Toronto, 13th May, 1867.

ANNUAL REPORT, 1867.

Your Directors, in retiring from office at this, the close of the Institute year, and in accordance with its by-laws, beg to present to the members the following Report of their proceedings, and of the present position of the Institute

Their predecessors, in the last Annual Report, went so fully into tabular comparisons of the past with previous years, that it is not now necessary to pursue that course, any further than to compare the present results with those of 1866.

The property held by the Institute is estimated at the same value as at the close of the past year—the additions made to the number of books in the library, and the fitting up of the large class room, since the date of last report, being considered by your Directors as fully equivalent to the loss by ordinary wear and tear of the building and furniture. Full details of the assets and liabilities will be found in appendix A to this report.

THE MEMBERSHIP.

During the year there has been but a slight increase in the membership of the Institute; but in anticipation of the probable increase of population, consequent upon the establishment of the Local Government in Toronto, and by devoting more earnest attention to this important department, it is believed that a much larger increase may be secured during the ensuing year.

THE FINANCES.

The Treasurer's statement, as audited, and published in detail in Appendix B, shows total receipts for the year $7,478 31; expenditure, $7,251 87; balance in hand $226 64.

Your Directors had hopes of being in a position to have reduced the mortgage debt on the building during the year. The fact of the floating debt, of some $4,000, having been paid off during the previous five years of occupation, led them to anticipate a proportionate success in the reduction of the larger debt alluded to. Various causes have tended to disappoint them in their expectations, some of which will be apparent on perusal of the subsequent clauses of this Report.

THE LIBRARY AND READING ROOM.

Your Directors, through the active supervision of the "Library Committee," have given much attention to the continuous replenishment of the Library and Reading Room during the past year; and although the expenditure for books and periodicals has not amounted to the sum expended during the year ended May, 1866, it has considerably exceeded that of the previous year. The list of newspapers and magazines regularly supplied to the Reading Room, will be found in appendix C.

Your Directors cannot but express their regret that the larger proportion of issues, upwards of two-thirds of the whole, continues to be in the department of "Novels and Tales." Notwithstanding that many of these are works of a standard or instructive character for this class of publications, it yet indicates that sufficient attention is not given to the more practical and useful works contained in the library.

Next to Novels and Tales, and in the following order, the issues were respectively in Biography, Periodical Literature, History, Science and Art, Poetry and the Drama, Voyages and Travels, Religion, and Miscellaneous Works.

Your Directors would earnestly and especially urge the younger members of the Institute, upon whose present conduct in life, and course of reading and studies depends so much their future success, to avoid at least the lighter department of Fiction, and study such works as shall fit them for the sterner and more practical duties of life.

The issue of a number of copies of the standard Reviews and Magazines, at a charge of two cents per day, each, has been successfully continued during the year. The project which originated with their predecessors, of opening a "Ladies' Reading-Room," has not yet been accomplished, owing to the want of a proper room for the purpose not being at the disposal of your Directors.

THE EVENING CLASSES.

The importance of this department of the operations of the Institute was so fully dwelt upon in the report of last year, and again in the report presented at the public awarding of Prizes during the past month, that it is scarcely necessary to enter into any lengthened remarks on this occasion. Your directors cannot, however, refrain from urging upon parents and employers of youth engaged in business, the duty of both morally and practically supporting so efficient and economical a means of instruction as the Institute thus supplies. It is not while boys are attending school, as a general rule, that the importance of sound and useful instruction is impressed upon their minds; and were it otherwise, there are many branches of study necessary for the mechanic and practical man, that the ordinary schools of the country afford no means of becoming acquainted with. The actual requirements of business bring these studies home to the minds of the thoughtful, and the Institute secures competent teachers, and furnishes all the other necessary facilities for the acquirement of such instruction; and blind indeed to their interests must be the youths, and the parents and employers of such, who need instruction and yet fail to avail themselves of it when so liberally offered. Were the leading Mechanics and Manufacturers to follow the generous example of the Directors of the Northern Railroad, this department of the Institute might constitute it a "People's College"—a pride to our Mechanics and an honor to our Metropolitan city.

The following classes were organized on the 15th of October, and closed by examina-

FRENCH.—Examiner, Dr. Campbell—1st prize, S. S. Stephenson; 2nd do., G. Hume.

The receipts and expenditure connected with the classes have been as follows:—

Although the foregoing accounts show a deficit of $49 35 against the classes for the past session, they are not fairly chargeable with that balance; as included in the expenditure, is the sum of $108 85 for permanent fittings for class-room, a proportion of which should be chargeable against class expenses of future years.

ENTERTAINMENTS.

From various causes, not necessary to be discussed in this report, the profits arising from the several entertainments have been much less than for the previous year. The total receipts from this source of revenue for the year ended May, 1866, were $5,095 42; expenditure $3,715 37; profits $1,380 05. The total receipts for the year just closed have been $3,279 31; expenditure $2,950 04; profits $329 27; or $1,050 78 less profits than for the previous year.

THE EXHIBITION

The seventh exhibition in connection with the Institute was opened on Wednesday, the 20th of March, and closed on Wednesday, the 3rd of April—being open altogether thirteen days. The total receipts (at 10 cents each admission) were $627 10; expenses $465 97; leaving a balance of profit to the Institute of $161 13: or less than the profits on the exhibition of 1866 by $190 00, and of the previous year by $34 38. These results for the present year were to a great extent owing to the very unfavorable state of the weather during the earlier days of the exhibition; and in part from the fact of the novelty of these exhibitions having to a certain extent passed away.

Although scarcely any of the articles exhibited had been shown before, yet the committee of management in their report to the board, say:—"They have grave doubts as to the propriety of attempting to continue these exhibitions annually—"certainly not, unless they can be more varied in their several features, from year to year, than has been the case so far. "These exhibitions have, undoubtedly, been both interesting and instructive, tending to create a taste for the beautiful in nature and art where it did not before exist, and improving it where it already had an existence; and their discontinuance altogether would be a cause of regret to many; but from the experience gained by your committee, it appears evident that new material for continuing these exhibitions on a similar plan is becoming every year less available."

The cordial thanks of the members of the Institute are due to the lady and gentlemen contributors, a list of whom is given in appendix D, for their generosity in lending so many articles of beauty and value for the occasion. It will rest with the Directors to be elected this evening, to say whether or not there shall be an exhibition during the incoming year; and if so, upon the active co-operation of the members as to whether it shall be a success or a failure.

THE SECRETARY.

During the year your late secretary, Mr. George Longman, having accepted a more lucrative appointment sent in his resignation, which was accepted. From a large number of applications, sent in answer to a public advertisement, your Directors, after the most careful consideration of their respective qualifications, appointed Mr. John Moss to the vacancy. Of the zeal and activity of Mr. Longman, in the performance of his duties, you are well aware. Your Directors have no doubt but his successor, Mr. Moss, who has as yet been so short a time with you, will manifest an equal zeal for the interests and general prosperity of the institution.

All which is respectfully submitted.

FRED. CUMBERLAND,
President.
