Pranks of the "Mad Hatter."

Halston Hall, near Oswestry, England, which was sold recently, was the scene of the maddest exploits of the 18th century.

It was the home of Jack Mytton, whose eccentricities earned him the title of the "mad hatter," or the "mad quire of Shropshire."

His career was crammed full of excitement from the time he could toddle until his death at the early age of 38 in a debtor's prison in London.

He started by being expelled from school more than once, and at the age of 14 he was said to have overpaid double his income of $2,000 a year.

A fortune of from $150,000 to $200,000 was squandered in a few years.

Mytton kept both a bear and a monkey as pets, and was fond of terrifying his visitors with them.

One day, disguised as a beggar, he called at his own hall, and rated the servants for the mean fare they had given him.

The bear was brought out of the hall to frighten the "beggar" away, but he recognized Jack.

On another occasion when a man applied for the post of gamekeeper, Mytton disguised himself as a sweep, and it was part of the test that the gamekeeper should fight the "sweep."

There was a great set-to, and after the fight Jack engaged the man. Who won is not stated.

Mytton was very fond of his monkey, which used to ride a white horse and accompany his master on some of his wild expeditions.

Jack had held a commission in the 7th Hussars, but, tiring of it, sold out of the Army and, at the age of 23, married Miss Jones, a daughter of the late Sir Tirwhitt Jones, Bart., of Stanley Hall, Salop.

She lived only a few years after the birth of a daughter—Jack Mytton's only child.

After his death, in 1834, Mytton's body was brought to Halston and laid in the private chapel.

CHAPTER VIII.

"I will tell her," replied Inez, and for the first time her lips quivered and her eyes grew dim. He thought she sympathized with him.

"Good-bye," she said; "I shall not see you again before I start."

"Good-bye," she replied, calmly; but the hand he held grew cold in his grasp. The next moment she was gone.

She clinched her delicate hands as she went hastily up to her sister's room again.

"I hate myself!" she murmured. "I am a traitress—a false, living lie! Yet I swore to win at any risk, and I will."

Agatha still slept, although the morning sunbeams were playing upon her face. Inez replaced the flower, and then bent again over her sister. There was something like triumph in the beautiful dark face as she watched the unconscious sleeper.

"I have done no harm," she thought; "she is not capable of loving, and he will be happier with me."

When Agatha woke she was startled to find her sister bending over her.

"How late I am!" she said; "but I was so tired; and I have had such pleasant dreams."

Then Inez knew by the rush of warmth and light over the fair face that she remembered all. Her eyes fell upon the flower—the flower that she was to return to-day. She did not understand why Inez, who rarely entered her room, lingered near and would not leave her—why she talked so wittily and amusingly of the tableaux and the ball, that simple, sweet Agatha could have listened all day—why she delayed her and kept her from dressing, or from going down-stairs, by saying that she was tired, and should have some tea brought to her.

The first part of her plan had succeeded even beyond her most sanguine hopes. She lingered in her sister's room, keeping watch and guard, lest there should come some note or message, which, unless she were quick enough to intercept, would spoil all. Her vigilance never relaxed until she heard the sound of carriage-wheels, and then she knew that the danger was past, that explanation was impossible, and that Lord Lynne had left the Hall.

Agatha wondered why all at once her sister's gay words ceased, why a stillness fell like a mask upon her face; but she had to wonder yet more, for the first news she heard was that Lord Lynne had left the Hall.

CHAPTER IX.

Agatha was sorely puzzled. She could not understand what Lord Lynne had meant. Why had he taken her into the conservatory purposely to speak to her? Why had he given her that flower? What answer did he want, which was of so little importance to him that he had left without even a message to her?

She had never been a vain girl; it was not in her to think much of her own powers and gifts; she had not felt quite sure that Lord Lynne loved her. In her sweet humility, it did not seem natural to her that he should prefer one like herself to her beautiful sister. He was always kind and tender; but then he had always been so; during her father's lifetime he had petted and loved her. What could he have meant? She wished Evelyn Leigh had waited three minutes longer before she had interrupted them.

"You know what I have brought you here to say," he had said to her. Nay, that she did not. Her heart had warmed and thrilled when he uttered the words—a sweet, vague hope had come to her—but she was not sure. Had he brought her there to tell her that she loved her? It seemed like that. At the time she had felt sure. Yet it could not be so; or why had he gone away that morning without waiting for her to give him either the flower or any answer at all? It was simply incomprehensible. Only one thing was plain—he did not love her, and he had not meant that.

All day Inez watched her sister's face; it was paler, and had lost something of its bright, happy expression; there seemed to be a wondering question always in her eyes.

"When is Lord Lynne coming back?" she heard Agatha asking Mrs. Lynne.

"I hardly know," replied her mother. "He left rather suddenly; he did not say much to me. He spoke of going to Scotland for shooting in September."

"Perhaps he will not come back until after then," said Agatha, gently. She would have given much to understand his strange behavior.

"I hate lies," said Inez Lynne to herself; "they blister and burn my lips—they make me hate and scorn myself—but I must imply, even if I do not tell one more."

She sought her sister's room again that evening. All day she had watched the pain and wonder in that gentle face. She saw that in some measure her simple, guileless sister must be satisfied. If she were allowed to go on wondering what Lord Lynne had meant, she would probably ask him the first time they met.

"I must manage two things," she said to herself. "I must satisfy her, and I must prevent them from meeting again until I am his betrothed wife."

The inflexible will, the iron resolution, the dauntless spirit never failed. She had good qualities; used for a good purpose, they might have made Inez Lynne remarkable even in a remarkable age; as it was, they helped to lose her. She hated herself with a bitter hatred for the part she had played, and for the part she had yet to play.

"Send away your maid, Agatha," she said, "and let us have a chat. I am not in the least tired."

Agatha wondered again at her sister's kindness, and felt a glow of happiness, believing that she was beginning to love her at last.

"Let us sit by the window," said Inez; "I am never tired of watching the moonlight on these trees."

Agatha drew her chair to the window, and they sat side by side, the betrayer and the betrayed. There was a strange look on the beautiful Southern face—something of shame and of pain. Her breath seemed to come in thick, hot gasps, when Agatha laid her head carelessly upon her shoulder, and said, "It is delightful to have a sister; after all, Inez, no one in the world can be quite like one's own sister."

"But I am not your own sister," said Inez.

"Do not say so," replied Agatha, with a sound of reproach in her gentle voice. "I never remember that we had not one mother."

"I remember it," said Inez, and her face grew dark with the words. They seemed to nerve her and give back the resolution that the sight of that fair young head resting upon her shoulder had half shaken.

"Agatha," she said, suddenly, "one year of the time my father named has expired."

"Yes," replied her sister, and the words seemed very much like a long-drawn sigh.

She felt her sister's breath like a hot scorching flame upon her cheek. She looked up and saw the beautiful face all glowing.

"Agatha," whispered the same clear voice that had deceived Lord Lynne, "if ever our cousin tells you he loves me, what shall you say?"

She felt the quick tremor that shook the young girl—she saw the gentle face grow pale.

"If ever he comes to you," continued Inez, "and tells you that he loves me, but that I am so proud and reserved he does not dare to ask me to be his wife, but wishes you to intercede for him, what shall you say?"

The fair head was raised from her shoulder, and two pure sweet eyes looked searching into her face.

"Do you care for him, Inez?—do you love him?" she asked.

Inez was almost frightened at the expression that came into her sister's face and lingered there for some moments.

"Yes, I love him," she replied, at last; "not as you would, quiet English love, but as we Spaniards, Daughters of the Sun; who would think nothing of giving a life for those we love. If ever he comes to you, little sister, and asks you to speak for him, what shall you say?"

"Is he likely to do so?" asked Agatha, her gentle face growing paler with each word.

"I think so," was the false reply. "I have been so proud, so haughty, so reserved; but I cannot doubt that he loves me."

"If ever he comes to me with that request," said Agatha, "I shall remember what you have said to me to-night and I shall tell him to hope—to speak for himself."

"Would you like me to be Lady Lynne?" asked Inez, gently.

Agatha waited two or three minutes before she spoke, then she laid her head down upon her sister's shoulder again, and said, "Yes, if it would make you and Philip both happy, I should like to see you Lady Lynne."

TO RELIEVE PAIN AND BACKACHE

Women May Depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Minnesota, Minn.—"I had heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that when I realized I needed to take something to relieve my pains and backache, and to help build me up I began to take that. I had been sick off and on for years and barely weighed a hundred pounds, but now I have had such good results that I am recommending the Vegetable Compound to every one."

Mrs. J. J. BIRBEK, 9859 12th Ave. South, Minneapolis, Minn.

Face Disfigured With Large Pimples Cuticura Healed

"For some time my face was affected with pimples and skin eruptions, which, when they were very irritating, would be very irritating. The pimples were very hard and large, and turned bluish when rubbed or picked, which caused disfigurement."

"I was treated but it did not prove satisfactory. I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and decided to try them, and after using two boxes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Mrs. Earl Cooke, Box 374, Niagara, Ontario.

Cuticura Soap daily, with Cuticura Ointment occasionally, prevents pimples or other eruptions. They are a pleasure to use, as is also Cuticura Talcum for perfuming the skin.

Find a True Friend

"Every woman who values her health should be proud to have a true friend like the Vegetable Compound," says Mrs. W. E. Shaw, 227 Walnut Street, Chicago, Illinois. "I had female weakness so badly that I could not stand on my feet. Half of my time was spent in bed and I had pains in my back which were unbearable. I tried everything I could think of to help myself, and when a friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I began taking it at once. I recommend it without hesitation."

"Home, Sweet Home."

THE MONTH'S CENTENARY OF FAMOUS SONG—HOW IT WAS WRITTEN.

On May 8, 100 years ago, the now famous song, "Home, Sweet Home," was first in public. No other song ever written, it is said, can be sung by so many people without the printed words of music. Neither the words nor the music of the song was of outstanding excellence, but they had the quality which immediately won for them universal popularity.

John Howard Payne, author of the lyric, had a remarkable career in many ways. When he was only 12 years old he was editing a children's weekly paper in Boston, called "The Fly."

It was in 1882 that "Home, Sweet Home" was written and embodied in a play of his called "Angioletti," which he later changed to the book of an opera. For this and other manuscripts he received £250.

He wrote the famous song, he afterwards confessed, on a dull October day, when he was feeling depressed, and as he watched from his window the gay crowds in the street below the words rushed into his head.

He said he had once heard an Italian girl singing a melody that caught his ear. He roughly noted it down, and sent the musical suggestion to Henry Bishop, the composer, when he submitted the lyric.

Great Britain is prepared to confer independent government on Trans-Jordan, if the League of Nations gives consent, says an official communique issued to-day providing the form of Government set up, giving Britain the possibility of fulfilling her international obligations towards that country, the British Government agrees to declare Palestine territory, east of Jordan, autonomous, and not subject to Sir Herbert Samuel's administration.

RUHR MINERS TO RESUME WORK. SAARBRUCKEN, May 18. The strike was political in nature, say the authorities, being called in protest against occupation of the Ruhr.

AFTER THE RUN RUNNERS. NEWPORT, May 18. United States Attorney General Hayward to-day obtained warrants for eight men suspected of comprising part of the run ring operating off the Jersey Coast, and more warrants are expected. One warrant is for Alfred Ernest Corns, alleged to have been supercargo of the British yacht Yankton, which put into this port yesterday out of food and fuel, after the supposed supercargo had departed on a tug with the liquor cargo and the men's pay. It was from the Yankton's crew that information was secured to justify the warrants.

Abyssinia has announced the intention to apply for admission in to the League but it is stated abolition of the slave traffic will be the first condition imposed before the application is considered.

MILK FAMINE IN ST. JOHN. ST. JOHN, May 18. St. John is near milk famine to-day, when a total of about three hundred cans arrived as compared with the normal receipt of fourteen thousand cans. It is explained that by tomorrow the city will be without milk. Producers demand forty-eight cents a can and dealers offer forty-five.

RED PROPAGANDA. MOSCOW, May 18. The Third International has issued an appeal to the workmen of the world in connection with the assassination of Vorovsky at Lausanne. It says: "This bloody challenge must not be left unanswered by you." The appeal advises stronger organizations of the struggle to bring about revolutionary success, east and west. It holds Lord Curzon responsible as the chief inspiration of the Entente effort at Lausanne to prevent Russo-Turkish rapprochement.

CHINA'S LADY PROBLEMS. BANDULI, in the provinces anti-Japanese riots in one province, Japanese boycotts in several, piracy of the Southern Coast and rivers, war in three provinces and warlike preparation in a fourth, are the outstanding problems of the past few weeks confronting the Chinese Government. At the head of the list, because of the international complications involved, stands the Suchow outrage, in which bandits from Shanghai and Honan Provinces raided the Pekin-Shanghai express, on May 6th, and kidnapped a number of foreigners, including American and British, many of whom are still prisoners.

To-day, members of the Chinese Government Gendarmes boarded a train from Pekin to Shanghai, attacked the officials and beat their servants, who resisted, seized everything in sight, despite the protests of foreigners and held possession of the train for several hours. Advice reaching Shanghai to-day said that the Suchow bandits in their stronghold back at Lincheng, taken ten days ago, are contemplating an attempt to kidnap parties of foreigners at Tsaochwang who are there negotiating for the release of the prisoners.

World Court Stand.

MAY AFFECT HARDING'S RE-NOMINATION.

WASHINGTON — (By Canadian Press)—The fact that Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, leader of the progressive bloc, is going to make a series of speeches through the country the coming summer and that these speeches will be almost simultaneous with the speech-making tour of President Harding is causing much comment here. Senator La Follette's purpose to make a series of speeches was first made known some weeks ago. Likely, it has been emphasized and announced in an official way. The result is that the political forecasters are busy taking observations to find out what it portends. The primary object of Senator La Follette is to promote the legislative programme of the progressive bloc. He will discuss the railroad question, coal, oil, and other leading subjects of legislation proposed at the next session. It is expected he will sharply hit the Harding administration for some things, and he is expected to oppose the world court on the claim that it is the entering wedge to the League of Nations. Not only will Senator La Follette make speeches but so will a large number of the progressive bloc members. Senator Borah is closely affiliated with the progressive bloc and he will make a number of speeches and progressives in the House will do much public speaking. The chief purpose, at least outwardly, is to arouse sentiment for the series of legislative measures which the progressives will press next session of Congress. Another side of the matter, however, is the feeling which may be aroused among progressive republicans the country over for the nomination of someone other than President Harding. It is hardly probable that any political development now will defeat the President for re-nomination. Nevertheless, reports continue to reach Washington of strong republican opposition to Mr. Harding and such reports are causing a good deal of concern in administration quarters. Administration leaders continue to be worried over what Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, will do when he gets back from Europe. When he departed, the prevailing belief was that he would not run against Mr. Harding. But since the world court issue has taken on importance, there is a procession of rumors that he may come back to the United States the month after next and fling his hat into the ring.

FARM LABOR. London Daily Mail: The soil of Great Britain is, over very large areas, more fruitful than that of any other country. Our output of food per acre is wretchedly low. We must have more intense farming, but we must begin by helping the farmers, who in their turn will then be more considerate to the laborers than seems possible in Norfolk just now.

Crimes Committed in Sleep.

The recent case of a Paddington hunchback who, when apparently asleep, after attacking his sister, ended his sown life, also when asleep, calls attention to the remarkable condition called somnambulism, or sleep-walking.

In ordinary dreams there is no concentration of ideas upon something to be done or an objective to be reached. When a sleeper makes this mental effort, he passes right out of the region of dreams and enters that of somnambulism.

In this state actions of extraordinary difficulty, such as could not be performed by the sleeper during his waking hours, are carried out with perfect ease. Walking on the extreme edge of a precipice, climbing dangerous heights, getting out of a house through a top-storey window; are examples. In such cases the danger is incurred only by the sleeper; but in the type of sleepwalking instanced above the results may prove tragic to others besides the dreamer.

TRAGIC DREAMS.

Many indeed are the criminal acts, other than suicide, done by men and women sleep-walkers. In the case of the suicide already mentioned, the victim's sleeping thoughts—his dream ideas—were probably wrapped up with the notion of self-destruction after accomplishing a murderous attack on some other being, who, in this case, happened to be his sister.

Thus dreams, merging into those various muscular movements characteristic of somnambulism have produced the most tragic results.

A doctor relates how a man sleeping beside his wife believed that she was a robber whom he must kill. He accordingly attempted to suffocate her with a pillow, and it was only with great difficulty that she succeeded in waking him and so saving her life.

In 1842, a young man was tried for attempted murder of an innkeeper at Lyons. He had arrived at the inn towards nightfall, and was allotted a room. In the dead of night loud cries were heard proceeding from this room, and the landlord, rushing to see what was the matter, was set upon by his guest and so seriously wounded that he died. It was ascertained that the young man was a somnambulist, who had dreamt that the landlord was murdering the occupants of the room near his own, and that he was defending them. He was acquitted.

A case is also recently recorded by Drs. Gray and Ferrer in their "Forensic Medicine." Two men, being in a place infested by robbers, engaged that one should watch while the other slept. But the watcher falling asleep, and dreaming that he was pursued, shot his companion through the heart.

UNCONSCIOUS MOVEMENTS.

These automatic movements, made altogether without the sleeper being in any way conscious of them, are not unlike those occurring in epilepsy, or subsequent to epileptic fits. Such actions are usually the caricature of some normal movement that is habitual to the sleeper in his waking hours.

It is a caricature inasmuch as it is wanting in some essential element in the normal action. The sleep-walker finding a pen in his hand will go through the movement of writing with it, but will neglect to dip it in the ink, or if he goes through the movement of dipping it in the ink, will not dip it anywhere.

A woman will go through the movement of sewing, but her needle will not be threaded; or of cutting out, but she will cut her material into useless fragments.

How closely normal and sleep-walking actions resemble one another is shown in the instance of the woman who, in the habit of cutting bread and butter for her children's tea, used a knife while sleep-walking in such a way as to cut her child's arm. The act was proved to have been done automatically; but in another case, in which a woman had thrown her child into the water, the suggestion that the act was done during somnambulism should never have been made; for the act of throwing a child into the water, or even of throwing away a bulky object, is not habitual with anyone.

A terrible case that occurred at Manchester many years ago was that of a devoted mother of three children who was a somnambulist. She had a favorite cat, which had kittens at fairly regular intervals. The duty of drowning these unwanted animals devolved on the woman. The mother was exceedingly fond of her two little boys and girl, whose ages ranged from six months to four years.

One night her husband awoke suddenly, and missing his wife, guessing that she had had another of her sleep-walking attacks, made a search for her.

He discovered her in the scullery, where, in a large tub full of water, two of the younger children had already been drowned in their sleep, while the eldest was being held under the water and all but dead. The latter was resuscitated.

Equally tragic was the case of the wealthy Englishman, who, in the early eighties took his bride to Lunenburg for their honeymoon. Amongst his gifts to her had been a rich pearl necklace, with a somewhat complicated clasp.

During the fortnight they had been married he had been in the habit of putting this necklace round her neck and clasping it every evening when she donned her dinner dress. It was just a little whim of his. Unfortunately, he was an occasional sleep-walker. Getting up one night while she slept after a fatiguing expedition into the mountain, and picking up, as he thought, the pearl necklace, the husband placed it round his wife's neck as she lay asleep, fastening the clasp with some difficulty.

What he actually did, as a matter of fact, was to pick up a narrow strap, used to fasten some guide-books, and quickly encircled her neck with it, buckling it so tightly and so suddenly that his bride, unable to cry out, was strangled where she lay. At the trial it was proved that the bridegroom had been a somnambulist from boyhood, and that it had lately been a habit of his to fix the necklace as described.

DANGERS OF SUDDEN AWAKENINGS.

Dr. Charcot, of La Salpetriere, Paris, records the case of the ship's riveter with whom his wife was wont to hold conversations while he slept (for he was a somnambulist, or sleep-walker as well as a sleep-talker), and one of his somnambulist trips, trips, dreaming that he was at work, attacked his wife with a hammer which, unfortunately lay handy, fatally fracturing her skull.

If a person be suddenly aroused from a deep sleep—somnolentia or sleep-drunkenness—he may unconsciously commit a crime. If a person be suddenly aroused whilst dreaming, he may, and as a matter of experience, does, commit acts, the outcome of his dream, which unless the possibility of this condition be realized, may entail severe punishment on him.

Such a case occurred at Edinburgh some years ago, when a harmless and inoffensive old man, found asleep in a public park was roused by a policeman, whom the dreamer immediately attacked with the utmost fury and fatally stabbed with a clasp-knife. Medical evidence was forthcoming of the attacker's sleep-walking habit, and an acquittal followed.

Ocean-Beds Paved With Gold.

Gold, silver and precious stones, valuable enough, could they be found, to pay off Great Britain's national debt, and Canada's, as well, lie sunken beneath the waters of the ocean or buried below the surface of the little islands that stud the Southern Seas.

The treasure lies in the holds of sunken Spanish galleons, great ships that from the days of Queen Elizabeth sailed every year from South America to Spain bearing the almost fabulous booty captured from the Aztecs of Mexico and the Incas of Peru.

In "The Book of Buried Treasure," by Ralph D. Paine, we are told that in Vigo Bay lies "the greatest treasure ever lost since the world began." Here, in 1702, a fleet of British and Dutch vessels destroyed a number of Plate ships, which went to the bottom carrying with them nearly $125,000,000 worth of gold.

In Tomerony Bay is the Florancia, known to have carried $30,000,000 worth of gold; and in Mount's Bay, Cornwall, there is the Saint Andrew, a treasure ship which carried "blocks of silver bullion, silver vessels and plates, precious stones, brooches and chains of gold, cloth of Arras, tapestry, satin, velvet, and four suits of armor for the King of Portugal."

But if you think of going on a treasure-hunting expedition, it is pirate gold that will attract you most, and there are millions upon millions of dollars' worth of it awaiting discovery.

The buccanniers of old harried the great ships of France and Spain, and collected from them amazing stores of wealth. And when Britain and other Powers set about clearing the seas of pirates, these rovers buried their treasures and ran for it. Many of them were hanged at the "Pirates Dock" in Wapping, London, and in most cases their secrets died with them.

Cocos Island alone is known to be the hiding place of twelve million dollars' worth of gold and silver booty. Then there is Trinidad, off Brazil, where reposes the vast booty of sea-rovers who plundered the richest cities of America. Dozens of expeditions have sailed there and dug in vain. Some day, perhaps, the key to the mystery will be found, and those who hit upon it will become possessors of wealth beyond all dreams.

THE MANDARIN'S HOARD.

Another vast hoard waiting for the pick and shovel of the searcher is that of the Chinese mandarin, Chan Lee Suey, who fled when the British captured Manila in 1762, having first buried his incalculable treasure. It lies at Luzon, in the Philippine Islands.

ASK FOR ALVINA The Improved Tasteless Preparation of an Extract of Cod Liver Oil. Specially Recommended for Persistent Coughs, Bronchitis, Anemia. A Splendid Tonic for Delicate Women and Children. Prepared by DAVIS & LAWRENCE CO., Manufacturing Chemists, Montreal.

lands, and the directions we have say that it is concealed "near Calumpit in the swamps of the Rio Grande." In its glittering store are magnificent jewels, including a string of pearls said to be the finest ever seen.

In the Salvage Islands, south of Madeira, is hidden a vast store of gold and silver in great iron-bound chests. We are told that the hoard is guarded by the skeleton of a sea captain, with a dagger-blade through his heart.

On the island of Diego Alvarez we know even the place where digging should be done, for the booty of bygone days lies close to Church Rock, at the western end of the island. Hundreds have searched but in vain.

During the war German submarines sent many millions of dollars' worth of gold to the bottom, and there it lies despite all efforts to recover it. The seas around the British islands are almost paved with gold.

Women Who Hunt Big Game.

Although big game shooting is really a man's game, presupposing a sound constitution, iron nerves, fearlessness, and all those other qualities requisite in the prosecution of an arduous sport, there are many women who think nothing of its thrills and delights, remain unsatiated.

Among English enthusiasts for this fascinating sport is the Countess of Salfon, Lady Salfon, who is a really good rifle shot, has frequently accompanied her husband, an ex-Master of the Horses, on big game shooting expeditions, on one of which two lions, a tiger, a rhinoceros were included in her bag.

Another expert rifle shot is Lady Indiana Gordon, who last winter went out to Nairobi on a big game shooting expedition in British East Africa. She possesses a really splendid collection of trophies, including lion, leopard, cheetah, hyena, buffalo—perhaps the most dangerous of African big game—and antelope obtained on her various expeditions.

Then there is Mrs. Bebb, formerly Lady Carbery. Her trips to East Africa have always been productive of good sport and fine specimens; on one occasion two lions and a rhinoceros fell to her rifle. At that time she was not much more than twenty, and as she is but twenty-eight now, many opportunities may be expected to present themselves to her for increasing her fine collection of trophies while participating in the sport she loves best of all.

U.S. for Compulsory Consolidation of Railroad

WASHINGTON—(By Canadian Press)—The next big step in railway matters in the United States is likely to be compulsory consolidation of the railroads into fifteen or twenty systems probably, though not necessarily, national. President Harding, in his western speeches will come out for consolidation, it is predicted, and Senator Cummins, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, is urging them. He says that only by consolidation or strong lines with weak can the weak roads be saved and government ownership be avoided. Also, he holds that by consolidations economies can be effected and rates reduced. Many other phases of the railroad problem will be up, including changes in the law as to rate making. But just now, the consolidation issue seems to be foremost. President Harding let it be known that he believes the railroad problem will be paramount in the next session of Congress. Study is being made by representatives of the administration of the consolidation of the railroads in England, which is said to have been a success. Many students of the railroad problem here are skeptical of the consolidation plan for this country. They take the view nothing will solve the U.S. transportation problem but government ownership and say consolidation would prove nothing more than a temporary palliative. Nevertheless, it is unlikely Congress would go the whole length of government ownership and for that reason consolidations may be tested out.

No White Men in Chinese Party.

NEW YORK—Four hundred Chinese, members of the Chinese Merchants' Association, look sanguinely forward to returning home from their annual outing at Bear Mountain, up the Hudson, next July, with all their watches at the end of the chains and their purses in their respective pockets. No white man has been invited to attend the outing. This was announced today by one of the prominent members, Foo Joe Foo, who explained:—"Two years ago plenty white men go along with the Chinese, up Hudson, to have good play time. What happen? Plenty pocketbook, plenty money, plenty watches no can find in pocket of Chinese when come back. So last year, we say no white man without card from Association can come play. Better, but not all right. Ninety-seven watches missing. So now, this year, no white man come 'long. That more better. Maybe keep watches."

U.S. Will Not Join World Court.

WASHINGTON—(By Can. Press.)—Since the fact was announced that former President Wilson is opposed to having the United States adhere to the world court with conditions or reservations, a marked change has come over the situation in the U.S. Senate. Indications now are that the United States will not join the court, either, or without reservations. Unless Mr. Wilson removes himself as a factor in the controversy and advises democratic senatorism to make the best terms they can; the democratic side of the Senate will be badly divided when it comes to voting and any resolution to adhere to the court will probably fail to get the necessary two-thirds majority. Republican leaders say that Mr. Wilson's intervention has been fatal to the plan of joining the court either with the Hughes reservations or otherwise. They had expected to get for the administration plan of joining the court the votes of at least 25 republicans, and about 40 democrats out of a total democratic strength of 43. Now, Senators faithful to Mr. Wilson are assuming the same attitude as he is. This means that the Hughes plan will lose a number of democratic votes and fail to get the needed two-thirds. If an attempt is made to join the court unreservedly, it will get still less support. The question being asked here is whether Mr. Wilson has not done for the world court plan just what he did for the League of Nations plan. In the case of the League, by his opposition to reservations, he prevented ratification and in the case of the court, by his opposition to reservations, it looks as if he has made ratification improbable.

King Henry VI. May be Canonized.

LONDON—Henry VI. may be canonized in the near future, but matters in connection with the canonization are not sufficiently advanced for the Pope to be able to assure King George V. on his visit to the Vatican that "Harry of Windsor" had been made a canonized saint. Evidence on which the expected canonization will be based has been accumulating of late years and will be sent to Rome in due course. King Henry VI. was the founder of Eton and King's College Cambridge. The cause of the Royal Saint has been enquired into by the Etonian Catholic Association, the initiator of the movement, and a good deal of progress has been made in sifting of the evidence. Indeed once in the reign of Henry VII the evidence for the proposed sainthood of the sixth Henry of England was nearly completed, but events which have been translated into history since then conspired to sidetrack the look-out for canonization. In the British Museum is a record of 138 reputed miracles between the death of Henry VI. and the year 1600. Of these, seventy-seven were investigated and twenty-three were considered proven. The written testimony of these, translated by Fr. Ronald Knox, will be forwarded to the Congregation of Ritus in Rome. During forty years there was a pilgrimage to the Saint's grave at Windsor from all over England. Miracles in connection with these pilgrimages to the grave of Henry VI. were reported from thirty-four counties, chiefly in Kent, Sussex and London. They included cases of recovery from plague, madness and even apparent death. Cripples left their crutches at Windsor, as they do today at Lourdes. The miracles also included cases of drowning, stabbing, hanging and in one case of an accident in a football game there was a miracle performed. The devotion to King Henry VI. can be established from the prayers and hymns dedicated to him, and the remains of pictures in churches, especially in Norfolk. With this proof and the proof of the miracles it is thought the admirers of the king should have no fear of failure in pursuing their work to have him canonized. Cardinal Gasquet, it is said, has promised his powerful assistance at Rome to this end. The only regret on the part of the advocates of the canonization is that it could not have been further advanced by the time King George visits Pope Pius XI.

Norma Talmadge at the Nickel Monday.

"SMILIN' THROUGH" GIVES NORMA BIG OPPORTUNITY.
Norma Talmadge's latest First National starring vehicle, "Smilin' Through," is coming to the Nickel Theatre on Monday for an engagement of three days.

Advance reports state that this is the most ambitious production yet made by Norma Talmadge. It is an adaptation of Allen Lanford Martin's stage hit of the same name, in which Jane Cowl appeared on the speaking stage.

Appearing opposite Miss Talmadge are two leading men, Wyndham Standing and Harrison Ford, and a splendid supporting cast, including Alec B. Francis, Glenn Hunter, Grace Geiswold, Miriam Battista and Eugene Lockhart.

The production deals with the romance of beautiful young Kathleen, who is left in the charge of John Carteret following the death of her Aunt Moryeen. Moryeen was fatally wounded by a jealous suitor on the day of her wedding to Carteret. When Carteret learns that Kathleen is in love with the son of the man who killed his bride he interrupts the romance of the young people and the absorbing plot gathers dramatic momentum.

The S.S. "Nevarra" has brought us a large cargo of "Westmoreland" double-screened GAS COAL. This coal is mined in Pennsylvania, and is unexcelled for Gas Works operations. It produces gas of the highest value for light, heat or power. The tar is superior to the imported article, as nothing is taken from it. The coke is of very high quality, and is a fine substitute for hard coal. Our Ammonium Sulphate is the best fertiliser extant. We are prepared for increased business, and cordially invite enquiries. An Indian Fable.

Fables something like those we know are told all over the world, and here is one which comes from India. There was once a tiger who had grown too old to hunt his prey, so he had to resort to cunning in order to get food. He hid in the jungle and called out to passers-by that he would give them a handsome bracelet for nothing. A covetous man passing asked to see the bracelet, and the tiger put out one of his paws so that the stripes could be seen. Thinking that this was a real bracelet the man hastily went toward the spot where the tiger lay, but soon found himself stuck in a swamp. The tiger called to him to wait a moment till he himself came to his help, and going in to the swamp, the cunning animal soon seized the man and carried him off to the jungle to eat at leisure.

Industrial Ruler of the Ruhr Region.

August Thyssen Believes Germany's Medicine for War Ailments is Devotion to Work—He Sympathizes with the French General, and Considers His Job a Most Disagreeable One—The Rockefeller of the Ruhr.

Lonely and venerable, in the stern struggle now proceeding along the Ruhr Valley, there stands one picturesque figure, that of August Thyssen.

He has been called the Rockefeller of the Ruhr, an octogenarian, deeply pious, and an uncanny expert in making profits out of big business. Like Rockefeller, he began his active career in the '60s. Like Rockefeller, he found a region—in this case, the Rhineland—the natural resources of which were as yet scarcely touched. Like Rockefeller, he started with big ideas but a small capital, only $6,000 with which he established his first rolling mill at Hamborn, where sixty men were employed.

That plant—the Deutsches Kaiser Works—now employs 26,000 workers. And reckoning all his enterprises, August Thyssen's payroll, even during the French occupation, is reported as including 66,000 names in the Ruhr Valley alone.

At Hamborn, Mulheim, Duisburg and Denslaken, this vast unarmied army of industry is working three shifts every twenty-four hours, this under the eyes of the French sentries, which some of Thyssen's directors consider to be a blessing in disguise, because they keep the Communists quiet. Even extreme socialism, of which there is much on the Ruhr, is German first and has lined up sold behind "King" Thyssen. Wages have been raised 90 per cent and the workers received 1,250 marks an hour or 10,000 marks a day. At normal exchange it would be $2,500.

Thyssen and other magnates claim that they can carry on because their industries are self-contained. They have the coal, they have the ore, Germany is sending them the food. But there still arises the question where they are to send their products. Is the whole wage bill to be met by mere paper, distributed on the credit of Berlin, or will sales of commodities be possible and genuine remittances available to meet the costs of production.

Appeal for Compassion.
Despite his determination to carry on, Thyssen himself knows how to appeal for compassion. "What can we do?" asked he, as the French entered the Ruhr. "We are helpless, we have no cannon, we let ourselves be disarmed." The idea that the Germans "let themselves be disarmed" has its amusing side. But Thyssen is one of those men, shrewd otherwise and farsighted, who still believes that the Germans would have won the war if the Socialists had not proved a coward. He fails to see that Germany's defeat was a righteous judgment on a bad case. It was ill luck, aggravated by mismanagement.

"Maybe," said he, "the workmen will wake up to their own interests when they realize that the French are trying to take away our coal and everything else from us."

Behind the remark there is an unexpressed emotion. Thyssen is an autocrat in industry. He is as paternal as the Patriarch Abraham or as Frederick the Great, in the description by Thomas Carlyle.

"I have always considered it my duty," he says "to keep the factories running and to provide a living for the workmen and their families, even in times when prices and rents brought me no profit. Only these who have really passed through the times of our economic hardships can realize the immense burdens which I carried on my shoulders—the tremendous anxieties which often depressed me for years at a time."

Barrier to His Benevolence.
Thyssen thus pictures himself as the weary Titan, summoned by Providence to sustain 50,000 homes; and trade unions are merely a barrier to his benevolence. He is "King" Thyssen, ruling by divine right, and when the crash came and the armistice was signed and the Kaiser fled to Holland, it was Thyssen who, with other magnates, was arrested by the Communists, accused of high treason and sent from Mulheim-Ruhr to Munster for trial in Berlin. For a time he had to live as an exile in Switzerland. The hereditary and the industrial Emperor suffered the same fate. But the industrialist was the first to return to his throne.

What a scene that was at Schloss Lanberg, Thyssen's Gothic castle, overlooking the Ruhr, when the French General, presumably DeGoutte—though the name is not given—called on him and requested hospitality. The Frenchman, with characteristic courtesy, complimented Thyssen on his eminence as a captain of commerce and regretted the unpleasant circumstances attending his visit.

"I heartily sympathize," said old Thyssen, "with your position. It must be a disagreeable job for a famous General to head a large armed force against defenseless people who have nothing to fight with. I thank you very much."

No Estimate of his Wealth.
Not less peremptory was his rejoinder to the French when they suggested that he transfer to Paris 60 per cent of the capital invested in his various concerns. For, throughout his long career, Thyssen has always insisted on a personal control of the capital in his works. In the main, he has reinvested his profits. In so far as he has borrowed, the loans have been bonds, not stock distributed to the public and the workers. He is in this respect like Carnegie, before he retired, and it is thus not easy, especially under present circumstances, to give any reliable estimate of his wealth. In marks, of course, it runs into trillions! But in gold the figure would be more moderate, though undoubtedly scores of millions or dollars. That he should surrender this fortune to the enemy, whether by sale or seizure, was an idea scornfully to be rejected.

When his son Fritz was asked why coal did not reach France, the answer was characteristic: "We were ordered by the German Government to discontinue shipments. We are German subjects, living under German laws."

Whether or not Thyssen was as rich as Stinnes, he is less subtle. With Stinnes and the Krupp interests the Thyssens complete rather than co-operate. "It is the old German dilemma," says August, "which is our fate and our ruin."

Could Not Organize his Home.
One aspect of his life has been a failure. The man who could organize mines and ovens and furnaces and mills and ships and docks and barges could not organize his own home. Many years ago Thyssen and his wife were divorced. It was agreed that his fortune should be controlled by him until death and then divided among his children.

His second son, August, knew this, and, in a lavish life at Berlin, he anticipated his share of the heritage with an extravagance worthy of the prodigal in the parable. August junior issued promissory notes which in certain circles were passed from hand to hand as convenient currency.

Old Thyssen met these irregularities with a stiff upper lip. The case raged in the courts. The chief point at issue was whether the settlement did or did not include later additions to the fortune. The lawyers' fees were of an incredible magnitude. And in the final conciliation it was reckoned that Thyssen paid away one-fifth of his wealth to clear up his sons' debts.

It is the elder brother, Fritz, who now stands by his father and recently faced arrest by the French.

Cattle Rustlers May Turn Bootleggers.

CALGARY—Provincial cattlemen and law enforcement officers have a new worry to contend with. They are now wondering if the picturesque cattle rustler of the western plains has transferred from the earth completely or whether he has turned to the more profitable business of rum-running. Since President D. E. Riley of the eWestern Stock Growers' Association reported to a convention of the association that no requests were made during 1922 for legal assistance in the prosecution of rustlers this question has been occupying the attention of cattlemen and police officials. "It would seem," stated Pres. Riley in his report, "that cattle stealing was on the wane or it may be that other forms of law breaking are more profitable at the present time." So it now seems that the cattle rust-ler, whose exploits have been a pastime of fiction and kept the night reading of the dapper cad, is usually called the end of a rope under a tree witnessed by law-abiding punchers, or from a bullet in the shooter, has passed. At any rate, has left Alberta, perhaps for lucrative fields.

THE COUNTRY DOCTOR.

I bring a tribute to-day to one of the most courageous, hard working, indispensable figures in all our family life, the worthy country doctor.

He is the word worthy lest some may call of some individual case which the profession was not honored to have happened to meet such a case.

The country doctor is a man who has seen the low and high of the country. Even in these days, when doctors are so plentiful, he has a territory of at least a hundred square miles to cover. In the summer he has a horse, but in the winter it takes a horse to carry him on his long calls. When there is much snow he is out and away about the way of us are getting up; he has a pack for a bite at noon, starts a little drive in the other direction after dinner as possible, probably goes again in the evening back anywhere between the next morning.

Country people say that he often finds his horses find the way home while he sleeps. He takes care of the three horses himself. He had a vacation for seven years, like the General Brant, the Bonnie Briar Bush. He never heard him complain and never glad illness to any "messing by night or day." When he enters a sick room he has courage and hope with him, and a smile and a manner that makes you feel as if you must have been ill and over-nervous, and

KINDNESS TO ANIMALS.

When first I saw a cow she was as wild as a crow can be; a crow was ever on her brow, she seemed to have it in for me. And she would hook me with her horns, and crush me up against a post, and kick me upon by coras, and kick me as it hurt the most. "It's evident," I said, "her former master must have been a brute; he doubtless clubbed her head, and knocked her ribs apart. Consistent kindness to her calves; I'll see what kindness she shows in softening the neck I'd pat, and tell her she's simply grand, and take a pump from my hat and let her eat it out of my hand. I used no language and she was so wild. I did not swat her with a stick, and soon old Bossie was as good as dead. When I approach she follows me like a lamb, where crowds abide, and merchants speak words as "Ding!" when she is in their stoves. This kind of behavior will be kind, he will have, where'er he wanders, a loving cow behind.

The Lighter Side.

VERSATILE BED LINEN.

A weary tourist reached an isolated wayside inn, and gratefully accepted the only remaining bed. Next morning he was called rather earlier than he wanted to be, and drowsily asked to be allowed to continue his sleep. Half an hour later the landlady came to his door again and said tremblingly: "Sir, do please get up."

"What's the matter now?" "Oh, sir, I have two other gentlemen staying here, and they want their breakfast at 8 o'clock. I can't lay the table till I've got your top sheet."

HIS NAME CLARENCE?

"The mice would just go crazy over him."

"What 'ye mean?"

"He's such a big cheese."

"What good does it do ye? What d'ye learn?"

"Gosh all fishhooks! Ding, Dang, Darn!"

But Mirandy stood with her hands on her hips.

See she: "What langwidge from your lips!"

I work all the better for the news I get."

"I hear both gossip an' sermons, you bet!"

"I'll have you know it ain't no sin. An' there ain't no harm in listenin' in."

There are 4 grades of roofing felt selling in Newfoundland, "BARRETT'S" is guaranteed the highest grade.

"Barrett's" 1, 2 and 3-ply felts have been in use in Newfoundland for more than 50 years.

The best roof known in America is a "Barrett" roof, "Barrett's" felt ONLY is used in putting on a "Barrett" Roof. Ask any Architect.

"Barrett" 1, 2 and 3-ply felts are really made of felt saturated with genuine coal tar—the 2 and 3-ply felts have a layer of coal tar pitch between each ply.

"Barrett's" felts are made to give good wear, therefore they cost more than roofings made of paper saturated with diluted asphalt.

If you use "Barrett's" felt instead of common felt, a new roof covering for your house may cost you $2.00 more for the whole roof.

Roofs covered with "Barrett's" felt are secure, the extra cost of one or two dollars (for the entire roof) is money well spent.

Which felt do you intend to use?

Architects, Builders and Contractors prefer "Barrett's" Felt.

Susu Resumes Fogo Service.

The Fogo mail service opens on Tuesday next when the Coastal steamer Susu takes up her regular summer service. During the winter she has received a general overhauling, both to the hull and engines. A new saloon has been built and the water-tanks thoroughly renovated, and the ship is now in excellent condition. Captain Roberts will again be in charge of the Susu and a regular weekly service as heretofore will be given.

Silkworms Spin Colored Silk.

While the silkworm has no fancy for any particular color, preferring to weave its cocoon of a drab gray so that it will not show against gray tree trunk, one man has discovered, after patient experimentation, a method whereby he can make the little spinners produce, at his pleasure, any one of eighteen shades.

Dr. Vartan K. Osgian, one of a long line of silk manufacturers, has discovered that upon feeding the worms certain leaves they will respond by spinning certain colors. He has carried out his experiments until he has eighteen varieties of food to produce a like number of colors. The silk thus shaded will not fade in either water or sunlight.

Japan Pressing Resumption Trade With Russia.

TOKIO—Japanese business interests are pressing harder than ever for resumption of trade relations with Russia. Commercial organizations are petitioning the Government for action in that direction, and it is said that they have obtained the support of at least ten members of the Diet. Formation of a $50,000,000 corporation, representing a merger of several important companies, is reported with a view to Japanese exploitation of Siberian mines and forests as soon as the necessary legislation is passed to authorize trade between the two countries. Government loans at a low price of interest to finance the corporation are anticipated, and it is said that the Minister of Finance is favorable to the scheme. Proposals to recognize the Soviet Government have been side-tracked for the time being, leading legislators believing that the time for such action has not arrived. It is believed that a Trade Treaty is likely to be the forerunner of diplomatic recognition.

HOPE
There's hope in a place, however dark.
There's hope in a prison cell.
There's hope that lighted up Noah's Ark.
Till the raging waters fell.
And there's never a breast so bleak and bare
But the spark of hope is glistering there.
There is hope whatever the place may be
There is hope in the darkened room.
Hope on the storm-tossed, angry sea
And hope at a loved one's tomb.
And there's never a heart so sorely torn
But can cherish the hope of a brighter morn.
Hope can shine through a gray stone wall
And barriers strong and stout.
And hope can answer the faintest call
And no power can shut it out.
Though a man be shackled and locked ad away,
Hope sinks to him a better day.
For hope will follow the will to be,
And so with the will to do,
And there's none so low in this world but he May fashion his life anew.
For hope shall shine through the darkened day
Till the last brave man shall have passed away.

A Floating Bed-Room.

A "dancing-ship" is the latest novel enterprise of an Australian ex-officer. Dancing on an old ferry boat to the strains of a perfect orchestra, by the twinkling lights of Sydney Harbor, is now the rage of the fashionables of that Australian town.
Some months ago an old ferry boat was purchased by the ex-officer and thoroughly overhauled and redecorated. The best dancing floor procurable was installed on deck; and a modern kitchen below. A paragon of French chefs was engaged and placed in charge of the culinary arrangements.
For about $3.50, the jazz enthusiast may dance until midnight amid ideal surroundings; and sit down to a repast that would do credit to the best hotel in London.
At 8 o'clock the brilliantly lighted dancing ship leaves Circular Quay with its freight of happy jazzers. Calls are made at all the nearby ferry wharves to take on board more pleasure-boat parties. The ship slips down the harbor to a selected spot and drops anchor.
The jazz band strikes up and the couples glide under the glow of the colored Chinese lanterns. The water is smooth and beautiful and the twinkling lights of passing ferry boats add an Eastern glamor to the scene. There is a full moon, and the sub-tropical air is balmy and exhilarating. While the orchestra rests, the gentle lapping of the water against the ship's side provides exquisite music. What dancing could desire a more perfect setting.
A four-course supper is served in the artistically illuminated saloon. At midnight the violins and banjos sigh to a reluctant close. The anchor is weighed and the ship steals home with its satisfied passengers.

Canadian Girl is Star on Broadway.

NEW YORK, (By Canadian Press)—Ethel Wright, a Canadian, born in Montreal and educated at Sacred Heart Convent, who at the Ritz Theatre, is achieving distinction playing the rector's wife, a mother of seven children, in Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's "The Enchanted Cottage," brings to the performance, says the Sun, "one of the quietest touches of comedy to be found on Broadway today." But Miss Wright does not consider at all ridiculous the character of "Mrs. Corcellia" with one child "hovering between heaven and earth, so to speak," and seven others who have "ceased to hover." Speaking of her characterization of "Mrs. Corcellia," Miss Wright says, "I believe in large families, and for all her whimsical quaintness and provincialism, Mrs. Corcellia, with her brood of little Corcellias, has a dignity I never try to forget." Miss Wright is of the opinion that the fathers and mothers of large families should assign their own unrealized ambitions to their children, who, under parental guidance, might achieve the hopes and dreams of their parents. Miss Wright made her stage debut in "An Enemy of the King," with the famous Proctor Stock Company at His Majesty's Theatre, Montreal. She was first acclaimed by New Yorkers at the old Garrick Theatre in "The Royal Mole," in which she played the role of "Mag Trudeau." Her success in this is still vivid in the memory of those who saw it.

Bootleggers Will be up Against it.

EDMONTON, Alta.—Boundary bootleggers and bank bandits are in for a hard summer if they attempt any spectacular raids in the province of Alberta. The provincial police department has been equipped with motor cycles and machine guns and the efficiency of the new squad was recently demonstrated when a test was made before members of the provincial legislature. The machine guns are the latest thing, something on the order of the chaser airplane where the machine is pointed to aim the gun. The operator steers the motor cycle by moving the grip stock of the machine gun, thus keeping the firing bandits continually under the sights of the gun and following the motor cycle. In a recent test, 62 hits were made out of 70 shots by a gunner with the motor cycle racing 60 miles an hour. Six motor cycles with side cars have been provided for the new squad, but only two of them carry mounted machine guns, although the officer in the side car can carry a portable Lewis gun. Tear bombs were also demonstrated during the test before the legislature, but an unscheduled event occurred during the exhibition. As a motor cycle passed the assembled members a tear bomb accidentally exploded. The gas caused legislative eyes to stream and noses to sneeze while one sufferer had to be given first aid treatment.

Silver Plate Hall Marks.

It is interesting to know that all silver plate bears upon it a complete history which, minute as it is, can be readily read by the expert jeweller or silversmith. By studying the marks, the place, the time of manufacture, and the name of the manufacturer is revealed.
The majority of people are aware that silver for making articles of plate and adornment must be of a certain standard for the articles to be stamped upon the articles by the different assay offices of the United Kingdom.
The standard of silver is .925, or 11 ozs. 2 dwts. of fine silver and 18 dwts. of alloy, making twelve ounces standard silver. It may be here mentioned that it is believed that the word alloy comes from the French la loi, which phrase was originally used relative to the amount of copper allowed by the law for hardening silver.
The manufacturer of silver plate and silver articles makes up his pieces, then of standard silver. Then he generally has stamped upon them his initials or mark. Those of famous houses are readily recognized.
The manufacturer next sends the plate to the assay office to be tested. The principal assay offices are in London, Birmingham, Sheffield, Edinburgh, Glasgow, and Chester, but there are others. Birmingham is probably the busiest one.
Let us suppose a piece is sent to the Goldsmiths' Hall in London. The assay office there, should the article be of silver up to standard, is stamped with a lion passant (walking), which is the English mark for standard silver. The article is next stamped with a leopard's head, which is the hall-mark, that is the mark of the London Army Office.

It is rather curious that a number of people confuse these marks, and have a vague idea about them. They will say, "Oh, 'real silver' has a lion's head upon it," mistaking the leopard's head for a lion's head. But so-called "real" silver has other marks, according to the assay office to which it is sent to be stamped.
For instance, should the article be sent to Birmingham instead of to London, it will still be stamped with the lion passant, used all over England, but the hall-mark will be an anchor. For Sheffield the hall-mark is a crown.
These three places are where the most important assay offices are situated, and they have all a similar system for putting a date-mark upon silver. A letter, which is changed every year, is used. For instance, the Birmingham date-mark for 1921-2 is a "w." For 1922-3 it will be "x," for 1923-4 it will be "y," and for 1924-5 it will be "z."
The London assay date-mark for this year is "a" in Old English type.

Those engaged in constantly passing silver through their hands make it their business to ascertain the date-marks, both past and present.
As to the hall-marks, these, as has been explained, vary according to the town. The three principal ones have been mentioned. But Chester Assay Office uses a town mark—a sword erect between three garbs (sheaves of wheat). Exeter has the city arms—a castle with three doors.

Silverware made in Scotland is distinguished by a different standard mark. A lion rampant (standing) instead of a lion passant is used. Silver marked in Edinburgh differs again, for it is marked with a thistle, its hall-mark being a castle, which is the town mark. The date letter for Edinburgh silver for 1921-2 is a "p."
It should, of course, be understood that single pieces of silver, unless they are very fine or elaborate pieces, are not usually sent to the assay office. The big manufacturers send their silver in parcels, and charges are made accordingly. At the London Goldsmiths' Hall for articles under 10 dwts. each in weight a charge of 12c. per dozen is made for assaying.

For 10 dwts. and over the charge is 3c. per ounce. For chain work—albert, necklet, mesh-bags, and purses—the minimum charge is 5c. each. The lowest charge for a parcel of silver is 24c.
Assaying is a very simple matter. A scraping is taken from each part of the article to be assayed, wrapped in lead of proportionate weight, and the whole is heated. In the result all the alloy metal is absorbed and a pellet of pure silver remains, the weight for which, in proportion to the original weight of the scrapings, gives the fineness of the silver assayed.

First Bride to Wear White Wedding Dress.

Perhaps the first bride to wear a dress of white broadcloth, over which, however, she donned a Court mantle of Persian blue velvet, which was held up by two pages.
For some time the white robe was favored only by brides of high rank, and it was not until the end of the seventeenth century that it became at all usual at weddings.

MEXICAN RECOGNITION

Evening: Foreign holders cannot escape the measure which affects so many of the great Mexican landed proprietors. There is no doubt that the reapproachment is not the trust of Latin-Americans for "Yankees" is not productive of results, nor does it help to bring about a better understanding, is, therefore, opportune, and is urgent, for Washington to take attitude towards Mexico and the Spanish republics of the continent. Official recognition of the Government would not be much longer.
