..."ad Better See One of Your Uncles About it."

...lationship Embracing Most of the Cabinet Ministers Claimed.

[Special to the ADVERTISER.]

...TAWA, June 10.—Nicholas K. Connolly ...been giving a good deal of "non mi ...do" evidence to the Tarte committee ...orning, but fortunately remembered ...things. At one point Mr. Geoffrion ... "Are you aware that Hon. Thomas ...reevy admits having received money ...you for political purposes?"

...itness—I never did, except perhaps for ...rinks.

...on witness then identified a letter he ...written to Owen E. Murphy. In it ...writer referred to the British Columbia ...dry dock tenders, and added the following ...significent paragraph: "You had better ...see one of your uncles about it."

Questioned by Mr. Tarte as to the relatives thus mentioned, witness said Mr. Murphy called Hon. Thomas McGreevy "his "Uncle Tom." The letter meant that ...rphy should see Hon. Thomas McGreevy ...ut securing the specifications for the ...k.

...r. Tarte—But the letter mentions more ...one uncle.

...itness—But Murphy claimed to have ...several uncles.

...r. Tarte—Who were they?

...itness—Oh, Uncle Sir Adolphe, and ...ry Minister almost.

Capital Notes.

Through evidence given by Nicholas Connolly the fact was established that the noted Bancroft tender was certainly a myth

During his examination yesterday Mr. ...ley produced the bill of the goods, ...ch reads thus:

Balance	$1,885 00

Mr. Perley obviously endeavored to rid himself of the odium of having accepted a gift from Mr. Murphy or the firm, but unhappily there are two features of the settlement which are not satisfactory to the committee. The first is that the settlement was not reached until Mr. Tarte commenced his attack, and the second is that even now the money is not paid, and that the obligation to pay is an instrument which the firm need not collect unless it is so disposed.

A large deputation waited upon the Minister of the Interior yesterday to press on the Government the necessity of appointing a commission to adjust the affairs of the Temperance Colonization Society.

BUILDINGS BURNED.

Petrolea Blaze—Destructive Fires in Michigan.

PETROLEA, Ont., July 10.—Fire here ...night consumed Weir's harness shop ...contents. Loss $1,000; the adjoining ...ling was badly damaged. Cause of ...unknown.

...SINAW, Mich., July 10.—The Western ...ster Works at Alabaster were partially ...rned yesterday morning. Loss, $30,000; ...sured for $36,500.

CADILLAC, Mich., July 10.—The extensive mill plant of Mitchell Bros., at Jennings, twelve miles north of this city, was burned Wednesday. Eighteen million feet of lumber, the big planing mill and eight dwellings were destroyed, involving a loss of over $200,000. Cadillac sent out 300 men to fight the fire, but it was beyond control. The property was insured for $150,000.

GRAND HAVEN, Mich., July 10.—Fire broke out in the upper freight depot of the Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee Railway Company on Wednesday. The depot contained about 200,000 feet of hardwood lumber, owned by a Grand Rapids firm. The building, with contents, and between 30 and 40 freight cars, partly loaded, were entirely destroyed. The damage to the railway company is estimated at $10,000.

McLEOD, July 10. — The Commercial Hotel, here, was totally destroyed by fire Thursday. Mr. Murphy, the lessee of the building, had a narrow escape from cremation, with his wife, getting out of a rear door just in time. The contents were all consumed. The building was owned by C. Smity, of Compton, Que.

Semi-Centennial and Death of a Newspaper.

DUBLIN, July 10.—The Freeman's Journal to-day announces the death of the Nation, a weekly newspaper of this city, on the 50th anniversary of its establishment.

Grand Rally of the Farmers' Alliance.

TOPEKA, Kan., July 10.—A call has been issued for a general convention of the Farmers' Alliance and all industrial organizations in the State at Topeka on Aug. 20 for the purpose of organizing a co-operative association for the control of all farm products and exchange of supplies.

A Reporter Bounced from Sing Sing.

NEW YORK, July 10.—The Herald says a reporter was brutally assaulted and forcibly ejected from the prison at Sing Sing yesterday afternoon by several keepers. The reporter had interviewed a convict against the rules of the prison. His notebook was taken away from him by force.

A YEAR OF HARD WORK.

Annual Session of the Sons of Temperance Grand Lodge.

Extracts from the Yearly Reports—State of the Order—Good Work Among the Juveniles.

ST. JOHN, N.B., July 9.—Among the 100 delegates attending the 47th annual session of the National Division of the Sons of Temperance are the following from Ontario: Hon. G. W. Ross, George M. Rose, Thomas Caswell, Henry O'Hara, J. B. Brooks. The Propagation Committee's report showed the amount appropriated for the work to have been $2,833 44, and this amount, excepting $38 16, was spent. Of the above $118 20 was spent in Ontario.

The grand scribe's report showed the present membership to be 72,684, against 73,402, a decrease of 718. Several divisions failed to send in returns. Fitting references were made to deceased members, among whom was Henry Ross, P. G. W. P., Ontario. The report referred to the fact that 37 years ago the National Division met in St. John. Of the officers of that day only two survive—Venerable Neal Dow, of Maine, and Sir Leonard Tilley, Governor of New Brunswick.

The most worthy treasurer's report showed the total receipts to be $5,061 63 and the expenses over the appropriation $314 3.

Representative Bradley in his report on juvenile work said the work was progressing favorably. There were 30 societies of Royal Crusaders with 2,093 members. Seven societies were in Ontario with 523 members.

A proposition to change the regalia of the order was voted down by a large majority.

The committee reported unfavorably on the appeal of Representative Parsons, of Nova Scotia, for a change in the basis of representation in the National Division. Under the present system all P.G.W.P.s and P.G.W.As of Grand Divisions and all grand scribes who have been two years in office are eligible to membership in the National Division, but voting is done by States and on a basis of one vote for every 1,000 to 5,000, and one vote for each 5,000 above the first 5,000. Canada has one-half of the total membership and the Maritime Provinces full one-third, but the representatives claim that they are not fairly treated. The Parns scheme was to give one representative for ever 1,000, no matter how many thousand members there may be. The report was adopted.

At an enthusiastic public meeting Hon. G. W. Ross was the principal speaker, and delivered a practical temperance address, maintaining that the liquor traffic was detrimental to the welfare of the country, and in a logical way reasoned that the manufacture of liquor was not an industry. He receive a grand reception, and was heartily congratulated by the other speakers.

The National Division re-assembled at 9:30 o'clock and, after dealing with some minor changes in district division constitutions and the passing of votes of thanks, the session was brought to a close.

The following from the annual reports are of interest: Most Worthy Patriarch Crummey's report referring to the contest in South Dakota, which resulted in a victory for the prohibitionists, and where a disposition was shown to drop the local work as soon as prohibition was secured, says it would be a great mistake to give up the work of the Sons of Temperance even though every saloon was closed and every inebriate was reclaimed. Even though the world was blessed with such a condition, still there would be plenty of work for the Order of the Sons of Temperance.

The most worthy scribe, Bro. Benj. R. Jewell, in his report shows that during the year the number of subordinate divisions has increased by ten, making a total on March 31st, of 1,544 divisions, with a present membership of 72,684. While the number of divisions has increased there has been a falling off in the membership, chiefly through suspensions, of 718. Michigan makes a net gain of 40 per cent. and Ontario 36 per cent. The net gain in membership in Ontario was 2,063, in Connecticut 91, and in Massachusetts 358. Pennsylvania makes a net loss of 1,287 members, and Nova Scotia 1,119 members. Commenting on these figures the most worthy scribe says: It cannot be expected that any grand division will continue from year to year to make a large increase in membership. All moral, benevolent and Christianl organizations have seasons of encouragement and depression; sunshine and shade follow each other in rapid succession, and the Ruler of the universe has decreed that there shall be the seed-time and the harvest. The faithful laborers in Ontario for the past four years have patiently been preparing the way for the great ingathering of the present year. In Pennsylvania the membership is deserving great ... for their efforts to stay the depression, results following the amendment campaign. The changes noted this year are not unusual, and they result from circumstances beyond the control of the executive officers of either the grand or national divisions.

The next annual meeting of the National Division will be held in New York, commencing Sept. 28, 1892. That will be the 50th anniversary and the occasion will be duly observed. Sir Leonard Tilley has been invited to deliver the historical oration, as he is the oldest P. M. W. P.

Rev. Mr. Spurgeon's Condition.

LONDON, July 10.—Rev. Charles Spurgeon has grown extremely weak. He passed a restless night, the inaction of the kidneys exhausting the brain.

A Crack in the Stove Combine.

HAMILTON, July 10.—The E. & C. Gurney Company announce their intention of withdrawing from the Iron Founders' Association. The reason given by the manager, J. H. Tilden, for the retirement of the Gurney Company is that several of the smaller foundrymen have not been living up to their agreement but have been cutting prices. The new arrangements of the company will, it is understood, affect the Toronto, Montreal and Winnipeg branches. What effect the firm's withdrawal will have upon the price of stoves and wages is conjectural. It is thought that if any rupture has taken place in the association there will be a big cut in prices, and several failures may follow.

What Does It Mean?

"100 Doses One Dollar" means simply that Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most economical medicine to buy, because it gives more for the money than any other preparation. Each bottle contains 100 doses, and will average to last a month, while other preparations, taken according to directions, are gone in a week. Therefore, be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla, the best blood purifier. b

An Early Morning Ride in Rotten Row,

And a Stately Drive Through the British Metropolis.

The Prince of Wales Jeered by the Populace.

The Emperor Greeted With a Mighty Roar of Acclamation.

LONDON, July 10.—At 7 o'clock the Emperor of Germany left Buckingham Palace on horseback for Rotten Row, Hyde Park, where he enjoyed an invigorating ride. At 8 o'clock he reviewed the Queen's Westminster Volunteers on the lawn of Buckingham Palace. After breakfast he visited the naval exhibition, where he was much interested in the models of new warships and modern guns. Leaving the exhibition the Emperor returned to Buckingham Palace and retired to his apartments to transact a mass of public business with the German empire.

Precisely at noon the royal State carriage left the palace, sparkling with gold ornamentations and drawn by eight superb postillion-ridden horses, flanked by mounted Life Guardsmen and mounted police and conducted by footmen and coachmen of immense size. The royal carriage upon leaving the palace passed toward Marlborough gate through lines of Grenadier Guards and police backed up by huge, swaying, cheering crowds of people. As the procession left the palace from every quarter within and without the city boundaries peals of bells rang out from the church steeples and announced joyfully to the expectant masses that the imperial pageant had commenced. Though there were crowds at every point the real density of the masses of spectators commenced at Charing Cross and about the streets near there. Pall Mall, Trafalgar Square, Whitehall, Northumberland avenue, Cockspur street and the Hay market were packed as far as the eye could see. On the Strand the decorations were beautiful; every inch of the way from the Strand to the Guildhall abounded in color. The fronts of buildings were everywhere decorated with flowers, innumerable flags were to be seen and the bunting of almost every nation was displayed. Conspicious among all were hundreds of American flags.

Clubland, in the west, where the most costly disply of decorations might have been expected, was unusually bare, only the Carleton and Junior Carleton Clubs rising to anything like the flag and floral decorations of former great State functions.

No great number of onlookers appeared at the windows, nor was any great popular evidence of feeling apparent until the imperial party approached Trafalgar Square. There a mighty roar of acclamations filled the air as the Emperor's carriage drew near. This wave of welcome was taken up and passed along from street to streets with the passage of the State carriage into the Strand. From that point to Guildhall there was an incessant series of ovations, and all doubt as to the popular character of the reception was dispelled long before the imperial guests entered Cheapside.

LONDON, July 11.—When the Emperor William and the rest of the imperial party reached the Guildhall yesterday after the grand parade through the streets of the metropolis, his Majesty was formally received by the lord mayor and council. Then the recorder read an address to the imperial visitor to the effect that the lord mayor and corporation desired to offer him a sincere welcome and declaring his visit to the Queen to be a happy augury of the continuance of the friendly and affectionate relations so long existing between the two nations, also welcoming the Empress. The address was presented in a gold casket, richly enameled and decorated with precious stones. The Emperor replied:

"My lord,—Please receive my heartfelt thanks for the warm welcome extended to us by the citizens of this ancient and noble metropolis. I beg your lordship to kindly transmit the expression of my feelings to those in whose name you have spoken. I have always felt at home in this lovely country, being the grandson of your Queen, whose name will ever be remembered of a noble character and of a lady great in the wisdom of her councils, and whose reign has conferred lasting blessings upon England. Moreover, the same blood runs in English as in German veins, and following the example of my grandfather and my ever-lamented father, I shall always, so far as in my power, maintain the historical friendship existing between these, our two nations, which, as your lordship has so often mentioned, have so often been side by side in defense of liberty and justice. I feel encouraged in my task when I see these capital men, such as are gathered here to-day, do justice to the earnestness and honesty of my intentions. My aim is above all the maintenance of peace, for peace alone can give the confidence necessary to a healthy development of science, art and trade. Only so long as peace reigns are we at liberty to bestow earnest thoughts upon the great problems the solution of which in fairness and equity I consider the most prominent duty of our time. You may therefore rest assured that I shall continue to do my best to maintain and constantly increase the good relations existing between Germany and other nations. I shall always be found ready to unite with you and them in the common labor for peaceful progress, friendly intercourse and the advancement of civilization."

Dinner was served in the Guildhall, after which came more formal speeches.

JEERED THE PRINCE.

At 3:20 p.m. the imperial party left the smoke-begrimed Guildhall and returned westward, by way of the Thames embankment. Along that thoroughfare the scenes of the morning's progress were repeated. At Ludgate Circus a crowd of the rougher element, which had been engaging in free fights and also in scrimmages with the police, greeted the Prince of Wales with repeated outbursts of jeering and "hootings," which were only slightly set off by a faint cheer. The Prince, apparently unmoved, looked straight to his front as he passed the excited crowd, and made no attempt to reply by salute to the weak cheering. His carriage passed the crowd at a rapid pace. The reception accorded to the Prince of Wales was in strong contrast to the hearty, ringing cheers with which the Duke of Connaught, his brother, was greeted by the Ludgate Circus crowd as the Duke passed over the same ground.

The Emperor, after banqueting with the Duke of Cambridge, at Gloucester House, finished the day at a state ball at Buckingham Palace. The Duke of Cambridge's dinner was largely a military and naval affair. The Emperor in a short speech, made a frank reference to the hopes of the alliance in England arising from his cordial public welcome in this city.

After the public function of to-day at Wimbledon, the Emperor will proceed to Lord Salisbury's seat, Hatfield House. At Hatfield House the prolonged almost daily conferences between the English Premier and the Emperor's Foreign Secretary will close with a conference at which the Emperor will be present. It will be impossible to persuade the French and Russian Governments that all this means anything but the practical absorption of England in the Central European Alliance.

SARNIA PRESBYTERY.

Ministerial Transfers Approved—The Choice of Various Churches Confirmed.

The Presbytery of Sarnia met on July 7, Rev. Mr. McKibbin, moderator, in the chair. An extract was read from the General Assembly intimating that leave had been granted to the Presbytery of Sarnia to receive the Rev. John McKee as a minister of this church. Also, that the petition of Rev. John Lees, asking to be put on the list of aged and infirm ministers, as an annuitant of the fund, had been favorably received.

There was read an extract minute from the Presbytery of Kingston, transferring Mr. Ross, student, with the view of the Presbytery of Sarnia taking him on trial for license; and also an extract minute from the Presbytery of Orangeville, transferring Mr. McMillen to the Presbytery of Sarnia, to be taken on trial for license.

A petition for services in Moore Line schoolhouse, No. 17, was laid on the table and read. It was agreed to allow the services to go on at present and in the meantime cite parties to appear for their interests at the ordinary meeting in September next.

Rev. Mr. Graham reported that he had dispensed the communion at fourth line, Brooke; that the attendance there and at Inwood was good, and matters on the whole highly encouraging.

The questions put on such occasions were satisfactorily answered, and after prayer by the clerk, the moderator licensed Messrs. Ross and McMillen to preach the Gospel, and in token thereof, gave them the right hand of fellowship, as did other members of the court present.

A call having been signed by 97 members and 53 adherents in Napier and Brooke in favor of Peter McEachran, it was sustained, and in the event of acceptance the clerk was instructed to prescribe subjects for trial, to be delivered in Brigden on July 21 next.

A second call was signed by 91 members and 117 adherents of the Alvinston Church in favor of Jas. McMillen. The call was sustained and Mr. McMillen accepted. Salary, $550 and free manse.

A third call was signed by 132 members and 105 adherents of the Brigden Church in favor of Rev. John McKee, a probationer. The call was sustained and Mr. McKee accepted.

The induction of Rev. Mr. McKee, was appointed to take place at Brigden, on the 21st day of July, at 11 a.m.—Rev. Mr. Jordan to preach, Rev. Dr. Thompson to address the minister, and Rev. Mr. Beamer to address the people; and the ordination of Jas. McMillan, to take place at Alvinston on the 22nd inst., at 11 a.m.—Rev. Mr. McKee to preach, Rev. Mr. Cuthbertson to address the minister, and Rev. Mr. Graham to address the congregation.

The next meeting of Presbytery was appointed to be held on the third Tuesday in September next, at Strathroy, and within St. Andrew's Church there, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

KILLED BY KOCH'S "CURE."

An American's Strong Statement Regarding the Recent Medical Discovery.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Dr. L. S. Painter, of Pittsburg, arrived from aboard yesterday. He was one of the first Americans to be treated in Berlin with Koch's tubercule. In speaking of his case yesterday he said: My experience was horrible, I am afraid they have killed me, they have killed them off over there by hundreds; but now the lymph treatment is used in only two hospitals, and nearly all the physicians of reputation and skill have discarded it."

Dr. Painter said Prof. Virchow, who has performed hundreds of autopsies in lymph cases, has established the fact that instead of working as a cure the lymph will actually transfer tuberculosis, and that on analysis it will disclose the presence of bacteria.

A New Atlantic Steamship Line.

BALTIMORE, July 10.—The Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Company has closed a five years' contract with a steamship owner in England for three regular lines of steamers from New Port, Va., to Liverpool, London and Glasgow, and also for occasional steamers to Havre and Antwerp. These will be the first regular European steamer lines from any port south of Baltimore.

Fatal Accident at Cedar Springs.

CEDAR SPRINGS, Ont., July 11.—While unloading hay from a wagon with the new process known as the hay sling, on lot 13, Talbot road, township of Raleigh, Thursday night, a portion of the harness gave way, causing the single trees to fly back with great force, striking Geo. D. Pardo, son of W. Pardo, near the heart, causing his death about 7 o'clock this morning.

The Baccarat Party Still in Royal Favor

LONDON, July 11.—The Pall Mall Gazette gives prominence to the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. Lycett Green and Lieut Berkely Levett, who were prominent in the baccarat scandal, were among the guests at the garden party given at Marlborough House yesterday by the Prince and Princess of Wales in honor of the imperial Germans.

Mr. Scott in falling caught hold of a scaffold pole and saved himself, but Wallace went headlong to the ground, a distance of 25 feet or more, breaking both arms and otherwise injuring himself. His home is at New Durham.

Marriage of a Blind Couple.

HAMILTON, July 10.—An interesting Wedding took place at the Orphans' Asylum Wednesday, when Mr. Harry Bayless, of Toronto, was married to Miss Lilly Wade, of this city. The bride and groom are both blind, as were also the bridesmaid and best man—Miss Springstead and Mr. Stewart—all parties having at one time been inmates of the Blind Institution, Brantford. The happy couple left on the evening train for Toronto. Mr. Bayliss is a teacher of music.

The Cattle-Carrying Trade.

LONDON, July 11.—In reply to an influential deputation Mr. Chaplin, Minister of Agriculture, made an important statement respecting the Cattle Trade Bill. He denied that the bill would or could affect the price of meat. The sole object was to prevent cattle while crossing the Atlantic experiencing the horrible sufferings recently disclosed, and to compel the very small minority of bad shipowners to do what good ship-owners already did. If the bill could not be passed this session he should issue a further regulation under the existing powers of the Board after a conference with the ship-owners. His duty was to prevent the animals suffering, and he intended to the utmost of his ability to discharge that duty however strongly he might be opposed.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

The Royal Assent Given to Bills Already Passed,

And the Budget Debate Continued Until Midnight.

OTTAWA, July 10.—In the House to-day Mr. Charlton wished to refer to a misstatement in the Mail's report of the Parliamentary proceedings two days before. That paper had credited him with having used the expression "as false as hell," while it was in reality made by Mr. Mackenzie Bowell when referring to a statement made concerning the Minister by Richard Reynolds, a prominent Toronto Orangeman. Mr. Charleton desired to be disassociated with such an expression, either as its author or as the person to whom it had reference.

THE ROYAL ASSENT.

The members of the Commons being summoned to the Senate Chamber, Chief Justice Sir Wm. Ritchie, Deputy Governor, signified the royal assent to the following bills:

Respecting fishing vessels of the United States of America; respecting the River St. Clair and Michigan Tunnel Company; respecting the River St. Clair Railway Bridge and Tunnel Company; further, to amend the act respecting trade mark and industrial designs; respecting the settlement of accounts between the Dominion of Canada and the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, and between the said Provinces for the settlement of certain questions between the Government of Canada and Ontario respecting Indian lands; with respect to certain matters affecting the administration of justice; respecting the G. T. R. Company of Canada; respecting the Niagara Grand Island Bridge Company; to enable the Victoria and North American Railway Company to run a ferry between Beecher Bay, in British Columbia, and a point on the Straits of Fuca, within the United States of America; to amend the act to incorporate the Empire Printing and Publishing Company (limited); to amend the act incorporating the Canadian Power Company; to authorize the London and Canadian Loan and Agency Company (limited) to issue debenture stock; respecting the E. B. Eddy Manufacturing Company, and to change the name to "The E. B. Eddy Company;" to revive and amend the act to incorporate the Medicine Hat Railway and Coal Company; to amend the act to incorporate the Collingwood and Bay of Quinte Railway Company; to incorporate the Buffalo Lake and Battleford Railway Coal and Iron Company; respecting the Berlin and Canadian Pacific Junction Railway Company; to revive and amend the act to incorporate the Red Deer Valley Railway and Coal Company; respecting the Southwestern Railway Company; further to amend the Canadian Pacific Railway Act, 1889; respecting the Montreal and Ottawa Railway Company; to confirm a lease made between the Guelph Junction Railway Company and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and for other purposes; to incorporate the Peterboro, Sudbury and Sault Ste. Marie Railway Company; respecting the South Ontario Pacific Railway Company; respecting the Central Counties Railway Company and other bills.

The budget debate was resumed by Mr. Macdonald (Huron), who continued to expose the fallacies of the budget and the evil effects of protection on the country until 9 o'clock, speaking about four hours. Mr. McDonald's address was listened to with great intent and increased his popularity in the House as a speaker.

Clarke Wallace next dealt with the Opposition criticism of the trade policy from the standpoint of a business man. His address of an hour had the effect of thinning out the members until very few remained to listen to his tangled arguments.

Mr. King also addressed the House, dealing the Government some dynamite blows after which Mr. Wood, Westmoreland, moved the adjornment of the debate, and the House rose about midnight.

Mr. Job Scales, of Toronto, writes: "A short time ago I was suffering from Kidney Complaint and Dyspepsia, sour stomach and lame back; in fact, I was completely prostrated and suffering intense pain. While in this state a friend recommended me to try a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. I used one bottle, and the permanent manner in which it has cured and made a new man of me is such that I cannot withhold from the proprietors this expression of my gratitude."

A young man employed by a farmer in Delaware started for the home of his parents Sunday morning with his employer's horse and buggy. When returning in the evening he stopped at a friend's house for a short time, tying his horse to the fence, and went into the house. On coming out he was surprised to see a man jump into his rig and drive away. Thinking it was a joke, and the man would return, he waited for some time. Then he took another horse and started in pursuit. The horse was found unhitched from the buggy and tied in a mill yard.

THE PASTOR DANCED

When He Found a Villager's Lost Child,

But Skipped Away to Avoid the Mother's Kisses.

SAYBROOK, Conn., July 11.—The pretty village of Deep River, that nestles among the hills on the Connecticut River, has had a lost child wandering in the hills for two days, and rejoices that he has been found. The child, Max Miosky, the 4-year-old son of Max Miosky, a farm laborer, wandered from home last week, Tuesday afternoon, and at nightfall had not returned. His anxious parents hunted for him about the village for several hours, and then a band of neighbors joined in the search, which was continued ineffectually until midnight. At that time the Moiskys were nearly crazed with grief, but as the night was intensely dark, further search for the little one was abandoned until daylight. At break of day the hunt for Max was resumed, and almost all the men and boys in Deep River and some of the women, too, took part in it. The Miosky house is in the western part of the town, near the bank of Rogers' pond, and at the rear of the modest dwelling begins a great timber belt with tall trees and almost impenetrable copses that stretch unbroken from Deep River to the confines of Killingworth town. The search was made systematically, and the band which numbered 50 or 60 persons, hunted over every foot of the rural fields and pastures about the hamlet, and then entered the big wood.

All day Wednesday, Wednesday night and Thursday morning the people hunted faithfully but futilely, and then the wearied and spiritless band decided that it was useless to search further, arguing that either Max had perished in Rogers' Lake, or if he had gone into the timber belt he had already died of starvation or exposure.

But Pastor Reid, of the Deep River Baptist Church, who had been the undaunted and sanguine leader of the searching party, would not listen to the forebodings of his men. "No, no," said he, "don't give up hope yet. We shall find the lad." Thereupon the pastor strode into the woods again, and a part of the band, encouraged by his words, followed him, taking a different track. It was just 9 o'clock on Thursday, and the factory whistles in distant mill villages were still steaming the hour, when Mr. Reid, emerging from the thick timber into a grassy, shaded dell, environed by tall wood, saw a small Miosky chap sitting contentedly on a log in the middle of the open space, eating his dinner of wild strawberries that had gathered near his seat. Pastor Reid was so overjoyed by the happy ending of his search that the moment he set foot in the dell he performed a very lively jig in the green grass, whereat Max leaned back on his seat and laughed and chuckled.

A Deep River Baptist Church member, who was rig behind Mr. Reid avers that the pastor "hung his heels in a dance," and the member's reputation for veracity is good.

The fact that dancing is looked upon as an iniquity in Deep River, and that several persons have been "dropped" from the church roll of membership" because they indulged in the pastime is pretty conclusive evidence that Mr. Reid was considerably exhilarated over his discovery. After the jig the clergyman caught the lost boy in his arms, who, seated on Mr. Reid's shoulder, kept on munching wild strawberries as the pastor strode into the forest, homeward bound. The place where Max was found was five miles from his home in Deep River. Arrived at the Miosky dwelling both boy and pastor had an overwhelmingly warm reception from the happy and jubilant Moiskys. The whole Miosky family first hugged Max and then the hugged the clergyman, and finally hugged each other. Mrs. Miosky set out to kiss the pastor, but he slipped out the back door. The boy appeared to be none the worse on account of his adventure, and on July 4 he touched off firecrackers and torpedoes with the rest of the Deep River youngsters.

LIBERTINES LASHED.

An Old Soldier Does the Whipping at Montreal Jail.

MONTREAL Que., July 11.—Wm. Robinson, Wm. Coony and James Davis received the first installment of fifteen lashes on the bare back in the jail yard yesterday. An old soldier of the British army did the whipping, and did it severely. Even when groans and cries issued from the lips of the unhappy men he did not lighten the stroke. There was no time lost, and the whole affair was over in about twenty minutes.

Davis was the first man brought forward to receive punishment, and commenced to howl after the first stroke, but received the fifteen lashes without abatement on the part of the wielder of the "cat."

Coony was next brought to the whipping post, his face showing signs of mortal terror. Before he could be strapped to the post he suddenly started to climb it like a monkey, and reached the top, where he remained until dislodged a few minutes after. He was soon strapped in position, and on the second stroke he let out a yell, which only resulted in the old soldier's tightening his grip on the "cat" and finishing the number relentlessly.

Robinson bore his punishment without showing the slightest sign of what he suffered. The men will receive the balance of fifteen lashes at the expiration of their term before being set at liberty.

THE SCANDALS COME THICK AND FAST.

Scandals come so thick and fast at Ottawa that one gets an idea of why the late Premier, who knew what was coming, feared to await the session, but instead hurried prematurely to the country.

The scandals come thick and fast.

There is (1) the main Langevin-McGreevy scandal, showing that the country has paid for public works vastly more than their legitimate cost, and that everybody connected with the oversight, from Ministers down, are tarred with corruption, and that $10,000 was paid to Sir Hector Langevin.

The scandals come thick and fast.

There is (2) the putting in of the names of mythical personages as tenderers, and the subsequent amalgamation of the bogus with the real tenderers in the interest of the latter.

The scandals come thick and fast.

Then there is (3) the discovery that clerks in the Interior Department have been in the habit of drawing money for "extra services" in the names of other persons.

The scandals come thick and fast.

And now (4) on the top of everything else comes the discovery and subsequent confession that Chief Engineer Perley has been bribed by contractors and contractors' agents with jewelry to the value of nearly $2,000 for himself and his wife. This is like burglars throwing a piece of meat to quiet the watch dog.

The scandals come thick and fast.

It would seem that every department at Ottawa is rotten with corruption, and that Bill Tweed's regime in New York was purity itself in comparison with the state of things prevailing at the Dominion capital.

The scandals come thick and fast.

By the way, Perley's confession to the accuracy of Murphy's charges respecting the jewelry bribe is inferential evidence that Murphy was also trustworthy in his account of the $10,000 bribe to Langevin. Will Sir Hector follow Perley's example and also confess?

The scandals come thick and fast.

RIVER SPORTS.

We are glad to see the revival of water sports on our River Thames. Once fairly started from what in primitive days was called "The Forks," there is a stretch of several miles of deep water, along a winding course, and amidst picturesque scenery.

It is gratifying to note the interest leading citizens are taking in the new departure. The result of that interest will yet be seen in many ways. It will be seen in the improvement of the steamer service; it will be seen in the multiplication of row and sail boats; and, above all, it will be seen in the purification of the stream. We trust that the influential citizens connected with the "revival of the Thames" will be content with no imperfect solution of so important a question. Where there's a will there's a way. Let the way be sought and proclaimed, and there will be no lack of interested helpers.

With our deep-water stretch, crowned at the waterworks end with a Little Switzerland, it only requires the purification of the river to make our sometimes derided Thames a source of pleasure, health and wealth to our citizens.

THOMAS COLEMAN, Seaforth, an extensive salt producer, expects salt will be a drug in the market now that the duty has been reduced. Mr. Coleman's admission is suggestive. Reducing the duty, then, does bring down the price. Farmers and Patrons may make a note of this candid, though quite unguarded, admission.

STEEPED IN DISHONOR.

Dishonor seems now to characterize the actions of Ministerialists from the highest to the lowest. Late revelations have been startling even to those who have had some idea of the rotten condition of affairs among those in and out of office at Ottawa on the Conservative side. Never before in the history of Canada or in the record of parties has such a multiplicity of scandals been exposed—scandals of magnitude, and not those involving small amounts and implicating unimportant personages. Truly the time has come when a halt must be called if the honor of the country is to be preserved and its prosperity perpetuated.

After reading our Parliamentary report to-day, what can be said of the honor of Minister Foster, who declared he had completed no understanding with Sir Richard on the subject of an amendment to the budget in the face of the following report, as published in the Hansard?

Mr. Foster—I propose that we should follow the same course that we have done on other occasions and go into committee on the resolutions and pass them with what debate will be necessary, which, I hope, will not be very much at this time. Then we can concur in the resolutions at some future time.

Sir Richard Cartwright—And then we can proceed with the debate afterwards?

Mr. Foster—Yes.

Sir Richard Cartwright—Of course it is well understood that the fullest possible discussion will go on in future stages in the committee.

Mr. Foster—Your motion will have to be withdrawn for the moment to allow us to go into committee.

Sir Richard Cartwright—Of course this discussion cannot be possibly closed to-night, and, as my honorable friend suggests, it is of importance to the public service that these resolutions should be passed, so that under these circumstances I do not object to withdraw the motion for the present.

Mr. Foster—Very well. The resolution can be withdrawn for the moment and we can go into committee.

Mr. Speaker—Is it the pleasure of the House that the honorable gentleman shall have leave to withdraw the amendment?

Agreed to.

House resolved itself into Committee on Ways and Means.

(IN THE COMMITTEE.)

Sir Richard Cartwright—Probably as these resolutions are long it had better be understood that their adoption now is purely pro forma on our part and is intended not in the slightest degree to imply our concurrence in them, but is merely for the purpose of giving the Government an opportunity of putting them in force at once and preventing any fraud on the revenue.

Mr. Foster—That is the understanding.

Mr. Paterson (Brant)—And that there will be perfect liberty to discuss or to object to any item hereafter.

Mr. Foster—Certainly.

The committee rose and reported the resolution.

If the principles of honor are so disregarded in the House, how can it be wondered at if the hirelings of Ministers so steeped in disgrace follow their example and adopt a code of honor that permits them to accept presents and bribes, to draw dead men's salaries in their greed to possess money, and to do the hundred-and-one other things that have tended to impoverish the treasury of the Dominion and add to the burdens of the people?

The evil effects of a lottery in any country are acknowledged by all right-thinking people. Morals are contaminated and the thoughtless are led to believe that there is no harm done if one man obtains another's hard earned money, and if some grow suddenly rich while others are compelled to grind more closely and become more and more discontented with the affairs of life. Have we not in Canada something that is even far worse than the gigantic Louisiana lottery—an example from high places that is far more injurious than a game of chance? Financial considerations are weighty, and it cannot be disputed that millions have been stolen from the people and bartered away dishonestly by their representatives. But the moral consideration is even greater than the financial. Have the people duly considered the effects of the dishonesty that prevails to so alarming an extent?

Verily it is time to call a halt.

COLLAPSE OF PARNELLISM.

The defeat of Parnell's candidate in Carlow is satisfactory in every respect.

Parnell's gross and open immoralities had rendered him an unsuitable leader for a nation long noted, whatever its other faults, for regard for purity.

Then Parnell's conduct towards the great English statesman who had risked all and joyfully faced exclusion from office for the sake of Home Rule, was treachery of a kind happily without many examples.

No one can deny the ability of Parnell, but it is ability apart from warmth of soul, and closely akin to selfish egotism.

Few have fought openly against morality or gratitude and prevailed, and it is well that Providence has so ordained it.

WHAT THE "ADVERTISER" THINKS ABOUT IT.

ARE Tupper's nonsensical Imp. Fed. proposals in England made with consent of the Dominion Parliament? Somebody should ask in the House.

‡‡‡

OUR esteemed contemporary the Free Press finds room to publish news items about potato bugs and slugging matches, but we have failed to notice any reference yet to the important fact that Mr. Perley, chief engineer of the Public Works Department, has confessed that he has received for himself and for his wife gifts of jewelry to the value of $1,865 from Contractor Murphy, as a manifestation of the appreciation felt by his firm for what Mr. Perley had done on their behalf as engineer of the Quebec harbor. The little item has, doubtless, been overlooked by our esteemed contemporary.

‡‡‡

THE people of Stratford are making preparations for a visit in about six weeks from Hon. Wilfrid Laurier, with whom the representatives of the county are completing arrangements. The Reformers of Perth promise an enthusiastic reception to their leader, whose fame as a gentleman, an orator and a statesman has been spreading so rapidly throughout the world. Why cannot London also be favored with a visit from the stalwart Liberal leader? Very many Western Ontario people would avail themselves of an opportunity to hear him if he can be induced to visit London also, either when he comes to Stratford or at the opening of the Western Fair. him be invited at once by all means.

THE native Arkansans are described as having in general, olive skins, dark eyes, and slender forms like the Canadian habitants. They are stoical souls—almost too stoical. The key-note of existence with them is a patient endurance of avoidable evils, "when it rains they can't mend the roof, and when the sun shines the roof does not need mending." In Arkansas they are not voodooed, and they are rarely hoodooed, but they are frequently conjured. The trade in charms is always brisk. A rabbit's left hind foot has a steady value. The skin of the rabbit's stomach is of great use in helping babies to cut their teeth; it should be tied around the child's neck. A great deal depends on the moon. If you plant by the dark of the moon expect trouble. You should never "kill" by the dark of the moon either, for the meat will "all cripse up in the pan." We have known of otherwise intelligent Canadian farmers who will not build a fence except in a certain quarter of the moon for fear of its sagging or rotting away.

TORN BY INTERNAL DISSENSION.

[Irish Canadian.]

This family quarrel is bound to come to a head sooner or later—sooner than we wot of, if the straws that are blowing around be indicative of an approaching storm. No Cabinet torn as the one at Ottawa is can survive very long, and a collapse of the Administration any day is a likely consequence of its internal strife. The Tory party have now no one who can reconcile their differences and restore harmony in their ranks—no one whom the party will obey—and when discipline is lost the forces degenerate into a rabble and a general rout follows.

PRECLUDED FROM TENDERING CONGRATULATIONS.

[Woodstock Sentinel-Review.]

Lady Macdonald is now to be called Baroness Macdonald. It would be intrusion for Liberals to express pleasure at the honor conferred upon her. Sir John was not the Premier of a party, but of the country. The country mourned his loss and paid for a national funeral. No statesman was ever more generously treated by his opponents. Conservatives have admitted that the finest tributes to him came from Liberals. Lady Macdonald's acknowledgment of all this outburst of generous feeling was a clever political manifesto to a party caucus. There has been no word of gratitude to a sympathetic country. Canadians acted as if Sir John was a national statesman. His wife expressed her thanks as if he were merely a party leader. Liberals have said so many good things about Lady Macdonald in the past that they naturally regret being precluded now from expressing their kindly feeling on the Queen's action in honoring her with a new title.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL.

Relation of the Church to Educational Schemes Discussed by Distinguished Divines.

LONDON, July 10.—The Canterbury Diocesan Conference has been discussing the relations of the church to educational schemes. The dean of Davenport, Ia., at the request of the archbishop yesterday spoke on education in America. Free education, he said, was recognized as a fact. Whether desirable or not it was felt to be of the utmost importance to have some kind of education as extensive as possible. Against free schools there was a religious objection; also the objection that the teaching was apt to become mechanical. He said an attempt was being made to establish everywhere church schools but that as yet no great progress had been made.

Subsequent speakers contrasted the results of free education in America with the probable results in Great Britain, generally concluding that the results would be to the benefit of the Church of England.

The archbishop closed the debate, declaring that the stability of church schools depended upon the stability of churchmen.

WORK AND WAGES.

A number of the locked-out Windsor tailors have gone to Chicago.

The great strike of Belgian miners, which has been in progress for the last 70 days, was brought to an end to-day. The council of the Knights of Labor has decided in favor of a general resumption of business, and 4,500 men went to work yesterday. The remainder of the men who have been on strike will resume their employment at once.

Eighty-one city laborers at New Bedford, Mass., have been discharged by order of Mayor Ashley, in compliance with the law that all employes of the city must be naturalized citizens. Work on the roads and sewers is consequently delayed. A requision for men has been sent to the civil service officials in Boston.

DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS FOR PALE PEOPLE

SCRATCHED 28 YEARS.

A Scaly, Itching Skin Disease with Endless Suffering Cured by Cuticura Remedies.

If I had known of the CUTICURA REMEDIES twenty-eight years ago it would have saved me $200 and an immense amount of suffering. My disease (Psoriasis) commenced on my head in a spot not larger than a cent. It spread rapidly all over my body and got under my nails. The scales would drop off of me all the time, and my suffering was endless, and with out relief. One thousand dollars would not tempt me to have this disease over again. I am a poor man, but feel rich to be relieved of what some of the doctors said was leprosy, some ringworm, psoriasis, etc. I cannot praise the CUTICURA REMEDIES too much. They have made my skin as clear and free from scales as a baby's. All I used of them was $5 worth. If you had been here and said you would have cured me for $200 you would have had the money. I looked like the picture (No. 2, page 47) in your book "How to Cure Skin Diseases," but now I am as clear as any person ever was. Through force of habit I rub my hands over my arms and legs to scratch once in a while, but to no purpose. I am all well. I scratched twenty-eight years, and it got to be a kind of second nature to me. I thank you a thousand times.

The Coming School of Medicine.

The Histogenetic System.

THIS SYSTEM IS COMPLETE, having different medicines for all the different diseases. The theory is entirely different from that of the old schools. The medicines are perfectly pure, containing nothing of a poisonous nature whatever, and are quite tasteless. For three years these medicines have been given away free and thoroughly tested in the most hopeless cases before being placed on the market. The result has exceeded the most sanguine expectations. Hundreds of cases supposed to be incurable have been cured, and abundance of proof can be produced to convince the most skeptical that Histogenetic Medicines have cured and are curing to-day DISEASES at a later stage than any other system of medicine in the world. In ACUTE cases the medicines act like magic. Chronic troubles require a longer time, generally from one to three months, according to the nature of the complaint. In FEMALE IRREGULARITIES, WOMB TROUBLES, etc., the medicines have been especially successful. Private EXAMINATIONS in these troubles are almost, if not quite, absolutely unnecessary. Call or send for one of our free books explaining the system. They should be in every house in the land.

RHEUMATISM and SCIATICA

LONDON, April 26, 1891.

I am happy to acknowledge, and now testify, to the efficacy of your medicines in curing Rheumatism. I have suffered with this painful disease in my shoulders, knees and hips for twenty-five years, also with sciatica for some time. I decided to try Histogenetic Medicines as a last resort, as nothing ever seemed to give me any permanent relief. The first week's medicine gave me relief, and in two weeks the sciatica disappeared and has not returned. I took the medicines for six weeks, and am cured of the rheumatism. I feel better in every way. I am sixty years of age, and feel quite smart and active. I can cheerfully recommend these medicines to the public, and will be glad to tell any sufferer about my case. It is now nearly two months since I ceased taking the medicines, and the effect is permanent.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

CONVERSAZIONE.

Motto for the Week:

Whatever begins also ends.—[Seneca.

The Versatile German Emperor.

[The Forum.]

William II. is undoubtedly the most remarkable sovereign of the present time. He is a modern man, notwithstanding certain proclivities which still adhere to him, like pieces of the shell of an egg from which the bird has issued. With restless activity he seizes upon all questions which agitate our time, be they large or small. To-day he speaks on great European affairs, opens new issues to German commerce, and proclaims social reform; to-morrow he opens an art exhibition and takes a personal part in the performance of Wildenbruch's patriotic drama, "The New Lord." He presides over his council and shows himself a ready debater, opens a scholastic conference, laying down his educational plans, and indefatigably travels over his country in order to see everything with his own eyes. Much in all this may be attributed to his active temper, but the moving principle is undoubtedly the high conception of his duty as "the first servant of the State." This conception is bound up with a strong consciousness of his eminent position; he feels himself to be the pillar of the State, called to carry out a great mission. As before the dismissal of Bismarck he said that he would crush any one trying to obstruct his path, so he declared in his late speech at Dusseldorf: "Only one is master in this country; I shall suffer no other." It would be unjust to see in such utterances, caused by a high consciousness of his power, absolutist tendencies on the part of the Emperor. He is a constitutional prince and has rigidly respected Parliamentary rights. But in a time when the principle of authority and order is undermined in many ways, the youthful sovereign feels that he is the center of monarchical discipline, without which the State can neither exist nor progress, and he is resolved to maintain his authority against Social Democrats as well as against interested coalitions of privileged classes and persons.

One of Hermann's Great Tricks.

[North American Review.]

People have repeatedly asked me which of my tricks have pleased me the most, and which I take the most delight in performing. Naturally the effort that brings the greatest success is regarded by a man his best. I consider the trick of restoring the shattered mirror as my most famous one. This I had the honor of performing before the Czar of Russia upon an invitation to give an exhibition at his court. It was done unexpectedly to the spectators, and was not down on the regular bill. While playing billiards with the attaches of the court after the performance, the Czar being present in the saloon, I shot a ball with all my strength against a plate-glass mirror extending from floor to ceiling. It was shivered into 50 pieces. Consternation was depicted on every countenance; on none more plainly than my own. While the Czar courteously waived my apology, considering the destruction of the mirror as trifling, and ordered the game to proceed, I could easily see that my supposed awkwardness made a disagreeable impression. With the Czar's permission I examined the mirror to estimate the damage done and the possibility of repairing it. While so engaged one of the suite playfully challenged me to exercise my art and make the mirror whole again, never dreaming that his challenge was the very cue I wanted, and not considering the successful acceptance of it as possible. I hesitated an instant, and then ordered the mirror to be covered with a cloth entirely concealing it from view. On the removal of the cloth, after ten minutes, the mirror was found without a flaw, and as perfect as before the damage. I will leave it to my reader's imagination to decide how this trick was done.

Curious Instinct of the Horse.

[Longman's Magazine.]

It is not an uncommon thing in the Argentine pampas—I have on two occasions witnessed it myself—for a riding horse to come home or to the gate of its owner's house to die. I am speaking of riding horses that are never doctored nor treated mercifully, that look on their master as an enemy rather than a friend—horses that live out in the open and that have to be hunted to the corral or inclosure, or roughly captured with a lasso as they run, when their services are required.

I retain a very vivid recollection of the first occasion of witnessing an action of this kind in a horse, although I was only a boy at the time. On going out one summer evening I saw one of the horses of the establishment standing unsaddled and unbridled, leaning his head over the gate. Going to the spot, I stroked his nose, and then, turning to an old native who happened to be near, asked him what could be the meaning of such a thing. "I think he is going to die," he answered; "horses often come to the house to die." And next morning the poor beast was found lying dead not twenty yards from the gate, although he had not appeared ill when I stroked his nose on the previous evening; but when I saw him lying there dead and remembered the old native's words it seemed to me as marvelous and inexplicable that a horse should act in that way as if some wild creature—a rhea, a fawn or a dicotyles—had come to exhale his last breath at the gate of his enemy and constant persecutor, man.

How People Sleep.

Though it is true, as the author of a school composition once asserted, that sleeping is a universal practice among all nations, it is also true that there is a great diversity in the methods of sleeping among people of different nations and different ways of life. The things which one person needs to make him sleep are precisely the things which would keep another awake all night. Even the sedative medicines which put one person immediately into a heavy slumber excite another into a condition of nervous restlessness.

The European or American, in order to sleep well, ordinarily requires a downy pillow under his head, but the Japanese, stretching himself upon a rush mat on the floor, puts a hard, square block of wood under his head, and does not sleep well if he does not have it.

The Chinese makes great account of his bed, which is very low indeed—scarcely rising from the floor—but is often carved exquisitely of wood, but it never occurs to him to make it any softer than rush mats will render it.

While the people of northern countries cannot sleep unless they have plenty of room to stretch out their legs, the inhabitants of the tropics often curl themselves up like monkeys at the lower angle of a suspended hammock and sleep soundly in that position.

The robust American often covers himself with a pair of blankets and throws his window wide open to the air, even in the winter time, and he does not complain if he finds a little drift of snow across the top of his bed in the morning.

The Russian, on the contrary, likes no sleeping-place so well as the top of the big soapstone stove in his domicile. Crawling out of this blistering bed in the morning, he likes to take a plunge in a cold stream, even if he has to break through the ice to get into it.

The Laplander crawls, head and all, into a bag made of reindeer skin and sleeps, warm and comfortable, within it. The East Indian, at the other end of the world, also has a sleeping-bag, but it is more porous than the Laplander's. Its purpose is to keep out mosquitoes more than to keep the sleeper warm.

While the American still clings to his feather pillow, he is steadily discarding his old-fashioned feather bed in favor of the hair or straw mattress. The feather bed is relegated to the country, and many people who slept upon it all through their childhood find themselves uncomfortable upon it in their maturity.

The Germans not only sleep upon a feather bed, but underneath one. The feather covering used in Germany, however, is not as large or thick as the one which is used as a mattress, and the foreigner who undertakes to sleep beneath it often finds his feet suffering from cold, while his shoulders are suffering from heat.

Courageous Woman.

In the year 1705 John Harris and his wife, an English woman by birth, settled upon the bank of the Susquehanna River, at a place afterward known as Harris Ferry, now Harrisburg. There he carried on a trade with the Indians, great numbers of whom were in that neighborhood. On one occasion Mrs. Harris sent her servant into the cellar for something. The girl lighted a candle, and carrying it in her hand, without placing it in a candlestick, disappeared down the stairway. She returned in a short time with the desired article, but without the light.

"Where did you leave the candle?" Mrs. Harris inquired.

"It is in the cellar, standing in a barrel of sand," the girl replied.

"Merciful goodness!" ejaculated Mrs. Harris, hastening down the stairs. There, sure enough, was the candle, standing erect in an open barrel of gunpowder, its feeble flame throwing a circle of light around it.

Walking boldly up to the barrel, the brave woman deliberately placed her hands beneath and around the burning candle, and lifting it carefully from its dangerous position, carried it up the stairs.

The Oldest Epitaph.

[Cornhill Magazine.]

The oldest epitaph in English, which is found in a churchyard in Oxfordshire, and dates from the year 1370, to modern readers would be unintelligible, not only from its antique typography, but from its obsolete language, the first two lines of which run as follows, and may be taken as a sample of the whole: "Man com & se how schal alle dede be: wen yow comes bad & bare: noth hav ven we away fare: all ys werines yt ve for care." The modern reading would be: "Man come and see how shall all dead be, when you come poor and bare; nothing have when we away fare: all is weariness that we for care."

A Very Peculiar Ride.

Time softens all things, including the memory of disagreeable incidents. What, at the time, may have been irritating, perilous or intensely disagreeable, after a lapse of years becomes a matter of pride or amusement. Otherwise this anecdote, which relates an incident anything but funny at the time of occurrence, would never have been recalled. It was told by a gentleman now in prosperous circumstances.

When I was a young man, said he, I had a hard struggle to make both ends meet, and for a time did any odd job that came to my hand. One very rainy night, very nearly 1 o'clock in the morning, I was passing along Chestnut street in Philadelphia when I was accosted by a gentleman whom I knew slightly.

"Jim," said he, hurriedly, "I want you to take a message for me to Brown street," (a locality near Fairmont Park), "and I will pay you a dollar for delivering it, and I'll give you another dollar to pay your cab hire out there."

"It must be borne in mind that this was before the days of district messengers, and the local telegraph offices were closed at 10 o'clock p.m.

I agreed to carry the message—a letter—and going around the corner of Ninth street, found a single cab standing there. It was a most dilapidated vehicle, with two wretched horses, and the driver was in keeping, being old and poorly clad, and, as I soon discovered, extremely hard of hearing.

However, it was Hobson's choice, and after some chaffering I got into the cab and it started. Away we rattled up Ninth street and out Ridge avenue, and had gone perhaps two squares on the latter street when a most extraordinary accident happened. The floor of the cab gave way beneath my feet.

I was half asleep at the time, and when I came to my senses I was stuck in the debris and my toes were bumping along the cobble-stones. I kicked and struggled to regain my position, until the seat as well as the bottom boards fell into the street, except one jagged piece that kept banging the calves of my legs.

Placing either hand on the side sash of the cab doors I trotted along inside the cab, meanwhile crying loudly to the driver; but I might as well have appealed to the wheels. The old horses clattered along at a spirited rate; I dared not drop for fear the jagged board would knock out my brains, and so I was compelled to keep running. In short, I ran clear out to Fairmount Park, nearly four miles!

I could have cried with vexation at the time, and I had a fearful row with the cabman, but now I can afford to laugh at what was as ludicrous a disaster as ever happened in civilized life.

Feasting in the Days of the "Spectator."

[London News.]

How formidable was that dinner eaten in London by eight persons of fashion—or, at any rate, served to them—in the time of Swift and Addison and Steele! It began with a sirloin of beef, fish, a shoulder of veal and a tongue. They drank claret with the fish. This was the first course; then came almond pudding, fritters, chickens, black puddings and soup. Wine and small-beer were drunk during the second course. A hot venison pasty was the chief ingredient of the third, but with it were a hare, a rabbit, pigeons, partridge and goose—with more beer and wine to add to the tumult of sensation. Some took down a dram of brandy—as it were to watch the goose. A tankard of Canbon followed, and it was passed from hand to hand and from mouth to mouth. The Burgundy came on with the cheese. When the ladies had tasted that generous liquor their probation was at an end, and they were suffered to depart to their tea. As they went out of the room they met fresh bottles coming in. Of course there could be but one result of the exuberance of spirits provoked by a dietary of this kind. Our fathers had to conquer the world or die.

THOUGHTS THAT BREATHE.

Deeper than what we do is what we are.

Be much with God if you want to be much like God.

When temptations press upon you do you press upon God.

Knowledge in Scripture is never head work, but heart work.

If you wish to be remarkable for Christ, be remarkably like him.

Simple, unquestioning obedience is the secret of true blessedness.

Character is not ready-made, but is created bit by bit, day by day.

"He is faithful that promised," even if you are faithless that trusted.

A Christian studies more how to adorn the cross than how to avoid it.

Each sorrow is Christ's voice calling us to draw nearer and nearer to him.

If the Lord "careth for you," be yourself at rest, for why should he care and you care too?

No settled calm shall we have till we can see God's hand in every dispensation of his providence.

One truly Christian life will do more to prove the divine origin of Christianity than many lectures.

A foolish person often speaks without reflecting; a wise man more often reflects without speaking.

TEMPERANCE JOTTINGS.

Some years ago, Lord Derby, endeavored to show the British laborer the true key to the enigma, how to better a precarious position. The noble earl said: "We hear a great deal about the peasantry becoming owners of land, having gardens and fields of their own, and so forth. Do you know what an acre of good agricultural land is worth on an average? Put it at £60, and you will not be far wrong; in fact, that is a high price, and if you choose to do a little ciphering, you will see that that makes as nearly as possible, threepence for every square yard. I wonder how many workingmen think that whenever they order three pennyworth of beer, they are swallowing down a yard of good land?"

***

Mr. Burt, a representative of English working miners, in a recent lecture upon temperance says:

"We are all wanting more work in this country, and how are we to get it? I will tell you. Every man who spends £5 spends it in something or other for his own house. If he spends £5 in shoes, £1 17s goes for labor. If he spends £5 in linen, £2 goes for labor; £5 in earthenware, £2 4s goes for labor; £5 in woolen goods, £3 goes for labor—if made up into a suit, £4 goes for labor; but if he spends £5 in drink, then a few shillings only go for labor.

The Lewiston, Maine, Journal says: A few of the landlords of the State, representing a number of the hotels of Maine cities, but less than five per cent. of the hotel landlords of the State, assembled in Waterville on Thursday evening, and decided that the business of Maine is suffering grievously on account of the fact that the hotels cannot legally unite the function of grog-shop with that of bed and board. Those who believe that the business of making money excuses or apologizes for the business of making drunkards, take not only a false view of business but a narrow view of self-interest. Thousands of families flock to Maine hotels in the summer season because they want a hotel and do not want a rum-shop. When the era of prohibition first set in, we were informed that a hotel could not be successfully run by water power. Since prohibition was inaugurated Maine hotels have been developed from a primitive condition into great and fashionable places of entertainment, especially in response to the demand for shorter leasure. The elimination of the bar, has made healthy family life possible at Maine hotels. There is no business end to the grog-shop that any man who wants an honest dollar should desire. Money, it is true, may be made out of vice, but it is bad money, and every legitimate interest suffers when an illegitimate dollar is minted.

There are some interesting and suggestive comments in a recent number of Bonfort's Wine and Spirit Circular on the amendments to the license law passed by the last Pennsylvania Legislature. By one of these amendments the retail license fee in cities of the first and second class is raised from $500 to $1,000. The amendment also gives nine-tenths of the fee to cities, whereas under the former law the cities received only three-fifths. On this the Circular comments: "That will have a tendency to make the courts more liberal in the granting of retail licenses, as the receipt of this large percentage of the fee by the cities will be directly felt by all taxpayers." The Philadelphia correspondent of the Circular says the action of the Legislature increasing the license fee "came like a thunder clap," but he adds this consoling reflection: "It is thought by some of the dealers that a $1,000 license will have the effect of preventing any legislation detrimental to the interest of the wine and spirit trade in the future. It is to be hoped that such will be the case, and if it should prove so, the extra $500 will be the best investment the liquor interests has ever made." We commend these utterances of the liquor organ to the careful attention of our high license friends.

NORTHROP & LYMAN'S
VEGETABLE DISCOVERY
A Great Blood Purifier
A Sure Cure for Dyspepsia

A Medical Triumph!

HOW THE HEALTH OF ONE OF BELLEVILLE'S CITIZENS WAS RESTORED.

Remarkable Cure of Dropsy and Dyspepsia.

MR. SAMUEL T. CASEY, Belleville, writes: "In the spring of 1884 I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, which gradually became more and more distressing. I used various domestic remedies, and applied to my physician, but received no benefit. By this time my trouble assumed the form of Dropsy. I was unable to use any food whatever, except boiled milk and bread; my limbs were swollen to twice their natural size; all hopes of my recovery were given up, and I quite expected death within a few weeks. NORTHROP AND LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY having been recommended to me, I tried a bottle with but little hope of relief; and now, after using eight bottles, my Dyspepsia and Dropsy are cured. Although now seventy-nine years of age, I can enjoy my meals as well as ever, and my general health is good. I am well known in this section of Canada, having lived here fifty-seven years; and you have liberty to use my name in recommendation of your VEGETABLE DISCOVERY, which has done such wonders in my case."

A Very Bad Case!

DYSPEPSIA VANQUISHED.

MR. JAMES JOHNSTON, 4th con., 7th lot, Amaranth, writes: "Two bottles of NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY cured me of Dyspepsia. Mine was a bad case and I had tried a number of other preparations without getting any benefit from them."

Dyspepsia Had to Go.

MR. W. J. DEVELL, Wingham, carpenter and builder, writes: "Three years ago I was greatly troubled with Dyspepsia; a pain between my shoulders was so bad that I thought I would have to quit work altogether. No medicine gave me ease until I got a bottle of NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY, which gave me relief. I continued using the medicine until I had taken three bottles, when I was perfectly well. I consider it invaluable as a cure for Dyspepsia. I know of several persons who have used it with the same benefit."

ABOUT HAIR

Editor of the ADVERTISER:

Sir,—I have, as you know, for some time advertised in Canada and the States a prescription for the hair called "Dr. Dorenwend's Hair Magic." I have received some thousands of flattering testimonials from those who have used it as to its merits as a restorative of gray or faded hair; also as a promoter of the growth and a certain cure for dandruff.

A great many of my correspondents ask the questions: "Why is my hair turning gray so early? Why is my hair falling out?" As it is impossible for me to answer every one, I take the liberty of encroaching on your valuable space to make a general reply. A great many persons do not seem to be aware that excessive washing and rubbing is injurious to the growth of the hair; such is the case, however. Constant washing and rubbing the scalp and hair causes over irritation and removes the oily substance which gives strength to the hair; undue heat caused by the wearing of heavy headgear is also injurious. Anything that will tend to dry up the sap or life of the hair will cause dandruff, falling out of the hair, gray or faded hair and finally baldness. Of course there are other causes as diseases, hereditary tendencies, etc., but the first mentioned are the main and most common.

Dr. Dorenwend, an eminent German physician, has given to the world after years of toil and experiment his now famous "Hair Magic." The object of this preparation is to assist nature in the production of this oily substance absolutely necessary to the growth of the hair. It is now sold by all reliable druggists at $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5, or will be sent on receipt of price to any address. See that each wrapper bears the seal and signature of the manufacturer.

Cancer PRIVATE HOSPITAL FOR THE CURE OF TUMORS without the knife

THE ZADOC PINE LABOR UNION

[CONCLUDED]

"Evening! You've got a bad hole in that there path of yourn."

"Are you a road-inspector?" asked the man of the house, in a disagreeable tone of voice.

"No," said Zadoc, "I'm a road-mender. You've got ter fill that hole up. S'pose I fill it up fer you fer fifty cents?"

"Yer ain't going to drive out here and mend that walk for half-a-dollar, are you?" the man asked, incredulously.

"I'm a-going to take it on my reggler rowt," replied Zadoc. "Does she go?"

The man looked over the fence at the big hole. "She goes," he said.

It was just one hour later, when some light lingered in the sky, that the householder with the broken sidewalk paid Zadoc his fifty cents. He paid it with a dazed look on his face, but Zadoc was as bright and airy as usual as he pocketed the money and drove back to the quarry stables. His cubic yard of ashes had filled the gap and left a little over, with which he had patched a few smaller breaks.

When Zadoc arose on the morrow and stepped out of doors to breathe the morning air, he saw the white haired widow chopping kindling-wood in the shed.

"That ain't no work fer you," he said.

"Who's to do it?" the widow asked; "my darter, her arm's lame. She lamed it snatching a child off the railroad-track in front of the engyne. The engyne hit her. It was one of them delegate's children, and no thanks to nobody. Who's to chop kindling if I don't?"

"I be, I reckon," said Zadoc. He took the hatchet out of her hands and split up a week's supply. It was sharp work on an empty stomach; but he took it out of the breakfast, a little later.

After breakfast he walked down to Center, the nearest large town, and spent an hour in a paint-shop there. He asked a great many questions, and the men in the shop had a good deal of fun with him. Zadoc knew it but he did not care. "Amoozes them, don't hurt me, and keeps the derned fools talking," he said to himself.

He returned to South Ridge in time for dinner, and in the afternoon sallied out to look for a job. Remembering the Bixbys and the Baxters, and the fact that "Andy" did not care for more than two days work in the week, Zadoc thought he would offer his services to the two families. "Thar ain't no room in this world," he reflected, "for two day-men. The six-day men has first call on all jobs."

The Bixbys gave him the work, and paid him a dollar for the afternoon's work; but he could not come to terms with the Baxters. They wanted him to take fifty cents for half-a-day's work.

"But you'd 'a' had ter pay that there other feller a dollar," Zadoc objected.

"But that's different," said Mrs. Baxter; "you aren't a regular gardener, you know."

"The job ain't different," replied Zadoc; "and ef Andy can get a dollar fer it, I'm a-going to let him have it." And he shook his long legs down the road.

He loomed up, long and bony, before Mr. Thorndyke just after dinner.

"You've come to cart that ash-heap away, I suppose?" Mr. Thorndyke said.

"That ash-heap moved out of town last evening. Ef you've got time, though, I want yer to step around to the back of the house. Got something to show yer."

The "something" was Mr. Thorndyke's barn. He kept no horse; but the small building that goes with every well-regulated cottage in New Jersey he utilized as a play-room for his children and a gymnasium for himself.

"That there barn," Zadoc told him, "is jest a sight to look at. It stands to the north of the house, and catches all the weather there is. The paint's most off it. Look at these here big scales! I took one of those there fer a sample, and here's the color, the way it ought to be, on this here bit of shingle." Zadoc pulled the sample out of his pocket. "Now you wanter let me paint that barn for yer. I've figgered thet it'll cost yer jest twenty-five dollars. Thet's a saving fer you, and I can take my time about it, and put in a week on the job and do some other work round the town at the same time."

"Have you other engagements?" Mr. Thorndyke asked.

"No," was Zadoc's answer; "but I'm going to hev them."

"But do you know how to paint!"

"Anything the matter with my gardening?"

"No."

"All right on ash-heaps, ain't I?"

"I suppose so."

"Well, just try me on paint. Same old terms—no satisfaction, no pay. I can't make that there barn look wuss'n it does now; and I'm going to make it look a heap better."

The next afternoon Zadoc was painting the Thorndyke barn. He worked there only in the afternoons; in the mornings he hunted up odd jobs about the town, and the money he got for these he took to Center and invested in paints and brushes. As he paid cash, he had to buy in small quantities; but when the barn was painted—and it was painted to Mr. Thorndyke's satisfaction—Zadoc found himself something more like a capitalist than he had ever been in his life.

But there was one unpleasant incident connected with this job. He was sitting one afternoon in the children's swing, which he had borrowed to use in painting those parts of the barn which he could not reach with a ladder; he tied the ends of the ropes around the cupola, twisted himself up to the ridge-pole, and untwisted himself as he painted downward. He was slathering away on his second coat, whistling cheerily to himself, when a man in overalls and a painty jacket came up and made some remarks about the weather. Zadoc told him that the weather was a good thing to take as it came; and then the man inquired:

"Do you belong to the union?"

"What union?" asked Zadoc; "I ain't no Canuck, of thet's what yer mean."

"The house-painters' union," said the man.

"Well, no," said Zadoc, still slathering away, with his head on one side. "Guess I'm union enough, all by myself. I'm perfectly united, I am—all harmonious and unanimous and comfortable."

"What are you painting for, then?" demanded the stranger.

"Fer money," said Zadoc. "What are you a-fooling around here for?"

"Have you ever served an apprenticeship to this business?" the man asked.

"Hev you ever served an apprenticeship ter rolling off a log?" Zadoc asked by way of answer.

The man muttered something and moved away. Zadoc communed with himself.

"Ap-prenticeship ter slopping paint! Well, I be derned! Why, fool-work like thet's born in a man, same's swimming."

* * * * * *

As Zadoc became known to the community he found that work came right to his hand. The laboring native of South Ridge was the sort of a man who said, when a job was offered to him, "Well, I guess I'll take a day off some time week arter next and attend to it." This energetic person from the North Woods, who made engagements and kept them, was a revelation to the householders of the town. He mended fences and roads; he cut grass and sodded lawns; he put in panes of glass and whitewashed kitchens; he soldered leaky refrigerators and clothes-boilers; he made paths and dug beds; he beat carpets and pumped water into garret tanks—in short, he did everything that a man can do with muscle and intelligent application. He was not afraid to do a thing because he had never done it before.

Moreover, he made his services acceptable by doing, as a rule, more than his contract called for. He was not above treating his employers as so many fellow human beings. When the doctor prescribed wild-cherry cordial for Mrs. Thorndyde, Zadoc put in a whole afternoon in scouring the country for wild cherries, and brought back a large basketful. He would take no pay.

"Them's with my compliments," he said. "They growed wild, and I guess they growed wild a-puppus. Knowed thar was sick folks a-needing of 'em, mebbe."

* * * * * *

But it was not to be all plain sailing for Zadoc. One evening he went home to the widow Dadd's, and found the widow in tears and her daughter flushed and indignant. They told him that a "boycott" had been declared against him for doing union men's work, and against them for harboring him. The butcher of the town, who was also the green-grocer, would sell Mrs. Dadd nothing more until she turned Zadoc out of doors. Center was the nearest town from which she could get supplies, and Center was three miles away.

Zadoc walked over to the butcher's shop. The butcher was a German.

"What's this here, Schmitzer?" he demanded. "Ain't my money good enough fer you?"

"I ken't help it, Mr. Pine," said Schmitzer, sullenly. "If I don't boygott you, dem fellis boygott me. I got nodding against you, Mr. Pine, but I ken't sell you no mead, nor Mrs. Tatt neider."

"Running me out of town, are ye?" Zadoc said. "Well, we run men out whar I come from. But we don't run 'em out unless they've done suthing, and they don't let 'emselves be run out unless they've done suthing. I ain't done nothing but what I ought, and I'm a-going ter stay here."

He went back to the widow Dadd's, and told her that he would take charge of the commissariat. That night he got a large packing-case, which Mr. Vredenburg was quite willing to give him, and a barrow-load of saw-dust from the waste-heap at the saw-mill. After an hour's work he had a fairly good ice-box, and by the next night he had that box filled with ice from Center and with meat and vegetables from New York. Zadoc read the papers; he had seen the market reports, and now he was able to determine, by actual experiment, the difference between South Ridge prices and New York market prices. He discovered that the difference was very nearly forty per cent. The express company's charge for transportation was forty cents for an ordinary flour-barrel well packed.

Zadoc saw a new vista opening before him. He called on Mr. Thorndyke, and proposed to do that stately person's marketing, and to divide the forty per cent. profit evenly between them. Mr. Thorndyke was at first doubtful and suspicious. He cross-examined Zadoc, and found out what had started the young man on this new line. Then his manners changed. Mr. Thorndyke was not in the habit of carrying himself very graciously toward those whom he considered his social inferiors. But now he grasped Zadoc's hand and shook it heartily.

"I'm glad to know this, Pine," he said. "If you've got the pluck to fight those cowardly brutes and their boycott, I'll stand by you. You may try your hand at marketing, and if you suit Mrs. Thorndyke, all right. If you don't, we'll find something else for you to do."

Zadoc went to town on the morrow with a list of Mrs. Thorndyke's domestic needs. He had on his previous visit, sought out the venders who dealt in only one quality of goods, and that the best. To these, in his ignorance of the details of marketing, he thought it best to apply, although their higher prices diminished his profits. In this way he was able to send home a full week's supply of the best meat and vegetables in the market. They proved to be better than Schmitzer's best, and Mr. Thorndyke paid a bill smaller by one-fifth than he had ever received from Schmitzer. Zadoc was only forty-three cents to the good; but he had made his point. Within one month he was buying for ten families, and receiving the blessing of ten weary housewives, who found it easier to sit down of a Friday night, lay out a bill of fare for a week, and hand it to Zadoc Pine with a tranquil dismissal of all further care, than it had been to meet every recurring morning the old, old question, "What shall we have for dinner to-day?" And Zadoc found his profit therein.

* * * * * *

One warm evening in September, Zadoc Pine sat in the front yard of the widow Dadd's house, whittling a plug for the cider-barrel. He looked up from his whittling and saw a party of a dozen men come up the road and stop at the gate. He arose and went forward to meet them.

"Good evening, friends!" he said, driving his jack-knife into the top rail of the fence and leaning over the pickets: "Want to see me, I suppose? What can I do fer ye?"

One man came forward and put himself at the head of the party. Zadoc knew him by sight. It was McCuskey, the "walking-delegate."

"You can get out of this town," said McCuskey, "as fast as you know how to. We will give you ten hours."

"That's friendly-like," said Zadoc. "I ain't had a present of ten hours' free time made me since I wuz a boy at school."

"Well," McCuskey broke in, annoyed at some suppressed laughter in his rear, "you can take them ten hours and use them to get out of South Ridge."

"Ken, eh?" said Zadoc. "Well, now, ef I've gotter go, I've gotter go. I ain't got no objection. But I jest wanter know what I've gotter go fer. Then maybe I'll see if I'll go or not."

"You have got to go," McCuskey began, "because you have interfered with the inalienable rights of labor; because you have taken the bread out of the mouths of honest toilers——"

"Sho!" Zadoc interrupted him, "don't talk no sech fool-talk ez that! I ain't taken no bread outer no man's mouth. I ain't got down to that yet. Suppose you tell me in plain English what I've done to be run outer town fer?"

There was more hushed laughter in the spokesman's rear, and he set his teeth angrily before he opened his lips again.

"You have no trade, and you have taken jobs away from men who have trades. You took away a painter's job when you painted that barn on the hill."

"I didn't take away no painter's job. It wasn't nobody's job—it wasn't no job at all until I made a job of it. Ef the painter wanted it, why didn't he go and get it?"

"You've took away Andy Conner's gardening-work all around the town."

"That's so!" from Andy Conner, at the back of the crowd.

"Where was Andy Conner when I took his jobs away from him?" Zadoc asked, and answered himself: "Drunk, in Bryan's back yard. Andy Conner works two days in the week, and I work six. I ain't got no time to be sorting out Andy Conner's jobs from mine."

Then there came a dusky howl from out the thickest of the crowd.

"Vell, you take away my chob, anyhow! You take my bissness avay—you take my boocher bissness."

"Ah!" said Zadoc, "that's you, Schmitzer, is it? Yes, ye're right. I'm taking yer job away—the best I know how. But I didn't take it away until ye took the food outer my mouth—thet's what ye did, and no fancy talk, neither—and outer the mouths of two helpless women. An' under them circumstances, every time, I'd take your job away, ef you was the President of the United States."

This was a solemn asseveration for Zadoc. He respected the office of the President of the United States. But it was lost on his hearers. No man in the crowd respected the President of the United States. There came a low, growling murmur from the group:

"Kill him! Hang the scab! Kill him!"

"Kill?"

Zadoc let out a voice that only the Adirondack hills had heard before. Then he checked himself, and talked quietly, yet so that every man on the street heard him.

"I came from the North Woods," he said. "They make men where I came from. I ain't wronged no man in this town. I come here to make my living, and here I'll stay. Ef you wanter fight, I'll fight yer, one at a time, or the hull gang! Ye can kill me, but you've gotter kill me here. And ef it comes ter killing, I can hold my end up. I can kill a rabbit forty rod, and I own my rifle yit. But I know ye won't give me no fair fight; ye want to crawl up behind me. Well, I'm a man from the woods. I can hear ye a mile off, and I can smell ye a hundred yards."

He made an end, and stood looking at them. He had picked up his big jack-knife, and was jabbing its blade deep into the top rail of the fence and picking it out again. A silence fell upon the crowd. Zadoc Pine was a large man and a strong man. He had a knife, and in the doorway behind him stood the widow Dadd's daughter with his rifle held already for him.

Zadoc broke the silence.

"Boys," he said, "I ain't no hog. I want you to understand thet I'm going to earn my own living my own way. I take what work I can get; and ef other folks are shiftless enough ter leave their work for me ter do, thet's their business. I've took one man's job away from him fer cause. But I ain't got no spite agin him. He's only a fool-furriner. Thet's you, Schmitzer. And to show you that I ain't got no spite agin yer, I'm a-going to make you an offer. I'll take yer inter partnership."

There was a derisive laugh at this from the whole delegataion, but Zadoc checked it.

"Schmitzer," he said, "you come inside here and talk it over with me. I ain't going to hurt ye, and yer friends here'll go down street to Bryan's and take a drink. They've been a-talking, and I guess they're thirsty."

After a moment of irresolute hesitation the delegation moved off. The men were puzzled. The exiling of Zadoc Pine seemed no longer a simple matter, and they felt the need of discussing a new situation. Zadoc and Schmitzer were left together in the little stone house.

"Schmitzer," said Zadoc, "I'm making most as much clean profit outer my ten families ez you're making out of yer whole business, and I don't have no rent to pay. Here's my figgers—look them over. Now, Schmitzer, thar's no end of business hereabouts thet you ain't worked up. These farmers all around about are living on salt pork, and eating butchers' meat wunst a week. We've gotter get their trade and teach them Christian living. These here quarrymen ain't eating meat like they oughter. Suppose we show them what they can get for a dollar?"

Schmitzer looked carefully over Zadoc's figures. He knew the risks of carrying perishable stock. He saw that people bought more when the opportunities of the great markets were offered to them. Before he left the house he had agreed to work with Zadoc, and to follow his leader in the new scheme for supplying South Ridge with meat and vegetables.

"And what'll yer friends down street say?" queried Zadoc.

"I don't care vot dey say," responded Schmitzer; "dose fellus ain't no good. I got better bissness now. If they don't like it, dey go down to Center and bring deir meat home demselfs."

* * * * * *

Zadoc retains his share in the Pine & Schmitzer Supply Company; but after he had drummed up the local trade on the new basis, and broken Schmitzer into the routine work, he branched off for himself in a new line.

He had found an amateur electrican among his customers, and with this gentleman's aid he organized the South Ridge Fire Department and Protective Association. Thirty-six householders paid him ten dollars for the plant and ten dollars for yearly service; and he connected their houses in an electric circuit, of which his own bedroom was the central station. In each house was a combined bell and alarm; and if a citizen awoke at night to find his chimney on fire or to hear a stranger within his chicken-house, he rang a wild tocsin in thirty-five other houses, and then sounded a signal-letter by dot and dash to proclaim his identity. Then the whole town turned out, and Zadoc drove a small chemical engine behind Schmitzer's horse. If the cause of the disturbance was a chicken-thief, and the cause was caught, Zadoc played upon him.

"Can't bring out that engyne fer nothing," he said; "she's gotter serve a moral purpose somehow."

Two years and a half have passed since Zadoc left the North Woods. He is an employer now, and an owner of real-estate, in a small way, and he still has South Ridge under his protecting wing, and keeps her yards clean and her lawns trim—or his men do. Moreover, he is the husband of the girl whose smile first welcomed him to the Ridge.

"Man must earn his bread in the sweat of his brow," he has said; "but some men sweat inside of their heads and some outside. I'm working my brain. I could have done more with it ef I'd have had an edication. When that boy of mine gets a few years on top of the six weeks he's got now, I'll give him all he wants, and he can do the swaller-tail business ef he wants to. Thet goes with edication."

"You have done much for the town, Mr. Pine," the Deminie once said to him, "and I am glad to say that your success has been due to the application of sound principles—those principles on which true success has ever been founded."

"Yaas," said Zadoc, meditatively, "and then—I'm an Amerikin, and I guess thet goes fer suthin'."

GONE TO THE GRAVE.

Burial of W. H. Gladstone, the Great Commoner's Son.

The funeral of the late W. H. Gladstone at Hawarden on Wednesday was attended by the greatest simplicity. Mourning villagers of all ages lined the route of the procession, many of them being in tears. The dead man had been the kindest of landlords and the warmest of friends. The coffin was placed on a wheeled handbier and drawn from the castle through the park and the village street to the church, where the ceremony took place.

Mr. Gladstone, looking pale and strangely stern, followed immediately behind the coffin with Mrs. Gladstone on his arm. The widow of the dead man walked next. Local volunteers, in uniform, were stretched along the road. The band played the "Dead March in Saul" as the sad little cortege passed along.

The church yard is a beautiful spot, full of flowers and shrubs, well laid out and cared for. It lies on high ground, overlooking a magnificent countryside. Stormy-looking clouds obscured the sun most of the time during the funeral services, but no rain fell, and at times the sunshine burst through and lightened up the scene. The surpliced choir from the Chester Cathedral met the procession at the gates and preceded it to the church door, singing the first portion of the burial service. Mr. Gladstone walked bareheaded during this part of the service.

The Bishop of St. Asaph conducted the services in the church, Mr. Gladstone giving the responses and joining in the prayers with full and unshaken voice. He was bearing up bravely, though his wife sobbed continually for her lost son. But when the journey from the church to the grave was begun and the body came near its final resting place, the father's lips were seen to quiver, his eyes grew moist, and he faltered and seemed about to break down. This weakness was only temporary, however, and he quickly nerved himself for the last scene of all. As the coffin was being lowered Mrs. Gladstone burst forth in lamentation, and the widow of the deceased also gave way to her grief, but Mr. Gladstone remained firm. Most of the mourners joined in the hymn, "Through the Night of Doubt and Sorrow," and Mr. Gladstone bowed reverently as the bishop pronounced the final blessing.

The sorrowing family were attended by a troop of sympathizing friends back to the saddened home. Inquirers at the castle in the evening were informed that Mr. Gladstone was well, but quite tired and had gone to bed early.

The Privations of Early Camping in the Clearings.

BY DR. WEBSTER.—NO. 2.

At Mr. Teeple's we rested till we were rejoined by those of our party who had traveled more slowly with the oxen, and here as I intimated in my last, Rev. Mr. Belton resigned his charge and we parted company, not to meet again for several months. The Sabbath was spent at the house of a Mr. Isaac Burdick, within the bounds of the now town of Ingersoll, and here, as elsewhere, we were most hospitably entertained. And in this connection I may mention that Mr. Burdick had opened his house for the holding of religious services at the irregular intervals when a clergyman came that way, and that the tired travelers enjoyed the privilege of being present and taking part in such a service the Sabbath they were there.

Monday the pilgrimage was resumed, and continued with but two short halts—one at Choate's mill, and another at Putnam's for dinner—till we reached Mullett's tavern, a log cabin, on the south side of the Thames, opposite the present site of Dorchester Station, where the family remained two nights and a day, while father and Mr. T. Belton "prospected" a feasible route to the town line, on the north side of the east branch of the river. The road found (indeed partly made by the explorers), another morning saw us again upon our way; but this day's journey was one fraught with danger and afright. The river must be crossed once more, and the ice was now unsafe. In fear and trembling the attempt was made, and as the oxen got fairly started in the crossing the ice began cracking terribly. All of us expected it to give way and carry us with the current to a watery grave. Mr. Belton—genial Tom—had gone on ahead, and now called out to my father, "Drive fast, Uncle Robert! Drive fast! While it cracks it holds." And my father did drive as surely he had never driven oxen before, till the danger was past and we were safe on the other bank. Then in the short stop, the "breathing spell," made for all to rest a few minutes and get a little over their fright, my father bethought himself to question Belton concerning the holding properties of cracking ice. "Certainly it holds while it only cracks and doesn't break," was the laughing reply, and the strain upon the nerves somewhat relaxed. All heartily joined in Tom's contagious merriment. But the day's trials were not over. There was no actual road. Wherever the path seemed least obstructed and uneven they made their way, but they were continually compelled to drive over fallen logs and cradle knolls to my mother's discomfort, and twice ere we halted for the night the load was upset, injuring her considerably. When five miles had been accomplished the team tired down within about a mile of what is now Dreaney's Corners, and preparations were made for our first night in the dismal woods, without other cover for our heads than the sky above us. Who could tell but some would fall a prey to wolves before morning? None but God above, in whom both parents so implicitly trusted, and to whose tender watch-care they committed themselves and their little charge. The snow was shoveled from a spot of ground, trees cut for a fire and for the weary cattle to browse on, the finer branches spread upon the cleared space, and on this such beds as could be improvised were made. Supper was prepared and eaten, and those who could sleep slept. Morning broke dark, dreary and cold. The day before had been pleasant and the sap had started in the trees, but during the night there had been a hard frost, and the expansion of the frozen sap caused wood in many instances to burst and snap like heavily-loaded pistols, startling us not a little, but with some degree of hopefulness we, after breakfast, bade the old elm tree, at the roots of which our campfire had been built, "Good-bye," expecting that sometime that day we should come to the house of a settler of whom we had heard while at Mullet's. A Mr. Arthur Thompson, who had taken up the south half of lot 6, of con. 2, of London, about a mile and a half from the present site of the lunatic asylum. But the day wore wearily on. The traveling was very disagreeable. The slight thaw followed by the last night's frost had formed a "crust" which would not bear, making the drawing very heavy, besides being hard on the legs of the oxen, cutting them severely. Much of the way my father and Mr. Belton went before, cutting out a roadway and tramping down the crusty snow ahead of the team. At noon we had, in a zig-zag fashion, made about two miles along the town line between London and Nissouri, and came to the "blazed" line of con. 2, but we were yet two miles from Mr. Thompson's and the cattle tired out. What was to be done? Mother was quite unfit to endure the horror of another night in the open air. So near our destination and yet apparently unable to reach it! A family council was held, and Belton, who had been in the woods before, proposed that father should remain with the family while he would try and find Thompson's, and we soon lost sight of him in the thick bush.

What a weary time of waiting we had. Night was dropping down upon us and father and mother just about utterly disheartened when Tom's cheery shout was again heard in the distance, and a moment later he came bounding towards us, closely followed by Mr. Arthur Thompson and his brother Richard, who gave the new comers a hearty welcome. The road was broken a little, the partially-rested animals again hitched to the sleigh, and a little later on we were at Mr. Thompson's hospitable door, already opened to receive us. We were certainly cheered, almost warmed by the very sight of the blazing fire in the wide fire-place, the bright glow from which came out through the doorway in which stood Mrs. Thompson and her two daughters Jane and Elizabeth, and her son James, then children, and, I believe, all still living. After our lonely, wearisome journey, the sight of another woman's face was in itself a comfort to my mother—probably the sight of hers was also a comfort to Mrs. Thompson. Be that as it may, the friendship that night begun between them was only terminated by death. Ours were thankful hearts as we lay down that night under Mr. Thompson's roof and contrasted our comfortable surroundings with those of the night before. Our second night in London township, spent so much more comfortably than the first one, seemed in a manner to compensate us for the hardships which we had that night endured. There was another rest for mother here till our own home was prepared for her, and our long journey was virtually ended.

THE HORSEMAN.

Mr. Robert Bonner, of New York, has at present 53 horses, young and old, on his farm.

Laontaka, the winner of the Suburban Handicap, was named after a valley in New Jersey, near Morristown.

King Humbert has a "string" of 2,000 blooded horses in his three stables near Pisa. He ought to have an auction.

Lady Ulster, by Clay Hambletonian, dam Maggie S., trotted a mile at Fleetwood Park, N. Y., in 2:20¼ a few days ago, and has been sold for $6,000 to John de la Vergne, of New York.

Within about a month's time lately Mr. Francis Dunbar, of Perth, Scotland, shipped nearly 50 head of fine roadster horses from Chicago to the British market. Stylish, high-stepping carriage horses are in good demand.

The editor of the Kentucky Metnodist rises to apologize because he published a list of the Kentucky fairs under the impression that it was a list of quarterly meeting dates; and yet he was seen enjoying the trots "onct."—[Kentucky Stock Farm.

George Myers, of Mahoning county, O., is the owner of a yearling colt which has four glossy white feet, white mane and tail, while the rest of it is a jet black. Colt's sire and dam were both black. Parties who desire to put the animal on exhibition have made liberal offers for it.

The most skillful veterinary surgeon cannot many times tell whether a horse is sound or not. The internal organs are hidden from view and symptoms of their affection are not always clean and plain. In a large majority of cases a horse warranty is not worth more than a snap of the finger.—[Dr. Galin Wilson.

The American Trotting Association has reinstated to the track privilege of that organization the champion stallion Nelson and his owner, expelled in 1889 for buying the Nelson-Alcryon race at Boston. He owned up to his crooked conduct, but the horse was wanted as an attraction for association tracks this summer, hence the owner's offense was condoned.

A writer in Our Dumb Animals says that whenever a horse driven by himself has balked, he has got out of his carriage and gone to its fore foot, lifted it from the ground and struck the shoe a few blows with a stone. He has never failed to start a horse in that very simple way, and he has on several occasions, had balky horses which had exhausted the patience of all former owners.

C. J. Hamlin springs a new idea on the trotting horsemen that reminds one of the chariot races of old when he announces that he will drive Belle Hamlin, 2:12¾, Globe, 2:18¼, and Justina, 2:20, three abreast, and give them a fast mile. He is said to be positive that they will go better than 2:20. If so, Mr. Hamlin's idea is likely to be put in practice by others, and there will be a triple record list to keep as well as single and team records.

The query, "Wanted to know where to fasten a lantern to a carriage to light up the road on a dark night," is answered as follows in the Farm Journal by an Ohio correspondent: "I respectfully answer, by all means to the bed of the buggy or carriage or wagon, out of sight of the driver. I have an inexpensive holder of my own devising. I am using with the greatest satisfaction. The driver being in the dark, the pupil of the eye is dilated and takes in all the rays of light possible. To illustrate: If you go to a window on a dark night with a lamp in your hand you can see nothing. If you place the lamp outside the window where you cannot see it in the dark room you can see every object it illumines distinctly."

We cannot altogether say whether the Hackney derives its name from the London suburb of that name, or from the verb to hack, derived from the French, to chop small, or to cut to pieces. Most likely the latter, as hacks of all sorts come in for a good deal of chopping or cutting to pieces. It is from the same word we have the Scotch word "haggis," a very healthy national dish, most indigestible, however, to most Englishmen. There seems to be a disposition a the part of some of our Northern friends to go back to the original verb and make the Hackney Stud Book a sort of haggis stud book; at any rate, a stud book for hacks. Now, hacks and Hackneys are very different animals.—[London Horse Breeder. It seems an effort is being made instead of sticking to pure bred lines to register selected nags and work them off in America as genuine.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals recommends the following rules for the benefit of balky horses:

1. Pat the horse on the neck; examine the harness carefully, first on one side and then on the other, speaking encouragingly while doing so; then jump into the wagon and give the word go; generally he will obey.

2. A teamster in Maine says he can start the most balky horse by taking him out of the shafts and making him go around in a circle until he is giddy. If the first dance of this sort doesn't cure him, the second will.

3. To cure a balky horse, simply place your hand over the horse's nose and shut his wind off until he wants to go, and then let him go.

4. The brain of a horse seems to entertain but one idea at a time; therefore continued whipping only confirms his stubborn resolve. If you can by any means give him a new subject to think of you generally have no trouble in starting him. A simple remedy is to take a couple of turns of stout twine around the foreleg, just below the knee, tight enough for the horse to feel it, and tie in a bow knot. At the first cluck he will generally go dancing off, and after going a short distance you can get out and remove the string, to prevent injury to the tendon in your farther drive.

5. Take the tail of the horse between the hind legs and tie it by a cord to the saddle-girth.

6. Tie a string around the horse's ear close to the head.

Jas. Wenderoth, of Philadelphia, tells the following story of an old Dutchman that used to keep a few horses at Suffolk Park, before that famous stamping ground was cut up into building lots. He had a weakness for pacers and was a clever hand at selling them, but somehow he never sold two horses to the same customer. One of his smoothest deals was made to a man that wanted a horse that could pace in 2:31. The prospective purchaser was told to come and see him the morning and he would show him a horse that could fill the bill, and he in return said he would buy if the speed was shown him. Now the true state of affairs in the Dutchman's stable were that he had but one horse that could beat 2:30, and he was not for sale. He had, however, another that could pace in about 3:00 that looked very much like his speedy one, and he decided that the would-be owner would have to buy that one. When the time for the trial came the purchasing party examined the slow one and liked him so well that he said he would buy him as soon as the speed was shown. He was hooked up and driven a warming-up mile under directions in about 3:10. The next trip was to be the test, and while Mr. Dutchman had the buyer in taking a drink the rubbers threw a couple of pails of water over his faster stable companion—it would be a pleasure to tell his name—and brought him out for the word. He only scored off once and then rattled off a mile in 2:28½. "I'll take him," said the buyer. "I know you would," said the Dutchman; "come in and have a drink while the boys cool him off for us." After seeing a man the pair came out. The new purchase was hitched up and the pair drove away—one gratified to know that he owned a horse that could beat 2:30, and the other smiling when he thought what a smooth game he had played.

HER DAY.

He was a mighty, rolling river,
She was a little, rippling rill;
He was a mountain naught could shiver,
She was tiny, shifting hill.

He was a lion, loudly roaring,
She was a lambkin, born to love;
He was an eagle, proudly soaring,
She was a gentle, cooing dove.

He was a sturdy oak, defiant,
She was a slender, clinging vine;
He was a brave and brawny giant,
She was a wee thing feminine.

Ah, but the day when they went shopping
She was the one who took the lead;
She was the earth, so far o'ertopping
Him that he seemed a mustard seed.

FIGHTING A MAD WOLF.

A Dangerous Guest Hidden in a New Mexican House.

My room was at the end of a long hall. I was familiar with every crook and turn about the house and didn't need a light, so I passed into my room and closed the door. It occurred to me then to take a smoke, so I felt around in the dark and found a cigar, and struck a match to light it. The next minute I think you could have knocked me down with a feather. Away down in the darkness under the bed two fiery eyes shone out like burning coals just for that brief moment that the match was burning and then it went out. Before I had time to think the creature was upon me, and was springing at my throat, the most savage animal I had ever met. I felt rather than saw what it was. The creature was a wolf and it was mad.

Several animals afflicted with hydrophobia had been seen in the neighborhood during the past few months. There is no animal more formidable than a wolf when it has rabbies, and I knew with what I had to contend. I had to struggle with a large wolf shut up in a dark room, and that when the slightest wound from its sharp teeth meant certain and horrible death to me. As it came to me first I threw out my hands, and by some good fortune happened to strike its neck. I got both my hands about its throat and managed to hold it away from my face, but it was all that I could do.

I was nervous, I suppose, and the wolf was far stronger than it would have been under ordinary circumstances. The froth was dripping from its mouth and flew into my face as it struggled. It was the most desperate struggle of my life, just to hold that wolf and keep it from my face and throat, at which it constantly leaped in the most furious manner. All the time, from the moment it sprang at me first, I had been shouting and calling at the top of my voice. There was very little hope of doing any good with it, as the servants were too far away, and my room was on the opposite side of the house from their quarters; but that was the only chance.

It was very evident that I couldn't let go my hold for an instant. It was just as evident that I couldn't hold out this way long, and that unless help came after awhile my strength would eventually give way, and the wolf could tear my throat, as it was struggling then to do. And how long do you think this kept up? For two hours; for two mortal hours by the clock I stood there, fighting for my life with that savage wolf, and shouting for help every moment of the time. A hundred times I thought my strength was gone, and that my arm would surely sink down powerless the next moment, and yet I always managed to hold him off a little longer.

At last, just as I was almost in complete despair, one of the servants was aroused by my continued shouting, and came running with his gun in his hand. I managed to hold the wolf until he made a light, and then I held him while the man put the muzzle of his gun against the wolf's head and killed him as dead as Hector. And then I went to my sister's room and had a spell of something that would have been hysterics if I had been a woman. Being a man, it was nothing but a case of nervous prostration.—[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Mothers

Castoria is recommended by physicians for children teething. It is a purely vegetable preparation; its ingredients are published around each bottle. It is pleasant to the taste and absolutely harmless. It relieves constipation, regulates the bowels, quiets pain, cures diarrhœa and wind colic, allays feverishness, destroys worms and prevents convulsions, soothes the child and gives it refreshing and natural sleep. Castoria is the children's panacea—the mother's friend. 25 doses, 35 cents.

Kicks—So you think the ministers practice what they preach? Hicks—Why, yes; they preach sermons, and if you lived near one you could hear him practicing a week before hand.

A Dinner Pill.—Many persons suffer excruciating agony after partaking of a hearty dinner. The food partaken of is like a ball of lead upon the stomach, and instead of being a healthy nutriment it becomes a poison to the sytem. Dr. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are wonderful correctives of such troubles. They correct acidity, open the secretions and conver the food partaken of into healthy nutriment. They are just the medicine to take if troubled with indigestion or Dyspepsia.

Widower (to his little daughter, aged 10)—Dora, do you know that Susanee, our housekeeper, is going to be married? Dora—Oh, I'm so glad we're getting rid of the old pelican! Won't it be jolly? But who is going to marry her? Father—Well, I am!

No one need fear cholera or any summer complaint if they have a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial ready for use. It corrects all looseness of the bowels, promptly and cause a healthy and natural action. This is a medicine adapted for the young and old, rich and poor, and is rapidly becoming the most popular medicine for cholera, dysentery, etc. in the market.

A SLAVE'S REVENGE.

A Method of Vengeance as Peculiar as It Was Deadly.

In Hayti and Martinique the venom of the terrible serpent indigenous to those islands, the formidable fer de lance, has been often employed by the negroes in disposing of their enemies. A horrible but well authenticated instance of negro ingenuity and malevolence is told in Martinique. A huge negro, recently imported from the Guinea coast, had been whipped by the order of his master, one of the great planter princes of the Island while it was under French rule. The victim had made no complaint, but meditated revenge.

By long search he found the lair of a pair of serpents in the garden adjacent to the house. Watching his opportunity, he killed one and dragged its body to the house through a window that was always open, and into the bedroom of the beautiful daughter of the planter. He dragged it to the bed, lifted the coverings and coiled it on the sheet. When this was done he carried the dead snake away and cast it into an adjacent stream.

As night approached the serpent's mate followed the trail, crept through the open window and to the bed of the planter's daughter. The latter, half awake, make a motion to brush away the intruder. Instantly the fangs were in her neck, and in a few hours she was a corpse.—[Post-Dispatch.

"August Flower"

"I inherit some tendency to Dyspepsia from my mother. I suffered two years in this way; consulted a number of doctors. They did me no good. I then used your August Flower and it was just two days when I felt great relief. I soon got so that I could sleep and eat, and I felt that I was well. That was three years ago, and I am still first-class. I am never without a bottle, and if I feel constipated the least particle a dose or two of August Flower does the work. The beauty of the medicine is, that you can stop the use of it without any bad effects on the system. While I was sick I felt everything it seemed to me a man could feel. I was of all men most miserable. I can say, in conclusion, that I believe August Flower will cure anyone of indigestion, if taken with judgment. A. M. Weed, 229 Bellefontaine St., Indianapolis, Ind."

COST OF A SILO.

A New England Farmer's Profitable Use of One Acre.

The Future of Sheep-Raising—Bees and Honey—A Good Creamery Floor—Hints to Poultrymen.

Care of Farm Manures.

Cornell University Experiment Station has issued another bulletin on the production and care of farm manures. Two tons of manure from the horse stable exposed to rain, etc., like the average barn yard pile in six months was reduced in value from $2 80 per ton to $1 06, or 32 per cent. Manure from cows similarly treated lost 30 per cent. of its value. The losses were chiefly due to leaching and "fire fanging." It is therefore quite safe to assume that under the ordinary conditions of piling and exposure the loss of fertilizing materials during the course of summer is not likely to be much below one half of the original value of the manure. Even where manure made in the late fall and winter is piled "under the eaves" till "planting time" there will be a great loss. From all the evidence of practical experience we have been able to see the best plan is to spread the manure evenly (not in piles large or small) upon the fields as fast as made whenever practicable. If the fields be too soft from rain or thaw to get upon make a compact pile in the vicinity of the stables, and as soon as the roads improve run it out also. Where the manure is held over summer, say for the fall wheat field, then Prof. Roberts' suggestion to stow it under cover of a cheap "lean-to" or shed, forming what is called a covered yard, will effect a wonderful saving and provide a shelter in which stock can be "exercised" and watered while the stables are being cleaned in winter.

According to the bulletin quoted, the value of manures per ton from various animals is as follows: Horses, $2 79; cows, $2 27; sheep, $4 19, and swine, $3 18. The value of manure produced per animal per day is set down as follows: Horse, .052 cents; cow, .093; sheep, .015, and hog, .006.

With these important statements in mind, why so many farmers will persist in wasting that which might fill their pockets with gold, almost passes comprehension.

A Cheap Silo.

On the question of how much a silo should cost, a bulletin of the New Hampshire Experiment Station says: "The day of costly silos is past, and it is this fact alone which enables the rapid extension of this system of storage. A wooden silo keeps its contents with less loss than a stone or cement one, chiefly because of the penetration of air through mortar and cement. A silo built independent of the barn, having its own frame, roof, etc., can be built for $1 per ton of capacity, if above 75 tons capacity. Contracts can be let for the construction of a 100 ton silo, the contractor to furnish everything for $100. If built in the corner of the barn the cost of material and labor will be about one-half that sum, but on most farms, where there is lumber, and where much of the work can be done by the farm help, this cost can be reduced almost, if not quite, to an actual cash outlay of $25."

Mr. James Carmichael, farmer and creamery man, of London township, expresses himself highly pleased with his cheap silo experience last year. He constructed a new one in the bay of his barn using two sources of ordinary hemlock lumber, neither planed nor matched, with tar paper between, and painted inside with a coat of gas tar and gasoline mixed. It was simply a rough, air-tight box on a large scale, but it proved a great success for holding ensilage. It is not too late yet to build a small silo if you have a crop to put in it. Some prefer to dress and match the inside course of boards.

Pin Feathers.

In going into the poultry business don't start with too many breeds.

Select the breed that you think will suit you and stick to it until you make money out of it.

Then you can get more breeds if you wish to, but you will be wise if you do not.

If you are going to breed pure stock to sell eggs and chicks from, you will have to conform to the standard.

You will have to breed to feather; you must have birds that will score high if you expect to sell at high prices.

Remember that fanciers have to cull; they can't sell everything they hatch at high prices.

Nor can they get $3 per dozen for eggs from poor specimens of the breed.

To make a success from the start, resolve to make the business pay even if you sell eggs and chicks at ordinary market rates.

Then if you can make any sales of choice eggs or chicks at fancy prices it will be extra gain.

And it will make your heart to rejoice.

Don't commence with too large a stock; you can learn the business better with 20 hens than 500.

And be much surer of making some money the first year. —[Stockman and Farmer.

Aroma and Color of Honey.

By the color of the honey and the aroma therefrom an experienced bee-keeper can determine the source from which it came. Thus it is very easy to tell buckwheat honey by its very dark look and by its strong and pungent odor.

Honey-dew has the same dark look, but lacks the odor or aroma. In fact there is little or no aroma about honey-dew. For this reason no bee-keeper need be deceived as to the source of such odorless honey.

Aroma is a term employed to designate those substances the extremely minute particles of which are supposed to affect the organs of smell so as to produce peculiar odors. The particles diffused through the atmosphere and affecting the olfactory nerves—if the theory of particles of matter be correct—must indeed be extremely minute, yet not so much so but what we easily detect the smell from a field of any honey-bearing plant or flower. These odors have generally been supposed to depend upon essential oils. —[C. M. Doolittle, in the Rural Home.

Prospects of Sheepmen.

In an institute address George Van Houten, of Lenox, Ia., said: Some say times change and there will soon be overproduction of sheep, as there now appears to be of cattle. How is it possible for this to occur in the future, as according to the statistics there are only about 40 per cent. of the number of sheep in the United States to provide mutton and wool for present demands? Our population has increased more rapidly than have our sheep, and with every flock-master doing his utmost to increase his product it will not be possible to fully supply American markets 20 years hence. Whether American flock-masters shall have the control of our markets is an economic problem to be settled later on; but one thing is certain—that with present conditions there is no other farm stock that can be relied on to return the high rate of profit that sheep have brought their owner during the last few years. While we cannot fore-know what conditions may exist in the future it is safe to assume that there will be an evening up. In other words, we export vast cattle products while we import a vast quantity of wool, and as a generation at least must pass away before our flocks can be increased to supply the demands of our own markets the outlook is encouraging.

How to Use One Acre.

A. W. Cheever, of the New England Farmer, says that the nearest approach he has ever made towards obtaining the full use of an acre of land through the whole year was with an orchard, sown with winter rye in autumn and cut for feed early in the following May. The ground was then manured, plowed and sown to oats. These gave a rank growth, and were in blossom July 10. They were then cut and made into hay. Again the ground was manured, plowed and sown to barley, which was well headed by the middle of September, and was out of the way in time to gather the winter apples. These constituted the fourth crop. Winter rye could be again sown if desired, but the previous crops, five in number, including apples, were thought to be enough, and such treatment would doubtless give a fine crop of fruit, possibly worth more than the previous crops of rye, oats and barley taken together. There would have been time enough to sow another crop of winter rye, ready for the next cutting in May.

Eat More Mutton.

The best medical authorities claim that the flesh of the sheep offers greater immunity from disease and filth than that of any other animal. They do not thrive in the mire nor wallow in the trough they feed from. They consume neither garbage, vermin, decaying meats nor rotting vegetables. Their flesh has never been known to impart scrofula or trichinæ to those who eat it. The sheep is a dainty feeder and cleanly in all its habits; it cannot subsist on filth, nor can it long survive within its environments. They are of course subject to disease, but unlike cattle, hogs and fowls, they give ocular evidence of their ailment and that they are unfit to slaughter for human food almost as soon as attacked. Mutton is wholesome, nutritious and easily digested, and those who partake of it may have reasonable assurance that it is clean and free from the germs of disease. More mutton and less pork on our tables would be best for both producer and consumer. We are making some progress in this direction, but there is yet room for more.—[Live Stock Report.

Potash on Potatoes.

The New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station has tested the influence of some mineral fertilizers on the character of the potatoes treated with them. The experiments gave the following conclusions: (1) That it pays to use commercial fertilizers for potatoes; (2) the best results being secured when they are used with barn manure; (3) when prices are the same, sulphate of potash has no advantage over muriate. Trials were made to test the quality for the table, and to ascertain whether any difference could be discovered in the cooked tuber. All being dry and mealy, the chemists of the station were unanimous in their choice of those grown after the sulphate of potash; and persons entirely unacquainted with the facts, selected without hesitation those grown where sulphate of potash entered largely into the composition of the fertilizers.

Best Floor for Creamery.

The Orange County Farmer wants to know what objection can be raised to the cement or flagstone floors in a creamery. Our objection to either is that they are cold and unhealthy; that flagging will hardly ever lie evenly, and that the cemented ones often get broken, and so leave holes for the milk and water to settle in. Though we may think that cement will not absorb the milky slop that is so often on the creamery floor, we are assured that it will, and so become unfragrant. We fully believe that a plank floor made of good matched 2x4, 2-inch scantling, well painted on both sides, and laid on stringers bedded in the ground, pays best in the end. If made of the southern pine, that is full of pitch, it will last many years longer than common pine.—[Hoard's Dairyman.

A Remedy for Cabbage Worms.

Mr. A. S. Fuller, agricultural editor of the New York Sun, finds that the following treatment deters the cabbage worm:

Two quarts of coal tar are put into an open vessel, which is set in the bottom of a barrel, and the barrel is filled with water. In 48 hours the water is impregnated with the odor of the tar, although tar is not dissolved in it. The water is then sprinkled abundantly on the cabbages, and the odor penetrates every portion of the head, killing or driving away the worms. As the water evaporates, no stain or odor remains on the cabbage. The same quantity of coal tar can be made to impregnate several successive barrels of water.

Good and Bad Mothers.

The careful observer will note a great difference in sows in the care they give their pigs at farrowing. Some will never trample or overlie a pig. Others will destroy part or whole litters by their tramping around or lying down. Families having this former trait are worthy of careful preservation, while those of the careless kind should be allowed to disappear from the farm, no difference how valuable their other individual characteristics are. A poor sow is the poorestof property.

Hiving a Swarm of Bees.

A farmer bought a patent hive, and a neighbor, who had kept bees all his life, coming in, asked him how he was to get the bees in. The old-beekeeper, who had always kept bees in the old gum or box-hive, and when they swarmed cut the limb and set the hive over it, said, "You will have to cut a hole in the bottom to put them in." There was plenty of room at the fly entrace to run them in, but he had never seen it done, and could not think of any way but cutting a hole. My bees cluster on fruit trees, and I do not want to cut off the limbs, so I shake them into a dish pan, cover them with an apron, and pour them down in front of the hive. When bees are clustered high, I have a wire basket attached to a long, light pole, which I push up under the cluster, and jar them into it. If I get the queen the first jar, as I sometimes do, as she is usually on the outside of the cluster, the rest will soon follow.—[Mrs. L. Harrison.

Mr. Job Scales, of Toronto, writes: "A short time ago I was suffering from Kidney Complaint and Dyspepsia, sour stomach and lame back; in fact, I was completely prostrated and suffering intense pain. While in this state a friend recommended me to try a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. I used one bottle, and the permanent manner in which it has cured and made a new man of me is such that I cannot withhold from the proprietors this expression of my gratitude."

"But have you thought of my father?" she inquired as George was making arrangements for their future happiness. "Yes; it's all right about him. I am giving him tips on the races, and it won't be a month before he is eternally grateful to me or else no longer able to crush me with his wealth."

LEGAL QUERIES.

PEEL.—Is a postmaster bound to receive stamps from any person in exchange for money? ANS.—No.

TENANT.—Is a tenant for five years, who is bound by the lease to leave at six months' notice, compelled to do so whether his crops are off or not? ANS.—Yes; but he may be entitled to remove his crops after he has given up possession if there is nothing in the lease providing for the crops.

WALTON.—Can you give the name and address of the furnishers of maps and globes and school furnishings in the cities of London and Toronto? ANS.—The Education Department, Toronto, furnish all ordinary supplies and the others are purchased in England or the United States.

LAMBS.—Are lambs to be kept on this side of the lines before they can be shipped to the other side? ANS.—Not necessarily; but the United States customs regulations may require that they be kept for a certain time in order to prevent contagious or infectious diseases. Write to the United States consular agent, Dr. Leonard, at London, for particular information if you wish to export lambs to the United States.

SUBSCRIBER.—If I make a will leaving everything I may die possessed of to one son, and nothing, not even a cent, to another, can the one left without break the will on that account? ANS.—No. 2. What length of time are the executors of a will allowed before they are compelled to wind up the estate? ANS.—One year from the death of the testator. 3. Can the executors keep sole control of the property, both real and personal, together with any cash in the bank, even to keeping sons and daughters out of the dwelling house, until such times as they are allowed to make disposition of the property according to the wording of the will? ANS.—Yes.

BEAR CREEK.—If a county or a township council receives notice from the treasurer's sureties that they wish to be relieved from further responsibility and thereby tender their resignation, but the council takes no action, can the council be held responsible for any money which has been received by the treasurer, but not accounted for after the formal resignation of the securities? ANS.—The sureties cannot resign and the council would not be responsible for moneys received by the treasurer unless they were guilty of gross or wilful negligence or of connivance with the treasurer so as to discharge the sureties. You had better take opinion of counsel upon a particular statement of the facts.

AMONG THE PATRONS.

Elgin county Patrons met on Wednesday in Aylmer and transacted important business. Grand President Kennedy attended.

Harley Patrons have elected George Clement president, Frank Metcalf vice, Fred Dean secretary, and W. D. Bennett treasurer.

Northfield Center Patrons had a successfull taffy pull a week ago. The Harley and Hatchley Patrons were present in large numbers.

An association has been formed at Windham Center.

Union Association, Welland, has been organized by Thomas Clark with the following officers: President, Geo. A. Phillips; vice-president, J. P. Durk; treasurer, Miss Sarah Beatty; guide, M. P. Baldwin; sentinel, Alex. Upper; Minerva, Mrs. J. P. Durk; Demeter, Mrs. Wm. Atkinson.

The executive officers are in session this week in Strathroy.

A county association will be organized on Saturday in Galt for Waterloo by Grand President Kennedy.

About 1,000 attended the Alvinston Patrons' picnic, and a good old-fashioned day's outing was enjoyed. Brigden beat Alvinston at baseball by a score of 18 to 2. James Gamble, Brooke, made an excellent chairman, and the Alvinston Cornet Band supplied good music. Messrs. A. C. McLarty, ex-reeve of Dawn; Geo. Shirley, reeve of Watford; Dr. Gibson, of Watford; Rev. M. E. Siple, of Alvinston, and Hugh McKenzie, M.P.P., of Warwick, also addressed the people during the afternoon, and the gathering acknowledged this part of the programme a great treat. About $50 was realized at the picnic.

The Armow Association officers are: President, R. B. Campbell; vice-president, J. Graham; secretary, T. Matheson; treasurer, R. H. Reid; guide, W. Haney; sentinel, W. Neil; Minerva, Mrs. T. G. Young; Demeter, Mrs. W. Neil.

Activity Association, Bosanquet, has chosen the following officers: President, Henry Williamson; vice-president, Joseph English; secretary, Wm. Wight; treasurer, Wm. Doig; sentinel, John McInnis; guide, Albert Wakefield; Minerva, H. K. Fairbairn. The lodge is in a prosperous condition, with 25 paid-up members.

The Western Farm and Home, Port Huron, has discontinued publication. It has not been published directly by the Patrons, but for the Patrons. It claimed to represent the supreme body, but the paucity of its Patron news made it difficult to believe that it represented any section of the order. Its loss will not be felt.

Martin's Association, Vienna, has elected the following officers: President, D. W. Gamble; vice-president, Geo. A. Marlatt; secretary, J. W. Pressey; treasurer, J. Pressey; guide, M. Wilson; sentinel, Geo. Pressey; Minerva, Mrs. T. Pressey; Demeter, Mrs. N. Wilson.

An association has been organized at No. 2 school house, Stamford, with about 30 members. Hard times are forcing the farmers to combine to protect themselves, says a Welland paper.

Logierait Patrons had a strawberry festival in J. Callum's orchard and had a decided success, realizing $65.

Why will you allow a cough to lacerate your throat or lungs and run the risk of filling a consumptive's grave, when by the timely use of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive syrup the pain can be allayed and the danger avoided? This Syrup is pleasant to the taste, and unsurpassed for relieving, healing and curing all affections of the throat and lungs, coughs, colds, bronchitis, etc.

"I trust, young man," said the preacher during his call on the family the other evening, "that you are pursuing the even tenor of your way?" "I'm pursuing the even tenor of our church that's in my way," replied the youth hotly. "If he doesn't stop flirting with my girl I'll lamm him."—[Burlington Courier.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS — Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia. Miss Lucy—Has Aunt Belinda made much progress in riding, Weblyn? Ridingmaster—Well, miss, I can't say as 'ow she rides very well as yet, but she falls hoff a deal more gracefully as what she did at first.

Penny wise Pound foolish

Your common sense will show you the economy of using SURPRISE Soap the "Surprise" way on wash day.

Costs very little more than common Soap and lasts longer. Saves time —two hours' work will do what now takes four. The saving in fuel alone about pays for Soap, as there is absolutely no boiling or scalding required nor hard rubbing. The wash —cottons, woolens, linen—will come out white, sweet, clean. READ the directions on the wrapper.

Is it not "penny wise pound foolish" to use so called cheap Soaps which are injurious when there is a Soap which is more economical?

Dyspepsia

Makes many lives miserable, and often leads to self destruction. Distress after eating, sick headache, heartburn, sour stomach, mental depression, etc., are caused by this very common and increasing disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the stomach, creates an appetite, promotes healthy digestion, relieves sick headache, clears the mind, and cures the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia. Read the following:

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced. It relieved me of that faint, tired, all-gone feeling. I have felt so much better since I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I am happy to recommend it." G. A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

THE ASYLUM'S BIG SCORE.

The eleven visitors from Forest put up a good game at the asylum grounds Thursday, but the heavy willow wielding of the asylum men was too much for them. Dr. Beemer's magnificent 119 has seldom been equaled in this district. Rev. Mr. Terry got in the usual big score, and Messrs. Hall, Thurling and Pope did credit to themselves. A match between the Brampton and East Toronto clubs was played yesterday (Thursday) on the grounds of the latter. The feature of the day's play was the bowling performed by Pexton for Brampton, who, in the second inning, took eight wickets for four runs and in the match thirteen wickets for twelve runs. The Toronto men suffered a defeat by eight wickets.

Owing to the inability of several of the players selected to represent the United States in the international cricket match with Canada, some changes have been made, and the following are definitely selected: F. H. Bohlen, Geo. S. Patterson (captain), S. Welsh, jun., and E. W. Clark, jun., Germantown, C. C.; H. C. Thayer, Sutherland Law, Newbold Etting and A. G. Thompson, Merion C. C.; J. W. Muir and Crawford Coates, jun., Belmont C. C., and Joseph H. Patterson, Philadelphia C. C.

The annual cricket match between Oxford and Cambridge was completed on Wednesday at London, and resulted in a victory for the "light blue" by an inning and 40 runs.

We understand the Clinton Victoria Cricket Club will contest with the London Asylum team, probably next week. The Londoners are considered one of the best teams in the West.—[Clinton News-Record.

BASEBALL.

THURSDAY'S GAMES.

Eastern—Albany 9, Troy 4; New Haven 7, Rochester 3; Lebanon 4, Syracuse 3; Buffalo 23, Providence 12.

National—Pittsburg 7, New York 4; Cleveland 14, Boston 3; Cincinnati 11, Brooklyn 6; Chicago 11, Philadelphia 3.

Association—St. Louis 4, Boston 3; Athletics 5, Cincinnati 3; Baltimore 5, Louisville 0; Washington 8, Columbus 7.

FLYS.

The Rochester club has had a shaking up, and the Eastern Association has taken hold and put Charley Morton in as manager. The game is in a bad way in Rochester.

A game of baseball was played on the old Tecumseh Park, Kensington, Thursday, between the Newsboy's Baseball Club and the Junior Riversides, and resulted as follows: Newsboys, 15; Junior Riversides, 2. Batteries for Newsboys, Richardson and Sutherland; Juniors, Brazier and McLeod.

THE WHEEL.

The Hamilton Bicycle Club has been swindled out of considerable money by a dishonest advertising agent.

Mr. Clarence H. Smith, of Detroit, the well-known bicycle tour manager, passed through the city yesterday on his way to Niagara Falls where he will take charge of a large party of Americans (wheelmen from nearly every State in the Union) who are riding to Detroit. The "tourists" will arrive here Sunday next about 12:30, remaining over night at the Tecumseh House. Sunday afternoon will be spent in riding to the different points of interest in the city and they will attend the different churches in the evening. While here the party will be the guests of the Forest City Club, who intend riding out to meet them.

LAWN TENNIS.

LONDON, July 10.—Miss Dodd won the ladies' lawn tennis championship yesterday, beating Mrs. L. L. Dyard two to love. The Baddeleys won the doubles, beating Stoker and Pim.

THE TURF.

NOTES.

At the Leicester meeting yesterday (Thursday) the French colt Reverend won the Prince of Wales Stakes. The Deemster second and Orvieto third.

Disease has broken out among the horses on H. K. Bloodgood's stock farm in New Marlboro, Mass. Five horses are now sick and two have already died, one being Lady Emma and the other Lady Tyrone, valued at $10,000.

The Montreal horse, W. Wallace, that won second money in the 2:30 pace at Windsor on Wednesday, has a bad attack of inflammation and is not expected to recover. Other horses at Windsor are also reported affected by the change in the weather.

The Detroit meeting, opening July 20, has secured a very large list of entries. In the free-for-all are Alvin, Homestake, Alcryon, McDoel, Rosaline Wilkes, Geau Smith and Guy. Mr. Robert Davies, of Toronto, has Prairie Belle, in the $10,000 stake for the 2:24 class. Florence G. is in the 2:24 pace, and Almont Wilkes in the 2:19 trot. C. P. Geary, of St. Thomas, has Silver Star in the 2:30 trot. The entries in the free-for-all pace are Johnston, B. B., Dallas, Yolo Maid and Budd Doble.

AQUATIC.

The one-mile amateur swimming championship of England was decided on June 27 at Clough Hall Park Lake, Kidsgrove, Staffordshire, when the holder, S. W. Gressley, Leicester, had little difficulty in defeating his opponents.

L. Mackenzie, Hibernians' Club, again won the 500-yards swimming championship of Scotland at Edinburgh last month, easily defeating five other opponents. Mackenzie having won the cup three times it now becomes his property. The time of the race was 11 minutes 32 seconds.

ATHLETICS.

Charles Currie, the Parkhill athlete, won every prize in his line at Orillia on July 1.

A grand firemen's demonstration is to be held at Ailsa Craig on the 29th, at which about $200 worth of prizes will be given. There will be a tug-of-war between teams from East Williams, McGillivray, Lobo and London townships.

A VERY SICK MAN.

Alarming Reports Regarding the Health of Secretary Blaine.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 10.—A staff correspondent of the Republic who was sent to Bar Harbor reported that Mr. Blaine is suffering from Bright's disease with a complication of disorders, and that, according to the most reliable reports available, he is nearing the end of his eventful and exciting life. That he can ever resume public life no one in Bar Harbor for a moment thinks. He has not taken any solid food for more than a month. He is dieted on milk and whisky and has no appetite whatever.

NEW YORK, July 10.—A special to the World from Bar Harbor says: "Mr. Blaine is still a very sick man. But the triumph of his strong will over his physical ailments will always remain as the most interesting historical feature of his case. No man can recover from an illness quicker than he."

Agent C. P. R.

Mr. F. M. Upton, agent C. P. R., Toronto, Ont, says: "My wife suffered severely from an attack of rheumatism, when I was induced to give St. Jacobs Oil a trial, with the happiest results. I can confidently recommend your invaluable remedy as a sure cure for this disease." It is the best.

To-day, Monday and Next Week,

for 25c., with two pounds of any price tea, coffee, etc., you will receive a thirteen-piece berry set, exceptional value for quick buyers—just 500 sets. About 50 cents' worth of sugar here for 25 cents. EMPIRE TEA COMPANY, importers and profit-sharers, 240 Dundas street, London. bd&w

"Among the pains and aches cured with marvelous rapidity with Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, is ear-ache. The young are especially subject to it, and the desirability of this Oil as a family remedy is enhanced by the fact that it is admirably adapted not only to the above ailment, but also to the hurts, disorders of the bowels, and affections of the throat, to which the young are specially subject.

OFF FOR INDIA.

London Baptists Bid Good-Bye to Missionary-Elect Lorimer and Wife.

Union Meeting at Talbot Street Baptist Church—Addresses by Rev. Ira Smith, Rev. Mr. Lorimer and Wife—Interesting Statements About India—The Mission Field.

Rev. A. B. Lorimer, a young Quebec clergyman, has been appointed by the Mission Board of the Baptist Church as a Christian worker in heathen India, and will shortly leave for his remote field of labor in company with his devoted young wife. Last evening the Baptists of the city united at the Talbot Street Church in wishing them godspeed and success in their self-sacrificing mission. Rev. Ira Smith presided over a large gathering, and on the platform with him were Mr. and Mrs. Lorimer, Rev. Messrs. Speller and Walker, of the Adelaide Street and South London Churches, and Mr. Bullen, a student from McMaster College, Toronto, who is conducting the Grosvenor Street Mission at present.

Prayers were offered by both clergy and laity, in which the blessings of God were invoked upon his servants, who were to sever loving associations for the new and trying experiences of Indian evangelistic work. Rev. Ira Smith addressed the audience happily, alluding to the pleasure the ladies who were so zealous in the missionary cause were afforded by Mrs. Lorimer's presence. Ministers' wives, he thought, should have a large part of the rewards that popularly were supposed to fall to the lot of their husbands. Doubly true was this of those who accompanied their husbands to foreign climes, to people strange in feature, in language and in custom—where society was low, companions few, and where congenial souls were not to be found outside of one's own home. Brother Lorimer was one of the products of home missions and from the home field went to the foreign.

Rev. A. B. Lorimer followed in an earnest address, listened to with sympathetic attention. Citing the case of Jonah, he argued therefrom a Christian's duty was loving obedience, ever seeking to know what the Master's will was. Calls were coming from home, from the Northwest and from foreign lands. The impressions of a mother's prayers, backed by a sermon on missions by his pastor, had never left him. Taking up the field in India, he pointed out its vast importance in a commercial sense and its importance as the central object of mission care. From 1861 to 1875 the exports of India exceeded the imports by $50,000,000.' Its population was 285,000,000 — one-seventh that of the globe. Out of India's territory might be carved thirteen United Kingdoms, and although less than one-half the size of the United States it had four and one-half times its population and was nine times as densely inhabited. India was the key to Asia. Buddhism was introduced in India and was carried beyond its bounds until it permeated the continent. "Plant something better there," said the speaker. "If you believe Christianity more powerful to reach the soul than Buddhism, show your faith by your works.' The reverend gentleman alluded to the moral indifference which the religion of Buddha encouraged among its votaries. Every impulse, good or bad, they were taught to believe came from God. Every natural effect was regarded as a manifestation of the deity, thus shifting from themselves the responsibility of everything. They had good and bad deities. They didn't pray to the good ones because they would do no harm, therefore the bad ones were more popular. The immoralities of Hindooism could not be described. In India there were 3,000 distinct classes with distinct names. Man's birth and not his ability determined his fate through life, and by the narrow circle of his caste his work was circumscribed. Society here was regarded as women's special sphere of power; in India women had no part in it. Not trusted by their husbands, what wonder that sometimes they did not prove worthy? The speaker pictured graphically the deplorable state of Indian widowhood. There were no less than 77,000 widows under 10 years of age and 281,000 under 15. Many Hindoos were contented with their lot, knowing no other. Some, however, were awakening to their degradation and to the existence of a higher life. With the poet they might exclaim:

Weary are we of empty creeds,
Of tiring calls to fruitless deeds;
Weary of priests who cannot pray,
Of guides who show us not the way;
Weary of lies, wise men condemn
A worship linked with lust and shame;
Weary of men in sections cleft,
And human life of love bereft.

The church in India wanted 24 more men and although there were far more willing to go, yet only four could be sent because the means were insufficient. Thousands had been flocking to the standard of Christ and the harvest was ripe for more. The reverend gentleman in concluding appealed earnestly for the practical sympathy and support of his hearers towards the great undertaking in pagan India.

Mrs. Lorimer emphasized her husband's remarks with pleasant sincerity. She spoke particularly to her own sex about their heathen sisters. "I wish that I might bring a picture of the young widows of India to the hearts of the girls here tonight," she said. "Realize what your life would be if you had to spend the rest of it in sorrow from your 10th or 15th year. Because it is believed they are afflicted of God everybody must afflict them. No one says a kind word to them: nobody helps them over the hard places; everybody gives them the cold shoulder; their life is one of continual sorrow. Do you not long to go into their homes and tell those children of Jesus who can wipe away their tears? I ask you to pray for us, that our hearts may be filled with love for them; for if we cannot love them we can do nothing."

A generous response was made by the congregation to the appeal for financial aid in the cause. After the service Mr. and Mrs. Lorimer were introduced to a large number, who wished them good-bye. The church choir was present and rendered very agreeable assistance, Mr. Brown, of Byron, rendering a solo.

The Lightning's Touch

Is scarcely more rapid than the lightning-like action of Nerviline in all kinds of pain. Is it neuralgia?—relief is certain and rapid. Toothache is cured as if by magic. Rheumatism finds a master in a few applications of the powerful and penetrating Nerviline. In a word, pain, whether internal or external, finds a prompt antidote in Nerviline. Give Nerviline a trial. Druggists and dealers everywhere sell it, and it costs only 25 cents a bottle.

LONDON AND ENVIRONS.

—Miss Sarah Stanyer left for New York Thursday afternoon.

—The Court of Revision held its final session Monday evening.

—Mrs. John Rattray, formerly of this city, is visiting friends here.

The Misses Piggott, of Detroit, are visiting relatives and friends in the city.

—The Y. M. C. A. Band of Port Stanley will accompany the "Joe Milton" to Cleveland to-day. A pleasant time is expected.

—The many friends of Joseph P. Costello, of John street, will be pleased to see him around again after a rather serious attack of inflammation.

—Twelve carloads of excursionists passed through this city Thursday morning on their way to Port Stanley. They hailed from Chatham and other neighboring towns.

—There were eleven carloads of excursionists from Chatham and three from Ridgetown at Port Stanley Thursday, besides eleven from Stratford, St. Marys and this city.

Jennie Stuart and Mary Kothe, two young girls, were before Squires Peters and Smith yesterday and were sentenced each to a year in the Mercer Reformatory, Toronto. Vagrancy was the charge.

—The little 9-year-old daughter of Mr. McFee, Delaware, had an operation performed on one of her eyes recently by Dr. McLellan. The eye was taken out and a cancer from under the organ removed.

—At a meeting of the Presbyterian congregations of Aylmer and Springfield, Wednesday, a unanimous call was given to Dr. G. J. A. Thomson, of London. It is understood that the doctor is willing to accept the call.—[St. Thomas Times.

—James Sutherland, one of the men implicated in the assault case at Komoka on May 25, and on whom judgment was reserved on Wednesday, was before Squire Peters yesterday and committed for trial at the next session. Bail was accepted.

—The members of British Oak Lodge, Sons of England, removed Thursday from their old quarters near Clark's bridge to the commodious new lodge room over the Molsons Bank. Headed by the S. O. Band they marched to their future meeting place in line. Arrived there a happy time was spent after routine in social intercourse.

—All justices of the peace who have not taken the oath of qualification are reminded that the act passed at the last session of the Ontario Legislature requires that they shall take the oaths of office and qualification on or before the first day of August next, otherwise their commissions will "be deemed to be absolutely revoked and canceled." It may also be pointed out in this connection that section eight of the Unorganized Territory Act (chapter 91, R.S.O.), which applies to the Districts of Thunder Bay, Rainy River, Muskoka, Parry Sound and Nipissing, provides that no property qualifications is necessary for magistrates in these districts. The oath of office, though not of qualification, will, however, in the districts named, still be necessary, as in the case of justices resident outside of them.

Death of John Ward.

A Hamilton special of Thursday's date says: "John A. Ward, assistant Grand Trunk paymaster, died last evening at his residence, Macnab street north, from heart failure. Deceased was 77 years of age and a native of Crockerton Deverie, Wiltshire, England. Since coming to Canada in 1837 he has been employed in the service of the Great Western and Grand Trunk Railways in various positions. He sold the first ticket at Niagara Falls station, where he was employed for seven years. He was then removed to London, where after staying five years, he came to Hamilton, becoming first accountant and then assistant paymaster. He is survived by his widow and an adopted daughter. Deceased was of a genial disposition and a general favorite. He was a member of Christ Church Cathedral. The funeral will take place to-morrow at Brantford." Mr. Ward was G. T. R. station master in this city about 25 years ago and was well and favorably known to many old residents.

Memorable Masonic Meeting.

The sublime degree was conferred by R. W. Bro. George C. Davis, grand junior warden of the Grand Lodge of Canada, at St. John's, 209a, lodge room Thursday night. The G. J. W. and officers exemplified the beautiful ritual to perfection. A large number of visitors were present, including Bro. A. A. Campbell and the officers of Kilwinning Lodge, No. 64; Bros. D. J. Campbell, Hamilton; J. E. Harding, Alfred Hirst and J. K. Macfarland, Stratford; H. F. Millie, Dublin (Ireland); W. J. Fear, W. W. Rutherford, Dr. Geo. E. Clark, F. J. Winlow, W. R. Smith and G. A. Brown, Aylmer; R. McCully (mayor), Thos. Pinfold, A. W. Martan, W. D. Carl, C. Scarce, Thos. Marrow, D. B. Drake and Alex. Hess, St. Thomas; H. P. Blackey, H. T. Smith and G. A. Spencer, Toronto; John Serle and J. F. Wood, Paris; C. F. New and W. McNamee, Camlachie; A. R. Rowat and Alfred Barrows, Nilestown, and many others. An adjournment was made at the close to the banquetting hall, where a pleasant time was spent in song and speech.

Welcome to the New Pastor.

A large number assembled in the lecture hall of Colborne Street Methodist Church to welcome the new pastor, Rev. Charles Smith. The room was prettily decorated with flowers and mottoes. W. D. Buckle occupied the chair and delivered a short address. Miss Cater then favored the audience with an instrumental selection, followed by a solo from Mrs. Henderson; Rev. Mr. Godwin, of London West, spoke a few words of welcome to Mr. Smith; Miss Nobbs rendered a solo very acceptably, after which ice cream and cake were served in abundance. The second part of the programme consisted of a solo by Jas. Jury, a recitation by Mr. Riffe, a solo by Miss M. Bryant, and a recitation by Miss Johnston, of Chatham. Mr. Wm. Henderson then formally welcomed Rev. Mr. Smith on behalf of the Quarterly Board. The reverend gentleman expressed his thanks in a happy manner. A solo by Mr. Forsyth and an address full of welcome and good wishes by Rev. George Boyd, the doxology and the benediction put an end to the evening's enjoyment.

Sewers, Streets and Sidewalks.

The meeting of the Board of Works Thursday night had a full attendance of the members. Permission was granted R. Southam to open a window from his cellar into the registry office yard, despite W. C. L. Gill's objection. R. Hueston's communication re damages to a hack was left with the acting engineer and Chairman Connor. W. Beaton's petition for a sidewalk on Pall Mall street was filed. The chairman, Mayor Taylor, Ald. Scarrow and Engineer Graydon will report on the application of the Sacred Heart Academy authorities to inclose fourteen feet on Queen's avenue. The engineer will report on Reid Bros.' petition for cedar blocking Clarence street from Dundas to the G. T. R. Dundas street sidewalk from Colborne to Adelaide was reported as in a bad condition, and it will be considered. Mr. Cox's appeal for compensation for damages his wife sustained through an alleged defective sidewalk was referred to the chairman and engineer. Tenders for cedar blocking Dundas street and Queen's avenue will be called for. Through a mistake the petition for a stone walk on Richmond street, west side, between Fullerton and Maple streets, was thrown out; the committee will now recommend that it be granted. Francis Harley's complaint that he paid heavy sewer rates with no sewer will be looked into. Acting Engineer Graydon reported that contractors persisted in tapping sewers without permits, the chief of police neglecting to summons them. An advertisement in the papers will further warn them. The pay sheet, amounting to $402 12, passed. The foreman of the Richmond street sewer work will get $1 75 a day.

CERTIFICATES OF STRENGTH AND PURITY:

OFFICE OF THE PUBLIC ANALYST,
Montreal, Sept. 9, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Co., Montreal:

Gentlemen,—I have personally taken samples from a large stock of your Granulated Sugar, "REDPATH" brand, and carefully tested them by the polariscope, and I find these samples to be as near to absolute purity as can be obtained by any process of sugar refining.

The test by the polariscope showed in yesterday's yield 99·90 per cent. of pure cane sugar, which may be considered commercially as absolutely pure sugar.

JOHN BAKER EDWARDS,

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 10.—At Franklinville 1,300 boxes of June cheese were offered: 955 boxes colored sold at 8c; 155 boxes white at 8c, and 146 boxes white at 8¼c.

GANANOQUE, July 10.—At the Gananoque cheese market nine factories were represented. Entered for sale, 1,000 boxes white; no sales effected; 300 boxes white consigned to commission agent, Montreal.

BRANTFORD, July 10.—The recently established cheese market is proving very successful. Yesterday's sales exceeded $11,000 from ten factories, with 1,755 boxes at prices ranging from 8 5-16c to 8¼c.

Live Stock Markets.

EAST BUFFALO.

EAST BUFFALO, N. Y., July 10.—Cattle—Offerings, 26 cars, of which 23 cars were heavy export cattle, not salable here. Two loads of ordinary Texas butcher's steers and a load of bulls were disposed of at about the average values of Monday; feeling steady for good cattle.

Sheep and Lambs—Only five cars on sale; market firm for sheep and dull for lambs; prices about steady with yesterday. Eastern reports are of a steady demand for sheep at unchanged values. The outlook for the lamb market is discouraging.

Hogs—Market active, firm, and 10c to 15c higher; 14 cars were on sale; offerings changed hands readily at strong values. Medium weights and heavy hogs, $5 20 to $5 25; mixed light to good weight Yorkers, $5 15 to $5 25; pigs, $5 05 to $5 10; roughs, $4 to $4 25; stags, $3 50 to $3 75, the market closing steady.

MONTREAL.

MONTREAL, July 10.—About 100 milch cows offered on Viger market to-day; trade was very dull, only about a dozen cows being sold before 11 o'clock; six of the best cows on the market sold for $230, and several other pretty good milkers from $30 to $35 each; smaller cows were offered for $20 each, without finding purchasers.

Petrolea Oil Market.

PETROLEA, July 10.—Oil, $1 33¼.

LOCAL BREVETIES.

—Louis Rosenburg was fined $1 at the Police Court this morning for allowing his horse to be at large on Clarence street.

—Wm. H. Hunt, aged 41, and Elizabeth Kay, aged 37, both registering from this city, on Wednesday, purchased marriage lines in Detroit.

—Joseph Coombs was again before the police magistrate this morning charged with vagrancy and drunkenness. He was remanded until next Thursday.

—Mrs. Price, charged with breaking section 3 of market bylaw 576, by selling vegetables off a table at the market, was fined $1 at the Police Court this morning.

Funeral of the Late John Moran.

The funeral of the late John Moran, cigarmaker, who died in Denver, Colorado, on July 3, took place from the residence of Mrs. Genereaux, 145 Wharncliffe road, this morning. Deceased lived in the city until recently and, as a mark of respect for their former brother the local members of the Cigarmakers' International Union, wearing their mourning badges, attended in a body. Preceded by "D" Company, I. S. C., Band, they marched in line up Richmond street to St. Peter's Cathedral, where the funeral service was held, the remains then being conveyed to the Catholic burying ground. Moran was only 26 years of age at the time of his death and was well liked by his acquaintances in the city.

Prof. Squires Paid $10.

The name of Prof. Squires has become familiar to the people of Western Ontario during the past few months. He is a musical prodigy, and played on five instruments at one time. He gave entertainments, and as a curiosity created some interest. He produced sound without harmony. So also did his advance agent, who pulled the professor prodigiously, and in the name of churches and societies supplied publishers with an abundance of copy for free advertising. But the professor has gone and has been entertaining the Port Huron people since leaving London two weeks ago. The other evening he started out to take in the sights of the city, and a small boy threw a firecracker at him and injured his ear. He took the law into his own hands and played five kinds of music at once on the boy's head. A detective saw the performance and entertained him for awhile, and the professor closed the show by paying $10 for his fine. He is heading for the World's Fair at Chicago.

THE TURF.

THIRD DAY AT WINDSOR.

WINDSOR, July 10.—Those who missed the races to-day missed the best day of the three. They were interesting, exciting and record-breaking. The day was full of surprises. M. Rochford's Major A. did the best work of his career. George S. Jones sold as favorite in the 2:30 race, but had to be contented with third money. Pretty little Ivorine in the pace surprised everybody in stepping off the first heat in 2:19¼. George S. James in the 2:30 trot and Florence G. in the 2:24 pace, both favorites, were defeated. Attendance, 2,000. The meeting closes to-morrow.

The programme has been issued for the meeting of the Sault Ste. Marie Driving Park Association, July 28, 29, 30 and 31. Purses of $5,500 are offered. A new grand stand and stables for 100 horses are being erected, and everything placed in readiness for the greatest meeting ever held in the upper peninsula. On the success of this meeting will depend, in a large measure, the formation of an U. P. circuit.

CRICKET.

ASYLUM VS. LONDON.

The asylum cricket grounds were the scene of a good cricket match yesterday afternoon, the contestants being the Aylmer and Asylum clubs. In the first inning 159 runs were made by the Asylum eleven, who went first to bat. Of these Dr. Beemer scored 53, Mr. Gillean 25, J. H. Pope 15, Dr. Rose 13 and Mr. Thurling 12, not out. The Aylmer men unfortunately scored only 24 runs in their first inning, but in their second they made 54 in short order. Following is the score in full:

TORONTO TOPICS.

The Queen City Gets Good Milk—The Teachers' Convention.

TORONTO, July 11.—The health officer, in a report on the milk supply of the city, states that samples taken from dealers show the quantity to be good and all that could be desired.

The Orangemen will celebrate the 12th of July to-day with a big procession and games. The will be joined by large detachments from Hamilton, Montreal and other points.

The Nation Councils of Education in connection with the National Educational Association, opened its session here yesterday morning with Dr. Peabody, of Champagne, Ill., presiding. The subject of compulsory education was discussed by W. E. Sheldon, of Boston, and others, some interesting information being given regarding the foreign element of the United States, and the readiness with which the children acquire the English language. The conference will continue in session until Tuesday.

THE DISAPPEARANCE OF PARNELL.

[New York Times.]

There can be no question among Irishmen in Ireland or among Irishmen in America that the result of the election at Carlow is quite final and decisive, as respects the pretension of Parnell to lead the Irish party. Carlow was recognized as a Parnellite stronghold, insomuch that Parnell is said to have owned that if he were defeated there he would have no political future. If the contest on his part has not been as energetically conducted as the contest at Kilkenny, which was the first issue joined between the factions after Mr. Gladstone's excommunication of the Irish leader, that is no doubt because Parnell has perceived the hopelessness of making such a contest, or else because he has, in his own mind, renounced political aspirations in favor of such domestic happiness as may, in the singular circumstances, be awaiting him. At any rate, his defeat is crushing. The majority against his candidate is considerably more than his candidate's vote. This shows that the Church has not lost its political power in Ireland, for undoubtedly the strongest element arrayed against Parnell was the opposition of the priesthood, and this was arrayed against him strictly on moral grounds, and on grounds, therefore, entirely creditable and appropriate for the church to take. The fact that he has "made an honest woman," as the phrase is, of the woman whose co-respondent he was cannot go for anything with a church which does not recognize divorce, and in the view of which his relations with the woman he has married are now precisely what they were when the decree was obtained against her. It does go for something among men of the world, and very likely it would go for much among the English dissenters who seem to be in many things the only effective guardians of morality in Great Britain, and on whose account it doubtless was that Mr. Gladstone felt impelled to decline carrying on any further negotiations with Parnell as the leader of the Irish Parliamentary party. What has injured Parnell fatally with these people is, in the first place, the disposition he showed to retain the Irish leadership in the face of public opinion and before he had taken the step he has taken since toward repairing the wrong he had done; and, in the second place, the weak and hysterical character he showed after he joined issue with his critics and assailants. This character is quite different from, and seems quite incompatible with, the character he had before maintained of a self-controlled and moderate Irish leader, "one strong, still man in a blatant land," a character that had not only given him such a command of the Irish forces as no Irish agitator ever had before him, but had also won him a kind of respect among Englishmen, and given him a kind of weight in the House of Commons that no such agitator had ever had before. Doubtless these manifestations have had their influence in Ireland as well as the attitude the Church has taken and could not choose but take.

Everybody gets $1 worth of Drygoods for 60c at

POWELL'S
Great Bankrupt Sale

Remember, we have thousands and thousands of dollars' worth of Drygoods and Millinery which will be sold at half price, and hundreds and hundreds of dollars' worth of Seasonable Drygoods and Millinery which will be sold at quarter price. The cheapest goods in Canada have been sold all season at Powell's Old Stand. For the next six weeks prices will be lower than ever. No prices in London or out of London will equal the low prices at Powell's Old Stand, as everything in stock must be sold and turned into cash. The one thing aimed at is to get the cash out of the stock, consequently goods must be sold cheaper than anywhere else on the street. As we deal in bankrupt stocks we can reach a notch lower than anybody else. We want everybody to remember the following facts, viz.:

1st—You can get a 10c Flannelette or Shaker Flannel at Powell's Old Stand for 6¼c per yard.

2nd—You can get a Fast Colored Dress Muslin at Powell's Old Stand for 3½c per yard.

3rd—You can get all colors in Ribbons, 2½ inches wide, at Powell's Old Stand for 6c. See if you can get the same Ribbons under 12½c elsewhere.

4th—You can get thousands of yards of Dress Goods at Powell's Old Stand at just half price. Try as an experiment. See our 15c line of Dress Goods for 6¼c.

5th—See the Frints you can get at Powell's Old Stand for 6c, 8c and 10c; nothing like them in the city for the money.

6th—Let all the ladies remember that at Powell's Old Stand they buy Ladies' Undervests at just half price. We are now selling hundreds of Ladies' Undervests of the best Saxony make, which was a stock belonging to a wholesale house that failed in business, and we cleared them out at a price from the trustee of the estate at half the market value. Our prices are 10c, 15c, 20c and 25c each.

7th—Don't forget our Corset story. Remember, ladies, you simply save from 12c to 30c on every pair you buy from us. We have all the leading makes. Inquire what our prices are, then ask the price in the other stores. This we want you to do. By this means our low prices are found but.

8th—We want the householders of London to remember that the Blanket sale is still going on. About 45 pairs left, all of which will be sold at bankrupt prices.

9th—Don't forget that we are selling part of a wholesale bankrupt stock of Lace Curtains. We are giving the greatest bargains in Canada in Lace Curtains. Anyone wanting Lace Curtains should come and get some now.

10th—Just cleared out every pair of Ladies' Silk Cord Mitts a wholesale house had in stock. This was a big lot. We got them cheap, and are selling them for very little money.

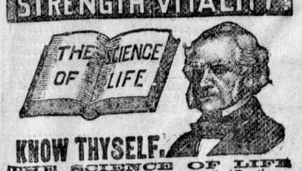

11th—Ladies should not forget the Hats, beautifully trimmed, that we are selling for $1 each. All new shapes and one-third the regular price of these Hats.

12th—Don't forget you get Black and Colored Silk Laces at half price, and Sear-sucker at 3c per yard only at Powell's Old Stand.

We must stop just here. We could go on and fill columns of this paper with low prices and talking about our cheap goods, but we must not weary our readers. We know it would be nonsense to ask the people of this Western country to read our advertisement. From what we hear we know a great many people read about our cheap goods, but as every person don't take this paper we ask our friends and readers of this paper to tell their neighbors and friends who don't take this paper about Powell's great bankrupt sale and cheap goods. Tell them what you know, viz: If they want cheap goods they must come to Powell's Old Stand. Be sure you are in Powell's. Look out for the red signs in front of the doors and windows. He Fell Among Thieves

The hotel servant moved away from him and approached the husband.

"I mistook the gentleman for you, sir," he explained. "Ily a une telle similarite."

The young Englishman smiled at this, and Mr. Ronald Morton smiled back again. The servant's business related to nothing more important than the transfer of the luggage in the morning, and when it was over Mr. Ronald Morton crossed easily over to the young stranger and addressed him.

"That fellow took you for me," he said, "and upon my word I don't wonder at it. When I turned at the sound of my name and saw your back I couldn't be sure for the moment that you weren't me. Perhaps a man hasn't a very intimate acquaintance with his back aspect, but you see the waiter confirmed me beforehand."

At this the young stranger gave him the smile his jest and his own smiling face demanded, and they fell quite naturally into talk together. They were both young men, and in the course of a quarter of an hour they found themselves exchanging a certain limited confidence with each other —Mr. Harry Wynne supposing himself to be in converse with Mr. Ronald Morton, a gentleman whose landed estates lay at Kekewich, Cheshire, and Mr. Ronald Morton knowing himself to be in conversation Mr. Harry Wynne, a young gentleman of patriotic impulses who had come out to offer his service to the Turk. Mr. Wynne had but faint acquaintance with the county of Cheshire, and oddly enough had not heard of Kekewich, but as Mr. Morton remarked, the place lay nine miles from any railway, and that explained it. They smoked a cigar in company before going to bed, and Mr. Wynne was sorry when he learned that the other companionable young Briton was going north in the morning.

They parted at midnight, and one of them at least lay long awake, listening to the wild howlings of the packs of dogs careering in the streets, and the metallic stroke of the backchi's rod upon the sounding stones.

At 6 o'clock Mr. Ronald Morton was astir. He crossed the Golden Horn in a caique under that miracle of sunrise which once in every 24 hours in springtime transforms the turbid waters to liquid gold, makes every tree a living emerald, and every mean hut along the shore of Galata a habitation for a poet. Mr. Ronald Morton regarded none of these things, but at every stroke of the sturdy brown legged caiquejee's bulbous-handled oars, thought "So much further from Vergueil and danger, so much nearer the interior and safety." In due time he reached the railway station, and there encountered face to face M. Vergueil himself, pacing the platform, alert and vigilant. Mr. Morton passed him without a sign, and approached the guichet to demand his ticket. M. Vergueil was at his elbow, he hoped and thought by hazard. He asked for his ticket in excellent Greek, with the true accent indeed of an Athenian dandy, and was supplied with it, put a question or two in the same easy aristocratic accents, was answered, and strolled away. He saw his luggage safely stowed, and took his place in a carriage he had selected. The whistle sounded and the train started. In a little while it rumbled past the Seven Towers, and then he breathed freely.

CHAPTER IX.

Harry Wynne had come out to Constantinople in the first, or glowing stage, of war fever. The boat which carried him touched at Naples, and had taken up two or three English officers who were going out in expectation of being attached to that brilliant gendarmerie which was already constructed on paper and never got constructed in fact. The diplomatic and administrative officers of the Sublime Porte would seemed to be filled with poets, who construct constantly the most charming and delightful schemes, and pigeon-hole them for the bewilderment or guidance of some far Utopia. The British officers had tried to chill the war fever in the young man's mind, but had in no wise succeeded. The subordinate officials who were concerned in the formation of that lamentable Polish Legion took the task in hand and quieted his pulses a little. He was full of enthusiasm about the Turk, and it was reserved for the Turk himself to damp him. The first word of the oriental tongue the youngman learned was Yavosh, which being freely interpreted signifies, "Take it easy," or "Go slow." You learn that significant expletive in your first five minutes of Turkish experience, and are never allowed to forget it.

A young man whose heart is wrung with unmerited shame, and whose soul is on fire to do great deeds for the rehabilitation of his character, finds the gospel of go slow and take it easy hard to bear. Harry tasted the heart sickness of hope deferred, and tasted it all the more bitterly because the beginning had such a splendid promise in it. He had not been two days in Constantinople before somebody took him to a ramshackle old house in a back street in Perai and somebody else swore him in as an officer in the Polish Legion. That hopeful body was so carefully constructed that when its directing spirits learned that the applicant was wholly ignorant of the art of war, and had never even been a volunteer, they declined to give him any higher commission than that of a lieutenant. They sent him to a tailor who knew the uniform, and in two or three days—at his own charges—he was attired in it. He walked around in military glory for half an hour, and at the end of that time, discovering himself to be an object of contumely, he took off his plumage and resumed his civilian fashion. He bought a horse and a saddle, a saber, and a revolver, and waited for his marching orders.

The denizens of the hotels in Constantinople about this time began to know the meaning of war prices. There was daily news from the front of a more and more stirring kind, and the natural longing to be in the midst of action was made none the less keen by the contemplation of a purse which shrank rapidly towards the actual diminishing point.

Master Harry had known duns in his school and college days, but they had known him, and had at least been respectful. He had never seen before him until now the prospect of wanting a dinner, but now that came nearer and nearer, and at last he saw it face to face. He sold his watch and his ring, and moved into cheaper lodgings. He had brought but one small portmanteau with him, and his linen began to grow dingy. He noticed with a touch of almost abject terror that his boots were wearing down at the heel. His horse had to go, and his saddle. He sold the saber and the revolver at a bargain. He came down to his last cigarette and his last coin.

In those same cheap lodgings to which he had betaken himself, which were not far from the lower end of the Shooting Star, there was living a Circassian officer, by name Ahmed Hamil, a jovial blackavised gentleman who had had two or three years' training in Woolwich Dockyard, as likely a place in which to finish a cavalry officer's education as even Turkish ingenuity could find. He spoke captial English, was a royal good fellow, and as poor as Harry himself. They became great friends, and told each other their hopes and despondencies.

"I am here," Hamil Bey would say, for he was never tired of expounding this one particular grievance, "to attempt to recover a fraction of two years' pay. I shall never get it, for not to pay is a Turkish art, my friend. I wish that you and I could acquire it. If we could we might dine."

Harry produced his last medjidieh and looked at it.

"That would pay for a dinner."

"My young friend," returned Hamil Bey, 'you had best keep that for bread. One does not dine on bread, but one can live on it,' I," said the brave gentleman, "have an invitation to dinner to-night, and I wish that I could take you with me. I could not—it would be unpardonable impertinence."

The good Hamil was going to dine with Duke Humphrey, but he was willing to spare his companion's wretched resources, and not to let him know it.

"What's going to come of it all?" the lad asked.

The Circassian shrugged his shoulders as if to say he declined to give the problem house-room. They rolled their last little scrap of tobacco and smoked it lingeringly, making the most of it. Then Hamil Bey went out to walk the streets hungry, under no pretense of keeping his dinner engagement.

(To be Continued.)

"Hunger Is the Best Sauce."

As a rule, a person who has a good appetite has good health. But how many there are who enjoy nothing they eat, and sit down to meals only as an unpleasant duty. Nature's antidotes for this condition are so happily combined in Hood's Sarsaparilla that it soon restores good digestion, creates an appetite and renovates, and vitalizes the blood so that beneficial effect of good food is imparted to the whole body. Truly hunger is the best sauce, and Hood's Sarsaparilla produces hunger.

Capilline is a nicely perfumed and perfectly limpid hair restorer, containing no powder in suspension like all other restorers, which makes their use so disagreeable.

"Queer, isn't it, that the poor almost always have such large families?" "Yes; I have noticed it. There seems to be a direct proportion between squaller and poverty, so to speak."

Nothing impure or injurious contaminates the popular antidote to pain, throat and lung remedy and general corrective, Dr Thomas' Eclectric Oil. It may be used without the slightest apprehension of and other than salutary consequences. Coughs, rheumatism, earache, bruises, cuts and sores succumb to its action.

So many people are like the firecracker; they can only make a big splurge and noise in the world at the expense of being hopelessly busted.

Singing "Buy me. Come buy me. Come buy me.'
And this is the chorus that fell from his tongge,
"Oh! Buy me. Come buy me. Come buy me at Beltz's.
For I am the latest, he cheerfully cried,
And there are my brothers and sisters inside,
All waiting, like me, to be taken and tried,
Oh! Buy me. Come buy me. Come buy me.'

—At the regular meeting of Court Albert, No. 100, I. O. F., held in Albert Hall, London West, Thursday evening, the following officers were elected: J. H. E. Jones, C. R.; A. Swayze, V. C. R.; I. Lewis, R. S.; W. H. Bartram, F. S.; R. A. Jones, Treas.; J. Twitchen, S. W.; J. L. Johnson, J. W.; Wm. Spence, S. B.; Wm. Gorman, J. B.; J. Pearen, P. C. R.; J. L. Holmes, chaplain. The election of High Court representatives was deferred till next meeting. Irenæus Lewis remains as court deputy.

—Miss Hadcock, of Ingersoll, is visiting Rev. Mr. Laird's family in this city.

—Joy Erwood, of Grand Rapids, Mich., is the guest of Joe Eakins, Piccadilly street.

—Mrs. W. Oxendale, of Hamilton, is visiting Mrs. W. R. Chittenden, Talbot street.

—A. O. Gibbs, of this city, was registered at the Waverly Hotel, Vancouver, B.C., on July 2.

—T. H. Wadland, of Hamilton, superintendent of the Bell Telephone Company, was in the city Thursday.

—A trio of local liverymen were assessed $1 each yesterday for driving their horses a little too speedily.

—Ray Whately, pitcher of the Victor Baseball Club, has just recovered from a severe attack of inflammation.

—The sidewalk on the south side of King, between Burwell and Maitland streets, is being moved out and relaid.

—Charles H. Gregory, the defendant in the recent indecent assault case, was given his liberty Thursday on suspended sentence.

—The police complain of the furious driving and horse racing on the Victoria Park course continually being carried on, greatly to the danger of pedestrians.

—Rev. A. B. Lorimer, Baptist missionary-elect to India, left with his wife yesterday for Woodstock. He has made many friends during his short stay in the city.

—Messrs. Wood, Bayley and Brown, of the London Lawn Tennis Club, have returned from the tournament at Detroit. They did credit to themselves and the city.

—At a meeting of the Presbyterian congregations of Aylmer and Springfield on Tuesday a unanimous call was given to Dr. G. J. A. Thompson, of this city. It is understood that the doctor will accept the call.

—John Coursey was charged at the Police Court yesterday with allowing a wagon said to be in his possession to stand on the market square and also with allowing two horses to be at large on the street. He was dismissed on the first charge, but was fined $1 on the latter.

Rev. I. B. McCuish, M.A., Ph.D., a graduate of Princeton, who has just taken his degree in philosophy in the University of New York, of which Dr. John Hall is chancellor, is advertised to preach in the First Presbyterian Church on Sunday. He is highly spoken of.

—The members of No. 2 Committee of the School Board shut themselves up in a room Thursday and heroically pored over dry accounts until the usual late hour at which School Board meetings always adjourn. As the result of the inspection tour a large number of minor repairs will be recommended.

—The tax collectors of the city have advertised that all 1890 taxes must be paid by the 13th, otherwise they will be collected by warrants after that date. This, they say, will be strictly carried out, as the rolls must be returned by the 15th. Both Messrs. Clare and Lester will be busy the next day or so.

—Court Hope, No. 1, I. O. F., has elected the following officers fof the ensuing term: C. R., Bro. R. Crosby; V. C. R., Bro. J. Caloun; Rec. Sec., Bro. F. Anstie; Fin. Sec., Bro. John Earl; Chap., Bro. L. B. Pearson; Sen. Woodward, Bro. D. Aylesworth; Jun. Woodward, Bro. Joseph Allaster; Sen. Beadle, Bro. H. Montague; Jun. Beadle, Bro. T. Yerex; finance committee, Bros. Tackaberry and Mathewson; court deputy, Bro. Maguire (recommended); delegate to high court, Bro. R. Crosby.

—Mr. and Mrs. George Parsons, of 769 Simcoe street, were pleasantly surprised on Wednesday evening last, when a number of friends, chiefly of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Hamilton Road Methodist Church, called to say good-bye. Mr. Parsons is removing to Petrolea, and is about to go into business there. During the evening Mrs. Parsons was presented with a fine Bible and an elegant bouquet of flowers by the ladies as a "token of their high regard for her as a zealous and successful worker in their society." Both will be followed with the best wishes of their many friends in London East.

—A well-attended and very pleasant union meeting of the local Baptist Women's Mission Circles was held Wednesday evening in the Grosvenor (north mission) Church, Mr. Bullen, the pastor, presiding. The address of the occasion was made by Rev. John McLaurin, returned missionary, who told "How the Hindoos Live." Timely remark were also made by Rev. Mr. Walker, pastor of the South London Baptist Church, and Rev. C. C. McLaurin, of Sarnia. Good singing and a tasteful display of foliage plants and flowers added to the pleasing features of the enjoyable and profitable gathering.

—The regular meeting of St. George's Society Thursday took an unusual course for that charitable society. A heated debate, occupying the evening till a late hour, as to ratifying the action of the president and a special committee in changing the investment of certain funds of the society, which was objected to by the treasurer as an infringment of his official position, was the cause. After the motion was carried to adopt the action of the committee and hand over the securities to the treasurer it became necessary to adjourn in order to prevent further discussion. A special meeting will therefore have to be held next week for the transaction of neglected business.

Satisfactory in All Respects.
Dr. Eccles' beautiful grounds, corner of Wellington street and Queen's avenue, were thrown open Thursday night for a lawn social, under the auspices of the Young People's Helping Society of Queen's Avenue Methodist Church. With the soft radiance and pretty effects of many Chinese lanterns the place was rendered charming, and so thought the happy throng. Refreshment stands, under the capable management of the ladies, received a patronage such as the excellence of the delicacies deserved. Misses Boomer, Chapman, Jolliffe, Wilkinson, Fleming, Jones, Fowler, Miller, Sanderson and Mesdames Boyd and Boomer were among those in active charge. The proceeds will be devoted toward a new library for the Sunday school and church. The Seventh Band rendered music very acceptably throughout the evening.

The numerous cloud bursts reported indicate that clouds are not made of as good material as they were in other days.
Minard's Liniment is used by Physicians.

"By their fruits shall ye know them." This is an indisputable truism; its applicability has a wide range. The 10 cent Norma cigar is the product of the H. McKay & Co.'s cigar factory, and they speak volumes for that establishment in its particular line of business. In these delicious cigars nothing but the finest of material is used, and to a connoisseur are indispensable.

WHY NOT?
You have corns, warts, bunions, moles or cancers. Why are they not cured? You ask a reasonable question. It demands a candid answer. You have it here: You bought a corn cure. You thought you had Barkwell's, but it was not the genuine; you got a counterfeit. It was no more use than water. We missed the sale of what you wanted. So far, it is your money gone; our money goes too. You get another and think it is the genuine. You have made a mistake, and we are in disgrace. More of your money's gone; more of our money is gone. Your corns are no better; our reputation no better. You make up your mind they cannot be cured. We have lost a customer. You have got hold of the wrong end of the fact. You have got hold of the wrong bottle. Both our moneys are gone. Not only our moneys are gone, but our opinions of one another are wrong. We don't know you by sight or name. You don't know us. We think "how dull you are to get an imitation when you might as well get Barkwell's Sure Corn Cure." And you think "what fools the manufacturers of that corn cure are to cheat so. Let's get acquainted with one another. Let's get acquainted with Barkwell's Sure Corn Cure. The manufacturer is not the unhandsome name you call him by. And you can't help it. Come on. Nobody deals more handsomely. Nobody ever loses a cent by getting Barkwell's Sure Corn Cure, but they always lose a corn. We never have any trouble except from these infernal counterfeiters. Neither do you with Barkwell's Sure Corn Cure. ywt
