In its report of the occurrence the Recorder says: Mr Lee was down town and purchasing a small vial con-taining carbolic acid to be used as disinfectant, upon returning home placed it on a stand, containing other medicine in the sick chamber. Miss Webster did not know that Mr Lee had placed the acid there, and according to in-struction proceeded to give the boy his regular medicine which is of the same color and same size of bottle as that containing the acid. The two bottles were together, and in mistake she poured out a teaspoonful and gave it to the patient. The acid had no more than reached the stomach when she realized what she had done and hastily alarmed the members of the family. Meantime the pains of the boy became unbearable though Miss Webster did all in her power to relieve them, but the dose was too large and three minutes later he had passed away. During the interval strenuous efforts were made by telephone to secure a doctor, but at that time they were busy and could not be located. Dr Horton was first to arrive fifteen minutes after the death and he was quickly followed by Drs Bowie and Cornell The physi cans, of course would do nothing other than to attend to Miss Webster and Mr and Mrs Lee, who were in a state of collapse. Mr. Ibbettson was the son of an old resident of the town who had been cordially disliked, as by his shrewdness and niggardly habits he acquired a considerable fortune and also a collection of documents that represented first mortgages on many of the farms of the town. The son had left home as soon as he was of are not being able to stand town. The son had left home as soon as he was of age, not being able to stand the old man's miserly habits of living. In a few years he had amassed a fortune in the stock market. At the death of his father he was found to have been made sole heir to the old man's state, although the will contained the strange request that he should devote such of the estate as he wished to missionary work. Now, at the age of 30, John Ibbettson, bachelor, was back in Brooksvale for the summer, and had succeeded in stirring the townsfolk up in remarkable manner.

As soon as it was found that he was going to remodel the old Ibbettson house and was to spend each summer there, the matter became the chief subject of debate in the church circles and at the grocery store. Among the men the fin-ancial standpoint was considered, as the work meant employment for the townspeople among whom ready money was

In the meantime John Ibbettson was having an experience of his own. Riding into the town in his automobile he came across a gang of boys looking as disreputable as dirt and torn clothes could make them, engaged in stoning a poor cat that they had tied to a tree. Jumping from his car he dispersed the scamps and captured three who proved to be seen of well known cities. to be sons of well known citizens. Waiting for a favorable moment to enter he heard one of the women tell with unction of the good work they were doing in sending a barrel of clothes each year to Senegambia. Little attention was paid by the women to the remarks, and at that moment in strode John Ibbettson with the three shrinking, dirty, neglected looking boys. The meeting closed in laste and as the auto relied array it was seen that Extern

As they rolled along the road, John said: "Esther, I have been looking for you ever since you disappeared from the settlement work in the tenements." The bewildered girl could only say: "I did not know that John Betson, the slum worker, was the rich Mr. Ibbettson! I left New York because I lost my posi-tion." Slipping one arm around her un-resisting form, John drew her to him and whispered: "Esther, your absence showed me how much I loved you. I am having my old home made into a country place where I can spend my summers and enjoy helping others. I am building a house for a large dining hall, and am going to put up tents for a hun-dred children, and spend father's money in giving poor children a taste of country life, close to God and nature.

"Will you marry me to help the work along?" Drawing still more closely to him, she replied: "No. John; not solely for that. Put I will marry you because I love you." And with never a thought of the poor Senegambians, they rolled along the dusty road filled with a hap-piness pure and serene.—Boston Post. NEW YORK CITY.

RATS AND LEPROSY. Marine Surgeon Finds Disease

San Francisco Redents. Whether it is possible for rats to transmit leprosy to human beings is a question which, says a San Francisco special in the New York Herald, has come up pointedly here, following a report made by Dr. George McCoy, passed ssistant surgeon or the Marine Hospital Service to Surgeon-General Wyman, A peculiar disease similar to leprosy has ben discovered among the rats in San Francisco, and experts are now considering whether it could be transmitted persons. The reports of Dr. McCoy

"Soon after being assigned to the ex-terminations of rats in San Francisco I was informed by the city bacteriologist that he had observed the leprosy-like disease in one or two instances. He also showed me gross and microscopic specimens of the lesions. "I therefore began to look for the ondition and to keep notes on its occurrence. "During the period covered by this report 13,500 rats were examined and 20 cases of the disease observed. It is believed, however, that the condition is more frequent than these figures indicate, as all of the cases observed have been made in full-grown, large rats, and the lesions very well marked. "As to the relation of the disease to leprosy in man, Dr. W. R. Brinckerhoff, director of the leprosy investigation sta-tion at Molokai, Hawaii, states in an article which appeared in the transactions of the fifteenth annual meeting of the Hawaiian Territorial Medical Society, as follows:

"The question immediately arises as to whether this disease of the rat may not be human leprosy occurring in that animal. Of course, with the data now available, it is impossible to give a categorical answer to this question, but the geographical distribution of the disease excess arguists an affirmative reply. ty, as follows: speaks against an affirmative reply. It seems more probable that rat leprosy is to human leprosy as is bovine or avian tuberculosis to the human disease, rather than that it is like plague or glanders, a disease common to and transmissible between two species.

PRANK OF TROPICAL STORM.

Twisted All Four Masts of the Sci James B. Drake.

The four-masted schooner James B. Drake is at McPhee's shipyard in East Boston undergoing repairs for one of the most peculiar accidents in the his tory of navigation.

While cruising in southern waters the kehooner was caught in a cyclonic storm which revolved around the vessel in such a manner that all four of her mast were twisted in their steps. When the ship carpenters investigated the schooner preparatory to beginning their work they could scarcely believe their eyes. Plainly some rotary motion of wind and storm had caught the poles in a leverage, foreing them just half way around. No explanation is offered for the masts not coming out of the vessel. All four are standing and have been carrying sail all the way to port. No other damage was received during the storm, and aithough the masts were turned they were not injured in the least.

Wedding Rings as Curtain Hanger

A handsome tabernacle of silver gilles has been erected in the chapel of the Blessed Sacrament in the new Roman Catholic Cathedral at Westminster.

For years past, in anticipation of this event, a lady who has done much for the cathedral, has been collecting gold rings on which the inner curtains might hang. She has succeeded in persuading bang. She has succedeed in persuading many of her friends and relatives to leave at death their wedding rings for this service.

At the present moment the curtains of silk inside the tabernacle are supported by about fourteen golden rings which she has obtained, and on each of them the name of its donor is inscribed.—

Of Ted Smith For Assault on White Girl.

Mob of 6,000 Shout With Joy as Negro Burns.

Greenville, Tex., Aug. 3 .- Overpower ing the officers who were taking him to jail, a mob of nearly 6,000 infuriated citizens dragged Ted Smith, the 16-yearold negro who feloniously assaulted Miss Viola Delancey yesterday, through the streets to the city's public square, piled cordwood around him and, saturating his clothing and the wood with kerosene, set fire to the pyre. As the flames leaped into the air, the frenzied screams of the negro were completely drowned by the shouts of joy of the angry crowd, which watched the blaze die down until only ashes marked the spot. Expressions of sympathy were met with summary punishment. One negro who made a slight remark was beaten within an inch

Once in the hands of the mob Smith's life was worth but little. Piteous cries made no impressions on the avengers, who threw a rope about the negro's neck and dragged him, choking, through the streets into the public square. Tieing him to a post, three cords of heated wood were piled around him, and after the pile had been thoroughly saturated several gallons of kerosene oil the match was touched to the negro. Neither denying nor acknowledging his guilt, and ched to the negro. Neither merely crying out for mercy, the boy went to his death. Many photographs were taken while

EDITOR GETS OFF.

Charged With Blackmail--Rejoicing at His Acquittal

London, Aug. 3.- Robert Siever, editor of the Winning Post, was to-day found not guilty at the Old Bailey on the charge that he had attempted to blackmail Jack Joel, a nephew of the late Barney Barnato, by threatening to publish a defamatory article about Joel unless the latter paid him $25,000. The trial has been going on for several days. The verdict of acquittal was greeted by loud cheering in the court. Siever denied absolutely that there had been any attempt at blackmail, and declared the whole affair was conspiracy. The trial was marked by extraordinary monstrations outside the court in favor of Siever and against Joel.

JUDGE LECTURED WOMEN.

Desire for Attire Absolutely Curse of Society, Says Judge.

Toronto despatch: Mrs. Fannie Good Toronto despatch: Mrs. Fannie Good-man and Mrs. Sarah Samuels, Jewish women, were the recipients of a rigorous lecture from Judge Morgan in the county court chambers which they will long remember. The two women pleaded guilty to separate charges of shop in the T. Eaton Company store. were allowed out on suspended sentence.
"The inordinate desire for attire," said his lordship, "is an absolute curse of modern society, and applies to rich and poor, young and old."

Doctors Guinane and William Perry testified that the prisoners are of un-controllable impulse. Their husbands told the judge that they supplied them with plenty of money to buy clother without having to resort to steal them The women offered no defence, except that they were mentally afflicted, and did not know what they were doing. Before rendering his decision Judge

Morgan severely lectured the women. "The people who run the big stores," continued the judge, "have to protect themselves, and one cannot blame them for prosecuting cases of this sort. Col. Denison has adopted very drastic methods of dealing with shoplifters because of the large number continually coming before him. Judge Winchester has adoped a fnore lenient measure to some extent, feeling that perhaps suspended sentence has much more weight than a short term in jail, which deteriorates the culprits rather than doing them any good. I act along these lines myself, be cause I believe this course should be followed in the case of first offenders. Of course the newspapers say consider able about it, but that does not bother

"Now, I want you women to distinctly undersand that this sentence will always be hanging over your heads, and if on any future occasion you are brought up for theft I shall promptly send for you and give you the full penalty of the law for shoplifting. The thefts you com-mitted were of mean and most contemptible character, because necessity did not prompt you to steal."

I have a big business when crops are poor from people who are willing to trade with me provided I can duplicate cata logue house prices and wait until the harvest for money. My scales weigh too much when I sell sugar, and too little when I buy butter. I am a thief, a liar and a grafter. If I smile I am a soft soapy hypocrite, and if I don't I am a grump. ### FAT MILK AND FAT MEAT

Why should milk that contains much cream be accounted the best? Cream is only fat, and we do not rate the food value of meats solely by the amount of fat that they include. Dr. J. A. Gilbert, Portland, Oregon, writing in the medical Record (New York) takes the view, this devotion to "rich" milk has no logical basis. In our earnest search after a fat milk, he says, we have pro-bably gone too far, To quote from an ditorial in The Hospital (London, Eng.) which notes Dr. Gilbert's opinion appreciatively:
"The milk which is richest in cream is not therefore the most nutritious, for the very simple reason that a rich milk is need easily digested and absorbed than a milk in which the fat percentage is low. As far as as its other constitu ents are concerned, a milk poor in fat is as valuable a food as a milk rich in fat. The fat percentage, the popular standard by which milk is judged, is most variable, while the proportions of the albumenoids, sugars and salts vary but little in the different samples of milk. In other words, while the energy producing and heat giving qualities of the several kinds of milk may be great or little, the valuable proteid in. gredients, which go to building up of the tissues—the prime property of any food—remain very much the same in all varieties of cows' milk. Thus a "thin" milk is for all purposes, save for energy and heat production, as valuable a food as the so-called "rich" milk. Indeed, it not infrequently happens, as the experimental feeding of young growing . inals has shown, that a thi milk may prove, in the long run, more flesh forming than a rich milk, inasmuch as the former is less liable to induce gastro-enteric disorders."

And Felt They Saved the Honor of the

Every graduating class at Annapo leaves behind it the fame of certain heroes in the line of physical prowess or mental endeavor. One of these heroes was George Dewey, a fine, manly, athletic youth, the pride of the boxing and fencing masters and the terror of all bullies.

In Dewey's class was a youth of an excellent bent for applied mathematics, but so tender of physique that he often suffered from the rough horseplay of his elders. Dewey took the boyunder his protection, and the two became fast friends. They swung their hammocks in the same watch on their graduating cruise and when the ship touched at Liverpool obtained permission to run up to London on a day's leave. By rigid economy the two had scraped to gether a little more than £2 apiece, and they landed in the English capital ar rayed in spick and span new uniforms. A round of sightseeing had reduced their combined capital to 2 sovereigns and their return tickets when their boyish appetites announced the hour of

With the cautious economy of his ancestors the Scotsman suggested a chop-house, but nothing but the best would suit Dewey, and he accordingly steer-ed his chum into the finest hotel he could find.

The two seated themselves at one of the tables and scanned the menu with a magnificent air. The first item that caught their eyes was strawberries and cream, and this, with its reminiscence of home, they proceeded to order.

Now, the time was winter, and strawberries from the hothouse are expensive in London, so it was small wonder that the other guests who had learned the order looked inquiringly at these specimens of the jeunesse dorse of the American navy. An Oxford lad who sat next them seemed particularly impressed and turned his large eyes upon them with awe. The strawberries were good, and all went well until bill for £1. The Scotsman nearly collapsed, but Dewey noticed the eyes of the Oxonian upon him and, turning superbly to the waiter, ordered two more

AN ANCIENT HIGHWAY.

England's Great North Road is Twe Thousand Years Old.

Before we reached Hatfield, a few miles out of London, we had already been impressed with the magnificence of this Great North road, which is said to have been built by a Mr. Cae sar, whose headquarters were in Rome at the time. It is the direct route from London to Edinburgh and has been traveled for so many centuries that the earliest histories of England contain accounts of the movement of troops upon it. It is a great thoroughfare for vehicles of all sorts, motor-ists and cyclists, and in these modern days there are well worn footpaths along either side for pedestrians. We passed scores of motors, and I was told while in England that the popularity of motoring had noticeably di-minished the number of first class fravelers by rail. We found the road for its entire length of 400 miles in perfect condition. In many portions the macadam is said to be nine feet thick, Long sections of the road are oiled, and on no part of it was there any appreciable amount of dust. There are few sharp curves, and the grades are so slight that it has become a great thoroughfare for speeders, with the result that there are many police traps for which one has to watch. We found that we could stop in almost any little village and get information as to just where the traps were located—as, for instance, they told us at Bigleswade, which is a better looking place than its name, to look out for traps just the other side of Buckden and again in approaching Weston.—Frank

KILLING A WHALE.

Where All of the Boat's Crew Looked

It was my boat's privilege to faster first, and we did so in grand style, says a writer in Forest and Stream. The big fellow lay blowing in one position, and we sailed on him head and head and fastened to him with two hars, one of them being an explosive. When he felt the iron he turned and plunged under our boat and covered us with the spray from his flukes as he tossed them up in the air to dive. And he did not stop, either, for our line whizzed around the loggerhead, giv-ing out a blue sheet of smoke until the of it went by us like a bullet. He had gone down with our 300 fathoms of line in less than a minute.

In a few minutes he appeared again near one of the other boats, and he got two more harpoons, one of them explosive, and then the other two boats shot in and fastened with two irons

Meanwhile the beast was coursing around and spouting blood in a frantic manner, and it took six bomb lances besides the eight harpoons to subdue

Our next hit was made on the 9th, whale did not go very far this time, but just circled around us in a short line. Another whale from the herd kept by him until the kill and then made off to windward. The other boat was off after some other whales. They could have got him easily.

While we were tied to the dead whale

we made out his comrade coming down to us at a great speed, and it looked as if he meant mischief. We hurriedly cut adrift from our capture and, getting fresh harpoons and lances ready, prepared for his onslaught. In a minstopped to take a look we jumped the boat ahead and darted two irons, which started him off at a high speed to windward, and the people on the ship told us afterward that we literally skipped from one sea to the next. All we were conscious of was the fact that the boat simply rested on her keel, and the spray flew over us in great sheets.

At last he slacked up and gave us a chance to put in a bomb lance. He made a rush to leeward, to where we had left the dead whale, straight as a die and right over him, dragging us over, too, of course, all the time spout-ing blood. Then he dived under us and came up with his blowhole right under the mate's nose, who was looking over the side for him, and he got the spout of thick blood right in the face at less than a yard distant. Of course it spattered all of us, and when we hauled alongside with our two whales we all looked as much like murderers as anything else. The captain was highly pleased with our per-formance, and he at once awarded our mate the pig, for it had been put up as

A Hallucination. "I was lying in a hotel bedroom one morning," he said, "about half awake when I heard a key rattling in the door. Much to my horror, the door opened, and the maid came in to make up the room, or at least so it seemed to me. I called out to her to leave, and she did so. All this happened in a minute or less, and I fell asleep again. When I woke up I remember ed the incident clearly. When I came to look at the door, however, I found that it was not only locked from the inside with the key still in, but that s bolt also was shot. I was sure that I had seen the maid enter, but when asked her later about it she said that she had tried the door from the outside and, hearing me call out, had departed. As far as I can make out, it must have been a very complete hallucination about seeing her, called up in my mind in my sleepy condition by my fear that she might enter. I won-

THE SMITH-JONES AFFAIR.

Two Versions of Just Exactly How the Incident Occurred.

NG TO SMITTE: "Oh, say! I met Jones. You know Jones, of course. Well, I heard that he had called me a liar the other day so I was just laying for him. I have an idea he suspected something was up, as he began to act sheepish right away. But of course I didn't let on at first. I just looked him calmly and coolly in the eye. Then I said, Jones, old man, I heard something about you the other day that I couldn't believe.' I said this in a calm, even voice, but Jones must have known something was up, as I could see him begin to trem ble. 'I hope it was something good,' said Jones, with a quaver in his voice. As for me, I was just beginning to enjoy myself. 'Oh, well,' I replied, with a pleasant offhand smile, 'that depends entirely on the point of view. Now, I may not be good or I may be good.' I smiled genially this time, while Jones turned pale; I could distinctly see him growing pale. 'That tinctly see him growing pale. "That, of course, is a matter of opinion, but I wish, Jones"—here I looked him fairly and squarely in the eye—"if you have anything of an intimate and perso nature'— By this time Jones was shaking all over. I just lingered on thos words while I faced him down. Oh, it was too rich! 'Why, Jones, old man, just say it to my face, will you? and with this, in my easiest and most careess manner, I left him. You see, it wasn't necessary to do anything to Jones. It was the withering sarcasm of what I said that fetched him, I can tell you it was great fun-simply great! And he won't forget it either. He'll know better next time.'

ACCORDING TO JONES : "Do you know Smith? Well, I was very much amused at him the other day. I had called him a liar, and some one must have told him about it. Of course I only said it in the heat of an argument with another man. I didn't really mean it, but some one must have told him. I assume he was told, He came up to me and started to say something, but he was so nervous I suspected at once that he had heard what I said. Finally he smiled quite a sheepish smile and said, 'I heard something about you the other day that I couldn't believe.' He kind of gulped the words and was so embar-rassed that actually I felt sorry for him. I felt as if I'd like to help him out. 'Well,' said I in my most encouraging way, 'I hope it was something good.' As I said this I looked him fairly and squarely in the eye. You ought to have seen him weaken. He shifted from one foot to the other and mur mured, with a faint smile: 'I suppo it depends upon the point of view. I hope I'm good.' Then he went on timhope I'm good.' Then he went on this dily. 'We've always been good friends, Jones,' said he, 'and I hope our intimate and personal relations will continue,' said he. He was going to call thus, 'said he. He was going to call thus,' said he. He was going to call thus,' said he. He was going to call thus, 'said he. He was going to call thus,' said he. He was going to call thus, 'said he. He was going to call thus,' said he. He was going to call thus, 'said he. He was going to call thus, 'said he. He was going to call thus,' said he. He was going to call thus, 'said he. He was going to call thus,' said he. He was going to call thus, 'said he. He was going to call thus,' said he. He was going to call thus,' said he. He was going to call thus,' said he. He was going to call thus, 'said he. He was going to call thus,' said he. me down, but he just didn't have the nerve. 'Sure,' I said, and with that he walks away perfectly satisfied. Now, what do you think of that? I was just what do you think of that, "I was just hoping he would come right out and say, 'Jones, you called me a liar.' But he wasn't up to it. Of course I would have apologized, for, as I said, I meant him no harm. But that's the way some Russian Fairy Tales.

A book of fairy tales was once the cause of the expulsion and conse ruin of 175 persons at Poltava. A pupil at one of the state schools there was caught in the act of reading this book of fairy tales, which had been prohibited by the censor on the ground that certain of the tales might be applied to Russian conditions and Rus sian politics. The boy explained that the caretaker of the school buildings had lent him the book. The principal of the school reported the caretaker to the police, and on the ground of this denunciation the offender was sent to Siberia.

The officials of the institution, together with several parents of pupils, were so indignant at the conduct of the principal that they drew up a protest describing his denunciation as a mean and despicable act. The only consequence was that the officials lost their posts and, together with the res dents who had signed the protest, were expelled from the province of Poltavs for three years. The order of expul-sion was extended to all the relatives of the offenders, so that 175 persons were sentenced to this severe punishment on account of a book of fairy tales which in other countries is given to every child to read.

Whittier's Simple Life. If Whittier had cared for money or society, he could have had his own way in Boston, but he preferred the simple life to be found out of town. What he might have regarded as a state of wealth did not overtake him until his sixtleth year, when he received $10,000 for the first edition of "Snowbound," and it was ten years later before he yielded to the wish of Bostonians to do him honor. Here was a man born and reared in hard circumtheir lives. When a husband dies the stances, who made slippers at a profit of 8 cents a pair while he enjoyed his brief term at Haverhill academy, who had little liking for social or academic pursuits, who spent more of his time away from the so called literary centers, and yet who lived to enjoy such fame as has come to not more than a dozen other New Englanders. The secret of his rare success is not hard to find. He was the poet and evangel of a great liberal era. It was his principles as much as his verses that made Whittier famous and influential-Washington Times.

Means Perfect Heating without Gas, Dust or Smoke.

The "Hecla" Furnace is the only Furnace with Fused Joints.

These Joints are made by fusing the steel and cast iron parts together at white heat making an indestructible joint. Fused Joints are permanently airtight. Even after 20 years' use they will not work loose or leak. They insure absolute freedom from dust, smoke and gas.

The Steel-Ribbed Fire Pot used on the "Hecla" Furnace has three times as much radiating surface as any other style of fire pot. It will save fuel for you and give you more heat. It extracts from the fire, heat that would otherwise go up the chimney.

David and Coliath .- 1 Sam. 17: 1-18: 5. Commentary .- 1. Goliath defies 1srael (vs. 1-10.) The giant, Goliath, who same out as the champion of the Philistines, "belonged to the primitive race of the Anakim of which the Israelites had found a small remnant at the time of the conquest, four hundred years before (Num. 13; 32, 33; Josh. 14; 12.) These, driven out by the Israelites, attached themselves to the Philistines; and Goliath appears to have been one of a family of giants, all of whom were slain by David and his men (2 Sam. 21: ously estimated at from nine to eleven feet. In those times great size and strength and armor were of immeaadvantage in battle. This armed and plumed giant defied the arm ies of Israel morning and evening for forty days. His appearance sent dismay hearts of Saul and his people of Saul's soldiers dared to fight with him, for no one could overcom him with the ordinary weapons of war ; II. David offers to fight Goliath (vs 0-37). Just at this point David ap peared on the scene, and, much to the astonishment of Saul, offered to champion the cause of Israel and go out and meet the Philistine. At first Saul hesitated, but David soon convinced the king that he possessed the elements necessary for success, and Saul reluctantly consented to his going. David's statement (vs. 34-37) shows that he had (1) courage, (2) strength, (3) agility, (4) confidence in his own ability, (5) humility, (6) perseverance, (7) wisdom, and (8) faith in God.

2 Tim. 4:7). God is our commander. He teacheth our hands to war (2 Sam. 22:25; Psa. 144:1); and "who teacheth like him?" (Job 36:22).

1. Fight with God's weapons. "Saul armed David with his armor" (v. 38). But David had a better defence than Saul's coat of mail (Eph. 6:11-18). "The weapons of our warfare are not carnal" (2 Cor. 10:4). Not force but faith is our victory (1 John 5:4).

II. Discard worldly weapons. "David said unto Saul, I cannot go with these, for I have not proved them" (v. 39).
"We do not war after the flesh" (2 Cor. 10:3). Our warfare is consistent. 10:3). Our warfare is a spiritual warfare, not against unbelievers, but against unbelief. Our weapons are "mighty through God" (2 Cor. 10:4). His promise is, "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper" (Isa. 54.17)

Heathenism is an armored, massiv Goliath. Ignorance, superstition and caste are the armor in which heathen religions are encased. "According to the latest and most trustworthy statistics the great religions of the world are represented as follows: Christians, 550,000,000; Confucianists, etc., 290,000,000; Mohammedans, 217,000,000; Hindus, 209.

"Of the Christians it is reckoned that about 27,200,000 are Roman Catholic; 166,000,000 Protestant, and 118,000,000 Eastern Catholics."

Says a writer, "A friend of mine was standing on the top of one of the sacred mountains in China, visited annually by thousands of pilicims and he noticed thousands of pilicims and he noticed raduntains in China, visited annually by thousands of pilgrims, and he noticed one man who had climbed up those thousands of steps upon his knees. He said to him, 'What are you looking for?' 'Oh,' he said, 'I am looking for heaven.' Have you found it?' 'No,' he said, 'I feel and I feel hit I cannot find the feel and I feel, but I cannot find the door.' Jesus is the door; but those who most need that door are groping blindly for it and cannot find it. You and I may have the privilege and the joy of helping them find that door. Is there anything in life that can be compared with that?" "They that turn many to righteouness (shall shine) as the stars for ever and ever" (Dan. 12:3).

Disfigured Remains of a Woman Discovered In Dump.

Police Believe She Was Murdered and Placed In Fire.

New York, Aug. 3.—An autopsy will be necessary to determine the cause of the death of the man or woman whose charred body was found in a bonfire on a vacant lot in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn to-day. The legs and arms of the victim were nearly burned off, and the body so disfigured that the police were unable to decide the sex of the victim. A stableman, who discovered and extinguished the fire, was detained by the police, who have no information as to how the body was placed in the fire.

A physician's examination disclosed that the body was that of a woman, and small pieces of clothes and hairpins found near the body confirmed this decision. round near the body confirmer that decision. ### KEEP OUIET.

Sultan Sees No Need for Further Demonstrations.

Populace Wants His Old Advisers Dismissed.

Constantinople, Aug. 3 .- The crisis in Turkish affairs is by no means over. The demonstrations that have been in favor of the Sultan may at any moment turn against him if he does not yield to the demands of the constitution party for the dismissal of the palace camarilla.
It is believed that the Sultan will make these concessions, although to do so is difficult. Some of the officials already have been removed, and it is be-lieved that others will either flee the leved that others will either flee the country or seek refuge at one of the foreign legislations. It is apparent that the Sultan is becoming uneasy. Troops yesterday evening prevented further demonstrations in front of the palace.

An Imperial irade made public to-day convokes the first Turkish Parliament under the new constitution for North under the new constitution for Nov. 1. The document announcing this decision appeals to the people to cease their demonstrations sointing out that as the Sultan has proved his good sentiments and his intentions strictly to observe the constitution and labor for the prosperity of all his subjects there is no longer reason to continue the manifesta tions, which only impede progress.

FISH KILLED.

TO THE REAL PROPERTY. Pollution of Water Condemned by Member of Commission.

New York, Aug. 3.—The killing of fish by the pollution of waters in which they feed and spawn has become a matter for international consideration. This is the opinion of Dr. David Starr Jordan, President of Leland Stanford University, and one of the most eminent ichthyologists of America, who is a member of the International Fisher Commission. This body, consisting of United States and Canadian experts, was created in accordance with the provisions of a treaty between the United States and Great Britain, and is engag ed in the task of framing statutes which shall protect the fish in international waters along Lake Champlain, the St Lawrence River and the Great Lakes.

When these statutes have been adopted they will be enforced by the general governments of the treaty-making pow-In a letter to Edward Hatch, jun., of

New York, Dr. Jordan says:
"It seems to me that the pollution of international waters is a matter which this commission must take very seri-ously. We shall provide adequate means for reinforcing whatever statute are adopted. The New York statute seems to cover the ground very well I am told it is not enforced against the great pulp mill corporations."

FIGHT IN A JURY ROOM.

Chicago, Aug. 3.— Personal violence in the jury room yesterday brought to a sudden termination the case of Eugene B. Hobson, manager of a Tukish theatre in Amusement Park, on trial before Judge Beitler for presenting an indecent show.

Then a water goblet was sent hurling through the glass door of the jury room and Judge Beitler ordered Bail-iff James Hart to quell the disturbiff James Hart to quell the disturb-ance. Bradstreet's Trade Review.

Montreal.—There has been but little change in the trade conditions during the past week. The volume of business does not materially improve, although some wholesalers state they find orders somewhat heavier than was the case a week ago. Trade has been to some extent affected by the recent unfavorable weather for crops in Quebec province, although conditions continue most favorable in other parts of Canada. The hay crop is about an average, and oats are not looking nearly as well as was ex-pected. All this has had some effect upon country trade, and orders for fall have suffered in consequence. "If Syl and I had come back to England together, this is one of the places I'd have brought her to," he said to himself, "and we'd have picnicked here as we used to picnic out in the valley. his hands.

The moon was just showing above the dark hill line, and he felt loth to go; it seemed so very unlikely that he should ever see Lynne Burrows again!

He glauced up at the tree. It was ar old oak with a gnarled trunk, seamed with great hollows and stretching specious branches out toward its fellows. "It's a long time since I climbed you, old chap," he said, addressing the tree affectionately.

The last time he had done so he had dragged Audrey after him, and they had sat upon the very branch he was now locking at.

It looked inviting, and after a moment's hesitation he knocked out the he remained quiet.

Whoever it was, he was coming straight for the clump, and Neville caught himself wondering what business a mar could have in Lynne Burrows at that time of night. "Some paor devil of a tramp hunting up a night's lodging, I suppose," he muttered. "I shall frighten him out of it's life," and he put his hand on the branch to bring himself down, when a figure dimby seen in the dusky darkness entered the circle of trees and stopped about a dozen yards from that ou which

"A tramp!" he said. "I'll wait and see what he will do. If he takes to Mother Earth for a bed, the ants will make it lively for him. I don't wish him any harm, but I should rather enjoy seeing him jump up."

The man came back to where he had first stood, struck a match and lit a small piece of candle.

This rather startled Nevile.

"Tramps don't usually care much about a light to go to bed by," he thought, and he looked down at the man curiously.

He had not much of the appearance of the common tramp, but was, in leed, rather well dressed in a plain suit of black, and looked to Neville, who had black, and looked to Neville, who had seen many and divers types of mankind, like a respectable clerk, say a solicitor's. He was an elderly man with a gray ceard that gave him rather a venerable look, and Neville was puzzing at the problem why a respectable clerk of his time of life should think fit to come to Lynne Burrows and light a candle, when the man gave him another surprise by unbuttoning his frock coat and tak-ing from under it a small hand trowel. Neville could scarcely refrain from laughter. If this had been Aus-Neville could scarcely refrain from laughter. If this had been Australia, and, say, a digger's camp, a performance of this kind would not have been astonishing for all sorts of curious things occur in such places; but this was England, Lynne Burrows, and—what on earth could a man of this kind want at this hour of night with a piece of candle and a hand apade?

Then it flashed upon him. This individual was one of those harmless lunatics who amuse themselves by moth and insect hunting. That was it. The man was a naturalist in search of some "are insect hunting. That was it. The man was a naturalist in search of some respecimen of the flying or crawling the, and was going to dig or scratch for it.

To plump down upon him, or even speak, would in all probability give the poor old fellow a fit, Neville thought, and he decided to remain where he was until the man had finished his search and gone.

The man stuck the candle on the ground by the simple method of pouring some grease from it and standing the candle in it; then, with his back to Nev-ille, paced slowly from the tree, counting as he went.

He made the measurement twice as if o be certain of his accuracy, then went down on his knees and began to dig quickly.

Every now and then he paused and ooked round and listened, and once as he did so a bird, wakened by the noise and the light, flew out of the trees; the man extinguished the candle in an instant, as if frightened, and Neville could n breathing hard as he and listened. Then he relit the candle and fell to Neville wondered what it could be the nan was in search of, and ransacked his prain trying to think of some insect or animal tha hid itself under the solid earth, but did not succeed.

Suddenly the man uttered a low, suppressed cry of satisfaction, as if he had ound what he had been looking for. Consumed by curiosity, Neville stretch d himself along the branch, and leaned over at the imminent risk of tumbling down, and saw what the curious anima

CHAPTER XXVI

What Neville saw as he leaned down from the branch was a round tin canis-ter, such as cocoa or coffee is packed in, lying at the bottom of the hole which the old man had dug.

The man took up the box, forced open the lid and drew out—not a bag of gold or a string of iewels—but a roll of or a string of jewels—but a roll of paper. This he placed carefully in his breast pocket; then flinging the empty can into the hole, he filed in the dirt, stamped it down and strewed some of the dead leaves and twigs over the spot. Then he sat down, lit a pipe and smoked meditatively. After a few minutes he, with a shake of the head, drew the paper from his pocket and looked

As his eyes approached Nev.lle's hiding-place Neville quietly and caution drew himself up to a higher branch and so escaped detection.

The man went up to the tree and carefully placed the paper inside one of the hollows, thrusting in his hand to see how ws, thrusting in his hand to see how deep the hole went.

The paper was thus well within Neville's reach if he stretched out his arm.

The old gentleman then returned to his seat at the foot of another tree and ear to the ground.

This action startled Neville as much as anything the man had done, for it reminded him of his digger days, and the way in which the scouts of a party listened for the approach of footsteps. How did it happen that a respectable, elderly clerk should know a trick of the backwoods? woods?

The man got up, resumed his seat and relit his pipe with an evident air of satisfaction, and a few minutes afterward and descend when a tall figure entered the thicket, and Neville recognized with amazement his brother Jordan!

Jordan had got on a dress Inverness, with the collar turned up, but Neville knew him in a moment. Could it be possible that his brother, the Right Hon. Sir Jordan Lynee, had come to Lynne Burrows to meet this man with the piece of candle and the tin canister? It seemed incredible,

The whole business were a grotesque and unreal air which almost made Neville doubt the evidence of his own senses. That his brother desired to escape obfrom the way in which he looked round him—very much as the elderly man had looked—before he entered the circle of trees, and the fashion in which he kept the high collar of his dress cape coat round his face.

It was like the scene of a melodrams Neville thought, as he stared down at his brother pale face and tall thin form. Jordan made his way to the other man, who remained seated, puffing his pipe, eyeing Jordan coolly, and Jordan in a tone of impatience and beauty

"You are here. Let us get this busi-insolent grin.

"What are you afraid of, Sir Jordan?"
he retorted. "We're quiet enough here."
At the sound of his voice Neville's heart leaped, and the blood rushed to his head. Was he mad or dreaming, or was that lavarick's voice?

He shook and trembled so violently under the emotion aroused by the man's voice that he almost fell from the branch, and he had to set his teeth firmly to keen himself from crying out.

Lavarick here, and in collusion with Jordan! Surely he, Neville, must be dreaming! His heart beat so fast and furiously that it made a singing in his ears so that he could scarcely hear the voices of the two men below him, near

"I am here, very reluctantly," said Jordan, haughtily. "And I am desirous of completing this business and returning as soon as possible."

"Right," said Lavarick, curtly. "Did you on the way do you.

any one see you on the way, do you think, Sir Jordan?" "I think not," replied Jordan.

"I think not," replied Jordan. "But some person, some tramp, may come upon us at any moment, and..."

"You'd rather not be seen holding confaib with a stranger at this time of night, eh?" said Lavarick, as coolly as before. "Well, I dare say you're right. It would look singular, wouldn't it, if you were seen? People would begin to ask themselves queer questions. But, there, you'd have some explanation cut and dried for 'em, wouldn't you? You can't put the Right Hon. Sir Jordan Lynne in a hole easily," and he laughed. If Neville had entertained any doubt as to the identity of the man it would

If Neville had entertained any doubt as to the identity of the man it would have been dispelled by the laugh.

It was the laugh he had heard in the tent on the night he had ransomed Sylvia, the laugh that had rung in his ears as he saw he borne away across Lavarick's saddle. And the sound of it now filled him with almost irresistible desire to spring upon the scoundrel and knock the life out of him. But he restrained himself with an awful effort strained himself with an awful effort that caused him to break out into a fit of perspiration. That there was some villainy hatching between these two was evident, and if he could only learn its nature he might be able to thwart them. "It is your nature to be insolent," said Jordan. "When you have finished you will be good enough to proceed to the matter which brings me here. As I said,

I came reluctantly, and it will not require much provocation to induce me t Lavarick rose and emptied his pine "You've got the notes?" he said.
"I have the notes," replied Jordan

Lavarick held out his claw-like hand. "Pass them over, then," he said, curtly. Jordan sneered. "Excuse me," he said.. "I brought hem for an exchange, not a gift."

Lavarick swore. "We don't trust each other much." he aid, sarcastically.

Jordan remained silent.

"What's to prevent me from knocking you on the head and helping myself to the notes?" said Lavarick, with engaging frankness.

"A regard for your own safety," re-plied Jordan, calmly. "Before I left the court I told my servant that I was going for a walk on the Burrows, and going for a walk on the Burrows, and that if I did not return in an hour he was to drive here for me. If you murwered me as I have no doubt you would like to do—"ssented Lavarick, with cold-blooded candor.

"You could not conceal the evidences of your crime and escape in time." He looked at his watch as he spoke. "As it is, the time is passing rapidly, and my "You refuse to give me the notes first?" said Lavarick. "Absolutely!" retorted Jordan.

The New York American of Dec. 18th, 1907, says the common house fly is one of the greatest enemies of man. MOTHER FOX'S CUNNING.

Her Ineffectual Plans to Divert Hunter's Attention From Her Den.

Hunters found a den of foxes in the hills south of Hagerstown and unearthe five little ones about as large as well grown cats. The mother fox escaped be fore the hunters reached the den, which was lined thickly with soft grasses and feathers. Instead of running away she kept within sight while the hunters worked with their shovels.

She apparently understood what they were doing, for she endeavored by every means to attract them away from their work and toward herself. She approach ed quite near and acted as if lame and distressed. She would lie down on her distressed. She would be down on her side and writhe along the ground, uttering whines and moans. Then she would limp off as if very lame, going very slowly and halting frequently.

The hunters were not to be drawn away from the work in hand by such factics and finally, after much digging, came upon the den where the five pretty little fellows were shrinking. They made no resistance, and seemed rather to like the handling and petting they received.

'All of them were taken to a farmhouse where they are confined. They will not be released, but will probably be pain-lessly despatched. Grown foxes do not make good neighbors in farming community. It is their cunning habit to scatter the family, one and two in widely separated retreats. It is said too that foxes will not rob roosts close to their dens, but will go miles away for food and carefully hide their trails.— Hagerstown correspondence Indianapo

THE DOMESTIC FLY.

Timely Facts and Speculation Concern ing an Interesting Creature,

"The common domestic fly," said nan who is no scholar but has managed to pick up many interesting facts, "is altogether too common and too domes tic. She is one of the most interesting animals_"

"You don't mean 'animals,' " a listen broke in; "a fly is not an animal." "Then she must be a vegetable or mineral," said the first speaker. "Call her which ever you please, but she is one of the most interesting creatures ex ant.

"An industrious female fly lays about 3,000,000 eggs. There are no indolent flies and few males. The fly does not set after laying; if she did she would be retired from her wonted activity during longer or shorter periods or incubation. Her eggs hatch without motherly attention, and it is seldom that one fails to "The fly has so many eyes," the man who is no scholar went on, "that she can see in all directions at once without turning her head or rolling her eyes. That's why it is so hard to hit her. A fly time poet sang:

Now doth the little busy fly Buzz in a fellow's hair, But try to smite her hip and thigh And, lo! she isn't there.

"The intelligence of flies is an interesting and exasperating study. One of the ordinary ways of trying to kill flies is to fold a newspaper in the shape of flat pad and whack at them with it when they are sitting still.

"Now, the fly is familiar with the scientific fact that if she sits perfectly still the descending paper will make an air cushion in front of it that ninetynine times out of a hundred will pro tect her from being crushed. The concussion momentarily stuns her and she falls to the floor apparently dead, but in a few minutes she has recoverd and is again on the job. "That's why when you strike at a fly hard enough to spatter the butter all over the walls she is able to reappear so quickly on the rim of the sugar bowl, "When out not for food but merely for the fun of tantalizing you the fly knows when she has had enough. The she sits down on a dark spot in the car-she sits down on a dark spot in the carpet and watches you prance around the room looking for her on the walls.

"A very good way to catch flies is to distribute fly paper and platters of poison the tables and window sills. No matter how thick the flies are where this is done, their number will be quickly reduced. You can easily prove this by counting the flies you have caught. It is a great comfort, when there are a few million flies in the air and more coming, to count up your catch and know that a dozen or so will never pester you any

"This method of getting rid of flies is often employed in restaurants. It was the method used in the railroad restaurant where a passenger hurried in for refreshment, glanced along the display of pies and said:

"Give me a piece of this huckleberry."

"That ain't huckleberry,' said the waiter girl, waving her hand over the pie; 'it's custard.'

"Up with the lark' is a poetical expression for early rising. In with the

"Up with the lark' is a poetical expression for early rising. 'Up with the fly' would be stronger if less poetic. The lark doesn't compel you to get up, but the fly does. Besides, the lark is an English bird, but the fly is a bird that knows no nationality. If the fly would go away and let you sleep till the lark gets up you would have less cause for complaint.

"When we warm children was ween.

"When we were children we were taught to believe that fly's foot was a wonderful part of creation—that when it was placed flat upon the ceiling the weight of the fly pulled it away in the centre and made a tiny vacuum and that the pressure of the atmosphere around it, in accordance with a law of nature, held the fly from falling. Several human flies' broke their necks trying to do the same trick with artificial flies' feet before it was discovered that if flies kept their feet clean they couldn't walk on ceilings.

"Flies believe that mankind was created for their amusement, and it has always, been a question with me which gave a fly the more solid enjoyment—to buzz around your nose and make you get up a few hours earlier in the morning than you want to, or to pester you in the daytime until you rage around the room with as paper slapper in your head while she wetches you freen which

They Are Peculiarly Social-the Old Ones, That Is.

As everybody knows, our oldest clubs were developed out of the original coffee houses nearly two centuries ago, and the newer clubs, as they were formed from time to time, consisted in the first instance of many members, experienced in the older, and so the good tradition was kept up. This applies at least to the really social clubs, like White's or the Garrick. It does not apply in the same degree to the large, ceremonious, more stately clubs like the United University or the Oxford and Cambridge, where a member probably knows only a small proportion of his fellow-members, or to an eminent political club like the Carlton, where a man is elected for services to his party. And it does not apply at all to those clubs which are merely large proprietary concerns for convenience, and which are generally and very rudely known as "pot houses"—I had better not give instances—where admission is swift and easy and where the membership largely consists of very young men who have not had time to get into a better institution. But a really social club even though new has the advantage of old exemplars. fee houses nearly two centuries ago, tution. But a really social club even though new has the advantage of old exemplars.

Thus the Bachelors, a comparatively recent club, has a character very like that of White's, which is one of the very oldest. The tone of the really social club is that of an easy familiarity. A member going in for his luncheon or dinner drops naturally into a seat close to another member and starts a conversation. In the more ceremonious club, or in the "pot house," if he has not arranged to meet some one or invited a guest he probably eats solitary. In the latter sort men move in ellene and isolation; in the former there is a general hum of "Hullo! how are you?" and "When did you get back?" and "Seen Tommy lately?" and so forth—and incidentally it is difficult to write your letters or read your newspapers, undisturbed. These are the real clubs, as the English society of a hundred years ago, which was like a great family party, understeed them, and they are the hardest to imitate. The others may confer some assurance of position, like the Athenaeum, or confer nothing except more or less dublous comfort, like the—never mind, but they have not the essential quality and can be imitated anywhere, more or less.—Town the essential quality and can be imi-tated anywhere, more or less.—Town and Country.

SOLDIERS' UNEXPECTED ALLY.

How a Holy Man Came to the Rescue of Regiment. Sir D. C. Drury-Lowe, who recently died, a veteran of Orimea, the Mutiny, the Zulu and Egyptian wars, was one of the leaders of the forced march to Cairo which made its way for sixty-five miles across the desert and consummated the victory of Tel-el-Kebir. A curious incident is told of this campaign.

story illustrates the absolute and super-stitious devotion of the Arabs to their religion, Arabi Pasha had concentrated his forces near the English camp. The British soldiers were a queer looking set in their rough, loose jackets, dusty and muddy, 'their growing beards, their dirty belts and helmets; but the strictest discipline was maintained. The men were steady, cheerful, patient to endure the scanty food, filthy water and the heat and dust.

A canal ran close to their line of entrenchments, from which they got their water. Arabi dammed this canal and cut a deep drain by which he intended to let out the water into the valley and so make it impossible for the British to get their supply.

A few days before the final battle the British engineers were astonished to find the water in the canal rising. The ten-dency before had been a rapid decrease from consumption and evaporation. As every one knew the canal was dammed, they supposed the only solution of the mystery was that the rising of the Nile had filled the canal above the level of the dam and that the water was pouring over it. The increase was availed of at e; the lock was opened and the level of the water raised. The true solution of this increase of water never entered th European mind. Later it was dis-Arabi Pasha had cut the dam. covered. A dervish, or holy man, much venerated, had come to the camp. He had heard of the building of the dam and pronounced it contrary to the faith. He declared that although the British soldiers were infidel dogs they were still God's creatures and should not be made to suffer and that the divine blessing could be expected only if the water were set free.

Arabi was a devout Moslem, and he instantly complied with the dervish's de-
