THE GREATER NEW YORK. Some Statistics Showing How Big a City

Much has been written concerning "Greater New York," but few have any conception how great a city it will be. Only London will exceed it in popuation, wealth and business. Its area will be 306 square miles, or 195,840 acres. It will have an estimated population of 3,430,000. Its bonded debt will be $216,471,593. Its annual tax budget will exceed $55,000,000. The assessed value of its real estate (New York, Brooklyn and Staten Island) will amount to $2,307,031,000. Its parks and park lands will comprise 7336 acres, not ounting several noted roadways, such as the Harlem Speedway and the Coney Island Boulevard, which are under park control. It will contain sixty-four monuments and statues, including Grant's tomb, to be dedicated next April. It will have forty-eight cemeteries, comprising 3600 acres and containing a silent population of 4,000,000. Its public schools will contain 326,000 pupils and 7282 teachers. Its police force will aggregate 6509, and its firemen 2125. New York and Brooklyn alone have 2138 miles of streets and 991 miles of sewers. The capacity of the water works will be 503,700,000 gal-

> Within the mammoth city there will be 1093 churches, with 720,771 parishioners, and 300,000 Sunday school scholars. The seating capacity of the churches is 469,159. The aggregate value of church property is $63,718,000. There will be sixty-three libraries, containing 1,924,000 volumes, thirty art galleries, fifty-four theatres, with a seating capacity of 88,000, eleven halls for music and oratory, with a seating capacity of 38,000, eighty-one clubs of established social standing, having 48,000 members, two big universities and ninety-three other educational institu-

There will be 112 hotels within the city, not to mention several thousand Rains law "hotels." The city will have seven bridges across the Harlem and one across the East river. Another East river bridge has been started, and one across the North river is projected. There are thirty-three different ferries. The forty-five lines of street railways carry 792,000,000 passengers every year over 464 miles of track. There will be upwards of sixty exchanges and other commercial or-ganizations. There are 218 banks and banking institutions in New York and Brooklyn alone, and the clearings of the Clearing House aggregate $28,000,000,000 a year. The big city will transact considerably more than one-half the foreign commerce of the country. -Philadelphia Public Ledger.

There are many remedies on the market for the cure of consumption, but consumption, once it reaches a certain stage, cannot be cured. In professing, therefore, to do what is impossible, these remedies prove themselves to be simply humbugs.

Consumption is a disease which destroys the tissue of the lungs. Once gone, no medicine can replace that tissue. Good medicine may arrest the disease even after one lung is wholly gone, as long as the other remains sound. Once both are attacked, however, the victim is doomed. Just why people should risk their lives to this dread disease and go to great expense afterwards to check it, it is hard to conceive. It is much easier prevented than cured. Throat troubles and severe colds are its usual forerunners. A 25-cent bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine will drive these away. It is, without doubt, the best medicine for the purpose to be had anywhere.

The proposal by the Countess of Aberdeen for commemorating the diataking practical form. At a largely attended conference in Ottawa on Thursday the honorary secretary briefly outlined the needs particularly of Manitoba and the Northwest Territories, and said that an order of Victorian nurses could give the physicians there valuable aid, and would give needed help where doctors could not be obtained. The existing training hospitals could be used, and cottage homes for the residences of the nurses in the country could also be used as emergency hospitals. By co-operating with existing hospitals at five or six centers, and by the founding of six or eight cottage homes for nurses, subordinate and tributary to the hospitals of each of these training centers, the whole of Manitoba and the Northwest Territories could be covered. The nurses would then be able to reach their patients without loss of time or much expense. Each of these cottage homes would cost about $1,000. These homes might be named after those who gave $1,000 each. The wealthy donors who would give larger sums might have their names commemorated in the training hospitals.

A BETTING EXPERIMENT.

Every Man Who Lays a Wager on

Horse Should Read This. The thought of getting money without work is so generally attractive, and betting on a horse-race seems such | 459 days, yielding 6669 pounds of milk; an easy way of accomplishing it, that thousands of readers study the morning papers for "tips" on races-in other words, for advice as to the best horse on which to bet.

The New York morning dailies devote more attention to this feature and spend more money in the effort to get other American city, for there are more race-tracks near New York, and presumably, more of those people who recklessly part with their money. These papers employ reporters who spend nearly all their race-tracks or in the company of grooms, jockeys, trainers and horse wrers. These reporters know the pedigree of every horse "on the turf." They keep, from year to year, books of careful memoranda, in which is recorded the performance of each animal; and from this wide experience pile their "tips," or advice to bettors It may be supposed then that these url reporters are able to show their readers with much certainty how to 'pick a winner." But, oddly enough the turf reporters do not agree! The horses named as "probable winners" by the eight New York morning papers of any given date are never the same The New York Evening Sun, at the opening of the racing season last spring, began a systematic study of "tips," with a view of finding out how much they were to be relied upon. The plan adopted was this: A series of tables were made, one for each of the eight morning papers which printed "tips." In each table were set down every day the names of the horses selected by the corresponding paper as "probable winners" in that day's races. Every evening, when the races were finished, an entry was made on each table of the gain or loss a reader would have sustained if he had bet fifteen doffars on each horse advocated by the paper which that table represented. These tables were accurately kept for three months. When the racing seasor ended and the sheets were balanced, an interesting discovery came It is not nece any to name here

A Lover's GERALDINE: Romance.

The picture was that of a smooth, smiling, elaborately dressed child, an aunt of theirs, painted when she was 4, by Sir Thomas Lawrence. The likeness was undeniable; the silky fur hair, almost flaxen, the large velvety brown eyes, a quaint, good humor in the expression—all were attributes of the portrait strikingly reproduced in the living child before them. Miss Elizabeth looked startled and uneasy, and glanced up into her brother's face to see if he shared the suspicion which had flashed through her own mind. The aunt whose picture Sir Charles held had married badly and died, leaving a son who had for years been a disgrace to the family. A scamp of the worst kind, dishonest as well as dissolute, he had been shipped off again and again to this place and that by his relatives, and returned each time, smiling, affectionate and unwelcome, to beg, borrow and steal in every ingenious way that a well-born vagabond can. Nobody had heard of him for some years now, and his family were beginning to hope that they never would again.
