LORD MORDEN'S DAUGHTER — OR — THE TRAGEDY OF THE CEDARS.

CHAPTER XXIX.

"Oh, my dear, dear husband, what can have kept you away from me?" she moaned. "I feel that there is something behind this awful telegram—I know that here must be, when I remember the trouble in your loving eyes. I can tell by the icy chill that encircles my heart."

When she had grown calmer, she endeavored to write to Captain Deene, but after scribbling several sheets of paper, found that the task was impossible.

"No," she decided, "I will write to-morrow, and I would not send it away in any case without Edmund's approval. He is not coming to-night. My darling! my darling! and I had put on my prettiest gown to please him."

It was late when she retired, and the pillow was wet with tears ere she found relief in sleep.

When she opened her eyes the sunshine was steaming into her room, and there was the chirping and singing of busy birds outside.

Dora looked at her watch. It was nearly seven o'clock, and she jumped up with an exclamation of surprise and pleasure.

It was nearly time for the postman—perhaps he had already been there! Never before did she dress so rapidly. Edmund's letter would be waiting for her—Edmund himself would soon be with her!

She met Madam Bell on the stairs, a flush upon her cheeks, eagerness in her eyes.

"Are there any letters?" she asked. "I did not intend sleeping so long."

"The postman does not come until half-past seven, dear. I know that you are anxious. Hark! I believe that is his ring!"

Dora rushed past her, sped across the hall, and took the letter from the carrier, murmuring her thanks to the half-bewildered man.

"Is that the young mistress?" he asked a gardener who was trimming the borders in the drive. "A mighty pretty girl she is! I thought it was an angel snatching my letters away."

Then he went on, muttering under his breath:

"He can't be of much account, anyway, to leave her alone the first day of their marriage! I can't help seeing telegrams, I can't!"

Dora read Edmund's letter in the privacy of her own room, once, twice, a dozen times; then she hid it away in her bosom, and for a time was happy and expectant. She wandered from room to room, a song upon her lips, joyous laughter in her eyes; and after breakfast she returned to her favorite place to watch for her darling—she returned to the seat in the oriel window that looked out upon the drive.

But the day passed, and there was no message. Edmund's father must be terribly ill; but why did he not send some one to her? Why did he not send some news? This suspense was terrible indeed!

Once again the shadows of night covered "The Myrtles" and Dora was sitting at her post, waiting. The wind moaned in the limes, and now and then sent down a shower of dying leaves that whispered their sorrows as they trailed along the withering grass.

At last Dora grew desperate; her eyes glittered, her breath was hot and dry.

"I must go to him," she said to Madam Bell. "Something has happened; I am sure of it. I can bear this suspense no longer."

"Do you know where Mr. Locksley's father lives? Poor child, this is a bitter trial for you!" Madam Bell kissed her affectionately. "But to-morrow may clear up the trouble."

Dora passed a feverish and troubled night—a night of many awful dreams. There were times when she felt that it would have been a relief to scream, and she sobbed:

"Oh, Edmund, my darling, my husband, come to me!"

Morning brought hope with its first bright beam, but this was dispelled when no letter came, and she dressed for her journey to town.

She insisted upon going alone, for madam's well-meaning but fussy ways were irritating.

Her inquiries at the Prince Albert Club resulted in nothing. The clerk had not seen Mr. Locksley for a day or two; he was not quite sure whether it was one or two days.

She turned away, heartsick, and the man looked wonderingly after her.

"Another lady after Mr. Locksley," he called, jocularly, to the commissionaire at the door. "They hunt him up, don't they?"

Dora heard the words, and her eyes flashed with indignation.

She had scarcely gone twenty steps when she was aware of some one running behind her, and Frank Rogers' welcome voice was in her ears.

"Mrs. Locksley—pardon me!" He took off his hat politely.

"I am so glad to meet you, Mr. Rogers," said Dora, her lips quivering. "I am looking for my husband—for Mr. Locksley."

Frank looked puzzled.

"I want to see him myself," he replied. "He told me that I should find him at his club any day, but he was not there yesterday, and has not been seen to-day—though it is early yet."

"When did you see him last?" demanded Dora.

"The day before yesterday—the day that you were married."

"Heaven help me, Mr. Rogers, I have not seen him since then!"

Frank was alarmed, and uttered a sharp ejaculation.

"Mr. Rogers—Mr. Rogers." Dora's voice was faint, her eyes were full of terror. "You do not think—oh, you do not think that anything has happened to him? He wrote to me that he could not come because his father was ill—dreadfully ill. His letter was written here, at seven o'clock in the evening the day before yesterday. He promised to be home early yesterday morning, but I have not received one word from him. I will go to 'The Cedars'—I will go to his father's home. He is there—he is ill!"

She started away, and Frank walked with her until they arrived at Charing Cross station.

He inquired about the trains, and procured her a ticket, saying:

"I will meet you here when you come back, Mrs. Locksley. I will be here at four o'clock, and wait until six. I am very anxious about my master, and, in the meantime, will see Mr. Fairfax again, and make careful inquiries about his movements."

"Thank you, thank you," Dora said; "I shall always be grateful to you, Mr. Rogers."

The train seemed to crawl, and, although the journey occupied less than thirty minutes, it seemed hours to Dora.

When she reached Streatham, she injured her way to "The Cedars." The porter at the station told her that it was a mile away up the hill.

A mile! In twenty minutes she had accomplished it, and stood, flushed and panting, outside the gloomy iron gates that barred her further progress. She rang the bell with a determined hand, a wildly throbbing heart, a brain that seemed to be on fire.

A small side gate in the wall was opened, and a servantman demanded her business.

"I wish to see Mr. Locksley," she said, making a step forward. "Young Mr. Locksley. I know that he is here."

"I don't think he is, miss," was the reply. "But I'll ask."

He was about to close the gate again, but she pushed past him with the desperation born of despair.

"I will come to the house with you; I will see some one who can tell me what I want to know."

The man handed her to the care of a footman, and the footman demanded her name.

"Mrs. Locksley," she replied, proudly. "I wish to see by husband—I know that he is here."

The footman started, and for a moment was dumfounded. Then he conducted her to a gloomy reception-room, and went away.

She shivered with a nameless dread in this terrible house. All was dark, dreary and cold.

One—two—three minutes passed, and she heard a man's quick steps on the polished oaken floor.

She sprang to her feet with outstretched hands. Was Edmund coming? was her darling here?

The door opened, and her arms dropped to her sides, for a strange gentleman stood before her.

It was Viscount Melville.

The viscount glanced curiously, almost pityingly, at the beautiful girl before him; then said, in the soft tones that he knew so well how to modulate:

"Madam, will you please be seated?" Dora obeyed, and replied faintly:

"I wish to see Mr. Locksley—Mr. Edmund Locksley—my husband."

Melville affected to start, and there was an expression of the deepest sympathy in his eyes.

"Your husband?" he repeated. (To be continued.)

For the dainty tea, spread thin slices of angel cake with rose-leaf conserve.

TAKING IT EASY

J. Gladstone Wiggins spurns the "new" this glance is "stern and sour," he called me in to wash his cow, and paid me by the hour. I started in one morn at eight, and d sloshed along all day, and made that cow look up to date and swell and recheche. But Wiggins, when he journeyed home, from tolling in the mart, had fantods working in his dome, and wrath was in his heart. He paid me with a bitter smile, and said, "Odds blood and bones, your breast is full of sin and guile, Theophilus P. Jones! I offer you a little job, an hour's work and no more, and all day long you scrub and swab the old cow till she's sore. I thought to pay you fifty cents, an ample sum, by chee, and now your robber hand presents a bill for snackers three! I pay you now what you demand, resentment in my heart; I'm done with you, get off my land, avaunt, arabout, depart! I'll tell my friends you are a jay who takes a half-hour's job and stretches it throughout a day, that coin may fill your fob." I chase around from door to door, employment to obtain, and no one offers me a chore—men smile when I complain. "A man with a reputation punk," they say, "can scarcely thrive; you take a job that's worth a plank, and make it brigd you five. You work that gratt three times or four, and then your rep is made, and men won't hire you any more to ply a brush or spade."

One Friend Tells Another

The fame of a successful remedy is often spread far and wide by women telling one another of its merits. This is evidenced by a letter written by Mrs. Wm. Riddale of Mt. Forest, Ont. She writes: "I was weak, miserable and in pain. A friend told me what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for her. I tried it and am now well and strong. There is nothing equal to it for women's troubles." There are women everywhere who have been benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and gladly tell their friends and neighbors about it.

Black Eyes I Have Whitened

By a LIVERPOOL CHEMIST.

The black eye trade is not what it was. Only one case has turned up at my shop in the last five weeks. Years ago, it was common to have two or three people a week who wanted a black eye painted out.

They would be mostly young bloogs who had got into some sort of fracas, but young fellows take their pleasures more soberly these days, and the majority of present cases are merely the results of accidents.

Not long ago, I was sent for in a great hurry, and rushed away to a house where a wedding was to take place that day. The bride, romping with her young brother, banged her face against a half-opened door. She had black eyes as the result, but I painted it out, so successfully that none of the guests noticed it.

One of the most troublesome patients I ever handled was a man who had dined too well and in that condition, fell and sustained a black eye. His friends knocked me up and bundled their companion in for me to disguise the discoloration before they took him home.

Indignation.

The man got the idea into his fuddled head that we were trying to blind him. Then he became obstreperous and bit one of his friends' hands. That man, stung to action, hit him on the jaw and knocked him unconscious in which state he was an easy patient to handle.

Black eyes can be acquired in an extraordinary number of ways. Careless housewives, who leave the handles of saucepans projecting from the kitchen range, sometimes get a black eye through stooping suddenly, and falling to notice the projecting handle. More black eyes occur in winter than in summer. It is easy on a dark night, to bump into a tramway standard or a tree.

I have known a man receive a black eye through coming into contact with somebody's elbow while jostling for a tram-car. Umbrellas are dangerous things, and have caused many a black eye through being carried under the arm with the ferrule pointing upwards.

His Meek Wife.

Then, there is always the legitimate way of getting a black eye. A strapping fellow came to me once, accompanied by his wife—a meek looking little soul to look at. While I was disguising the man's discoloured eye, I asked him jokingly how he got it. He mumbled something about a fall, but his wife broke in to say that she herself had done it with a saucepan and that the next time he or anyone else gave her any more "old black" she was quite capable of administering two black eyes.

I kept my mouth shut in the back room where I was attending to the man, there were two of my own saucepans close to the amazon's hand."

Foreign Communists May be Refused Entry Into Great Britain

Injury to Besco Property in New Waterford Reported—Rider Haggard Dead—Want of Confidence Vote in King Government Defeated.

BRITAIN MAY NOT ADMIT COMMUNISTS.
LONDON, May 14. The alarm over the growth of communism in Great Britain, which has been voiced recently, seems to have been strengthened by the decision of the British Cabinet, and now, it is understood, the advisability of refusing all foreign communists permission to enter this country for an annual conference of British Communists at Glasgow on May 31 is being considered.

U. S. WOULD SEPARATE ARMS CONVENTION FROM LEAGUE.
GENEVA, May 14. The U. S. delegation to the League of Nations International Conference for control of traffic in arms and ammunitions, to-day officially filed an amendment to divorce the arms convention from the League.

THREE KILLED WHEN TRAINS COLLIDED.
TERRE HAUTE, Ind., May 14. Two engineers and a fireman were killed and several injured in collision between Pennsylvania passenger train No. 6, east bound, and a freight train en route to divorce the arms convention.

PUMPING PLANT DESTROYED.
SYDNEY, May 14. Damages were reported to-day to a large pumping plant supplying three collieries near the New Waterford property of the British Empire Steel Corporation, and two men were sent up for trial to-day on a charge of placing obstructions upon the railway tracks near Glace Bay.

NEW ZEALAND'S ACTING PREMIER.
WELLINGTON, May 14. Sir Francis Bell, Attorney General in the Massey Government, has been made Acting Premier.

ALL BUT FOUR SHIPS GONE.
NEW YORK, May 14. Twelve of the sixteen rum vessels that have been anchored on rum row under the surveillance of the blockading coastguard have put to sea in the direction of Halifax, officers reported to-day. Two steamers and two schooners remained of all the fleet that was on the rum row when the blockade commenced.

CANADIAN TRADE FIGURES.
OTTAWA, May 14. Canada's trade with the United Kingdom continues to increase, while trade with the United States lessens, according to figures just given out, showing that exports to the United Kingdom for twelve months ending March were $35,000,000 less than the corresponding period preceding. The total imports from the United Kingdom remained practically the same as the previous year, but imports from the United States decreased $30,000,000.

BULLION FOR ROYAL BANK.
MONTREAL, May 14. Two million dollars worth of gold bars from the United States arrived at the head office of the Royal Bank of Canada this morning, but it was not ascertained what the bullion was for.

BALDWIN GAVE FOURTH OF HIS ESTATE TO NATION.
LONDON, May 14. That Prime Minister Baldwin gave a fourth of his fortune to the nation at a time when its financial needs were urgent is revealed by Wickham Steed in an article in the Review of Reviews.

On his death, in 1913, there appeared in the London Times a letter signed F. S. T., wherein the writer dwelt upon the country's exhaustion following upon the sacrifices of the war and the danger that by a natural reaction all classes might be submerged by a wave of extravagance and materialism. The nation must be made to understand the gravity of the financial situation, he said, and that love of country was better than love of money. This could be done by examples set by the weather class, and F. S. T. suggested they should impose upon themselves a voluntary levy. By this means, he thought, it would be possible to pay to the Exchequer enough to relieve the taxpayers of £50,000,000 yearly. On November 13, 1919, the Chancellor announced the receipt of £150,000 of the war loan from F. S. T. for cancellation. Mr. Baldwin was at that time Financial Secretary to the Treasury and the initials F. S. T. led keen-eyed individuals to detect the identity of the writer. Mr. Baldwin's estate at that time was valued at $50,000.

LIQUOR GOING UP IN NEW YORK.
NEW YORK, May 14. The price of liquor is going up in New York and going down in California. The reason is the Dry Navy's blockade of the east coast's rum row.

RIDER HAGGARD DEAD.
LONDON, May 14. Sir H. Rider Haggard, author, died here to-day. Sir Henry Rider Haggard was born at Bradenham, Norfolk, in 1856, and spent the earlier part of his life in South Africa, on diplomatic service. He wrote copiously of life in Africa and produced for twelve years at the rate of a novel a year. He returned to England after the Boer War ended and began studying for the Bar, also continuing his fiction work. Although not generally known, Sir Rider Haggard was one of the outstanding agriculturists of the British Isles. He was knighted in 1912.

BRITAIN WILL NOT CALL DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE.
LONDON, May 14. The British Government will not at present take the initiative in calling a world disarmament conference. Premier Baldwin told the House of Commons to-day.

TWO CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH.
BATH, N.B., May 14. Freddie Brooks, four years old, and his baby brother of eight months, children of Gideon Brooks, were burned to death soon after midnight when their home here in which they were living, was destroyed by fire. Edward McShesbery, who attempted to rescue the children, was seriously burned and overcome by smoke.

CONSERVATIVES DID NOT VOTE.
OTTAWA, May 14. The Progressive amendment to the Budget indicating a want of confidence in the Government was defeated in the House to-day by a vote of 116 to 33.

The Originals (Overseas Dumbells) in "Stepping Out"

Something extraordinary in theatrical entertainment, the season's biggest laugh, is coming to the Nickel Theatre next Monday for the entire week when Canada's celebrated soldier performers, the ORIGINALS, (including most of the Original Dumbells) will present "Stepping Out," an entirely different conception of entertainment on their first visit to the city. Theatregoers of St. John's have been looking forward to the boys' engagement here and are assured of a rare treat in "Stepping Out." They have a comedian who is without a peer on this continent. Bob Anderson is one of those talented Lanashire fun-makers who is just naturally funny, his every appearance on the stage is the occasion for riotous laughter.

Gene Pearson, the owner of the most extraordinary male soprano voice before the public, and who created a sensation last season with "Her" singing, has added greatly to his stage wardrobe, and also his vocal repertoire. In the new show he plays the role of a dashing Prima Donna in a one act Operetta which has been specially written for him; sings and dances in an elaborate Carnival scene; and plays the part of Lady Violet Sidds, the daughter of the Duchess of Dulwater, in the new and screamingly funny burlesque "The Duchess Performs."

The singing of the Originals has invariably been a joy, and their forces are strengthened even more by the addition to the cast of Thomas Dunn, a brilliant new baritone, and Gus McKinnon, a delightful new tenor; Bert Langley and Jerry Brayford, as always, add much to the musical and to the humorous excellences of "Stepping Out." Alan Murray, the old favourite, blossoms forth this season in a quite new line of characterization which is a surprise and delight to those who know him only as a graceful dancer and an attractive young man. His portrayals of the Apache Girl, of Lady Elizabeth Sidds, and as a Dancer with both Jerry Brayford and Thomas Dunn, are all features of the show, and it is quite evident that this latest Originals revue is surpassing its immediate predecessor "Rapid Fire" in its uproarious comedy and beautiful music, all of which quality for the characteristic that supplies this clever troupe with its trade name.

When "The Duchess Performs," the final setting of the show, play- goes again witness the first and original "Duchess." Leonard Young, who delighted thousands four years ago as the aristocrat of "The Duchess Entertains," and who now brings new laughter at "Her" equally ill-advised attempts to "perform." Lionel Broadway, the Company's brilliant artist juvenile, is a young Canadian artist of distinction and has already become a big favourite with the many admirers of the Originals. His snappy new song hits and magnetic personality stamp him as a musical comedy artist of splendid ability. Norman Blume and Jimmy MacDonald are two new comedians who have jumped into immediate favor with the Canadian public. There are nearly a score of melodious hits in "Stepping Out" and is an offering that everyone should see to fully appreciate.

Norman Talmadge in "Secrets"
AT STAR MOVIE MONDAY.

Do wives of to-day agree with the wife of this drama who said: "My husband in his association with other women, may he always be right, but my husband, right or wrong?"

Can a husband hide the life he leads away from home? Can a husband love others—but love his wife the most? Can happiness be where a mother's smiles hide a father's indiscretions from the four children they love?

Only a drama as poignant, as beautiful, as searchingly truthful as this, could answer so vital a problem.

Adams and Cheney
ENCORED AND ENCORED.

Scoring an emphatic hit savoring of a triumph, Paramount's picturization of Bret Harte's famous story, "Salomy Jane," was cordially indorsed by large audiences at the Majestic Theatre last night.

Salomy Jane is a delightful mountain character as portrayed by Jacqueline Logan. When the stage, driven by Yuba Bill, a part excellently portrayed by Mr. Favre, is robbed and the stranger (Maurice Flynn) is arrested for the crime, the action becomes tense and spirited.

There are night rides galore, and many beautiful spots in the redwood forests of the Santa Cruz mountains are pictured with restful effect. But the story—it's as full of thrill as an egg is of meat. It deals with life in Red Dog, a California mining town in the days of gold, but unlike most Western thrillers, its treatment is far from being trite and commonplace. One cannot praise too much the excellence of the work and ability of Adams and Cheney. Their delightful renditions have endeared them to the hearts of the thousands who have heard them, and these same thousands find it wonderful, as was also John McCormack's ballad "I Hear You Calling Me," which enraptured the audience. ### MORE DAMAGE TO BESCO MINING EQUIPMENT.

SYDNEY, May 15. Two instances of damage to mining property of the British Empire Steel Corporation, Ltd since the men walked out on March sixth last as the outcome of a wage dispute, were reported to the police to-day, when the volunteer maintenance men notified the country police that the pump house at Old Bridgeport supplying the water for numbers one, five and ten collieries had been broken into and the machinery wrecked, and also that the hoisting apparatus of a small mine nearby used by the idle miners to supply their local fuel needs had been put out of commission.

Lumber Cargoes Arrive

Quite a number of lumber laden schooners have arrived in port during the past couple of days from Trinity Bay. This lumber in seven and eight foot lengths is sawn one half, three quarters and one inch thick. The half inch sells for $14 per thousand and the three quarters from $20 to $22 per thousand. Quite a lot of birch junks are also in the market and are being bought up quickly, as it is stated that only a small quantity have been sawn owing to shortage of water for running the mills.

A good combination for fruit salad is a sliced pineapple, grapefruit, strawberries and walnut meats. Serve with French dressing.

(Nfld. Weekly.)

We were glad to welcome at the office of the "Weekly" during the past week:

Charles L. March, who will be remembered by all veterans of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment as one of the 'giants' of No. 3 Platoon. 'Charlie' is a son of Sergt. A. March, who is now stationed at Carbonear, and shortly after his return from overseas went out to the Western States and was located for a while in Montana. In 1919 he came to Boston and for the past three years has been connected with the firm of Moller's Inc., the large furniture establishment in Cambridge. He is planning to take a trip to Newfoundland this summer on his vacation.

W. B. Skinner, of St. John's, who is spending a vacation in this country. 'Billy', who is well known in sporting circles in St. John's, being a prominent member of the B. I. S. left home at the beginning of April and went to New York to consult an oculist. After visiting relatives and friends in the metropolis he came to Boston last week where he is enjoying a stay of a few days before returning home. He expects to be admitted to the Bar in St. John's in September and his many friends wish him every success in his legal career.
Hon. Dr. Robinson and wife, who have been on a visit to relatives and friends in Boston, left for home on Tuesday and will spend a few days in St. John, N.B., on the way.

CLEAN UP.

Editor Sports Column.

Dear Sir,—On Wednesday, May 13th, in looking over the sporting column I notice that the football fans suggest that the Football League "be up and doing" and being a lover of the good old game myself, I would like to see the field and its surroundings put in first class condition for the coming season. Now that the Football League are holding their first meeting on Saturday night, I think it should be one of their first duties to see that the part of the field that the players use is properly rolled, and put in a better condition than it has been the past few years. And secondly to reclass the dressing rooms as they are badly in need of repair at the present time. If you want to get good results from the games this year you must give the players every encouragement, as no player can go out and play on St. Georges field in its present state because he is running the risk of breaking an arm or a leg. Now that the teams are hard at practice and I believe we are going to have several good teams in the league this year, I would like for those who are in a position to make the game what it should be. And the best way to "clean up" is to make improvements where same are needed, and I can safely say that you will have better results the coming year both financially and otherwise.

Yours sincerely,

P.S.

A Goodly Heritage

A correspondent writing from the West Coast asks, "Is the Government going to do anything in connection with the proposed road from Port aux Basques to Curling? It would be the best thing ever undertaken. I have letters frequently from parties in the States asking whether it would be possible to use their cars if they brought them to the West Coast."

A news item in another column of this issue tells of sportsmen, already fishing on Robinson's River, who have captured their first salmon. This is by no means unusual so early in the season, and those who are willing to forego the pleasures of the warmer weather for the sake of sport are less likely to be disappointed during the earlier months on these rivers than they are later. The most uncertain factor in salmon fishing is the condition of the water in the rivers, but this varies least during May and June.

The length of the season on these salmon rivers is one of their most remarkable features. Fish may be obtained in May in the lower pools, and in the upper waters good sport is to be had practically until the end of the season. The fisherman has a wide selection of rivers, and once they are bridged and connected by roads, this part of the country is certain to become one of the greatest pleasure resorts in British North America.

We trust that the proposed highway will be undertaken at as early a date as possible, not only because of the attraction which it will have for tourists, but also because the land through which the road will run will be opened up for agricultural purposes.

Already a great many of the residents in Bay St. George give the greater part of their time to agricultural pursuits, and they only require encouragement in the matter of transportation facilities to induce them to farm on a more extensive scale. The decision of the Government to reduce the freight rates on local produce is certain to have this effect, and no doubt the plans of the Minister of Agriculture and Mines will further stimulate the industry.

In no part of the country do the conditions more amply justify such a policy of development as the Government have decided upon than in Bay St. George. Nature has provided all that is required to make it a rich farming district, and in addition the essentials necessary in the development of other industries. Its scenery, climate, and sporting attractions are unexcelled, and it only remains for us to turn these great resources to practical account.

The Passing of Rider Haggard

The death of Rider Haggard, announced in to-day's despatch, adds another name to the list of those distinguished sons of the Empire who within a short space of time have passed to the Great Beyond.

Noted particularly for his remarkable literary talent, Sir

Henry Rider Haggard's work in connection with Empire problems of one kind and another, agricultural development, and social conditions was sufficient in itself to rank him among the most outstanding men of the day, and his passing will be deplored not only by those who were closely associated with him, but by English speaking peoples in every quarter of the globe.

Of his writings, which cover a wide field and which are familiar to every reader it is scarcely necessary to refer. Suffice it to say that his place among modern writers will remain long after many of the works of his contemporaries have been forgotten.

Between 1912 and 1917 Rider Haggard travelled round the world as a member of the Dominion's Royal Commission, and it was in that capacity that he visited Newfoundland. For his valuable work during those years in connection with the after war settlement of ex-service men he received a K.B.E., was nominated Honorary Life Fellow of the Royal Colonial Institute, and was presented with an inscribed address of thanks signed by the President and Council of the Institute in recognition of "conspicuous service to the British Empire."

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

May 14th—Waked betimes by the painters coming to begin their work about which they do make so much noise that needs little to rise since they would be little use in trying to sleep amid the din they make. So to Water Street, where the greatest lack of news everywhere and methinks will be compelled to discontinue my journal for the lack of it if there is no improvement soon. By despatches out of England this day news of the death of Sir H. R. Haggard, that did write divers tales of romantic adventure which have given me the greatest possible pleasure. Indeed, I do remember him well, being that he did visit St. John's many years ago. This night my wife and I go hear the Madrigal Concert, mightily fine, and even the wretch enjoys it albeit she has no more ear for music than a cat's paw. Coming home, do have some trouble with the engine of my motor coach, or so I think, but do find the trouble is naught but lack of gasoline, which maddens me that I should have neglected it, since it do give my wife an opportunity to berate me for my carelessness.

Firemen Hampered by Traffic Obstruction

At 10.45 this morning the Central and West End Fire Companies were called to the residence of James Stamp, situated near Syme's Bridge, where sparks from a chimney had ignited shingles on the roof. The blaze was extinguished with a couple of buckets of water applied by men working near and when the firemen arrived danger had passed. Before the apparatus left the scene a second call from the same vicinity was sent in to the Central Fire Ho and the East End firemen responded. This fire was at R. G. Reid's premises. It was observed that whilst the fire apparatus was passing through the streets very little attention was given to the new traffic regulations. This was particularly noticeable on Gower Street West, and it required the utmost vigilance on the part of the drivers of the apparatus to make way through a congestion of traffic without causing an accident. The Rules of the Road are explicit on this point and for the benefit of the public we quote them:

"Police, fire, mail vehicles and ambulances shall have the right of way over all other vehicles."
 "The driver of a vehicle on the approach of any apparatus of the Fire Department shall bring his vehicle TO A STANDSTILL as near the left hand curb or side drain as possible."
 "The sooner the public learn that these rules must be observed the better, both in their own interest and out of consideration for the firemen who, in rushing through the streets, have difficulties enough without having them added to through carelessness of individuals."

Fire Wipes Out Garage

ON WATERFORD BRIDGE ROAD.

Shortly before eleven o'clock this morning a telephone call summoned the fire trucks to Mr. R. G. Reid's residence, "Palace House," Waterford Bridge Road, where a fire had broken out in the garage, which is situated about thirty yards from the residence. About the same time the Western and Central firemen were engaged putting out a small blaze at the house of Jas. Stamp, near Syme's Bridge, on the same road. The East End firemen responded to the second alarm and by the time they had arrived the first fire had been put out and the Central and West End firemen were coping with what looked like a very serious blaze. As the city water supply does not extend as far as this, a line of hose had to be run to Waterford Bridge river, a distance of 250 yards. The men working got under way a good head of water was obtained and it was not long before the efforts of the firemen showed results. For a time while the blaze was at its full height the private residence, including the wireless station and outhouses alongside, were endangered, but it was not long before three copious streams of water, managed to confine it to the burning building. In spite of their efforts, however, the fire continued to burn in the garage to the ground.

In the meantime Tessler's barn on Topsail Road caught, and kept the numbers of the firemen busy for some time. To make matters worse the hose could not reach them, and the firemen with other willing hands formed a bucket brigade and secured enough water from a nearby well to put out the blaze before much damage was done. The fire at Reid's garage was first discovered by the men working in the garden, and at great risks to themselves they rushed into the burning building and succeeded in getting out three motor cars. The garage was well stocked with motor equipment and other accessories, all of which went up in smoke. At 1 p.m. nothing was left but the smouldering ruins.

Dalhousie Law Students' Banquet

On the 11th inst at a banquet given by the Dalhousie Law Association at the Halifax Hotel to the eighteen graduates from the Dalhousie faculty of Law Dean Read presided and was probably the best that has graduated in many years. The President of the Nova Scotia Barristers' Society said that he was proud to have among them a class which he considered the banner class of the law school. Prof. Smith said he did not know of any better class that had gotten out of three faculties. Dean Read in his concluding remarks said, "I do not think you could find an able group of men in any university in the world." The group of class referred to is the one of which Raymond Gushue headed.

FRENCH MILITARY HOSPITALS FILLED IN FIGHTING ZONE.
 TETUAN, Spanish Morocco, May 15. Advice received from the French zone are to the effect that fighting between the French forces and the rebel tribesmen continues with heavy losses on both sides. It is asserted that the French High Command is using native Moroccan in the operations. The advice declare that the Rifian advance appears to have spent itself, but that French reinforcements which include heavy artillery continue to come in from Algeria. The Rifians have captured French airplanes which were forced down on account of damage.

DISCUSSION OF UNEMPLOYMENT IN LORDS AND COMMONS.
 LONDON, May 15. There were no present signs of any great industrial development such as followed. The Napoleonic Wars, unless it was in respect of the generation of "Electricity" said Sir Arthur Steele, Matland, Minister of Labor in the House of Commons to-day, and in this matter the British Government had prepared extensive plans which he hoped to submit to Parliament before the autumn. Sir Steele Matland made the statement in the course of a debate raised by the Labor opposition, wherein they attacked the Government for failure to check unemployment. The Government, contended the Labourites, was refusing to give the same help to stimulate trade with Russia that it had given willingly to France. The discussion on unemployment in the Commons, and a debate on the competition met by British Moving Picture producers with those of the United States in the House of Lords, featured to-day's Parliamentary sessions. In regard to the former, a Labor motion impugning the Government was defeated 329 to 111. Regarding the moving picture industry in Great Britain, Lord Newton deplored the monopoly enjoyed by the United States firms in this country, the British companies and the Councils. He urged a departmental enquiry into the matter. Among the other Peers who supported him was Lord Burmah owner of the Daily Telegraph and President of the Imperial Press Conference. Viscount Peel, First Commissioner of Works, admitted the seriousness of the situation but doubted the efficacy of such a committee.

Captain A. Keen Reviews the Sea

Editor Evening Telegram: Dear Sir—The letter on the subject of the sea, written by Capt. W. B. Keen, Secretary to him and sent me, for I have written a very little has been seen by me. I have written a very little has been seen by me. I have written a very little has been seen by me.

Mr. Keen's letter is a waste of valuable space, though very little has been seen by me. I have written a very little has been seen by me. I have written a very little has been seen by me.

My criticism, Mr. Keen, is not intended to be a waste of valuable space, though very little has been seen by me. I have written a very little has been seen by me. I have written a very little has been seen by me.

What are the facts? The figures are taken from the books brought in by the steamers between the 1904 and 1916 or thereabouts. Dunfield says the high seas and in that time

In 1898—216,000 young fish
 " 1899—242,765
 " 1900—225,748
 " 1901—200,727
 " 1902—211,050
 " 1903—238,230
 " 1904—259,337

1,807,817

You will see by the above figures that in seven years, 1,807,817 young herring were taken from the combined fleet of 1,000 steel ships only brought in as follows:

In 1909—222,513 young fish
 " 1910—298,761
 " 1911—245,444
 " 1912—135,841
 " 1913—205,601
 " 1914—224,167
 " 1915—44,561
 " 1916—227,234

1,634,122

This shows a difference of 173,695 young fish in seven years, which combined fleet of 1,000 steel ships only brought in as follows:

Captain A. Kean Reviews the Seal Fishery

Dear Sir—The interest taken in the letter on the seal fishery written by Capt. W. B. Kean, is very complimentary to him and gratifying to me. I have written so much, and so very little has been said in reply, that I came to the conclusion that it was a waste of valuable time. And although very little has been said, I have introduced, three of our most prominent letter writers have taken the matter with a vim and introduced some thoughts worthy of consideration. Mr. Arthur English began to start the ball rolling, followed by that veteran of newspaper writers Mr. L. C. Morris, and last but by no means least, Mr. Brian Dunfield.

My criticism, I trust, will be received in the same good spirit in which it is given. I shall deal with the last letter first and I want to refer to Mr. Dunfield that his average of the wooden ships per spring does not help us out at all. For instance from 1875-79 there was an average of 20 ships per spring but from 1920-24 a little over 10 ships per spring. In other words if 20 ships were in a patch of 200,000 seals they would only average 10,000 seals each whereas if only 10 steamers went in a patch of 200,000 they could average 20,000 each, unless the small number of ships were loaded and could not go in any more. Unfortunately such has not been the case, for we have not had a single loaded ship since 1916. Mr. Dunfield says the steel ships came out between 1905 and 1916, and did very little damage to the herds. If he had looked more carefully at Chateaux he would see we only had one steel ship from 1905 to 1909, namely the Adventure, and her average per spring up to that date was only 24,754, whereas the average of the Aurora, a wooden ship, for 4 springs previous to that was 28,679. Consequently to be fair to the steel ships we have to judge them from 1909 to 1916, and not that year there was only one steel ship in the fleet.

What are the facts? The following figures are taken from Chateaux' Book and they contain the number of young seals brought in by the wooden steamers between the years 1898 and 1904, both years included, when Mr. Dunfield says the highest peak was reached and in that he is right:

1898-210,060 young harps.
1899-242,765 "
1900-326,748 "
1901-280,727 "
1902-221,550 "
1903-236,230 "
1904-289,337 "
1,807,817

You will see by the above the wooden ships in seven years brought in 1,807,817 young harps, whereas from 1909 to 1916 in a period of 8 years, the combined fleet of wooden and steel ships only brought in 1,634,122 seals as follows:

1909-222,513 young harps.
1910-298,761 "
1911-245,444 "
1912-135,841 "
1913-205,501 "
1914-224,167 "
1915-44,561 "
1916-227,234 "
1,634,122

This shows a difference of 173,695 young harps in favour of the wooden steamers in seven years against the whole combined fleet in 8 years, and since 1916 we have been courting the ocean and have not been able to find anything like the quantity of young seals that we think we ought to find. In 1923, when I gave an address to the Rotary Club I expressed my opinion that the stopping of second trips was the worst thing that could happen to the seal fishery, because when we presented second trips, we would abandon the young seals to rot for 60 days, thereby leaving from 100,000 to 200,000 each year, which kept the stock good. Mr. Dunfield's letter yesterday furnished us figures and facts which prove beyond doubt my contention. The wooden ships with their second trips but staying out all the time from sailing date until the 6th of May in seven years, killed and brought into port 1,807,817 young harps. Thus you will see 20 years ago we averaged 238,259 young harps per spring for seven years in succession. Since 1917 we have not reached the 150,000 mark. Surely that is proof something has gone wrong.

In the letter written by Capt. W. B. Kean he deals with two things, namely, the small quantity of young seals on our coast since 1916 and the strike by the crews that have taken place since 1916. Up to the present spring on board the S. S. Prospero, which if reports are correct, leaves all the other strikes in the shade. As I am not conversant with what took place on board the Prospero, I shall make no comment other than to say that I believe I have found a remedy against strikes. Give the captain the absolute right to select their own crews without any interference by politicians, and you will have no strikes. I am glad to take this opportunity to say a word on behalf of my crew this spring. We have contented and happier bunch were not together in one ship. They worked with a will and were as eager the last day as they were the first with the result that I just turned up my log and found killed and took on board 3,537 seals after the Prospero's strike. Capt. George Barbary, with 80 men killed 8,200 seals and 80th crew earned $75.00 per man, and I thought the Prospero was fitted up at the expense of the taxpayers of this country and a considerable loss has occurred by the action of the strikers, the whole thing has gone off with a silence which can be felt.

I think every right thinking man in the country will back up W. B. Kean's contention that the parties interested should appoint a commission to report on the cause of the falling off in the annual catch and to prevent if possible any man from participating in the sealing voyage that is not satisfied to obey orders during his engagement.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR GUEST.

OTHER PEOPLE'S TROUBLES.

Seems like she's never had a day which she could give to rest and play. In all the years we've shared this life.

And plodded on as man and wife I've never known the day to be. When she was wholly worry-free.

We've had our share of hurt and woe. Which every married pair must know. And that we've borne as best we could.

Believing all God sends is good. But when our patch of sky is frow. I've said a glad farewell to care.

Not so with Nell. Her heart's so large. That every living soul's her charge. And other people's troubles make. A burden which she cannot shake; Day after day she hears them all. And does the worrying for them all.

I've scolded, just for this reply: "We are so happy, you and I. That we should be ashamed to live. And never help or never give; I couldn't sleep at night and know I had been called and didn't go."

And so I smile, for I have learned. From her that laughter must be earned.

That other people's troubles call. For help and pity from us all. That none who truly loves can be. At peace with self and worry free.

Mr. Joseph O'Brien Dies in Hamilton Hospital

NORTH SYDNEY, May 4.—At one o'clock this afternoon the death took place in the Hamilton Hospital of Mr. Joseph O'Brien, the well known fish dealer and general merchant of Ingonish, at the early age of 48 years. He entered the hospital just a week ago to-day, suffering from acute indigestion, but it is said a clot of blood which rested on the brain was the direct cause of his death.

The news of his sudden taking will be heard with regret throughout the whole of Victoria County, for Mr. O'Brien was a man known in the County from one end to the other. He came to Cape Breton in 1906 and settled at Bay St. Lawrence, where he carried on a lobster business as well as a general store, dealing in fish of all kinds, and was a large exporter to the European and American markets. Later he removed with his family to Dunwall, where he carried on the same business, later moving to South Bay, Ingonish, where the greater portion of his family still reside. During the declining years of the Great War Mr. O'Brien built a three-masted schooner, an investment which turned out a financial failure.

To mourn their great loss is his wife, whom he married at his birthplace, Bay Bulls, Nfld.; four daughters, Ivetta, Max, Jean, and Jessie, all at home; and six sons, Frank, Ernest, Nicholas and Roy at home to whom the Post extends sympathy. During his last hours, (he was conscious to the last moment) he constantly spoke of his family and the great blow his death would be to them. But he was fully restored and died with a prayer on his lips.

The remains will likely be shipped on the Constance, Wednesday, to his late home in South Bay, Ingonish, where interment will take place in the Catholic cemetery.—Sydney Post.

Why We Are Losing Our Trade

CA' CANNY IN THE COAL-PITS.
By AN ECONOMIST.

England's industrial troubles are chiefly due to deliberate under-production, to ca' canny, and particularly to deliberate under-production in the coal-pits. The miners are loudly complaining about insufficient pay and unemployment. However, they suffer less than the workers in many other industries which have been crippled by dear coal. Besides, the miners have only themselves to blame or, rather, they should blame the men who have misled them for decades.

For decades schemers and dreamers have told the miners that coal is indispensable and that they should exploit that fact to the full. Some taught that by making coal scarce and dear there would be a larger profit, which could be divided by masters and men. Others, preaching the class war, advocated restricting production to the utmost and creating confusion by irritating strikes with a view to making the industry absolutely unprofitable. They foretold that the ruined owners would at last abandon the mines, which could then be taken over by the miners themselves.

The present age is the age of labour-saving machinery. The machine is the best friend of the worker. Its effect is two-fold. It eliminates toil and creates easily a superabundance for the benefit of all. Coal-mining has benefited fully by the advent of the machine. The mineral is no longer carried up from the pits in baskets on the backs of perspiring men and women. Coal-cutting machinery, mechanical loaders and conveyors, and so on, have tremendously increased the productive efficiency of each worker, and the result has been that in progressive countries the output of each worker has increased enormously.

The American Miner.

There was a time when an English miner produced more coal than an American miner, but now an American miner produces as much coal as five English miners. Nevertheless, Mr. Herbert Hoover, the Secretary of Commerce, who is a practical mining engineer, has declared that American coal-mining is the "worst functioning American industry." By the introduction of certain mechanical improvements, such as underground loading machines, the average production of each American worker might be increased from four tons a worker a day to six tons a workers a day. In this country production of each worker, a day is considerably less than a single ton, for it amounts only to 17.33 cwt. Before long a single American miner may produce as much coal as six, seven, or eight English miners.

Since 1880 British coal production has decreased as follows:

1880	123
1885	128
1890	108
1895	118
1900	110
1905	108
1910	100
1915	98
1924	87

Notwithstanding the tremendous improvement in organisation and in machinery, individual output, instead of increasing as in America, has been shrinking continuously. The mechanical improvements made have been completely nullified by the agitators, who have urged the miners to produce less and less. Since 1913, the horse-power used in mining has doubled, but the costly improvements made have been wasted because they have not led to an increase in the output of each worker, but to a great diminution. The eight-hours day has been followed by the seven-hours day, and now the professional mischief makers demand a six-hours day, as if they desired to make the ruin of the British coal mining industry complete.

Our Strangled Industries.

Output is not only kept low by the hand-working men but labour-saving machinery is not allowed to yield satisfactory results. Between 1903 and 1916 the output of each coal-cutting machine has developed as follows in England and the United States.

In England
1903	8,153 tons
1910	8,089 "
1916	7,601 "
In United States
1903	10,457 tons
1910	11,722 "
1916	15,638 "

Between 1903 and 1916 machine output in the United States has been increased by more than 6,000 tons a year. During the same period it has diminished in this country.

The dearness of coal is strangulating our manufacturing industries, our coal export trade, and our shipping. Coal may be indispensable, but English coal is by no means indispensable. Stagnant and decaying industries require little coal. Given cheap coal, our iron and steel and engineering industries would flourish as never before, and our shipping trade would revive to the benefit of the miners.

One-third of our coal is exported, but German and American coal is replacing ours in many markets. The Americans are making a tremendous effort to monopolise the American coal trade. They supply Canada with millions of tons of coal and they may capture the Southern American market as well. The development of coal mining in the Dominions, in China, in Japan, and elsewhere is ominous.

Fruits of Ca' Canny.

Ca' canny in the coal mining industry has led already to the closing of many pits. The continuation of that policy will prolong and intensify unemployment, under-employment, and poverty among the workers, and to pay more to the workers will make the disaster irremediable.

The conditions in the mining industry can be improved only by the miners themselves. Let them discard the professional mischiefmakers who have misled them for decades and let them abandon ca' canny. Let them eliminate gradually the redundant workers. The mines can give employment to only half the number employed at present. By halving numbers and doubling individual output the industry can provide us with cheaper coal and the workers in the mines with better wages.

The A. P.'s New Head

At thirteen, Kent Cooper, who now succeeds Frederick Roy Martin as general manager of the Associated Press, began his newspaper career, and Robert T. Small tells us in the Hartford Times that Mr. Cooper, though born in Indiana, "has a sense of inquisitiveness worthy of a son of Missouri." When a boy,

He worked as a reporter during school vacations and finally got into Indiana University. The death of his father made it necessary for him to go out into the world before completing his course and he turned again to reporting. But news-gathering did not alone interest the young man. He studied its distribution, and it so happened that when he came to the Associated Press he knew more about wires and circuits and the details of distribution than almost any man in the country. Cooper was not long in the A.P. before other tempting offers came to him. He had hitched his wagon to that star, however, and he never let go.

Kent Cooper is a man of fine physique, wide and friendly eyes and restless energy. He looks like an athlete and has found time in his busy life to acquire a fondness for golf and automobileing. He also loves music of the lighter vein and does not believe anyone can really enjoy an opera without hearing it at least six times. Being an Indian, Kent Cooper would have made a successful politician, but politics as such had no appeal to him. The directors and members of the A.P. feel to-day that their service is in fine hands.

S. S. Sagona, Capt. Tavernor, returned to Humbermouth yesterday after her first trip down the Straits. The captain's report to the railway management reads as follows: "Made all ports of call to Battle Harbour. Owing to ice conditions unable to land Flower's Cove freight going north. Encountered heavy ice from Bonne Bay to about 4 miles west of Blanc Sablon. No ice to be seen from Blanc Sablon to Battle Harbour. Returning met heavy ice packed in on the coast extending from Flower's Cove to Point Riche, and had to keep close to the Labrador side to avoid the flow which has been packed on the coast by strong westerly gales. A sign of codfish and salmon on the Labrador coast."

MINARD'S LINIMENT USED BY PHYSICIANS.

Shielding

Many constructors of radio sets have been advised to shield condensers, coils, tubes and transformers to eliminate feedback from various parts of the set to other parts. Also it has been the general impression that shielding with a copper or brass is necessary in order to eliminate hand capacity effects when tuning. Shielding has its purpose, but if it is improperly done or done when not necessary its introduction is very likely to cause excessive losses in a radio circuit.

In the first place, it is not necessary to place a metal shield behind the panel and between the panel and the condenser. With modern low-loss condensers having metal end plates and rotary plates which are connected to these metal end plates act as shields within themselves. If the condensers are properly wired into the circuit no body capacity will be noted when the hand is removed from the tuning dial.

If your set is a neutrodyne and you have tried to conserve panel space by crowding the condensers, there may be severe feedback from one condenser to the next. This will mean that the set will have to be over-neutralized in order to prevent oscillation, or the feedback may be so severe that it will be impossible to neutralize it at all on some wavelengths. Some experimenters, and manufacturers, too, insert metal shields or partitions between the condensers. These shields are connected to the ground. They do prevent feedback and they do also cause rather severe losses. The obvious remedy is to design the set so that there will be sufficient space between the condensers to prevent any feedback.

An audio-frequency amplifier employing transformer coupling and having more than two stages will probably have to be shielded. Here the introduction of shielding will not cause any losses to speak of. The shielding should preferably be of copper or brass. Number 12 gauge is thick enough. Iron or sheet steel can be used but to be as effective as brass or copper, the iron would have to be one-tenth of an inch thick.

In radio-frequency circuits in no case should any shielding be placed nearer than one inch to any coils, tubes or condensers. There are only one or two standard circuits which really require shielding, notably the super-heterodyne and other forms of circuits in which a comparatively powerful oscillator tube is used and in which there are a mixture of different radio frequencies beating on each other. In a super-heterodyne we have enough energy to suffer a few losses due to shielding it, by so doing, we cut down the tendency toward oscillation.

To be effective at all the shielding must be complete—almost airtight. Thin tinfoil, copper-foil or aluminum-foil will not be effective. The shielding should be at least of 12-gauge stock.

VARY the retiring hour if you will but the rising hour remains the same. A likable friend or a good book at night calls for a good alarm clock in the morning.

St. Michael's Sociable

The concert and sociable at St. Michael's Lecture Hall last night was an enjoyable ending to a successful bazaar. The following artists took part: Mrs. Garland, Misses Ross, Purchase, Dawe, Payne, Grant, and Messrs. Colley and Neville. The dancing by Miss Purchase's scholars was charmingly performed. The tea was all that could be desired and the proceeds of both bazaar and sociable were more than were anticipated. At the close of the performance the Rector took occasion to thank both performers, audience and workers for the assistance given at the various concerts and entertainments during the past winter season, of which this one was the last. ### IS SHE PRETTY, PLAIN OR BEAUTIFUL?

How difficult it often is to find the right word to classify a woman's appearance (or a man's for that matter, but somehow we are apt to be speaking of the feminine appearance.)

Take the same woman and ask a dozen people what adjective they would use, and while two or three might use the all-embracing word "pretty," the other three or four would doubtless use other adjectives—such as "good looking," "handsome," "attractive."

One reason for this would be that each of these people reacted differently to the woman's face, but the other would be that each of them meant something different by the adjective he or she used.

"What do you mean by 'pretty'?"
 "What do you mean by 'beautiful'?"
 "What by 'handsome'?"

That Carelessly Used Word "Pretty."
 I have been trying to clarify my own ideas on the subject. To me

(and I think to a great many people) the carelessly used word "pretty" means chiefly a certain fresh charm—a good skin, and prettily dressed hair, and features that are not too irregular. Generally, I think you will find the girl who commands the adjective "pretty" from most sources has rather small features with little character to them.

"Handsome" always suggests size to me. Somewhat the kind of woman who in the old days, when boyish lines were something to be ashamed of rather than proud of, was called "a fine figure of a woman."

One In A Million.
 "Beautiful" to my mind, is a word that one seldom gets a chance to use unreservedly. Many women have beautiful moments—only one in a million (if that many) is beautiful.

The really beautiful woman must have lovely skin, and features, and figure, and hair. And nature seems to have such a shortage of these qualifications that most of us don't get even one of them, and it is only a few times in a generation that she has a generous fit and gives them all to one woman. If you doubt that, try to think how many women you know either personally or in public life that you would unreservedly call "beautiful."

Not Homely Or Pretty—What!

Besides the women who are "beautiful," "pretty" and "handsome," there are a vast host (90 per cent.) who are not fitted by any of these adjectives, yet perhaps only ten per cent. of these are what one would actually call "homely."

How would you describe the rest of them? "Nice looking," "pleasant looking," "attractive" (that frightfully over-worked word) "charming," "sweet looking," "fine looking," "plain" (not quite so damning a word as "homely").

It would be interesting to get a group of people to each write down the adjective they would use for some woman (not present, needless to say) and see what the result was. Something like the old game of consequences.

But by all means, if you do it, see that the slips are destroyed, else it might be consequences indeed.

Ten Commandments for Women

1. Rid yourself of the foolish notion that your husband is "merely a boy grown tall." If he acted as merely a boy you would be the first to criticize him.
2. Don't sulk; it is better to cry it off than to act like a child.
3. But never try to win your husband to your way of thinking by spilling tears all over him. If he yields under the circumstances he does so grudgingly, which leaves you with only a doubtful victory.
4. Don't be jealous of your husband's stenographer; he hasn't time to spend his flirtations during business hours.
5. Don't eat between meals; to do so might spoil your appetite for dinner, and every wife should sit down to eat with her husband, regardless of how late he may reach home.
6. Don't discuss his faults before the children, because they will soon treat him with no respect if you did.
7. Be loyal under all circumstances.
8. If he wants to get out one night in the week, let him go, and don't greet him on his arrival home with suspicion and jealousy.
9. Verily, the possession of "table manners" is the possession of a virtue; practise this virtue as assiduously in the presence of your husband as you do in the presence of guests.
10. Make your house the brightest and most cheerful, the most to be desired spot on earth; and if you do that you need never fear that your husband will be content for long in any other place.

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR THE GRIPPE.

Colour Note in Summer Millinery

With the tendency towards a more extensive use for trimming there is revealed in the summer millinery models an equally pronounced tendency to emphasize the value and importance of colour.

Colour is to-day one of the essentials of the fashion craftsman and as such demands the most careful consideration from even the casual observer of the mode.

The vogue for natural tones, which is one of the outstanding characteristics of summer fashions, has brought out the smartest hats of felt, of belting ribbon, of silk and straw combined or of straw alone. French grey, turtle dove and smoked pearl, as well as sea hawk and spruce grey, compose a group of grey tones that promise to rival in popularity the natural shades so much in favour at the moment.

Both in felt and in straw high colours attract attention and the vivid shades known as Indian orange, nasturtium, fests, Castilian red and tordador prove that these intense tones must have recognition in any summary of fashionable colours.

In the larger hats, there is a decided preference for all shades of pink, especially those known as Rocamler Trianon and Dubarry.

From many indications certain tones of purple named Seville and Patriarch will be in vogue, while the Spanish influence is reflected in the fuchsia colourings known as tandago and Velasquez.

Dulcet pinks and blues have also a place in millinery modes and in their flowerlike tints are a fitting complement to the subtle femininity that distinguishes some of the fashions of the moment. Recently there has been noticed a tendency to exploit combinations of black with Valencia pink and black with Aden green, the colour appearing either in flowers or in uncurled ostrich.

All in all it promises to be a most interesting season, coming as it does after a year when the simple untrimmed hat had reigned supreme and threatened for a time to make millinery skill a lost art.

Bookstall Humor

She hurried into the shop as though she had not a moment to spare.

"I want a book for my husband," she said. "It's his birthday to-morrow, and I want to give it to him as a present. Show me what you have, please," she continued, without pausing to take breath. "Nothing too expensive, mind—and I don't want anything too cheap, either. He's not very fond of sport, so don't show me anything in that line. For goodness sake, don't offer me any of those trashy novels, and, no matter how much you try to persuade me, I don't want anything in the way of history or biography. Come, now, I'm in a dreadful hurry. I've already wasted too much time here."

"Yes, madam," replied the assistant, as he picked up a little red-bound volume entitled 'How to Manage a Loud Speaker.'—Tit-Bits (London).

Municipal Council

The regular weekly meeting of the Council was held yesterday afternoon.
Mayor Cook presided and Councilors Martin, Outerbridge, Collier, Ryan and Dowden were present.

After confirmation of Minutes of last meeting, the following business was given consideration.

The Deputy Colonial Secretary informed the Council that on their recommendation Instructions had been given the Customs authorities to exempt the St. John's Gaslight Company from the tax on gas coal for the present year.

Mr. J. Jardine wrote calling attention to the condition of stable adjoining his residence, Maxse Street, and requested that the owners be compelled to comply with the regulations governing such buildings. His communication is to be forwarded the Medical Officer of Health.

T. J. Duley & Company complained of the state of the sidewalk in front of their premises, Water Street, and asked that it be repaired. The matter was referred to the City Engineer.

C. P. Hagan applied for permission to place concrete sidewalk in front of his premises, Duckworth and Prescott Streets, and in view of this being a public improvement the Council decided to grant his request, also to contribute proportion of cost.

A petition was tabled from Messrs.
Brown, Gill and other residents of Merrymeeting Road, asking that sidewalk in front of their respective dwellings be placed on this street, etc. Their request was acceded to.

The application of James King for position of instructor at the swimming pool, Quidi Vidi Lake, during the coming season, was ordered placed on file.

The Acting General Manager of the Newfoundland Government Railway forwarded communication and plans received from Messrs. W. I. Bishop & Co., showing proposed diversion of the road to the Long Bridge which they stated would greatly facilitate pedestrian and vehicular traffic during progress of work of rebuilding the Dry Dock. A Committee of Council will visit the site this morning, and if satisfied with the layout the necessary permit will be issued by the City Engineer.

PLANS.

The following plans were passed, subject to the approval of the City Engineer, at whose office the necessary permits may be obtained:—
Concrete Porch—Academy of Our Lady of Mercy, Military Road.
Dwelling—Worrel & Avery, Monroe Street.

Extension—W. Skeans, Gilbert St.
Garages—H. J. Taylor, Barter's
Hill and J. G. Joyce, corner of Le-Marchant Road and Boncloddy St., provided they instal ventilators in the buildings.

The Newfoundland Butter Company, Ltd., will be granted permission to erect factory on the North side of LeMarchant Road, conditional upon their paying expense of extension of main sewer.

Plans for erection of moving picture theatre, New Gower Street, submitted by Mr. Joe Judge, were also passed subject to alterations agreed upon by the Inspector General and City Engineer.

Permits are to be issued: H. Dawe, for erection of fence, Penningwell Rd.;
T. F. Butt, to repair building, Maxse
Street.

The application of R. G. Silverlock to place sign in front of his building, New Gower Street, was referred to the City Engineer.

In the matter of Jas. Lundrigan's request to build dwelling on the South side of Mundy Pond Road, information is to be obtained as to the location.

With regard to the condition of Circular Road, the City Engineer reported that this thoroughfare was recently opened up by the Gaslight Company's employees, and that the manner in which the opening had been effected was anything but satisfactory; that this applies to nearly all the work done by the Company, no effort being made to restore the streets to their former condition, and it is evident not only on Circular Road, but on many other city streets. It was ordered that no permits for opening streets be issued until the disturbances referred to are properly adjusted.

The City Engineer submitted the following facts with regard to land above Macklin Place, owned by James Sillars:—That this land is situated about half way up Leslie Street, north of Macklin Place, and some years ago an agreement was made by the property owners to give 25 feet each for the purpose of opening a 50 foot road through same. All the owners on the North side moved their fences back the required 25 feet, forming the present cul-de-sac, but that Mr. Ellis, on the South side of the land, did not give one inch towards opening up the road. On the contrary he leased land for a dwelling house on the very corner of Leslie Street and the proposed new street covering up his 25 feet of land required for the project which was then rendered impossible to carry out.

The present cul-de-sac, which is 25 feet wide, is private property, which Mr. Ellis proposes to use as a road for access to building lots fronting on the same which he has sold to several people. These people could not get to their lands from Leslie Street without going through private property.
He (the Engineer) had refused several plans sent in, and advised the people in each case not to risk building there. He visited the place during the week and found Mr. Ellis laying the foundation of a house, and ordered him not to proceed further with the work. Mr. Ellis refused to carry out these instructions and continued with the work in defiance of the Council.

The foregoing facts were tabled by the Engineer and ordered to be given publication for the purpose of correcting a somewhat erroneous impression as to the Council's refusal to allow building in the locality. In this connection it must be borne in mind that no street can be opened up within the city limits unless it is 50 feet wide; that in any case when property owners are desirous of leasing building lots they must pay for water and sewerage extension and road making.

In this instance the so-called street does not conform to the City regulations, has no water or sewerage facilities, and in view of Mr. Ellis' refusal to comply with the law, the City Solicitor will be instructed to immediately take legal proceedings.

Circular Road West, near the Newfoundland Brewery, is to be repaired.

The Medical Officer of Health reported one new case of Scarlet Fever in the city during the past week.

Reports of the Sanitary Supervisor, etc., were tabled.

With disposal of routine business, passing of accounts, etc., the meeting adjourned.

CONFERENCE OF INCREASED PAY CAUSES LABOUR UNREST AT WABANA.

(Daily News.)

Some little time ago a written request was made to the Management of the Becco from the "Wabana Mine Workers," asking for an increase in the rates of pay for all hourly men, as well as certain other concessions in the matter of overtime, Sunday work and a weekly pay-day, instead of fortnightly, as at present arranged. To this communication very little satisfaction was given.

Last week, however, the various forums were summoned to a conference with E. B. Gillis, Superintendent of Ore Mines and Quarries when the question of an increase was raised by him, and a proposition discussed with regard to bonuses for shovellers. It would appear, however, that the foremen, too, anticipated a rise, and, in consequence, the conference fell through.

One point, however, appears plain, and that is that the Company must be prepared to grant an increase, and this being so, it surely would seem more commendable if they granted an increase right now—if their funds permit—and not have unnecessary hag-ging or misunderstanding, with consequent irritation and distrust on the part of the men.

All during the present week the air has been filled with rumors of a strike and it is generally said, on every side, that the men will consider this very serious question to-day.
While every fairminded person will admit that the Bell Island workman is not receiving a rate of pay in keeping with the labour received from him, it is likewise fair to say that the present moment does not appear a happy one for a labour crisis, but no one can doubt that such a feeling is current on the Island, if the Company has any intention of increasing the pay, and apparently they have some such action, judging from Mr. Gillis' attitude at the conference, then the sooner it is given the better for all who are interested in a prosperous year for Wabana.

The following clipping from the "Overseas Daily Mail" is not without interest at this juncture:—

Sir.—When in Canada recently I was amazed to find that vast quantities of iron ore, running into hundreds of thousands of tons annually were shipped from Newfoundland—a British Dominion—to Germany. Apart from sentiment—not a negligible factor—it is startling to know that the raw material of the Empire should go to our former enemies in war and now our formidable competitors in peace.

Grave and justifiable anxiety has been evinced at the placing of contracts for building British ships in Germany. Iron ore is a raw material without which ships cannot be built.
The iron and steel industry and the shipbuilding industry here are in the throes of depression.

Empire development has been the theme of many a perverted platform oration. Surely it must be a fruitful source of Empire development to use the raw material of the Empire for industry within the Empire? Imperial preference involves a system of taxes.
Taxes are sterile, they produce nothing but poverty. Any fool armed with power can tax. It takes a brain of different calibre to create, and industry must be created if taxes are to be paid.

The Colonial Secretary has flown to Mesopotamia. May we hope that the result will be that we shall forthwith quit that grave of British lives and British treasure? A little of the sums wasted in Mesopotamia could be used to cheapen the transport, and improve British labour facilities, so that the iron ores of Newfoundland could be utilized by the British iron and steel industry. Unless we sharply reverse our present methods of spending, the present standard of life in this country cannot be maintained. To ship iron-ore from a British Dominion to Germany is simply national suicide—more especially when judicious development would enable those ores to be used in Great Britain.

GEORGE LAMBERT,

Hygienic Milk By-Law Advances in Committee

PRINCIPLE OF PASTEURIZATION IS APPROVED BY ALDERMEN.

Strict Regulations to Be Passed To Licenses Drafted.

Montreal's new hygienic milk by-law had its first review in committee this morning when it came before the members of the council delegated to make a study thereof. As a result the general theory of pasteurizing the milk supply was adopted, while the alternative conditions of allowing sterilized milk and natural milk, providing it meets with strict requirements, were also approved. In general the first three chapters were practically accepted with a few minor changes.

The first deals with definitions, and the various categories of milk, cream, dealer, person, shipper, establishment, dairy, creamery, utensils, apparatus, tank, were specifically labelled in relation to the enactment.

License Clauses.
The licensing of dealers was then taken up and the conditions imposed for obtaining these were sanctioned. All persons trading in milk must be licensed by the city and this permit is not transferable. No permit shall be issued until a thorough inspection of the establishment has been made, and all dealers and employees must have a clean bill of health certified by a medical practitioner.

Any failure to be inspected, refusal to give any required information, or disobedience to the orders of the health department renders the granting of a license impossible and requires one already given.

Dr. Quintal, Alderman on the committee, held that if the city ordered pasteurization of the milk supply, it should not apply to all milk and that the pasteurization of milk met the idea of the mass of the public and also of the medical profession.

Ald. Desroches feared that entire pasteurization might put the small dealer out of business, but Dr. Genereux, another medical Alderman, affirmed that with the passage of the by-law the small dealers would pasteurize their milk co-operatively and would thus easily come under the law.

Dr. Quintal submitted that the city should undertake to erect a plant for treatment of milk from small dealers, but this idea was discounted as being impractical.

Reduces Tuberculosis.
Ald. Savard remarked that Boston and several other American cities had pasteurization and Dr. Quintal produced paper files to show that pasteurization effected in most American cities since 1915 had reduced infant and adult tuberculosis mortality by thirty per cent.

Ald. Desroches said that the city would do well to safeguard child life and reduce infant mortality.

The regulations concerning special milk were then passed. These provide that natural milk shall be allowed from dairies with a chart record of 70 points. This is amended from 90 on the original draft of the law, on the grounds that it was almost impossible to obtain such a high grading, points being taken off for very small details in some cases.

The cows from which this milk comes shall have been successfully subjected to the tuberculin test and show no contamination within the year.

It shall contain not more than 50,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter from June to September and not more than 25,000 from October to May, inclusively.

It shall not be pasteurized or sterilized and shall be kept at a temperature of 50 degrees F. from thirty minutes after milking.

Sterilized Milk.
Sterilized milk shall be allowed sold on condition that it has been subjected to 230 degrees F. in closed containers, for half an hour, and must not contain before this process more than 100,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter, or an acidity rating of more than one fifth of one per cent. Any physical process equivalent to this treatment will be recognized if it meets the requirements of the department.

No milk shall be sold in butcher stalls, fish stores, or any place where strong odors prevail. It shall not be sold in restaurants or groceries except in bottles. All milk cans, bottles and containers shall be kept whether full or empty, closed and in a clean place.

Nothing Like These R suits A Year Ago or Now

It is no trick to build a car that will go 65 or 70 miles an hour if it has a power plant big enough to haul a freight train.

It's a great achievement to get over 70 miles an hour out of a motor of 3-inch bore and 4 1/2-inch stroke, with gasoline mileage safely above 30 miles per gallon.

And that's the wonder of the Chrysler Six—a wonder so different and so superior that Chrysler was forced to build over 32,000 cars to meet the first-year demand.

Of course you don't want to drive your Chrysler over 70 miles an hour. In fact you may never so that fast. But there is something you do want that only a speed-ability of 70 miles can give.

That something is sure, steady power for steep hill or deepest sand, a pick-up to flash you out of a traffic tangle, sturdy, dotted pull so you can throttle to five, even two miles an hour, on high without "bucking."

That's Chrysler performance in a nutshell. You surely must drive the car. It's the only way you can fully appreciate that it is the best built car you ever rode in. We are always eager to demonstrate the Chrysler.
