SPAIN AND MEXICO. A Madrid ministerial journal of the 5th in an- ed by the rnins of the house .nouncing that the Spanish minister at Mexico has not been able to obtain the satisfaction which he demanded and had left for Cuba' says :-Vera Cruz and all the coast are already blockaded by our forces, and soon the Mexicans will learn to their expense that the honour and interest of Spain are not to be trifled with. Diploratic arrangements, it is true, are talked of, but it is not to be supposed that the Spanish government will now yield the smallest of its many weeks have passed away. The Enpress route, which brought them back to the Swinley preteusions, it calls for a just and complete reparation and it must obtain it. The fleet to be sent from Spain to act against Mexico, which consists of the Reina Isabel II. line-of-battle ship, the Baylen frigate, the Pelago brig and the Colon Steamer had arrived at Cadiz.

THE DISPUTE BETWEEN SPAIN AND MEXICO.

MADRID, March 7.—The probability of hostilities with Mexico begins to excite a good deal of attention here. The affair is complicated. On the one hand the government is loth to go to war with that republic, lest its opera- Simpheropol and along the southern coast the what the Spanish papers are wont to call the tars, who formerly monopolised all trade and North American Colossus is augmented by a commerce in the Crimea, have heen entirely refusal which I am assured has been received ruined by the war, and now the great men in from Figland and France to the application every branch of business are Jews, who have made to them for protection for the island of many of them made plenty of money, particu Cuba while an expedition went against Mexico. arly in Simpheropol, during the war, where also A special envoy from the Mexican government the labouring classes have profitted greatly by Senor La Frague, is said to have arrived at the greet demand for labour during that Southampton and to be on his way to Madrid' period. According to another account, publishcharged with explanations respecting the recent ed in the Invalide, the progress made in the reoutrages on Spanish residents in the territory of building of Sebastopol is not quite so great as the republic. Until he has been heard, and until the receipt of despatches from the Spanish minister at Mexico, now on the road and expected here next week, no final decision will be taken by the government Meanwhile. preparations continue. Five large vessels are getting ready to leave Cadiz with troops, and the officers ordered on this service have received orders to hold themselves in readiness for prompt departure. The plan of the Spanish government is the following:-It is proposed to fetch General Santa Anna from Carthagena (South America,) where he at present is, and whence he will have sent instructions to his partisans in Mexico. Vera Cruz is to be taken in his name and with Spanish aid; his adherents will be in readiness to join him uud march upon the capital. This project has probably had its origin in an application which is known to have been made to Spain a short time ago by Santa Anna for a large number of officer to head an attempt he was contemplating. It is thought that the capture of Vera Crus is spoken of rather too confidently as a thing sure to be at once effected. St Jean d'Ulloa passes for one of the strongest fortresses (if not the strongest) in the two Americas and although the French, favoured by circumstances and by a very feeble resistance captured it in 1838, it does not necessarilly follow that it is to fall an easy prey to the Spaniards in 1857. Notwithstanding the news lately received via England, of a blockade by Spanish men-of-war of the Mexican ports, it is doubted whether this can be effective and systained, the more so as the no:herly gales, usual in those latitudes at this ceason, would render it difficult and dangerous for a squadron to remain off the Mexican coast. All the troops that are as yet known to be under orders for Cuba are about 2000 men draughts from different regiments, and which in any case would be sent later in the year to fill to the presentation to the Emperor Louis, Athlone as a Liberal. up the vacancies caused by deaths and comple- Napoleon of the ancient palace at Jerusalem tion of service in the ranks of the army in the the former residence of the Knights of St. John Spanish West Indies. Such of the former inhabitants or such new settlers as had arrived there have contented themselves hitherto with temporary habitations, knocked up out of the English and French huts. During the autumn divers had been busily at work in the haobour in their endeavours to recover the sunken ships. The correspondent of the Invalide was present at the moment when one vessel was successfully lifted above the water's level, and greeted by the euthusiastic cheers of a numerous crowd assembled on that occasion. The dress of the divers employed in the harbour o, Sebastopol agrees exactly with that which is familiar to visitors of the Polytechnic Exhibition in regent-street. Since Balaklava was evacuated by our countrymen it has been taken possession of by an army of fierce rats, who not only consume every object of still life within their reach, but also at night time attack people in the streets; this native enemy has been found so formidable that the inhabitants who had returned to their former dwellings were obliged to vacate them again, and trust to the severities of winter to diminish the orces of the four-foote ! enemy. It is the prevailing opinion in Sebastopol at present that the town has never been taken by the enemy, and this is considered as proved by the allegation that even after September 7 the French flag was planted on the Malakoff, and not in the town itself.

S B I HOO TOO POSTMER I. THE PLAGUE SHIP! A SPANISH TALE. JCOV BY JOSEPH H. BUTLER.

Majestic sea! oft has my soul Felt joyous at the wild turnoil. When watching the proud billows roll, And, meeting, break in rude recoil; And when the evening shades arose; When rising worlds, in glory deast Decked heaven's blue arch in sweet repose Like dwelling places of the blest! How soft the dark blue billows curl, Seeming a mighty waste of pearl-

A gallant vessel, homeward bound.

Sailed swan-like on the vast profound;

From India's clime she came And many a noble form was there And many a lady passing fair Trod her proud decks of fame! For oft upon the crimsoned sea She bore the flag of victory. No braver seaman ploughed the main Than manned the 'Tagus,' of old Spain! Sweet was the song—and joy the dance —
A few short hours ago

And love was ambushed in youth's glance, Nor dread of future wo-A knight was there, whose heart beat nigh The flower of Spanish chivalry-Julia, Spain's dark-eyed daughter, bright, He loved, and won-with arm of might In battle fierce, with many a knight. Her form was like the palm that blooms Over the rose-decked eastern tombs!

Alonzo saw, in pleasing dreams, Himself and Julia rove By ancient Tagus' mazy streams, To sing the lays of love; Where, lost in joy, he wandered far While listening to her soft guiter. Oh, fearful is the sword and flame, The earthquake, and the blast, But the dread pestilence that comes

In darkness to our silent homes Is deadlier then the last! Now day by day the hardy crew Were wasting on the pathless blue, And whence the cause? Did poison's power Do its dark work in festive hour? No, -but the lurid spots of fear Proclaim too sure—the Plague is here! Like autumn leaves they drooped and fell; Death, here thou hast high carnival-From deck to deck from man to man, Swiftly the dreadful tidings ran: But one was spared, -who feebly lies, Closing the brave commander's eyes. Alone he lay; the plague-spots' pain And fever shot through every vein: No human hand was there to give The cordial drop, and bid him live. Five dismal days had come and past

Since he had slept in awful sleep; He woke to find himself the last Lone dweller on the boundless deep! The sun was blazing in mid heaven, The fated ship at random driven-In vain he calls: he speaks once more; No sound returns, save ocen's roar! Along the dismal decks were spread In heaps the ghastly dead; No sound, nor breeze the stillness broke, Sullen and dreadful was the air, Naught but the splash of waters spoke On that unbroken silence there; Calm as an unweaned infant sleeping Slept the grim beneath the moon, The stars their midnight watch were keeping, And voiceless was night's awful noon,-Then one by one Alonzo's hand. Gave to the sea its dead; Stranger and friend commingled here.

No sacred rites were read, And he was the sole living thing To hear the sea-bird flap its wing, Stretched on the dismal deck he lay, Exhausted nature yields: Sweet visions of a brighter day In mockery round his temples play Of bowers with orange blossoms gay, In Spain's dear sunny fields! Upon the sea, the fresh blue main,

What feelings crowd into the soul, While bending mast and cordage strain, And flashing waters round us roll-Onward we speed as eagles free, The dim hills fading on our lea; Freshly and fair the breezes blow, The main expanding o'er the bow; Red sunk the sun, the lowering sky Glared o'er the purple waters by, And bursting from their prison bar The warring winds conflicting jar, And deep'ning came the gathered force Of storm-lashed waves in headlong course, The rifted clouds were driven away In masses broad, of livid grey,—
And bursting from their bosoms came The arrowy lightning's blinding flame; road sheets of foam in fury dread Over the fated vessel spread,

Mantled in gloom the steoping sky
Was blended with the heaving deep

Aul on the storm-tost billows high Black Death his fearful reign did keep. "Farewell, my spain—thy go den grove Once witnes of my youthful love, Shall never greet me more, -and thou Of gentle heart and lovely brow, My Julia,—take the parting vow Now faltering on those dying lips, In love, and nature's best celipes, !" Alonzo spoke. And prostrate lay A form of scarcly-breathing clay. The moon lifts up her face of light Full orbed she came, her reign to keep. While tinged with silver rolled the deep: Entranced in sleen the wanderer lav, While the dark waters found their way To the doomed vessels sable hold, That guideless at their mercy rolled-

A few short moments had passed away

As human moments go, The lot of all below-When on the sun-lit shores of Spain. Where song, and love, and pleasures reign,, And flowers and fruits luxuriat hide. Fragrant and rich in eastern pride, A lady watched a noble form

Who looked as recent from the storm: With faded cheek and brow he lav, Yet beamed his eye all proud and bright; Around him all was rich and gay, Befitting some bold Spanish knight; The blossoms of the orange tree

Sent fragrance to the air,
And thousands of sweet-scented flowers Perfumed with richest breath the bowers, Glittering in the calm sun-light hours In living verdure there! While birds of every hue and song

Bent o'er his couch that lady stood, A form as fair and soft as love, She was of Spains most gentle blood; Her jeweled white hand pressed his hrow, Her rosy lips to his were pressed,-Her dark hair swept his bosom now,

Within those golden gates of light, Blest Paradise I our joyful home-God's hoiy garden knows no blight! Come wander by you silver springs, And see the bird with star-lit wings

She shrieked, and sunk upon his breast, While burst the tears in copious shower, Bright as the dew-drops on the flower; Oh, 'twas a painfui, pleasing hour. Affections holiest due! By Heaven's and Julia's care restored,

He lived to tell this tragic tale : A friendly bark had rescued him When wo and anguish is our lot, Woman thy love can hope renew; What-wealth, nor power itself cannot, Woman's dovotedness can de!

O CO CO DO DE TERRATURAL

A PRAYER AT THE MAST-HEAD! A spilor recently returned from a whaling vovage, and in conversation with a pious friend spoke of the enjoyment which he had in prayer while afar on the deep. 'But,' inquired his friend, in the midst of the confusion on shipboard, where could you find a place to

I have heard of closets in various paces, but never in one more peculiar than this. Peter went upon the house-top to pray. Our blessed Lord prayed upon the mountain-top. Others have sought the shades of the forest. I remember hearing of a youth who came home from the camp during the last war and his pious mother asked him, Where John, could you find a place to pray?' He answered Where there is a heart to pray mother, it is easy to find place.

And yet the sailor's closet was a favoured spot The ear of man could not hear him as he cried mightily unto God. The gales that waited his ship on its voyage would bear his petitions upward toward the throne. The voice of many heart andhis voice in prayer he was surrounded earth is again yielding her verdant beds of green with the majesty and glory of his maker. The intermingled with many a colored flower to curtains of Jehovah's chamber, and the stars, like the jewels that adorn his crown,, hung over green which delights and shades the herds, and him, as he climbed the giddy mast, and bowed playful lambs from Sol's effulgent rays, while down to pray. Perhaps he had little imagina- the feathered songsters cheer and enliven the Bent the tall pines with murmurs hourse! tion, and entered not in o the grandenr of the vallies, and rural walks with their sweet and scene around him. But he had a soul, a soul charming notes, or warble forth some plaintive that felt the power of God, that loved high and strain to lull each rising care—to calm serene holy communion with the Father of spirits, and and undisturbed repose. while others below were rioting in the mirth of a Where'er we turn our eyes, we behold in nat-

Through the thickest darkness that enveloped him, the 'star The storm is hu hed. And, bursting bright of Bethlenem' shed its celestial loveliness over his path in the trackless deep, and guided him onward and upward to the haven of his eternal rest. Thitherward from the mast-head he straiged his eye, and true as the needle to the pole, he pursued his way, when tempted, he sought the mast-head to pray, when in despondency, at the mast head he found joy, when the taunts of his profane companious filled his ear with pain and his soul with grief, he flad to Some linked with darkness, some with day the mast-head and poured out the desires of of his heart into the ear of Him who hears the humblest suppliants that cry.

I love to think of this sailor. I wish I knew him and could kneel down with him and hear him converse with God. How few would be as faithful as he! How many would neglect their closet, and seldom pray in secret unless they could have a more saie retreate more sacred chamber than the mast of a wave-rocked whaler. But He, 'who when here a sailor's pillow press'd' walks now on the mighty deep, and when the tempest tossed muriners cries, he answers, 'It is I be not afraid.'

The nettle is generally visited by extirminatng werfare among agriculturists, nevertheless it has its uses, and the Dutch have contrived to make it serviceable and even advantageous. The voing leaves are good eating, the stem is woven into coarse stuffs, and the jockeys mix the seed with the food of horses in order to give them a sleek coat; and the roots when washed and mixed with alum or common salt, give a yellow die. It is a wholesome food for norned cuttle when young, it will grow in the most arid soil, demands no cultivation for it stands all weathers and sows itself. It may be cut two or three times in the summer, and is one af the earliest of plants; when cut for hay it must not be too old, for then cattle refuse to eat the dried

"THERE IS NO LONGER ANYTHING GRAND TO

BE DONE!"-And Napoleon? He was Emperor, and dissatisfied! So, at least, roported Decres to Marmonto Decres was Minister of Marine, and Napoleon, on the day after the coronation, said to him, "I have come too late; men are now too clear sighted; there is no longer any thing grand to be done." "What! sire," said Decres. "To me your destiny seems brilliant enough. What could be more graud than to occupy the first throne in the world a ter having been asthing but an artille y officer?" "Yes," Napoleon auswered, "My career is a fine one, I admit I have made a pretty way for myself, but how different it would have been in antiquity? Look at Alexander after conquering Asia, and declaring for five shillings; Bentevoglic was refused admit- himself to be the son of Jove-why, with the exception of Olympias and Aristotle, and a few pedants of Athens, all the world believed it. But as for me, if I were to announce myself to-day to be Vangelas left his body to the surgeons to pay son of the eternsi Father, and were to return his debt as far as it would go. DED BONAPARTE INTEND TO INVADE ENG-LAND ?- It has been frequently denated whather Bonaparte ever seriously intended to undertake the expedition against England. I declare, with assurance and with certainty, yes; that expedition was the most ardent desire of his life, and long continued his deare he Memoirs of Kayaus, from 1,92 to 1832.

Complaisance is no longer confined to the polite circles. A captain of a vessel was lately called out of a coffee-house at Wapping, by a waterman, with the following address: "Aun please your honour the tide is waiting for you."

A party of stout coantrymen were playing a earth-no winds nor storms, pinching cold or pitating heart. Another triumph in homeo-wonder! Is it not the centre of infinite influence? HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS .-- Lacera tions of the fiesh, bruises and fractures, occasion comparatively little pain or inconvenience when regularly luoricated or dressed with Holloways' Ointmeut. In the nursery it is invaluable as a cooling application for the rasnes, exceriations and scaolous sores to which children are liable, and mothers will find it the pest preparation for afleviating the torture of a " broken breast." As a remedy for cutaneous diseases generally' as Weil as for ulcers, sores, ooils, tumours and all, scrofulous eruptions, it is incomparably superior to every other external remedy. The Pills, all through I oronto, Quebec, Montreal, and our other chief towns, have a reputation, fo,r the cure of dyspepsia, liver complaints, and disorders of the bowels; it is in truth, co-extensive with the range of civilization.
