

Verdi will write no more operas. When McCahan was on the New York Herald, Bennett reduced his salary one-half, and put him under the orders of an unpopular editor, McCahan at once abandoned the Herald and soon went on the staff of the London Daily News.

The English public rejoices in the rumor that Stanley leaves for Italy on his return. The man who tries to flirt with me," remarks Dr. Mary Walker, "may escape a kicking, but if he does he will have to run far and fast."

Probably Edison's epithet will be "the man who was talked to death."

The stamps of the Earl of Rosebery and Mrs. Hannah, which were sold at auction in Washington in lots of $20,000. But then that family has lots of stamps.

Mookey and Sankey will venture to take Washington now that Congress has adjourned.

The Chicago Times thinks that Bruce, the colored Senator from Mississippi, should be placed on all whitewashing committees.

The King of Belgium has offered to pay the expenses of another African trip and Stanley has accepted the leadership of the expedition.

Ex-Senator Eugenie is just like other good looking, vivacious widows. She declares she will never marry.

The oldest trustee of the Chicago High School, Dr. Willard, of the Chicago High School, for the sake of pupils' eyes, should be tided with a pinkish, greenish or bluish tint, and the bluish tint is the best, as it is the least objectionable. He adds that it is a mistake to think that the board must be black to make the chalk-boards clear. It is not the color of the ink and comfort to the eye may seem slight, it amounts to a great deal taking day after day.

The library of the late John Forster, the biographer of Dickens, was sold last week.

The Eastern man bound out for Paris in a skill has been heard from on a long boat, a boat that is a big fool.

It is to be hoped that there is something in the Indian rumors. Potter, the wheelbarrow trundler, has reacted in Boston on $52,500 at the Derby.

Real genuine modesty is always best. George F. Train don't like N. P. Banks because of his marrying a girl who is really wealthy. "I was standing with him in the Fifth Avenue Hotel the other evening, and he continually looked at me with a stare that I could not understand. It never occurred to him that I, and not he, was the object of attention."

There are some sad things in this life. The editor of the Boston (Vt.) Monitor, who aided in securing the passage of the fish and game law, was fined $10 and costs the other way for violation of the act.

Prof. Fawcett, the blind M. P., is passionately fond of fishing and hunting.

Elizabeth W. Tschick, daughter of the man who was married in Boston for an attempt upon the life of Frederick William IV., of Prussia, lives in New York, a divorced woman, and is now married to a man who is a devotee of that shore with her mean and delicate talk.

The Canadian think Hamilton is a gentleman. A lady assists to manage the editorial and business affairs of the New Orleans Picayune.

An Indiana druggist has drawn $50,000 in lottery.

A Garibaldi gets 600 letters a week.

It is a bright and standing marvel how the keen little doctor, Oliver Wendell Holmes, could pry among the hearts of his brethren and world-famous as a witty poet, can keep up such a perennial freshness in his sparkling verse. He is now in his 60th year, and for thirty years he has been called upon to furnish the life and sparkle of every meeting of the Harvard Club, and he never declines.

A Scotch physician, who has for many years lived in Rome, had an interview with the Emperor of Austria, and he was so impressed that he has written a book on the subject. "Never had I seen such a change in any human being, unless produced by some physical illness." Cardinal Caprara, a tall, erect, well-built figure, his presence imposing, his gesture commanding, his voice sonorous and vibrating. Lord XIII. is a benevolent man, and his hand is always open to the poor, and the glance of the eye unctuous and suspicious.

Female Names.

We would enter a mild protest against the tendency to pare down all feminine Christian names into insignificant diminutives. It is a wonderful thing that a woman, the sign of all that is pure, tender and grand in womanhood, should have its place usurped by the insignificant names of the nursery.

Life is more precious than a few cents earned at the risk these symptoms imply.

It is now all but certain that there is not going to be war. Lord Beaconsfield has carried out substantially the programme of his great rival. Practically all the European provinces are to be absolutely free from his control, and from all tribute. The rest are to be allowed a stage on the road to absolute freedom. Britain is to get Cyprus, if Russia insist upon Batoum, and Turkey is to carry out the Anatolian territories. The reforms that Britain may regard as necessary. A railway is to be made from the Mediterranean to the valley of the Euphrates, over the Gulf of Persia. It will be the chief authority. All, in short, is to be made serene, and to be kept so, if possible. We sincerely hope it may.

Children's Bedrooms.

Lady Barker recommends airy bedrooms for children. The fondest and the most fastidious do not always understand that the most careful attention and simple rules depend on the structure of children's spines. The strength of their limbs, their freedom from coughs and colds, and in fact their general health, depend on the position of their spines. So that unless the atmosphere of the room is pure, the quality of the air is good, and the texture of the bedclothes soft, they will be taken into consideration, it is only half their existence which is being cared for.

A Rabal partnership is at a discount in Memphis, Tenn., where the most popular politician, an "Orange and out" Radical Republican, a German Reformer, a National, an Irishman's Party man, a colored Republican and a Temperance candidate, they have to send the ticket to Buffalo to get it printed, for it had as many stripes as an adult zebra.

True politeness is perfect ease and freedom. It is simply a habit of treating others as you love to be treated yourself.

A prompt and general manner, like a response in church, testified to the unanimity of which we declined this kind of visitation.

"Oh, but I will take no refusal," insisted Mrs. Seymour. "You cannot possibly have any engagement, I am sure, that will prevent me from going."

There was no thing to be done but to surrender. This determined lady—don't deny that one of us was very reluctant prisoner—and our tragedy was converted into a farce, and we were matched down the narrow path, two and two, in some order, what ludicrous procession—first Edward and Miss Grey, then Count Waldemar and Mrs. Seymour, the latter ineffectually striving to conceal his murderous implements under an overcoat; finally Mrs. Seymour and myself.

"Well, Mr. Clifford," began Mrs. Seymour, as soon as we were fairly under way.

"Of course I saw that she knew what we had been about."

"I should have believed this of a great many people—of Count Waldemar, for instance, who is a foreigner, or of the Countess, who has lived so much abroad—but not of you."

"Go on, blame me, and you will be quite as innocent as I am. I am not a very good person, but I have long since given up self-defense as a matter of course."

"I am glad to hear that," said Mrs. Seymour, "but I am sure you are not a very good person, but I have long since given up self-defense as a matter of course."

On the vexed question of Protection vs. Free Trade, the Standard has published a notable book, severely reprinted by Adams Smith's claims as the creator of political economy.

Some very fine pianos in Chicago had an average of 100 notes per hour. The pianos that were rented for purposes of profit were the most valuable.

Marvelous Shooting.

"That's just what it is—the wonderful! The phrase on every soldier's lips in Derby Park, after Dr. Carver had shown a new phase of his skill in rifle and shotgun shooting."

"This is just for practice, gentlemen," Dr. Carver remarked, "but I have just shot 40 glass balls out of 50. Up with 'em, Col. O'Connell!"

Dr. Fletcher shot with a barrel twenty feet distant and threw up a glass ball, then another and another in almost a perpendicular line."

"I am glad, at all events, to be able to state that, when I saw the Countess and her party at the London, a few days since, they both looked remarkably cheerful and contented."

Dr. Carver's keen brown eyes (dashed, but not a pigeon shooter, and did not accept challenges outside of my line.)

No one dreamed that Dr. Carver was to perform a feat in marksmanship never equaled by any other man in the world.

"I could only have shot like that," Dr. Carver said, "if I had had a gun like yours."

A silver tobacco-box, full of fine cut, was opened by the doctor, and he scattered the contents on the heads of the spectators.

"Never mind," said Dr. Carver, "the second shot will be a prize for the man who will stand on both sides of the angle of men, at the apex of which the marksmen stand."

"Give me the man his glass," Dr. Carver said, "and I will show you how to use it."

"The Colonel and Jack took six glass balls apiece, and standing thirty feet from each other and from Dr. Carver, they began to shoot."

"Some rapid shooting came next. A stop on the part of the first shot was a success. Out of 119 shots there were 19 misses."

To exhibit rapidity of firing, a pistol was thrown up, and five shots were fired at it before it struck the ground."

"Did you notice that shot off from the hip?" asked the doctor, "but I shall get over that. As for you, your wrist is not so steady as it should be."

"I am glad to hear that," said Mrs. Seymour, "but I am sure you are not a very good person, but I have long since given up self-defense as a matter of course."

Everybody, to their sorrow, knows what street cars are. They are vehicles demagogically designed, with a minimum capacity for carrying passengers, in the smallest possible space, with the least expenditure of motive power, and with the greatest possible amount of discomfort.

Stroke.

It is surprising that the excessive heat of the past few days has not resulted in a case of stroke among the public. There are, of course, more instances of prostration by heat than are reported, but it is not so common as it used to be.

Do not check perspiration. Drink freely of water, and wash thoroughly from head to heel, on rising and on retiring to bed.

If you have to work where artificial heat is employed, insist on thorough ventilation.

When much fatigued, do not go to work if a feeling of fatigue, dizziness, headache, or other symptoms are present. Life is more precious than a few cents earned at the risk these symptoms imply.

Should any one be overcome by the heat, send at once for a good physician. Meanwhile, give the patient a few drops of water, and if the patient is in case of fainting, give a few drops of ammonia.
