Church and Her Missionary Opportunity."
In connection with the evening service, the pastor, Rev. J. F. Reynolds, will speak on "The Place of the Prophet in Israel" and the choir will render the second part of Mendelssohn's "Elijah." The first part of this great oratorio was given a month ago and was found to be a wonderful interpretation of the Bible story of the prophet. The second part on Sunday evening should form a real musical contribution to the evening hour of worship.

ANNIE MACSWINEY ON HUNGER STRIKE OUTSIDE JAIL.

The two sisters of the late Terence MacSwiney were both on hunger strike at the same time. Mary inside Mountjoy prison, Dublin, and Annie at the jail gates. Mary was released the other day, and Annie was then removed to hospital. The photograph shows Annie, with blanket over her knees, during the first week of her strike. At the right is Mrs. Despard, a sister of Earl French. Note the picture of the madonna on the prison gate.

WILL HEAR BISHOP FROM PALESTINE

Bishop of Jerusalem to Speak at St. Paul's Cathedral Sunday Morning.

As part of a tour of the American continent, in aid of the Church of England Medical Mission at Hifa, Palestine, Right Rev. McInnes, bishop of Jerusalem, will be in London Sunday morning, preaching in St. Paul's Cathedral.
Previous to the war, the Church of England in Canada was a large supporter of the St. Helena's Medical Mission in Jerusalem, later moved to Hifa, and enormously important in its work there, which covers a large area.

Funds are still necessary for this enterprise, which has become a vital necessity in the work of the church among all classes of natives and foreigners in Palestine. To voice an appeal for funds, and to give some idea of the tremendous work which continually awaits the medical mission, is the bishop's mission on this continent.

VOLCANO ACTIVE. Heart Palpitated And Was Short of Breath

Through one cause or another a large majority of people are troubled, more or less, with some form of heart trouble.

Many people may be unaware of having anything wrong with their heart till some little excitement, overwork or worry starts it to palpitate and throb, skip beats, beat fast for a time and then so slow as to seem almost to stop, then it causes great anxiety and alarm.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief. Mrs. Alice Bishop, 15 Hawthorne Ave., Hamilton, Ont., writes: "I take pleasure in recommending Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills to all persons troubled as I had been. I suffered from palpitation of the heart and shortness of breath; my heart would skip beats, and in the night, at times, I would have to sit up to get my breath. I could not go up stairs without my heart fluttering, and my nerves were all unstrung, but since using your famous Pills I have felt like a different person."

Mysterious Cynthia Grey to Appear in Press Club Drama, "Thirty Days"

Cynthia Grey, Mail-Box conductor for The London Advertiser, who has given good advice to Londoners on many subjects, has always been surrounded by an air of mystery. Few of her correspondents have ever seen her. At last she has consented to appear in public. For those who want the answer to the question: "Who is Cynthia Grey?" it will be necessary to attend the Majestic Theatre on Friday or Saturday, Dec. 15 and 16. On those days—twice on Saturday—she will take part in "Thirty Days," the greatest success of the theatrical season, which is being staged by the London Press Club Players.
"Thirty Days" is by no means an amateur production. In the cast are a number of ex-actors who have faced a deluge of eggs in all sections of the nine provinces, and in many parts of the country to the south.

ORACLE CLUB FOR ADOLESCENT ACT

Debate Brings Out Interesting Points, Leading to Favorable Attitude.

The adolescent act, providing for the compulsory school attendance of persons up to 18 years, with certain exceptions, will, when it is put into complete effect, be of great benefit to Ontario, according to opinion expressed at the Oracle Club Thursday evening.

The discussion took the form of a debate with E. Reichtzler and Fred Hunt supporting the act and Hamilton Bingle and Major Albert Murphy opposing it. The resolution read: "Resolved that the adolescent act is detrimental to the best interests of the province."
The speakers for the measure emphasized the necessity for every child having an equal chance to attain the great things of life. The conditions of the adolescent act are not so much a restriction as they are a measure merely indicates that there still exist many persons of reactionary and unprogressive tendencies. Such individuals are responsible for the type of conservatism that deteriorates Canada.

The advantages of the measure have been too many as compared with the opportunities available to those possessed of undesirable hereditary and acquired characteristics. It is a common but untruthful fallacy that men are born equal. It is because they are not born equal that legislators should do their utmost to provide for the children of the poor equal chances for education. Learning is the vehicle on which all great countries and great men have achieved progress and happiness. Even the farm laborer should be intensively educated in his special form of work.

"Any man who selfishly opposes the measure because he is afraid of too much competition in the more or less cultured lines which he expects his children to follow is not worthy of citizenship," speakers for the negatives claimed. Why should the progeny of the fortunate procure an educational advantage over the poverty-stricken. Such a policy is not consistent with either progress or justice. Already marked benefits have been felt by the adolescent act as it is enforced today. Illiterates are becoming relics of the past.
Mr. Bingle, speaking against the bill, claimed that it reaped hardship to thousands of parents dependent on their children for support. The big men of the age were not the highly university educated, but those who, through exercise of energy and will, had educated themselves. These sudden changes bring on colds, cramps and colic, and unless baby's little stomach is kept right the result may be serious. The toast to "The Elitists" was proposed by R. H. Watson, and answered by R. B. Shaw-Wood.

The Fall Weather Hard On Little Ones

Canadian fall weather is extremely hard on little ones. One day is warm and bright, and the next wet and cold. These sudden changes bring on colds, cramps and colic, and unless baby's little stomach is kept right the result may be serious. The toast to "The Elitists" was proposed by R. H. Watson, and answered by R. B. Shaw-Wood.

FATHER DONNELLY WILL VISIT LONDON

Gifted Speaker Will Conduct Special Services At St. Peter's Cathedral.

The special exercises of the season of advent at St. Peter's Cathedral will be conducted this year by an exceptionally gifted preacher, the Rev. Father P. B. Donnelly of the Oblates of Mary Immaculate. Before coming to Canada some years ago, Father Donnelly gave missions and retreats in the larger cities of England and in Ireland. In recent years he has traveled constantly through Canada and the United States doing similar work.

While here Father Donnelly will conduct two tridiums or spiritual exercises of three days, will deliver a special series of Sunday evening sermons, and will preach at all the masses on the Sundays of December. Next Sunday morning at 7:30 and 10:30 o'clock masses the sermon subject will be "Spiritual Blindness." On the following Sundays the sermons will treat of "Dangerous Reading and Morals," "Dangerous Reading and Morals," and "The Spirit of Christianity."

The Sunday evening sermons will deal with doctrinal subjects pertaining to fundamental religion, faith and the church. The following order will be observed: December 3, "Religion Its Use," December 10, "The Basis of Belief—Church or Bible?" December 17, "Where is the Church?" December 24, "The Great Obstacle to Belief." The Sunday evening devotions will begin at 7 o'clock.

The tridium for ladies will be opened on Wednesday evening, December 6, with devotions and sermon at 7:30. Appropriate sermons will be delivered on Thursday and Friday evenings, and the tridium will close at the 8:30 mass on Sunday morning, when all taking part will receive holy communion. The tridium for men will begin on Wednesday, December 13, and will follow a similar order. The members of the St. Peter's Holy Name Society will observe the third Sunday of December as Communion Sunday instead of the second Sunday.

The season of advent, preceding as it does the Christmas feast of the nativity of our Divine Savior is observed as a time of spiritual preparation and is symbolic of the age which preceded the actual coming of our Redeemer, during which the people were prepared for the coming of the expected Messiah by the patriarchs and prophets.

BOOK WILL BE SENT TO PRINCESS MARY

War Memorial Hospital Committee Holds Regular Monthly Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the War Memorial Hospital committee was held Friday afternoon at the King Street Y. W. C. A. Mrs. H. J. Sutherland was appointed as a member of the men's building committee, of which C. R. Somerville is acting as chairman in the absence of Col. W. M. Gartsshore. Mrs. Sutherland, in presenting the report of the Hugh Niven Chapter, I. O. D. E., which is in charge of the sewing for the hospital, stated that the total disbursements since Sept. 25 amounted to $250.31, and that 473 articles had been cut, and 749 finished garments had been sent in. She urged all those who have garments unfinished to complete them and send them in as soon as possible.

The treasurer's report, presented by the convenor, Mrs. Arthur Smith, in the absence of Mrs. J. Campbell, showed a balance of $4,970.61. A dainty book, in which the names of all those who contributed to the Princess Mary sewing fund, has been inscribed by Miss Marian Geary, is being sent to Princess Mary from the hospital committee.
Mrs. E. H. Nelles, acting as secretary, announced that the Campbell Becher Chapter, I. O. D. E., is arranging to have Christmas tea for the patients of the hospital on Christmas afternoon. If the children have not been moved into the hospital by that day arrangements have been made that they will be taken there for this happy affair.

CITY BOYS' CLUBS ADVOCATE DUTCH TREAT QUESTION

Etismars and Comets End Interesting Discussion in a Draw.

Interest is again becoming keen in the city club district and leading by the organization work already under way this form of indoor pastime is due for another bumper season this winter. The St. Paul's, Etismars and the St. James' Comets fought to a draw in an informal debate conducted in the Etismars Club on the subject, "Resolved, that we should have the Dutch treat."

The Comets were the guests of the Etismars Thursday night, and a variety program of "songs" and entertainment featured the evening. After a toast to "The King" had been proposed all joined in a sing-song led by J. B. Beattie. A solo by Ronnie Hart was exceptionally well received, and he was forced to reply to many encores before his hearers were satisfied. Mr. Hart is considered one of the best among the younger singers in the city, and his solos are always in demand at club functions.

The toast to "The Comets" was proposed by F. McHardy-Smith, and answered by R. Hunt, while the one to "The Etismars" was proposed by J. B. Beattie, and answered by R. B. Shaw-Wood.

The supper committee consisted of N. Wilson, C. T. Sears and D. H. Finlayson.

Buying the Street Railway.

Reference was made at one of the ward meetings to the attitude of The Advertiser on the purchase of the London street railway. In order that there be no doubt in regard to the matter, The Advertiser repeats that it considers the purchase of the railway the best solution for the transportation problem in this city.

Coupled with that statement is another of equal importance, viz., that if at all possible the deal be closed up without ever reaching the stage of arbitration. As The Advertiser previously pointed out, the litigation in Toronto, where the road was taken over, subject to arbitration, has been going on week after week, and the expense has been stepping right along, showing no tendency to lag behind.

London has a chance to benefit by the costly experience of Toronto, and the London Street Railway Company has the same opportunity. The Toronto Star sums up what arbitration has meant in that city:

"The Toronto Railway Company's experts value the system at $25,000,000, and those of the city at $5,000,000. It is thought that the gulf between the parties is too wide to admit of any agreement. The arbitration was begun a year ago, and actually sat 153 days.

"During that time 5,000,000 words in evidence were taken by the stenographers. There are 17,000 pages altogether. Forty-nine witnesses were examined and 760 exhibits, including everything from documents to bricks and pieces of rail were introduced.

"These will all have to be kept in safe keeping in the event of an appeal. The arbitration, it is estimated, cost in the neighborhood of $2,000,000. The cost per day, having regard to the leading principals, was $4,000 a day, but outside of these were great staffs engaged by both sides.

"The three members of the board each received $250 a day, a total for the time spent of $39,500, but added to this will be the remuneration for time spent in preparing the award. The city had four counsel and the street railway eight, and the counsel fees ran from over $400 a day in one case down to $250 a day for counsel, not drawing salary from the city."

The disastrous feature is that the end is not yet in Toronto. So far they have managed to spend about $2,000,000 to find out what the city shall pay for the road. This vast sum has not put down one new steel rail or added a foot of overhead wire.

This is exactly the situation The Advertiser wants to see the city and the street railway company avoid in London, and it is as much to the advantage of the company, as it is to the city to keep clear of arbitration entanglements. The street railway in London is not making money now; it has not paid dividends for some years. It should be the first duty of the city to the ratepayers and the company to its shareholders to get together and if possible arrive at a price to be paid for the property, whereby the company would hand over its rights at once.

The statement is still made, and apparently in good faith by some, that the franchise of the road will run out in March of 1925. The franchise of the company does not run out in 1925, but the city has its first opportunity to take it over then. If the city does not exercise this right, the franchise remains in the hands of the company.

By owning the street railway the city of London keeps an outside party off its streets. It can plan and execute its road and paving work, knowing that all is under the one direction.

It is a reasonable business proposition, and the voters should look upon it in that light. It is not a fight on the theory of public vs. private ownership. The city has its first chance to take over a system that has not been satisfactory, and The Advertiser believes it can be righted best by the people themselves.

Politics in Ontario. The charge is often leveled at J. J. Morrison that he is seeking to develop a class consciousness among the farmers of Ontario. There is something in that phrase that many people do not like, because it smacks too much of isolation, and the creation of an atmosphere that repels others who might want to walk over some day, and see what is going on in the "class conscious" camp.

On the other hand, there are ways in which it is desirable that the farmers of Ontario should have a class feeling, if that feeling can be coupled with the idea of pride in their vocation.

If it is brought to pass that farmers of Ontario get their business to the state where they feel they have arrived some place, then who is going to blame them if they develop some class consciousness?

Ontario can well stand quite a lot of consciousness that finds expression in the statement: "I am a farmer and have no apologies to make for it."

The real question comes here: Should this class consciousness be carried into political life with the sole aim of arriving at a place where farmers, as a group, would hold simply a balance of power in the Legislature, without assuming the duties and responsibilities of administration? There are two groups at present, one of which, headed by Mr. Drury, is prepared to go ahead and take over office, and with it the full responsibility for administering the affairs of government. The other, headed by J. J. Morrison, would rather have a solid "farmer bloc" in the Legislature, holding a balance of power. The latter is a very desirable position, no doubt, but it has the outstanding fault of refusing to go the whole distance in matters of governmental responsibility. It was the idea of Parnell in the British House. If it works it brings greater results to the balance of power party than to any other section of the country. It is possible for the balance of power group to secure concessions that give it the full without throwing in the streaks of lean that in good business go with every purchase.

It is not the best way in which to make progress, because the party holding the balance does not have to take blame for the misdeeds—if there are any—of the dominant party that feeds it.

Mr. Drury, on the other hand, is willing to go the distance of taking power, and with it responsibility, and prefers to have the assistance of men and women who think along lines similar to his party.

The fact that government shall be carried on for the people is greater than the name under which the people secure that government.

There are very many points in the policy of Mr. Drury that are Liberal in thought and execution, and it is for that reason it seems reasonable to suppose that sooner or later there will be some understanding, or some common ground on which Liberals and Progressives can meet in Ontario.

Speaking Two Languages. Dr. James L. Hughes was asked by the Unity League of Ontario to go to Ottawa and report on the way in which English is being taught in the English-French separate schools there.

The Unity League has as its object "The promotion of good-will, better understanding and more cordial co-operation between the French and English-speaking people of Canada." The officers are quite representative of Protestant and Roman Catholic opinion, including men who are on the faculty of such schools as Queen's, Victoria, Toronto University and McMaster.

Mr. Hughes made the trip, spent several days in Ottawa, personally examined the work being done, and has issued his report. He went to the schools, heard the French-born pupils, raised in surroundings where only French had been spoken, read English "as fluently and as expressively as children do in the English-speaking districts of Ontario." He tried them, not only with their own text-books, with which usage would make them familiar, but with extracts that had never been before, but the result was just as good one way as the other. They are able to write the language as well as speak it.

Carrying his tests still farther, Mr. Hughes went to the largest school in Ottawa, where girls from these schools are employed, and of necessity must speak both English and French. The same is true of the telephone exchange. In both places his inquiries and his personal observation convinced Mr. Hughes that the English language had been thoroughly taught and mastered.

So here we have, from these French separate schools in Ottawa, and in other districts, children going out into the business world equipped with a perfect knowledge of both French and English. They are going to be just as capable in the English-speaking province of Ontario, as in the French-speaking province of Quebec, or in sections of either where both languages are used. They have secured in this way a better mental equipment than many of the children leaving the public or separate schools of Ontario.

A Gift Worth Having. A woman magistrate in Toronto got rather hot up at some of the lawyers a few days ago and referred to them as "lawyers" and "vultures." Some of the legal lights in that city at once expressed their opinions of the woman magistrate in terms both strenuous and emphatic.

But R. H. Greer, once crown attorney, and a fairly well seasoned man, took the logical view, as he laughingly remarked, "She didn't mean me at all."

All of which goes to show that a man with a sense of humor, and the training that keeps him from heating up under the collar, keeps out of a lot of trouble and spills quite a lot of oil on troubled waters.

The Milverton Sun draws attention to the fact that the skunk is a fur-bearing animal and as such cannot be lawfully killed. What's more, in this case there's apt to be one awful stink raised about breaking the law.

The Ridgeway Dominion tells of a farmer who had $900 to pay part of the purchase price of a farm. The money had been drawn from the bank a few days previously and kept in the house. Two armed men arrived at the home, and when they let they had the $900. It is unsafe to have large amounts of cash around with no means of protection. A marked check from the bank drawn in favor of a named party would have been a safe and certain way to carry out the transaction.

The Small Town.

By A. R. K.

I am the small town. Years ago I was newer and even bigger than I am today. There used to be a sawmill, a chair factory and a place where they used all the timber around here and the people who worked in these establishments moved away.

Sometimes I get referred to as a village, and when the old boys come back they look at me and say, "Well, the old place doesn't seem to be going ahead much."

And I've even heard some men from the cities refer to me as unprogressive and lacking in enterprise.

I sometimes wish I could speak out loud and ask some of these men and some of these cities a few questions.

Of the men who used to live here I'd ask where they got their training, and their schooling and their good habits and ideas that made it possible for them to go away from me and take the best positions in the land.

Every time I look away at the cities all over the Dominion, and away off in United States, I can see the boys and the girls I brought up. These cities keep on coming to me and beckoning to the boys I raise, and away they go. I've been supplying them with young men and women for years, and yet they turn around and call me unprogressive and lacking in enterprise.

Yes, I'm just a small town, but I boast, not loudly, but well, that I've given the best of my life to others. I've done more for the cities than they have ever done for me.

And I intend to keep right on doing the best I can. I know how to raise boys and girls out in the fields, out in the open; how to give them simple and honest lives, and how to train them for the great world outside.

But once in a while I'd appreciate a kind word and a bit of acknowledgment. I've done my best and one doesn't care, after that, to be called unprogressive and backward.

London has its telegraph and telephone poles plastered with election cards. One man with a supply for A comes along and nails up his notice. A short time after B arrives on the scene in the form of a card and is duly nailed up. Then, why should C and D not be represented? Thus the process of cluttering up the appearance of the streets goes on, and not one single vote is ever gained in this way. People are going to stop and read all this matter; the announcements simply say, "Vote for A" or "Vote for B," and there is nothing of a convincing nature about it. It is to be hoped that those who put them up are as anxious to come along and remove them when the contest is over.

With the Pioneers of Williams

By J. B. McLACHLAN, Toronto.

THE first operation in clearing land (after the house is raised) would be underbrushing a few acres, and that would have to be done before the snow falls, and means the cutting of all small stuff, say under five inches thick, and nicely piled, all laid laterally so as to be as compact as possible, and form the beginning of a larger pile, when the brush from the larger trees is added later on. These brush heaps, as they are sometimes called, may be burnt at the same time that the log heaps are burnt. The ashes can be leached and converted into potash with profit in some cases, but generally it pays as well, if not better, to leave them on the land to which they rightly belong. Farmers too often rob the land of its just rights.

For instance, The adjoining farm is rented for a term of years, and all the stuff that tends to enrich the land is carted away from the one for the benefit of the other, thus robbing the rented one of its dues.

After the land clearing, just described, had been completed, and in order to get it under crop, an instrument known in pioneer days as a shuffel plow, was brought into play. The shuffel plow was made of hard-wood, triangular in shape, with handles much like present-day plows as to the frame work, with an attachment below to which was affixed a metal plate much like in size and shape as that of an ordinary long-handled shovel plate. This worked with the convex side toward the land at an angle to make its way into the soil. This would, when drawn by the oxen and controlled by the hand, loosen the soil as far as possible. The plow was followed by a harrow, but in many places the hoe would be useful to cover the seed where neither plow nor harrow could be utilized on account of the number of stumps.

Grude implements Used. When corn or potatoes were planted in virgin soil the task was much more easy. When harvest time arrived, the only utensils were the scythe to mow the hay and the sickle to cut the grain. In the use of the latter old countrymen were experts, and turned the wheat, oats or barley into the fine shape for the flail, the only threshing machine in the country.

My father was an expert with both the sickle and the flail, and as a sheep shearer had few equals in his day in the country. A flail consisted of two pieces of hardwood tied together by strong rawhide thongs, and by dexterous movements in beating the sheaves on the barn floor, the grain was separated from the straw and further advantage being taken of the wind to assist the operation. The flail was generally made of sheep-skin attached to a round wooden rim perforated with holes made by a hot iron large enough to allow the grain to pass through. Even the making of that required time, skill and patience.

Now, sir, the preparing of the virgin soil for the first crop, the sowing, reaping, harvesting, threshing, cleaning, milling, and getting the food to the table in the years when my father pioneered in Williams, are things absolutely unknown to 90 per cent of the present farming generation.

The First Separator. I will remember the first threshing machine that appeared, working on a Glasgow street. It was introduced by Mr. William Wells, an Elgin-born Scotchman, who lived on that street. It carried no separating attachments. It consisted of the iron wheel, which was a strong box-like compartment, containing a concave below, and a cylinder above, both supplied with teeth like present-day machines, and driven by horse-power. A large metal wheel, to which was attached four arms at the end of each was attached a horse team. In the center of this wheel stood the driver, the horses moving in a circular course around the driver, the power being transmitted by coupling rods to the threshing, which was being fed carefully and steadily by the man at the hopper.

The belt serves the same purpose now, as the rods did then. There was a certain element of danger to the driver and others in coming in contact with the pinions at connections. I knew one threshing hand whose clothes got caught in this manner, and were stripped from his body even to his suspenders, and had the only threshing machine in the country been drawn to his death. As it was, he received a terrible shock, and his risks as well. Many limbs have been lost by being drawn into the hopper after the sheaves.

I had occasion already to refer to my grandfather, John Black, because he, with others, played his part in the early days. He was an advanced Liberal in politics of the charter type. He was a carpenter by trade which he followed for some time in the city of Glasgow. He was industrious and finding himself without lumber in the bush he resolved to manufacture on a small scale. He dug a space out of the hillside above the banks of Mud Creek, with room enough below to work a space with platform above strong enough to carry the sawwood log destined to be by hand-powered sawn into lumber. Two readers will say "slow work." Yes it was, but it was sure, as the writer can well remember seeing him sawing the sawwood and putting the saw to use in the interior of his house.

More Home-Made Devices. He also contrived a device for the purpose of hulling barley. I will not say that the idea was original, as I was afterwards shown in his old home in the highlands of Scotland a similar contrivance in stone, which I was told was made by him some fifty years before, or about 1830, of which perhaps the one in Williams was a replica. It consisted of a medium-size block of wood, about 2-1/2 feet long and similar to a butcher's block. With the help of an auger a hole was bored in the very center of the block, six inches deep, and drilling holes around the central one gradually lessening the depth until the drilled surface measured eight inches in diameter. Then setting fire to the drilled surface, by careful management a cavity was acquired, when scraped out, clean and smooth as possible. I have a mallet made of hardwood, about 5 inches in diameter, shaped to fit in the bowl or cavity of the block, and smaller, allowing room enough to contain a certain quantity of barley, which, moistened a little, was then pounded by the mallet in an easy manner until the hulls were well separated from the grain. In this way was provided one of the dainty dishes of early settlers before the pot barley of the grocer was in evidence.

When You Suggest

By H. Addington Bruce.

EMIL COUE, much discussed exponent of the art of healing by suggestion, rightly emphasizes the importance of relaxing mentally and physically whenever one gives one's self suggestions looking to improvement in health, the gaining of peace of mind, etc. In more detail one of Coue's disciples, C. Harry Brooks, explains why relaxing is a real aid to successful self-suggestion.

"If," notes Brooks, "we assume a comfortable posture, relax our muscles, and close our eyes, we naturally enter a state of semi-consciousness akin to that of day-dreaming. If now we introduce into the mind any desired idea, it is freed from the inhibiting associations of daily life, associates itself by similarity with the auto-suggestion of the same quality as its own charge. The unconscious is thus caused to accept it, and inevitably it is turned into auto-suggestion."

"Every time we repeat the process the associative power of the idea is increased, its emotional value grows greater, and the auto-suggestion resulting from it is more powerful. "By this means we can induce the unconscious to accept an idea, the normal associations of which are contrary and unfavorable. The person with a disease-soaked mind can gradually free his mind of the disease, filling his unconscious daily with healing thoughts. The instrument we use is the imagination, and the condition essential to success is that the conscious mind shall be lulled to rest."

Lodged before Coue's time, it should be added, the relationship between a state of relaxation and the effective giving of suggestions was recognized by the ancients of mental medicine. But even today the general public—or that section of it endeavoring to benefit by self-suggestion—too commonly fails to relax when suggesting. As a consequence many benefit from suggestion so little that they soon abandon it.

Take, for example, a person troubled by difficulty in sleeping. Learning that suggestion has helped others, he tries to make it of himself. Accordingly, as soon as he has gone to bed he starts saying to himself, "I am going to sleep, I am going to sleep," insistently, vehemently. But he says it with wide-staring eyes, with his whole body in a state of

The Evening Story

By A. W. Peach.

It was not a happy world to John Stuart. He was trying to get his own breakfast. His housekeeper had been suddenly called away, and he was the expression has it, "on his own."

On his ascent from the cellar-way he found the kitchen door had blown open, and wintry gusts of snow were cascading in. He closed the door and went about his labors, when an unmistakable "me-ow" warned him that he had a visitor. A scouting expedition revealed the visitor in his study, a kitten, decorated with a crimson ribbon. Evidently she had slipped in when the kitchen door blew open.

After some skilful stalking, which did not make his world any the happier, he cornered the kitten. He had reason to believe it belonged near the door, so he decided to drop it over the fence. He performed this act with due ceremony and retreated to his belated breakfast. As he entered the kitchen his doorknob rang and he hastened through the bungalow.

"Nine o'clock, and breakfast 20 miles away!" he groaned. He opened the door and found himself facing a slight figure muffled in a fur coat.

"I wonder if you have seen my kitten?" a sweet voice queried. "I just deposited a feline of the description over the backyard fence," he replied with some coldness as befitting the time of the year, the subject, and a breakfastless man.

"Oh, you did!" the sweet voice said with increasing chill. "I thank you! But, if I am not mistaken, I just saw the kitten back of you!"

He started to say "Impossible," but remarked that nothing seemed to be impossible that morning; and it certainly was probable as the kitten dropped over the fence had tagged him straight into the net of the kitchen.

He looked around, exploded a mild expletive in his mind, snatched the kitten from under a davenport, suspended it by the nape of its neck and extended it to its mistress.

"You need not be quite so savage about it," she said as she received the kitten, and turning abruptly about went down the snowy walks, her small overshoes leaving quick imprints behind her.

He closed the door and retreated to his belated breakfast. As he ate, the unhappy world took on a rosier aspect, and he was smiling at the thought of the owner of the kitten also possessed brown eyes of a remarkable depth and beauty, and her eyebrows, and the curve of her cheeks above the furs.

"By Jove, she was downright pretty, and I'm just awake to the fact," he advised himself, and he was a newcomer in the neighborhood. Probably she lived in the attractive house just back of his on the other street, for the kitten, he was willing to wager that his housekeeper had fed the youngster.

"Now, if that kitten should come again I'll have an excuse for going over, and perhaps I can make a better impression than I did this morning," he thought.

He made his usual morning trip to the postoffice and returned by way of the street on which the pretty owner of the kitten lived. The house was attractive, there was no doubt about that. He wondered if he could catch a glimpse of her.

The effort to do so was fatal. The deceptive snow sheltered an icy stretch made more icy by the sliding feet of schoolboys, and John cascaded down the walk in front of her house with more speed than grace.

He gathered up the outspread limits of his six feet of extensive proportions and thought as he did so: "This is a grievous day. The Bible is right again: 'He was tempted and he fell.' I'll make tracks for home and stay there!"

Once more in his snug and comfortable study he set himself to work, but it was of little use. In front of the page he saw brown eyes so deep his glance could not fathom them; the curve of rosy cheeks and the hint of heavy coils of brown hair under the fur cap.

"I am gone—there's no doubt of it! Now, if that blessed kitten would only appear again," he murmured with himself. He even made, to his disgrace, a number of trips to the kitchen door, but no kitten appeared.

The afternoon wore on to evening. He prepared and made away with a very satisfactory repast and was smoking a pleasing cigar when his heart jumped. At the kitchen door there sounded an unmistakable "me-ow."

He rushed to the door and gathered to his arms the kitten that was to be his furred excuse.

He donned the proper garb and started. He walked briskly until he came in front of her house. Then he paused, remembering. In the shadows he saw something dark stretched across the walk when he had fallen, and he remembered the kitten he had dropped. He dropped the kitten and bent over it. It was the girl, unconscious from the force of her fall on the snow-covered, icy walk. He gathered her in his arms, thrilled at the sense of the firm, slight figure in his arms; then he went to the house.

Her father came to the door. There was excitement and confusion for a time, but fifteen minutes later the trouble was over. The girl was looking in her own eyes and regarded him oddly.

"I saw you tumble out there this afternoon, and I am amused—there was so much of you!" she laughed. "And then I had to do it. It serves me right for being so disagreeable to you this morning."

"I'm afraid I should apologize. I was trying to get my own breakfast!" he said.

She smiled. "That explains it," she was forgiven and I suppose—her brown, musing eyes were upon him—suppose because the kitten likes you so well I ought to."

John accepted the cigar her father offered him just then as he said with decision: "I agree with you, and I am certainly grateful to the kitten!" (Copyright, 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

tension, perhaps even with an uneasy tossing from side to side. Under such a condition he cannot possibly sleep. And, moreover, he is going to sleep, "I am going to sleep," summoning his will to reinforce the assertion, the less likely is sleep to come. I am going to sleep, the logical commonplace that to try to sleep is the worst of all ways to woo sleep.

Let the ardent self-suggestor abandon his feverish effort to compel sleep, let him close his eyes, and down, and drowsily murmur, "I am going to sleep, I am going to sleep." A very different result will then follow. Actually he will sleep, possibly in a few minutes.

Not only this, but the next time he makes use of self-suggestion as to sleep he will find it still more efficacious. So that the time to take comes when an adept in relaxation, it needs but a few whisperings of "I am going to sleep" to make the event bear out the whispering.

The same holds good of self-suggestion generally. As Coue teaches, the more one can relax where suggesting anything to one's self, the greater the likelihood of the suggestion "taking."

Christmas Season Brings Happiness To Thousands

BY JAMES C. RAIT.

No day in all the year fills the heart of each one with such joy, such happiness and such tendencies as Christmas. Our fire of generous impulses burns at its highest. For one day in the 365 we feel toward our fellow-men as we should; everywhere the "Peace on earth, good-will to men" rings out.

Though some people today feel that we are losing the proper vision of Christmas and that it is fast depreciating into a mere commercial affair, an affair of give and take, and the giving for the sake of receiving, yet Christmas is still a hallowed day, even if we but consider the pure pleasure this day brings to the thousands of children throughout the land, and the comfort it brings to those who are not so fortunate or are not blessed with much of the comforts this earth has to offer—even, I say, if we but consider these two features of this day, it more than overbalances any commercialism that may have entered into it, for this pleasure, this comfort, this pity is given in honor of Him whose birthday it is.

Synonymous with Christmas is Santa Claus, the friend of little children, and if we older people would only let him, he would be the friend of grown-ups as well. I shudder to think of the terrible catastrophe were Santa Claus to suddenly cease to exist. Think of the acute disappointment to the thousands upon thousands of little children who look for him eagerly for months before his scheduled day. Imagine their disappointment on Christmas morning when their requests to Santa did not materialize and you will agree with me that it would be a dreadful calamity to the human race.

Santa Claus exists. Some who read this might say, "But you know there is no Santa Claus." You're wrong; there is a Santa Claus. He lives just as surely as the love of a mother for her child lives, just as surely as the devotion of the patriot, as the zeal of the martyr. Yes, it's impossible to see Santa Claus, but that does not prove his non-existence. We cannot see any of the virtues, but we know they live and no greater virtue exists than that which brings happiness to the children of the world.

Santa Claus. Where did the name come from? Back in the third century there was born in Panthera, a town in Syria, Asia Minor, a boy who became a priest at an early age. This boy eventually became bishop of Myra, and was later known as Saint Nicholas, the most popular saint in all Christendom. It is said of St. Nicholas that in passing an inn he entered, went into the cellar, stood before a tub in which were the dismembered bodies of three boys whom the robber innkeeper had murdered, and called them back to life. Thus St. Nicholas has always been the patron saint of all school boys.

Another story of St. Nicholas deals with his generosity. St. Nicholas, being born of wealthy parents, eventually possessed great wealth, and in his home town, Panthera, lived a rich noble who had lost all his money. This noble had three daughters of marriageable age, but lack of money for their dowries had kept them in "single blessedness."

Covers Entire Globe.

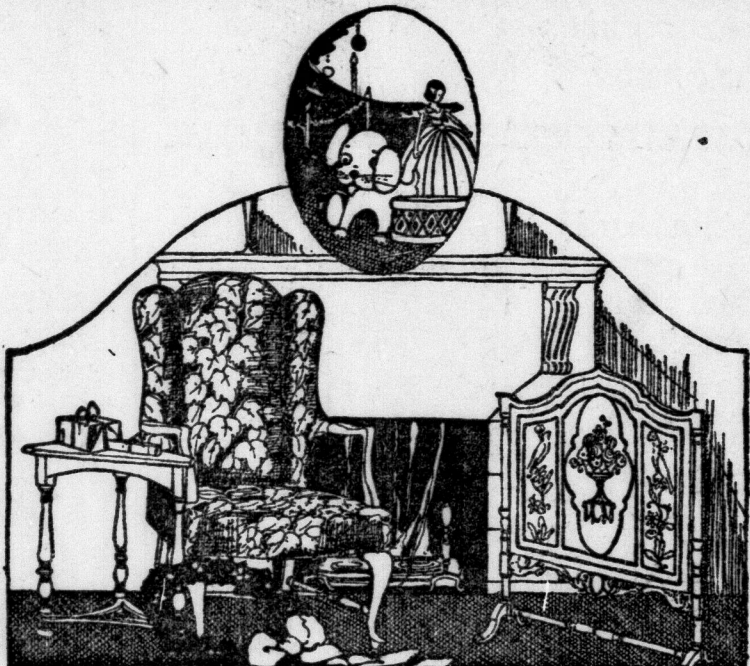

St. Nicholas, who heard of this, threw a well-filled purse of money through an open casement at the noble's home. This purse took his eldest daughter off his hands. On two other occasions further purses were thrown through convenient open windows, and so the three daughters were married and lived happy ever after.

Trees Become Popular.

More homes every year are having their gaily-decorated fir trees on which are hung the gifts for each member of the family. It might be interesting to learn that we are indebted to Germany for this important feature of this season. While the origin goes away back to the days of Egypt, the Christmas tree as we know it is of more recent date. In the city of Strasburg, during the sixteenth century, the practice as we have it now was quite common. About two hundred years later the custom spread along the Rhine, and in the nineteenth century it became a common practice in Germany. It was, however, until the beginning of the twentieth century that its practice became universal. A few years has made it the most popular of all Christmas customs, so that today it has been adopted throughout the entire Christian world, having about thrown into the discard the old custom of the stocking in which we used to take so much delight when we were youngsters not so many years ago.

I have rambled on, saying little about what Christmas really represents, as most of us know the story of the manger. What I have endeavored to do is to answer the question my boys have asked me over and over again during the last few weeks. And if your children are also seeking the truth as to the reality of their Christmas friend, I hope you will strive to correct the false notion of those who think they know better, and say with assurance, "Yes, there is a Santa Claus."

Civilians and Kemalist Troops Fight Amid Ruins of City.

Special cable to The Advertiser. Athens, Dec. 1.—Three hundred casualties occurred in an uprising against Turkish rule in Smyrna, according to a dispatch received from that city today. Civilians and Kemalist troops fought amid the ruins of the city, burned when the Turkish Nationalists seized it.

The revolt occurred when many of the inhabitants, alleging that expulsion of the Greeks had extinguished all social and economic life in the city, staged a big demonstration in favor of a return of the Greek administration. Many Turks participated, the dispatch said. The Kemalists attempted to disperse the gathering, but met with unexpected opposition.

FAME DIES OF PNEUMONIA

One of World's Wealthiest Men, Passes in 52nd Year.

Special to The Advertiser. New York, Dec. 1.—Unlimited wealth and the services of the best specialists money could command, failed to save Wm. Goodsell Rockefeller, one of the world's richest men, from death when stricken with double-pneumonia. He expired at 10:20 p.m. at his mansion on Madison avenue.

Rockefeller, who was 52 years of age, was a son of the late William Rockefeller, a nephew of John D. and a brother-in-law of James A. Stillman.

He complained of a chill Monday and was ordered to bed. By Wednesday his condition had become critical, and the final relapse set in yesterday. Several members of his family were at his side when he died. His wife is in Europe.

Until 1911, Rockefeller was treasurer of the Standard Oil Company. He gradually withdrew from business, and at the time of his death was a director in six companies. Rockefeller was born in New York in 1870 and graduated from Yale in 1892. It was at one time predicted that he would eventually head all the Rockefeller interests. In 1895 he married Elsie Stillman.

A VOTE AGAINST THE SPENCER SITE FOR THE CITY HALL IS A VOTE FOR A Bigger and Better London

London citizens have voted three times in favor of the McCormick site for London's new city hall. This vote was always overwhelmingly in favor of this site as the one best selection that London afforded. Three times the city councils (for some unknown reasons) have gone contrary to the wishes of the people who elected them, and, by different methods, have contrived to block the will of the citizens.

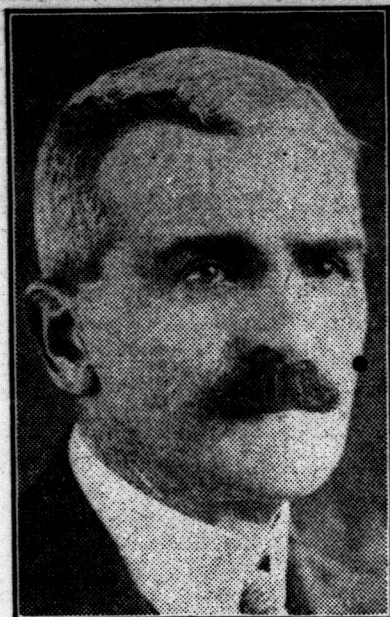

The present site of the city offices (known as the Spencer block) is certainly not suitable for a civic office building, nor will it ever be possible to make it such by rebuilding. It has only the one side that is not hemmed in by other buildings, has no means of being lighted at the rear and sides other than by artificial lighting, and it would be the grossest extravagance to build a temporary civic office building, at an estimated cost of $300,000, on this property, besides tearing down a building that is worth today $60,000. Added to this would be the expense of moving. When the Spencer site was taken over some years ago by the city, and a move made from the old city hall on Richmond street, the alterations to the present building, together with the moving, cost the citizens $61,000. Another move and alterations would cost as much again, or more. These are the things that help increase London's tax rate, with nothing to show for the expenditure. Is this Economy?

You own the McCormick site. It is admitted the finest location in the city for a city hall. It has a frontage of 200 feet on Dundas street and 165 feet on Wellington street.

Three times you have voted the money to erect the city hall on this site. A good substantial civic building can be erected here, with light on all sides—a credit to the city—and the very thing you have voted in favor of three times in succession. Why was your will not carried out? There is some reason.

Assure the city council that you know your mind and that you do not want any interference with your expressed wishes by voting against the Spencer building site for an office building on Monday next.

LIEUT.-COL. W. G. COLES.

Municipal Election Next Monday - - - - Voting 8 a. m. to 7 p. m.

For Civic Progress and Prosperity Elect Alderman H. J.

CHILDS

ALD. "JIM" CHILDS

THE MAN FOR MAYOR

CHILDS, with your mandate, will cancel the franchise of the London Street Railway Company, regain control of our streets, and establish a MUNICIPAL-OWNED street railway system, to provide good service in every district.

London must SNAP THE SHACKLES that would bind this city endlessly and without redress, to a company that is now at liberty to go when it pleases to the Legislature for still higher fares. LONDON MUST CONTROL its OWN transportation system if London is to prosper.

CHILDS is neither disinterested, half-hearted nor antagonistic to public ownership. Childs fights a clean-cut fight for the people and against extension of the company's franchise.

London's $12,000,000 worth of Public Utilities will be safe in CHILDS' hands. CHILDS is your GUARANTEE of ECONOMICAL, EFFICIENT OPERATION and GOOD SERVICE.

CHILDS is a man of effective action, a successful businessman, a Londoner, who KNOWS LONDON'S PROBLEMS.

CHILDS will lower the assessment on all homes now assessed unfairly high. CHILDS will hold the tax rate down.

CHILDS will not betray your interest by urging return to the costly and corrupt contract system on public works. CHILDS will protect the DAY LABOR system that has given London an HONEST JOB, that has SAVED the TAX-PAYER THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS, and that today gives the city worker HIGHER WAGES than the contractors pay, with NO SLAVE-DRIVING.

CHILDS is the advocate of better care for unpaved streets. CHILDS will get prompt action for better street lighting.

CHILDS will halt the "two-thirds vote" expenditures. CHILDS pledges himself to build pavements and sewers where the people want them, but with CHILDS in the mayor's chair no taxpayer will have unnecessary local improvements forced upon him.

CHILDS will MOTOR EQUIP all fire stations, including the NORTH END FIRE HALL, in the interests of higher protection and lower cost.

CHILDS will perfect and complete BOTH SEWER SYSTEMS, providing service for all districts where service is wanted.

CHILDS will encourage public recreation and clean sport. CHILDS as mayor will launch a co-operative scheme to establish an arena for amateur hockey. It can be done through co-operation of men's organizations without calling on the city treasury.

CHILDS is a strong advocate of COMMISSION GOVERNMENT, but CHILDS knows that the Provincial Legislature has three times refused to grant the necessary enabling legislation. London MUST RELY for a lower tax rate on the city council, board of education and all other public bodies and heads of departments PULLING TOGETHER in the city's best interest, through the CIVIC FINANCE COMMISSION.

CHILDS as an alderman and chairman of the finance committee of the city council has distinguished himself in public service.

CHILDS is a capable MAN OF ACTION; not a maker of futile promises.

CHILDS IS A MAN THAT MEN WILL WORK WITH.

CHILDS IS CLEAN, FAIR, EFFICIENT.

FOR WARD 2

The passing of the Nurses' Home Bylaw will release this building and the one below for badly needed accommodation for patients.

If You Had Been Caught Last Night

If you had been taken seriously ill—if you had met with an accident—YOU WOULD HAVE EXPECTED ACCOMMODATION AT VICTORIA HOSPITAL—B-u-t you could not have obtained it.

You who think there is no immediate need for extension to our hospital, who believe that the request of the management may be deferred, consider this.

Last night you could not have obtained accommodation, either in the private or semi-private wards. It was not to be had.

Greater Hospital Accommodation Is a Vital Necessity To London

Several cases came in last night, cases that could and would pay for the comfort of semi-private wards. THEY HAD TO BE TAKEN TO THE GENERAL WARD. A nurse broke under the strain yesterday afternoon. There was no bed for her. A private ward patient came in at 6 a.m. yesterday. He could be given a private ward for only three hours. The ward was reserved for a surgical case that was due to arrive at 9 a.m. The first patient had to be moved to the general ward. GREATER HOSPITAL ACCOMMODATION IS A VITAL NECESSITY TO LONDON. At the moment, when the hospital is full to overflowing (and the winter influx of patients has not yet started), space urgently needed for patients is occupied as quarters for nurses.

Aside from any consideration that must be given to the proper training and housing of pupil and staff nurses—and that in itself is vitally important to the people of London—there is an immediate pressing need for hospital accommodation for London's sick.

If the Nurses' Home is built space will be released to accommodate sixty patients, thus relieving a highly serious situation.

The Citizens DEMAND Hospital Accommodation The Citizens Alone Can Provide it

London has a hospital built to care for a population of 40,000 people.

That same hospital, without any addition of consequence, cannot be expected to care for 65,000.

The hospital was planned to house 50 nurses; today 150 nurses are required to look after London's sick.

A few years ago Victoria Hospital cared for 400 or 500 out-patients in a year. In the last twelve months over 6,000 people received attention in this department.

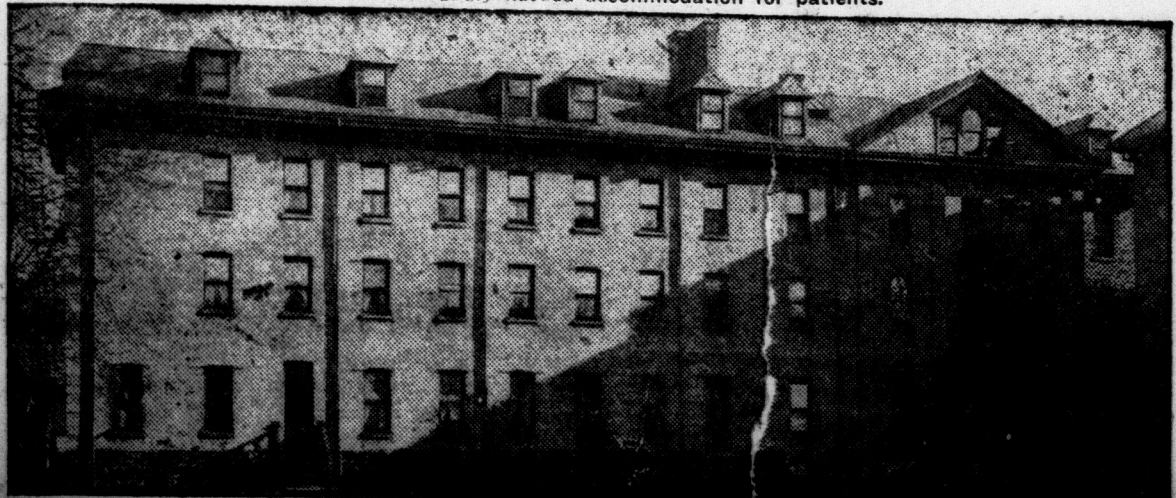

The increase in demand for hospital accommodation must be met by an extension of hospital space and equipment.

To temporize with this condition is to invite disaster. The need is immediate. The extension asked for today should have been provided five years ago.

Don't withhold your hand on Monday! Vote for the NURSES' HOME BYLAW.

Vote for the Nurses' Home Bylaw

The passing of the Nurses' Home Bylaw will release this building and the one above for badly needed accommodation for patients.

The People Are WITH Him

SINCE THE MAYORALTY campaign started ex-Ald. Wenige has attended every advertised meeting for the discussion of municipal issues.

HE HAS SUBMITTED HIS PROGRAM to the workers in shop and factory and to citizens in all walks of life from the public platform. THEY HAVE GIVEN IT THEIR APPROVAL.

HIS EVIDENT SINCERITY has commended Wenige to the people of London as the best man for the Mayor's chair in 1923. He has displayed the ENERGY and the honesty of purpose that are part of the necessary equipment of a good Chief Executive.

CHEERS AND APPLAUSE have greeted Wenige's addresses to the electors. They have shown that the people like his sensible program, which he has not changed in any detail; they like his clean campaign, devoid of personalities, and they like his promise of a BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION at the City Hall. THEY ARE WITH HIM!

GEORGE A. WENIGE

Wenige's Arguments On the Public Platform Have Been Unanswerable

WENIGE'S PROPOSALS for a businesslike administration of civic affairs have not for a moment been successfully challenged.

ON COMMISSION FORM of government his argument was admitted by his opponent. The need of fire protection for the north end was also conceded.

THERE HAS BEEN NO COMEBACK to Wenige's plans for economy. The taxpayer knows that the only real economy will be effected by control of expenditure. Raising the assessment will not cut dollars and cents from the taxes.

MOST IMPORTANT OF ALL, there has been no answer to Wenige's argument that in the purchase of the London Street Railway the people should have a chance to accept or reject when the arbitration price is definitely known. Wenige favors giving the people a say, and IT CAN BE DONE. His opponent has not indicated any such willingness.

WENIGE IS FOR ALL THE PEOPLE!

Vote Early and Vote Right

Remember that the polls are open three hours longer this year than formerly. You can vote any time between 8 a.m. and 7 p.m., but vote early if possible. To exercise your franchise as your conscience dictates is your right. Go to the polls in any car that is convenient, but do not let the driver influence your vote. Several subdivisions have been changed since last year. Be sure to find out where you vote on Monday, Dec. 4. When you cast your vote on the bylaws, vote for the man who as mayor will see that your wishes are carried out. Wenige will not go over your heads in the City of London Bill.

URGES CHEESE PRODUCERS TO GET TOGETHER

Manning Doherty Addresses Directors of Dairying Company At Stratford.

SCORES CONTROL PLAN

Special to The Advertiser.
Stratford, Dec. 1.—"With co-operative marketing in effect, I have not the least doubt that within a year Canadian cheese will come back to its own in foreign markets," said Hon. Manning Doherty, provincial minister of agriculture, today. Mr. Doherty was attending the meeting of directors of the Co-operative Dairying Company, Limited, at the agricultural hall. The minister described the remarks of John Wilson, secretary-treasurer of the Brockville Board of Trade, in regard to a scheme for the appointment of a controller for cheese prices as "absolutely foolish." Mr. Wilson is credited with having made the statement that the appointment of a controller who would have the power of setting a minimum price at which cheese could be sold, would be far better for the trade than the co-operative system being boosted throughout the province.

"The appointment of such a controller would not only be foolish, but ineffective," said Mr. Doherty. "Cheese prices must be determined on the various markets, and it would be an impossibility for one man to set prices."

Mr. Doherty confirmed the statement that New Zealand cheese has come down to Canadian prices, and has to some extent captured the British markets, and it would be an impossibility for one man to set prices.

He told the story of his life, how he first began to get acquainted with the birds, which led to his establishing a home for them at Kingsville. He is a most wonderful speaker, full of humor and pathos, and holds his audience spellbound.

Becker, after denying the identity of the body, suddenly admitted it was that of his wife, and accused Norkin of slaying her to "satisfy" an auto repair bill, police announced.

ATTACKS PREMIER ON TURK PROBLEM

Hon. Arthur Meighen Addresses Meeting At Carleton Place.

Carleton Place, Ont., Dec. 1.—(By Canadian Press Staff Correspondent.)—Attacking the action of the Dominion government in the Near East crisis, Hon. Arthur Meighen, Opposition leader, speaking here tonight in support of Dr. R. F. Preston, Conservative candidate, declared that the honor of Canada had been stained as never before in its history. The Turks were again threatening the peace of Europe, and when Australia and New Zealand had rallied to the support of Great Britain, Canada had weakened the empire cause by merely asking a question, he declared, adding that it was for the government to announce its policy and then to present it to the parliament.

BECK'S REMARKS WARM UP GATHERING AT EALING

Pandemonium Reigns When Audience Takes Exception to Hydro Knight Criticizing Wenige's Stand On the Street Railway Purchase.

CHAIRMAN RULES AGAINST FAVORS

Several hundred citizens of South-east London assembled in the Ealing school Friday night to hear municipal candidates give ample evidence that while undoubtedly the majority of them were advocates of municipal ownership and even the purchase of the London Street Railway, they would countenance no criticism of the platform submitted by Ex-Ald. Wenige, majority candidate. They impressed this fact upon no less a person than Sir Adam Beck, chairman of the hydro-electric commission.

Once the trouble commenced it was only with the greatest difficulty that the situation was held in control, and disorder reigned supreme for several minutes, during which period the greater majority of the audience howled for Sir Adam Beck to "either sit down or get out."

Above the din which grew apace, Sir Adam's voice was heard proclaiming that he would remain until ejected by the police. During the melee, as efforts were expended by Mayor Wilson, S. F. Lawson, Ex-Ald. Wenige, and others to quell the disturbance, the "hydro knight" entered into a heated debate with the chairman of the proceedings, L. O. Swift, suggesting that the latter was incapable of maintaining order.

Protests Remarks. The latter protested to the meeting that "the British right of fair play must prevail, and no person, not even Sir Adam Beck, could ask a question of Mr. Wenige and then proceed to criticize him. He will have his opportunity to speak later on the street railway."

During Mr. Wenige's address, and as he asserted that his platform remained the same and was not changed materially, a voice was heard from the hall, "and what did we do with you last year?"

"I was temporarily defeated," retorted the candidate. While those on the platform and to the front of the hall were silent, at the close of the meeting by police officers, that the query had emanated from Sir Adam Beck, and the speaker a stool looking over the heads of those crowding the doors unable to gain entrance.

Sir Adam subsequently entered the room taking his seat before Mr. Wenige completed his remarks. As the latter concluded, however, he was on his feet in an instant, questioning the candidate upon his attitude in respect to the street railway purchase.

Seeks Information. Ex-Ald. Wenige replied that he intended to vote "No" on the ground that sufficient information had not been forthcoming to him, but when again questioned by Sir Adam, declared that he stood ready to support the bylaw once a reasonable amount of information had been advanced.

It was then, as Sir Adam launched into the street railway situation, that the crowd grew hoarse, and it was only after several minutes that order was restored.

Mayor Wilson and S. F. Lawson both appealed to the gathering to allow a fair hearing for Sir Adam, and the chairman also explained that he intended to see justice done to all whether he was Sir Adam Beck or Sir Adam Wenige.

Sir Adam then commenced his address, and proceeded to deliver a spirited plea for municipal ownership in general and the street railway purchase in particular. His hearers listened attentively, and no further reference was made by the speaker to the majority candidate.

Several questions were answered at the close of the address, and the speakers appeared to be quite favorably impressed with the gathering. The speaker was followed by a vigorous demonstration for Ex-Ald. Wenige.

Ald. H. J. Childs, the second majority candidate, also spoke during the evening, receiving a fair hearing. He dealt with his program in much the same manner as at previous meetings throughout the city.

First Speaker. In his opening remarks, the first speaker of the evening, Ald. Childs, touched upon the question of the city at the city. "This has been touched upon by my opponent," he said, "but I have yet to find it myself. It is absolutely unnecessary, if such is the case, and if I am elected, you can bring every complaint to me, and I can assure you that you will have justice."

Championing the city departments, the candidate touched upon the city engineer's activities, explaining that a saving of 90 cents per square yard had been accomplished during the year on 45,000 yards, which was an appreciable saving he said, and not at 19 cents an hour.

Dealing briefly upon the fire department, Ald. Childs upheld the closing of No. 4 fire hall, and expressed the hope that the time would soon come when the city would be a position to motorize all fire stations. "I do not believe that the present assessment system is fair," he said, "and I do not mean to say for or against Mr. Rafter. I am confident that the small householder is bearing the brunt, however, and this should be rectified."

"My opponent cannot put his proposed commission form of government in effect, because the legislative assembly will not stand for it, whether it is an ideal arrangement or not."

The speaker urged co-operation between the various city departments as a means toward greater economy in the future, and referred to the civic commission, instituted by Mayor Wilson, and which had proved so advantageous, he pointed out.

Spread Task. He pointed to the several public buildings that were needed at this moment: Registry office, police station, city hall and fire hall, but pointed out that as these could not be made possible all at once, it would be only good judgment to spread the task over a period of years, and undertake the most needed first.

"My opponent says in the press today that he is not a self-appointed candidate," asserted Ex-Ald. Wenige, the next speaker, "but I can assure you that your applause is ample answer to his inference that I am."

Mr. Wenige then touched upon the 10 per cent salary question, reading from the city hall minutes the history of that question, which has aroused such evident interest at the several mass meetings. "The facts must be heard," he said.

Urging the establishment of a commission form of government, the speaker maintained that this could be brought about in London, despite the objection of his opponent, and that "no clique or gang could convince him that he was wrong."

He referred to George 5, chapter 14, section 2D, which provides, he said, for the machinery for the institution of this type of administration.

"You voted in favor of this several years ago," he reminded his hearers, "but the 'ring' at the city hall did not take up the question in the right manner. They adopted the attitude of 'oh, these fellows do not know what they are voting about in any event.'"

In his concluding remarks Ex-Ald. Wenige explained, although he wanted it distinctly understood that he was an exponent of municipal ownership, he intended to vote against the street railway.

"Don't make any mistake about it, the London Street Railway Corporation is not anxious to dispose of its assets. Despite the fact that we do not desire that the city should assume control of the line in 1925."

So declared Sir Adam Beck, chairman of the hydro-electric Power Commission, in another spirited address for municipal ownership urged the purchase of the London street railway, and the disturbance which marked the early part of the evening his remarks evidently impressed the audience favorably.

Value by Arbitration. "The value of the road must be placed by arbitration," he said, "and if under the terms of Bylaw 916 you do not buy, the franchise automatically extends to the city."

"The company presented a wonderful boost when the provincial government threw the agreement in the waste paper basket," he said, "and the increase in fares. That makes the road profitable and highly desirable to the company, and it does not wish to sell."

"It is all right for others to come here and tell you about being able to collect from the company, but that has been tried before. I was the one who won three judgments, and have since been unable to collect a thing. They snap their fingers at us, and say, 'I'll do it.'"

"The arbitrators will not consider the money-making possibilities of the road but only the value of the line and tangible effects of the line."

Company Fair? "We'll pay for the scrap at scrap value."

"I do not know if the company could be considered fair or not when they have the members of the private bills committee, but I say no when they have derived the advantages of the past 30 years they go to the parliament for an increase. The L. and P. S. did not do that with the M. C. R. We kept faith."

Sir Adam disagreed at this point for a moment to explain that as an individual he was glad to be out of the provincial house, but deplored the fact that he did not have adequate power to fight for the city.

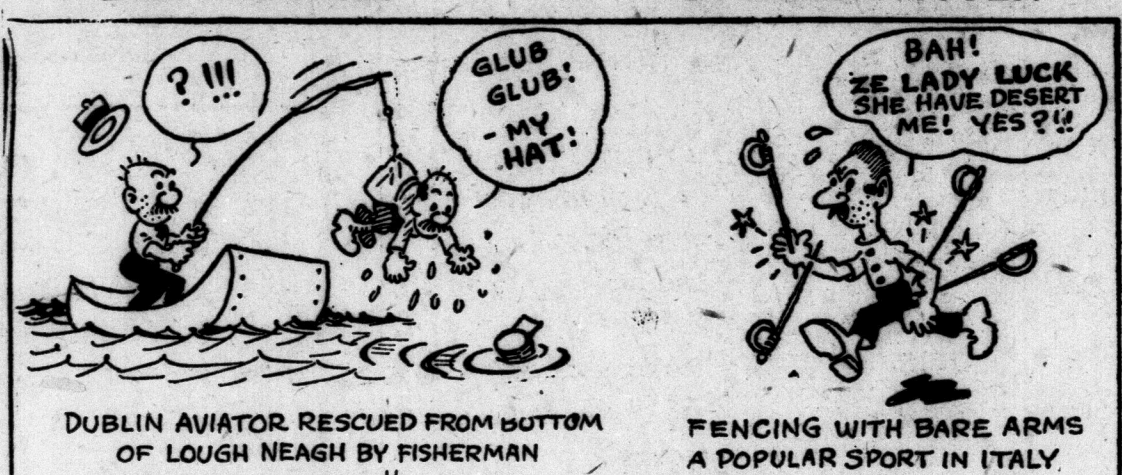

He related that when the company once before sought an increase in fares, he fought the issue before the committee with the premier's sanction. It had been a victory for the city, he said, even if but two out of the twelve Labor members voted against the increase.

"I was asked to get again and join the fight when the increase was passed at the last session," he explained. "I said 'no,' Premier Drury or no one else can get me in there as a private citizen to get abused again. I said let your own member go. And then the increased fare was voted two to one."

"Buy this road," urged the speaker. "Get control of your streets, eliminate litigation. It will be possible to consolidate with the London and Port Stanley Road, and make use of the same staff. Get a better service, as the engineer has suggested, six minutes where you now have ten minutes service, and four minutes where you had six."

SAYS BUILDINGS ARE FIRE TRAPS

Former Minister Makes Charges Against Manitoba Public Buildings.

Special to The Advertiser. Winnipeg, Man., Dec. 2.—Manitoba's institutional buildings, asylums, reformatory, and home for incurables, are fire traps, potential scenes of future holocausts, where hundreds may be incinerated in the most horrible manner, in this brief is the opinion voiced by S. C. Oxtown, former deputy minister of public works, and confirmed by the present minister of public works, Hon. W. R. Chubb.

Part of Mr. Oxtown's charges follow: "In the light of the conflagration at St. Boniface, and the loss of life therein, I deem it my duty to call the attention of the people of Manitoba to conditions at present in certain public institutions belonging to the province, and let them draw their own conclusions, as to what would probably, nay, almost inevitably, happen in these institutions in event of fire."

CLAIMS CANADIAN BACON IS LOSING ON BRITISH MARKET

Dr. J. H. Grisdale Addresses Banquet Tendered by Livestock Branch.

Ottawa, Dec. 2.—At the present time Canadian bacon on the British market is losing, rather than gaining ground, was one of the pertinent statements made last night by Dr. J. H. Grisdale, deputy minister of agriculture, at a banquet tendered by the department to the senior officers of the live stock branch, assembled here for conference from all provinces of the Dominion.

While in appearance Canadian bacon on the British market is equal to that of England and Ireland, the same is considered to be below their requirements. Hog grading will undoubtedly restore to Canada her lost prestige on the British market the only export outlet for Canadian bacon," he said. The deputy minister congratulated the members of the live stock branch responsible for the excellent reputation enjoyed by Canadian eggs on the British market as a result of the standardization for export. He stated that "the Canadian egg is welcomed in Great Britain as an article of choice, and the only trouble is that their numbers are not legion."

Victoria, B. Chong Wong, its owner, was arrested.

LANARK RIDING LIBERALS SURE TIDE IS TURNING

Old Conservative Stronghold Gives Premier King Rousing Reception.

HOLD STIRRING MEETINGS

Events of Campaign Lead Government to Hope for Victory.

Perth, Dec. 2.—Two weeks ago Lanark was Conservative riding, it drew its confidence and inspiration from majorities given to that party in the past. Today, it is considering seriously whether or not to throw the balance of its favor to the Liberal side.

To complete an energetic public campaign, carried on by David Findlay, government candidate, and his supporters, the old-timers in the riding are shaking their heads and "things look as though they were going to swing around."

Even Conservatives reluctantly admit they are not waging anything on the outcome.

Doubtless the remarkable attendance at Liberal meetings all over the constituency has had an influence in breaking down the walls of traditional Tory leanings. If Lanark was a Liberal stronghold, it could not have accorded to prominent speakers more demonstration than has been shown to Premier King and his colleagues, wherever they have gone.

Repetition of Welcome. This afternoon and evening saw but a repetition of other enthusiastic welcomes. The flourishing town of Perth, which was the home of the late Hon. J. A. Stewart, minister in the Meighen government, and which he had escorted him to receive Hon. Mackenzie King.

When he arrived from Ottawa a crowd was at the station to greet him. Mayor Conway was among those present. Automobiles, decorated with bunting and flags, and headed by a band, escorted him through the town and to the village of Lanark, twelve miles away. On the trip out, a sign, "A fine school, further along, a line of boys and girls was drawn up alongside of the road and waved greetings as the premier passed.

Opening the door of his car, the premier leaned out and acknowledged the tributes. At Lanark, which eagerly awaited his arrival, a civic address, signed by Reeve C. M. Forbes and Clerk Beattie, was handed to him by Dr. Scott, in a packed hall, which was incapable of holding the people, and an overflow meeting was held in the town hall.

Miss Helen Ferguson presented a bouquet to the government leader, who gallantly repaid her by a kiss, to the delight of the audience. Lanark village is one of the quaint old communities of Ontario, having been settled by the Scotch in the early days of the century, and has long been known for its lumber and woolen trade. It is fifty years or more since Alexander MacKenzie, then premier, attended a picnic there, so that the honor of the prime minister's visit today was deeply appreciated.

On the platform with Mr. King were Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Hon. T. A. Lowe, Senator McColg, Colonel Andrew Thompson, David Findlay, the candidate (Mr. Dwyer), a former member of the Liberal Association, R. Robertson, who acted as chairman, and many prominent citizens.

Returning to Perth tonight another celebration was held and Balderson, who was in the audience, was seated in the front row of the largest capacity of two thousand, was packed.

The premier also addressed a crowd in the open in each place. Through his addresses, which covered most of the outstanding subjects, such as a record of government since taking office, the Near East question, the national debt, railway and other topics, he frequently interrupted his remarks.

All of this would not be so significant, since demonstrations usually accompany visits of premiers, were it not for two features, one of which Lanark County cannot recall any such display toward Liberal leaders in the past, and secondly, that Perth, Carleton Place and Almonte, three of the largest towns in the riding, have been considered so excessively conservative that outbursts of this kind have upset all calculations of the Meighen forces.

With a wind-up of the fight at Smith's Falls tomorrow night, where another triumphal program has been arranged for Mr. King, David Findlay and others, Lanark will at least have excelled itself in cordiality toward Liberals, regardless of what may happen at the polls on Monday.

ACTING PREMIER OF CHINA HANDS IN RESIGNATION

Peking, Dec. 2.—Premier Wang T. Hsien, named by President Li Yuan-Hung on Thursday as acting premier in the new cabinet, submitted his resignation yesterday. The president declined to accept it. It is semi-officially stated that the resignation was the result of the president's refusal to agree to the new premier's plan to resign the finance portfolio.

A Peking dispatch on Thursday said that Wang T. Hsien had been named acting premier and minister of finance in a ministry supplanting that headed by Wang Chung-Hui.

LANARK NOT FAVORED. Stress is being laid on the fact that Lanark has never secured much at any time from the government. About the only work done at public expense was the building of the canal, which accumulated so much notoriety. It is long unused and despoiled. It is pointed out that if the riding turns to Page 22, Column 6.

LAW DIGS UP OLD ISSUE IMPERIAL PREFERENCE

Believed Plan Will Be To Propose Large Loans to Dominion—Col. Croft Suggests That Large Tracts of Land Be Given in Return.

EXPORTS WITHIN EMPIRE INCREASES

Special to The Advertiser. Ottawa, Dec. 2.—(By Staff Correspondent).—There are symptoms that Mr. Bonar Law and his colleagues are planning to review by a side-wind the old issue of imperial preference which Mr. Chamberlain made his own.

Thanks to the pertinency of Mr. Austen Chamberlain there is in existence today a sort of imperial preference embedded in the British fiscal system, but which it does confer some advantages upon crown colonies which grow tea, sugar, etc., it is not of any real benefit to the great self-governing Dominions.

One possible line of action is to propose large loans for the development of the resources of the Dominions and then assert that the money cannot bring in its full results until a substantial trade preference is given to Dominion products.

Proposes Wild Scheme. Col. Page Croft, who has proposed a wild scheme, whereby the Dominions are to hand over large tracts of land to the imperial government need not be taken seriously. Of all the tribe of imperialists, he is the most half-brained. He is a favorite darling of the Morning Post, and in the old tariff reform days, he wrote at intervals for it what he called "A Revue for Imperialists."

After the war he quarreled with the Tory party because it was too moderate and restrained, and tried to form an organization called the National party, but he only secured one follower in the house, and before the late election the National party gave up the ghost and Col. Page Croft became "regular" again.

His scheme hardly is to be examined to excite derision in the Dominion, and any government who tried to sponsor it would end speedily. Though Col. Croft is a small political force, it is plain from the speeches of Sir A. Mond and Sir Laming-Williams, that the policy of higher standing have similar projects in mind.

Lord Beaverbrook has been steadily preaching the doctrine that Britain should avert her eyes from a ruined Europe and concentrate her attention upon the possibilities of her own empire. He has a number of converts, and his friend, Mr. Law, to this view.

Greater Trade Result. In a speech at Leeds during the election Mr. Law talked a lot about the hope that from his projected economic conference greater trade and some amelioration of unemployment would result. He guarded himself by saying: "I am not one of those who think the chaos of demoralization in Central Europe does not matter." But he then developed a statistical argument devised to convey the impression that the correct course of British trade with Europe compared with trade within the Empire was comparatively small.

"In the last year before the war," said Mr. Law, "we sent to the Empire alone two and a half times the quantity of goods we sent to all these demoralized countries of Europe, including Germany, and in 1920 our export trade within the Empire was four and a quarter times as great as with those countries."

The London Economist, the chief spokesman of the banking interest of Britain, takes issue with Mr. Law's position and challenges the validity of his figures. It concludes that Mr. Law must have severely restricted his list of demoralized countries, and left out a number which should properly come under this head. It would include the former, France, Italy, Belgium, Germany, Austria, Hungary, Greece, Rumania, European Turkey and Russia, and it submits that the correct comparison should be as follows:

Imports Smaller. "In 1913, our exports to these nine countries were £130,000,000 in the same year our exports to countries within the Empire were £205,000,000. The latter is scarcely 'two and a half times' the former, as Mr. Law suggests. In 1913, our exports to nine countries were £312,700,000, and to countries within the Empire £501,500,000. The latter is scarcely 'four times' the former, as Mr. Law suggests. Let us turn next to imports. Our imports from the nine countries were £214,300,000, and from the countries within the Empire £331,000,000. The latter figures is by no means 'five and a quarter times' greater than the former."

ADMITS MURDER, SEEKS TO END LIFE

Olivia Stone, N. Y., Freed of Slaying, Fights Attempts at Succor.

New York, Dec. 2.—Olivia M. P. Stone, acquitted of the slaying of Ellis Guy Kinkead, former city solicitor of Cincinnati, lay near death in a hospital here today and fought attempts of physicians to save her life.

Miss Stone, who declared she shot Kinkead because he wronged her, then married another woman, Marie Gormley, took 20 grains of bichloride of mercury in an attempt at suicide, according to reports.

"I killed the only person I had to live for, and there was nothing else left for me to do," said a "death" letter, written by the woman.

She told hospital attaches and police that she finally decided to kill herself because she was unable to obtain her license from a Cincinnati hospital, reinstating her as a trained nurse. After taking the poison, the woman remained in the hospital six hours awaiting death, detectives said.

When found and taken to the hospital, she fought attempts of doctors and nurses to give her antidotes.

Greece and Turkey Make Decision of Interchange of Civil Populations

BY HENRY WOOD. Special to The Advertiser. Lausanne, Dec. 2.—The Lausanne conference, deadlocked on the questions of the Straits, the Mosul oil concessions and the Greek Cretan today considered a six weeks recess, beginning Dec. 15. The adjournment would permit Ismet Pasha, Turkish leader, to consult with the Greek Government, and to discuss the various and often disputed points. The conference under the plan would be resumed at the close of the Brussels meeting.

Tschirner, the Russian foreign minister, arrived here late last night, accompanied by Delegate Medvedev. He was met by the Turkish foreign minister, Venizelos, in the elegance of his attire.

Neither members of the press nor the public were allowed to approach the two Russians, who were immediately rushed to the Hotel Savoy to join Rakowski and Vorovski.

The age-old gordian knot of the Greco-Turkish conflicts in Asia Minor was cut by the conference decided upon a scheme of wholesale exchange of the civil populations of the two countries. If necessary a system of forced migration will be adopted.

Lord Curzon presented figures providing for the transportation of between half a million and six hundred thousand Greeks from Asia Minor to Greece, and of 350,000 Turks in Greece back to Turkey.

The drastic nature of this measure is indicated by the fact that the Greek colonies in Asia Minor which have survived there since the Ottoman invasion of Europe, and similarly with thrust back Greeks from Asia Minor to the Mussulman colonies which have endured in the Balkans since the Turkish invasion.

Venizelos for Greece and Ismet Pasha for Turkey accepted the proposition of the sub-commission appointed to draw up the plans.

OUTLINE OF HISTORY

BY H. G. WELLS.

Weeks appear in the dim light of the dawn of history (say 7000 B.C.) as one of the wandering nomadic Aryan peoples were gradually extending the limits of their pastures southward to the Balkan peninsula, and into conflict and mixing with that preceding Aegean civilization of which Crete was the center. In the Homeric poems these Greek tribes speak one common language, and a common tradition upheld by the epic poems keeps them together in a loose unity; they call their various tribes by a common name, Hellenes. They probably came in successive waves.

Three main variations of the ancient Greek speech are distinguished: the Ionic, the Aeolic, and the Doric. There was a great variety of dialects. The Ionians seem to have preceded the other Greeks, and to have mixed very intimately with the civilized peoples of the Aegean. Racially the people of such cities as Athens and Miletus may have been less Nordic than Mediterranean. The Doric apparently constituted the last and most powerful and least civilized wave of the migration.

Older Civilization Destroyed.

These Hellenic tribes conquered and largely destroyed the Aegean civilization that had preceded their arrival; upon its ashes they built up a civilization of their own. They took to the sea and crossed by way of the islands to Asia Minor; and, sailing through the Dardanelles and Bosphorus, spread their settlements along the south and eastern coast of the Mediterranean. They founded the town of Marseilles on the site of an earlier Phoenician colony. They began settlements in Sicily in rivalry with the Carthaginians as early as 735 B.C.

In the rear of the Greeks proper came the kindred Macedonians and Thracians; on their left wing, the Phrygians crossed by the Bosphorus into Asia Minor.

We find all this distribution of the Greeks effected before the beginnings of written history. By the seventh century B.C.—that is to say, by the dition of vowels, so that reading and writing were now easy arts to learn and practice, and great numbers of people could master them and make a record for later ages.

A Ready-Made Idea.

Now this Greek civilization that we find growing up in South Italy and Greece and Asia Minor in the seventh century B.C. is a civilization differing in many important respects from the two great civilized systems whose growths we have already traced: that of the Nile and that of the Two Rivers of Mesopotamia. These civilizations grew through long ages where they are found; they grew slowly about a temple life out of a primitive agriculture; priest-kings and god-kings consolidated such early city states into empires. But the barbaric Greek herdsman raiders came southward into a world whose civilization was already an old story. Shipping and agriculture, walled cities and writing were already there. The Greeks did not grow a civilization of their own; they wrecked one and put another together upon the ruins of the first.

To this we must ascribe the fact that there is no temple-state stage, no stage of priest-kings in the Greek record. The Greeks got at once to the city organization that in the east had grown round the temple. They took over the association of temple and city; the idea was ready made for them.

What impressed them most about the city was probably its wall. It is doubtful if they took to city life and citizenship straight away. At first they lived in open villages outside the ruins of the cities they had destroyed, but there still the model of the city organization that in the east had grown round the temple. They took over the association of temple and city; the idea was ready made for them.

We have already said that the Helots in Sparta. The nobles and commoners became landlords and gentlemen farmers; it was they who directed the shipbuilding and engaged in trade. But some of the poorer free citizens followed mechanic arts, and, as we have already noted, would even pull an oar in a galley for pay. Such priests as there were in this Greek world were either the guardians of shrines and temples or sacrificial functionaries. Aristotle, in his "Politics," makes them a mere subdivision of his official class. The citizen served as warrior in youth, ruler in his maturity, priest in his old age. The priestly class, in comparison with the equivalent class in Egypt and Babylonia, was small and insignificant.

The gods of the Greeks proper, the gods of the heroic Greeks, were, as we have already noted, glorified human beings, and they were loved without very much fear or awe; but beneath these gods of the conquering freemen lurked other gods of the subjugated peoples, who followed their furtive followers among slaves and women. The original Aryan gods were not expected to work miracles or control men's lives.

But Greece, like most of the eastern world in the thousand years B.C., was much addicted to consulting oracles or soothsayers. Delphi was particularly famous for its oracle. "When the oldest men in the tribe could not tell you the right thing to do," says Gilbert Murray, "you went to the blessed dead. All oracles were at the tombs of heroes. They told you what was 'Themis,' what was the will of the gods. They told you what the people would put it now, what was the will of the gods."

The priests and priestesses of these temples were not united into one class, nor did they exercise any power as a class. It was the nobles and free commoners, two classes which in some cases merged into one common body of citizens, who constituted the Greek state. In many cases, especially in great city states, the population of slaves and enfranchised strangers greatly outnumbered the citizens. But for them the state existed only by courtesy; it existed legally for the select body of citizens alone. It might or might not tolerate the outsider and the slave, but they had no legal voice in their treatment—any more than if it had been a despotism.

This is a social structure differing widely from that of the eastern monarchies. The exclusive importance of the Greek citizen reminds one a little of the exclusive importance of the children of Israel in the later Jewish state, but there is no equivalent on the Greek side to the prophets and priests, nor to the idea of an overruling Jehovah.

Another contrast between the Greek states and any of the human communities to which we have hitherto given attention is their continuous and incurable division. The civilizations of Egypt, Sumeria, China, and no doubt North India, all began in a number of independent city states, each one a city with a few miles of dependent agricultural villages and cultivation around it, but out of this phase they passed by a process of coalescence into kingdoms and empires.

But to the very end of their independent history the Greeks did not coalesce. Commonly, they remained to the geographical conditions under which they lived. Greece is a country cut up into a multitude of valleys by mountain masses and arms of the sea that render inter-communication dif-

TRIUMPHS OF M. JONQUELLE

BY MELVILLE DAVIDSON POST.

THE THING ON THE HEARTH.

The first confirmatory evidence of the thing, Excellency, was the print of a woman's bare foot.

He was an immense creature. He sat in an upright chair that seemed to have been provided especially for him. The great bulk of him flowed out and filled the chair. It did not seem to be fit that enveloped him. It seemed rather to be some soft, tough fibre, like the pudgy mass making up the body of a deep-sea thing. One got an impression of strength.

The country was before the open window; the clusters of cultivated shrub, the sweep of velvet lawn extending to the great wall that inclosed the place, then the bend of the river and beyond, the distant mountains, blue and mysterious, blending indistinguishably into the sky. A soft sun, clouded with the haze of autumn, shone over it.

He paused as though there was some compelling force in the reflection. It was impossible to say, with accuracy, to what race the man belonged. He came from some queer blend of Eastern peoples. His body was as slender as a woman's, his Mongolian. But one got always, before him, a feeling of the hot East lying low down against the stage of his life. He felt that he had risen slowly into our world of hard

To the end the largest city states of Greece remained smaller than many English counties; and some had an area of only a few square miles. Athens, one of the largest of the Greek cities, at the climax of its power had a population of about a million. Few cities of other Greece exceeded 50,000. 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar and cream well. Add cream a little at a time and beat until the smoothness of ice cream.

Mousseline Sauce

1 cup cream, stiffly beaten

Beat egg yolks until thick, add sugar gradually and continue beating. Cook over hot water until thick, remove, and beat until cold. Fold in cream, add salt and vanilla.

time of the Babylonian captivity of the Jews—the landmarks of the ancient world of the pre-Hellenic civilization in Europe have been obliterated. Tyranny and Chosros are unimportant sites; Mycenae and Troy survive in legend; the great cities of this new Greek world are Athens, Sparta, the capital of Macedonia, Corinth, Thebes, Samos, Miletus. The world of our grandfathers called "Ancient Greece" had arisen on the forgotten ruins of a still more ancient Greece, in many ways as civilized and artistic of which today we are only beginning to learn through the labors of the excavator.

But the newer Ancient Greece, of which we are now telling, still lives vividly in the imaginations and institutions of men because it spoke a beautiful and most expressive Aryan tongue akin to our own, and because it had taken over the Mediterranean alphabet and perfected it by the ad-social structure of the primitive Aryans was a two-class system of nobles and commoners, the classes not very sharply marked off from each other, and led in warfare by a king who was simply the head of one of the noble families, primus inter pares, a leader among his equals.

With the conquest of the aboriginal population and with the building of towns there was added to this simple social arrangement of two classes a lower stratum of farm workers and skilled and unskilled workers, who were for the most part slaves. But all Greek communities were not of this "conquest" type. Some were "refugees" or cities representing smashed communities, and in these the aboriginal substratum would be missing. In many of the former cases the survivors of the earlier population formed a subject class, slaves of the state as a whole, as for instance, the

"Nearly Lost Baby With Croup"

Has Depended on Dr. Chase's Medicines for 25 Years

This letter from Mrs. Thompson gives you some idea of why so many thousands of people depend on Dr. Chase in the hour of sickness.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has a permanent place in the great majority of Canadian homes because it is the most certain relief from Croup, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough and Asthma.

Mrs. Alex. Thompson, Whitchurch, Ont., writes:—"When my first baby was born, I think she would have died from croup before we could reach a doctor, if it had not been for a neighbor who had a bottle of Dr. Chase's Linseed and Turpentine in the house. This relieved her almost immediately. That was 21 years ago, and Dr. Chase's Medicines have been friends of ours ever since."

Asthma

Mr. Thomas Bond, Shelburne, North Shore, Que., writes:—"I suffered for years with asthma, sometimes being unable to lie in bed, but after a treatment of Dr. Chase's Linseed and Turpentine, I am now quite well and thank this medicine for restoring me."

air and sun out of the vast sweltering ooze of it.

He spoke English with a certain care in the selection of the words, but with ease.

It is necessary to try to understand this, because it explains the conception everybody got of the creature, when they saw him in the charge of Rodman. I am using precisely the descriptive words he was exclusively in charge of Rodman, as a jinn in an Arabian tale might have been in charge of a king's son.

The creature was terrible—with almost a groveling servility. But one felt that this servility resulted from something potent and secret. One looked to see Rodman take Solomon's ring out of his waistcoat pocket.

I suppose there is no longer any doubt about the fact that Rodman was one of those gigantic human intelligences who sometimes appear in the world; and by their immense conceptions dwarf all human knowledge—a sort of mental monster that we feel nature has no right to produce. Lord Bayless Truxley said that Rodman was four generations in advance of the time of his birth. Rodman was rich, everybody supposed, indolent; no one ever thought very much about him until he published his brochure on the scientific manufacture of precious stones. Then instantly everybody with any pretension to a knowledge of synthetic chemistry turned toward him.

The brochure startled the world. It proposed to adapt the lustre

THE TENT-FLAP SIMPLY OPENED AND THE BIG ORIENTAL APPEARED.

And beauty of jewels to commercial uses. We were being content with crude imitation colors in our commercial glass, when we could quite as easily have the actual structure and the actual lustre of the jewel in it. We were content with painting over the earth, and in its bowels, for a few crystals and prettily-colored stones, when we hoarded and treasured, when in a manufacturing laboratory we could easily produce them, more perfect than nature, and in unlimited quantity.

Now, if you want to understand what I am printing here about Rodman, you must think about this thing as a scientific possibility and not as a fantastic notion. Take, for example, Rodman's address before the Sorbonne, or his report to the International Congress of Science in Edinburgh, and you will begin to see what I mean. The Marchese Giovanni, who was a delegate to that congress, and Pastreux, said that the only thing in the way of an actual practical realization of what Rodman outlined was the formulae. If Rodman could work out the formulae, jewel-stuff could be produced as cheaply as glass, and in any quantity—by the carload. Imagine it: sheet ruby, sheet emerald, all the beauty and lustre of jewels in the windows of the corner druggist!

And there is another thing that I want you to think about. Think of the immense destruction of value—not to us, so greatly, for our stocks of precious stones are not large; but the thing meant, practically, wiping out all the assembled wealth of Asia except the actual earth and its structures.

Put the thing some other way and consider it. Suppose a shoemaker suddenly discovered that pure gold could be produced by treating common yellow clay with sulphuric acid, that some genius should set up a machine on the border of the Sahara that received sand at one end and turned out shoes at the other! What, then, would our hoarded gold be worth, or the wheat lands of Australia, Canada or our Norway?

The illustrations are fantastic. But the thing Rodman was after was a practical fact. He had it on the way. Giovanni and Lord Bayless Truxley were convinced that the man would work out the formulae. They discussed over their cigars, to prepare the world for it.

The whole of Asia was appalled. The rajahs of the native states in India prepared a memorial and sent it to the British government.

The thing came out after the mysterious, incredible tragedy. One night, in an explorer's tent near the excavations, this inscrutable creature walked in on Rodman. No one knew how he got into the tent or where he came from.

Giovanni told about it. The tent flap simply opened, and the big Oriental appeared. He had something under his arm, and laid it in a prayer-carpet. He gave no attention to Giovanni, but he salaamed like a coolie to the little American. "Master," he said, "you were hard to find. I have looked over the world for you."

And he squatted down on the dirty floor by Rodman's camp stool.

literal meaning.

The present was from the treasure-room of the monastery; the very carpet around it, Giovanni said, was worth twenty thousand lire. There was another thing that came out in the talk that Giovanni afterward recalled. Rodman was to accept the present and the man who brought it to him. The Oriental would protect him, in every way, in every direction, from things visible and invisible. He made quite a speech about it. But there was one thing from which he could not protect him.

The Oriental used a lot of his ancient words to explain, and he did not get it very clear. He seemed to mean that the creative forces of the spirit would not tolerate a division of worship with the creative forces of the body—the celibate notion in the monastic idea.

Giovanni thought Rodman did not understand it; he thought he himself understood it better. The monk was pleading Rodman to a high virtue, in the lapse of which something awful was sure to happen.

Giovanni wrote a letter to the state department when he learned what had happened to Rodman. The state department turned it over to the court at the risk. I think it was one of the things that influenced the judge in his decision. Still, at the time, there seemed no other reasonable decision to make.

The testimony must have appeared incredible; it must have appeared fantastic. No man, reading the record could have come to any other conclusion about it. Yet it seemed impossible—at least, it seemed impossible for a man to consider this great vital bulk of a man as a monk of one of the oldest religious orders of the world.

Every common, academic conception of such a monk he distinctly negated. He impressed me, in his pleading Rodman, with the qualities of clever diplomacy—the subtle ambassador of some new Oriental power, shrewd, suave, accomplished.

When one read the yellow-backed court record, the sense of old, obscure, mysterious agency, lurking in sinister menace, invisibly, around Rodman could not be escaped from. You believed it. Against your reason, against all modern experience of life, you believed it.

There was one man in the world that everybody wished could have been present at the trial. That was Monsieur Jonquelle. Jonquelle was chief of the Criminal Investigation Department of the Service de la Surete in Paris. He had been in charge of the French secret service on the frontier of the Shan states, and at the time he was in the midst of a mystery story will appear in our next issue.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

PETER THUMPS AND TAKES TO HIS HEELS.

His bravest is who for a friend His very life will freely lend.

—Old Mother Nature.

Peter Rabbit tumbled all over with excitement as he watched what he had supposed to be an old log lying in the moonlight in an open place back of the new dam of Paddy dam. Peter tumbled with more than excitement. There was something of fear mingled with that excitement. You see, that log had moved. Peter was sure of it. He didn't take his eyes from it. He was watching for it to move again. Presently it did. Yes, sir, it did. It moved forward just a wee bit. Peter knew then that it was a log.

"It's Yowler the Bob Cat, as sure as I am alive!" muttered Peter under his breath. "He is after Paddy the Beaver or Mrs. Paddy. He knows that they have to climb over this dam, and he is planning to catch one of them doing it."

Little by little Yowler moved across that open space until he was within good jumping distance of the place where Paddy and Mrs. Paddy were in the habit of crossing that dam. Then he didn't move. He was partly in the shadow there and looked more than ever like a log. He had chosen this time to try for one of those Beavers, because he knew that they were not together, and that meant that one nose and one pair of ears and one pair of eyes would be watching for danger. And he hoped that these would not be watching very sharply, for those Beavers had been working so long without much being frightened that he felt sure they must have made up their minds that there was no danger.

You may be sure that Peter didn't move. No, indeed, Peter didn't move. He squatted in that Black Shadow and was thankful that he was on that side of the Laughing Brook instead of one side where Yowler was. Then he began to think of Paddy the Beaver. It was almost time for Paddy to return. Peter shivered when he thought of what might happen when Paddy started to climb over that dam.

"He won't see Yowler. No, sir, he won't see him, for even if his eyes were better than they are Yowler would still look like an old log there. He won't hear him, for Yowler won't make a sound. He won't smell him, for the Little Night Breezes are blowing the other way. Oh dear! Oh dear! Paddy will be caught," thought Peter.

It was like Rodman to turn up with an outlandish human creature attending him hand and foot. How the thing came about reads like a lie; it reads like the wildest lie that anybody ever put forward to explain a big yellow Oriental following one about.

But it was no lie. You could not think up a lie to equal the actual things that happened to Rodman. Take the way he died.

The thing began in India. Rodman had gone there to consult with the Marchese Giovanni concerning some molecular theory that was involved in his formulae. Giovanni was digging up a buried temple on the northern border of the Punjab. One night, in an explorer's tent near the excavations, this inscrutable creature walked in on Rodman. No one knew how he got into the tent or where he came from.

Giovanni told about it. The tent flap simply opened, and the big Oriental appeared. He had something under his arm, and laid it in a prayer-carpet. He gave no attention to Giovanni, but he salaamed like a coolie to the little American. "Master," he said, "you were hard to find. I have looked over the world for you."

And he squatted down on the dirty floor by Rodman's camp stool.

DRY FIELD INCREASES QUEENS CREW'S CHANCES

Edmonton Coach Confident, But Would Like Muddy Field—Silver Quality Referees.

Kingston, Dec. 1.—The weather cleared nicely this afternoon after continuous rain the greater part of the night and morning, and indications this morning were that conditions would be experienced tomorrow. In fact, the indications were that tomorrow would be ideal weather for hockey. The rain which fell did not seriously damage the field, because of the heavy coating of straw which had been placed on the playing field and tonight everything was announced to be in readiness for the final game for the Dominion title, in which Queen's hopes to annex the Canadian championship in their tilt with the Edmonton Eskimos.

The Eskimos arrived in the city at 11:30 o'clock tonight, and were met by several Queen's officials, who immediately took them to the Hotel Frontenac, where they at once retired.

The Canadian Rugby Union announced this afternoon that the following officials had been agreed upon for the final game at Kingston tomorrow between Edmonton and Queen's:

FAVOR MOVE TO AID O.H.A. SENIOR TEAMS

Kitchener Fears All Senior Hockey Will Be in Toronto.

Kitchener, Dec. 1.—Kitchener hockey fans are strongly behind the proposed amendment to the O. H. A. playing rules that junior and intermediate players may perform in company senior to their own without incurring their standing in the lower series. The Kitchener Hockey Association, the governing body in the sport hereabouts, is also behind the rule, as it is pointed out that this will do more to build up senior hockey teams outside of Toronto than anything else has ever done. The view is taken that senior hockey outside of the Queen City needs bolstering, or else it will develop into an all-Toronto affair.

Certainly it would strengthen the local senior team very materially, and unless it goes through the latter team will be weak. It is also pointed out that if such a rule had been in force last year the St. Catharines team would have been materially strengthened, as they could have used Carson and Morris in their more important games. This is typical of what the ruling would do in all places outside of Toronto, and would tend to materially strengthen the intermediate and senior teams.

The Kitchener hockey candidates will probably have their first ice practice at Hamilton on Monday night. The Kitchener Intermediate O. H. A. champions will not play in Grimsby on Dec. 15, as previously announced, the Grimsby club declining to pay the local expenses.

The Kitchener team has been invited to play two games in Milwaukee, the first next week and the second Saturday. They will go if the Milwaukee team meets their guarantee, which it is expected they will do.

FOUR EASTERN FOOTBALL TEAMS WENT UNBEATEN

Penn State Will Go to Coast for New Year's Game.

New York, Dec. 1.—Princeton, Cornell, Army and West Virginia finished as the top four teams in the Eastern Football Association. Princeton and Cornell, however, were the only teams to win every game.

In a 9 to 0 victory over Penn yesterday, Princeton's claim for the mythical championship of the east. Cornell did not lose a game, but the team, as the weaker and badly outplayed, Penn eleven stopped it dead time and again.

Notre Dame's defeat at the hands of Nebraska was unexpected. The South Bend eleven stood off the rush of the heavy West Point team, but they were not able to throw back the drive. Nebraska, in the South, Vanderbilt, succeeded in keeping her state and national championship. The University of the South. Claims for the sectional championship probably will be disputed by Georgia Tech and Auburn. Neither had lost a game previously in their own division.

Center came back to life and beat South Carolina by 42 to 0. The North Carolina team won undisputed possession of the Pacific Coast title when the undefeated Oregon eleven, and rival Stanford, defeated Washington State by a 3 to 2 draw by Washington. Stanford has a game scheduled with Pittsburg, Kan., in the Pacific Northwest.

"Battery of Generals" To Handle Ball Starting Garrison Indoor League

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 1.—It is now students of the national pastime. The Professor Sam Crawford, if you please, no longer Wahoo Sam of the big league days. The former star of the Detroit Tigers has been selected to head the National College of Baseball, the purpose of which is to develop ambitious youngsters who have designs on the big leagues.

The College of Baseball was first suggested by Frank Chance, who, with Crawford, will be in charge of the school.

A "battery of generals" is nothing new in military parlance, but a "battery of generals" in the case of the National College of Baseball, is a group of the best players and managers of the game.

SARNIA EXPECTS TO BEAT ST. AIDANS

Newton's Champs Confident of Repeating Today.

SARNIA, Dec. 1.—Sarnia is a high pitch of excitement over today's sudden death final between the local C. I. team, champions last year, and Toronto St. Aidans, for the O. R. F. U. interschool athletic championship.

St. Aidans were freely touted all season as the likely winners of the title, and are admittedly a fast clever crew, but the locals expect to repeat their win of last year, nevertheless.

Jack Newton's squad are in fine shape, though for several days they had to do their training indoors, owing to the depth of snow on the field. Every player is in the pink of condition and ready to play the game of his life.

If the Toronto squad can defeat the Sarnians on the form shown this year, local fans are willing to consider them as one of the finest school teams ever developed.

The field will be soggy, but the locals when they played in almost a foot of snow in London against St. A. teams, showed that slippery or heavy going does not slow up their great open passing style to make the circuit even figures.

Chalmers Presbyterians are seeking an entry into the Church League. Six teams are already in, and the southside church's entry will probably be one of two more to make the circuit even figures.

The schedule for the Manufacturers' and Church League will be held up until the L. A. A. A. decide what they are going to do for ice accommodation. If the suggested changes are made at Westminster on the 10th, the Manufacturers will have to hold their schedule make over.

The Alerts and Manitoulin are going to meet a sweet junior crew.

The Holy Name League will be formed shortly. It is likely that all games will be staged this year out at St. Mary's, and preparations for a good outdoor rink are already under way.

The league last year developed some fine hockey players and a lot of good competition.

Joe Malone, veteran center of the Hamilton club, has not yet sold his signed contract, and it is not by any means certain that he will. Business Manager Thompson feels that everything will work out satisfactorily, but the fact remains that he has not yet made a move that would indicate his desire to get on.

Malone has a position in Montreal, and doesn't care to give up for hockey's sake. He would like to play for Canadians and take part only in their home games.

Malone feels the same way about it when the season gets under way. The Hams will have a big gap to fill at center line.

Quebec, Three Rivers, Montreal and Sherbrooke will operate as the Province of Quebec Hockey League.

Skinner, with a bad knee, and Duncan, with a wrenched shoulder, are likely to be out of the game for Vancouver for some time.

Jack Adams of the Vancouver pros. is coaching Nanaimo High School.

Ottawa has turned Lowrey, Armstrong and Rheame to New Haven, Conn., team.

BILL SHARON $25,000 NAG SELLS FOR $900 AT SALE

New York, Dec. 1.—The sale of Bill Sharon, Canadian trotter (2:09 1/4), for $900 was the surprise of yesterday's session of the Old Glory auction here. Bill Sharon was bought by Thomas Murphy two years ago for $25,000. Peter Earl (2:04 1/4) brought the highest price of the day going to Walter R. Cox, trainer of the grand circuit horses of the Good Time stable of Goshen for $8,100.

The price was $50 more than paid last year for the same horse at the Old Glory sale by J. J. Archibald of Brooklyn. Mary Rose, two-year-old daughter of Hollywood Bob (2:04 1/4), which sold to her credit a win race of 2:14 1/4 over a half-mile track, fetched $5,100, the second highest price of the day. Arthur, four-year-old daughter of Peter Volo (2:02), was sold for $3,700.

Yesterday's aggregate was $5,650 for 31 head, bringing the total to $237,945 for 393 head sold during the three days. There are yet 100 or more to be sold today.

ELGIN RGT. OFFICERS TO PLAY HERE TUESDAY

Local O.B.A. Teams W.O.R.'s-Tunnel City Injured Cup Final Will Be Muddy Going

Only Week Left in Which to Get Crews Shaken Out.

The O. B. A. entries close on Dec. 3, so London has only one week in which to muster three teams, entries for which have been made.

There is plenty of material at the "Y" for juvenile, junior and intermediate teams, and it is probable that the coming week will see them shaken out into teams.

The "rugs" team now operating in the house league at the "Y," would make a good intermediate entry, with the reference to the Y. M. C. A. Goodman, Ernie Dennis and several other good players right on hand.

George Sinclair of the Y. M. C. A. is the convener of the local group. St. Thomas, Woodstock and London is a likely grouping.

RECEIPTS OF O. J. C. SHOW DECREASE

Provincial Levies Amounted To $55,000 During 1922.

Toronto, Dec. 1.—At the annual meeting of shareholders of the Ontario Jockey Club today, President Col. William Hendrie said that notwithstanding the fact that the club had been favored with beautiful weather at both race meetings, the receipts showed a marked decrease. This, in a great measure, was due to the regulation of the federal government regarding the percentage to be deducted in the pari-mutuel department, and also to the new tax of five per cent levied by the provincial government.

Attention was drawn to the amounts paid to and collected for the Ontario government during the last year by the club, which totalled $553,000.

The policy of the Ontario Jockey Club has been to improve the quality of the thoroughbred stallions and placing them in Ontario districts for the purpose of improving light horse breeding. It was stated, had proved very successful. There are twelve of them.

This number will be increased by seven additional horses in 1923. In a few years it is expected that the number will have increased to this province, not only in the breeding of hunters, for which good prices are forthcoming, but in horses for police purposes, express and army horses.

JOE PAGE'S CIRCUIT TO BE CHANGED AROUND

Ottawa, Dec. 1.—Big changes are mooted in the Eastern Canada baseball circuit. Hull is a strong probability for the circuit, replacing Cap De Madeleine. Joe Page, Billy Innes and Ubaldo Rose were in town yesterday, and had a conference with the Ottawa management.

It was announced that Hull would probably play in the circuit next season, and that Sunday baseball would be played in the latter town. President Page is said to have a scheme to include Peterboro, Ont., with another western city. This would make a fairly compact six-club league. In any event, some very interesting developments are expected in league circles in the next two days.

WESTERN 'U' CAGERS PLAY THREE FAST GAMES

Three good games were staged in the Western University Inter-Faculty Cages League last night.

The results: Meds 28 vs. Huron College, 15-5. Arts 23 vs. Arts 25, 12-18. Arts 24 vs. B. A. M. D., 19-18.

W.O.R. DEFEATS PICKED TEAM FROM KIWANIAS

W. O. R. defeated the Kiwanian indoor team 22 to 16 in a fast exhibition game at the armories last night. Bob Wray, veteran indoor pitcher, opposed A. T. Taylor and it was a great deal. Walter Dutton caught Wray and Chantler handled A. T.'s shoots.

SIGN ST. PAUL HOCKEY PRO.

Saskatoon, Dec. 1.—The signing of Wally Elmer, a star of the American Hockey Association, was announced by the Crescent hockey club yesterday. Elmer is a former Kingston boy. "Newsy" Lalonde is expected today.

Players to report so far are: Sam Hebert, Earl Campbell, Oscar Sabourin, Bill Cook, Burnie Rie, Joe Matie, Bill Hicks, Curley Headley and Wally Elmer. Sixteen are to be tried out for the regular berth this winter.

I AM NOT RUNNING FOR SCHOOL TRUSTEE

Although appreciating the confidence placed in me by those who did the nominating, I feel just now it is more important to give London a real jewelry store, where they can express their love with gifts that last from John A. Blinded by the "living screen" of caterpillars hanging by their suspension threads, a motorist recently lost control of his car and ran over a bank.

W. O. R.'s and Sarnia Tunnel City F. C. are due for a muddy tilt today at Tecumseh Park in the sudden death final for the Injured Players' Trophy. The out-of-season ball park across the Thames will be heavy going after players disabled through soccer, as a result of the thaw, but the soccerites are not likely to get better footing this year.

Whatever the going, these two teams on their season's form should just about provide the tightest soccer battle of the year. W. O. R. held Sarnia to a 1 to 1 tie at the border early in the season, winning 2 to 2 in the return game here, but the border outfit has had a hard season since then, having made strengthening changes and they'll push the local cup-collectors to the limit.

Expect Big Crowd. Probably the biggest soccer crowd of the year will see the kick-off at 3 o'clock sharp. The Injured Players' Cup provides a competition which it is hoped in a few short seasons will build up a fund that will adequately look after players disabled through soccer. Soccer, perhaps, has more exponents among married men than any other sport, and disability is a serious matter for many of the players, and one which the governing body, quite properly, believes the men who keep the "dribbling code" going, should not have to face without the prospect of some financial assistance.

The W. O. R. will use the line-up they've been using all year, and the following players will play: Nudds, Ashton and Dennis, Whitworth, Croft, Short, Taylor, Turner, Ridley, Perkins and Woods.

Sanatorium Gets Grant of $4,000

Karl Homuth, M.P.P., Instrumental in Securing Aid For Freeport Institution.

Special to The Advertiser.

Gait, Dec. 1.—Through the efforts of Karl Homuth M. P. P., the provincial government has made a grant of $4,000 to the Freeport Sanatorium, operated by the Waterloo County Health Association. The local member has been advised by Hon. H. C. Nixon, provincial secretary, of the passing of the grant.

Only 13 building permits were issued during November, bringing the total for the past 11 months to 228, representing an expenditure of $410,815.50. While this amount is behind that of last year for the same period, the permit for the new collegiate addition is to be taken out in a few days, which will put the 1922 record far ahead of last year's figure. The ground is being staked out for the collegiate addition, and excavation work will start immediately.

The collections of customs and excise duties at the local port for the month of November amounted to $117,184, an increase of $16,655.54, which, while not large shows from monthly returns a steady improvement in local industrial conditions.

Row Cowan, 22, city, pleaded guilty before Magistrate Blake to a charge of housebreaking with intent to rob, and was remanded until Tuesday for further investigation. Cowan lay Wednesday afternoon entered the home of M. A. Secord, K.C., when his rap at the door failed to bring a response, but his presence was later discovered, and he escaped without any loot. He was arrested Thursday night.

To date, Galtonians have subscribed $828 as an appeal to the Humane Society for relief of the suffering animals of Northern Ontario.

ALLEGED "VEIL DANCE" CAUSES ARREST OF 81

Special to The Advertiser.

New York, Dec. 1.—The performance of an alleged "veil dance" in a lofty building here landed 81 people in the police court. Seventy-two men were fined $10 each, and seven men and two women were held in $1,000 bail, charged with being principals in an alleged "immoral show."

The police seized a phonograph and films of what they allege to be a "veil dance" in the building. They say the women were about to put on the "veil dance" as they entered.

HUMILIATED BY DISGRACE PRISONER ENDS OWN LIFE

Montreal, Dec. 1.—Humiliated beyond endurance by the disgrace of going to jail for a crime of which he swore he was innocent, Solomon Bart, aged 35, an express-wagon driver, this afternoon committed suicide in his cell in the courthouse by swallowing a quantity of potassium cyanide.

This morning Bart was found guilty by Judge Decarie in the court of special sessions of being in possession of stolen goods, and of being a felon, which he was taken to the cells to await sentence.

POLICE RECAPTURE LAST OF ESCAPED PRISONERS

Marquette, Mich., Dec. 1.—Eddie Weisman, Detroit bandit, and his pal, Philip Salanardi, last of the group of 15 prisoners who escaped from the branch prison here last Sunday, were recaptured by a posse of 100 state police, prison authorities and local officers today in a thicket near Rapid City, Delta County, Salanardi, after his capture was guarded by 40 men armed with rifles. He had not eaten for five days.

Your best friend lives right here

CANADA is a rich market for the national advertiser when the daily newspaper is a vital part of his merchandising organization. It is a business graveyard for those who look far afield for miraculous help.

When your special salesmen, window dressers and sampling crews are building up sales in our trading area this month what possible effect has "national" circulation a thousand miles away on their effort, except to add the burden of wasted dollars to the product they sell.

With consistent intelligence you use this circulation to carry today's selected message today. If tonight's conference reveals tomorrow's big problem, tomorrow's newspaper will meet the task. This kind of advertising is not easy. It is not "publicity." It is controlled and directed merchandising force.

"The flexibility of newspaper advertising and the choice it presents of the amount, class and location of circulation enable the advertiser quickly to direct his campaign wherever and whenever it is most needed," says The Canadian Shredded Wheat Co., Ltd.

Your good product, intelligently merchandised with the help of the daily newspaper, will widen its market faster than production can keep pace with the increase.

Double Vaudeville Program At Grand Theatre Each Night

Commencing Monday, Theatre Enters Upon New Policy—Features Rodolph Valentino.

So popular has the Grand Opera House vaudeville program become with the patrons of that theatre that the management has decided to play three complete vaudeville programs at that house commencing on Monday. To do this it becomes necessary to change the order on which the shows will be run. The policy of three shows daily will be continued with daily matinees at 2 o'clock, and evening performances at 7 and 9. At the matinees the new real and comedy will be run first, followed by the vaudeville program, and ending with the feature picture.

In the evening the same order will be followed. The Pathe Review, topics and comedy will open from 7 o'clock to 7:34. The vaudeville acts start at 7:34, and continue until 8:23, when the feature picture comes on, and runs until 9:28.

The second show opens with Pathe Review and the topics, immediately on the conclusion of the feature, and the second evening vaudeville program starts at 8:46, continuing until 9:28, and closing with the comedy.

Under this arrangement early comers can see the entire program and still be out of the theatre by 9:23, while those coming as late as 8:23, have a whole show waiting for them between that time and 10:13.

For the first half of next week the feature picture will be Rodolph Valentino in "The Delicious Little Demon," and the vaudeville bill headed by Mack Long and Wheeler in a comedy singing and dancing number, includes such well-known acts as Happ Simpson, comedy barrel jumper; Dillon and Carson versatile duo; Ed and May Tenney, ventriloquial novelty, and Bartino and Pets, a delightful canine novelty act.

Late returns of the civic election contests will be announced from the stage on Monday evening.

VALENTINO COMES TO GRAND THEATRE

Has One Pet Peeve—Abhors His Name Spelt "Rodolph."

Although Rodolph Valentino, the handsome young actor who is appearing with Mae Murray in "The Delicious Little Demon" at the Grand Theatre Monday, Thursday and Wednesday, was born in Tarator, he seldom displays that fiery temper which is accepted as characteristic of the Italian race. But there is one sure way to rouse his ire, and that is by spelling his first name Rodolph instead of Rodolph. Valentino is the son of a captain in the Italian army, and he was himself attached to the Italian Flying Corps, conducting experiments in hazardous air stunts at Minola, and he naturally dislikes the Teutonic spelling of his given name.

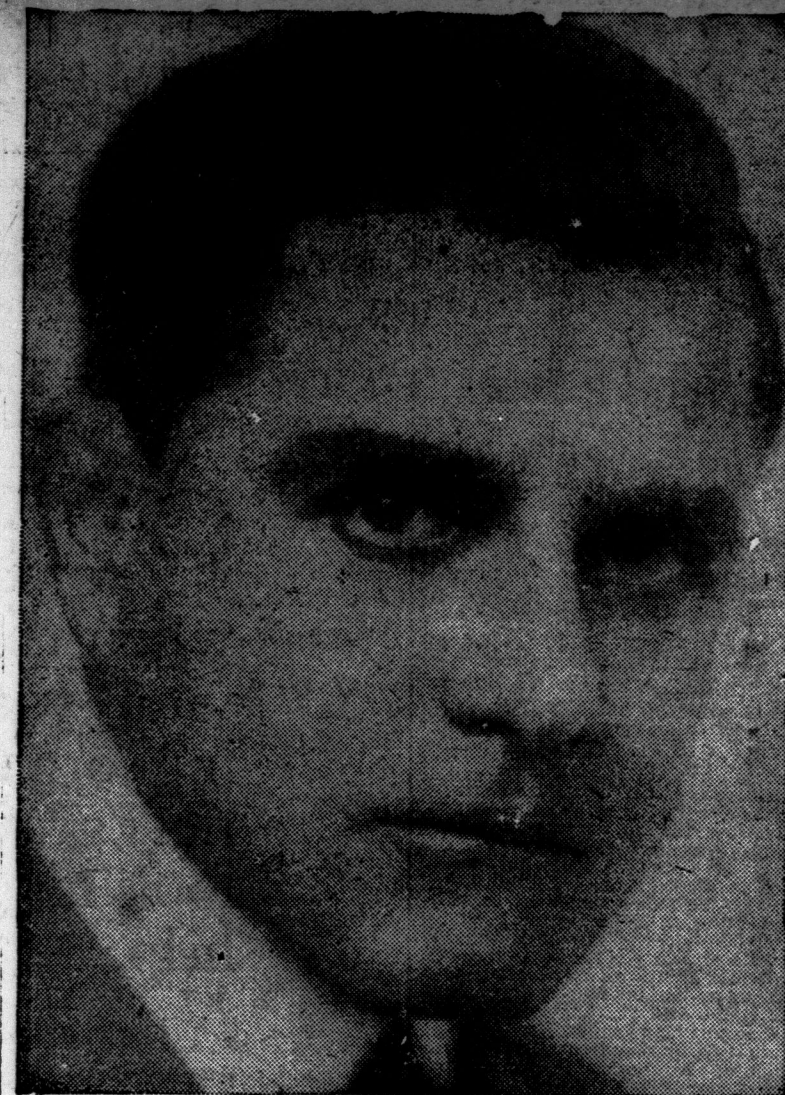

Valentino began his public career as an automobile racer in Italy, winning second honors in a race between Naples and Rome in 1908, at the age of 16. His first stage appearance in America was as a dancer in New York, and for two years he toured the country as Joan Sawyer's dancing partner. He sang and danced in musical comedy for a season, and rounded out his stage career by a year with the Alcazar Stock Company in San Francisco.

Universal gave him his first opportunity in pictures. As the lover of Mae Murray in this picture he has one of the best roles of his screen career.

NEW CROOK PLAY STARS BERT LYTELL AT GRAND

Latter Half of Week Will Bring "Alias Ladyfingers" to London.

"Alias Ladyfingers," which opens at the Grand on Thursday for three days, presents a new sort of crook play, with Bert Lytell as the star. It is an artistic ensemble of love and crime so cunningly interwoven as to make a powerful drama. And Bayard Veiller, the director, who by his famous stage hits proved his ability to judge dramatic values correctly, has scored again, this time in the silent drama.

BERT LYTELL

The favorite screen star in "Alias Ladyfingers," at the Grand Theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week.

In this story of Jackson Gregory's life as adapted by Lenore J. Coffey for Metro, the orphaned child of a family of wealth is trained by a notorious safe-breaker to follow that line of precarious livelihood. The youth becomes an expert, and because of his slim and delicate hands, is known as "Alias Ladyfingers."

He is much wanted by the police, who learn that he is being sought as the heir of his rich grandmother. The youth, knowing nothing of this relationship, visits the home of the old lady, intent upon playing his professional talents, and is informed by her of the relationship. So far from welcoming the chance to live in peace and security with the girl of his love, he determines to work out his own salvation.

Mr. Lytell portrays the character of the crook with dramatic power, while Ora Carew, as the trusting sweetheart, was altogether delightful. Others in the cast include Frank Elliott, Edythe Chapman, DeWitt Jennings and Stanley Goethals. Arthur Martindale photographed it, while the art direction was by A. E. Freudenman.

MAJESTIC SHOWS HOUSE MAX BUILT

Goldwyn Picture To Be Presented Next Week With "Go Get 'Em, Hutch" Serial.

For "Be My Wife," the Goldwyn release coming to the Majestic Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday Max Linder has built a trick house, with revolving floors and every conceivable mechanical twist that could be devised. In it a man may walk into a dining-room, close his eyes for a mere second, and when he opens them he will be in an entirely different room—a bedroom perhaps, or a kitchen. It is one of Max Linder's own conceptions and was erected by G. A. Hollocher, art director, who added some unique decorations in the way of murals.

The famous war dog "Pals" is featured in the coming with Max Florence Vidor, well known in London, will be seen in the big fashion revue, "Woman, Wake Up."

Married after a very brief courtship, Monte finds Anne too domesticated for his gay tastes, and she finds him too frivolously inclined for her simple tastes. She knows that she cannot entirely adapt him to her ways of life, and she does not want to adapt herself to his. She thinks there should be a meeting ground at a happy medium.

So she learns to dance the modern steps, dresses ravishly, frequents gay cabarets and goes twining with her husband's best friend, Henry Mortimer. She overdoes it so as to awaken Monte. Monte gets fendishly jealous, and finally decides that his wife is more charming as her natural, home-loving self, than when imitating some of his gay friends. The big serial "Go Get 'Em, Hutch," Episode No. 6, and a Lloyd comedy will be shown. Vaudeville is now being shown, which, along with Majestic orchestra, makes big evening's show of value and variety.

RUDOLPH VALENTINO
Favorite screen star, who appears with Mae Murray in "The Delicious Little Demon" at the Grand Theatre the first half of next week.

On Tuesday, Dec. 5, in St. Peter's Parish Hall, a musical and pantomime will be given by the pupils of St. Angela's College Schools of Music and Elocution. Parents and friends interested will be given an opportunity of witnessing the musical attainment of the students of St. Angela's. After the program, His Lordship Bishop Fallon will award the gold and silver medals to those who obtained the highest standing in the different grades at the last examination, as set by the Toronto Conservatory of Music, with which institution St. Angela's School of Music is affiliated.

The program promises to be varied and highly entertaining. There will be presented piano solos, duets, quartets, etc., while violin, vocal and piano pupils will take part in songs, etc.

A leading feature of the evening's entertainment will be a pantomime.

MISCHA ELMAN,
distinguished violin virtuoso, who will play in the Patricia Theatre, December 18.

"The Raising of the Daughter of Jairus," of especial interest, as this is the first public appearance of the pupils of St. Angela's School of Elocution. The pantomime characters are: Jairus, the ruler, Miss Ruth White; the daughter of Jairus, Miss Helen Long; while Misses Mary Burns, Antoinette Gillies and Dorothy Hart are also among the leading characters. The reading will be done by Miss Mary Turner, while the music for the pantomime will be rendered by Misses Leona Murphy and Marion Sharpe, violinists, and Miss Bernadette Murphy, pianist.

Preparations are being made for a very effective tableau at the conclusion of the pantomime. The program commences at 8 o'clock.

MISCHA ELMAN TO COME TO LONDON

Great Violinist Will Play in Patricia Theatre, December 18.

The New York Tribune, in reviewing a concert by Mischa Elman, the great Russian violinist, who is to play here on Monday, Dec. 18, at the Patricia Theatre, called special attention to the Ernst Concerto which the violinist offered. It is a most difficult work and Mr. Krebbs, the Tribune's noted critic, said: "The composition is so surcharged with difficulties that it is a terror to most violinists."

"Mr. Elman's playing of it must have left the violinists who heard him well nigh breathless, for he tossed off cascades of double stops like glittering jewels, thrown out by hand."

The New York Press also enthused about the same concerto as follows:

STOCKS REGAIN LOST STRENGTH

Recovery Proves Depression
Due to Inside Influence
Only—Bonds Improve.

By STUART P. WEST.
Special to The Advertiser.

New York, Dec. 1.—The stock market was definitely strong again today, but still without any development in the outside situation.

All that the day's operations signified was the correctness of the view that the selling movement which culminated at the outset of the week was carried to an extreme because of over-pressed individual operators who were obliged to unload regardless of the sacrifice involved and regardless of any consideration of values.

What has happened since then has been a natural readjustment upward, the sort of reaction which always comes when the forced liquidation is over.

To that extent the advance represented the covering in of short contracts put on a week ago and to what extent it was the result of new buying, was hard to say, but at least it was quite apparent that the recovery of the market was due to something more substantial than merely a retroactive recovery.

This market standing on solid ground again, the reaction of the rise was resumed in numerous directions. There was no attempt to bid up prices after the extravagant fashion of the recent market. Buying and selling was conducted cautiously and without any display of activity.

The bond market was also generally better, but without any indication of the renewal of the main advance which was interrupted by the announcement of the government financing in the middle of September, coming at a time when funds had begun to be diverted from the investment market into trade channels.

The foreign exchanges were another quarter in which speculators for the decline were willing to admit a check. Sterling drew close to its bid, and so did Italian lire, the latter up fully a cent from the extreme low on October, just before the political overture. French francs crossed the 7-cent level again.

Life and Character Reading.

DECEMBER 2.
The governing sign of this date is Sagittarius, the sign of the archer and the last sign of the fire triplicity. The governing planet is Jupiter, and the birthstone is a diamond or turquoise.

These people are born busy and keep busy at all times. They are distinguished for their energy and business and keeping their own secrets. They do not trouble their neighbors about their affairs, but they do and are exceedingly active in their own.

These people always finish one thing before they begin another, and are as remarkable for their carefulness as their activity. They are for their carelessness.

These people are enterprising and progressive, as well as fast-moving. This is a good time to have your car overhauled and ready for the driving season. The Want Ads will direct you to the most capable and efficient mechanics.

Life and Character Reading.

DECEMBER 3.
People born on this date are very promiscuous in an emergency, but frequently are timid and afraid when there is no need for action or quick thought. An emergency is an inspiration. They are not very careful in money matters, saving but not penurious.

It is seldom that you find a Sagittarius man or woman without money. They have varied talents which they can turn to and make a bit extra when it is needed.

Women of this date are splendid housekeepers, excellent wives and usually judicious mothers. They have a great love for children and animals.

The governing planet of this date is Jupiter. The governing sign is Sagittarius, the sign of the archer, and the birthstone is a diamond.

Watch the Want Ads this week. You will be surprised to know the knowledge they contain. It is how easy it is to follow their dictates when in need of anything.

DODGE BROTHERS USED CARS

It has been said that the only way to make real money in the Used Car business is to sell them "as is."

That may be a good way to make money—for a short time—but it is not a good way to make friends. We figure that if we get the friends, the profit will take care of itself.

Remember: A used car is only as good as the firm with which you deal
