ILLNESS CALLS OUT FIREMEN

Eight Trucks, 26 Men Answer
Heart Attack Summons—Pulmotor Missing.

GROCER STRICKEN

Firemen Render First Aid For Five Hours To Save Man's Life.

Eight fire trucks, manned by 26 firemen, constituting almost all of the night shift of the London fire department, responded to an alarm sent in from 404 Pall Mall street early this morning, where W. H. Reeves, a grocer, had been stricken with a heart attack and was in need of the pulmotor.

The trucks turned out as a "fire run" confusion of the nature of the call having been made over the telephone. A second trip was necessary to bring the pulmotor to Reeves' house. Three firemen worked over the man four or five hours, and with the aid of the pulmotor and artificial respiration saved his life.

Dr. Robert G. Henry reported this morning that Reeves' condition is greatly improved. Timely use of the pulmotor, he said, saved the man's life.

Mr. Little, a short time ago, sold a Shropshire ram to the U. S. government owned by the Prince of Wales.

The owner of the Belvoir it will be remembered, swept the boards at the big Chicago winter fair last December with his Shropshire.

City's Famous White Robin Is No Myth and Here's Proof

HERE'S MR. ROBIN-WHITEBREAST.
This picture of the white robin was secured by a telescopic lens and has been enlarged one hundred times for reproduction here. The original photograph shows the bird merely as a tiny pin-point.

The Advertiser's "Robin White Breast" Is Captured by Camera in Long Distance Shooting—Picture Enlarged About One Hundred Times.

For two years The Advertiser has been telling its readers about a white-breasted robin in the north end of the city. Mr. Robin, however, has remained a mythical bird because proof of his existence was difficult to supply.

But now the camera has captured him and the veracity of North London residents is established.

This picture was obtained yesterday by Iolo Williams, son of Bishop David Williams, at a distance of 35 feet with the aid of a long-focus lens attached to a delicately-timed camera. One of whitebreast's sons, just hatched from its mother's eggs, was caught and held beside the camera. It screamed and attracted whitebreast's attention. He came close to the camera in search for his young. Then there was a click, and above you see the result.

QUICK ACTION SAVES VESSEL FROM ICEBERG HIDDEN BY FOG

Huge Ice Cake Only 100 Feet
From Steamer Aurania
When Sighted.

CAPTAIN HONORED

Associated Press Despatch.
London, May 13.—Passengers on the steamship Aurania, on arriving in Liverpool today from Montreal, reported having seen a huge iceberg off Cape Race on May 8. The iceberg loomed up suddenly out of a dense fog. It was only 100 or 150 feet from the ship.

The Aurania's engines were quickly reversed when the iceberg was sighted.

Mr. Justice Weir, Montreal, was a passenger on the ship. In an interview he said the decks of the vessel were quickly crowded by excited passengers when it became known that an iceberg was in sight, but there was no panic.

"We had been growing at the captain for going dead slow all day," Justice Weir said, "but we sang another tune after we saw the iceberg."

Captain Peel, commander of the ship, was presented with an address, signed by all the passengers, expressing admiration for his caution and discretion and for the able manner in which he had manoeuvred the vessel.

The Aurania lost two days on the voyage, owing to fog, and on May 8 she covered only 75½ miles.

BIBLE IS NOT USED ENOUGH

Anglican Synod Strongly Approves More Religion in Gaining Education.

DEBATE INSURANCE

Objections Taken When International Concern Mentioned As Underwriter.

An increasingly active program in connection with religious education in the public schools received the unanimous endorsement of the diocese of Huron this morning.

Action taken by the synod is double-barreled in that it supports greater use of the Bible in the schools and at the same time calls upon the Anglican clergy to avail themselves of the opportunity afforded by department of education regulations permitting religious instruction of pupils for one-half hour period each day in centers where the step is approved by the local educational authorities.

In accordance with the recommendation made by Rt. Rev. David Williams, D. D., D. C. L., bishop of Huron, in his charge, the synod will request the joint committee, under his grace the Archbishop of Algoma and Metropolitan of Ontario, to proceed immediately with the compilation of a syllabus of Bible readings, accompanied by lists of verses for memorization, for use in the public schools, the latter in response to the request of Premier Ferguson to the committee for the submission of such a syllabus.

Nothing an improvement in the number of baptisms, marriages and burials, which of late have been held in the church, rather than in the homes of the members, together with the bishop's charge, in which the matter was prominently mentioned, recommended that wherever possible, the future of the department of the synod, would strengthen the hands of the clergy in the country, particularly as to funerals, and also in the city, particularly as to marriage ceremonies.

Fire Insurance Debated.
Considerable discussion preceded the adoption of the committee's recommendation on Page 6, Column 2.

FRESH OIL AND STONES CAUSES DRIVER TO KICK

London Motorist Complains
After Trip From Woodstock To Princeton.

A London motorist, writing to Secretary Ed. Bernard of the London Motor club, states that he was forced to drive through fresh oil and broken stones from Woodstock to Princeton on Saturday night, and suggests that the motor club take up the matter with the provincial department of highways and request that but half the road be oiled at one time.

"The department of highways must put the oil on the roads in the most economical way," commented Mr. Bernard, "and I hardly think that they would make any change in their plans of oiling the roads. I would advise the use of detours in such cases, as it would only mean their use for a few days at the most."

Phones Ring, Doors Slam As Tax Complaints Greet Receiving of 1925 Notices

City Offices Stagger Under Load of Queries and Quibbles
Yesterday Afternoon.

BALL GAME CALLS

"I've Been Assessed For Two Houses," Irate Man Claims —Figures Deny It.

Before closing hour came at the city hall last night officials were sadly aware of the accuracy of the postoffice in delivery of the 34,000 tax notices mailed yesterday.

Officials never stopped to count telephone inquiries and inquiries "in person." They just staggered through the day and tried to explain the necessities of a 34½ tax rate and local improvement costs.

Into every office came queries, quibbles and questionings. Men, women and children came to have their accounts looked up. Why, they asked, the city engineer, did they have to pay for street oiling before the oil was laid on the streets? Why, they asked the city assessor, was the income tax so high? Why, they asked the tax office, must they pay taxes on houses which they have now sold? The clerk's office and the treasurer's department were not immune.

"We have answered easily 150 inquiries since yesterday morning," was the report at the assessor's office today. The city engineer's department was the storm center for complaints on local improvement costs. The city clerk's office looked like the morning after a party.

"I have been assessed for two houses and I own only one. What's the matter?" complained one irate citizen. A clerk picked up the tax notice the man displayed. It was quite evident that only one house had been assessed. Yet 15 minutes of argument could not impress upon the taxpayer that he was paying taxes on but a single house.

"My assessment has been shot up $500," one woman told the assessment department. Books were sought and no change in the assessment was proven. "I'll see the mayor about this," threatened the ratepayer and departed in haste.

To the Ball Game.
It is reported that one official gave up in disgust and subsequently was seen at the London-Flint baseball game.

Failure to take up assessments with the court of revision last year is blamed for much of the complaining. There can be no appealing on a tax notice usually, as citizens have had ample chance to appeal when assessments were being considered.

Few errors have been made by the tax department this year. According to early reports, tax notices have been made out with remarkable accuracy. Complaints are caused by misunderstanding and have come en masse this year as a result of simultaneous delivery of tax notices.

REV. H. B. ROBINSON ACCEPTS CITY CALL

Toronto, May 13.—In police court today Controller Donald C. McGregor pleaded guilty to the charge of assault made against him by Alderman Sam McBride and was fined $50 and costs.

Details of the fight between the alderman and controller, which happened in the city hall Monday afternoon, were not gone into by the court, though Alderman McBride "wanted it broadcast that this man came at me from behind."

The altercation arose over the employment of aliens in one of the city departments.

JAIL AT TORONTO FOUND UNFIT BY GRAND JURY

Conditions in the city jail in Riverdale park "are as good as they can be, considering the unsanitary building," the report says.

CONSIDER BUS PLAN TONIGHT

Protests of South Against L.S.R.
Service May Bring Council Action.

MOVE GROWS

Committee To Meet This Evening—Near's Report Is Awaited.

Bus service for South London residents will be considered by No. 2 committee of the city council this afternoon, according to early indications. Increasing sentiment against present street railway service on the south Ridout line is felt by ward one aldermen and possibilities of securing an auxiliary bus service are given credence.

Since the postponement of the railway board inquiry into the street railway case, the limelight of street railway affairs has turned to improved service for South London and elsewhere. City Engineer W. P. Near will report to the committee this afternoon on service now being given in the southern district.

Report Awaited.
Aldermen await Mr. Near's report before making recommendations of a definite nature, but most of the council has become greatly dissatisfied with the service since the closing of Ridout bridge. Citizens have complained to Ald. Kilbourne and Ald. McCormick of No. 2 committee and asked for action to improve service. The most likely manner to give quicker service downtown is to initiate a bus service across the Ridout street bridge, if the traction bridge there is not to be reconstructed immediately.

Citizens are very much annoyed over service. Ald. H. Douglas of No. 1 committee declares, "They are going to attempt mass action to force lower fares and later service, in this way the company may be brought to time."

Criticism Delay.
Postponement of the railway board inquiry is criticized by Ald. Homer Neeley, who believes that it is quite impossible to hold up the hearing until Sir Adam Beck is able to leave Baltimore.

"The sooner London finds out that it can get along without Sir Adam Beck, the better it will be for the city," is Ald. Neeley's surprising attack on the hydro genius. "It's silly to think of holding up the inquiry until he is able to be in London. And there's little chance of him being here this month. The whole street railway case remains unsettled just because of consideration for Sir Adam Beck."

Inability of the street railway company to deal with the policy is regarded by Ald. Neeley as a sign to the city to get busy on the whole matter of fares and service and agreements for the future.

IMPROVEMENT IS URGED AT DANGEROUS CORNER

Secretary of Motor League Will Call Engineer's Attention To Hazard.

Secretary Ed. Bernard of the London Motor club will draw the attention of City Engineer Near to the motor hazard at Wortley road and Tecumseh avenue. There is a slight jog in Tecumseh avenue in crossing Wortley road, and it has been the scene of many accidents in the past few years.

Mr. Bernard states that there was an accident at the corner yesterday, and he will recommend to the city engineer that the sharp right angle curves on the northwest and southeast be cut away some distance and be curved.

"The exact distance will, of course be decided by the city engineer," said Mr. Bernard. "It is a dangerous corner, and I feel sure that the club will have the co-operation of the city engineer in lessening danger at this corner."

SECRETARY OF POWER CO. DIES DURING FISHING TRIP

Canadian Press Despatch.
Hamilton, May 13.—W. C. Hawkins, secretary of the Dominion Power and Transmission Company, died suddenly yesterday morning at Blanche, Que., while on a fishing trip with Senator Lynch-Staunton and a party.

He left here a few days ago, and while not in his usual health, his condition was not considered serious. He collapsed yesterday morning, and was carried into the club house, where he passed away in a few minutes.

EVERGREEN AVE. SEWER TO BE BUILT THIS YEAR

Duplicate Siphon System Made Possible by Maintenance Fund.

BYLAW NECESSARY

Street Railway and City To Share Cost of Bridge Repairs.

Construction of an $80,000 duplicate siphon sewer system at Evergreen avenue will be started this year, according to arrangements which have been made possible by city and provincial authorities.

The cost of the siphon will be defrayed by a sewer maintenance fund, which has been made available. At last night's session of No. 2 committee the city council was asked to pass a bylaw sanctioning the use of this money and asking for a provisional arrangement with provincial authorities.

Following a trip to Toronto by Ald. Frank McKay and City Engineer Near, the city solicitor has been consulted regarding technical obstacles in a city of London bill of 1876. Mr. Near believes that these technicalities can be overruled at the next session of the legislature.

Funds on Hand.

The council will be asked to pass a bylaw authorizing the use of available funds, and in this way there will be no need to issue debentures. The contract of the Dominion Lockjoint Pipe Company for the supply of concrete pipe for the siphon system was ratified last night.

Police Chief Birrell, Mayor Wengle and Ald. Harry Bottrell, chairman of No. 2 committee, were given authority to make a survey of conditions in the downtown parking area. Half-hour parking, or elimination of parking altogether, will be considered. Ald. Alfred Evans, Clarence street cafe proprietor, last night asked the committee to prohibit unlimited parking on Clarence street, between Dundas and King, because business houses are losing trade.

"You shouldn't have parking on any of these business streets," declared Ald. Homer Neely.

Army To Enforce.
"Well, it would take an army to enforce the half-hour parking limit properly," commented the mayor. Abolition of parking, or a limit to half hour parking, was suggested for Dundas, Queen's, King, Talbot, Richmond and Clarence streets, within the congested area.

A report on the Trumper garage case showed that H. J. Trumper had just built a frame structure in the middle of Grey street, though no building permit was granted. Engineer Near stated that the matter had been taken up with the solicitor. The committee was satisfied that this was the proper measure, and the case will be left in the hands of City Solicitor Meredith.

Bridge Repairs.
Cost of general repairs to York street bridge will be borne jointly by the city and the street railway company, according to an agreement made last night. Repairs and painting which affect both the city and street railway parts of the structure, will be paid for on a 50-50 basis. Any repairs that apply only to the city's bridge or the street railway's bridge will be paid for separately.

Authorization was given for the construction of another gas station on the Pipe line road, and for a refreshment booth on Wellington road at the city limits. Permission to build a garage on St. James street, to house commercial motor trucks, was refused.

Back To Farm For 6 Months

Guelph, May 12.—William Swanson of Guelph, recently released from the Ontario reformatory, went the wrong way about celebrating his departure from the "farm," and he was picked up by License Inspector Grant in an intoxicated condition. Magistrate Watt imposed a fine of $2,000, in addition to a term of six months, with an extra three months in default of payment.

DR. E. MACMILLAN HEARD IN RECITAL

Knox Church Choir Directed by Chas. Percy Givens Splendid Concert.

One of the finest choir concerts of the season was presented last night at Knox Presbyterian church, when Dr. Ernest MacMillan, organist of the Metropolitan church, Toronto, gave an exceptionally brilliant organ recital, assisted by the choir of Knox church and Mrs. William Cherry.

Dr. MacMillan is one of the outstanding musicians of Toronto, and a very clever organist. His technique is especially fine, and the feeling he expresses through his work left a deep impression on his large audience last evening. His program opened with the Grand Choeur in D by Sullivan, after which came Handel's "Minuet," Daquin's "The Cuckoo" and an aria by Purcell. His second group of numbers included Bach's "Prelude and Fugue in D Major," Pärt's prelude on "Abide With Me," "Spring Song," Hollins; and "Allegretto in B Flat," by Wotzenholme. In closing his part of the program, Dr. MacMillan played Beethoven's "Andante Con Moto (Symphony No. 1)," and "Finale in B Flat," by Cesar Franck.

The magnificence with which the numbers were played carried one far into the depths of the music and at the conclusion of each number there was a best of sound sign of appreciation—applause.

Mrs. Cherry, a newcomer to the city, but one who is charming those who hear her, lovely in voice, contributed two numbers to the evening's program. "With Verdure" and from the "creation," by Haydn, was her first number, after which she sang "Hear Ye, Israel," from the "Elijah," by Mendelssohn.

Mrs. Cherry delighted her hearers with the sweet quality of her voice, which is rich and clear. The choir, though last on the program, by no means was least. With Charles E. Percy at the organ, they sang excellently, "Beautiful Savior," by Christensen, "As the Heart Panted," Mendelssohn, and "The Heavens are Telling," by Haydn. Each number was sung in a gratifying manner and the choir's evening works were splendidly rendered.

AID SOCIETY REPORTS EASIER WORK IN APRIL

Inspector W. E. Kelly and President Barbour Will Go To Toronto.

Reporting the month of April of the Children's Aid society at the regular meeting held in the public utilities board room yesterday afternoon at 3:15, W. E. Kelly, superintendent, showed that the work had been lighter than in March. Two hundred and forty-six children were involved as compared with 259 the previous month. A. E. Barbour, president, occupied the chair. Eighteen members were present.

It was decided that the president and the superintendent go to Toronto to attend the annual session of the Children's Aid societies of Ontario, which opens there today.

It was shown that fifty children received care in the shelter during April against 40 in March. Complaints received were 61. The number of investigations carried out were 46. Children brought to the shelter numbered seven. Five children were returned to their parents. Fifty foster homes were heard from. The shelter record showed that 36 children were in the institution at the beginning of the month. Fourteen had been admitted afterward. At the end of the month 34 still remained in the building.

Seven of the outstanding cases of the month were reviewed. The president and superintendent outlined the action that had been taken to alleviate distress and take care of children who were suffering.

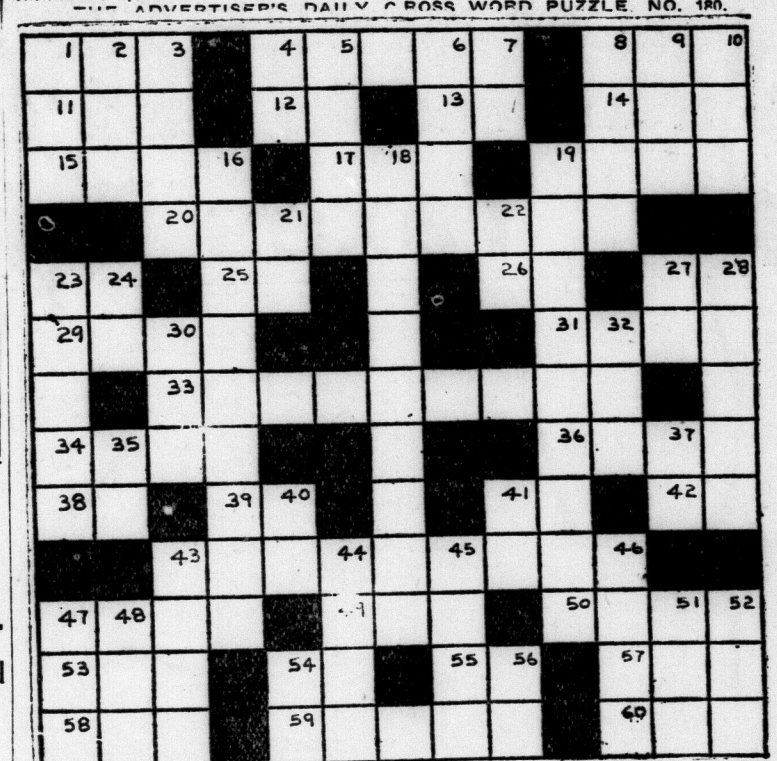

One member announced that at the next meeting a motion would be made to rescind a clause in the constitution, limiting the services of officers, excepting honorary solicitors, to three years.

ENGLISH LACK MONEY FOR BOUTS, SAYS JACK

Associated Press Despatch.
Southampton, England, May 12.—Jack Dempsey, world's champion heavyweight, accompanied by his bride and his friend Jimmy Husey, arrived here today from New York. He said he did not know how long he would stay on this side of the Atlantic, or what he was going to do exactly. "I'm excited around here," Dempsey is disinclined to take very seriously several propositions for fights which have been handed him. "It doesn't look to me as if there was enough money in it over here," he remarked.

PROFIT IS SEEN IN TEN-CENT BEER

All Local Hotels But One Are Preparing Rooms For New Beverage.

Although the majority of London hotelkeepers are not in favor of the restrictions that surround the sale of 4.4 beer, they have decided to make the best of the conditions that have been imposed by Attorney-General Nickle.

"While we don't like this table and chair business and would prefer the bar, we will have to abide by conditions," declared one hotelman. "Practically every one of us will handle 4.4 beer, and any that are holding out waiting to see how the public will like the new beer will fall in line once the market opens."

One Undecided.
"I handle about as much 2½ per cent beer as any hotelkeeper in the city and I feel sure we can make money at 10 cents a glass. Even if our own Canadians don't take to the beverage, there will be lots of tourists who will help the trade in the summer months."

Of all the hotel proprietors interviewed by The Advertiser, W. J. Lashbrook of the Belvedere was the only one who stated that he is not preparing to fix up a room where 4.4 could be sold.

"We haven't decided yet. We don't know just what we are going to do," said Mr. Lashbrook.

"We have been told that you aren't going to handle it at all," said the reporter.

"We haven't said that we would or that we wouldn't," replied Mr. Lashbrook.

Extensive Alterations.
Jerry McDonald, proprietor of the Iroquois, is making extensive alterations to comply with the government demands. The old bar is being removed to make way for small tables, the place of honor in the center of the old bar-room being occupied by the "beer fountain" which will spray the 4.4 into the mugs. There will be a glass partition in front of the beer taps.

The sound of the saw and hammer can be heard in the Griggs house, where alterations are under way, and the same sound can be heard in the Bell View hotel. The old bar is being vacated the old Tecumseh hotel bar-room and a day or two is all that will be necessary in transforming the offices into a 4.4 dispensary.

Synod of Huron Takes Up Laymen Movement To Aid Work of Anglican Church

Clergy and Laymen Pledge United Support For National Program.

REPORTS CONSIDERED

Ways and Means of Launching Campaign Considered Today.

The Anglican National Laymen's movement was given a decided impetus at the conference held in Bishop Cronyn hall last night of both lay and clerical delegates attending the 68th annual session of the Huron Synod.

G. B. Nicholson, Chapeau, Ontario, chairman of the national laymen's committee, was present, and in a most inspiring address outlined the aims of the movement to impress upon the laity their responsibility in the solution of the problems which confront the Anglican Church in Canada.

By a standing vote the synod adopted unanimously a resolution pledging the united support of the laymen and clergy of the Diocese of Huron to the national committee in whatever program it should undertake. The enthusiastic tenor of the speeches of those who spoke to the resolution indicated that all present had been deeply stirred by Mr. Nicholson's presentation of the question, and that the whole matter will be brought to the attention of the several individual parishes at an early date.

Consider Reports.

The afternoon session of synod yesterday was taken up with consideration of committee reports, those of the executive committee, Sunday school committee, and summer school committee being adopted with commendably few changes in each instance.

Ven. Archdeacon W. J. Doherty, London, presented the executive committee's report, the chief item of which was the clause recommending no action on the proposal made to reduce the age for superannuation of ministers from 65 to 60 years. This is a view of the fact that the church throughout the Dominion has a general scheme under advisement.

In the unavoidable absence of Rev. A. L. G. Clarke, London, who is chairman of the Sunday school committee, Rev. A. A. Trumper, Exeter, presented the report of that committee. After some discussion as to the advisability of inaugurating a plan of "Sunday school by post," within the diocese, the subject was referred to the deaneries for further consideration.

McKegney, L.H., M.C., Windsor, raised the point as to the use of United States Sunday school papers, condemning the practice as the ground for a "union by post," which is frequently contain material "that is neither church nor British."

The attention of the synod was favorably drawn to the use of the "Young Soldier and Crusader," now being issued in its enlarged form, with the understanding papers be discontinued as far as possible.

The Summer School.
Rev. C. E. Jenkins, M.A., B.D., St. Jude's church, Brantford, in presenting the report of the summer school held last year at Alma college, St. Thomas, pleaded for an increased attendance at the school, which is to be held at the same place again this year.

Mr. Jenkins outlined the feature of which is a series of addresses by Rev. Prof. Mercer, D.D., Trinity college, Toronto, who is recognized as an authority on the Old Testament.

In introducing Mr. Nicholson, Rt. Rev. David Williams, D.D., bishop of Huron, who presided, spoke of him as "one of the most distinguished laymen of the Anglican church in Canada."

Mr. Nicholson, at the very outset of his address on "The Responsibility of the Laymen to the Church," pointed out that the movement is taking in pursuance of a resolution of the general synod, which met last September in this city and expressed his confidence that if the problems of the church could be impressed upon the laity that those problems would be solved.

Classified Problems.
Mr. Nicholson classified the problems of the church under two heads, first, those pertaining to the parochial and diocesan activities of the church, and second, those pertaining to the educational, missionary and pastoral activities of the church.

"In the minds of some people the mission of the church is to be left to the clergy," Mr. Nicholson said, "but the church is something that should be gotten rid of as soon as possible. The mission of the church is to be left to the clergy, and without it the Anglican church would simply die out."

Turning to criticism which has been advanced against the conduct of missions amongst the Indians and Eskimos, that "they ought to be left in their primitive state because they are only dishonest, immoral and indolent anyway," Mr. Nicholson answered these criticisms in no uncertain terms.

"We spend millions upon immigration to bring out settlers to Canada from the southern countries of Europe," he said, "but those people will never make as good citizens as the native Indians of this country. Within the space of one generation

"ABIE" KOTZER, aged 17, Canadian boy music prodigy, who won a $2,000 piano in a musical contest at Chicago this week.

The Indians were pitchedforked out of their native environment into a position of which they knew nothing and into a similar position to which it has taken us 2,000 years to become accustomed. Moreover, for everyone who has held out a hand to help them up there have been 99 doing everything they possibly can to drag them down. I shudder to think what the judgment would be if the people of Canada were to be judged on the basis of their treatment of the native races.

Laymen Is the Church.

Declaring that "the church is not constituted by the bishops, priests and deacons, but by the baptized men and women in the pews," Mr. Nicholson cited the aims of the national laymen's movement as being threefold: "First, to form a laymen's association in every diocese, every deanery and every parish; second, to secure consecrated laymen to go throughout the church and across the dominion, if necessary, to arouse interest and enthusiasm in the movement; third, to promote the adoption of better church methods of information, organization and finance by way of preparing for the growth and development of the church."

Mr. Nicholson asserted that seven cents per week per member this year would supply ample funds for the beneficiary fund and general synod purposes of the church. He urged that an effort be made to reach this standard, because, in his opinion, the church should not anticipate the necessity of a spasmodic effort to raise a large sum of money for any particular purpose, but rather that the financial foundations of the church should be broadened, and that thus the problems of the church might be met by a continuous increase in contributions."

Delegates Speak.

Mr. Nicholson was followed in his address by a number of delegates to synod, all of whom spoke in complimentary terms of his splendid deliverance, including the following: R. E. Davis, London; Rev. Canon R. J. M. Perkins, Chatham; Col. W. F. Cockshutt, Brantford; Sheriff A. J. Johnston, Sarnia; Judge A. C. Hardy, Brantford; W. H. Smith, Owen Sound; A. K. Bunell, Brantford; Rev. P. D. Hurford, B.D., Tara; Judge Sutherland, Owen Sound, and A. H. Barbour, Chapeau.

The laymen attending the synod will hold a further meeting today to discuss ways and means of launching

The latex treated web cord process eliminates internal heat by doing away with destructive cross threads. The web, or cross threads, cause unevenness which of course means friction. In this process the cords are held together in a perfectly flat web of pure rubber. Each cord is individually saturated in natural liquid rubber (latex). The cords take strains evenly. Friction and heat are eliminated entirely.

This process is patented in Canada and used only in Dominion Royal Cord Tires. It means far greater tire value without increase in price.

LONDONERS GIVEN OIL CERTIFICATES

Local Staff of Imperial Oil Company Comes First in Distribution.

Last night the local staff of Imperial Oil, Limited, received certificates of stock in the company as a result of their participation in the co-operative trust investment of that company, to the extent of approximately $60,000.

The meeting of the employees was presided over by S. D. Baby, in charge of the local office, and the certificates were presented by E. W. Gordon, district manager from Hamilton. In giving the certificates, Mr. Gordon briefly outlined the inauguration of the co-operative trust which was formed in 1920 by Imperial Oil, Limited, for two chief purposes. It was felt by the directors of the company that participation in this trust by the employees would deepen the sense of partnership which has always existed between the employer and the employees. The scheme, which is one of the most comprehensive ever inaugurated in Canada, permitted employees to subscribe to the stock of the company up to a maximum of 25 per cent of their salaries and ran over a period of five years. In addition to the subscription of the employees, the company added to every dollar subscribed by an employee an additional 50 cents. The price of the stock was set at the beginning of each year and the co-operative investment trust was handled by a committee of employees. So well was this done that there was not a single complaint received during the entire period of the trust and every suggestion made by the employee trustees was approved by the board of directors.

As a result of the trust, over three thousand employees of Imperial Oil, Limited, in Canada are receiving this week stock in the company which has a market value today of between seven and eight million dollars. Outside of these shares now coming into the hands of the employees, thousands of other shares are held here in Canada and the company is controlled by Canadians.

The first distribution of stock under this scheme in Western Ontario, marking the division of the trust in London because London was the original home of the company and some of the founders of the company still reside in this city.

At the conclusion of the meeting a vote of thanks to the directors of the company for their generosity in inaugurating and carrying through this scheme which has resulted in an increased feeling of partnership and a very considerable financial benefit to the employees, was moved by Mr. Gordon, seconded and seconded by Mr. W. E. James.

VANCOUVER SAWMILL BURNS, LOSS $300,000

All Main Buildings of Plant in Heart of City Are Destroyed.

Canadian Press Despatch. Vancouver, B. C., May 13.—Fire last night swept the large lumber mill of the Robertson and Hackett company on False Creek, destroying all the main buildings of the plant and doing damage which early estimates placed at $300,000. The outbreak started shortly before 9 o'clock in the vicinity of the burner and fan mill by a strong breeze soon spread to the main building of the plant, containing the saw-mill equipment, and in a few minutes the large structure was a mass of flames. Other buildings nearby quickly fell a prey to the flames and were soon consumed. The lumber storehouse and dry-kilns were saved but considerable quantities of lumber piled in the yards were burned. All fire-fighting equipment, including fire-boats, responded and fought hard to check the flames. In two hours the conflagration was under control. Great tongues of flames shooting skyward cast a lurid glow over the city and could be seen for miles.

The site of the plant was close to the Granville street bridge across False Creek and almost in the heart of the city. It is understood the loss is covered by insurance.

APRIL BREAKS RECORD IN LIBRARY CIRCULATION

Increase of 2,300 Books Taken Out in Month—349 New Borrowers.

With an increase of circulation of 2,300 books during April the previous records of the public library have again been broken. All branches of the library had a splendid month. The greatest increase was in the south branch which went ahead to the extent of 1,300 volumes.

During the month 349 citizens who had never taken out library cards before swelled the total number of borrowers to 27,195. It is expected that when the two branches in the south and south east are installed in permanent homes next month that there will be further increases. The final payments have been made on the buildings. All that remains now is to complete the interior changes to take care of the books.

The children's story hours were attended by 670 more children in April than in the corresponding month last year. The total attendance was 2,340.

SPRINGBANK PARK SEASON OPENED

Half-Holiday Brings Crowds to Grounds—Picnics Start.

The broad highway to Springbank came into its own this afternoon when Springbank was officially opened for the summer. The first half holiday in some of the London stores, coinciding with the first day of the amusement, nearly brought a large crowd to the grounds early in the afternoon, and several amateur games of ball were staged on the diamonds.

There were a number of picnic parties scattered over the big park. The municipal golf course was in the swim also, with lovers of the mashie, pushers of the putter, and swimmers of the driver turning out in full force across the river.

Tonight the London street railway is putting on extra cars to take the enjoyment-seeking citizens out to the park. They will run every five minutes from 7 o'clock on, and there will be an equal service back from the park. The last car will leave the park tonight at 11:30 o'clock.

JELICOE ACCEPTS EMIGRATION POST

To Be Chairman of Council of Overseas Settlement in England.

Associated Press Despatch. London, May 13.—Viscount Jellicoe, former naval commander and former governor-general of New Zealand, has accepted the chairmanship of the council of overseas settlement.

The council of overseas settlement was recently formed under the auspices of the Church of England for the dissemination of information with regard to openings for settlers overseas and for the purpose of looking after the selection and welfare of emigrants. The church assembly in February last on a motion of the Bishop of London, passed a resolution approving of the establishment of such a council.

It was stated at the time that it was understood that the British government would contribute one-third of the working expenses in connection with the council's undertaking, the total being estimated at £7,500, and the dominions would guarantee another third of the cost.

The committee is composed of Warden Allan McPherson, Glencoe; Wm. Ross, Reeve of East Williams; Reeve of the Municipal, East; Ben Pike, Strathroy; Reeve A. Holman, Newbury.

W., to consider a bill, the object of which is to empower the Scottish local authorities to make arrangements for providing insulin and other treatment to the necessitous persons suffering from diabetes. ## Animal-Loving Citizens Get Chance On Saturday To Help London Society

Humane Association Tags Will Be Offered On Streets By Hundred Girls.

NEED IS GENUINE

Cost of Year's Work Carried Out By Inspector Tustin Was $2,434.82.

On Saturday next the under dog in a little sense will ask London for help. Together with the under dog will be the overworked horse with sore shoulders, starved and lost cats, canaries who are not allowed to sleep at night and all the other domestic animals used for man's pleasure and business.

Saturday will be Tag Day for the London Humane Society. One of the most pathetic and deserving causes in the world will make its bid for support when a hundred girls appear on London streets and offer the Humane Society Tags to passers by. The need for aid is real and genuine. Here are figures for 1924 showing the work carried out by the single inspector for the society, George Tustin.

Results of Work. Examinations of animals, by request, 12,744. Animals humanely destroyed, 1,747. Complaints received during the year, 3,859.

The results of the work as stated by Inspector Tustin are: All boarding stables in the city carefully and regularly watched, very few untamed dogs running loose have been on the streets, and licenses paid promptly. Twenty-three prosecutions have been brought during the past year in all of which convictions were secured.

The cost of the year's work was $2,434.82 which included the salary of the inspector, and the only grant received by the society was $200 from the city council.

Cruelty to animals exist in places in the city where it would not be expected, as far as domestic pets are concerned, and in the gravel pits around the city where horses are concerned. For instance there were seven or eight canaries were kept. The place was lighted all night and there were no covers over the cages. The result was that the small feathered children of song were forced to try to sleep under a blinding electric light with their heads under their wings. This constituted cruelty in the opinion of the inspector and several naturalists and has been discontinued.

There is an immediate need for another inspector, as Mr. Tustin has the whole of Western Ontario to cover. He admits that this is too much for one man and says that if the work is to be properly done another man must be appointed for the Western districts. He has made the result of the outlying parts of the province which he is unable to attend.

With the opening up of the roads and the increased work in gravel pits and on the part of contractors, there is an extra demand on the time and services of Inspector Tustin. There is also an increased demand on the money to carry on this service. This why a Tag Day is being held, and why Londoners who are fond of animals are being asked to help something to help the cause of the Humane Society. The tag day is sponsored by Col. Eric Reid, the president of the society, and the officers look for a generous response to their call for funds.

WILL CAMPAIGN AGAINST 4.4 BEER

W. C. T. U. Hears Charge Conservatives Voted "Party" Against Conviction.

Charging that the Conservative members of the provincial house were cowardly to vote party, rather than on their own conviction on the 4.4 per cent. beer question, the Rev. J. P. Chapman declared before the Central W. C. T. U. meeting last night that he had been present in the house during the course of the debate and knew what had gone on.

He had heard Mr. Raney ask Mr. Nickle if the members of the house would be allowed to vote according as they felt or according to party, and Mr. Nickle's reply had been that the vote should be made according to party. This he felt had forced the measure through when it might otherwise have been defeated.

The chief speaker of the evening, however, was David Ross, president of the local prohibition association. The meeting, held in the Empress avenue Methodist church, was well attended by both men and women.

Mr. Ross' address dealt with the present situation. He felt that the opposition of the temperance forces to the introduction of 4.4 per cent. beer was justified, and that it would now be proved to be founded on a solid basis. The fact that the government was surrounding the measure with such unusual restrictions proved that the government itself was becoming uncertain as to its policy.

There was a meeting to be held in London this week, he said, which would start a campaign against 4.4 per cent. beer. A lively discussion followed the address, and was well attended by both men and women.

There was a meeting to be held in London this week, he said, which would start a campaign against 4.4 per cent. beer. A lively discussion followed the address, and was well attended by both men and women.

Mr. Ross' address dealt with the present situation. He felt that the opposition of the temperance forces to the introduction of 4.4 per cent. beer was justified, and that it would now be proved to be founded on a solid basis. The fact that the government was surrounding the measure with such unusual restrictions proved that the government itself was becoming uncertain as to its policy.

The Scarlet Cloak.

"Then maybe she'll change her mind and live with us, in her own Victorian suite, rather than as she threatens now and go out into the wide, wide world, far away from Yours lovingly!"

So, Pandora Haste had threatened to leave her adored Ken and his wife.

And Rawdon Wells had been Italian and "primitive," and his eyes had been "terrible" when Eve had broken the news to him of her engagement to his friend, Kennedy Haste!

But it was the letter concerning the unnamed "idol" which interested Dagon most.

"Are you willing to tell me who this man Miss Carroll referred to?" he asked, pointing out the passage to Haste.

Ken read the words and flushed up to the roots of his brown hair. "Ask me something else," he said. "I can't tell you that."

"Do you mean you can't—or you won't?"

"I am afraid I've forgotten that particular one. There were—so many chaps who fell in love with Miss Carroll," Ken stammered.

Dagon knew that he had not forgotten, and Haste probably knew that he knew. But the detective let the subject drop. Instead, he said, "Just now you gave me permission to ask you something else. Well, I take you at your word. We're in Miss Haste's own sitting-room. You tell me in the wardrobe there are souvenirs of the time when she first came to you. Will you let me see those things?"

Haste stared. But what possible connection can they have with this case?"

"They may have more than you think," said Dagon.

Haste took back the letters hurriedly, as if he feared more questions, and then—glad of the chance of subject—found the key of the cupboard in the drawer of the secretary above, where no doubt, he had seen Pan place it. This new affair had little interest for him. He could not find it possible that the souvenirs of Pandora's babyhood should have the remotest connection with the disappearance of Eve Carroll. His glowing opinion of Dagon's talent paled slightly because of the detective's request. But there was no reason for refusing, so Ken rather indifferently unlocked the tray and threw open the cupboard doors.

"I suppose you've heard the whole story," he said, "about the box being left at our door and all that. The box—I remember it quite distinctly—was like a boy's school box, but rather small. It was thrown away by our servants. I suppose, but even so, the thing in it was kept; and there's the lot in that doll's trunk which was one of the great treasures of Pan's childhood."

"Allow me!" exclaimed the detective, and stooping took from the one shelf in the cupboard a miniature trunk got up to resemble the fashionable traveling boxes of a Paris maker. It was not heavy, though it was of a good size, two feet long by one in height, perhaps, and Dagon placed it on a table. It was unlocked, but thinking of the girl he hesitated to lift the lid, and Haste impatiently did so.

A delicious perfume of potpourri rose to the nostrils of the two young men. And though Haste had moods of fiercely doubting his adopted sister, his heart melted as he looked at her preciously guarded treasures of the past. The trunk had a tray, in which lay a doll which had been a present from him on one of Pan's birthdays. It had eyes which opened and shut, real eyelashes and curly hair, which could be brushed. Pan had named the doll after him and herself: "Pandora Kennedy."

It lay on a neat pile of its wardrobe, made by the child's own hands, with here and there a ribbon bag of potpourri. Ken removed the tray, and Dagon's eager eyes saw first a fleecy Shetland shawl, then a silky blanket striped with red, white and green.

"There's the poor little kid," said Haste, "wrapped in those when we found her!" Haste said, "I suppose the rest of the things are underneath. Examine them as much as you like."

The dark face of the Canadian had flushed at the sight of the silk blanket; but Haste did not notice his change of color. He was thinking of Eve, and wondering why the detective had said so little about the letters which, after all, he had come to the house expressly to see.

The fellow had appeared to be somewhat impressed by two of those letters; yet now he seemed far more "intrigued" by these odd trifles which, surely, could have no bearing whatever on the case.

Almost reverently Dagon touched the blanket. Before looking at what lay beneath, he held the silky stuff with its bright stripes between his hands. Perhaps he was trying to make use of the faculty he had described to Anson; that of seeing an image of the person most intimately associated with the things touched.

Or else it might be that the blanket fascinated him because of the Italian colors, and because he must have known—if he knew anything about Italian manufactures—that the blanket had been woven in the land he claimed as his birthplace. He could hardly have been quite so sure of evidence that Pandora Haste, the founding, was a compatriot of his, for these Italian blankets were in tended more for export than for home use, and thousands were sold every year in most countries of Europe. They had been cheap in the old days before the war too and therefore would have been quite within the means of a poor mother.

Whatever his motive was, Dagon gazed at the little striped silk blanket for several moments with an odd, abstracted gaze. Then, still with the air of one who feared to profane a shrine, he examined in turn the tiny garments which were Pan's only relics of her babyhood. They were commonplace things enough, cheap and rather coarse; but a small scarlet cloak of woolen stuff, with a mother of pearl button at the neck, and lined with cotton flannel which imitated ermine, held him spell-bound.

"One would think you could read the history of my adopted sister's birth in that hideous little cloak," Haste said.

Dagon actually stared. "Oh, I don't go so far as that," he exclaimed, his sense of humor not in the least aroused. "But I confess it interests me—for special reasons. May I take the cloak home and keep it a short time? I'll promise to bring it safely back in the same condition as now. I don't believe Miss Haste would object, do you?"

"Oh, certainly, take it," said Ken. "I'll be responsible for giving you permission. It would be different with Eve's letters if you wanted them. I couldn't bring myself to part with those for ten minutes!"

"I remember every word in the letters that I need to remember," Dagon assured him.

"And do you think they've helped you to draw any conclusion?"

"One of them has helped me, I believe."

"Which one, if I may ask?"

"The one you refused to tell me about," the detective replied dryly.

Haste frowned. "Be careful you don't jump to wrong conclusions," he warned the other.

"I will," answered Dagon. "I'll be very careful, indeed. And now I must get back to my digging, as I have a good deal to do. Thank you for lending me your sister's cloak. I do really think it has a bearing on the case, and it may actually help me to guess where she is now."

Since the Canadian had decided to pursue his profession in London, he had sent to New York his last abode before the war—for his few belongings. These had arrived, and were now in his lodgings. His books had been unpacked, but he kept many of his things in a big American cabin trunk that he had covered over with a silk blanket much like Pan's, a blanket he had bought because it was Italian. Now he rummaged through a mass of papers and pulled out a parcel done up carefully in waterproof cloth. This he opened, spreading it flat on a table and gazing at the contents: a quaintly made little waistcoat of a size to fit a child of three or four years old. It was made of scarlet cloth, had four mother of pearl buttons down the front, and was lined with black-tufted, white cotton flannel that crudely imitated ermine.

Beside this he laid the tiny cloak which had enveloped the baby left at the Haste's door. The red cloth, the cotton flannel, and the buttons were precisely the same.

"My God, I felt it. I knew it!" Dagon cried aloud. His mind rushed back to a picture which he often saw in dreams, especially if he were tired or depressed, or if he feared failure in some undertaking. He wondered, whenever he waked from this dream, which always happened suddenly, whether the picture were not really something remembered, something earlier in his life than any of the more assured memories. They, the catalogued memories which formed a more or less connected chain—began in a street. He was crying because he was hungry. "Vanno, povero Vanno!" he had wailed, for he was "Vanno," a pet name for Giovanni, or John. How he had got into that street he'd never known; but he thought he had been on a ship, and there had been a very big man who seemed a giant, sometimes cross and sometimes kind to him. In the street a much smaller, very different man had spoken to the crying child; but Dagon had not been able to understand English then. This man had taken his hand and they had walked to a house not far off, where the man had apparently wished to keep the wanderer; but a woman with a loud voice would not let him stay. Out he and the man had gone again, and they had ridden in a tram to a big building where a great many children lived. It was a kind of an asylum, and there the boy had spent several years.

The grown-ups had been good to him, and when he was old enough to go away and work on a farm, they had given him the red waistcoat with imitation ermine lining. It had evidently been a gift from the loving hand, and might possibly help him to find his lost family some day—who could tell?

The scarlet picture was connected with this queer little garment and the oddest thing about it was that he had had the dream before the waistcoat had been returned to him—before he had recalled its existence. He saw himself in a garden with a beautiful woman who was weeping. In her arms she held a baby wrapped in a red cloak exactly like his own. He was very proud. The woman's face was clear as a cameo before Dagon's eyes. He was trying to know that he loved her dearly. He liked the baby, too, but only as if it were a doll, and he was not thinking of it at all. He was trying to know that he loved her dearly. He liked the baby, too, but only as if it were a doll, and he was not thinking of it at all.

Hurdy-Gurdy Days

April walks beside me still in budded cloak of brown, Primrose gold above the hill the lengthened sunset burn, Every wind a minstrel goes, singing through the town, For hurdy-gurdy days are here and May is at the turn.

May is at the turning in a blur of hill-blue haze, There's a hint of leaf-smoke drifting down the dingy city ways, There's the flash of bluebird weather through a rift of rainy skies, And the dawn of dreams remembered in a gray world's eyes.

A battered hurdy-gurdy at the corner of the street, Old tunes, forgotten tunes, and lilac-breath and fern, Where grimy vendors' baskets spill their fragrance, haunting sweet; And every day is yesterday and Youth is at the turn.

May is at the turning like a gipsy in the lane, With leaf-mist at her girdle, and her blown hair pearded with rain; There's the green of new grass creeping up the roadways from the south, And the curve of love and laughter on a gray world's mouth.

March ran whistling down the hill, the gamins of the year, April's but a child at school, with life and love to learn; Sudden through the city-gray, riotous and dear, Hurdy-gurdys strum the dusk, and May is at the turn.

May is at the turning in a burst of tulip-flame, With a spattering of cowslip-gold to show the road she came; There's a young moon's silver sickle-gleam through orchard boughs as start, And forgotten love-songs throbbing in a gray world's heart.

But then she probably didn't think of me, so I guess that even things up. She always has said that I have the finest voice in the Smiling Pool. I often have said that Mrs. Toad has excellent taste, and I repeat it. Dear me, I wonder where she is."

Dorothy Dix

Shall the Bridegroom Buy a Home or Continue to Live With His Parents.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a young man and am soon to be married. My parents have made the suggestion that we make our home with them after we are married, so that I may save my money in order that I may go into business for myself.

My sweetheart insists that we get a home of our own right away. I would be glad to do so, but if I have to furnish a home now all my savings will be gone and I will have to wait until I can save up some more money on which to start business.

What do you think? H. D. S.

Answer:

If your sweetheart was a broad-minded, forward-looking girl with a lot of common sense and philosophy, she would gladly accept your parents' generous offer to live with them while you are getting on your feet. She would realize that in that way she could best help you and push your fortunes, which are also her fortunes, after she becomes your wife.

But, my dear boy, broad-minded, common-sense, philosophical young girls are about as scarce as hen's teeth. The average girl doesn't see an inch beyond her nose, and she wants what she wants when she wants it. You can't make her realize the advantage of denying herself the little things she desires at the moment, in order that she may get the bigger things later on, so before you ever get married make up your mind that you are going to deal with your wife as she is, and not as she might, would, or should be.

Therefore, as the girl is right from her point of view, and you are right from your point of view, why not compromise, and put off the wedding until you have enough money to furnish the house, and go into business?

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a middle-aged woman, a widow with grown sons, who are still at home. I have a chance to marry a good man of my own age. Will it be best for me to marry, and have a husband and home of my own, or always live with my boys?

SARAH.

Answer:

Take the good man, Sarah. That will secure you your own home, your independence. It will enable you to maintain your own identity and to have somebody of your own to love and care for, somebody to whom you are necessary.

Your boys will soon be leaving you and establishing homes of their own. That is nature, and what you wish them to do, but it leaves their mother at loose ends and with empty, idle hands.

No matter how much your sons love you, nor how kind and good they are to you, when they marry they enter into a new life in which you have small part. Their wives and children will absorb their interest, their attention and their pocketbooks, and you will feel yourself a burden upon them and know that it is necessary.

There never was yet a woman who didn't believe in love, who didn't want to love and pray to be loved, and who was not in the lookout for a husband. Don't take any stock in this man-hater business. It's all blarney!

So This Is Socialism?

Some new light was thrown on socialism at a meeting of Imperial Oil Company employees at Sarnia, when they received 55,000 certificates of stock, worth $1,650,000. The meeting marked the working out of a plan that has been in operation for five years, during which employees have been encouraged to place as much of their savings as possible in a trust fund for the purchase of stock, the limit being set at twenty-five per cent of the earnings. To this the company added fifty per cent of the amount of the employee's investment. Thus, if at the end of the five-year period the employee had purchased one hundred shares, he would find himself in possession of one hundred and fifty.

The Imperial Oil Company must be satisfied that this sort of business produces good results. It must have found that it justifies itself in a commercial way apart from its value as being a force that would make an employee a stockholder and cause him to refer to the concern as "our company." The Imperial is a remarkably well-managed concern, and seems to have all its moves blocked out in advance, and for that reason would not be indulging in a doubtful experiment.

It is also in the class of very large organizations that popular fancy at times chooses to refer to as "the big interests," or even as "the soulless corporations." Those who are given to making an indiscriminate use of such phrases may find something to think about in the case of the Imperial Oil Company that now has 1,500 employees as holders of stock that pays a dividend and also has a very substantial value.

Victor Ross, of Toronto, vice-president of the company, on the occasion of the distribution of the stock, described the condition now existing as "a fair, modern example of practical socialism." Mr. Ross might safely have gone farther and claimed it to be the sort of socialism that erects a very secure barrier against the more rampant type that at times even merges itself with communism.

If the Imperial Oil Company's move is socialism, and Vice-President Ross says it is, then let's have more of the same sort.

Cut One Tree—Burn Nine.

Dr. Robson Black, manager of the Canadian Forestry Association, claims:

In British Columbia we burn each year thirty-two times as much timber as we fell; farmers in Canada are three-fifths of all lumber users; nine trees burned in Canada for every one felled with saw.

You wouldn't burn a church in your own district or home town; why go up into our forest and burn it down? Businessmen and so-called sportsmen go up into what the novelist calls the open spaces, and do their best to make them more open by burning holes in them. One fire in 1924 completely burned out 350 square miles of timber. We are today on the ragged edge of the safety margin of the forest reserves of Canada. If we had taken proper care of our timber that we had fifty years ago, we could have found room in Canada for all the new industries we want.

We are more fortunate than the Americans. We still own the land on which our timber grows, while the Americans sold theirs outright. We make the lumbermen plant a tree for every tree they fell.

In no other industry do we have to wait so long for results, but in none are the results more valuable or more diversified.

Twenty miles from London is a town where today I can get a five-roomed house for $65. When the spring freshets are on I get water laid on both floors. However, not so long ago that town had a population of 2,000 and was a thriving center, the heart of which was a big lumber mill. Then came the city folks out to the stream which was full of the best fish, and there came fires and fires and fires. At last all the timber was gone. That closed the mill, depopulated the town and made it possible for me to buy a house for $65. But was it good business?

We speak of the greedy lumberman, but for every $5 worth of lumber he cuts he has to pay $4.50 in costs and interest. Also he has to pay another 25 cents of the 50 cents to other co-operative businesses in the lumber trade.

In spite of that our timber interests are attractive enough to make the Americans come over here in ever-increasing numbers. We have the best spruce reserves in the world. They should be good for from twenty-five to thirty-five years—with care. The woods we need to save, and which will have the greatest industrial value for our children's children, are spruce, white pine, and fir. Last year we burned in Canada 5,000,000 acres of forest. Unless we make a real and successful effort to preserve our forests we can say to the 5,000 timber and lumber industries in Canada, "You will have to close up in 1935."

If Toronto, Why Not London?

Controller Donald McGregor of Toronto and Alderman Sam McBride punched each other in the civic temple of that city. Controller McGregor's vocation is the chanting of sweet melodies and the instruction of the untutored in the same fine art. Singing masters are not supposed to be pugnacious, but apparently McGregor swings a wicked fist as well as pouring forth his soul in melody at so much per hour.

Latest reports in the official communication state that Alderman McBride was cut and bruised, and that McGregor's goggles were knocked from his nose to the floor. A very observant reporter states that the goggles were afterward picked up.

Toronto is the provincial center of everything, the fountainhead of legislation, the home of great schools of learning and the abode of wise men, exponents of many fine arts. Hence it is right that the smaller places should look to Toronto for leadership. If it is right for public men there to refer to each other as "liars," "cowards" and "yellow curs," then there must be some virtue in the procedure. If they find it good to smash each other with their fists and poke their fingers in each other's eyes, surely there must be some good thing in the system that would elevate it from the ranks of plain rowdism.

It is on record that at one session of the city council in London an alderman heaved a drinking glass at one of his colleagues, but since then there has been no display of physical force. It may be London was in error in dropping the idea. Why should not Alderman Bottrill, for instance, sitting at the head of No. 2 committee, rise up and punch Alderman Smith, who sits in the anchor chair at the tail-end of No. 1 committee?

Likewise the board of education has fallen into stormy days, and a passage-at-arms between Trustee Campbell and Trustee Lawrason should settle at once in a definite way the wrecking of the Rectory street school. Also Trustee Mess and Trustee Copeland could decide on the elimination of domestic science and manual training from the colleges in like manner. If this pummeling business is a new development in Toronto the Good, there must be some sound reason for it, and if it has more virtue than appears on the surface other cities cannot afford to overlook it.

Advocates Simple Methods.

The Manchester Guardian relates the odd story of a dispute over three garden idols in India, which, after eight years of wandering from court to court, finally reached the judicial committee of the privy council in London. It might be imagined that when the fate of the three idols had reached that high court it would be settled quickly and finally.

Not so. Lord Shaw, in his decision, advised the disputants to go back to India and place the dispute before some disinterested friend of the Mullick family. This advice is noteworthy, coming as it does from a member of a judicial body that is looked upon as the clearing-house for all manner of things that run thither from the lesser courts. As the Guardian puts it, "Lord Shaw has sent an Indian squabble back to India, and it is a pity that our judges cannot send our own fireside feuds back to the fireside."

When even a cursory survey is made of the petty litigations that have run the gamut of the courts, the truth of this assertion is more than ever apparent. A foot or so of ground where a line fence is built has estranged families that were formerly good friends and neighbors, and who should never have been anything else. Some dispute over property rights has caused city people to build at times great, ugly spite-fences to shut out view and sunlight.

Judge Shaw's point is that these disputes should be settled where they begin, and there is considerable common sense behind the suggestion. There is often no great legal tangle to be fathomed, but simply an application of the law of mutual understanding and a realization of the fact that it is more desirable to live beside a friend than an enemy.

It may seem a homely method, simply taking the dispute to some disinterested party who can be trusted, and doing so with the idea of abiding by his decision, but it should be remembered that the person advocating such a method for the Calcutta litigants who have had their dispute over three garden idols before all the courts for eight years is none other than Lord Shaw, himself a member of the highest tribunal in the British system of justice.

Note and Comment.

And now they apply clay to the face to remove the soil.

Added to the three-cent tax on gas, a London man got the job of painting a dozen new detour signs.

A six-cylinder car may look good to dad, but nothing compared to six bunches of firecrackers to little Johnny.

The reds jeered Hindenburg as he was made president, but as a general thing jeers hurt only those who make them.

At one time the bother was to keep banana peelings off the sidewalk. Now the problem is crumbs from hot-dogs.

There's so much painting going on in the city this year that the girls will have to quit until the front porch gets its second coat.

Question in health column—What can I do to get rid of callus on my feet? Answer—Put them to bed before 2 in the morning.

The Canadian dollar is an obstinate article. After the Conservatives at Ottawa telling the world that the country was heading for ruin, said dollar is quoted above par in Detroit.

There's something gone wrong in highbrow circles, for not in two months has there been a real blast from the city telling the farmers what's wrong with them.

There were no massed bands to greet President Hindenburg when he went into Berlin. Couldn't they have had one of those little German bands that used to go tooting around here in pre-war days?

Just when we had our heart and mind sobered to kindly thoughts and noble aspirations by the observance of Mother's Day, along comes the three-cent tax on gas. It's tough trying to be clean-souled, respectable citizen.

After Mother's Day

One day we sang about her praise, and hollered out a loud encore,
the next day mother went to work
a-wrestlin' with the kitchen floor.

Last Sunday was a day apart for setting mother on a perch, to her we sang a cheerful hymn when standin' joyful in the church. Likewise the preacher paid his due, and from his lips kind words would fall, per-suddin' mother how that she was some big pumpkins after all.

And scribes they dipped their pens in paint and wrote about the mothers too, declarin' if they weren't about they'd know not what things they should do. And poets joined the chorus then and spun sweet verse upon their muse, and painted mother in a garb of reds and yellows, pinks and blues.

Small wonder at the close of day that mother was all puffed with joy, from tastin' of the pleasant things, the golden praise without alloy.

Small wonder that she might have thought if she had took these things to heart, how she was sittin' at the wheel and steerin' on the family cart, while all the others rushed about and did the work about the place, most anxious like above all else to plant a smile upon her face.

But when she rose on Monday morn she found the dream had passed away, for she was facin' once again the labor of a washin' day.

The folks who wore a flower for her was smorin' sound upon the hay, when she was pokin' down the stairs and cookin' for another day. The daughter of the house likewise she greeted mother with a whine, when she came down from off her roost at just six minutes after nine.

She was just then a-cleanin' house, as well as washin' out the clothes, at night she sat up after ten a-closin' gaps upon their hose. She got three sturdy meals that day, and scrubbed the dishes after each, and this the day but one removed from when she was proclaimed a peach.

That night the husband went down town, the daughter off to see a show, and mother sittin' there alone, her havin' not a place to go. She helped to curl her daughter's bob and fix anew the shortened locks, and when the folks had left her there she spent the evenin' darrin' socks.

No doubt it was a pleasant thing to set apart a day for her, and make her dizzy for a spell with praises running in a blur. But be so next day she scrubbed and wrestled with the kitchen floor, and went on doin' the fifty things like what she had been doin' before.—ARK.

Wolves Howled On Court House Site

Early Settler Recalls Stories of the Way in Which Pioneers Had to Battle For Their Own Safety and That of Their Stock.

By EARLY SETTLER.

IT WOULD be a strange sight now to see a pack of wolves come racing down Dundas street, but that is what took place a little over 100 years ago. About the year 1820 the wolves sat and howled on the bank of the river where the court house in London now stands, and many incidents of their pranks were related to the writer by some of the early settlers.

Upon one occasion an early settler was carrying his supply of flour from Hamilton, when night overtook him before he reached his stopping-place. He made a torch of hickory bark, which enabled him to see the blazes on the trees and keep to the path, and it also kept the wolves off him, as he could see their fiery eyes glancing in the darkness, on either side, as he passed along. But he reached his stopping-place in safety. This happened about 30 miles east of London.

One of the earliest settlers south of London had raised quite a flock of sheep, so he could weave his own cloth, but he had to shut them up every night for fear of the wolves. Having no barns at that early date, he made a high enclosure close to and around his house, and put the sheep in there at night. One night the wolves broke down the door into the fold and they killed 18 out of the 21 which he had, and no two were in a place, but scattered over the whole farm.

Towards spring the settlers could destroy the wolves when they were weak and lean, by chasing them with snowshoes on, after a fresh fall of them with snow, and as they had no guns at first they resorted to this method. The first settlers had destroyed quite a number in this way, but still they were losing lambs and young stock, which they believed was done by a big lone wolf thought to have his hiding-place in a thick tamarac swamp some distance southeast of the city. They watched till they got him out into the thinner timber and made after him on the snowshoes, and with scythes partly wound with cloth cut the cords of the hind legs, and he was then easily destroyed.

But as the district became settled and the ring of the settler's axe became general the wolves gradually disappeared till they were gone entirely.

ROUNDOUT VENGANCE.

"Jim, that necktie you are wearing is the worst I ever saw."
"Say, dine with us tonight, will you, old man?"
"Sure! But what's the connection?"
"I want you to repeat that remark before my wife."

THE DUTIFUL COW.

In an out-of-the-way corner of a Boston graveyard stands a brown board showing the marks of age and neglect. It bears the inscription, "Sacred to the memory of Eben Harvey, who departed this life suddenly and unexpectedly by a cow kicking him on the 15th of September, 1853. Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

GUESS AGAIN!

"Henry," she said, "a fortune-teller said that I was going to the Riviera."
"Then call her up and fix an appointment for said her husband. "Perhaps she can tell me when to get the money."

POSTAL SERVICE PARLEY IS CALLED

Hon. Charles Murphy Summons Conference To Meet at Ottawa.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Toronto, May 12.—Postmaster-General Hon. Charles Murphy has asked all branches of the postal service to send representatives to Ottawa to meet a sub-committee of the cabinet to discuss a revision of salaries, it became known here tonight.

Before the strike of last June the postal workers were trying to obtain increased salaries to make up for the loss of the wartime bonus, which was cut off in 1923. In the last days of the conference preceding the strike one of the offers made by the acting postmaster-general, Hon. Charles Stewart, was that a sub-committee of the cabinet would discuss the salary question with the men.

The sudden calling of the strike stopped further parleys.

METHODIST BOARD HAS LAST PRE-UNION MEETING

Special to The Advertiser.

Seaford, May 11.—The last official board meeting of the Methodist church was held at the home of Mr. Herald Lawrence. Owing to the approach of union the present official board will carry on until consummation of the union.

C. H. Holland was chosen as representative to the district meeting and conference.

Interest centered around the advisability of a photographic group of official and trustee boards being taken and placed in the vestry to mark the union of the Methodist church with the United Church.

The recording secretary and Mr. E. C. Chamberlain were appointed auditors. A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence for their hospitality.

U. S. PLANS FLEET TO CLEAR LAKES

Building Ten Ships at Bay City To War On Traffic.

Special to The Advertiser.

Detroit, May 12.—Federal and state authorities were preparing an elaborate program today for an intensive drive against liquor smuggling into the United States.

Briefly the developments are: Fleet of 10 new ships to be used by the government against run-runners on the Great Lakes is being built at Bay City, Michigan.

State police launch new campaign, to cut all Canadian liquor as first move to dry up Michigan.

Federal authorities go into secret conference here to lay plans for fighting run-runners on Detroit river.

C. E. Larimer, chief of local federal prohibition agents, said that more rigid enforcement along the river would be instituted shortly.

Judging from his admission that the government was weakened by the lack of speedy boats, it is thought that the conference today has to do with this problem.

In connection with announcement that a fleet is being built at Bay City, it was said also that another fleet is being constructed at Port Clinton, Ohio.

Ships of these fleets are to be assigned to Sacketts Harbor, Oswego, Charlotte, Niagara, Buffalo, Erie and Cleveland. These will be the base ports from which the ships will operate, while the larger and faster revenue cutters, Morrell, with headquarters at Detroit, and Tuscorora, with headquarters at Milwaukee, will roam all of the lakes.

The ships assigned to Sacketts Harbor and Oswego will be used to block the smuggling of liquors along the sparsely inhabited shores of Jefferson and Oswego counties.

In the past, huge quantities of bottled contraband have been smuggled across from Canada via the lake route.

Man Blamed For Wife's Murder When His Children Give Evidence

Canadian Press Despatch.

Winnipeg, May 12.—After hearing the testimony of three young children a coroner's jury last night brought in a verdict accusing their father of causing their mother's death.

The man, M. Desmet, listened stoically while the evidence was being taken. His wife, Valerie, died

May 6 from acid burns about the face and body, or, as the jury's verdict put it, "as the result of some poisonous liquid administered by her husband."

The children testified that they heard their mother cry out that their father had poisoned her by throwing acid on her while she was asleep. Desmet was arraigned yesterday on a murder charge.

SHIP GOES TO RESCUE AND MEETS TROUBLE

Lake Vessel Rushes To Burning Craft and Strikes Obstacle.

Associated Press Despatch.

Dunkirk, N.Y., May 12.—Coast-guard cutter, C.G. 2205, in command of Captain John Daly, operating out of Buffalo, ran into a gale off Point Gratiot, 12 miles out of Dunkirk Harbor, and was seriously damaged this morning, while looking for the freighter Midland Prince, reported on fire. Weathering the stiff breeze, the C.G. 2205 struck a half-submerged log. The propeller was broken, and the little craft was damaged below the waterline, necessitating the use of the pumps.

The cutter wallowed in the waves until sufficient repairs could be rigged to run into Dunkirk. It made the harbor under its own power.

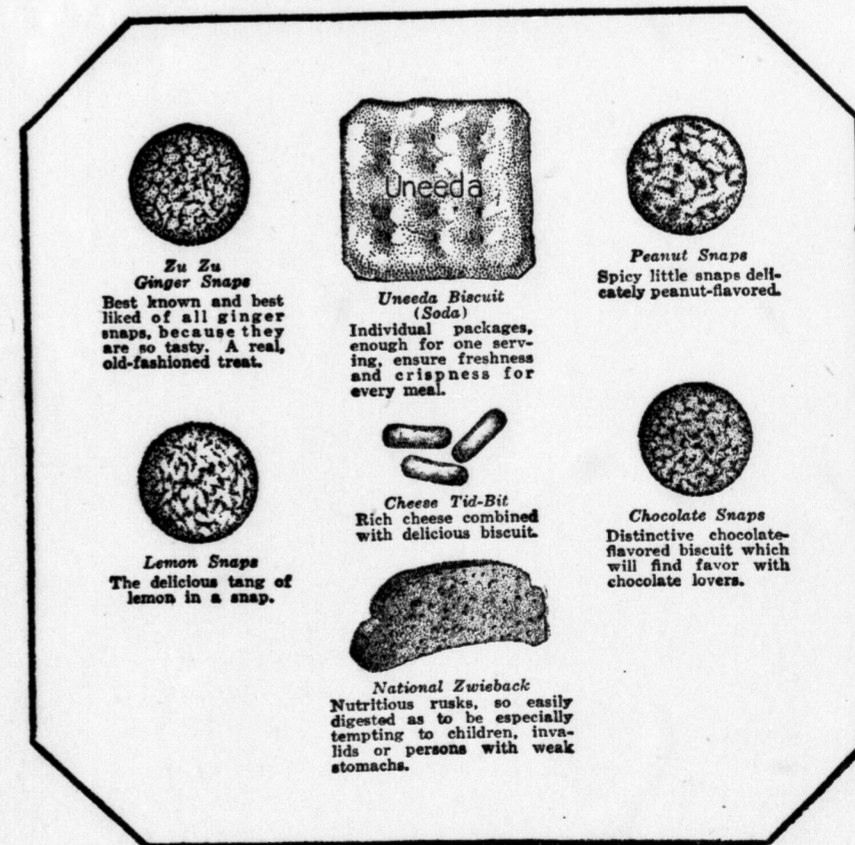

The Midland Prince steamed down the lake while the cutter was in trouble, and was met by fire tugs.

NURSES MARK ANNIVERSARY OF FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE*Women's Victoria Auxiliary Tenders Banquet To Graduates.*COL. BEATTIE SPEAKS*Declares Smiles of Music*More Potent Than*Medicine.

One hundred and five years have rolled past since Florence Nightingale lived and made immortal the name of "nurse." And to celebrate this one hundred and fifth anniversary yesterday the women's auxiliary board of Victoria hospital tendered a banquet to the graduating class of that training school. Covers were laid in the Smallman &amp; Ingram dining-room for over one hundred and fifty representatives of the important men's and women's organizations of the city, who came to pay tribute to the Florence Nightingales of the present day.

Throughout the long list of addresser speeches, directed to the graduating class, one note was struck more strongly than the rest and reiterated with almost every speaker.

It was this—that a sense of humor was indispensable in the nursing profession. Laughter with a serious mind behind it was more potent in bringing a patient back to health than the doctor's medicine.

Learn to Laugh.

Col. Wm. Beattie, chief speaker of the occasion, curiously enough, had chosen the same theme for his address to the nurses.

"I want you to learn to laugh," he said. "The laughter that rings with confidence in the sick room is better often than physic."

Dr. Beattie referred to the responsibility which would be laid upon each member of the graduating class as she left the protection of the hospital roof, and urged development of character to complement nursing technique. Most of all he asked for a laughing heart which would chase away care in the sickroom.

The toast to the graduating class was offered by Mrs. F. J. Greenaway, chairman of the Women's Auxiliary and toastmistress of the evening.

Miss Grace Fairley, superintendent of the Nurses Training school, replied with an appeal for a new nurses' home.

She gave a humorous twist to her appeal as she turned it to the graduating class in these words:

"The need of a new nurses' home has come indeed because your laughter has raised the roof."

Appeals For Home.

This same appeal for a new nurses' home at Victoria came from different speakers. Col. Wm. Gartshore, on behalf of the hospital trust, voiced it when he suggested that some wealthy citizen build this home, and so "make death.

Mayor George Wenige mentioned it in his address, with a humorous back-hander at the board of education for demanding so much of the city's money for schools.

Col. T. J. F. Murphy, speaking for military district No. 1, referred to it when he declared that in the Victoria hospital, War Memorial Children's hospital, institute of public health and medical school, London had one of the finest medical blocks on the continent. Its only lack was a nurses' home.

Colonel Gartshore, in lauding the efforts of the Victoria hospital auxiliary, suggested the formation of a junior auxiliary, the membership of which might serve as hospital aides.

Auxiliary Work.

The work of the whole committee was brought before the gathering by Mrs. A. T. Edwards, who spoke of extensive activity carried on in the way of supplying linen and surgical dressings, flowers for the wards, entertainments and Sunday services.

THE MOST VERSATILE OF FABRICS.

"Almost from the beginning of time, silk, wool, cotton and linen have clothed civilization and decorated its habitations."

"Centuries after centuries have rolled past without enriching the world with a single new fibre, until artificial silk crossed the horizon of the textile world, about four decades ago."

"And now, in that remarkably short space of time, rayon (artificial silk) has established a place for itself, among these age-old fibres, as one of the five important textiles of the world—a monument to the genius of man!"

"For rayon is the only textile spun and woven for human needs which man has invented. The origin of the other fibres lies hidden in the mists of antiquity, but the fact suggests itself that in each case it was a natural development. The need was paramount, and the wherewith had only to be discovered."
