OUR MONTREAL LETTER.

Montreal, Nov. 15th, 1900.
DEAR REPORTER.—Someone has said somewhere, "you must take the people as you find them."

The people of Western Canada, that is, the majority of them, have a very wrong conception of the French "Habitant." I have heard it repeated that they are a low class of humanity. This is not the case, however, but very different. They are a clean, genteel folk, kind and obliging, manly, courteous, very reserved and, like the Scotch, peculiarly clamish. This was demonstrated in the recent campaign in Quebec. The French voted for French, irrespective of party or politics.

The manners and customs of the Quebec Habitant are very different from those of his western neighbor, and, in fact, you need not go out of the city of Montreal to notice the difference. St. Lawrence Main street seems to be the dividing line. West of this street, Montreal is made up of English speaking people of all sorts—gentlemen, dukes, merchants (retail and wholesale), bankers, brokers, commission men, crooks, swindlers, embezzlers and abandoned "Yanks." It is the custom in the west end to watch out for crooks, street cars and policemen. East of St. Lawrence Main street is found the Frenchman in all his glory. The features are Frenchmen, moccasins, clay pipes, "whiskey blanc" (white whiskey), two wheeled carts, noise (which they call conversation), and French "tobac," which you may smell two miles and a half against the wind, but should the wind be in the "tobac's" favor they say the limit to scent its fragrance, which is very balmy, is Cornwall, forty-eight miles. It is the custom on the east side to dodge French girls, French men, French women, coal cars and board bills (if you can), but they had been beaten by other crooks so badly before my arrival I fear I shall be unable to be very successful at board dodging.

Every day is alike to the "Habitant." Of course on Sunday he goes to church, or mass, as they term it, and I might say that it is not necessary for him to look around very much to find a church. Churches in Montreal are not one here and there; no, indeed. There will be two here, four in the middle and six or seven over there. Some of the chief features of Montreal are its churches and its lazy ministers, all denominations being represented, that is, as far as the lazy clergymen are concerned, and like the most of other ministers in other places, they live by "gab" and interfering with other people's business. Let us hope for the day when we will get more out of those fine big well fed fellows than "gab." What fine stone-masons they would make, or anything that requires a lubber-lift.

Well, as I said, the Habitant goes to mass in the morning, after which everything goes on as if nothing serious had happened. He goes fishing, hunting, baseball and lacrosse games, dances, fights, plays "de Fid"; goes to the Sunday theatres, music halls etc. On Sunday night he goes to "Sohmer Park," where a great round-up, so to speak, takes place, or a first class show for ten cents. At Sohmer Park there is a beautiful band which is called La Veign's Band. The musicians are mostly all foreign people. The large building will seat three thousand people, and when the program commences there is not standing room. It is open every Sunday afternoon and evening. Another chief pastime of the young or Frenchmen and "femme" (girls) is going out in the country for "teu hav' leete tam." From six to eight boys and girls will crowd into a coal cart to which is hitched a French pony, about two sizes larger than a whiskered billy goat, and away they'll go, bumpy-bump, enjoying the elastic springs of a soft maple cart-axle, and call it fun.

They all use carts. It is a rare thing to find a Habitant owning a four-wheeled vehicle. Should a farmer or a city carter be well enough off to own a team, he will not hitch his team together to a wagon, but instead he will get two carts, hitch a horse to each cart, drive one and tow the other. The hind horse becomes cute in time and will lag on the chain by which he is led, or at least towed, for I have seen them striding along on the pavement the lead horse doing all the work drawing both loads of coal, Habitant, extra horse and all. Should the tow horse be caught in his laziness, it is an occasion for French which I fear I dare not write, could I do so, but which he (the horse) seems to understand far better than I ever hope to. You can always tell a horse that has been in tow by the length of his neck, and furthermore, there is a backward tendency to his gait.

The French language has many conveniences, one of which is the exclusive possession of Frenchmen. They can all talk at once and they do, especially the women. Talk about women talking! Sir, we are blessed when compared with the Frenchmen in regard to our women folks talking. The ordinary French woman can utter more words to the minute than a hungry redheaded woodpecker can put raps on a grub-containing hemlock stub on a frosty morning. We should congratulate ourselves that our good women do not talk French.

Sir, a few words about child labor in this city and I have finished.

My attention has been drawn to the number of children at work. You will see them at six o'clock in the grey, damp morning, with their scanty meal done up in a bit of news paper, hurrying to the factories. It does not seem so hard for the boys, but the slender little girls, rain or shine, feeling well or ill, going to work, the most of them in their early teens. They have to work ten hours a day, sixty hours a week, having to face a surly boss, a paltry wage, a scanty meal, a common and coarse raiment for what is but a bare existence. No wonder the price of virtue is so very low. I asked myself the question—"Could not something be done to better their ways and means—could not schools and places be provided where they might receive an education or a housekeeping training to fit them for future usefulness?" I think it would be doing God's work to convert some of those churches into schools and homes for poor and deserving girls. Thousands of dollars are sent out of this country every year to educate and civilize the heathen, and would-be educators, willing to accompany the dimes—would be educators, wearing a solemn, vacation face, and female saints with faces drawn and contorted through sanctimonious looks for the poor, benighted heathen until their countenances look like the skull and cross bones on a medical college flag, they cannot see the noble work to be done at home. Oh, ye of little worth, never mind the half-devil Chinese. I would not give one of our Canadian girls for a whole Pacific steamship cargo of their clout-colored, pig-tailed carcasses. Let us take care of our own deserving girls—they are the hope of our fair Dominion. There is a chance for some woman to leave her name immortal to the world through work in the city of Montreal.

The Prohibition Vote.

Asked as to his opinion of the effect of the prohibition vote in the recent election, Hon. Hugh John McDonald is reported as saying: "I am sorry to say that, judging from this election, what is commonly called the prohibition vote is a myth. I am afraid that the men who talk prohibition are first Liberals or Conservatives then after that prohibitionists. The result has proved that there is no such thing as purely prohibition vote, I believe the result also means a set back for prohibition, from which it will not recover within the next twenty years. Politicians are only human, we only learn by experience, and they are so human that my experience will teach them not to sacrifice themselves for the sake of a party which deserts them at the polls. The liquor men know where they stand, and no liquor man will sacrifice his interests simply because it is his party which is doing it. The trouble is the prohibitionists vote with their political party, and the liquor men, both Liberal and Conservative, vote and work against the party which favors prohibition. In the future the prohibitionists may thank themselves if neither of the great political parties consent to take up their cause." Mr. McDonald expressed his intention of resuming law practice, and says he will not re-enter local politics.

THE ECONOMIC FEED COOKER
A grand Success

Read what Practical Pig-raisers Say About It!

James Loucks, Yonge Front, says: "I know that I have saved fully 25 per cent by feeding cooked roots to my pigs last fall."

Wm. Byers, Prescott Road, says: "I fed 60 pigs last fall on cooked roots and saved my bacon; although prices were low, I made some money on them. The only trouble was the Cooker was too small (40 gals)—had to cook several batches a day."

Israel Stevens, Delta, says: "The Economic Feed Cooker is a grand thing; but the 40 gal. size is too small for to feed a large herd of pigs."

In order to meet the demand for the large size, I have procured patterns and am prepared to furnish them to order up to 100 gals. These Cookers are made with grate-bars and ash-pit below. The fire-box can be lined with brick, ensuring safety and economy of fuel. I also make the No. 40, same as last season.

THIS ORIGINAL DOCUMENT IS VERY RARE

THE QUEEN'S TOKEN

"Wonderful, indeed. Only himself and the Prior, says the writer, are in possession of this knowledge, and he records it that it may, at their respective deaths, pass into the keeping of some individual thereby solemnly and religiously charged with the fulfilment of the trust, called upon for such fulfillment, and if not, with the maintenance of the secret, and its day transmission in the appointed order of that secret, as the narrative, Mr. Vaughan paused.

herein described, so that, seeing it is not consecrated, nor hath at any time been used in the service of the altar, it may, if need be, be sold or pawned to satisfy for the profit of the community."

"Blanche," said Mr. Vaughan to the girl, who had sat speechless, stricken with a double amazement, "the reading of this document, 'your ruby heart is the Queen's Token'."

Not of early death, with all its poetic allurement, had the phantom music of Cyprina's bells whispered to Blanche Tredehlyn, but of a long life, useful, calm and happy. A solitary life according to the world's notion, but the world and she had never little in common; a life without close ties, but rich in the love and companionship of the poor, and the esteem of her "own people."

This, if any serious discussion of the matter could be possible—"I feel this to be the most serious moment in my life, Colonel Ramsey," said Blanche, "and we can test it no further to-night."

When Blanche returned from the log drive to which she had condemned herself and Gemma, an act in which that young lady discerned the first want of consideration for her, of which her friend had ever been guilty.

Those which remain, we shall be able to calculate the whereabouts of the others by the spaces. I think we are getting at the truth, Mr. Vaughan, but we can test it no further to-night."

When Blanche returned from the log drive to which she had condemned herself and Gemma, an act in which that young lady discerned the first want of consideration for her, of which her friend had ever been guilty.

THE MACAULAY CENTENARY.

Beautiful Old House in Which the Historian Was Born. October 25, 1900, marked the hundredth anniversary of the birth of Thomas Babington Macaulay. The future historian, says the London Illustrated News, was born on a remarkable day for England, for October 25 was already famous as the birthday of Chaucer and the birthday of Agincourt. Lord Macaulay first saw the light at Rothley Temple, the Leicestershire home of the Babingtons. "There," says Sir George Trevelyan records, "in a room paneled from ceiling to floor, like a very corner of the ancient mansion, with oak almost black from age, looking eastward across the park and southward through an ivy-shaded window into a little garden, Lord Macaulay was born." From that picturesque seat of his kindred, the historian, on being raised to the peerage, took his territorial designation, Rothley Temple was formerly the property of the Harcourts, then a Preceptory of the Knights Templars, and at the dissolution of the monasteries, passed into the hands of the Babingtons.

They Seldom See Money. It is hard to realize that in the mountainous state of Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and North Carolina there are many places where money is almost unknown, and skins of wild animals, butter and eggs and other commodities are still exchanged for coffee and sugar and calico. A recent visitor in this region tells about seeing coon, squirrel and rabbit skins passed over the counter of the country store in exchange for groceries. The owner of the store said that sometimes he never saw any money for months at a time. Four times a year hide buyers come out from Lexington and take the skins off his hands. Then he sends the money to Cincinnati for a new stock of goods.

IN CASE OF FIRE.

Value of Presence of Mind Not Easily Over-estimated.

"Presence of mind and a few buckets of water" were the two desiderata in case of a fire, as we are told by a writer in the Paris Cosmos (April 28). The former is a matter partly of temperament and partly of training; the latter everyone may and should have on hand. The writer does not believe that dependence can be placed on chemical extinguishers or hand-pumps, although they have done good service. The great thing is to realize that much may be done to extinguish a fire by ordinary means in a few seconds, and that these few moments of grace are almost always at one's disposal, no matter how imminent the danger. Says the writer— "In fire, danger, immediate though it may seem, is never instantaneous. There are always a few minutes in which to seek for a means of safety."

STEREOTYPED ADVERTISING PHRASES.

"I do not yet understand why Gemma was not told before," said Colonel Ramsey, when the delighted, bewildered girl had heard the story, and seen the treasure; "for if one portion of it be more wonderful than another, it is the presence of the last of the De Valmonts under your roof at the time of the discovery; it is the clearing up of the family mystery."

HAVE YOU ASTHMA?

A Severe Case of Chronic Asthma, Which Would Yield to No Other Treatment, Cured by Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed Turpentine. The symptoms of asthma are keenly distressing and are not easily confused with those of any other ailment. The victim is suddenly aroused by an intense anguish in the chest, the breathing is accompanied by a loud wheezing, the face becomes flushed and bathed in perspiration; he gasps for air, believing that each moment may be his last. After those paroxysms, which may last for hours, the patient usually falls asleep to arise next day weak, languid and debilitated. Dr. Chase's treatment for asthma consists in the combined use of two of his remedies, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Asthma is a nervous disease, and the attacks are brought on by some irritation of the nerves along the air passages. These nerves are soothed and quieted and immediate relief afforded to the patient by the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. In fact, asthma is frequently thoroughly cured by the use of this remedy alone.

Twitthy Muscles and Sleeplessness.—The hopeless heart sickness that settles on a man or woman whose nerves are shattered by disease can best be pictured in contrast with a patient who has been in the "depths" and has been dragged from them by South American Nerveine.

Mr. S. Y. Bullis, after an absence of three months in Manitoba, returned home on Friday last.

Said of Owen A. Smily: A great success. His wonderful gifts of mimicry and ventriloquism and his rich humor popularize him at once.—Kingston Whig.

Some people in this part of the country are rather fond of fishing, but they are hardly prepared to endorse the following which we clip from an exchange: "A Wisconsin clergyman is out with the declaration that a man has a right to go fishing on Sunday if his business keeps him from doing so on the other six days of the week."

Students at the Brockville Business College are continually coming and going. Coming to get a thorough course in the different commercial subjects at one of the best business schools in Ontario, going out to fill positions where knowledge and accuracy are required.

The winter is coming and soon will be here. 'Tis a great consolation we've nothing to fear; For within a few yards of Pierce's hotel is the store of Phil. Witte which the public know well.

Your Best Work Cannot be done unless you have good health. You cannot have good health without pure blood.

A pleasing event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Hall, near Addison, on Wednesday evening last, when their eldest daughter, Miss Ella, was united in matrimonial bonds with Mr. Wm. Forth of Unionville.

The bride was very becomingly attired and carried a handsome bouquet of roses. A large number of beautiful and useful presents attested to the esteem in which the bride is held by her many friends.

It was thought by the members of the W.C.T.U. and their friends that the ice-storm on Monday last would prove fatal to the success of their modicum medal contest.

Selections of a pleasing character were given by Miss Miriam Green, A.T.C. M., Miss Elma Witte, Miss Ethel Blanchard and the H.S. glee club.

The judges were Messrs. J. R. Moore, W. C. Dawley and G. F. Donnelly. A decision was reached by them on the first count, so that after only a brief absence they returned with their verdict.

Miss Cora Witte. When the applause with which the verdict was received had subsided, Miss Witte was called to the platform and presented with the medal by Miss M. E. Stone.
