Our Millinery

If we traded in "cheap" millihery as some folks do we would not expect success. One important feature of this Millinery stock is that nothing in it is "cheap" in quality, some of the creations of our Milliners are lowly priced to be sure, but "cheap" millinery never enters this store. Some new conceits economically priced awaits you to-day.

Kind of Ballots Machine Paid for.

THIS CRIME INVOLVED NOT ONLY CROOKEDNESS BUT PERJURY THE NORTH WATERLOO

Berlin, October 5,-The North Waterloo election protest trial was resumed here yesterday.

Allan R. Shantz, poll clerk, said he knew Wildfong who came to see him. and asked if he were a good Grit. He said he wanted men to act as deputy returning officers who were not too onscientious. He said there was od thing in it, and he would meet witness that night and introduce him o one of the men. Witness met Wildfong in company with Thomas Lewis, of London, at the Walker House, who was indroduced to him as one who would give him instructions. Lewis said it would be worth $5 apiece for each spoiled and switched ballot. for each spoiled and switched ballot. He took a paper and showed witness how ballots were spoiled by inserting a piece of lead under the thumb nail. The switching process was also shown up. The ballots were to be placed face downward and those marked for Lackner could be switched or thrown aside. Not more than 20, however, were to be manipulated at this poll. Witness spoke to Wildfong after the election, who told him he spoiled 18 ballots, but could not switch, "as he was being watched too closely. He (Wildfong) said he got about $100 from Lewis as his share. Witness asked Wildfong why he did not speak to Lewis about his (witness) share. Upon this Wildfong wrote a note to Lewis, reading:—"Give this man some Lewis, reading:—"Give this man some stuff or he will squeal." As a result Lewis gave him $10, saying he would be back in a day or two and see him again. Witness frequently saw Wild-fong speak to Smith, Vance and Lewis.

ALL WERE IN IT.

Shantz said he asked Wildfong where Lewis got the money, when he said: — "They were all connected with it." Lewis said there would be strangers here to act as scrutineers. Witness asked C. K. Haggdorn if he knew when Lewis would be back, but he said he knew nothing about him. Witness asked Mr. Scellin the same question, and was told to wait for a day or two, and then to call at Mr. Scellin's office. He did so, and told Mr. Scellin he had received no word from Lewis. Mr. Scellin told him to have patience. Witness exhim to have patience. Witness ex-plained how No. 2 poll was manipular ted. Ballots were all dumped out and placed face downwards, and Cummings took them up, one by one, and salled them off. J. F. Stumpf, the Conserva-Owned and operated by our firm in different parts of the country. We are the only concern in them off. J. F. Stumpf, the Conserva-tive scrutineer, rebelled against this mode of procedure, claiming the scru-tineers should be allowed to see if the ballots were properly credited to the respective candidates. Cummings claimed it was a secret ballot, and that no one was allowed to see them but him, whereupon Stumpf retorted Factory for the manufacture of Ladies' Jackets, Mantles, Etc., has an annual output of over that no one was allowed to see them but him, whereupon Stampf retorted that there would have to be a recount Witness met Wildfong, Hamitcher Cummings, Hagdorn and Vance at the Liberals' room during the election.

Cross-examined by Mr. Macdonald witness admitted that he threatened to expose them if certain moneys wern not paid. Mr. Scully and Mr. Reid he said, asked what he knew about the election, and told him he would ge paid for his information. A cheque for $50 was deposited with H. M. Andrews in his favor. Shantz admitted having written twice to Lewis, remaining the state of the This department has a reputation second to none for reilable goods. Every worthy style drews in his favor. Shantz admination written twice to Lewis, minding him of his promise, and sing he had a good thing from other side, but that he would clothe deal if Lewis paid him $150, not, he would close a deal with thers for more.

MUST BE PRODUCED. T. O. Anderson, treasurer of the Liberal Association, was called to produce the books of the association. claimed they were not kept by him, and he did not feel disposed to show them. The court thought otherwise, Aaron Hammacher, sworn, said he was caretaker of the Liberal rooms, was caretaker of the Liberal rooms, for which he received $! a day from Mr. Bitzer, the treasurer of the Reform Association. Saw Bossard and Lewis frequently around the rooms. Alex. Robertson, I. E. Shantz, Peter Shir's, Isaac Weaver, J. G. Schmidt, J. F. McKay and Abram Miller were called, and gave evidence towards connecting agency against Bossard, Lewis and Vance.

Miss May Field, barmaid at Bossard's, sworn, said she saw Lewis on several occasions at the hotel. He and Bossard were in a room together on one occasion. She went to the room and knocked. Bossard came, and she asked him where he get the money he held in his hand. He said from Lewis, The day after the election Vance,

The day after the election Vance, Lewis and Bossard were in a room to-gether. On the table was some money and papers which she saw when she went to call Mr. Bessard, who was wanted at the telephone.

THE DEFENCE. Evidence as to agency of Bossard being concluded, the defence called witnesses to show Bossard was not considered an agent of the party. Mr. Bitzer, Bingeman, Moffatt and others swore they knew little or nothing about Bossard. W. J. Wollard swore he was approached by Bossard some time after the election who offered to skip town if the Grits would put up $400 to enable him to do so. In cross-examination by Mr. McPherson, as to why he took Thompson, of Whitby, down to Bossard's, he replied it was for the purpose of having a drink and show Thompson the town.

Vance, on being called, swore he gave Bossard no money at any time, for corrupt purposes, and denied in toto all charges to that effect.

Mr. Breithaupt gave evidence to the

Mr. Breithaupt gave evidence to the effect that he knew of no illegal act during the campaign, and had no special dealings with Bossard of any

FIGHTING BEGUN.

Such is the Report From the Free State.

Boers Commit an Overt Act in the Seizure of a Shipment of London, Thursday, Oct. 5. - A despatch from Bloemfontein says:-"The Free State Government publishes a telegram from Boshof stating that the British forces have crossed the border and that fighting has commenced. Another telegram says the troops have crossed the border, but that no fighting has yet occurred. The Government discredits the report." Other telegrams represent that a Beer attack upon Natal is expected at any moment, but assert that Commandant Gen. Joubert has threatened to shoot any man who moves without orders. GOLD SEIZED.

GOLD SEIZED.

The most sensational news from South Africa is a reiteration of yesterday's report of the acquisition by the Transvaal authorities of £500,000 in gold, which was on the way to Cape Town from Johannesburg. The confirmation of the story comes from two sources. The Cape Argus asserts that the Boers made the seizure at Vereeniging, the amount being the week's shipment of gold on the way from the Rand to Cape Town, and forwarded the treasurer to Pretoria. The report is also confirmed by a cablegram received by a mining company in London from their representative, which is to the effect that the train upon which he was travelling from Johannesburg to Cape Town was held up and looted by Boers, who secured £300,000 in gold.

A CASUS BELLE. Witness ex-tys manipular act of war.

No absolute confirmation is obtainpresented, giving the British until Thursday night to retire from the vi-cinity of the Transvaal frontier. Any refusal will be taken as a deciaration

DAILY AND WEEKLY

IRELAND GROWING SATISFIED.

It is a noteworthy fact that not in a hundred years has Ireland been so tranquil as at present. This is due to the more friendly spirit which has sprung up in the last year, and which is growing more marked daily. Several things are responsible for this changed state of affairs. In the first place, Gerald Balfour, the Secretary for Ireland, has become exceedingly popular among the Irish. Secondly, the Irish local Government bill, which went into effect last spring, and by which the Irish can elect their own county councils and run their own local affairs, has proven unexpectedly successful.

A third reason is that the Irish are forming mipanies and associations for the growing of farm produce, such as butter, eggs and poultry, to supply the English markets. Similar movements have been started before, but have always failed for lack of capital, which now the hitherto much-hated landlords are furnishing. Once well organized, and with the Irish agricultural spirit thoroughly aroused, Ireland can alone almost entirely supply the English market with produce, which in the past has been imported from Brittany, Denmark and Russia.

A fourth reason is that Englishmen visited by thousands of Englishmen, who seem to have just discovered it is an ideal place for a vacation. The railway service is greatly improved, and the hotels are much better. The reception of Englishmen was kindly in every direction, and the junket made by a committee of Parliament during the Easter vacation through Ireland has had an excellent effect.

So, with Ireland actually becoming happy and contented, and its subjects in all other parts of the world satisfied for the time being with their lot England is happily free to devote its entire energies to the Boers.

The Venezuelan award is satisfactory to the London Advertiser. Venezuela has yet to be heard from, and then if she has no kick coming it is to be presumed that the award will go.

Of the territory in dispute the arbitrators have awarded Great Britain five-sixths and Venezuela one-sixth. This is the same territory President Cleveland almost plunged the United ish flying, squadron to bring him to

The Chatham barristers who have been created Queen's Counsel will honor the title more than the title honors them. If all those who have been created Q. C.'s deserved the distinction, if distinction it can now be called as much as J. B. Rankin and Johr A. Walker, this province would not now be overrun with so many titled legal nobility that they decorate if they do not ornament everything from a justice mill up to the supreme

The following is from the Windsor Record. We don't know who the Record stole it from, but it contains a good deal of truth:

"Keep 'Em Going." One step won't take you very far, You've got to keep on walking; One word won't tell what you are-You've got to keep on talking; One inch won't make you very tall, You've got to keep on growing; One little "ad" won't do it all-You've got got to keep 'em going.

The Dewey celebration in New York is estimated to have cost $20,000,000 Hero worship comes high, but the people must have it. And the money might have been spent on a less deserving man .- Exchange.

Many unthinking people will exclaim, "Oh, what a waste of money which might have been put to some good use" To what better use could money be put than by being circulated for labor, necessaries, etc., in connection with such a demonstration. This $20,000,000 came from people who could afford it. It could not be given in charity, or the distribution of such a sum would simply be demoralizing. And if the contributors did not spend their money in this way to the benefit directly and indirectly of thousands of wage earners they would simply keep it in the bank, doing no one any good.

JESS AND THE BEAR.

Bruin Saved the Man but Lost his Life in the Bargain.

This Very Truthful Tale has been Hand ed Down for Many Generations

There is a story connected with the last bear killed about here which fond grandpapas often told the children seated on their knees. It appears that the celebrated "Uncle Jess" had spent all his life as a trapper and hunter, and never a mishap had befallen him. But one night, in his anxiety to shake a coon, he climbed the shell of an old

As he began shaking the neighboring limb the stump to which he was clinging gave way, and he sank feet first into the hollow center. All efforts to escape were impossible, and the pious hunter had resolved to pass the remainder of his life in prayer, when toward night his supplications were interrupted. Looking up, he beheld the eye of a bear looking straight down

Then the animal turned about and backed down the inside of the stump. Hardly knowing what to do, Uncle Jess put up his hands in protection and grasped the bear. Now it was the bear's turn to be frightened. He scrambled up again, while the hunter hung on for his life and was carried with safety to the top.

Here the bear's real trouble began, for with so heavy a weight it was impossible for him to turn about and back down, so he tried it head first, but that was no easy matter to the beast, and he fell with a heavy thud to the ground below and was killed, while Uncle Jess went home and told the truthful tale, to be handed down to his children.-Springfield Republic-

Siam's Million Priests.

According to a lecture on Siam dellyered recently in London by John Bartlett, that country has more than its share of priests. The population of Siam, he said, amounted to about 6,000,000, and a curious feature was the large preponderance of Chinese, more especially in Bangkok. The Chinese practically controlled all the trade and commerce of the place. There were hardly any Slamese merchants. One million of the people were in the priesthood. He had traveled up river through the main territory of Siam for a distance of 350 miles, and during the journey it had been absolutely impossible to get out of sight of a temple. In each temple there were from 10 to 300 priests, supported entirely by the people. Of the 1,000,000 priests only 300,000 were actively engaged. The remaining 700,000 were passing through the priesthood.

Paper and String.

Franklin's time honored and cumulative adage, "For want of the nail the shoe was lost, for want of the shoe the horse was lost, for want of the horse the man was lost," should have the addendum of twine and paper bags put to it to make it complete.

Few things are more aggravating than to be ready to tie up a package and find no string, or to carry a few apples, oranges, eggs or bulbs a short distance and find no bag to hold them. Strings should always be wound in a ball and kept ready for immediate use where the family may find them, and paper bags, as soon as emptied, should be folded neatly and laid in a drawer for use as needed.

Boys of the Olden Time. Boys have always been boys. There is no doubt that Shem and Ham pitched coppers or played jackstraws on the shady side of the ark, while Noah, who couldn't find them, had to feed the stock himself, or that David held up two fingers to Jonathan when he saw him across the block and that they therewith went in swimming in the Jordan against the express prohibition of their mothers.—Minneapolis Journal

SELLING HAY.

How Its Removal From the Farm Alse Removes the Fertility of the Homestead-Plain Figures.

A reader of The Practical Farmer writes: "I saw some time ago a statement in The Agricultural Epitomist that in selling off the farm a ton of clover hay the farmer removed $8.20 worth of fertility from the farm, and of timothy hay $5.45 worth. Are these estimates correct? If so, then when we are selling clover hay at $4 a ton, and timothy hay at $5 to $6, we are doing a losing business. Will you kindly give your views on this point in the P.F.?"

point in the P.F.?"

The figures given were correct in years past, and may be new where fertilizers are bought at retail, to this extent: You could not buy in market the nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash contained in one ton of clover hay for less than about $8,20. After the clover decayed in the ground the plant food from it would be just as good as that from fertilizers. In addition, the clover would furnish considerable vegetable matter, which is valuable. The nitrogen in the clover would not be as quickly available as nitrate of soda, where one wanted the fertility for some quick growing crop; but for erdin-ary farm crops in rotation, like corn, oats, wheat and clover, the plant food in one ton of the clover was worth as much to the farmer as $8.20 worth of fertilizers containing the same constituents in the same proportion. You see there are many things to think of. Clover hay contains a good quantity of nitrogen and potash and little phosphoric acid. New if your soil particularly needed phosphoric acid, and was rich in nitrogen and potash, why the clover hay might not have a manuri-al value to you of $8.20; that is, returning it to the land might not enable you to get any such amount out of it within two or three years.

But now I have said above that the manurial value of the clover was $8.20. Has there been any change? Yes, slight one, because the constituents that go to make fertilizers are cheaper. This makes the fertilizing value of clover sightly less, say about $7 a ton. It might be a little less yet if you bought your nitrogen, phosphoric acid and pot-ash at first hand and did your own mixing. Of course the fertilizer men will sometimes say that the plant food in the fertilizer is a great deal more valuable than the same amount in clover. It is human nature. They want to make you buy their goods. Sometimes, doubt-less, they do not know any better. But there is not a high scientific authority in the land who will not tell you, if he is disinterested, that the above statements are essentially true and fair.

Now of course one can sell hay for a good many years from rich land without noticing much difference. And he may say, "it's all bosh about so much plant food going off the farm. Why doesn't my farm run down if this is true?" Well, it will, my friend, just as surely as the years roll round, unless you make up the loss in plant food and vegetable matter in some way. There are plenty of sections where they have found this out by sad experience. I would not sell clover hay at $4 a ton or $8 either. I would not the plant food back into the seil and turn it into something that would bring more dollars and take less fertility off the farm. It is nearly always best te feed out the clover hay, saving all the manure from loss, and then put the manure back on the land. Wisely managed, one ought to be able to get §4 a ton out of it by feeding certainly, and then he would have three-fourths of the manurial value at least left in the manure. If all farmers would deal with these matters from a pusine standnoint the price of hay would soon be up where it should be. Of course towns and cities must have hay, but they ought not to have it at a price that makes the farmer for nothing and board himself. Surely no eastern farmer ought to sell hay at any such prices as given above. You can do a great deal better. And you must, or see harder and harder times. Much of the land in the east has got to the point where the owner must conside what he is seiling off, as it has to be put back. Feed out the bay, unless the price is very high, the clover in particular. Save all the urine by having a cement floor. Don't let the manure heat or leach in the yard. Thus you will save all th nitrogen and petash, and then you can buy some presphoric acid, which is cheap, if needed.—T. B. Terry, in Practical

One Farmer's Method of Turning Short Without Backing.

The illustration explains the form of our grain rack for turning short. The FRONT ceams are made closer together at the front end so the wheels can turn under the load without locking, allowing us to turn as short as when the bed is on. A 2x4 scantling is fitted on the rack in front, which just fits the standards to hold the rack in place. The front corners are rounded to keep from hitting the horse in going down hill.—Benjamin Williams, in Practical Farming.

Don't Keep Fleeces Over Long. Something is very often lost by keep-ing the fleeces over too long. Wool dries quickly and then becomes harsh to the hand, and thus loses something in selling value. It becomes weak and leses its native elasticity, and this is another detriment. It is the moisture in it which Phone 1 set well a little damp. TRANSPIAZU WITH PAIN.

A Lawyer Explains What he Says is a Popular Mistake

The Idea That Professional Men Have an Easy Time.

"People who work with their nanus especially farmers, are apt to think that professional men have an easy time of it," said a lawyer of this city. "It's an amusing mistake. The farme stops at 'sundown, and the laborer works ten hours at the outside. The average professional man works from 12 to 14 hours day in and day out, all the year around. Often, at a pinch, he will work from 16 to 20 hours for several days in succession, and he will work when he is sick or suffering severe physical pain, something the manual toiler wouldn't dream of. Of course he takes short intervals of rest, like everybody else. The human engine isn't capable of absolutely sustained endeavor for over an hour at a stretch. "Watch a day laborer, who seems to be plodding along like a machine, and you'll find that he really rests more than half the time. He looks at some well dressed doctor, lawyer, broker or man of affairs and says to I 'Oh, you doggoned lazy rascal! If you only had to work like me? The truth is that the chap he envies is putting an amount of concentration and continued energy into his daily toil that would kill the man who works with his hands alone in less than a week.

"I don't mean this as any reflection on the laborer, who is also no doubt doing his level best. I simply mean that the demands on brain production are a third again as severe as the demands on muscle production. For sheer staying qualities there is nothing in the world that equals the nervous, high strung, frail looking modern professional man."-New Orleans Times Democrat.

MISS BASKERVILLE'S LECTURE. Rev. J. J. Ross presided at the missionary meeting at William Street Bap tist church last night. After intro-ductory devotional exercises John Reeve rendered a fine tenor solo, which was followed by an interesting address by Miss Baskerville, returned missionary to India. The lady described the people, their habits, castes and cusms, dwelling largely upon the state of the female population. She made a strong appeal for greater interest in missions. Miss Baskerville was draped in the native costume and exhibited many interesting Indian curios.

The Columbia Leads Flost of the Way but the Boats may not Finish to the Time Limit.

C. P. R. Special.

New York, Oct. 5 .- The first race of he series for the America cup, which was postponed from Tuesday, the course being 15 miles to leeward and return. The compass signals were hoisted at 10.30 on the committee boat; the flags sent up to the triatic stay were D. C. I. According to the New York Yacht Club code, this meant that the course was to be southeast by east, fifteen miles and return. The wind at this time was very light from northeast, so that the boats had to start dead before the wind. JOCKEYING FOR A START.

At 10.45 the signal gun was fired At 10.45 the signal gun was fired on the committee boat, the blue peter set and a red ball run up the triatic stay. When the gun was fired the Columbia and Shamrock were to the weather of the starting line with their forestaysails lowered. As soon as the first signal had been given, the Shamsek triumed sheets and loafed Shamrock trimmed sheets, and loafed along in an easterly direction until well past the committee tug. Putting her tiller to starboard, Cap-rain Wringe headed his boat more up into the wind, and finally tacked around the tug, and with sheets still well aft, boom to port, worked slowly down across the line, leaving the lightship to starboard. The Columbia did not follow her rival around the tug, going back across the line, leaving the regatta committee boat to starboard. It was Captain Barr's intention to get up to the weather of her rival, if possible, so after the Sham-rock, had rounded the tug, the Colum-bia crossed her wake, and coming about, followed her down across the

THE BRITISH REPORTED ON THE RUN.

London, Oct. 5.—The Daily Telegraph publishes a despatch from Newcastle, Natal, which says: "The Boer advance began to-day with a general movement of artillery. The Boers are occupying Laing's Nek nightly, and now hold the mountains to the southwest of Volksrust. There are no British troops nearer than Ladysmith, and preparations are being made to abandon Natal from the frontier to Glencoe. The inhabitants of Newcastle met to-day and decided not to attempt to defend the town in the event of a Boer advance in force. Gen. Simons is prepared to evacuate within 24 hours. The people are crowding the trains for Ladysmith."

October, the Best Month of the Year

The reasons are, the coming winter's claims must be met by warm comfortable clothing and bedding wear or sickness and death ensue. These claims of health cannot be denied, and these imperitive demands enduce the energy forecast and hustle of Northern nations contrasted with Southern. October is a month when wise people find their way to GORDON'S where every facility will be found to meet the season's demands for the safety and comfort of the multitude, or the elegance or ease of fashion's favored few. We thank our many friends for so generously increasing our September sales over preceeding years, and will look for and seek to deserve just as large (yes larger) advance in our October receipts. AT POPULAR PRICES. AT POPULAR PRICES.

The day of the high priced comedy attraction is passed, all the city theatres having fallen in line. As a result one sees an excellent show now for half the price it formerly required. But many of the attractions in coming to the one-night stand towns raise their prices. This is an injustice to theatre patrons and should be remembered by those who attend the plays. Attention is called by Mahara Bros., who come here on Saturday, Oct. 7th, to the fact that their attraction played the Chicago engagement in August at the same prices as those advertised here.

Or Traced By a Valentine

The blood surged into her face, her whole frame trembled.

Fixing her beautiful eyes full upon his, she murmured a word or two which was inaudible to all save him, but there was no mistaking the re proachfulness of her tone.

He answered lightly, and with laugh. She whispered a further word or two and the blood mounted to his brow, while a look of hot displeasure fired his eyes. He dropped her hand and stood beside the window, looking out rather moodily. Marjorie slipped quietly away. She felt she was not wanted. Whether anyone noticed her departare or not, no one tried to stop hernot even Madeline ..

She went downstairs with a troubled heart. For one thing, she didn't want to go to Mrs. Thornton.

She would rather have remained at be in the all too fascinating company of Charles Hyde.

And the other thing, the thing that troubled her most of all, was that she ous hole covered over with them. was certain Madeline had meant to traordinary vehemence:

"Marjorie, never, never love unless you are certain the man is worthy of you, and that he loves you with a passion equal to your own. If you do you would be happier dead!"

> CHAPTER VII. In the Wood.

As she went through the hall she put on her hat and cloak. She would go into the wood for a few minutes, she thought.

Her mind was in such a tumult that It made her fevered and restless. She longed to feel the fresh, frosty air blowing on her cheeks and brow. She crossed the garden at the back of the house, and walked quickly up the hill to the wood. She had barely reached its outskirts when a hurrying step behind her made her turn. Charles Hyde was coming up the bill with eager looks. He was scarce half a dozen yards away. She felt the color rush into her cheeks, and then as suddenly retreat.

Her heart beat very fast. She could not doubt he had followed her purposely. If she had doubted it, his first words would have told her the truth. "I saw you from the window," he said, quite frankly, as he came up to her, "and I came after you. You don't mind, Marjorie?"

And he looked so frank and winning as he asked the question, gazing fully into her eyes the while, that Marjorie could not but say "N

A moment ago, Madaline's vague insinuations against him had had the power to fill her mind with painful doubts, but now, as she looked at him, all her doubts were gone-chased away in an instant by his sunny smile. Not that she accused Madaline of falseness-no, not even in her most secret thoughts.

She believed Miss Hyde was simply mistaken in her cousin's character. She believed that she, loving the elder brother as she did, and finding him unworthy of her love, took it for granted that the young one must be like him, and hence wished to save her friend from a doom which had already fallen on herself.

When a girl is in love is it likely she will believe anything to the prejudice of the man of her choice, so long as there is the tiniest loophole by which she can escape such belief?

It is not likely; and poor Marjorie was already deep in love with this young man of the smiling lips and sunny eyes. Madeline's warning had come too

As the two entered the wood, they met a tall, handsome young man, of seven or eight and twenty. His face was clean shaven, save for a fair moustache. He had fine eyes, of a dark greyish color, and his bearing was unmistakably that of a gentleman.

There was a gun on his shoulder, a dog at his heels. Charles Hyde accosted him with a cheery "Good morning," as he passed.

He acknowledged the greeting with a bow which was not merely cold but haughty, but which bordered on the contemptuous.

The next moment, however, his glance fell on Marjorie, and, as though involuntarily, he raised his hat with the most perfect courtesy. "Who is he?" asked Marjorie, eager-

She had not chanced to notice that cool little nod, and so felt quite a friendly interest in the good looking

"Sir Edward Mortimer." "Sir Edward Mortimer," repeated Majorie, remembering she heard that name more than once before.

Mr. Hyde had suggested that Sir Edward Mortimer should be invited, with others, to a terch-light skating party on St. Valentine's day.

And again, it was Sir Edward's house which had been broken into by burglars so recently.

She turned to look after him, and found to her confusion, that he was leaning against a tree, and looking after her.

She and Hyde went on together, not speaking much, but walking in that kind of happy silence which often falls upon two people who love each other, Denelands-anywhere where she could, but have not yet confessed their love. The wood paths were full of fallen leaves.

Marjorie set her foot in a treacher-She wrenched her ankle so severewarn her against this very Charles ly that she would have fallen had not Hyde when she had said, with such ex- ner companion supported her with his strong arm tree and she sat down; but when he looked at her he was alarmed to see how pale she was. "You are ill! You are hurt!" he cried. "No; only a little faint," she murmured. "It was the sudden shock, I think. I shall be better in a moment.

"Lean on me," he said again, more tenderly still, and as he spoke he put his arm round her waist and laid her head against his shoulder. So very sweet it looked there-the deep violet eyes seeming larger and and more fustrous than ever by reason of the delicate paleness of her cheeks. Charles Hyde could not resist the temptation to caress that sweet face with his fingers, while he murmured, softly-"Darling! are you better now?" That word had power to call the blood back to her cheeks in a rosy tide. "Yes," she whispered, shyly, and looked away from him, veiling her eyes with their dark lashes and white drooping lids.

Emboldened by these signs, he drew her to him a little more closely. "Majorie, will you be my darling? You know I love you, don't you, dear? I couldn't help speaking when I saw you so white and faint. Forgive me if I spoke too soon. Will you, Majorie?" have nothing to forgive," whispered Majorie, raising her eyes to his for one brief moment, while her heart throbbed with an exquisite joy.

"Little love! little darling! my precious little girl!" cried Hyde, in a sort of tender rapture. "Then we belong to each other. I may seal our compact, mayn't I?" And his look was so tenderly beseeching that Majorie must have had a harder heart than ever beat in a woman's bosom, if she had refused him the boon he asked-her premission to press a lover's kiss upon her lips. Only one he took.

She noticed that, and all her woman's soul rose up to do him reverence, because he so respected her that he would take no advantage of the fact that her weakness had forced her to lie-a precious burden-in his arms. "How could Madeline have so mistaken his character?" she thought, with a thrill of proud delight in his virtues. How different the conduct of the elder brother would have been under such circumstances!

And yet Madeline could love him, and feel nothing but mistrust and dislike for this other, who was so honorable, and good, and true.

The further conversation of the two it is needless to repeat. Only lovers would feel much interested in it, and they can imagine what was said without being told. After a few minutes, Majorie's foot was sufficiently better for her to be able to resume her walk-of course, with the support of her companion's They had much to say, and they enjoyed the saying of it immensely. It was not until they were returning home that Marjorie thought of telling her lover of her intentions to go to Mrs. Thornton as soon as that lady arrived in England. She did not tell him the true reason of this intentionthat Madeline had besought her to go. She thought it would be scarcely fair to her friend to do so. "Mrs. Thornton has written saying how glad she will be to have me," she said, simply. "And I think-I think I would rather go."

He seemed surprised; but he did not attempt to gainsay her. Nay, on the contrary a look of something very like relief appeared for a moment on his

"And when do you think of going, dearest?" he asked. "In about a month. Mrs. Thornton will be home by then." "Very well. We shall see."

"Shall see what?" she asked, clasping his arm a little closer, and looking up at him as though he were an oracle, as, indeed, he was- to her. He smiled down at the bright, be-

"We snall see what we shall see: he retorted, enigmatically. "But some how I don't fancy you will go to Mrs. Thornton.'

CHAPTER VIII.

A Life For A Life. Madeline was downstairs again, and out of doors, in a day or two, apparently as well as before her illness, save that Marjorie fancied she noticed a peculiar restlessness in her.

She rarely remained seated for a long time, and was for ever changing her amusements or occupations. Whenever Edgar Hyde was present, she would fling herself into the conversation with an energy and liveliness which perfectly amazed Marjorie. Her wit was brilliant; her spirits eemed of the gavest.

"It is all to win his love-a last desperate effort to get back a heart which was never worth the having!" thought Marjorie, as she watched her. And she sighed, to think that Madeline, for all her noble nature, could be so weak. She was not perfectly at her ease with Miss Hyde just now. She had a guilty feeling that she was not being quite as open and frank as she would have liked to be

Charles Hyde had said to her, just as they were quitting the wood on that memorable day-

"Marjorie, we'll keep our own counsel for a little while." She had nodded, and acquiesced at the moment, not ill-pleased with the injunction; but since then it had pressed upon her rather uncomfortably. It made her feel a little guilty and conscience-stricken, especially when Madeline continued, as often she did, to vaguely hint that Charles Hyde was scarcely a proper object for her love.

faith in her lover to be shaken. No; she loved him too dearly, and was herself too true and loyal of soul

Not that Marjorie ever suffered her for that. Meantime, she grew daily more attached to the beautiful and-in her love, at any rate-unfortunate Madeline, and at length an incident occurred which bound her warm heart to her with more than ordinary affection and gratitude.

The frost still continuing, they went out to the lake together one afternoon for an hour's skating.

None of the gentlemen were at home they had gone to look at a horse which Edgar Hyde thought of purchasing, so the two girls were quite alone, and likely to remain so. For some time they pursued their healthful exercise with much enjoy-Madeline looked brilliantly beautiful in her sealskin cap and jacket, her cheeks flushed to a rich damask, her sparkling eyes as bright as stars. Marjorie was looking at her with adniration, and marveiling how Edgar Hyde could be so cold to her-tor cold he undoubtedly was. She was thinking of this so very earnestly that she forgot to notice her own progress across the ice. There was one part which was admittedly dangerous, and to this part, in her abstraction, she had skated. She was half-way across the treacher ous bit before she remembered where she was; and even then it was only an ominous cracking sound which aroused her to a sense of her danger. Alarmed, she tried to skate back into safety, but it was too late. The treacherous ice was breaking up in all directions. A piece of water two yards wide, and cold, and dark, and cruel, stretched itself between her and the firm ice on the other side. The piece on which she stood bent horribly beneath her weight. Another moment, and, with a pitful cry for help, she was engulfed in the

Madeline, who had danger with horror, skated up to the verge of the fatal spot, at the same time uttering loud cries for help. Marjorie's clothes had kept her from sinking as yet, but it was evident it was but a momentary reprieve. Unless help was given her speedily she would disappear beyond the reach of human aid.

White as death with agitation, Madeline knelt down at the very edge of the ice, and; regardless of the danger to herself, stretched out her hand to the drowning girl. In a moment the ice gave way beneath her weight, and she clutched at Marjorie, only to be drawn into the water with her.

If help had not been at hand, neither of the two would have emerged alive But the gardener had seen the accident, and was hurrying to the lake with a ladder, which was providentially

By the aid of this they were rescued and were removed to the house, pale and shivering indeed, but not seriously the worse for their wetting.

MRS. M. BEVIN,

A highly respected lady of Charlottetown, P. E. I., says that Laxa-Liver Pills helped her more than any other medicine she ever took.

Every day brings fresh testimony to the efficacy of Laxa-Liver Pills for disorders of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels. No one who has tried them but speaks a good word in their favor. They are small in size, do not gripe, sicken or weaken, and always produce the most satisfactory results. Wrs. Maggie Bevin, Charlottetown, P.E.I., has this to say about them: "For some time I was greatly troubled with Sick Headache and Constipation. I used one bottle of Laxa-Liver Pills and found that they helped me more than any remedy

I had ever taken."

If you are troubled with biliousness, sick headache, constipation, dyspepsia, heartburn, water brash, nausea, sour stomach, coated tongue, bad breath, blotches, sallow or muddy complexion, Laxa-Liver Pills will cure you quicker

Try them and be convinced.

A most successful remedy has been found for sexual weakness such as impotency, varicocele, shrunken organs, nervous debility, lost manhood, night emissions, premature discharge and all other results of self-abuse or excesses. It cures any case of the difficulty, never fails to restore the organs to full natural strength and vigor. The doc-tor who made this wonderful discovery wants to let every man know about it. He will therefore send the receipt, giving the various ingredients to be used, so that all men at a trifling expense can cure themselves. He sends the reipe free, and all the reader need do is to send his name and address to L. Knapp, M.D., 1710, Hull Bldg., Detroit, Mich., requesting the free recipe as re ported in this paper. It is a generous offer and all men ought to be glad to have such an opportunity.

FULL OF SNAKES.

Physicians Took Nine Reptiles From Woman's Stomach.

One of Them was Over Two Feet Lon - How She Swallowed Them.

Napoleon, Ohio, Oct. 4 .- It was thought that Mrs. Elizabeth Gehrken was laboring under an hallucination when she persisted that she was "full of snakes," but an operation that was performed upon the old lady proved that she knew what she was talking

More than a year ago, while drinking water which she had drawn from a well, Mrs. Gehrken claims to have swallowed a snake, which has caused her no end of trouble.

An emetic was administered a few days ago, which resulted in bringing forth a number of small snakes, with heads shaped like those of a fish. The aged lady persisted that all the snakes ere not removed.

A consultation was held by local physicians, and it was decided to perform an operation, which resulted in taking from the intestines nine snakes, the longest of which is two feet three inches and the smallest one seven inches, and the smallest one seven inches, and about half the size of the ordinary lead pencil about the thickest part of the body.

Dr. Frank Harrison, one of the ating surgeons, said: "Yes; we removed nine snakes, or something that resembled snakes, from Mrs. Gehrkn's stomach. These things are something new to me," picking up the jar in which the snakes had been placed intalcohol, "and I am unable to give you a name for them. They have eyestlike those of a fish, but a reguar snake body. We placed two or or three of them on the floor, and they ran around and wriggled like an or-dinary snake until they became chilled through and died. It is a most extra-ordinary case."

Interesting Description of the Alert Little Chipmunk.

Wherein He Differs from his Brother of the Trees, the Squirrel.

An acquaintance surprised me the other day by the question, "What is a chip-munk-how does he differ from a squirrel?" I thought everybody knew this gay sprite of the roadsides. He is a true squirrel, about the size of the common red one and of the same reddish tone, which, like the brother of the trees, is much brighter in winter than in summer, when the long, warm, handsome fur, suitable for cold weather and the nuptial time, is replaced by a warm weather suit of a cooler, shorter and paler sort. His distinguishing marks are two white stripes along the side of the back from the fore shoulder to the root of the tail, each bordered by a black line, making him the prettiest of our lesser quadrupeds and giving to him, as with erect ears and trailing, bushy tail he scuds along the fence or scampers in and out of a brush pile-for he is a true ground squirrel, rarely going even upon the trunk of a tree—an air of dandy pride and alertness that is most engaging. In the far west there are four lined and checkered

Our chipmunk is the familiar of the old stone walls, and where in some parts of the country these are disappearing the chipmunk is disappearing, too, while many a skunk and woodchuck also find themselves dispossessed.-Lippincott's.

Colds and Bare Hands,

Many people marvel why they suffer so frequently with cold in the head. The matter has puzzled even the omniscient doctor, and his only explanation was nclined that way.

Investigation shows, however, that it is all due to the hands. No matter how warmly you clothe the rest of the body, you readily catch cold if you leave the hands exposed.

The reason is very simple after all. Of course every one knows that the blood and blood vessels contribute a sort of hot water warming apparatus for the body. As the hands are more exposed than other parts, they receive a more liberal supply of the heating fluid. But this blood is immediately chilled and returned in an lcy state to the lungs. Here it sets up inflammation, with the natural consequences of congestion, which is commonly called cold. If you take care to wear gloves on any day that is rather chilly, it is astonishing what a lot of colds you will ward off.—Cincinnati En-

Wanted a Run For His Money.

An Austrian, coming up on a recent steamer, fell in with two sharpers, who led him into many wagers. They were so invariably successful that he became sus picious that they were "fixing" the bets but each new proposition was so tempting that he could not resist it. At last, as they approached the Golden Gate, he counted up the remnants of his roll.
"Gentlemen," he said to them, "I find

I have just $22 in American money left. Now, I will risk it all if you will name

The others were curious, and, knowing they could not lose much, consented, and asked what his proposition was. "It is this," he said. "I'll bet you $22 that I can yell louder than the ship's steam whistle. Of course I'll lose," he added, "but, by jingo, I know the whistle can't be fixed."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Slamese paupers and criminals are not cremated when they die, but taken to a temple, where their bodies are cut in three places and laid out in the temple inclosure, where they are devoured by pariah dogs and a flock of vultures kept there for that purpose.

of 12, each year bearing the name of seme animal. Persons born in years the animals of which are hostile must not marry. Thus a union between a man bern in the year of the tiger with a girl born in the year of the rabbit would be very unfortunate for her.

A woman never really knows the A woman never really knows the meaning of happiness and content until she is the mother of a healthy, happy child. The health of the child depends on the health of the mother, both before and after birth. Most all of woman's weakness and particularly the weakness that most strongly inly the weakness that most strongly in fluences the health of children, comes from some derangement or disease of the distinctly feminine organs. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will cure troubles of this nature. It gives strength to all the organs in-volved, lessens the pains of childbirth and insures the health of both mother and child.

PROTEIN AND MILK.

WHAT IS REQUIRED IN FEEDING DAIST COWS.

An Interesting Article Discusses the Raising of These Animals.

The scientists, says Hoard's Dairy man, tell us that it requires a daily allowance of seven-tenths of a pound of protein for the simple maintenance of 1,000 pound animal. In 20 pounds of milk there should be about eighttenth of a pound of casein, and hence, without allowance for the inevitable loss that must occur in changing the protein of the feed into the casein of the milk, we have a demand for one and one-half pounds of digestible protein. If the cow is expected to give more milk, she must have more pro-

It is largely immaterial to the cow where the protein comes from, provided she has the digestive capacity to eliminate it from the feed. We can find it in 25 pounds of clover hay, but only half of it in the same amount of timothy hay. One hundred and twenty-five pounds of oat straw would furnish one and one-half pounds of digestible protein, but it would take a good deal of other feed to enable the cow to digest so much straw.

We do not know any reason why soja beans, field peas and even alfalfa could not be profitably produced in New Hampshire. There is, in our minds, more doubt as to crimson clover. This must be sown in the late summer or early autumn, and it is questionable whether it would survive New England winter. If it will and is cut early, it will make excellent hay. The danger with crimson clover lies in letting the heads become ripe or nearly so. Too little is known of vetches, at least by us, to justify the putting forth of suggestions. Things of this sort may very likely be tried in an experimental way for a year or two and thus their adaptability to the peculiar ocal conditions determined. The question as to which is the better cow for the farmer has attached to it irrelevant conditions. The cow whose milking qualities have been properly developed, if of good constitution and adapted to the conditions for grazing, etc., in the locality, is always the better cow. There is no style of breeding, bringing up or care that will give us a cow that can transmute carbohydrates into casein. As well attempt to make sugar from salt. A balanced ration does not necessarily imply the use of concentrated feeds, but they are recommended because it is difficult in any other way to supply the cow with sufficient material to enable her to utilize her milk elaborating organs to their normal and economical

AN ODD PHOTOGRAPH.

The Ship Scylla's Name as Written by her Crew

Captain Percy Scott, of the Scylla, Adopts a Somewhat Unique Method.

The British cruiser Scylla has just returned to England and paid off. During her three years' service she has earned an enviable reputation for general serv-iceability and has been especially noteworthy for the splendid record her crew has made for marksmanship. Captain Percy Scott, the captain of the Scylla, naturally considered that the name of the ship ought to be "writ large," and he proceeded to carry out that idea as shown in the photograph here reproduced.

It was taken by Captain Scott during the Scylla's stay at Standia Island, off the town of Candia, in Crete. The letters were first of all whitewash ed on the hard black rock on a steep hill, the length and breadth of the letters being bout 90 feet by 30 feet. The ship, with a complement of 275 hands on board, was then "abandoned," as in evolution. The whole crew pulled shore in the ship's boats, seven in num ber, and seated themselves on the letters under the superintendence of the captain, who was lying off the shore in the steam

The ship's name was then formed as follows: Letter S, officers and chief petty officers; C and Y, seamen; L L, stokers; A, marines.
All being arranged and the word given

Captain Scott made the photographo from a point about 100 yards off shore.

Commissioners Will not Act on Ald. Cowan's Charges.

Tenders for Coal Called for-Basement of the Police Station to be put in a Sanitary Condition.

There were present at this morning's session of the City Police Commissioners, the chairman, Judge Houston, Judge Bell, Mayor Smith and Chief of Police Young.

On motion of Judge Bell and Mayor Smith it was decided to advertise for tenders for coal to be in within a week, goal to be waighed on the town scales.

harges against the whole police to the effect that it was of no use. These had been reported in the press, and he thought it was advisable to have the clerk officially notify him to formulate his charges before the per tribunal. The chairman said he referred to Ald. Cowan. Judge Bell—I would pay no more attention to them than to the ordinary frothings of a man on the street. He has no business to make charges if he does not place them before the proper tribunal and cannot substantiate them.

Mayor Smith said he was not pres ent at the meeting when Ald. Cowan made his charges, but from his knowledge of the police department he did not think they could be justified. Judge Houston suggested that the clerk notify Ald. Cowan asking him what grounds, if any, he had for his statements and that the commissioners would be pleased to have them. ers would be pleased to have them submitted to the tribunal for investigation. Judge Bell was opposed to taking any notice of the statements.

"I find it best," he said, "to pay no attention to irresponsible talk. The way to formulate charges is to bring them before the commission."
The other members finally adopted this view of the matter.

AN AT HOME.

Last evening the Christian Endeav-or Society of Holy Trinity church gave an at home to the congregation in the school house. The meeting was well attended and the program was great-ly enjoyed, as were the excellent rely enjoyed, as were the excellent re-freshments served at the conclusion of the concert. Messrs. Frank Phelps and Milton Fox gave a splendid in-strumental duet of their own compos-ing. Miss Ada Ross rendered a beau-tiful alto solo, the rendition of which was heartily applauded. Miss Baras-sin recited several selections with her accustomed charming grace. Her accustomed charming grace. Her rendition of Kentucky Philosophy was exceedingly clever, and won many plaudits from the audience. Miss Mabel Edmondson, gave a capital instrumental solo, that quite captivated the assemblage. Miss Blanche Baxter whose ability as a singer is so well known to the citizens at large, sang several solos in her clear soprano voice. Another feature of the pro-gram was a solo by Mrs. R. V. Bray, which was much appreciated.
