

in the clothes best, smartest. eliable and best the money he ey Clothing is r care than any Ready-to-Wear uits are satis-

lard Twisted Diagstyles, $7.90

Quality Tweed gns, finished latest th,equal $11.00

ION SUITS.

made and lemands that.

on Suits, in All. pleated back and and lined farmer's years. $3,29

7 Co. LIMITED mes Street Montreal

tural instruction a sum ancs was expended by 1883; in 1902 the ed to this purpose was s. Between the years 01 the Catholic Govlied to this special ular education a total 16 million francs.

er of social legislation ies perhaps the first e, and this pre-eminto the zeal and acti-tholic party in Parlia. ughout redound uise of h

Vol. LIII., No. 45

An English Protestant clergyman

writes in the "Contemporary Review"

low him through all his speculations

Writ. The entire subject may be ex pressed in one quotation from an

eminent Catholic pen: "One Church

will preserve the Holy Book in , the future, as it has done in the past;

the other churches will develop into

'higher criticism,' and will have no

we to write columns we could not convey more than does this simple

paragraph; and the most important

Bible.'

an article headed "The Future of the

It is not necessary to fol-

THE TRUE WITNESS AND CATHOLIC CHRONICLE

IS PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY THE TRUE WITNESS P. & P. CO., Limited.

s Busby Street, Montreal, Canada. P. O. Box1188.

EPISCOPAL APPROBATION.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

"FUTURE OF THE BIBLE." - | contributed one million, five hundred regarding what the years to come other wealthy citizens will subscribe have in store for the Book of Holy the other half of the cost. It will be use for or belief in the Bible, except thy of the millionairels attention, it for its mere literary value.". Were is that of erecting temples to. the thousand dollars to assist in building

a Cathedral-that is expected to cost

three million dollars-and that will be composed of the two richest pa-

the grandest and richest Cathedral in the West. It will stand on the summit of St. Anthony's Hill, in the heart of the aristocratic section of the city. The work of construction will commence this summer. Certainly, if ever there were an object wor-

glory of God. No doubt the people of St. Paul will highly appreciate

this gift and that Mr. Hill's genero-rishes in the city of St. Paul.

The

MONTREAL, SATURDAY, MAY 14, 1904.

LOCAL NOTES.

80B8CRIPTION PRICE-City of Montreal (delivered), $1.50; other parts of Manda, $1.00; United States, $1.00; Newfoundland, $1.00; Great Britain, Ireland ad France, $1.50; Belgium, Italy, Germany and Australia, $2.90. Terms, payable in ST. AGNES PARISH. - On Sunday last, the first parochial Mass was celebrated in the new parish of St. advance. All Communications should be addressed to the Managing Director, "Taux Wir-erss" P. & P. Co., Limited, P. O. Box 1138. Agnes. Rev. Father Casey, the parish priest, sang the Mass, assisted by deacon and sub-deacon. The large "If the English-speaking Catholics of Montreal and of this Province consulted their best interests, they would soom make of the "True Wilness one of the most properous and generical Catholics papers in this country. I heartily bless those who encourage this excellen "+PAUL, Archbishop of Montreal." hall of the Olier school, on Roy street, was fitted up as a temporary chapel, or Church. The choir was led by Mr. P. McCaffrey, and the music was of a very fine character. It was a novel scene that Father Mc-Phail, C.SS.R. looked out upon when he stepped to the altar rail to deliver the first sermon to the new congregation. He referred to the great difference there is between faith and opinion. He spoke of supernatural faith, that special gift of God to man, and then of practical faith. which is the hand-maid of the former. This moment, in the life of a new parish, when every effort must be put forth to build up the structure both spiritually and materially, is one in which persons who enjoy the blessings of supernatural faith have an opportunity, and a duty, of practising faith in its practical form. In the course of the afternoon committee of parishioness was formed to select a site for the new Church. Several are spoken of. It will be either on St. Denis street. Laval avenue, the corner of City Hall and Duluth Avenues, or on Esplanade avenue. A report is expected on next Sunday.

ST. JAMES THE GREATER. -Last Sunday, at the Cathedral, during the High Mass, Rev. G. Gauthier, as parish priest of the new parish of St. James the Greater, was proclaimed as such to the congregation, and in consequence made his public profession of faith. The Mass was celebrated by Rev. Abbe Lecoq, the worthy and beloved Superior of St. Sulpice. His Grace the Archbishop preached a sermon, in which he clearly set forth the reasons for the erection of the new parish. He said that he had hopes that within the near future the Cathedral would be erected into a Basilica. In a city like Montreal, in view of the rapid growth and development of the city, it would be impossible not to change with the times, and to arrange affairs to correspond with the increasing popula-Heretofore the faithful had little to pay, as the Sulpicians built their churches and administered the parishes. The Cathedral itself, is a work due to the entire diocese. The ordinary revenues, from pews, collections and such like sources, will suffice to keep the parish and to pay interest on the $100,000 debt still The Redemptorists due. As His Grace simply lends his Cathedral for parish purposes, it will not be necessary to elect ' church-wardens. It is firmly believed that, from the start, the new parish will e a great success.

. . .

Fairies-G. Campbell, A. Gallagher V. Gallagher. Maypole.-G. Campbell, M. Chris-tian, K. Fitzgerald, A. Foley, A

M. E. McMorrow, M. O'Brien. Chorus -M. Barry, E. Belware, G. Boyle, R. Burns, N. Caniff, A Carey, C. Considine, F. Conquest, M. Kindellan, P. Klock, K. Leonard, E. Mc-Gown, M. O'Donnel, N. Ryan, L. Welsh, M. Cooney, M. Christian, M. A. Craig, M. Dempsey, M. Donnelly, K. Fitzgerald, B. Fitzpatrick, Foley, M. J. Lappin, M. Leonard, M. Lavin, M. O'Brien, G. Pitts, Thompson, L. Wyer, J. Gregory, S Guinea, L. Harkins, M. Harrigan, M. Healey, S. Hughes, A. Kearns, A Lynch, L. Mitchell, S. O'Brien, F Reddy, A. Webb

PART II.

Instrumental Duet, "Irish Airs," Miss A. Siviers and Miss M. Kenehan. Song, "Savourine," B. Slattery. Song and Tableau, "Ora pro nobis," Miss M. Cooney and Miss - J. Gregory.

Dumo-bell Exercises-M. Callaghan, M. Campbell, M. Dewar, K. Finlay, A. Fitzpatrick, M. Hagan, N. Higgins, M. Hyland, S. Kannon, Kearns, A. Manning, M. McCarthy, R. McMorrow, A. McArthy, C. Meehan, E. O'Brien, M. Peachy, M. Por wer, A. Riley, N. Rossiter, R. Scullion, N. Stewart Chorus, "The Dear Little . Sham-

ock." Bar-bell Exercises. Instrumental Duet. "Dance of the Sunflowers," Miss M. Dewar and Miss third victim has fallen. B. Slattery. Recitation and Tableau, "Joan of Arc," Miss Annie Manning, Song, "Spirit of Love," Miss M. Munday. Fann Drill-Misses B. Slattery (captain) G. Campbell, M. Cummings, M. Donnelly, B. Fitzpatrick, A. Foley, M. A. Gallagher, L. Harkins, O'Brien, A. Siviers, L. Wyer, M. Hughes, M. Lavin, P. Klock, Agatha Lynch, Alice Lynch, E. McGown, D. McMillan, M. O'Brien, N. Ryan, A. Webb.

Chorus, "Away to the Fields," Song, "Where the Swanee River Flows," Miss Ella Wilkinson. Farce-"No Cure no Pay," Mrs Languish, Fannie Reddie; Alice (her daughter) Stella Guinea; Aunt Midget, Mary Munday; Lucy Aiken, E. McGown; Susan Dean, P. Klock; Jenny Carter, L. Wyer; Bridget, M. A. Gallagher.

Chorus, "Good Night." "God Save Ireland."

At Brandon.

M. Peterson, B. Slattery, E. Wil- fit of the Poles and Ruthenians who A family so essentially Irish could form the most numerous element in not have the parish. It is very interesting to Catholic. hear the Polish Vespers sung by all the congregation on Sunday after-noon. Father Lietaert and Father Lynch, Agatha Lynch, D. McMillan, Decoene attend outlying missions.

(By Our Own Correspondent)

This has been a broken week in Parliament. The new batch 10 amendments, brought in at the last moment, by the Opposition, to the Grand Trunk Pacific Bill, were not considered until Wednesday. Thursday being a holiday, there remains understood that little or nothing, in the way of a general advancement of stituency so near the general elecbusiness can be attempted in a week tions. so badly cut up. Some progress was made with private legislation, but, after all, in the mass of matter before Parliament, it was not "a drop ments were never more numerous, Every Monday night there is a gala reception in the Speaker's apartments gives a dinner. And while all these gay things are taking place, there is a shadow of another character over the place. The Angel of Death has hovered around the Senate and Commons for two weeks or more, and a Last it was Senator Reid, of British Columbia, and Mr. McCreary, member of Parliament from Winnipeg, who died. This week the Hon. Senator Dever, of St. John, New Brunswick, was the one to go. While the bell was ringing, on Monday, that summons the legislators to duty, at three o'clock, the hearse was under the main tower awaiting the remains of the , dead Senator. It was a cross-topped hearse, which told that a Catholic had departed. As deceased was a man of very exceptional importance, your correspondent will devote special paragraph to his life.

LATE SENATOR DEVER. - The ate Senator James Dever was 79 years of age at the time of his death, having celebrated his birthday on the 2nd May this year. He was appointed to the Senate of Canada in 1868, and was, consequently, with the exception of Senator Wark, the oldest member of the Upper House James Dever was a native of Ireland, a Catholic, and a splendid type of the true Irish gentleman. He was born at Ballyshannon, on the 2nd His wedding, which took place in May, 1825. At an early age he came to Canada with his parents, who settled at St. John, New Bruns-Referring to a recent visit made by Rev. Father Drummond, S.J., to tively young age he launched into

PRICE FIVE CENTS

not have been other than profoundly

HIS_SUCCESSOR. -While nothing positive has yet been settled, there is every probability that Hon. John Costigan, will be called to the Senate to replace the late Senator Dever. There are many reasons why the choice should fall on him. Since Confederation he has represented the county of Victoria, N.B.; in the Commons. He is a New Brunswick man in every sense of the word: then he is an Irish Catholic. Besides, he has given the main part of his life to active politics, and the retirement to the Senate would be but a fitting termination of such a career. If the choice falls upon Mr. Costigan, it is not likely the appointment will be made until after this session, as it only Friday. And it can easily be would be undesirable, on the part of the government, to open a con-

A MEXICAN . ENVOY .- When the in the bucket." Meanwhile society lock, was recently in Mexico, he had several interviews with President Diaz in connection with lines of steamers between that country and Canada, and every week Hon. Mr. Belcourt of international interest. As a result, the Mexican Government sent Senator Santiago Menday to Ottawa, with his secretary, to study the subjects on the ground here. He had interviews this week with Sir Richard Cartwright, Minister of Trade and Commerce, and with Sir William Mulock. The Mexican government asks for a subsidy of $50,000 for a line of steamers to start, one mouth, from Montreal, and the next month from Vancouver for Mexico; thus giving a service on the Atlantic and the Pacific. Timber, fish, coal, wheat, and such like Canadian products find a ready market in Mexico. A two. cent postage rate is also under ccnsideration. The Mexican visitors find: Ottawa one of the most beautiful, clean and picturesque cities on the continent.

> GENERAL NOTES. - Rev. Pere Delor, the Dominican preacher, who held the pulpit of Notre Dame, in Montreal, during the last Lenten season, is here and gave a splendid lecture on Monday night, in St. Patrick's Hall, under the auspices of the

An old citizen named John Canty has just died, at the age of ninety. 1846, was the first ever held in the Basilica-the Cathedral in those days. There had been considerable rivalry demand an immensity of labor. PIUS X. AND THE NEGROES. -It is characteristic of the Catholicity, of the Church that she is on earth ST. LOUIS WORLD'S FAIR. for all the human race, and she Soon the press of America will be knows no difference of color, language filled with accounts of the great climate or other accidents. And her World's Fair now open at St. Louis. It has been suggested that the names Pontiffs have ever displayed the same spirit as that which belongs to her and came to her from Christ. and historical associations connected with this great event are so fully and thoroughly Catholic, that the Nicholas Chiles, editor of a negro paper, called the "Plain Dealer," in Catholic element should be greatly Topeka, has received a letter from represented there. There has been Sardinal Merry del Val, who writes talk of a Catholic Congress to be held at St. Louis during the course in the name of the Pope. The Westem Negro Press Association, of which of the summer, but we have not been able to ascertain whether or not any Chiles is president, at its aanual practical steps have been taken tomeeting, adopted a resolution urging the Pope to use his good offices for wards the realization of that scheme. At all events, there should be some better treatment of the negro race in The resolution was sent very good Catholic exhibits there, as to Rome through Cardinal Gibbons. the scope of the Fair leaves room for the same. And in the guides, or The letter in reply also came through The negro population books of reference, there is ample the Cardinal. opportunity of quietly bringing , beof the South is highly pleased and honored, and wide circulation is before the public a great deal of what has been done by Catholicity for the ing given to the letter, which reads civilization and subsequent development of that grand state.

LAWN CARNIVAL.

"The Sovereign Pontiff is well aware that there are many Catholics among the negroes of the United States, and this knowledge increases his interest in the welface of your ST. ANTHONY'S America.

"His Holiness, as the Vicar , of Christ, extends his loving care to every race without exception, and he

sity will have the effect not only of consideration is that it is exactly adorning the West with a glorious true, both as concerns the past and Cathedral, but also of contributing the future-the present proves both. largely to the workingmen's incomes -for necessarily such an edifice will

THE TRUE WITNESS AND CATHOLIC CHEONICLE.

rical Society has published in book the posterity of the Dutch founders form the autobiography of the late J. Thebaud, Rev. Father Augustus S.J., in which a story of his experiences in the second quarter of th last century are given. His observations on life in America in the thirties and forties of the nineteenth cen tury are very interesting and most highly instructive. This priest wa a native of Nantes, where he was born in 1807. At the age of twenty eight, when a priest, he went Rome, and was admitted to the Society of Jesus. He completed his ed clesiastical and religious training at to the Roman College. He went Paris in 1838, and was sent thenc to be a professor at St. Mary's College, in Kentucky. He had scarcely any knowledge of English at the For six years he taught mistry in that institution, and ir 1846 he was made rector of Ford ham College. The rest of his life was practically spent in New York State. In 1869 and 1870 he was in Montreal and for a brief time was pastor of a secular parish at Hudson City, N.Y. He died at Fordham on the 17th December, 1885.

2

Here are a few extracts from autobiography as summarized by the Sun. It was in Oct., 1838, that he sailed for America.

NEW YORK SIXTY YEARS AGO. -"New York at that time had about 300,000 inhabitants and Brookly about 25,000. He recalls how different was the outward aspect which the city of New York then presented from that which it exhibits to-day. What struck him most in 1839 was the exterior appearance of neatness and comfort visible everywhere in the streets and squares. He admired particularly the white linen of the butchers and milk vendors who came from the suburbs of the city every morning during the week. All were shaved clean and the custom of wear ing thick beards or whiskers was yet unheard of. He remarked that the incidents criticized by English travellers had been invested with too much importance. No doubt the Americans smoked in places where the habit might give offense to ladies

it is also certain that they chewed tobacco, and the consequence 0 both habits may have been rendered more unpleasing by the scanty use of handkerchiefs. Father Thebaud noticed that in conversation Americans gave each other ridiculous titles, captain, colonel, doctor, etc., and were addicted to questioning strangers about their names, occupation, and place of origin. He points out, however, that such external de fects cast but little light upon funda mental questions, such as ; Were Americans ready to oblige, charitable to ward the poor, moral and just in their dealings? Experience quickly taught him that the few outward ble mishes just mentioned were insignificant compared with their admirable qualities of heart and mind. Simplicity of manners was in those days almost universal, There might occasionally a roughness in the exhibition of simplicity, because their exterior refinement was confined to the small circle of the educated. Early risers, New Yorkers then seldon prolonged their evening relaxation a moderate limit, a fact beyond which Father The naud looked upon as a voucher for their morality. They

The United States Catholic Histo- embraced the Knickerbockers, i. e. of New Amsterdam and Fort Orange. In the South, from Maryland to Geor gia, it consisted of the descendants of the cavaliers or of the large land owners who might be of Puritan Huguenot descent.

"Having spent three days in New York, Father Thebaud started for Philadelphia on his way to St. Mary's College in Marion County, Ky. The only means of quick communication between the two great cities was the Amboy and Camden Railroad, From the South Ferry landing, near Castle Garden, a kind of steam ferryboat took the traveller around Staten Island to Amboy, where he found train ready to start for Camden. From Philadelphia the kine of railroad running westward did not, in 1839, go further than Lancaster, Pa. Thenceforward stages only were available. From Pittsburg Father Thebaud might have descended the Ohio in a steamboat, but he had heard so much about steamboat explosions on the Western rivers that he was unwilling to risk his life.

"There was no means of warming the feet, and the pouring rain could not be excluded from the interior of the stages. Then, again, the roads, even between towns, were so imperfectly built and graded that occasionally the roadbed itself would be obstructed by huge stones and stumps of trees. His vehicle was always behind time, and once it was upset From Maysville, at which point, having recrossed the Ohio, he entered Kentucky, he proceeded to Lebanon, and although he traversed the richest part of the State, he found the roads as bad in Knetucky as they were in Ohio, with rhe exception of one turnpike forty miles long between Lexington and Nicholasville.

SLAVE OWNERS AND SLAVES -Very much of these interesting notes we must skip, for lack pace, but there are a few remarks that deserve special attention; those concerning slavery and those touch ing on religious prejudices.

"Father Thebaud foresees that he nay be asked whether slave masters could properly be called "good natured and charitable." He testifies that in the main the slave owners treated their human chattels kindly, and that no correct impression of the facts is given by "Uncle Tom's Cabin." That book he pronounces an ex parte state ment, which leaves unmentioned countless facts opposed to those Mrs. Stowe presents and leading to a very different conclusion. Father Thebaud, indeed, would not deny that in the extreme south, where the plan tations were much larger than they were in Kentucky, and where, conequently, the task of supervision had to be confided to an overseer, there may have been some men like Mrs. Stowe's "Legree." They must have been few, however, for two obvious reasons: First, such men would have been despised and shunned by all the other planters in the neighborhood; secondly, no one could see in the Southern Negro any signs of the frightful treatment and degradation described in "IIncle Tom's Cabin." On the contrary, they were every were healthy, well-formed, and, what was even more significant, jolly and full of fun. Evidently they were not time of my ministry I have often been under great obligations to them, fully persuaded that they were sincere friends. It was before Ritualism arose and when Tractarianism was prevalent among them. As to Low Church Episcopalians, they had, thought, few prejudices against yet would have spurned the idea us, having any dealings with us."

Trappist Monastery In Japan.

Japan is hardly the sort of country in which one expects to find Trappist monastery, yet there such a monastery near Hakodate, the principal port of Hokkaido, the most northerly of the five large islands which go to form the main part of the Japanese empire. Hokkaido is bleak, cold, covered with primeval forest (at least for the most part) and inhabited not only by Japanese settlers, but by the aboriginal inha bitants, the hairy Arno, a most singular people. The Japanese government consequently looks upon it in much the same light (to compare great things with small) as the Rusian government looks upon Siberia, or the British government upon Ca nada: that is, regards it, as a coun try which, when developed and colonized, may prove to be a very valu able possession,

On the occasion of a recent visit to this outlying port of the Mikado's empire, I went from Hakodate to the Trappist monastery above mentioned. It is reached in a few hours by steam launch, being situated_at a little distance from the little fishing village of Tobetsu and at the foot of a forbidding-looking mountain called Maruvama (Round Mountain). The monastery is a white, barn-like, one storied structure about two hundred feet in length and facing the sea This main building is flanked by two other structures which are somewhat higher and whose gables are turned towards the approaching visitor. In the centre rises a church steepl

sixty or eighty feet in height, bearing on the summit a cross, and in a niche near the summit a large terracotta image of the Madonna Child.

It is almost unnecessary to say that the appearance of this severely plain edifice with its bleak back ground is not exhilarating; and, to eighten the dismal effect, there was on the occasion of my visit an entire absence of life and movement in the surrounding landscape-not a living thing being in sight except a large raven perched motionless on one arm of the cross on the steeple.

It is generally known that all over the world the Trappists make a special point of receiving visitors and entertaining them gratis as long as they wish to stay. This hospitality I and a friend who accompanied m (a gentleman friend, for no lady, unless she be a sovereign or a princess, is ever admitted into a Trappist mo nastery) experienced to the full: in fact the Hokkaido monks seem perhaps on account of their isolation to be unusually hospitable.

Into a detailed description of this nonastery I need not enter, as all the internal arrangements are the ame as in Trappist monasteries in England and elsewhere. The monks tell me that in winter-time the cold is excessive, so that it is almost im possible to prevent the water which is used in the ceremonies of the Mass from being frozen. Moreover, in order to withstand the winter hurri-

bull There are also seven or cight horses, all of them Japanese; that is to say, by no means famous, mostly used for ploughing. I have, however, seen Japanese boys employ ed by the monks ride about on them while driving home the cattle; and this fact is sufficiently striking, fo in Japan proper a farmer's boy has of very seldom a horse to ride on and most of the horse's work him self. There is nothing remarkabl about the collection of domestic fow kept by the monles, save that, per haps, the only other collection of the same kind is at the Sapporo Agri cultural College, a government in-stitution. Besides their agricultural pursuits, the Trappists have a school and an orphanage. Here in Kokkaido the Trappist lead the same severe life as they lead in Europe, living only on vegetables, fruit and bread; working six hours day with their hands, and getting up at two in the morning to pray. Their winter is, as I have already remarked, extremely severe, as may be judged from the fact that nea Aomori, which is further to the south two hundred soldiers were lost in the snow exactly a year ago, and all of them frozen to death. The monks manage, however, to survive their six-months' winter; and perhaps the excitement of sallying forth occasion ally on snowshoes in order to col lect fuel on the mountain side is a wholesome break in the monotony of their lives. The monastic mus which also contains a few snakes preserved in spirits, and a number of everely religious books, among the latter the ponderous tomes of Cor nelius a Lapide.

A final touch and I am done. While walking with the guest-master on the day of my departure among the waving corn-fields I came suddenly or the cemetery. It is as yet only twelve feet square, for it contains only one grave, at the head of which in planted a wooden cross, painte white, with a low fence running around it. — Francis McCullagh in one set of politicians or to the other. the Catholic World.

POPE AND PILGRIMS.

When the members of the English pilgrimage and several British Catho lics in Rome, numbering in all about 300 persons, were received in audi ence by the Pope recently, His Holiness walked along the line of kneeling pilgrims, giving each his hand kiss, and addressing a few words to some. His Holiness also blossed the religious objects which the pilgrims

Patent Report.

Below will be found a list of Cana dian patents granted to foreigners through the agency of Messrs. Marion & Marion, Patent Attorneys, Montreal, Canada, and Washington D.C. Nos.

85,885—Jules Dansette, Paris, France Process for manufacture of cera mic articles.

85,888-Samuel G. Coburn, Haw thorn, Australia, Imp. in field gates.

salz, Berlin, Germany. Process of making camphor.

manufacturing artificial caout chouc.

86,160-Emma Homann, Berlin

over the debates in the House

observed and what I have been

. . .

to think regarding the matter

many purposes; and we must

the world. But as far as any

terity, that we are the custodians of

UNMENTIONED - Not

it

fifty years hence.

As I am not a politician I am open | ly powerful, and had again upset the rival party that it had placed to correction should I make a mispower. For fully fifteen years after take in speaking of anything that be one of the great men whose names longs to that domain. In glancing were identified with that gigantic of struggle absorbed the entire attention Commons upon the Grand Trunk Paof the Dominion, and a goodly porcific project, I find a great deal has tion of the attention of the Empire. een said for and against the fifty Since then events have rolled years clause; that is to say, the fifty This new scheme has come up; the years of control that is accorded the Company over the proposed new line. debates on it, last year and this, have filled over two thousand pages am not sure whether the balance is in favor of those for or those against of Hansard. In all that mass speeches, I find that the name it: but I know that many long hours Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, once Prehave been taken up in dis:uss'on of the point. Amongst those who spoke mier of Canada, was mentioned twice, that of Sir John A. Macdonald, sethe strongest and with the most de termination upon what was to be done, in fifty years hence, with the road, was Mr. McCreary, member for ven times; and those of Sir John Abbott and Sir John Thompsonsubsequent Premiers-not once. And were it not for the contrasts Selkirk. It was very late on a Tuesand comparisons drawn and instituted beday night that Mr. McCreary's strong voice raised the echoes of Parliament. tween these two great railway pro-On Wednesday morning a few hours jects, the name of Mackenz e and Macdonald would have been enshroulater he was dead in his room at his ded in the same oblivion as that hotel. I am recalling these facts, which hung around those of Abbott which I have gleaned from the press and Thompson. And yet all these men (especially Macdonald and in order to accentuate what I have Thompson) filled the eye and the of press of the country in a manner suggestive of immortal memory amongst men, and above all amongst political

QUID PRODEST ? -St. Paul's I am only recalling these facts to question, "What availeth a man ?" is emphasize the statement that fifty strongly suggested by these facts and years hence the very names of the reflections. In the "Immitation" a most prominent men associated with like question is asked, and the "Quid the project will be entirely unknown bono" of the old Latins has its and unmentioned. What does it mat-Christian significance. What matter ter, then, how things will be in fifty does it make to you, or to me, to years hence ? . Yet it matters a terrible lot, for each individual, how to the man who, died yesterday or the he will be situated in the world one who will die to-morrow, what is come in fifty years from this: still that does not worry him, it is to be done in fifty years hence ? It is the true we ase here for a purpose, for railway's future that occupies his not mind. forget that we have to act for pos

our children's interests, and that those to come after us will either TIMELY VERSE. - In this connection I have come upon a few lines, bless or blame us for their lot . in from the pen of Teresa Beatrice of O'Hare, in the Boston "Pilot," and the men who are so deeply interested they seem to very appropriately conin a great national scheme are convey the thought that was suggested cerned, what difference will it make to me on reading all about this "fifty to them in fifty years from now, whe years" clausef They run thus :

. . .

'What will matter in fifty years ... Care or laughter, joy or tears ? Who will wonder, who will care Whether our days were dark or fair, Whether we smiled or whether frowned, What we sought or what we found ? Wisdom, folly, hopes or fears-What will matter in fifty years ?

'Who will care for our gold or dross, Whether we shirked or bore our cross? Who will know if our hearts were kind.

Or of the dull or the brilliant mind, Whether our days were wild or tame, Whether we longed for love or fame? Praise or blame, or critics' sneers-What will it matter in fifty years?

'What will matter? Oh, Christ above, What will matter save thy dear love? Earthly friends who share our gain Fly when comes our woe or pain. Pure of heart and strong of will Falling, struggling, climbing still, Eyes raised heavenward, penance. tears-

they were not effective plishment of their main ly, the destruction of th had upset one government, apparent- These will matter in fifty years." nationality of the Irish

shrank en masse now m from English educatio ments, and resorted to dient in their endeavors

BATURDAY, MAY

From the time of E

1778 the Irish Catho during a brief period in 1778 the Irish

James II., beaten utt

ground. I do not kno

give a better picture of in the middle of the ei

tury than by quoting uttered in 1758 by a

in his judicial capacity

Catholic lady who had

by her Protestant frier

to the Established reli

fuge from their import

house of a Mr. Saul, w

law and sheltered her.

occasion of his prose

judge, addressing him,

aws did not presume a

ist in the Kingdom, n

breathe without the c

In such a condition o

hardly state that the

tholic schools worthy

from Elizabeth's time

laxation of the penal la

the reign of William a

of four courses had be

sorted to by Irish Catl

rich enough sent their o

-others furtively soug

from fugitive priests, o

the roadsides, by the h

in mountain passes. M

at a neighboring gent

where a tutor was eng

the children of the tam

services were frequently

eagerly accepted by th

district. A few attend

Protestant government

fered some guarantees

stance, the appointmen

teachers) that their re

victions would not be t

But after the Revolution

resolved to make the

one of these expedimen

ble in the future. One

natives was thencefort

sented to the Irish Cat

they must enter th

schools to be educated

or remain in ignorance

creed by Parliament th

should, under heavy

abroad himself or s

abroad, to be educated

wise aid or assist in th

of foreign educational

or of those who had g

At home no Catholic v

mitted to keep a scho

to instruct in private

children other than the

such houses. Finally,

ing the venalties of hig

the second offence, no

act as usher or teacher

tant schools in the cou

der that "no pretence"

ven to Papists for savi

were not sufficient educ

lishments in the cour

needs, it was provided

al means should be tak

the schools of Henry more successful than the

These statutes were el

cluding Catholic assi and pupils from the En

chools, and kindred ins

cluding Catholic

. . .

to proved.

cational purposes.

TI

the government."

Saul was prosecute

11

ther they are blamed or praised, whe ther the work is a success or a failure ?. This may appear a very selfish and narrow way of looking at the matter; but it is not so, I am merely drawing attention to the fact had brought with them. that our lives, our energies, and all we possess are devoted to the realization, or the safefguarding of that which-great as it will be in import ance to those of fifty years hence-is very insignificant compared to that which we neglect and which will really affect us. Not one of the names of the men who are worrying them selves to death over this special subject will be known, remembered even mentioned when the fifty years come about. This may seem an ex aggeration; but I will simply recall a few faots.

NAMES 85i923-Dr. Stephan and Dr. Hun-

85,999-Messrs. Seguin and R. de Sales, Paris, France. Method of fifty, but only twenty-five years have gone past since the projection of the now famous line of the Canadian Pacific was on the tapis. It had been the source of unending debates;

CAINTC OF TUE MONTU | eleventh to St. Francis Jerome, a the nns describe avoided extravagance in dress only sor: the twelfth, the A I JAIN I J UF I NE WUN I NI brave the laws that pros many. Method of destroying canby Mrs. Stowe.' or guests' quarters, are double. on rare occasions would they indulge -a feast of obligation; the thirteenreligion and took awa ker and of protecting trees against th to St. John the Silent, Bishop; The lay brother who had charge o in costly finery. Few of them had damage. ties. Many a time, in carriages, and when etiquette requirmyself and my friend was, strange to the fourteenth to St. Boniface, mardays, the smuggling cra 86,249-Guido Ferrahino, Dusseldorf, say, a Dutchman, and he told tyr; the fifteenth to St. John Baptist ed the use of a vehicle they would me quented the Irish (By an Occasional Contributor. ) send to the nearest livery stable. Of RELIGIOUS PREJUDICE .- "When Germany. Feed regulators de la Salle; the sixteenth to that there are two other Dutchmen carried as part of their one never saw in New York steam boilers. Father Thebaud came to this counin the community. He seemed Ubald, Bishop; the seventeenth the seas, Irish youths, w 86,327-Messrs. Loffler and Weidle, St. Pascal Baylon, Confessor; the in the 30's and the 40's the endless try there were comparatively few know all about the Transvaal war: be "educated and brough Catholics here. Moreover, although eighteenth to St. Winaud, martyr; on of private carriages that but tactfully avoided any disc Vienna, Australia, Filters ir While the month of May is special-"Popish" seminaries of it, saying (in French, the lan-guage in which he ordinarily conwhich the liquid to be filtered is the nineteenth-the Octave of now meets the eye every afternoon on in theory they had all the rights of ly dedicated to the Blessed Virgin, throughout the Catholic Ascension; the twentieth, to St. Ber-Fifth Avenue. Broadway, which then sucked through filtering bodies. citizens, yet in practice they were ex-Europe. At home Ca. still each particular day has a spewas the great thoroughfare, was fillcluded from nearly all public offices. verses to guests) that there was no nardine of Sienna: the twenty-first, 86,840-James Purdie, Dunedin, N risked life and limb to the vigil of St. Hospitius, ed with stages. The same simplicicial saint whose invocation is , alrecluse; All public institutions-prisons, hosuse in talking of it now, it was all Z., wave motor. faith and fatherland: oft was observed at dinner. Scarcely the twenty-second, Pentecost; twenty-third, to Blessed Andrew ways a source of blessings. Although pitals, poorhouses and academics for over, and the Boers and British 86,870-Heinrich Zoelly, Zurich, Swit through the country; so we have now reached the middle of fast friends Besides these had French and Italian cooking begun naval and military officers -were in thre zerland. Elastic fluid turbines guised in the garb of h bola; martyr; the twenty-fourth the hands of Protestants. Has the to penetrate the most opulent dwelthe month, it may not be untimely Dutchmen there is one Italian and the flocks of Catholic fa 86.889-Johan A. Holmstrom, Roma the The best families were served prejudice against Catholics so obvieight Frenchmen in the community St. Vincent of Lerv. Confessor; to mention those saints whose me lings. day, and, when evening Italy. Etching apparatus. twenty-fifth to St. Gregory VII., mories are recalled on each day. The a l'anglaise, with only roast ously felt by Protestants sixty years The Japanese monks outnumber the by the fireside under the Pope; the twenty-sixth to St. Philip ago entirely vanished at this foreigners, there being no less first of May is dedicated to Saints and fowls for meat, and sherry, port tome friendly and symp venth to or maderia for drink. Some West ment? Father Thebaud, writing in thirteen of them, eight of those thir-Philip and James, the latter being Neri, confessor; the twenty-sev teaching the peasants of ding neighborhood to India fruit or peaches would end the 1882, replies that personally he has St. Bede the Venerable; the twenteen being novices, and all very rethe Apostle; the second to St. Athanasios; the third to the Finding of the Holy Cross; the fourth to St. the twenty-ninth to the Most Holy Monica, mother of St. Augustin; the Trinity; the thirtieth to Our Lady collected, devout and almost angelic meal. found Presbyterians, Baptists and SYMINGTON'S spell, and, perchance, Methodists well nigh as prejudiced looking. what they were ready The Trappists had no difficulty in against Catholics as were their Purilieve, and had too much believing—that Rome of Help of Christians; and the thirty-ARISTOCRACY AND STAGES. fifth to St. Pius V., a Pontifi o Rome; the sixth to St. John of La. obtaining thirty-seven hectaires DINBURGH tan ancestors. There is always, he first to St. Angela of Merici, virgin "Father Thebaud soon discovered that all along the Atlantic coast virgin soil from the Japanese said, amongst them a lurking fear of friend and England their Coercion had done its v period since the landing gov Thus have we on each day a par-Catholics, and for many of them "Papists" are worse than pagans. ernment, and they have brought the COFFEE ESSENCE teran: the seventh to St. Stanislas, thom ticular saint or a special great feast there was an aristocracy of birth. In most of it under Bishop and Martyr; the eighth to the plough, their to commemorate or observe, principal crop being corn. In their the apparition of St. Michael; New England it comprised the des Church th "It is only among the High n akes delleio ne coffse in a moment. No ninth to St. Gregory Nazianzen, Bi-shop and Doctor of the Church: the votion of the month in honor of the tenth to St. Antonius, Bishop; the Mother of God. mans down to our own t cendants, real or pretended, of seeds of disaffection been ly sown in Ireland, as the byres they keep about thirteen Japanese cows, two fine Holstein cows Episcopalians-ministers and peopleunders of the Eastern cothat a kind feeling towards us ionies. In the State of New York it | really to exist, and during the whole several calves, and one fine Holstein GUARANTEED PURE. reign of William III and

BATURDAY, MAY 14, 1904.

THE TRUE WITNESS AND CATHOLIC CHRONICLE.

S HENCE."

000000000000

000000000000

00000000000

00000000000000

AY 14, 1904.

had again upset the it had placed in ly fifteen years after men whose names with that gigantic d the entire attention , and a goodly por-ntion of the Empire. ts have rolled e has come up; the last year and this, two thousand pages all that mass that the name Mackenzie, once Prewas mentioned twice, A. Macdonald, Rethose of Sir John ir John Thompsoniers-not once. And the contrasts and wn and instituted begreat railway proof Mackenz e and have been enshroume oblivion as that and those of Abbott And yet all these Macdonald and the eve and the try in a manner sug-

alling these facts to atement that fifty very names of the men associated with be entirely unknown What does it mathings will be in fifty et it matters a terh individual. how ed in the world to ars from this; still orry him, it is that occupies his

tal memory amongst

all amongst political

SE. - In this copme upon a few lines. Teresa Beatric of Boston "Pilot," and y appropriately conthat was suggested all about this "fifty They run thus :

. .

er in fifty years ... , joy or tears ? who will care were dark or fair, led or whether we or what we found ?

ter in fifty years ? or our gold or dross. ed or bore our cross? if our hearts were

opes or fears-

r the brilliant mind. were wild or tame. ed for love or fame? or critics' sneersatter in fifty years?

er? Oh, Christ above, save thy dear love? who share our gain our woe or pain. I strong of will,

g, climbing still, venward, penance, ter in fifty years."

Francis velfth, th gation; t the Sil y St. Bo to St. J sixteent the sever on, Conf St. Wina he Octav ventieth, a; the Hospitiu

Hospitiu d, Pente Blessed . e twenty ery, Con St. Gr -sixth to he twent; nerable; Augustil

Augusti to the ieth to ins; and la of Me on each special or obse to the

Centuries of Irish Education. hree

From the time of Elizabeth up to We are bountiful harvest which sprang from them. The history of the Revolution 1778 the Irish Catholics were, save during a brief period in the reign of which to Englishmen brings back glo-James II., beaten utterly to the ground. I do not know that I can rious and happy memories, still after give a better picture of their state the lapse of centuries, only stirs up in the middle of the eighteenth cenbitter recollections in the Irish mind. . . .

obtaining the license of the Protest-

diocese naturally did not work.

stance, carefully selected and trained.

In 1881 there were 170 Christian

tury than by guoting the words uttered in 1758 by an Irish judge in his judicial capacity. A young Catholic lady who had been pressed by her Protestant friends to conform to the Established religion, took react was then passed, allowing Cathofuge from their importunities in the lics to keep a school on condition of house of a Mr. Saul, who braved the law and sheltered her. For so doing ant Bishop of the Diocese. But this act proved a dead letter. Catholic Mr. Saul was prosecuted, and on the occasion of his prosecution, the schools practically under the authorijudge, addressing him, said that "the ty of the Protestant Bishop of the aws did not presume a Papist to exist in the Kingdom, nor could they breathe without the connivance , of allowing Catholics to keep schools the government." without obtaining the license of the In such a condition of affairs I need hardly state that there were no Cal tholic schools worthy of the _name Protestant Bishop of the diocese and removing other restrictions. In 1793 the first Catholic College was foundfrom Elizabeth's time until the re laxation of the penal laws. Prior to the reign of William and Anne one ed in Carlow by Dr. O'Keefe, the Bishop of Kildare and Leighlin. The college was divided into two departof four courses had been usually rements, one for the instruction sorted to by Irish Catholics, for edustudents intended for the Church, and cational purposes. Those who were the other for lay pupils. This colrich enough sent their children abroad -others furtively sought instruction lege always enjoyed a good reputation from fugitive priests, or laymen on In 1795 Maynooth College, entirethe roadsides, by the hedgeways, and ly devoted to the education of stuin mountain passes. Many assembled dents intended for the Church, at a neighboring gentleman's house, established and endowed by Parliawhere a tutor was engaged to teach ment. the children of the family, and whose In 1802 a system of primary services were frequently given, and schools was founded by the Christian eagerly accepted by the youth of the Brothers. The Christian Brothers. it district. A few attended such of the Protestant government schools as ofmay be stated, compose, not a monastic order, as is sometimes thought, fered some guarantees (as, for but a congregation united by vows of stance, the appointment of Catholic poverty, chastity and obedience to teachers) that their religious convictions would not be tampered with. | Superiors. In addition, they take a vow to teach children gratuitously, But after the Revolution, government during their lives. Mr. Rice, the suresolved to make the resort to any perior of this congregation, submittone of these expediments impracticaed to Pope Pius VI. a plan for the hle in the future. One of two altereducation of the Irish poor, and the natives was thenceforth to be pre-Pope approving it, a number of sented to the Irish Catholics, viz. schools were guickly opened for the inthey must enter the Protestant struction of "poor Irish boys," With schools to be educated as Protestants reference to the principles on which or remain in ignorance. It was decreed by Parliament that no Catholic these schools have been based and the manner in which they have been should, under heavy penalties, go worked, I cannot, I think, do hetter abroad himself or send another than place before my readers the opi abroad, to be educated, or in any nions of the Royal Commissioners of wise aid or assist in the maintenance 1854-58 and 1878-81. "The Knowof foreign educational establishments ledge communicated in these schools' or of those who had gone to them. says the former, "embraces not only At home no Catholic was to be permitted to keep a school himself, or grammar, geography and book-keepto instruct in private houses any ing, but also an acquaintance with children other than the children such branches of mathematical scisuch houses. Finally, without riskence as are suited to the tastes and ing the venalties of high treason, for talents of the pupils, and to the stathe second offence, no Catholic copld tions of life they are destined to ocact as usher or teacher in any Protescupy. Geometry, mensuration, drawtant schools in the country. In oring, and mechanics, become special der that "no pretence" might be giobjects of attention. As to the manven to Papists for saying that there ner of communicating knowledge, the were not sufficient educational estabmost approved methods have lishments in the country, for their carefully reduced to practice. meeds, it was provided that additionit is to the communication of reli al means should be taken to render the schools of Henry and Elizabeth more successful than they had hithergious knowledge that this institution is chiefly devoted. To this object the members direct their main energies. to proved. The teachers are all under religious obligations; they are, in the first in-. . .

These statutes were effective in exand they are placed under a strict cluding Catholic assistant-teachers and pupils from the Erasmus Smith system of organization and discipline.' chools, and kindred institutions; but they were not effective in the accom-Brothers' schools in Ireland, attended plishment of their main object, nameby 31,614 pupils, of whom 31,596 were Catholics, fifteen Protestant ly, the destruction of the faith , and nationality of the Irish people. They Episcopalians, and two Methodists; shrank en masse now more than ever result.

In 1781 the first step was taken towards the relaxation of the penal In 1811 there were Protescode with reference to education. An

tants in Ireland who not only regarded this result with regret, but strongly condemned the policy which had been instrumental in bringing it about.

In 1792 another Act was passed, Sufficient, they thought, had been done for conscience's sake in attempting to worry the Irish into the Protestant religion. The alternative of Protestantism or ignorance had been, they reasoned, presented to the Catholic quite long enough. Was it just? Was it wise it should be presented any longer? Was there the of slightest chance that, having held out so long and in days when their fortunes were darker, and their hopes more overcast than now, the Irish Catholics would ultimately succumb to even the most sustained proselytizing efforts ? And if they did not was succumb, was their lot to be one of perpetual ignorance? The result of the liberal spirit shown by these enlightened Protestants was the establishment of the "Kildare Street Society"-an organization formed for the education of Catholic and Protestant children on the principle of combined moral and literary instruction, coupled with the reading of the Bible "without note or comment." This society received a grant of £30,-000 from Parliament in 1815. O'Cor nell joined the society, Lord Clon-curry joined it, one representative Catholic denounced it from the heginning-Father McHale, afterwards, "John Archbishop of Tuam." He said that with a fair exterior the Kldare Street Society was at heart a proselytizing institution. Subsequent events justified his suspicions.

In 1820 it associated itself with three notoriously proselytizing societies-the London Hibernian Association, the Society for Discountenancing Vice, and the Baptist Society. Then O'Connell withdrew from it, reading, writing and arithme'ic, Lord Cloncurry withdrew from it, the Catholic children withdrew from it, and it perished, and deserved to pe. rish.

. . .

In 1831 another attempt was made on a larger scale, to establish schools for the education of Catholics. without outraging their religious sentin?nts,-the so-called National schools been were founded. These schools afford-But ed an excellent example of the hopelessness of English statesmen trying to force upon the Irish people a system of education to which they objected. The Irish people, -Catholics, Protestants, Presbyterians, demanded denominational education. They got mixed schools. These schools -supported by Parliamentary grants -were to be open alike to Protestants and Catholics. Four days in the week were to be devoted to moral and literary, and one or two days to separate religious instruction. A board, composed partly of Catholics sent National Board will be there was one Presbyterian pupil. As to the state of efficiency of have the entire management and con-have the entire management and con-have the entire management and con-

all even now reaping the education, and indeed on every other ed, particularly by Sir William Wal- ed. But it was "starved." A miser- any of the schools, but the three folsubject, and the consequence was that lace. This celebrated patriot drove able stipend of only one hundred a the people were left in a state of his troops out of the Kingdom. He year was given to the professor of woeful ignorance. Nor was this all: was ultimately taken and basely exe-intense hatred of English rule, and cuted by Edward, and a new effort ceased to be taught. of Protestantism, as an appendage of projected to subdue the Scots. But that rule, had been the unlooked-for before the army of Edward entered

This prince followed up the intention Bannockburn, and there the independence of the Scots was established." It was allowable to speak of Sir William Wallace as a "celebrated patriot," to think with pride on the struggle of the Scots for independence but it would have been treason to mention the names of Arte McMurrough or Hugh O'Neil, to tell how Sarsfield fought, or Emmet died. "Lines on the Irish Harp" by Miss ing hymn :--

"I thank the goodness and the grace, That on my birth have smiled, And made me in these Christian days A happy English child "

This boycotting of everything nain deference to Protestant opinion, of Galway; St. Kipan's College, the rules originally framed to reconcile the Catholics to the scheme against the schools, which kept alive the memories of old wrongs. state of things lasted until 1860, when, after thirty years of intermittent agitation, the system was reformed on popular lines. The schools have now become practically denominational. The great blot of the national system was the neglect, and indeed discouragement of the national language Irish was not taught in the schools Of course the object of these English institutions-for such they were-was to Anglicize the youth of the country, and the use of the Irish tongue would be an effective obstacle to that policy. Indeed the Irish language faded away under the national schools. But, it has been revived in our own day by the Gaelic League. It is not, howver, yet taught as a rule in the "national schools." Any master who chooses can teach it, but many masters do not choose. Of course the study of the language ought to be made obligatory. The thin edge of the wedge, however, is in. A tablet with Irish characters is now, I believe, hung up in the schools, so that the children and masters are at all was events reminded that English not the ancient language of the country; and the duty of mastering the ancient and national tongue is kept. constantly before their eves. I visited one of the national schools in the County Tyrone last summer, and I was glad to see a voluntary class learning Irish, on a Sunday afternoon. Several of the masters in the district were present; the manager (the parish priest), was present; and his curates were members of the class. Nothing scarcely was spoken for an hour but Irish: it was an Irish atmos phere; and the scene brought back memories of the days when the O'Neils were masters of Tyrone.

There is a possibility that the pref

In 1854 the Catholic University was founded under the presidency of Dr. Scotland he died, leaving his crown and enterprise to his son Edward II. and it continued for a period of nearly thirty years to be supported by of his father, but was defeated at public subscription, and attended by many of the Catholic youths of the country. Like the Queen's University, it, too, has passed away, or ra-ther become merged in the Royal University, of which more later on. Throughout the century, several schools, Protestant and Catholic, primary and intermediate, sprang up Among the Protestant schools may be mentioned the following : St. Columba College, County Dublin, found-The ed in 1843; Coleraine Academical In- a system of cramming, a process there stitution, founded in 1868; and the which is not productive of sound Balfour; Campbell's poem, "The ed in 1843; Coleraine Academical In-Harper," and Scott's "Breathes there stitution, founded in 1868; and the a Man," etc., were suppressed by Methodist College, Belfast, founded Archbishop Whatley, But His Grace also in 1868. Among the Catholic by Methodist College, Belfast, founded kindly allowed the use of the follow- schools the most famous are Clongowes Wood College, County Kildare;

St Stainslaus College, Tullabeg: St. Jarlath's College, Tuam: St. Patrick's College, Armagh: St. Colman's College, Fermoy; French College, Blackrock, Dublin; St. Brendan's Seminary, Killarney; St. Colman's College, Newry: Holy Cross College tional or patriotic was accompanied Clonliffe, Dublin; St. Patricis Col by the gradual removal of amendment lege, Thurles; St. Ignatius College,

kenny; Diocesan College, Limericle St. John's College, Waterford; St The result was a popular agitation Peter's College, Wexford; St. Mel's gainst the schools, which kept alive Longford; St. Vincent's College, Cas-This tleknock, Dublin and Belvedere College Dublin

Reviewing the whole history intermediate education in Ireland, it is clear that some schools did good work-eminently, I think, the French College, Blackrock, the Academical Institution, Colerain ; the Jesuit College of Tullabeg and Clongowes ; th Methodist College, Belfast, and St. Coleman's College, Fermoy; yet upon the whole secondary instruction throughout the country was, as some one - I believe Lord Cairns - said 'Bad in quality and deficient in quan tity.

. . .

The fact seems incredible, but there can be no doubt of its autheaticity, viz., that out of a total population of 5,500,000, there were only 10,814 boys in Ireland learning Latin, Greek, or modern languages, in 1871. Or, to put the matter in another way, while in England about ten or fifteen in every 1000 were instructed in these languages, only two in every 1000 were instructed in them in Ireland; and what was yet more serious, things were growing from bad to worse. Thus, while in 1861 the total number of secondary schools in the country amounted to 729, in 1871 the number fell to 574. Impressed by these facts, and believing that the lamentable situation which they revealed was caused by want of generous and general state and support, the Government under Lord Beaconsfield took up the subject of intermediate education in Ireland. The result was the Intermediate

Education act of 1878, whose chief provisions were as follows :

(1) A sum of £1,000,000 was taken from the Dis-established Church Surplus Fund, and devoted to the puroffposes of secondary education in Ireland.

(2) A board was formed called the complacent stupid John Bull will not

lowing rules were to be in all cases observed :

3

(1) Students were bound to belong to some intermediate school from the 15th of October of the year prior to the examination, and to have made at least 100 attendances.

(2) Students prepared by private pupils only were not to be eligible. (3) No result-fees were to be paid to the managers of schools where religious instruction was imposed contrary to the sanction of parents, or where the hours of such instruction were so arranged as to trench upon the time allotted to secular study.

This act has been in operation for nearly a quarter of a century; but it is doubtful if its operation has upon the whole been as beneficial as was expected. It certainly tends to sound knowledge. However, the Act, like so many English Acts of Parnament passed for Ireland, will probably have to be thrown into the melting pot again. Indeed, the chances are that before many years have passed the whole system of Irish education, primary and intermediate-will have to be seriously and thoroughly revised.

. . .

Lastly, I shall deal with the question of university education, which calls for proper attention The Queen's University having proved an utter failure, this subject was also taken in hand by the government of Lord Beaconsfield in 1878. The Catholic demand at that time was for a charter and for the endowment of the Catholic university; but the Parliament of England would not listen to it.

Lord Rosebery once said : "There is no principle, gentlemen, which scems so simple, but which seems somehow to need so much instilling into some of our greatest statesmen, as the fact that the potato that one knows and likes is better than the truffle that one neither knows or likes. And, therefore, when you wish to give a benefit to a nation, it is better to give something that it likes and understands, rather than something that it neither likes nor understands" England has never recognized the principle of giving the Irish nation 'what it likes and understands." Instead aof justly and freely establishing and endowing a Catholic University in 1879, Lord Beaconsfield's government "tinkered once more at the old tin kettle," and founded , the "Royal University." The Queen's University was abolished and an examining board with power to confer degrees upon all approved candidates irrespective of their places of education, was established. In addition, and rather as a second thought, the duty of framing a scheme of exhibitions, prizes, scholarships, and fellowships-for which Parliament was to supply the funds- was entrusted to the Snate of the new establishment on which every religious denomination was represented. Like the "national schools," and the Queen's University, the Royal University 18 "mixed" institution; and mixed education the Irish people will not have. After a trial of twenty-three years the Royal University has really proved a failure, and its end is not far

The Irish people are the most per-

| is Jerome, athe Ascension; the thirteen-Silent, Bishop;Boniface, mar-. John Baptistwenteenth toonfessor; theinaud, martyr;tave of theth, to St. Ber-te twenty-first,tius, recluse;ntecost; thed Andrew Bo-nity-fourth toconfessor; theGregory VIL,to St. Philipnty-seventh toby: the twen-stine, Bishop;e Most Holyo Our Ladymerici, virgin.h day a par-al great feastpserve, and allne general de- | from English educational establishments, and resorted to every expe-dient in their endeavors to evade ofbrave the laws that proscribed theirreligion and took away their liberties. Many a time, in those darkdays, the smuggling craft which frequented the Irish southern coastscarried as part of their freight, overthe seas, Irish youths, who went tobe "educated and brought up" in the"Popish" seminaries scatteredthroughout the Catholic opiretsrisked life and limb to stand by thefaith and fatherland; often wanderingthrough the country; sometimes dis-guised in the garb of herds, tendingthe focks of Catholic farmers in theday, and, when evening came, seatedby the firstide under the shelter oftome friendly and sympathetic roof,teaching the peasants of the surrour-ding neighborhood to read, writespel, and, perchance, telling them,what they were ready enough to belives, and had too much reason forbelieving—that Rome was theirrined and England their enemy.Coercion had done its work. At noperiod since the landing of the Nor-mans down to our own times had the  | The system, objectionable from thefact that it was what the people didnot want, was made still more ob-jectionable to the Catholics by beingunfairly worked. To begin with, theboard was composed of four Protes-tants and only two Catholics —in acountry where the Catholics were tothe Protestants as five to one.Next the control and managementof the system was practically en-trusted to a Scotch Presbyterianclergyman without knowledge or ex-perience of the country, or sympathywith its people. With one exception,all the books were prepared by Eng-lishmen or Scotchmen, and pains weretaken to exclude Irish history andsuppress all national or patriotic sen-timents.In one of the books we find thisstatement about Ireland: "On theeast of Ireland is England, where theQueen lives: many people who live inIreland were born in England, andwe speak the same nation." Let us seehow in another books Scotland wasdealt with: "Edward the First an-nexed the Principality of Wales to | Would be more under the influence ofIrish national opinion than a boardappointed by the government of Eng-land ever can be.The next educational institution towhich I shall refer, is the Queen'sUniversity, established by Sir Ro-bert Peel in 1845. In connectionwith the University three collegeswere founded, namely, in Cork, inGalway, and in Belfast. The Queen'sUniversity is another instance of thehopelessness of forcing on the Irishpeople the things they don't want.The Irish wanted a denominationaluniversity; they got a mixed univer-sitution; the Bishops and priests de-nounced it; Protestant Episcopaliansdenounced it; and after an ingloriouscareer it perished utterly. One inci-dent in connection with the Queen'sUniversity is worth recording, theplan was placed before Prince Albert;he saw that no provision was madefor the teaching of Irish; he askedwhy was there not an "Irish chair?" | were to be appointed by the LordLieutenant.(3) Provision was made for the es-tablishment of a system of exhibi-tions and prizes for students, and thepayment of result-fees to their teach-ers.(4) Examinations were to be heldby examiners appointed by the boardat convenient centres throughout thecountry, in the months of June andJuly, in every year; the subjects inwhich candidates were compelled topass being—(a) The ancient languages, literatureand history of Greece and Rome.(b) English language, history, andliterature; French, German and Ita-lian languages, history and litera-ture.(c) Mathematics, including arithme-tic, and book-keeping.(d) Natural science.(e) Such other subjects of secularinstruction as the board might pres-cribe.(f) The maximum ages at whichstadents were allowed to competewere fixed at sixteen, seventeen andeighteen years respectively. | he thinks that he can force his willupon the Irish on this question ofoducation. The experience of nearlythree-quarters of a century ought tosatisfy him that he cannot. But, thewalls of John's skull are almost im-penetrable; they have, nowever, to bepenetrated.The question of a Catholic Univer-sity will, in all probability, be press-ed upon Parliament in the next ses-sion, especially if the present govern-ment remains in power. What islikely to be done? At the presentmoment three plans are under dis-cussion, among those who are inter-ested in the subject:(1) The establishment of a Catho-lic University. This is obviously thejust and wils course to take; Ire-land will never be satisfied with any-thing less; and in the long run. Eng-land will have to give away. Ex-cept among the most bigoted Orange-men, there would be no effective op-position to this course in Treland.There are, I believe, many liberal-minded Orangemen who would notobject, and in any event thestrength of Orangeism is broken. The |  |
|---|--|--|---|--|---|--|
| oserve, and all   | period since the landing of the Nor-mans down to our own times had the From the days of the Tudors to  | dealt with: "Edward the First an-nexed the Principality of Wales tohis Kingdom A.D. 1283. He after-wards attempted to do the same with   | for the teaching of Irish; he askedwhy was there not an "Irish chair?"He could only be told that there wasnot; he insisted that such a chair  | were fixed at sixteen, seventeen andeighteen years respectively.(g)The board was not to take uponitself any responsibility with respect  | object, and in any event thestrength of Orangeism is broken. The  |  |
| A ALANTA A A A A A A A A A A A A A A A A A A  | and it is and it is and it is a second of the second of th |  |   |  |   |  |

THE TRUE WITNESS AND CATHOLIC CHRONICLE

Random Notes and Gleanings.

CONGREGATIONAL SINGING. - 1 A report says that a movement has been initiated in Italy for the promotion of congregational singing by

This practice is one which should be encouraged in our local parishes. The influence which it exercises has been made manifest at our Lenten missions.

. . .

AN OBJECT LESSON, -The fervent spirit which has urged the Holy Name Society of Brooklyn to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the definition of the doctrine of the Imgrimages to various parish Churches of that city on four Sundays during this month, is one which is calculated to inspire wavering hearts with a sentiment of loyalty and devotion to our holy religion. Unity, Christian charity and good will must follow such examples of true Catholic spirit. There is pressing need in our Catholic homes and in our parishes for kinder hearts and generous thoughts.

CATHOLIC SPIRIT, -It is stated tion of $25 to each one of the 2000 by her late husband, and also the sum of $125,000 to an hospital for workingmen. If all Catholics contributed in proportion to their means to good works, what a magnificent position they would occupy in temporal affairs.

. . .

CATHOLIC SOCIETIES. - For some time past rumors have been in circulation that an effort would be made in Canada to unite the various national, religious and quasi-insur ance societies in Catholic ranks. A Catholic American contemporary say that steps are now being taken in a sister province under the patronage of is being carried on with marked suca well known prelate to carry out the cess. idea. To Catholics who have watched the trend of events during the past decade in this country and realized the heavy cost resulting from a lack of solidarity in our ranks, the effort to organize a Federation will in Chicago 799 converts had been re meet with the most sincere approval.

LOUBET'S ROMAN VISIT. - It had been long rumored that the present Pope, being of a quiet and conciliatory character, would eventually and in a peaceful way come to , recognize the sovereign rights of Quirinal, and thus, forfeiting the traditional Papal patrimony, would bring about an era of peace and mutual understanding, and even friendship, between the Church and th Kingdom of Italy. If any person se riously entertained this idea. it should now entirely vanish in pres ence of the attitude of Pius X. in regard to President Loubet's Roman visit. No matter how kind, mild and maculate Conception by holding pil- forgiving the Pope may be, he will never sacrifice the claims of the Holy See to the rights of which it has been deprived.

. . .

THE DOMESTIC PROBLEM .- The Sacred Heart Review says : - The servant girl problem is bothering a great many housewives nowadays. They blame the servant girl for every thing, and they assert that it is next to impossible to find servants who are good and reliable. Not among such fault finders may be counted that Frau Krupp, widow of the one- | Miss Cornelia Nash, a lady prominent time great manufacturer of imple-ments of warfare, has given a dona-N.Y. The New York papers contained a report this week that Miss Nash workingmen who had been employed had given to Father Healy of Lakewood, N.J., (where she is at presen staying) the sum of $100 for the be nefit of the Church of St. Mary of the Lake, "because of the edifying ex ample set by the Catholic servants > that place." Father Healy announce ed Miss Nash's gift, and her reaso for making it, at all the Masses last Sunday, and asked his parishioners to remember such good Christians in their prayers.

employed in one of the hotels

. . .

NON-CATHOLIC MISSIONS. -In the neighboring Republic this work From week to week we note in the columns of Catholic exchange the announcements indicating that the number of converts is increasing It was stated last week that in the last twelve missions to non-Catholics ceived by the Paulists.

THREE GREAT FEASTS settled on the heads of those present and they were filled with the spirit of

(By a Regular Contributor.)

This beautiful month-beautiful from the natural and from the reli gious points of view-presents us with three great and solemn feasts One of them has passed, but we are yet within the octave, the other two are yet to come; they are the Aspen sion, which was celebrated on Thursday last, and Pentecost and the Trinity, that are to be celebrated on the next two succeeding Sundays.

The Ascension, which may be right ly styled the last action in the drama of Redemption, is held as a solem feast of obligation. Forty days afte our Lord had arisen, in the hour marked and foretold, in presence of His faithful followers, having clearly proven His divinity and His Resurrection, from the summit of Mount Olivet, He ascended, body and soul into Heaven. There are three hills, three mountains, that stand forth in the life of Our Lord on earth as spe cial landmarks of prominence and importance-they are Tabor, Calvary and Olivet. These three summits represent the Transfigura tion, the Crucifixion and the Ascer These represent the three most sion. important events in the public lif of Christ. With the last of the three He disappears from amidst men, and leaves behind Him the Church which He founded to continue unto the end of time the work of salvation. He promised not only to remain with that Church until the consummation of the world, but He also told His disciples that He would send then the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of Truth to be their Sanctifier, Guide, Teacher Comforter and Inspiration. And one day-it was the day Pentecost-the Apostles' and Disciples were assembled in conclave in a room in Jerusalem. Suddenly a great wind was felt to sweep through the room although the windows were all closed; then fiery tongues came down and

of

wisdom and began to speak in divertongues. The promise of Christ had been fulfilled; and from that momen forward an Infallible Church com menced its mission on earth. That is the great event celebrated on Pente cost

We have thus, in this month, the Ascension of God the Son, the Se cond Person of the Holy Trinity, and the descent of the Holy Ghost, the Third Person of the same Holy Trinity; and, in addition, we have th be spared to her family for many feast of the Holy Trinity itself. This is the culminating feast of the ecclesiastical years All other great events that are commemorated flow from that one source and all return thereto-for, after all, the Holy Trinity, the Three Divine Persons in one God, is the central mystery of Chris tianity. It is the most inconceivable -if there could be degrees in myste ries-of all the infinite wonders that quarter. But England objects-abov all, the Non nformists of England object, and it is probable that DO English Government-certainly not a Liberal government-could propose such a measure with impunity. The present government, which has burned its fingers over the educational in England, will be timid question about taking a bold line, on the question of education in Ireland. It nay therefore be taken for granted that the present Government-whose existence is precarious-will not sup port any proposal for the establishment of a Catholic University

(2) A Catholic College within Dublin University.

This plan, which means the establishment of a Catholic College in Dublin, affiliated to Dublin University finds favor with many Catholics and Protestants. Were it carried out be one university there would then for all Ireland, and probably three Colleges within that University; namely, Dublin University, consisting of Trinity College, a Catholic College in Dublin, and a Presbyterian College in Belfast. But to secure the acceptance plan by the Catholics, it is of this ssential that the governing body of Dublin University should be reforma thoroughly representative ed on basis, and to this the present gover nors of Trinity College would never They would infinitely prefer a Catholic University. And it would be very difficult to carry a scheme af fecting Trinity College against which 'Trinity College would protest.

(3) A Catholic and a Presbyterian College within the Royal University This plan would merely be tempor It might be accepted by arv. the Catholics as an instalment. It would never be accepted as a final settle ment, and would not probably , be proposed as a final settlement, for veryone knows that the Royal University is doomed. What this scheme if carried out would come to m end would be this: the Catholic College in Dublin, established and ndowed by the State, would ultimately develop into a Catholic Univer The Presbyterian College in sity. Belfast, similarly established and emdowned, would ultimately dev into a Presbyterian University. Ther

there would be three Universities in Ireland—a Protestant Episcopalian, a Presbyterian and a Catholic; and so the cause of denominational education in Ireland would, in spite of all the past efforts of the English people triumph all along the line.

Which of these plans has the best chance of being accepted by Parlia nent? In the present whirligig English politics, it would be a bold man who would prophesy-unless he knows, and I do not know. I shall, however, return to the subject on some future occasion. But for the present I close the story of Three Centuries of Irish Education. - R. Barry O'Brien in the May number of Donahoe's Magazine.

OBITU ARY

MRS. WILLIAM KENNEDY. - On Sunday last this well known highly esteemed resident of St. Ann's Ward passed to her eternal reward. Although ailing for a long period and having been obliged to spend many months last year in the Northern dis trict of this province in the hope of recovering her health, Mrs. Kennedy was always hopeful that she would

and

years to come. But it was otherwise ordained. When, a few years ago, the hand of death deprived her, without a moment of warning, of her husband, Mrs. Kennedy, wish that spirit 0 courage and business tact frequently noticeable in her sex under such circumstances, undertook to continue th business of her late husband with the aid of her sons, with results which on the 27th June.

nities and pupils of local schools After the service the remains , w transferred to Cote des Neiges ce After the servi were tery, where they were interred in the family plot. May her soul rest peace.

Notes From Quebec. (From our Own Correspondent.)

THE HARP OF BRIAN BORU. -According to a despatch from Washington, an effort will be made to have the historic harp of Brian Born placed on exhibition at the St. Louis World's Fair. The great Irish mouarch was killed in the battle of C,ontarf in the year 1014. His harp was left with his son Donagh, bu the latter being deposed by his ne phew, went to Rome, taking with hin the crown, harp and other regalia of his father, which he presented to the then reigning Pontiff. These regalia were kept in the Vatican for Soni time, when the Pope sent the har to the then reigning King , of Eng land, but the crown, which was massive gold, he retained. The harp was given by the King to the first Earl of Clanrickarde, in whose fami ly it remained until the beginning of the eighteenth century, when it came through a lady of the De Burgh fand ly, into that of McMahon, of Cle nagh, in the County of Clare, after whose death it became the property of Commissioner MacNamara, of Li merick. In 1782 it was presented to the Right Honorable W lliam Conyngham, who deposited it in the m of Trinity College, where it still, remains. rt is 32 inches high and of first-class workmanship. The sounding-board is of oak, the arms of red sally, the extremity of the uppermost arm in part is capped with silver. It contains a large crystal set in silver and under it was another stone, now lost. The buttons ornamental lmobs at the side of this arm are of silver. On the front arm are the arms of the O'Brian family chased in silver, and the bloody hand supported by lions. On the side of the front arm, within two circles, are two Irish Wolf Dogs, cut in wood. The holes of the sounding board where the strings entered are very neatly ornaments with an escutcheor of brass, carved and gilt. The larger sounding holes have been ornamented probably with silver. The harp had 28 strongs, as there are that number keys and as many string holes. The foot piece is broken off and the parts round which it was joined is in poor condition. The whole harp bears evidence of having been made by an expert artist. Should the harp cross the ocean it is certain to prove very interesting exhibit, especially to the exiled sons and daughters of the Emerald ;Isle. .

FIRST COMMUNION. - The children of St. Patrick's parish, who been receiving instructions from Rev. Father Delargy for the past two months, will receive their first Holy Communion on the 22nd instant. Pen tecost Sunday is the date on which the children of St. Patrick's always receive their First Communion. On the 19th the Sacrament of Confirma tion will be administered to the children, as well as to all adults who have not received that Sacrament.

. . . ST. JEAN BAPTISTE DAY. - AS the demonstration in Montreal on June 24th promises to be an unusually large one, and in order to allow the members of the St. Jean Baptiste Society in Quebec to attend, it has been decided at a mass meeting of the different sections' of that Society to hold the celebration in this city

DEATH OF P. SLAVIN. -Another undary line of St. Patrick's well known and highly esteemed repa sident of this city has gone to rish, she attended St. Ann's Church as a rule, and was prominently reward, in the person of Mr. Patrick Slavin. Mr. Slavin had been ailing sociated with the sodalities organizations of her sex in that for the past few months, but his illparish, Mrs. Kennedy was in the ness only assumed an acute form truest sense a practical Catholic. about ten days previous to his death voman of generous and kindly dis which occurred on the 9th instant. positions, and devoted to all that concerned the spiritual and temporal Deceased has been connected with the city newspapers for nearly 20 years, welfare of her family. Her loss and was highly esteemed for his sterling qualities by his associates be most keenly felt by her daughters and sons, and to them we offer and a large circle of friends. He

The Right Rev. Dr. Spalding, Bi- soon cease. It has done good, and of Peoria, recently delivered a will do good by its clamorous pro-ses on this subject in the great clamation of the wrongs which the shop of Peoria, recently delivered a addr auditorium in Chucago. In the . course of it His Lordship said:

Despite our marvellous success and achievement, we have failed to cure equal opportunities to all, which is the radical aim and master passion of democracy. More than sevents per cent. of the wealth of the United States, it is reckoned, is owned nine per cent. of the families; while twenty-nine per cent. of the wealth is all that is left for ninety-one per cent of the population; and the ten dency of industrial progress under the competitive system is to increase inequality of possession. If the pre sent methods continue, a few indivi duals and trusts will soon control the means of production and distribution, and this in an area in which money is the mightiest form of social influ ence and dominion. To these fes individuals and corporations will be ong an authority and power greater than any history makes known - an authority and power which are 'incompatible with political liberty and popular institutions.

Capital dictates even now, in arge measure, the politics of our national, state and municipal legislative bodies. It enables the multi-million aire and the trusts to make or . t evade the laws. It controls most potent organs of public opinion, and s able to give to the interests of industralism priority over the rights of Much of the evil is due to the man. ompetitive system, which involves enormous waste, over-capitalization, panic, strikes and all the miserie which thence flow to the whole social body. Where material goods are the first and paramount aim, human values become secondary, or are lost sight of altogether. But the evils from which we suffer the wars from which we have never are not wholly or necessarily due to failed to come forth victorious, have made us over-confident and ready to the competitive system. They are believe that there is no kind of evil largely the result of the greed of inover which we may not easily gain dividual capitalists and of the imthe mastery. The mighty conquerors providence and wastefulness of working men, many of whom, whether before whose faces defeat had still , their their wages be high or low, fled are at length blinded and led to ruin by the splendor of their hours of toil long or short, live or the verge of poverty. The money they spend in saloons would make them to republics and empires. Industraland their families comfortable, their ism is the kingdom of this world, and, whether consciously or veaknesses and vices, however, are it asserts itself in opposition to the almost inevitable in the environment kingdom of God. in which multitudes of them are com pelled to pass their lives. On the formation and preservation of moral character, circumstances are decidedly potent.

When there is question of method and means by which social improve ment may be brought about, we need not consider anarchism, which is an insanity whose only issue is crime; and in America there is nothing more certain than that whatever it tempts to reduce its theories to practice, it will be crushed.

should be that of friends. If warfare Socialism is not, or at least need is to be persisted in. the final outnot be, anarchic. Its aims is the come, however the balance may turn transformation of private and comin the varying conflicts, must, inevipeting capital into a united collective tably, be the ruin of both, involving capital. As set forth by Marx and its other able exponents, it rests on that of general welfare and of the happiness of millions. a basis of materialism and atheism, and is the foe, not merely of the fun damental economic institutions, but but learn to act in harmony, no harm of the monogamic family and the will happen to any class, for Christian Church as well. It may be ployers and wage earners can live maintained that socialistic collectivin peace only when they are influenced ism does not necessarily involve ma and controlled by sentiments of justerialism or atheism or irreligion or

NOB 00000000000000

the

over-

or

of

tri-

noť.

of

of

toiling masses have suffered. But the socialistic state will remain a theory,

a visionary entity, and could it be

would accompany its speedy

treasures which are the gains

throw would

gious conditions

come a reality, the cataclysm which

thousands of years of heroic struggles

and sacrifices. Shall we then rest content with things as they are?

This is as impossible as the realisation of the theories of collectivism.

No wise or good man can contemplate with satisfaction the actual po-

. .

Our politics are notoriously corrupt

and in spite of sporadic reactions the tendency is to still greater corruption. The public conscience is ready to condone successful crime, whether

committed by private individuals or by officers of the government. The most fervid advocates of the sacredness of property rights are those cities laws are enacted which those who pass them, as well as those who are appointed to see that they are executed, have no intention of . enforcing. The administrative lie pre-suffering legal punishment, become

victims of a system of blackmail,

which enables officials to batten on

the sins and miseries of fallen women,

gamblers and criminal saloon-keep-

Our surpassing success in subduing

increasing wealth and population,

nature to our uses, the still widening

boundaries of our domain, our rapidumphs; and this has happened also

In the capital and labor struggle

disturbance, disorder and suffering,

there is small hope of permanent improvement, so long as genuine good will and conciliatory disposition are lacking. Fairness, forbearance and peace and harmonious co-operation in economics as in other human rela-

and laborers are inter-dependent, and their attitude towards one another

If capital and organized labor will

The interests of employers

kindliness are the prerequisites

kindliness are the orerequisites

tions.

ers.

vails, and transgressors, instead

legislatures and municipalities

by crushing competitors. In

who have made fortunes by bribing

litical, social, educational or

swallow the priceless

What a throng o old-time association mind by the death venerated religious ly called to her w the past week ?

SATURDAY,

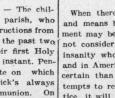

During fifty years ther Genevieve has name and figure in convent work in Chi almost be said to h ginning of the Cath city: ae all events si infancy, and how im her share and part i derful growth an Catholic religious li good works within ! my office to rec though I shall acquit task.

It was on the feast Mercy, 1846, that th Sisters opened the fin Chicago under the ir guidance of Bishop from the day of his pastor of the frontier rished the project. signally fortunate in lected for the new fo memory of the first S

Agatha, remained for ful benediction in the early settlers, Protesta Catholic. How often days have I listened t influence Mother A over all who came to girls in those days nev ing of the charm and the character and qual Agatha-her little con her as a tender and a ther; her pupils, I may her, and the people in were brought in conta Sisters in this first Chi regarded Mother Agath and I may say wonde early period few people had any knowledge of vent life

Mother Agatha, your was-only 24-had the of being able to distin merit and of employing fitting sphere. She wa her associates and in th early sought admission. cholera visited Chicago Sisters of Mercy were t fer their services for the victims of the epidemicthe bedside of the suffer night. How devotedly ployed in this trying er shown by the fact that sisters fell victims to th their self-sacrificing dev this sad juncture.

The dearly loved Mothe one of these. What a t young and struggling But there were other Sisters who did not hes on with the work. Mot one of the original ban authority, but she away within a year. Mo was the next Superior. gle term she was succeed ther Frances. Who is t! war times that does not ther Frances ? She was, say, one of the best know the life of Chicago dur twenty years of adminis local superior. It was M ces who sent the first bal of Mercy from the West to the sick and wounded the early days of the Civ was an ardent Unionist, a sonally known to many ing commanders of the Un President Lincoln and Ge gave public testimony to tance of the services rende Sisters in hospitals as w the battlefield. What I have already wi may say, a necessary intr order to make plain the ch importance of the work to ther Genevieve succeeded, thirty years ago. That been pioneered by other nevertheless from the ea Mother Genevieve may have had an important sh influence in guiding the fo the community in Chicago Genevieve was a "born c From her earliest days as and Sister she was account and thoughtful beyond her . . .

surpass the understanding of finite were most gratifying. Although liv-minds. And on that occasion, the ing on William street, within the grandest act of Faith is demanded of s-faith absolute and unquestioning in the revelation of God. And in ad dition to these three great feasts May also presents us with the com memoration of the Finding of the Holy Cross. And with all these sources of devotion and consequently of graces, we have the constant dedication :of the month to the Mother of God. May this year should, there ore, be a month of untold blessings for every good Catholic, and w trust that they are numerous this land.

THREE CENTURIES OF IRISH BDUCATION

Continued from Page 3.

not object; the bulk of Presbyteri ans would not object. Trinity Col. lege would not object. So far as Ire-land is concerned, a Catholic university could be established to-morrow, without serious opposition from any sincere expression of our sympathy in their great bereavement. The funeral was held on Wednesda morning to St. Patrick's Church. where a solemn Requiem Mass Was sung. The attendance was larg and influential, cltizens of all classes larg leaves a widow and four children to mourn his loss. . .

THE PROPOSED REFUGE. letter has been addressed by the St. Vincent de Paul Society to the City Council, informing that body of their were present. Rev. J. Killoran offic intention to establish a night refuge ated, assisted by Rev. P. J. Heffer and applying for financial aid. Abou nan and Rev. Father Polan, as dea-con and sub-deacon, respectively. The $2500 is required to start the work. As Mayor Parent has always shown pupils of St. Ann's School rendered a disposition to aid any project likethe musical portion of the service in ly to be of benefit to the city, it may an impressive manner. In body of the Church be taken for granted that the appeal the will be favorably considered by were the representatives of religious Council.

free love or opposition to culture but this nevertheless seems to be the attitude which Socialists are driven to take towards the higher activities of man and the spiritual content of life.

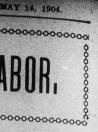

The heroic strivings of the bravest and most loving for thousands made earth a para years have not dise, but they have awakened in innumerable minds such a conception o the worth of liberty, religion, culture and privilege to take up whatever worle or calling one's endowments impel him to that no paradise of comfort and plenty could compens them for the loss of these spiritual treasures. Socialism has failed even in small isolated communities, and no serious attempt to introduce and establish it as a general scheme can be made so long as the men who mould opinion continue to believe in the paramount worth of the life the spirit: and should the world lose this faith, it will be driven to cept the autocracy of despots, the tyranny of collectivism.

tice and humanity, and by a concern for the good of all. Laws and c trivances cannot compose the strife between capital and labor, for the causes from which it springs are elemental and as deep as human nature, and only what raises the mind and touches the heart can reach the fountain-head of the evil.

Our industralism and machinery have wrought marvels, but they have not made us wiser or more unse On the contrary they have promoted the formation of vast centres of population, in which life, physical and moral, degenerates; and consequently they are a menace to the high st. interests of humanity. Towns of fifty or a hundred thousand inhabitants indispensable. Without them are there can be no class with leisure to devote themselves to science and art, to the more important functions the refinements government and to the refinements and elegancies of life; but the massing of millions of human beings at a single point makes it the most fitting the tyranny of collectivism. The socialistic agitation will not ing-ground for every kind of infectious germ, a nursery of vice, and a breed-

The gravity and solidity character was signally den by her early appointment tress of novices," perhaps weighty and responsible off

t has done good, and by its clamorous ne wrongs which the have suffered. But the will remain a theory, tity, and could it , the cataciysm which any its speedy overswallow the priceless h are the gains of ears of heroic struggles Shall we then rest things as they are? possible as the realisaneories of collectivism. od man can contemstaction the actual poeducational or are notoriously corrupt sporadic reactions the still greater corrup lic con science is ready ccessful crime, whether private individuals or he government. advocates of the Saperty rights are those le fortunes by bribing d municipalities or mpetitors. In enacted which those as well as those who to see that they are no intention of eniministrative lie presgressors, instead of punishment, system of blackmail officials to batten on series of fallen women, criminal saloon-keep-

g success in subduing uses, the still widening ur domain, our rapidealth and population, which we have never forth victorious, have onfident and ready to ere is no kind of evil may not easily gain The mighty conquerors aces defeat had th blinded and led to lendor of their tris has happened also empires. Industraldom of this world, onsciously or noť. in opposition to the

and labor struggle order and suffering, ope of permanent imlong as genuine good iatory disposition are ess, forbearance and the prerequisites the orerequisites of onious co-operation in n other human relaterests of employers e inter-dependent, and towards one another of friends. If warfare ed in, the final outthe balance may turn conflicts, must, ineviain of both, involving welfare and of the illions. I organized labor will

in harmony, no harm any class, for emge earners can live hen they are influenced by all. all. t co and ich leep rai

art the

lism narv iser y th f va h lif ites; ice t nity

tho ble. cla es t port to of li of h ces i y of

What a throng of memories old-time associations are brought to mind by the death of the dear and judgment of the nun who has the fuvenerated religious was was suddenly called to her well-earned reward discernment. the past week ?

During fifty years and more Mother Genevieve has been a familiar name and figure in convent life and convent work in Chicago. She may almost be said to have seen the beginning of the Catholic life of the infancy, and how important has been her share and part in the subsequent wonderful growth and propagation of Catholic religious life and Catholic good works within her sphere let it office to recall, imperfectly

SATURDAY, MAY 14, 1904.

though I shall acquit myself of the task.

It was on the feast of our Lady of Mercy, 1846, that the little band of Sisters opened the first convent in Chicago under the inspiration and guidance of Bishop Quarter, who from the day of his first arrival as pastor of the frontier town, had nout rished the project. The Bishop was signally fortunate in the Sisters selected for the new foundation. The memory of the first Superior, Mother Agatha, remained for long in grateful benediction in the hearts of the. early settlers, Protestants as well as Catholic. How often in my boyhood influence Mother Agatha exercised over all who came to know her. The girls in those days never tired of tell-Agatha-her little community loved her as a tender and affectionate mother; her pupils, I may say, worshiped her, and the people in general who were brought in contact with the Sisters in this first Chicago convent regarded Mother Agatha with respect nd I may say wonder, for at that early period few people in the West had any knowledge of nuns and convent life

Mother Agatha, young though she was-only 24-had the rare capacity of being able to distinguish genuine merit and of employing it in the most fitting sphere. She was favored in her associates and in the novices who early sought admission. The dreaded cholera visited Chicago in 1854. The Sisters of Mercy were the first to offer their services for the care of the victims of the epidemic-they were at the bedside of the sufferers day and night. How devotedly they were employed in this trying emergency shown by the fact that several of the sisters fell victims to the epidemic by their self-sacrificing devotedness in this sad juncture. The dearly loved Mother Agatha was one of these. What a trial for the young and struggling community ? But there were other brave-hearted Sisters who did not hesitate to go on with the work. Mother Paula, one of the original band, succeeded in authority, but she too passed away within a year. Mother Vincent was the next Superior. After a single term she was succeeded by Mo ther Frances. Who is there of antewar times that does not recall Mother Frances ? She was, I venture to say, one of the best known figures in life of Chicago during nearly twenty years of administration as local superior. It was Mother Frances who sent the first band of Sisters office and m

and | munity life, since so much depends on the prudence, discrimination and ture of the community, thus in a sense, committed to her powers of

In this capacity Mother Genevieve it is acknowledged, showed the rarest, judgment. She was a model ess, wisdom and capacity. When firm at length the reins of government were placed in her hands, following city; ae all events she saw it in its the transfer of Mother Frances to Independence, Iowa, Mother Genevieve quickly demonstrated her high fitness for administration Up to the period of the Chicago fire the sphere of work of the Sisters of Mercy had been gradually and steadily enlarging. The familiar Convent on Wabash avenue had gone down in the wreck of October, 1870, a great Academy at Twenty-ninth street, the finest building of the kind in the city, took its place. The hospital at Calumet avenue and twenty-sixth street had grown from a small foundation, to meet necessary conditions, until it subsequently covered the block with newer and superior appointments. Meanwhile the work of the Sisters of Mercy in the parochial schools had gone on widening out and extending on every side. What shall I say the great academy, Saint Xavier's which was distinctively Mother Genevieve's work? Who that has seen it but must have marvelled at the abidays have I listened to stories of the lity and capacity brought to bear in planning and carrying to completion this splendid educational and convent edifice ? And greater still would be ing of the charm and fascination in the marvel were it known the finan-the character and qualities of Mother cial and other difficulties and obstacles which had to be overcome in can rying forward this great undertaking It was a woman who planned and accomplished this arduous task, and that woman was Mother Genevieve ! In these days of great buildings and stupendous undertakings in business, the erection of a large convent may not impress the average reader as

of

affair of magnitude or involving difficulty. But if we stop to consider that in the case of a religious community the resources come, not from stockholders nor from the general public, but from the savings and economies of the nuns, we can readily see how wonderful must be the man agement in these communities to bring about the results accomplished Non-Catholics, as I know, often believe that "the Church" does these things; that it is the Pope or the Bishop who provides the means ! Catholics in general know that the religious communities here and elsewhere are and must be self-sustaining, each relying on its own resources of in come; and the income is usually meagre enough.

Without outside assistance Mother Genevieve, by her orderly management, was enabled to carry on the various educational and charitable works in charge of the Sisters Mercy in this city. But after all it was not in building or in the acquisition of land that the lamented Superior's highest and best capacity is demonstrated. No, it is seen in the community she governed so long, and in the fruits of the religious training and the educational qualifications of the thousands of girls who have gone forth from the academies and schools of the Sisters of Mercy These constitute the highest and most effective testimony to Mother Genevieve's capacity and fitness for her ment to the Virgin Mother, and through her to all that this attached own city, and here in our midst may me of the precious fruits of self-sacrificitg laboes. How effective those labors have been her sorrowing Sisters and children will testi-Archbishops and Bishops in authority over her and her community have given repeated proofs of their ence and their respect for her confid judgment and capacity. Priests were won to esteem her as an ideal Mother Superior; and even hard headed men of affairs, who were brought into business opportunities with the convent or the hospital marvelled at her. unfailing shrewd business judgment and her methodical, orderly methods which won their admiration. Mother Genevieve's word was as good as a bond, passed into a proverb.

. . .

Her life-the life of a Nun or Sister is a hidden life of which the world knows little. It is an obscure lifeeven in the case of a Superior- be cause her appointed work is removed from the public gaze. She scrupulously avoids notice. Newspapers do not chronicle her doings. Even her very name is commonly unknown. Her identity is hidden under the title of "Sister," or "Mother," as the case may be.

The story of Mother Genevieve's religious life and experience, barring the burden of authority borne by he so many years, is that of every religious. She left the world and its allurements, family, friends, So ciety, ambitions-all these she freely urrendered and laid at the altar of God in her youth to devote herself to this service and to the welfare others. of

The memory of that dear reverend Mother, I am sure, will long be cherished in Chicago, and a shining chapter in the "annals of the Sisters of Mercy" will be the one devoted to the life, the character and the service of the venerated Mother Genevieve .-William J. Onahan in The New World.

DEVOTION TO BLESSED VIRGIN.

With faith disappearing from the earth, men seem to be relaxing their grasp of the fundamental principles of truth, and their respect for all that is noble and pure and most worthy of reverance. Christ has been levelled in some minds to our own deg ee, and all that His teaching had consecrated, womankind most of all, is fast losing the distinction with which Christendom had learned invest it out of regard chiefly the surpassing spiritual beauty of the Mother of Christ.

This is one of the reasons why should pray for a love of the Mother of Christ. With it one can never lose a sense of regard for the creature of God's hands, whom God has destined to do so much to keep our race pure and reverent and chivalrous. In proportion as this regard possesses men they are less grovelling less conceited, less selfish. It is enough to inspire the true man with awe, and the false with fear, to con sider the effect it must have on all good women to look upon Mary, the Mother of Jesus, as their only worthy ideal. We often speak of women as being naturally religious, and even call them the devout sex. It is true too, particularly of Catholic women but it is not because they are more capable of religious sentiment and observance than men. It is rather because they cultivate their attach-except to its object; but there are many ways of professing love of the Mother of Christ. When men gather together in sodalities, when whole congregations kneel to recite the rosary, when choirs chant the Loretto Litany, and men and women pause while the Angelus rings to reflect on her annunciation and repeat, even mutely, Pray for us, O Holy Mother of God, that we may be worthy of the promises of Christthere is no need of further profession of such love. This is why we like to commend sodalities and May services and every form of devotion in which the faithful unite together to practice devotion to the Mother of Christ. For devotion to Mary, the Motier of Jesus, implies devotion to Jesus Himself, A true estimate of her graces and prerogatives enables us to form some conception of His divine and human nature. By His birth from her we know He is Man like ourselves; by her singular exaltation

THE TRUE WITNESS AND CATHOLIC CHRONICLE.

over all other women we are helped to believe that He is God, to Mother of Whom she was endowed with fullness of grace and blessed forever among women. This is why it is important that our devotion to her should be simple as that of children, but solidly based on the scriptural revelation of her sanctity and mission. No doubt, to help us to discern aad appreciate her sanctity, there is so very little said of her in Scripture in order that we may me ditate it thoroughly, and not be distracted by many details of her life which could in no way add to her title, Hail, Full of Grace ! - Church Progr

(By an Occasional Contributor.)

The week we are now in has great many notable events to commemorate. Beginning with the eighth and coming down to this day, we find that they cover a very varied field.

THE EIGHTH MAY. - The first plenary Council of Baltimore was held, in 1852; the battle of Palo Alto was fought in 1846; the siege of Orleans, under Joan of Arc, was commenced, in 1429; and Michael Davitt was released from Portland prison, in 1882.

. .

NINTH OF MAY-Father Marquette died, in 1675; the battle of Spotsylvania was fought, in 1864; the city of Schiraz, Persia, was destroyed by an earthquake, and 12,000 persons were killed, in 1853; and Cromwell took the city of Clonmel, in 1650.

TENTH OF MAY .- Alsace-Lorraine eded to Germany by France, in 1871; 'iconderoga was captured by Ethan Allen, in 1775; the Centennial Exhibition was opened, at Philadelphia in 1876; "Stonewall" Jackson died, in 1863, and Daniel Shea, the Irish Oriental scholar, died, in 1863.

ELEVENTH OF MAY-Count Lacy the (Irish) Russian Field Marshal, died, in 1751; Archbishop Troy, of for holding to the gaudy and inartis- ing up to bathe the wounds of "Sacred Pictures in Catholic of Leonardo da Vinci's "Last Sup-Homes," is the theme which Kathe- per," and several other notable rine Conway, of the Boston Pilot, dis- cred pictures in her drawing-room: usses in an article published recently in "The Holy Family." She writes :

"American Catholics, for the most part, have been woefully indifferent to their glorious heritage of sacred art. It is almost a proverb in New England that you can tell a Unitarian home by the number of Madonnas in it. But in the Catholic home. too often,, the sacred pictures ar few and unbeautiful, and relegated to these portions of the house not seen by the transient guest.

"Most of the writers on the art inspired and encouraged by the Catholic Church are non-Catholics. The study of such art, especially in its cradle-lands, has to be sure, broadening and uplifting influence, but it cannot supply Catholle faith and piety; nor completely eradicate inherited prejudicee, nor the effects of the anti-Catholic presentation of history. This is evident in the textbooks prepared for the schools, in the references books in the public libraries, and in the tone of popular art lectures. We know of one non-Catholic'art writer in America, Mrs. Clara Erskine Clement, who had her "Hand Book of Sacred and Legendary Art" revised by a Catholic, divested of readings of history and descriptive terms offensive to Catholics, and republished under the title "Christian" Symbols and Stories of the Saints." But this event is unique in the history of our art literature.

"We have had one incomparable Catholic art writer, Eliza Allen Starr She was the founder and for long the chief teacher of St. Luke's Conservatory of Art, at the Academy of the that among lofty and lowly alike, Sisters of the Holy Cross, St. Mary's Notre Dame, Ind. She lectured every winter for many years, in her studio in Chicago, on the great painters and sculptors; and in the eighties. and ninetys made lecture tours in the East, and gave art courses at our summer schools. She is the author of "Patron Saints," "Christmastide (artistically considered)," "Christian and Shrines," and "The Three Keys" Art in Our Own Age," "Pilgrims a study of Raphael's "Disputa." The two books last mentioned are monumental works, but how many of our Catholics know them ? Indeed, so slight is the demand for any or all of these works that Miss Starr's executors announce no further editions will be printed. This is not to the credit of the Catholic community, and it is poor encouragement fo later workers in the same field, like Anna Ceaton Schmidt and Mary F. Nixon Roulet. "We may, however, be near the turning of the tide in this matter. When we grasp the significance the sacred art-studies of non-Catholics for culture's sake, and of the distribution of prints of Raphael's Madonna of the Chair at Christmastide, in the Boston public schools perhaps we shall take thought of our ong-neglected inheritance.

Fine photographs of the great pictures of Raphael, Murillo, Leonardo da Vinci, Guido Reni, Corregio, Rubens, Titian and the rest, can be obtained at any art store worthy of the name, and at moderate prices; so there is no excuse on the score of expense ,or homes bare of them, nor Dublin, died, in 1815; Father Ma- tic lithographs that erst have done Crucified, as she has seen her mother

"'I should think they would be a constraint upon you; that you would not laugh and enjoy yourself before them.

The objector was also a Catholic, and her point of view was strange to the stronger faith of her friend.

" 'I never had that thought about them,' she answered. We can't get out of the sight of God, and we laugh and amuse ourselves, nevertheless, Perhaps, with something to remind us of Him and His claims, there may, be-not a constraint-but a restraint that we will be glad to remember after.

But there are Catholics so full of human respect, and so narrow and uncultured, withal, that they exclude sacred pictures from prominence in their houses, lest they be reckoned among the devout, or annoy the non-Catholic or infidel guest. They do. not fear to offend pure eyes with dangerously suggestive pagan pictures; nor refined tastes with the banalities of some fleeting fashion in art. They have not sufficient common-sense nor fineness of feeling to understand what they are shutting out of their own lives and those of their children, in banishing the Blessed Mother and the Divine Child.

"Wherever the pictures of the Divine Redeemer and His Blessed , Mother and the Saints abound in the household, faith is strong, and the sinful mortal, though as the poet says he trip and fall, yet he shall not blind his soul with clay.

"The veneration of the Russians, schismatics though they are, for their. icons, or holy pictures is so great they have the place of honor in , the most frequented part of the house. It is said that if a Russian is bent on an evil act, he first covers his icons, as if thus to shut out the idea of the Divine Presence, of which they, too forcibly remind him.

An eminent non-Catholic once said in the writer's hearing, before a large gathering of women, also non-Catholic for the most part: "What a sad mistake Protestantism made when it put the Child Jesus out of the nursery !'

"If sacred pictures and images have immense value in the spiritual life of the adult, they are indispensable in the spiritual training of the child, Abstract ideas and mere word pictures are beyond these little minds. But let the little one, even as a babe in arms, learn to rest his innocent eyes on the face of the Christ Child. the pictures or statues of the Blessed Mother and St. Joseph, the Guardian Angel above his crib, and the lamp alight at the shrine of the Sacred Heart, and one marvels to note how. much of the work is done by the time he can utter the holy Names.

"How does your little two year; old know that the Child in the manger at Bethlehem and the Man in the Garden at Gethsemane are equally Our Lord ? But she does know it. Try her: she will never blunder. She has the grace of Baptism, and her favorable environment is rapidly developing the infused faith in her soul to conscious faith. Here is another but little older, who brings flowers for the Sacred Heart; and still another-the dearest child of all-climby the | <ul> <li>I tabor, tot' et al.</li> <li>It springs are elease human nature, tes the mind and scan reach the evil.</li> <li>and machinery dis, but they have promoted is centres of popu, physical and and consequently of the lighest in-</li> <li>Mother Genevieve succeeded, more than thirty years ago. That work had been pioneered by other Superiors, world, training the young in princi-</li> </ul>   | It should not be understood, however, that we are to cultivate a lovefor the Mother of God merely becauseit inspires us with a high regard forwomanhood. This is a great deal,but it is nothing compared to thechief benefit of this love. Love ofthe Mother of God is itself some-thing worth praying and labeling for                         | "But some Catholic house-mothershave extraordinary ideas as to thefitness of location for sacred pictures.Yonder Protestant matron hangs theSistine Madonna over the mantle inher front drwing-room. But herCatholic neighbor sends the like pic-ture up to a bed-room, and puts "ThePuritan Maid," or a Japanese land-scape in the place of honor downstairs. It may be said that forthe Protestant, the Madonna has onlyan artistic value; it is a mere orna-lic may be defended on the ground ofreverence; and extreme and scrupul-ous realization of the sacredness ofthe subjects.It was once said to a Catholic who |  |

|--|---|---|--|
| Without themss with leisure tosection and art,ant functions ofthe refinementse: but the mass-inte most fittingcind of infectiousthe, and a breed-ite, and a breed-ite, and a breed-the refinementsite, and a breed-ite, and a breed-iter and breed-iter and breed-iter and breed-iter and a | more than actuate men with a superior of the Virgin Mother,what a change would come over theearth ! What low and sordid cravingsthey would abandon, what new andholy purposes they must conceive tWhat else is there actually movingmany a patient, fearless, high-princi-pled soul but this very love of themother of Christ. In the nature of | had a large and splendid engraving tues symbolied about us.DENTIST.TELAITER G. Kennedy,DentistBpeodatity: - Grown andBridge Work and PlatesBridge Work and Plates   |  |

THE TRUE WITNESS AND CATHOLIC CHRONICLE.

SATURDAY, MAY 14, 1904.

SATURDAY, MAY 14,

80000000000000

CHAPTER VIII.-Conti

ly, but she had resolve

d go to the chapel and 1

tabernacle the sorrows

The good nuns going in at

eing how devoutly she pr eply touched; they felt t

ere choice blessings in sto

ect why she prayed. Agn

so devout, but they did

home and freedom far n

e had anticipated, but wh

usin's mind turned on H

lief, she sought it by tryin

triends among the gayest g the school and it was soc

hat the old and tried frien

her cousin was no dearer to

the new ones she was co

making. It was noticed th

chose her intimates chiefly

those who dressed best and to be wealthy. Cecelia w

making acquaintances, a

those

the treated all kindly, she

oung ladies of sterling wor

it mattered not to her that

them were among the poore

school. She made friends

them long, but, alas ! poor

many to whom she gave her

proved in the end not to b

as she had anticipated. It learned and remembered, and

came when she was glad to with the companionship of

far more wise cousin had ch

Both girls were greatly and loved by teachers and

ions, but the one flaw in h

wise loving character, name

pride, robbed Agnes of much

steem she would otherwis

commanded, and it did not 1

ters any when some mischie

on whispered about that A

len was an orphan whom th

were bringing up, Cecelia,

ing the remark, rebuked it i

er that prevented its repeti

"Sweet sixteen to-morrow

Agnes Cullen drew herself up

standing on tiptoe to mal

look taller, just as her aunt

years before when she was

go with Mrs. Daton as a co

'Sweet sixteen to-morrow.

hardly seems possible that I

And so am I," said 'Cece

ingly: "you need not be so p

being a young lady, for I am

What a misfortune to be

feel almost tempted somet

try wearing thick-soled sho

"And make yourself look

"I would not care if I did

then people would not be alw

ing me for a little girl and

a young lady, when I am siz

"I would willingly change

ridiculous, too."

your senior.'

six incl

nes taller than you.'

heels to make me taller

ly almost a young lady."

CHAPTER IX.

bitter lesson to her, but

mate with few; but

d not reveal even to h

and she was glad th

For a few days Cecelia

0000000

000000

Society Directory

Business Cards.

THE

Smith Bros.' Granite Co,

The following was clipped from the Granite," Boston, Mass. :

" Illustrated in the advertisement of the quarry owners to use compressed air for operating rock drills, and also

T. J. O'NEILL

REAL ESTATE AGENT.

180 ST. JAMES STREET.

Loans, Insurance, Renting, and Col-lecting of Rents. Moderate charges,

CONROY BROS.

228 Centre Street.

ELECTRICand MECHANICAL

BELLS, etc.

TELEPPHONE 3833

THOMAS O'CONNEL

Dils.and a fine line of Wall Papers.

ealerinGeneral Household Hardware . Paints

STREET

PRACTICAL PLUMBER,

GAS, STEAM and HOT WATER FITTER

RUTLAND LINING, FITS ANY STOVE

CHEAP,

Orders promptly attended to ...: -: Moderate harges. A trial solicited.

ESTABLISHED 1864.

and prompt returns.

the

Hon. Mr. Justice C. J. Doherty; 1st Vice, F. E. Devlin, M.D.; 2nd Vice, F. J. Curran, B.C.L.: Treas-urer, Frank J. Green; correspond-ing Secretary, J. Kahala; Rec-

ST. PATRICK'S T. A. AND B. SO. CIETTY .- Meets on the second Sun day of every month in St. Patrick's Hall, 92 St. Alexander street, at 8.80 p.m. Committee of Management meets in same hall on the first Tuesday of every month at 8 p.m. Rev. Director, Rev. Jas. Killoran; President, W. P. Doyle; Rec. Secy., Jno. P. Gunning, 716 St. Antoine street, St. Henri.

ST. ANN'S T. A. & B. SOCIETY, established 1868.-Rev. Director, Rev. Father McPhail; President, D. Aallery, M.P.; Sec., J. F. Quina, 625 St. Dominique street; M. J. Ryan, treasurer, 18 St. Augustia street. Meets on the second Sunday of every month, in St. Ann's Hall, corner Young and Ottawa streets, at 8.80 p.m.

C.M.B.A. OF CANADA, BRANCH 26.-(Organized 13th November, 1873.-Branch 26 meets at <sup>1</sup> St. Patrick's Hall, 92 St, Alexander St., on every Monday of each month. The regular meetings for the transaction of business are held on the 2nd and 4th Mondays of each month, at 8 p.m. Spiritual Adviser, Rev. M. Callaghan; Chancellor, P. J. Darcy: President W. F. Wall; Recording Secretary, P. C. McDonagh, 139 Visitation street; Financial Secretary, Jas. J. Costigan, 325 St. Urbain street; Trea. surer; J. H. Kelly; Medical Advisers Drs. H. J. Harrison, E. J. O'Connor and G. H. Merrill.

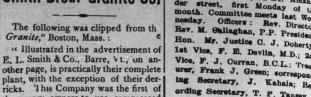

roof is required we give a guarantee for 10, 7 or 5 years, according to price. Our experts are at your disposal, without extra cost. Cap disposal, we do anything for you?

if I could, Agnes, for I do no ing called a young lady wh GEORGE W, REED & CO., still in school.' "It is all right here. To young makes people think t Roofers, Asphalters, &c., are really the more brilliant

ST. PATRICK'S SOCIESTY.-Estab-lished March 6th, 1856, incorpor-sted 1863, revised 1864. Meets in St. Patrick's Fall, 92 St. Alexan-der street, first Monday of the month. Committee meets last Wed-nesday. Officers : Rev. Director. Rev. M. Callaghan, P.P. President, Non-Me. Justice C. J. Doharty.

ording Secretary, T. P. Tansey.

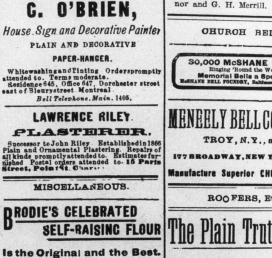

ST. ANN'S YOUNG MEN'S SOCIE. TY organized 1885.—Meets in its hall, 157 Ottawa street, on the first Sunday of each mon 2.30 p.m. Spiritual Adviser the month, Rev. Father Flynn, C.SS.R.; President, P. Kenehan; Treasurer, Thomas O'Connel; Rec.-Sec., Robt. J. Hart, the first to take up the plug drill. We can say, without exaggeration, that this concern has the best equipped granite quarry in the country." THE SMITH BROS.' CRANITE CO 290 Bloury street, are the sole repre-sentatives of these famous quarries in Canada. The granite is princi-paily used for the finest class of monumental work.

Practica | Plumbers, Gasand Steam Fitters Tel. Main 3552. Night and Day Services

Cor. Murray and Ottawa

DATENTS

785 ORAIG STREET.

100

"Les Aspirations," is the title of a tionality, participate-ior the glory ous poet, Madame Treffeu, widow of collection of Canadian poems in the Offenbach collaborateur, Edmon 0 Montel de St. Jean, Robillard, Bu The ron, Verrier, S. Rocheblanc, E. Leseland lier, Raymond de la Barre, Virgil fifty pages, is issued from the press Coste and scores of others and

WILLIAM CHAPMAN'S SUCCESS.

(By an Occasional Contributor.)

Motteroy, Martinet, Paris, as far as externals are concerned, is one of the finest samples of the pubcritics lication art, of which these large Parisian houses have the secret. Beautiful though may be the typographical display and the attractiveness of the press work, the externals are but the ess of the alabaster lamp that holds the divine flame lit by the

Some time ago, unknown almost, and with scarcely an introduction mave that of his poems, Mr. Chapman crossed to France and stood in the heart of literary Paris to compete with the giants of the hour for the coveted palms, that are accorded to works of genuine merit.

French language, from the pen

William Chapman, of Ottawa.

volume, of some three hunared

of

Before touching brielly, for space would not permit of a detailed review, upon the literary merits of Mr. Chapman's poems, it may be well to mention that no writer, during the past fifty years, has ever been accorded such an enthusiastic reception as was given to our humble, but truly great Canadian poet. Column upon column of laudatory criticism was penned; page after page of the the leading French reviews told story of the deep and sincere appreciation which he and his works received-an appreciation that cannot be gauged by any standard of money, for it can only be purchased by gen- the world. The most beautiful pasius. That this is no exaggeration we may just recall two facts: that Mr. Chapman was unheard of in France and his poems were absolutely unknown, until, a few months ago, he appeared suddenly, book in hand, in the salons of Paris. Then the press fairy islands in the vast ocean of his rang out, without one discordant note, in praise of the Canadian poet. Among the fifty odd newspapers and reviews that fairly bombarded him with honors, we might mention the the "Republique Francaise," "Revue des Poetes," the "Corres-pondant," "l'Illustration," "l'Art," "Les Livres et les Idees," the "Evenement," the "Mois Litteraire," the "Canada," and the "Paris-Canada." Decidedly this public testimony would suffice to establish the transcendent merits of any new work; but we must add more. Of the scores of eminent litterateurs who received Mr. Chapman with open arms we may ntion Francois Coppee, Jose-Maria de Heredia, Gaston Boissier. Victorien Sardou, Andre Theuriet and Sully Prudhomme, all six members of the French Academy. Of the poets and critics of France, who did in their power to pay homage to the new star that came into their sky from beyond the Atlantic, were F. L'homme, Gustave Zidler, Louis Maigue, Maurice Prox, Achille Pay Jean Lionnet. Lucien Pate. sant, Leonce Depont, Miss Helene Seguin and Miss Marguerite Duportal.

Another celebrity who hastened to honor the Canadian poet was the great painter, Gaston Roullet, and it was the same with the sculptor Bartholdi and Henri Dublois, Bartholdi presented Mr. Chapman with a precious casket containing a fragmen of the bronze used in the creation of the Statue of Liberty-which Bartholdi calls "My big daughter in New York.'

names would constitute a veritable litany of France's most competent If we have taken the trouble

enter into these details, it is sim ply to accentuate the fact that Chapman's volume of poems must have been a perfect revelation to France The idea of a comparatively unknown

colonist, emerging from the forests of the New World, appearing un heralded in the heart of Paris, and electrifying the most carping critics inwith the magnetic flow of his spired verse, is something that cannot be fully understood - neither by us in Canada nor by the litterati o Europe: yet the cold fact remains and is beyond dispute.

It would be presumption for to attempt any literary review, es pecially any criticism, of a volume that has produced such an effect in the impression that we have found such a centre. But, as we are under the secret of Chapman's charm, we will devote a brief space to a reveal ing of the same.

Apart from the technical perfections of his verses, which must he marvellous to have withstood such a test, there is a spirit in them that is of the soil, that belongs to Canada. that cannot be found elsewhere sages ever penned by Chateaubriand were descriptive of scenes in the New World-sunset off the American coast; a starry night in the forest; meditations within ear-shot of Niagara, and such-like-and they stand out like literary productions. They delighted the Old World, for they had about them the freshness of the New World. If it were so, for a half-dozen pages of Chateaubriand, what must it not be for the one-equally gifted with imagination and powers of expression -who was bo(n here, whose infancy, whose youth, whose more mature years, were passed under the blue of a Canadian sky? Chapman heard the weird moanings of the pines, he rambled along the majestic rivers, he scanned the expanses

our inland seas, he listened to the tumbling of our cataracts, he shivered in the Boreal storms that rush down from the regions of the Hudson Bay, he harkened to the ring of the woodsman's axe on the crisp air of winter, he sat by the fireside of the peasant in his cottage, he floated all down the streams on the olden timber rafts and sang songs (like Moore) to the time of the boatsmen's oars he exulted in the freedom of the prairies, he worshipped God from the summits of our mountains. And in that grand and beautiful volume of the "Aspirations," he poured forth the full tide of his pent-up feelings, and he sang of scenes families liar to us all in Canada, but ap parently drawn from the realm romance, as far as the European concerned. His poems had about them the odor of the forest, the roat of the cataract, the whistle of the storm, the charms of the golden sun set, the peace that reigns in homes of the lowly; they had about them the mists that enshroud The Minister of Public Instruction glory the heroes of the land, we Canadians, no matter of what na-I count a hundredth birthday; but we do not, in this age, prepare ourselves dame Lacretelle, widow of the famfor such an event. Our motto seems he has won reflects upon the land to be "a short life and a merry one" of his birth and of our mutual afand we have it short, but there is fection.

Canada's Centenarian

(By a Regular Contributor.)

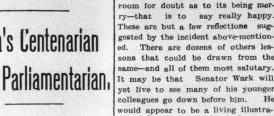

"Age will come on with its winter, Though happiness hideth its snows; And youth has its duty of labor, The birth-right of age is repose

that commenced life at the same time No more unique spectacle was even witnessed in this country, or in any other one, than the presentation in the Senate, at Ottawa, of a picture as his life-work is done. And it is of himself to the Hon. David Wark. And no more picturesque figure ever graced a throne-seat than did that of the man who has passed his one general dispensation. hundredth birthday. The Senate was crowded with ladres, Senators, mem bers of the Cabinet and members of the Commons. The leader of the House and the leader of the Opposition sat side by side; there was no distinction of party. In the presence of that aged patriarch, all differences of whatsoever character possible vanished.

ful and varied life of the Senator was rehearsed, was read by Hon. Mr Power, Speaker of the Senate. reply the honored guest stood up and, in a clear, ringing voice, gave expression to his appreciation of the compliments paid him. In that short and pointed speech the centenarian spoke words of humility and wis dom. He said that he did not at tribute the honors paid him as much to any worth of his own as he did to the Almighty Providence who had accorded him one hundred years of active and vigorous life. In their short speeches of congratulation the Premier, the leader of the Opposition, the Secretary of State, and the leader of the Senate Opposi tion, recalled the wonderful events that have transpired since Mr. Wark was a young man and the wonderful changes the world has beheld in those hundred years.

Apart from the solemnity and uniqueness of the occasion, there was a very solemn lesson preached to th world. It is a great, a wonderful the thing, to have seen one hundred years of life, and to be still as fresh and able as the ordinary man at for private firms, and public corpor and three score and ten. But the fact stions a specialty, that Senator Wark had never spent an idle day, from his boyhood down to the prese ent. and never abused nature nor indulged in any vice, or passion, but was ever temperate drink, in food, and in disposition, goes a long way to advocate rection of an age that is mad with folly, dissipation and sin.

tion of the -"Last Leaf upon

Tree," that John Greenleaf Whittier

sings of, and in which he tells how

the marble rests, "on the lips that he had pressed" in their bloom; and how all the friends he knew are now slumbering in the tomb. It must be lonely, detpite all the consolations of

surrounding friends, to feel oneself all alone, the last survivor of thousands and even much later. It shows us that, in God's great plan, it is allotted for each one to go away as soon

quite possible that this aged man

was reserved, as an exception to the rule, to show us the wisdom of , the

FRANK J. CURRAN. LOUIS E. CURRAN

Curran & Curran

Barristers and Solicitors,

SAVINGS' BANK CHAMBERS.

180 St. James Street,

Ph.D., L.L.D., K.C.,

ATVOCATE, BARRISTER and SOLICITOR,

----

Brosseau Lajoie and Lacoste.

Advocates and Barristers-at-) aw

PLACE D'ARMES, Montreal,

...Montreal...

F. QUIGLEY,

erof the Bars of New Brunswic and Quebec,

Montrea

ne Main 127.

R.

Comm'rstorQuebec& Newfoundland

The address, in which the wonder-In

C. A. MCDONNELL CHARTERED ACCOUNTANT, 180 ST. JAMES STREET.

Fifteen years experience in co tion with the liquidation of Private and Insolvent Estates. Auditing Books and preparing Annual Report et gi may be given to a man who has never written line, with the title of Officer of Public In-that mist, in the glintin by the Alliance Francaise, presented light of real patriotism, we catch a him with the Palms of an Officer of glimpse of the bayonets of patriotic Public Instruction. This is not to battalions and the wheel of swords be mistaken for the Academic Palm. in the hands of national heroes. Such The one accorded Mr. Chapman is the charm, such the secret of Chapthe highest honor within the gift of man's success; such the spirit that the Minister, as a recognition of li- has captivated literary France and terary merit. The Legion d'Honneur that has turned a garland of triumph around the brow of our young Canabut it is otherwise dian nationhood.

As you turn the volume over, page

The Holy Scriptures have promised long life to the child who honors his father and mother-that is to

struction. by page, you start with an address who does as they would have him do The evening before Mr. Chapman's to his two mothers-the mother who And surely these long years con departure from France he was speci- bore him and who sleeps 'neath Ca- stitute a reward for the aged Sena ally received by the Marquis de Levis, nadian soil, and the incluse with a have been a very good boy when who gave a dinner in his honor. Ten his ancestors-and you close with a have been a very good boy when in the world to the new-comer, and in each of gone to the peacerul majority. The to-day do we find who can be said them he recited, amidst the greatest Alpha and Omega of the work are to deserve a like reward. The honorsiasm, some of his admirable expressions of filial love and venera- ing of the father and mother is productions. Amongst the journalists tion. Between these two points he coming unfashionable now-a-days; the ovelists, professors, and the elite carries you along, from stage to respect due to them is looked upor of Parisian society, who flocked to stage, of Canadian history, from as childish and out of place. these reunions, we might mention scene to scene in our varied and ini- is the same with all the other oldsuch well-known personages as Hector Fabre, T. Obalski, Eugene Bordet, mitable climate, from picture to time virtues. Men are afraid o picture set in frames of the richest them, and seem to imagine that they language, every detail of which paint-would be considered too much behind Jean Steens, Madame Offenheim, Milg language, every detail of which paintings is familiar to our eye, our ear, Irma Dreyfus, Leopold Leau. Α. the times if they were to practic Hamel, Jules Carreard, C. A. Guerour very touch. It is this truth to them. the nature and exactness of expression It is not at all likely that any of ard, A. de Bertha

A. de Bertha, Madame the nature and exactness of expression combined that constitute the secret Counters d'Eu de Montigny, sister combined that constitute the secret us, any of the hundreds who were of Massenet, the great composer, Ma- of his success; and in that success, present on that occasion, will even TELEPHONE 1182, solicit in swho realize the ad theif Patent business trans-Preliminary advice free. Chrequest. Mariou & Mariou, New York Life Hidg. Montreas : and Washington, D.C., U.S.A.

PATENT SOLICITORS.

PROMPTLY SECURED

* SUBSCRIBE NOW *

SUBSCRIPTION ORDER

The True witness P. & P. Co.'v. Limited P. O. BOX [1188, MONTBEAL, P. Q.

I hereby authorize you to send me THE TRUE WITNESS for wolco I agree to pay to your order at the rate of One Dollar per year.

Jigned.

Address .....

Subscription Rates, Strictly in Advance____

Canada, Newfoundland and United States, 181.00 per *** City and Foreign, $1.50 per year classes, but it is when I am here that I feel it."

"You should not care f Agnes, for our vacations a short we do not have a chan meet many people."

"I wish it was all over, i really tired of this school w ame old thing over and over day after day. I longa to b so into the world to see nings and people."

"You should be more patient or we shall have to leav peaceful shelter soon enough, brown on the world."

You talk like one of vas ence, Cecelia. Where điđ your superior knowledge of affairs? Certainly not have Certainly not here "From the great book of I have observed differen during my vacations and I heard much."

She might have said that, he was, she had been entrus nany a secret by her com which her cousin suspected p the could not by even the hint betray the confidence pl

MAY 14, 1904,

SATURDAY, MAY 14, 1904.

vere choice blessings in store

pet why she prayed. Agnes missed

her home and freedom far more than the had anticipated, but whilst her

wusin's mind turned on High for

milef, she sought it by trying to win

in

wends among the gayest girls

it mattered not to her that some

as she had anticipated. It was laarned and remembered, and the time

chool.

Dweelory.

'S SOCIETY.-Estab-h 6th, 1856, incorporevised 1864. Meets in Fall, 92 St. Alexan Meets in Fall, 92 St. Alexan-first Monday of the mittee meets last Wed-deers: Rev. Director, aghan, P.P. Presidents ustice C. J. Doherty ; E. Devlin, M.D.; 2nd Curran. B.C.L.: Treas. J. Green; correspondry, J. Kahala; Rectary, T. P. Tansey.

"S T. A. AND B. SO. month in St. Patrick's Alexander street, ommittee of Manage in same hall on the of every month at 8 iractor, Rev. Jas. Kil-ent, W. P. Doyle; Rec.-P. Gunning, 716 St. t, St. Henri.

A. & B. SOCIETY, 1868 .- Rev. Director McPhail; President, D. P.; Sec., J. F. Quina, minique street; M. J. urer, 18 St. Augustin ts on the secon Sunmonth, in St. Ann's Young and Ottawa .80 p.m.

OUNG MEN'S SOCIE. d 1885.-Meets in its tawa street, on of each month, of each month, at piritual Adviser, Rev. n, C.SS.R.; President, Thomas Treasurer. ec.-Sec., Robt. J. Harty

CANADA, BRANCH zed 13th November, h 26 meets at <sup>1</sup> St. all, 92 St, Alexander Monday of each y e regular meetings for ion of business are 2nd and 4th Mondays h, at 8 p.m. Spiritual M. Callaghan; Chan-Darcy: President, W. ording Secretary, P. C. 139 Visitation street; ecretary, Jas. J. Cos-St. Urbain street; Trea. Kelly; Medical Advisers Harrison, E. J. O'Con-H. Merrill

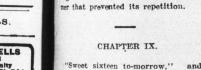

ROH BELLS ACSHANE BELLS al Bells a Specialty OUNDBY, Baltheore, Md., U.S. BELLCOMPANY Y, N.Y., and AT, NEW YORK CIty. uperior CHURCH BELLS FERS. Etc.

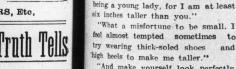

s in everything else, if ds only a repair we tell you so, if a new ed we give a guaranor 5 years, according experts are at your Can hout extra cost: g for you?

came when she was glad to take up with the companionship of those her far more wise cousin had chosen. Both girls were greatly admired and loved by teachers and companions, but the one flaw in her otherwise loving character, namely, he pride, robbed Agnes of much of the esteem she would otherwise have commanded, and it did not help matters any when some mischievous peron whispered about that Agnes Cullen was an orphan whom the Datons were bringing up, Cecelia, overhear. ing the remark, rebuked it in a man-

Agnes Cullen drew herself up proudly standing on tiptoe to make herself look taller, just as her aunt had done years before when she was about to go with Mrs. Daton as a companion. "Sweet sixteen to-morrow, and it hardly seems possible that I am really almost a young lady." "And so am I," said Cecelia teasingly: "you need not be so proud of being a young lady, for I am at least

"And make yourself look perfectly ridiculous, too.' "I would not care if I did. because then people would not be always taking me for a little girl and you for a young lady, when I am six months your senior '

"I would willingly change with you ing called a young lady while I am still in school

CHAPTER VIII.-Continued. "How very learned you are, celia. . I cannot understand it, since For a few days Cecelia suffered we have always been together and nly, but she had resolved to be you are younger than I." brave, and she was glad that she "Our dispositions differ," laughed ld go to the chapel and lay before Cecelia, "and that is no fault the tabernacle the sorrows which she either of us."

would not reveal even to her cousing "I think so. My nature calls me The good nuns going in at times and forth into the world, but you, Ceceseing how devoutly she prayed were lia, why it almost seems at times deeply touched; they felt that there that your place is right here for io life. one so devout, but they did not sus-

"What do you mean, Agnes ?" "That you should be a nun. "It is certainly a most holy life but I have never thought of it. and I fear I am not called to such. How do you intend spending your birth day ?'

the school and it was soon proved "I shall begin well by receiving that the old and tried friendship of Communion in the morning." her cousin was no dearer to her than "And I, too, Agnes, will receive the new ones she was continually making. It was noticed that she Communion for your intention." "Thank you, Cecelja, you are so chose her intimates chiefly among kind; but I suppose I should not be hose who dressed best and appeared thanking you, for it is such a pleato be wealthy. Cecelia was slower sure for you that I know you could making acquaintances, and while not sit still and see me approach the the treated all kindly, she was intiholy table without you. How I wish mate with few; but those few were I were a good girl like you, but it is oung ladies of sterling worth, and not in me and I could not do it if I tried ever so hard." of them were among the poorest in the

"Nonsense, Agnes; you are a good She made friends to keep girl and I would ask nothing better them long, but, alas ! poor Agnes of you. If you knew me as well as you think, you might alter your opinion of my sanctity." many to whom she gave her affection proved in the end not to 'be as true "Well, here we are preaching again

bitter lesson to her, but one well when time is passing rapidly and I have far more important business to attend to at present." "What is it, Agnes, may I ask, or is it none of my business ?" "Yes, it is your business, for

have come to ask a favor of you and you must not dare refuse. Promise me you will do it." "It depends wholly on what it is."

"Something very casy. Will you promise ?" "You know, Agnes, I make no blind promises, and I shall not do it now even to please you. Of course, I as sure you if your request is reasonable I shall gladly comply with it." "I want you to go and asle Sister

Katherine if we may go shopping down town this afternoon." "What for, Agnes ?" "I want to buy some candy and good things to give the girls a treat to-morrow." "Why not ask her yourself ?"

"Because I am afraid she might refuse me, and you know she never refuses you anything."

"I do not know why she should not grant a reasonable request for you as well as for me, and I wish you would ask her."

"Come now, Cecelia, please do, and I will do something for you some time.'

Cecelia, unable to resist the be witching smile and pleading voice of her cousin, went to find the Sister, from whom she obtained the desired permission, and as soon as the afternoon session was closed the two girls started out.

"I intend to let the boarders have enough candy for once," said Agnes, whose great love for sweets had been one weakness she could not overcome and she proved her statement by buying more pounds than there were

if I could, Agnes, for I do not like be- girls in school, to say nothing of the store of cake and other delicacies both girls purchased. With happy smiles

Ce- | were ready to go to the chapel a | to confession before Mass.

"Go, dear children, and you, Cece lia, prepare yourself well for your of Communion, which I wish you to you." offer for a special intention " No more was said until after breakfast, when Cecelia was summoned to the mother superior's office. The good nun arose and, putting her arm around her, said tenderly:

last evening saying that your father is very ill, and you must go home at could get no train until this forenoon and we did not wish to disturb your rest by unnecessary worry. You have half an hour to prepare for your journey, and our carriage will be ready

Cecelia trembled violently. One sad thought was uppermost in her mind -her father might be dead before she reached him. It was hard, very hard to think of losing him, but to have him die as he was seemed most terrible. In obedience to Sister's re quest she had offered her Communion for her intention instead of for Agnes as she had intended, and she glad of it now, for it had undoubted-

"Does Agnes know; is she going too ?" she at last found strength to but Sister will tell her before you go. You must hurry now, as your

When Cecelia thought of it afterwards she scarcely knew how she had strength to reach the room j but none came, and she had to conwhere her clothing was kept, and she tent herself for the time being with could never have dressed had not prayer, said not only by herself, but Agnes, on hearing the news, hastened to her aid. After the first burst, venas were being made, Masses said,

"I think it is real mean. Cecelia home with you. when I know you are not fit to travel alone."

Agnes, you would have been sent for, and the fact that you were not gives me hope that father may not dangerously ill. As for travelling | her by informing her that if ever he alone, I can get on very well."

kind father to me."

"Never mind, Agnes, I shall send I cannot do it alone."

upon the tabernacle, said a silent prayer. She asked God to save he father's life, or, if he must die, not to let him go in the state of darkness in which he now was. . She promis ed to give herself entirely to God if her prayer was answered. As she arose from her knees and hastened with her cousin to the carriage, peaceful calm took possession of he and not a tear was visible. "Good-bye, Agnes," she said. "please pray earnestly for father, and I wish you a happy birthday and want you to promise that you will account.

little earlier than the others, and to me, and you will not leave me untold the Sister they wished to go til I am better. How tall you are growing, and you are getting more beautiful every day !'

THE TRUE WITNESS AND CATHOLIC CHRONICLE.

BY MARY ROWENA COTTER.

> "Yes, father, I shall remain with "Where is my other little girl? Agnes I mean. Did she come ? "No, father; only I was sent for."

"Cecelia, I received a message late

We kept it from you as you you well again."

then to take you to the depot." to cure me."

ly been for her dear father.

inquire. "No: only you have been sent for:

time is limited ...

of sympathy she said : that Sister will not allow me to go

"If you had been really needed, be Still she persisted, and he silenced

"I think I should have been sent for, Uncle Edward has been like a

for you if he is really very ill, and now please help me to get ready, for

On her way down stairs Cecelia stepped into the chapel, and kneeling wholly lost, but it was scrupulously before the altar broke into tears. She kept from both herself and her mowiped them away, and gazing fixedly ther.

that he might not recover. His wife had gone out for a walk and he had purposely sent his mother from the opportunity to talk to his child. Takpillow, he selected one and said:

little drawer at the top you you to bring to me."

not deny the girls their feast on my father opened. It contained a curl

"I knew my darling would come ence until my father was on his of your grandmother. My father put deathbed, when he told me all." grandmother than Agnes' ?"

PATHS

sorry ?'

*

grandmother." "It is just as well, perhaps, not Her father told her all he knew. to take her away from her studies, which was very little; but what would have delighted Cecelia he did though if I thought there was any danger of my dying I would wish not tell-that his own mother to see her, for she has been almost been a Catholic-for that had been kept from him. Cecelia wept for a daughter to me. But I could never love her as I do my own Cecelia." the fate of the young Irish bride who "You will not die, father, you had died so early and left her babe. must not, for I have come home "Poor papa, how sad it must be to help take care of you and make not to have remembered ever having seen your own mother. Did they tell

"All the care I want from you, you how she looked ?" darling, is for you to remain here so that I may see you. The sight of "Yes, Cecelia, and I have her picture if you would like to see it.' yours sweet face ought to be enough

"I would, papa, so much; where is it ?" Cecelia scarcely left her father's "You will find it in my closet, Cecelia; it is in a large frame wrapped bedside for six long weary weeks, excepting when he sent her away in heavy paper, but you may get it and bring it here." to rest or get a little fresh air. His Cecelia opened the door and drew condition in the meantime remained almost unchanged, and it surprised forth the frame, which she carefully the physicians that he lived so long unwrapped, revealing an oil painting in such a weakened state. The only of one of the most beautiful of faces. nourishment he took was what his "How lovely, papa, how lovely she daughter gave him. He would somemust have been, and how sad , for times talk to her until he became ex her to die so young !"

hausted and fell asleep, or he would "Do you know of any one who resembles her, Cecelia ?" call on her to read the daily papers, "No, I do not; but Agnes has hair nothing else, for he was interested much like hers." only in the news of the day. Many times she sought an opportunity of "She has, dear, but that is as far speaking to him on the subject nearas the resemblance goes. There was est her heart, his soul's salvation, another Agnes who would have been just like her had she lived, but there is still another who has her face."

the

and lights burned on many altars.

needed religious consolation he would

Church to which his child belonged.

The old lady was horrified, but dared

say no more for fear he might carry

Could Cecelia have heard this she would have felt that perhaps her earnest prayers might not have been

At last there came a time when the

ick man himself began to have fears

room to rest that he might have an

ing a bunch of keys from under his

be content to receive it from

had never troubled

out his threat.

"Who is it, papa ?" "Can you not guess ?"

by Agnes and the Sisters, while no-"No, never; please tell me." "Look in the mirror, Cecelia, and you may be able to see the resembl-Once in Cecelia's absence the elder

Mrs. Daton had suggested to her son ance which I have always seen. True that a minister come and pray over you have your own mother's hair and eyes, but aside from that you , are wholly like your grandmother." him, but he told her plainly that he the ministers much in health and he did not care "Do you really think so, papa."

to be troubled by them in sickness. "I know it, or the canvas is very deceiving."

"Quite an honor, papa, to be told that I resemble her. I see now why it was that so many strangers were puzzled to know who I was like: but why have you kept this beautiful picture hidden these years ?'

"One reason, Cecelia, it was too sacred for the eyes of strangers to be different in so many ways, but how gazing upon, and besides, it did not strange that we too should always quite please my stepmother to have be so happy together." the lovely face of her predecessor continually before her. I think you not have been happy. It would be hard for anyone to be otherwise could hardly blame her for that, it was not her fault that she was when you are near with your many winning ways. I often feel that I far less beautiful."

"But grandma, I mean the one I cannot thank God enough for sending have always called my grandmother, me so loving a sister after my own is good, which is better than beauty

"Yes, Cecelia, she is good, and has ever been the kindest of mothers to

"Papa, if you think she will not "Cecelia, go to my safe and in the care too much I would like to hang will this picture here in your room. It find a white plush box, which I wish is too bad to keep such a lovely face hidden." The girl hastened to obey and soon brought back the box, which her

"Do as you wish, Cecelia," said the man, who was glad to think of havdo not like to hear it. It is enough ing his own mother's sweet face to of golden hair and a strange device "I cannot enjoy it myself, Cecelia, for a ring. It was a golden sepent, gaze upon during what he believed to to know that you are happy in our

it on my finger just before he died, "Then Mrs. Daton is no more my and I never took it off until I had outgrown it, then I put it away to

7

"No, Cecelia, she is not. Are you be handed down to my eldest child." "I will wear it, if you wish, papa, "I am afraid I am," said the girl, and thank you, but you are not go-"for she has always been so kind to ing to die. You must not, for it me. But tell me about my own would break my heart."

"I hope not, for your sake, if for no other, for I do not wish to leave you, but I have been ill so long that my case seems hopeless."

had Cecelia thought then of how unprepared her father was to die, and she was on the point of speaking to him of spiritual matters when her grandmother entered. The old lady's glance fell at once on the picture, then she looked at Cecelia, who was as dear to her as an own child.

The girl sprang to her grandmother's side, and, throwing her arm lovingly around her, said sweetly:

"I know all, dear grandma; papa has told me; but I love you just the same. I hung that picture up because I knew it would please him." 'You are a good girl, Cecelia, and I do not blame you."

Mr. Daton did not die, but it was many weeks before he fully recovered, and when he did he declared that it was due to the self-sacrifice of his cheerful little daughter. He would hardly trust her out of his sight until she had to return to school, and then it cost him a bitter struggle to part with her.

CHAPTER X.

"All dressed and ready for my first party. Cecelia. I expected you would be ready first. How slow you are!" "You must excuse me this time, Agnes, for I am not usually pehind time.

"This is a time, Cecelia, above all others when you should not be late." "Not much danger of my being late; it will be fully an hour yet before the guests arrive, and I cannot tell you how much I dread it." "Dread it, cousin ! You are strange girl. This is to be one of the greatest events in our lives, and as for myself, I can hardly wait for

"Only another proof, Agnes, of

"I should say so. We are really,

"I see no reason why we should

"It is I. Cecelia, who should be most thankful when I remember that

but for the kind charity of your father and mother I would now be a poor factory or office girl instead of a debutante in silk and lace about to be introduced into society. I appreciate it, even if I seldom mention

"Speak not of charity, Agnes, I

the next hour to pass."

was taken away."

it."

how our dispositions differ.

|  | "It is all right here. To appear        | they returned just as their compan-  | since you have been called away on       | with a pair of emeralds for eves. Ce-  | be the last days of his life.  | home."   |
|--|---|--|--|--|--|--|
| sphalters, &c.,  | a manes people think that we            | lione ware sitting down to suppor  | so sad an errand, but they shall have    | celia shuddered slightly as her father | The picture soon displaced one of                                      | "I could not be otherwise thanhappy, for this house is a perfect   |
|  | and really the more brilliant in our    | In the evening Agnes spent her   | it all. I shail pray earnestly for       | slipped on his small finger the little | a landscape at the foot of her father's                                | paradise, and never did I feel it  |
| AIG STREET.  | here that I am out . of                 | whole time in the recreation hall,,  | your father, and now, good-bye, and      | circlet and held it up to view.        | bed, where he could see it very plain-                                 | more than on my return from board-   |
|  | - 1001 IL.                              | but Cecelia after a little while stole                                       | give everyone at home my love "          | What do you think of that Ce-          | ly. The sunlight from the window fell                                  | ing school."   |
|  | Agnes for any                           | away to the chapel to prepare for  | Mr. Daton was very ill. He had           | celia ?" he asked.                     | full upon the sweet face, and Cecelia                                  | Cecelia smiled and looked at her   |
| -  | short model in vacations are so         | to-morrow's communion. The daily   | been taken guite suddenly the day        | "It looks like an ill-omen," she       |  | fair cousin, thinking less of her re-  |
|  |   | Hail Mary which she had promised   |  |  | came to the sick man's eyes and he                                     | mark than of the admiration she  |
| -70-   | "I wish it was all area for I are       | years ago to say for her grandmother   | for his life was despaired of. All night | minarian had remarked years before.    |  | would surely win this evening. Agnes   |
| State State State  | really tired of this school more the    | had never once been omitted, and sherepeated it now, adding some earnest | the watchers at his bedside feared       | "Where did you get it, papa?"          | "My poor young mother," he saidat length, "she must have been very | stood before her, rather short in  |
| and the second   | same old thing over and aver their      | prayers for her dear father, whose   | that the end was near at hand and        | "It is one of the dearest treasures    | beautiful, and how sad that she  | stature and inclined to be a little  |
|  | day after day. I longe to be free to    | irreligious life was painfully plain to                                      | it would be the limit Several times      | it may not for its value alone, but    | had to die so soon and leave her                                       | too plump, said indication being 'the  |
|  |   | her now. Many a bitter heartache   | he called for Corelia and could not      | "Grandma's engagement ring ! How       | pleasant home I soo har sweet face                                     | bane of her life." She was charm-  |
|  | es and people.                          | had she suffered for him when she  | the quieted until accured that the       | etrange ! And why did she not keen     | before me now, for my own little                                       | ingly attired in a reception gown of   |
| States and the second  | "You should be more patient A more      | fully nerlined how blind he was to   | had been sont for and would soon he      | it horealf ?"                          | Cecelia is so much like her. It re-                                    | pale blue silk, embroidered with white   |
|  |   |  |  |  | quires only the golden hair and blue                                   | lace and set off with a set of brilliantsapphires which glittered in the gas-  |
|  |   | joyed. Only once had she ever  | ed constantly at his bedside. The        | ly, for he was about to tell her the   | eyes to make the image complete."                                      | light. From this fair vision Ce-   |
| A Statistics Statistics  |   |  |  |  | 1 wish I could change them to  | celia turned to look at her own loosd  |
|  | fou talk like one of vast experi-       | that has been on the day of her first  | of losing him and prayed earnestly       | to reveal to her, and had he not       | please you, papa," she laughed.  | dressing sack and plain skirt, but   |
|  |   |  |  |  | "I do not, for I like you as you                                       | she did not appear to be in any haste  |
|  | affairs? Cont in worldly                | ly because she had asked him. She  | but she never once thought of his        | bered, he would have kept her in       | are.   | to change them.  |
| wolco  |   |  |  |  | "I am glad you do, as there is   |  |
| and the second   | nes. I have the great book of life, Ag- | knew it not then, but he had beenfilled with admiration for her pure     | conversion; so careless had she been     | finished. "She did until the day       | no remedy I know of.""I have drifted from my subject.              | To be Continued.)  |
|  | nes. I have observed different things   | devotion. ~  | in learning the doctrines of her own     | of her death."                         | child; now come here and give me                                       | Provide the second s  |
|  |   | The boarders had just retired for  |  |  | your hand."  | and the second sec |
|  | She might have said that                |  | man nom no time to terminate bi          |  | Celelia approached the bed and her                                     |  |
|  | she was, she had been entrusted with    | whom the late visitor might be. The  | about a religion he did not under        | up and treated me as a kind mother     | father slipped on one of her slender                                   |  |
| ··· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·  | many a secret by her companions         | mistress of boarders was called from   | stand                                    | is not my mother. My own mother        | fingers the ring he had just with-                                     | Cubeariba to the   |
| A state of the sta |   |  |  | diad when T were a total and           | drawn from his own.  | Subscribe to the   |
| and the state of the state   | she could not by even the slightest     | glance at her on her return, but she   | face of the sick man brightened as       | father married soon afterwards, but    | "I am sorry, Cecelia, il it looks                                      |  |
|  | her betray the confidence placed in     | did not speak, and the incident was  | she entered the room. Clasping her       | 1 always loved my stepmother most      | like an ill omen to you, but I wish                                    | "True Witness  |
|  |   | forgotten. In the morning the girls  | in his arms he said ;                    | tenderly, and never knew the differ-   | you to wear it always in memory  | line minimod   |
|  |   |  |  |  | the contract of the second second                                      |  |

THE TRUE WITNESS AND CATHOLIC CHRONICLE.

(By a Regular Contributor.)

-Last week's contribution closed with Dr. Johnson's appreciation of the field selected by the British Essavists. It had been left for Steele and Addison to rescue the valuable accomplishments of the age from obscurity and abuse, and to unite wit, learning and elegant sentiments, in the ser vice of cheerful piety and decorous Their province was to treat of love, jealousy, marriage, friendship, domestic duties, revenge, taste for expense, gaming and such like. In this Steele acted wisely, in character of "Censor Morum," and performed a duty which, we are told, was not always ;unattended with like these are at all times the legitimate object of satire, and the shafts of satire were not spared against these reformers, nor were they sparing in making use of like weapons.

Of the works written upon this plan, the first in point of time, and that which prescribed a form to all the others, is the "Tatler." The de sign of this work belongs exclusively to Sir Richard Steele, concerning whom it may . be interesting to dot down a few notes. It is to be re gretted that the material is scanty So much envy existed in his regard that much of the interesting facts connected with his life have been purposely consigned to oblivion by his less able contemporaries. The fullest account given is that in the "Biographia Britannica," and it is often inaccurate. Until Mr. Nicholas published Steele's letters, in 1786, nothing was attempted in justice to the memory of a man to whom the world is so greatly indebted. In one article we could not attempt to tell all about Steele and his contemporaries-for they came in as part of his biography-but we will try and give a fair idea of this first of the Essayists, even if it requires a couple of contributions.

RICHARD STEELE. -Steele was born in Dublin, in 1671. His father who had been for some time secretary to James the first, Duke of Ormond. his son, when very young, to London. where he was placed in the Charter-house by the Duke, who was one of the governors of that semin Thence he was sent to Merton College, Oxford, and admitted Postmaster in 1691. While in col. lege they say he amused himself writing a comedy, which a fellow student advised him to suppress, as unworthy of his genius. He left the University without a degree, went into military life, by entering the Horse Guards. This course of. fended his friends, and he fell into the company of gay and unthinking To counteract the force young men. of temptation he had recourse to . singular expedient. He wrote his ook called "The Christian Hero," with a design to fix on his own mind a strong impression of virtue and He soon discovered at religion. least one mistake in this experiment: he found that the support of this little book-published in chapterswas too weak, while his engagemen to be virtuous was voluntary and unknown. To render it more binding he reprinted the book with his name, and tried to live as well as he wrote. This had only the effect of making English literature.

priest. THE BRITISH ESSAYISTS. | those who had considered him a pleasant companion look upon him as a disagreeable fellow. It was only after writing several plays, from 1701 to 1707; of which were ridiculed and others condemned, that he conceived the idea of the "Tatler." He had been a life long companion of Addison, and they were close friends, and it is believed that Addison had greatly encourag ed him in this enterprise.

He commenced the "Tatler" on th 12th April, 1709. During its publication, in 1710, he was appointed a Commissioner of the Stamp Duties which he retained after the defeat of the ministry that had appointed him personal danger. Characters The "Tatler" was almost immediately followed by the "Spectator," and the "Guardian." In the last-named journal he declared war on the Ministers and lost his position. H published "The Spinster" and "The Reader,'- and, on the death of the Queen, he was appointed Surveyor of the Royal Stables at Hampton Court He was elected member of Parliament for Boroughbrigg., in the first Parliament of George I. On the 8th April, 1715, he was made a Knight. Th next August Sir Robert Walpole gave him 500 pounds for special services He opposed the famous Peerage Bill not only in Parliament, but outside in his publication "The Pleblan." With all his advantages he never practised economy, and in 1718 he tried to relieve his necessities by the publication of the "Fishpool." In 1719 he published "The Theatre," anu in 1720 he fought most honor ably against the famous South Sea Bubble. It was in this connection that he wrote his celebrated comedy "The Conscious Lovers," which was acted with great success and advantage to the author. The King, to whom the play was dedicated, presented him with £500. But he was soon again in poverty and obliged to sell his share in the theatre, and was defeated in an action which he commenced against the managers, in 1726. He is now said to have been attacked by a paralytic disorder greatly impairing his understanding; and in this melancholy state he was removed to Carmarthen (in Wales), was of English extraction, and sent where he died on the 1st September, 1729, and was, according to his own desire, privately interred in the town chancel of that place. In a note on No. 176 of the "Tatler." (Oct edit of 1806) we find this remark: "Steele retired into Wales belore he had the paralytic stroke that deprived him of his intellectual faculties, and solely on the principle of doing justice to his creditors, at a time, too, when he had the fairest prospects of satisfying all their claims to the utter most farthing. His first wife, lady of Barbadoes, died a few months after their marriage. His second wife was Mary, daughter of Jonathan Scurlock, of Languanor, in Carmar thenshire. They had three children two boys, who died young, and girl who married, in 1732, Lord Tre vor of Bromham, and whose daughter, Diana, was a remarkable beauty, but unfortunately an idiot. He was not happy in his marriage, for his wife was a miser and a scold, she led him a life far different from that which is congenial to a man of refinement and letters.

Such the outlines of the life of Sin Richard Steele. We will now tur to his work and its influence upon

ed of true nobility of soul, had fully inderstood the lesson of this inci dent. and now it came to her with redoubled force. Glancing at her self, she blushed for her luxuriou raiment as others do for their shah biness; and detaching her jewels from her hair, neck and arms, she placed them all in the hands of the poor

"But, your Majesty," cried one of her ladies in waiting, "think of what you are doing ! Depriving your headdress of those magnificent pearls and on such an evening as this ! Why your coiffure is all disarranged. How are we to repair that ?'

For sole answer the Queen culled eautiful rose from the many bouquets around her, and, fixing it in her hair, said with a smile: "Is it not worth all the gems.cut by the hands of men ? Don't mind 'tis for the little birds of Monsieur Vincent."

JACK AND THE CHICKENS. Jack was a beautiful Irish setter that was devoted to his little Mist ress, Mary. He had one very bad habit; he would kill chickens, The ranchmen all around threatened, to shoot Jack if they caught him, and Mary was much distressed. One rainy day in the early spring a farm-hand brought into the house a number o dear little chickens, just out of the shell, and placed them on the hearth before the fire. The tiny fluffy waifs were chilled through and through and their little legs were icy cold. Mary, like a good little housewife suddenly conceived the idea of filling a basket with raw cotton, so as to make the small strangers a nic warm bed, and without thought of leaving them alone, started briskly upstairs to the garret, and soon re turned with a hamper padded with warm white cotton. Imagine he horror, however when upon entering the room, she saw Jack lying fazily in front of the fire and not a chicker in sight. The little girl was sick with fright for she knew they had been hatched from expensive eggs of a particular breed, and that her father would scold her for her carelessness.

"Jack," she cried severely, "what have you done with those chickens?' Jack merely wagged his tail and looked at her with one ear cocked. Mary slowly approached the culprit with a deep frown on her face, and said :

"If you have eaten those chicken your master will have to shoot you. At this terrible threat the dog only wagged his tail the harder and cock ed both ears. Just then came a faint

"Peep peep !" from somewhere near the fire, and the dog looked know ing.

And where # do you suppose thos baby chickens were hiding ? Between the setter's two great forepaws. all up under his soft, silky hair. When his mistress had left the room Jack thought they needed care considered it his duty to play nurse during her absence, so he had stretch ed himself before the fire and gather ed the wee fluffy balls together under his warm fur, and now and again a tiny vellow head was thrust forth for a minute, to be withdrawn and tucked out of sight. Mary concluded that the basket was not needed just then and put it aside

HUMAN MIRRORS. -Children ar onderful mirrors. If your small brother always answers you rudely it will be quite safe to review your dealings with him, to see if your own impatience or petulance is not responible for this condition of things.

Vol. LIII., No

THE TRUE W IS PRINTED AND S Busby S SUBSCRIPTION PI Ganada, $1.00; United and France, $1.50; Belg

All Communications

EPI "If the English-spee best interests, they would penaryul Catholic papers i work

NOTES

SEE OF JOLIETT the Archbishop has ad to the parish priests to be comprised in th of Joliette. The lette that in the very near sooner than His Grace when he drafted his l visits for this summer Joliette would be na tention was to visit t rishes at marked per mer, but he has now o while he is depriving great pleasure, he wo pastoral tour, confirm ow prepared, and mal tence of his flock. It great pleasure for the parents to have the ne his first visitation, con ones, and would be sure for the coming ch

GIFTS TO THE POL Isabella, of Spain, left tion of her great fort Her personal p much greater than has ed. Several donations have been made by so Vicar of Christ within Why does not the Italia tave possession of the has as much right to t to the Papal States. to the Pope of Rome legitimate manner. Th money are lawful gif persons, princes, and r pal domain consisted om Kings, Emperors, rulers who owned the p gave it to the Pope fo If the usurpation of the is legitimate, so would zure of ex-Queen Isabel

AN EXPLATORY TE proposed expiatory temp cred Heart, the Montm sels, is now planned in erection taken up officia unced in a collective the Belgian Bishops as the seventy-fifth annive tional independence. A mittee has been formed ecclestiastical the plateau of Koekelbe

sive space has been acc

new parish formed arou

guim was first consecra

Sacred Heart in 1868,

with the entire world,

1905 she will dedicate

ST. VINCENT'S BIRDS. - Word reached St. Vincent de Paul one day that preparations were being made for a special festival at the court of Anne of Austria, the pious mother of Louis XIV. As the Saint had freguently been an adviser of the Queen Mother, he had access to the palace at all hours, and on this occasion determined that he would proceed thither during the evening.

He was doubly preoccupied; in the first place, that the Queen should d so much money merely to please a throng of vainglorious cour tlers; in the second, that his little ngs were in danger of starving ess people continued to be gener-

Without hesitation he set out on his errand and made his way to the grand salon. His shabby costume, his tangled beard and white hair provoked the smiles of the perfumed belles and dandies of the court; but, passing on, he addressed himself to the Qu "Madame," he said, "you are go ing to give a festival. I, too am anxious to procure a feast for some poor little birds dying of hunger in their nests-my abandoned children. My hands are empty, but the misery of these foundlings proves a blessin for you, as you have never refused to help them.

Now, about this time the talk of Paris, and of foreign courts as well, was of a recent occasion when St Vincent de Paul had presented him self before an assembly of elegant dames and matrons, bearing in his arms two infants that he had picked up on the streets, and had said Now, ladies, do you wish these kittle ones to die ? Answer." suddenly these women had plucked off their jewels and thrown them to the advocate of mose who could plead as yet only with their tears.

Anne of Austria, who was pe

remember once seeing a little girl running out to meet a sister who had been uptown on an errand. As both hands of the elder girl were filled with packages, the little one had to content herself with clutching sister's skirt, and holding it tightly as she ran by her side. But when the piazza was reached, she hastily climbed to the topmost step, from which point of vantage she could throw her arms around her sister's neck, and bestow upon her such hugging and kissing as would fitting ly commemorate a return from Eu rope after a year's absence. Faithful little mirror ! She was reflecting a sweetly unselfish character which this world can never have too many duplicates.

The treatment we receive from those outside our homes also helps in showing our true selves. When a girl's acquaintances are inclined to take liberties with her, it indicates something more than a lack in them it proves that she is wanting in the sweet dignity which is an essential to a beautiful girlhood as to womanhood If the friends of another are comtinually coming to her with gossip, so rebuke the thought of profanity that no unfitting word could cross the lips."

This matter of reflection is, then, subject for reflection as well. It is not always easy to follow the wise old-time direction, "know thyself," nor the advice of a modern teacher "Look then into thy heart." A part at least of our self-knowledge must come from the study of our reflec tions in the things and in the peo ple about us. . We must see what we are by the friendships we form, by the attitude of others towards our selves, by the books we choose by the direction of our tastes by the ambitions on which we expend the most sincere and earnest efforts

was the rather severe reply, "there are ladies whose mere presence would

"Look out, not in," is a good motto for those who are trying to unde stand the mystery of their own wish to "lend a hand' to the weaker an less fortunate. For when we fully realize that our own character is imaged in the lives about us, we come suddenly ambitious that the living mirrors shall reflect only that which is sweet and pure and autiful. And day by day we find a deep er meaning in the familiar words

"If you bring a smiling vise or stories she would be the better for | To the glass, you meet a smile."

WEAR, trimmed six wide tuck front; back and cuffs tucked. white ground, blue or black spots, tusks on front, full sleeves Special INFANTS' PIQUE REEFERS.

AT POPULAR PRICES.

Wide sailor collar, double cuffs ; cuffs ar collar trimmed with two rows of fanc cord. Special value 750. CHILDREN'S PRINT DRESSES. ery large from 60c. LADIES' 3-4 ETAMINE, COATS. Accordeon pleated, trimmed applique, in full range of prices. LADIES' 3-4 BILK COATS. Gathered back, latest Parisian designs, from $15 00 up LADIES' PONGEE SILK COATS. $ and full length, latest : arisian govelty. Prices fro: $20.00 up. LADIES' MILITARY RAIMCOATS -Very stylish, from $13 00 to $20 00.

JOHN MURPHY COMPANY .... 2341 & 2848 St. Catherine St. Corner Metcalte. erm sCash. Tel Up 2740 St. Catherine and Moutainn Ste.

tion Dresses. LADIES' Swiss Ribbed Silk Combination Dresses, 32 65 to 34.75 each. Children's Swiss Ribbed Cotton Vests, 25c each. Children's Swiss Ribbed Merino Vests, 40c each. Children's Swiss Ribbed Silk Vests, 51.25 each.

$1.25 each. Children's Swiss Ribbed Merino Combin-ation Dresses, $12, each.

SPECIAL NEWS FOR THE BOYS By "Special News" we mean the Suits we here mention are specially worth your attention, are a Special Prices, and are specially well tailored.

JAS A. OGILVY & SONS.

Heart of the Divine Ma ing, in the very heart try, a temple which will the children yet unborn owes to the benignant God. OTTAWA UNIVERSIT 24th May, Tuesday ner Day," the corner-stone University of Ottawa The old building, which last year, was large end wholly up to modern

The new building will r

imposing in appearance, modern in every respect day next educationalists and rulers temporal and will be present. The Go ral, the Parliamentary

Bharretti, the Papal Del bishop Duhamel, Chancel University, the Archbish shops of other Canadia heads of different religi