Our Premium Pictures.

As announced some time ago, the system of payment in advance for subscriptions has been adopted by the Charlottetown papers. This is the system upon which all successful newspapers conduct their subscription business; it is indeed the only satisfactory system for all parties concerned. But in some cases it may, in the start, involve a little hardship, inasmuch as it would mean paying two dollars instead of one. That is to say when a subscriber has been accustomed to pay at the end of the year instead of at the beginning. This apparent hardship will only exist in such cases for the first year; after that a dollar a year is all that has to be paid. Now, in order to render matters in this connection as agreeable as possible we make the following offer: All who now pay up to Dec. 31st, 1902, being but a brief space in advance, will receive their choice of our beautiful premium pictures, "Pope Leo XIII." or "King Edward and Queen Alexandra." If at the same time they send one dollar in advance for next year, they will receive both these valuable pictures. Those who have always paid in advance will, if they remit now for next year, receive their choice of these pictures; and new subscribers sending us a dollar will receive the paper till Dec. 31, 1903, and one or other of the pictures which ever they choose. This is a rare offer, and we would not be in a position to make it had we not had the good fortune to secure these pictures at a bargain. Through the Herald is the only way in which these pictures can be secured, and every one desirous of having one should apply for the same without delay. The picture of the Pope is lithographed in eleven different colors, and represents his Holiness in the attitude of bestowing his blessing. Those of the King and Queen are brought out in fine colors admirably blended, the whole fringed by maple leaves. This offer is open for one month from this date. That these pictures are all we claim for them, and that they are duly appreciated by those who have received them, our readers will readily understand from a perusal of the following testimonials:

FROM HIS LORDSHIP THE BISHOP OF CHARLOTTETOWN.
James McIsaac, Esq., Editor Charlottetown Herald.
Dear Sir,—I beg to acknowledge with my most sincere thanks the receipt of the photograph portraits of His Holiness Pope Leo XIII, and of their Majesties the King and Queen of England. They are indeed excellent works of their kind, and when suitably framed would be quite ornamental. From my personal remembrance of the Holy Father I consider this portrait as very faithfully representing the features of our august Pontiff.

I remain, dear Sir,
Yours very respectfully,
J. C. McDONALD,
Bishop of Charlottetown.

FROM REV. FATHER CURRAN,
St. Margaret's, P. E. I.
October 10th, 1902.
Mr. James McIsaac.
Dear Sir,—I have just received your premium picture of our Holy Father Leo XIII. It is an admirable likeness of his Holiness as he appeared when I first saw him 18 years ago. Your subscribers, I know, will fully appreciate this premium both on account of its value as a work of art, and as a faithful likeness of the greatest man of our own times and one of the most illustrious of the successors of the Prince of the Apostles.

I am, dear Sir,
Faithfully yours,
PETER CURRAN, P. P.

FROM REV. A. J. McDONALD,
Fort Augustus, P. E. I.,
October 9th, 1902.
Mr. James McIsaac, Editor of the Herald.
Dear Sir,—I am in receipt of your beautiful Herald premium picture, and hasten to return you my thanks for the same. That of his Holiness Pope Leo XIII. is a splendid likeness of him and such as every one of your subscribers should have. The picture of King Edward and Queen Alexandra is equally beautiful. These are really admirable works of art, and of themselves are worth what you charge for subscription to the Herald. Your subscribers will surely appreciate the opportunity you afford them of receiving gratis one or other or both of these splendid pictures.

I am, dear Sir,
Yours sincerely,
A. J. McDONALD, P. P.

FROM JOHN BRADLEY, ESQ.,
Kelly's Cross, P. E. I.,
October 10th, 1902.
To the Editor of the Herald.
Dear Sir,—I have this day received your splendid premium picture of Pope Leo XIII. So far as I can judge from comparison with any other pictures of his Holiness that I have seen, I consider it an admirable likeness of him. You are to be congratulated on securing such a valuable work of art as a premium picture, and none of your subscribers should lose any time in fulfilling the easy conditions upon which they may come into possession of one of them free of cost. With best wishes for success,

I am, dear Sir,
Yours truly,
JOHN BRADLEY.

FROM MR. P. W. CLARKIN,
Ch'Went, P. E. I.,
October 12th, 1902.
Mr. James McIsaac, Editor of the Herald.
Dear Sir,—Your premium picture of his Holiness Pope Leo, is a beauty. As compared with other pictures of the Pope that I have seen, I consider this a splendid likeness. I shall have the picture framed immediately, and will always keep it in my room. It is not always we have an opportunity of securing such admirable works of art on such easy terms. Every one of your subscribers should secure one of these pictures without delay. Hoping you may meet with every success in your laudable enterprise,

I remain, dear Sir,
Yours faithfully,
P. W. CLARKIN.

FROM R. J. McDONALD, M. D.,
Head St. Peter's Bay, P. E. I.,
October 12th, 1902.
Dear Sir,—I have just received the beautiful picture of his Holiness Pope Leo XIII, and of their Majesties King Edward and Queen Alexandra, which you are offering as premiums for your paper. Besides being valuable works of art, these pictures, so far as I can judge from comparisons are admirable likenesses of the subjects they represent. I surely think none of your subscribers will fail to take advantage of the opportunity you afford them of securing free of cost either or both of these splendid pictures.

I am, dear Sir,
Sincerely yours,
R. J. McDONALD.

Itching Skin
Distress by day and night—
That's the complaint of those who are so unfortunate as to be afflicted with Eczema or Salt Rheum—and outward applications do not cure. They can't.

The source of the trouble is in the blood—make that pure and this scaling, burning, itching disease will disappear.

"I was taken with an itching on my arms which proved very disagreeable. I concluded it was salt rheum and bought a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla. In two days after I began taking it I felt better and it never had any skin disease since. Have Hood's Sarsaparilla

A Swiss priest named Father Baumann while climbing near Springbrücke fell from a rock into the River Reuss last week and was drowned.

English exchanges record the death of Very Rev. Father Marcellus (Wright), a Passionist father of renowned eloquence, who as a missionary was well known throughout the British Isles and the Colonies.

In an official report just issued a statement is made of the remarkable fact that over thirteen per cent of the children attending the Catholic schools of the Archdiocese of Westminster, London, are non-Catholics.

At Naples the perodical miracle of the liquefaction of the blood of St. Januarius took place in the Cathedral on September 19th before a congregation of 4,000 persons, including several French pilgrims. The miracle was announced as usual by a salute of twenty-one guns from the forts of St. Elmo.

The anti-clericals in France are getting up a demand that the secular clergy shall be prohibited from giving religious instruction in the "ecoles libres," viz, the schools built and supported by the voluntary contributions of Catholics. Clearly their aim and effort is to destroy all religion in the minds of the young generation of French citizens.

"L'Eco d'Italia" announces the death of Father Albertario from an illness contracted during his imprisonment in connection with the Socialist disturbances at Milan in 1898. He was editor of the "Osservatore Cattolico," of Milan, and for the greater part of his life had devoted himself to journalism. His death at the early age of fifty-six will be deeply regretted by Catholics in Northern Italy.

In Lourdes the whole atmosphere is religious, and a very large number of the shops are devoted to the sale of religious emblems. Everything is subservient to the pilgrimages. The trams are stopped and carriages draw aside when a pilgrimage procession passes along. Whether it is due or not to the religious influence of the place one cannot say, but it is stated that there are but four policemen in the whole town, and these control on some occasions 60,000 or 70,000 persons.

By the will of the late Cecilia Tully, of Boston, $10,000 goes to Archbishop Williams for St. John's Seminary at Brighton; $30,000 to Woodstock College, Woodstock, Md.; $5,000 to the Apostolic College of Mangret, Limerick, Ire.; $4,000 to the trustees of Boston College for establishing two free scholarships; $2,000 to the Working Boys' Home; $1,000 each to the novitiates of Oblate Fathers, Still Organ, Dublin, Ire., and the Sisters of Mount Carmel, Roxbury; $500 each to the Little Sisters of the Poor, Roxbury; the Home for Destitute Catholic Children, Harrison avenue; the house of the Good Shepherd and Carney Hospital, Boston. A house on East Newton street, Boston, goes to the trustees of Boston College on the death of Miss Tully's sister.

Very quietly, so quietly, indeed, that not one of the Rome newspapers has adverted to it, the Holy Father made another record in the annals of long pontificates on Wednesday, September 3. On that day Leo XIII. completed twenty-four years, six months and fourteen days in the Supreme Pontificate, thus reaching the limit of the reign of Pius VI, and taking the second place after St. Peter. The "years of Peter" are clear in sight now for Leo XIII. According to the generally received account, St. Peter was Bishop of Rome for twenty-five years, two months and seven days, and on April 7 next Leo XIII. will, Deo volente, round off the same period. There is every reason to believe that the short seven months will be safely passed by the Holy Father.

The eight annual meeting of the stockholders of the Columbia Catholic Summer School was held at Madison, Wisconsin, on September 23. The name of the association was changed from Columbian Catholic Summer School to Western Catholic Chatauqua. The reports of the secretary and the treasurer showed a most satisfactory financial condition. The ticket receipts at St. Paul are in excess of those at any previous session. The following officers were elected: President, Rev. P. Danchy, Minneapolis, Minn.; first vice president, M. J. Cantwell, Madison, Wis.; second vice president, Rev. P. J. McGrath, Charles City, Ia.; secretary, John A. Hartigan, St. Paul, Minn.; treasurer, L. E. Murphy, Madison, Wis.

It seems probable that the next session of the school will be held in St. Paul.

Related travellers to Nome, in distant Alaska, will have reason to bless the memory of Father Jacques, S. J., the unfortunate missionary who lately became insane as a result of his arduous labors in the frozen North. The "San Francisco Leader" announces that the City Council of Nome has decided to perpetuate a practical and poetical idea which originated with Father Jacques. In the winter the greater part of the twenty-four hours is darkness, and travellers on the snow-obiterated trails often lose themselves on the flat, desolate tundra when the brief daylight fades. Not unfrequently there is a tragic ending to the journey. Recognizing the importance of a beseech, the devoted missionary conceived the idea of arming himself with the light of his church with an electric cross, and all last winter it flashed its guiding light for miles around. The city fathers of Nome have decided to assume the care of the beacon for the future.

Details of a most remarkable cure at St. Winifred's Well, Holywell, North Wales, are furnished by English exchanges. It appears that Miss Boyce, of 28 Carrick street, Cochrane, a young lady with whose family Mr. Lyon has long been acquainted, was some eighteen months ago attacked by most violent and excruciating pains in both knees, and was reduced to such a state of helplessness that she became almost unable to move, and had to be lifted into and out of bed. Though treated by eminent surgeons, she grew steadily worse, and as length she realised that her only hope for recovery lay in seeking Divine intervention. By the kindly aid of her friends Miss Boyce was taken to Holywell, journeying by train to Liverpool, and from thence on strobathes to St. Winifred's shrine. After bathing in the well and invoking the prayers of the good St. Winifred she almost instantaneously recovered the use of her limbs, and presently all trace of her ailment had passed away. Miss Boyce is now in perfect health and is able to attend to her work daily.

George D. Pope, of Brooklyn, was invested with the insignia of a knight of the Order of St. Gregory the Great Sunday the 12th, at the Church of St. John the Baptist, that city, by order of Leo XIII. Mr. Pope has given much to the charitable enterprises of the Church. He also gave the organs which are in the Church of St. John the Baptist and in St. Barbara's Church. The decoration is a gold cross with red enamel and the image of St. Gregory the Great in the centre. It is suspended with a crimson and yellow ribbon, the color of the order. The honor carries with it some real privileges. It entitles the holder to access at the Vatican at any time and at all hours without further instructions, as its possessor is regarded as a member of the Vatican household. A Vesper service preceded the bestowal of the order by Bishop McDonnell. The church was crowded. Mr. Pope was born in New York in 1869 and has lived in Brooklyn for thirty-one years. He is the president of the Manhattan Enamel Brick Company. In return for this honor from Rome Mr. Pope has had made for his Holiness a papal seal of gold set with costly gems.

The "Catholic Universe," of Cleveland, makes the following announcement: A few months ago the Catholic people who read the announcement were shocked to learn from the public press that Rev. John H. Hennes, pastor of St. Clement's Catholic Church at Navarre, in this diocese, had apostatized. The Associated Press spread the report far and wide to the scandal of the faithful. Our Catholic people will rejoice for the sake of the poor wanderer and for religion's sake that grace and conscience have triumphed. When time for reflection came Father Hennes realized the words of Scripture: "Thy apostasy shall rebuke thee. Know thou and see that it is an evil and a bitter thing for thee to hate the Lord thy God." As soon as circumstances permitted, Father Hennes took himself to the monastery of the Trappists in New Mellerue, Iowa, to do penance for his sin. He now humbly seeks to repair the scandal he gave in a moment of melancholy weakness. In a letter written to the Right Rev. Bishop he utterly repudiates the charge made in the public press that he had spoken and written against the Church or her doctrines. He said that others forged his name to such declarations.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier arrived at Quebec on his return from Europe on Friday evening last and was given a warm welcome. He was welcomed with equal enthusiasm in Montreal and in Ottawa where he arrived on Saturday. As was naturally expected, one of the first things that engaged his attention after he settled down to business was the fight in the Cabinet between Mr. Tarte and several of his colleagues on the question of the tariff. We are informed by the wires that Sir Wilfrid lost no time in conferring with his colleague Mr. Tarte, and it is said the conference lasted two hours. On Monday morning Mr. Tarte started for Toronto where he attended on Monday evening a dinner to Colonel Denison. Before his departure he was asked if it were true that he was leaving the Cabinet. His answer was that his lips were sealed on that subject; that it was for Sir Wilfrid to say. Later advice inform us he sent a letter from Toronto dated the 20th resigning his portfolio as Minister of Public Works and his seat in the Cabinet. In this letter Mr. Tarte is reported to have made the following statement: "I have no right to cause trouble and entertaining the opinion that the interests of the Canadian people make it a duty to revise without delay the tariff of 1897, with a view to giving adequate protection to Canadian industries, to the farming community and to working men, I cannot possibly remain silent."

THE great coal strike that has been going on in the anthracite coal regions of Pennsylvania for the past five months is now practically over and it is expected the miners will be at work tomorrow. This condition of things has been brought about by the intervention of the President of the United States. Some time ago a conference of mine operators and the President and other representatives of the miners union was called to meet at Washington. An attempt was made to effect a compromise; but all efforts in that direction seemed for a time to fail. The miners expressed through their representatives, their willingness to refer the matter to arbitration; but the operators at first appeared unwilling to agree to this. Finally President Roosevelt succeeded in bringing about an arrangement to which all gave their adhesion. The naming of the arbitration commission was left to the President of the United States, and this done President Mitchell of the miners issued a call for a convention of the mine workers. This convention met on Monday of this week and latest accounts are to the effect that those in attendance have agreed to leave the matter in dispute of the arbitrators, and to resume work in the mines. Tomorrow, Thursday, has been agreed upon as the date for commencing work. Thus ends a strike that threatened a veritable coal famine.

THE Patriot has, for the past week, been publishing the opinions of a number of men regarding the advent to this Province of the Dominion Packing company. It seems to consider these interviews as a strong argument in favour of the proposal of the Government to guarantee the company's bonds. As a matter of fact scarcely one of the men interviewed by our contemporary has expressed any other opinion than that of the community in general; that is that the inauguration of such a business as the company in question announces it is prepared to carry on would be a great benefit to the country. There is no reasonable man in this Province who would not like to see a large business of this kind carried on in an independent legitimate business way. The Patriot need not devote any of its space in attempting to prove; that for all are agreed upon this point. But what almost all are opposed to is the Government's proposal to guarantee the bonds of the company, and not one of those whose interviews are published in the Patriot has unqualifiedly approved of this phase of the question. All of them have said that they would like to see the business started and a number have, in a general way, said they thought the undertaking was worthy of encouragement by the Government. Not one, however, has come out boldly as the advocate of a Government guarantee for the company's bonds. Our readers have already seen the resolution unanimously passed at a late meeting of the cheese board, in opposition to the guarantee. In addition to this resolutions have been passed at meetings of farmers institutes equally antagonistic to the Government's proposal. D. Farquharson Esq. M. P. ex Premier of the Province is among the prominent men of the Government party who have emphatically declared against the guarantee of the bonds. Will the Government in the face of all this enter into partnership with this company in opposition to the wishes of the tax payers?

Ottawa Weekly Letter.

MUST ABANDON THE FENCE. Messrs. Tarte and Sifton, the respective cabinet champions of Protection and Free Trade, have been receiving so much attention of late, that the rank and file of the Liberal party have been almost ignored as factors in the tariff fight. The "back benchers," however, will have to be reckoned with when the Liberals are brought to the stern necessity of placing themselves definitely on record in regard to the tariff. And it must not be forgotten, that among the followers of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, opinions are quite as much at sixes and sevens as they are in ministerial circles.

The budget speeches of Liberal members, during the last parliament, were of such a conflicting character, that it would require one expert in the solution of Chinese puzzles to definitely pronounce on the policy most likely to please a majority of the party. Just for the sake of illustrating how divided on tariff questions Liberal members are, we note some of the views as expressed in the House of Commons last session.

Mr. Frank Oliver, a Free Trader of the rabid type, wanted Protection for the horsebreeders of the West.

Mr. Walter Scott, who is vigorously becoming Free Trade on Mr. Sifton's preserves, also wanted American horses excluded from competition with the home bred article.

Mr. C. B. Heyd, who represents a manufacturing centre, is a strong Protectionist, and wants the duties on manufactured goods raised.

Mr. Anlay Morrison, who stated he had never been a Protectionist, wanted lead, lumber, coal and other products of British Columbia protected to the hilt.

Mr. John Charlton wants anything he fancies.

Mr. W. C. Edwards is the strongest Free Trader in Parliament, but he always voted with the Government for Protection.

Mr. Bourassa believes in a measure of Protection for the defence of our industries.

Mr. D. C. Fraser, who desires a position on the bench, has made Free Trade speeches all over Canada. However, he has swallowed more policies than any other man in parliament, and can be counted upon a vote for the gentleman who offers a judgeship.

Dr. A. S. Kendall is a great Free Trade advocate, who is able to tolerate bounties on iron and steel, both of which are manufactured in his constituency.

Mr. R. Holmes is a Free Trader with an ever ready Protectionist vote.

Mr. O. Turgeon is another strong Free Trader, but like others his vote is always at the call of his party.

Mr. W. S. Maclaren, although elected by Free Trade professions, is ready to vote for the Liberal party and protection.

It just requires a glance at this somewhat alarming divergence of opinion to convince oneself, that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has a heavy task before him, when it comes to getting his party into line. It will be noticed, that in almost every instance each individual was engaged during his budget speech in talking to his own constituents. When it came home to him that his own little county wanted protection on certain articles, the erstwhile Free Trader ignored his principles and fell into line with the National Policy idea of things. These chaotic conditions must now cease. Liberals must declare for a fixed policy and range themselves by the side of Mr. Sifton or Mr. Tarte. It will be interesting to watch the manoeuvres of the rank and file, who will be afforded an opportunity of convincing the public of their sincerity. After six years on the fence, the jumping whichever way it goes, will be painful to the jumper.

MR. SIFTON TO RETIRE. It is said that Hon. Clifford

Sifton will hand his resignation to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in order to force the Premier to decide upon a fiscal policy. This move will bring the Free Traders and Protectionists of the Liberal party into sharp conflict. It will also determine the power wielded in the cabinet by Hon. J. Israel Tarte. Mr. Sifton represents the Free Trade section of his party and the acceptance of his resignation means the abandonment of all Liberal pledges of the past. If, on the other hand, Sir Wilfrid refuses to allow Mr. Sifton to retire from his council board, Mr. Tarte will have to give in and the outcome will be eagerly awaited.

MR. SIFTON AS A CAMPAIGNER.

J. D. Cameron, one of the Liberal organizers who worked for Mr. Stewart during the bye-election in Lisgar, stated, at giving evidence at the trial, that Hon. Clifford Sifton took "a very principal part in the campaign." The "campaign," by the way, was one of the worst pieces of rascality ever perpetrated in Canada. Mr. O. E. Talbot, the Liberal M. P. for B. Lechasse, who is wont to refer to his intimacy with Sir Wilfrid, was on the ground and presided with marked ability at a number of whiskey and gin drinking revels. The liquor was free in every instance. Mr. Talbot also distributed money for drinks. This gentleman has the doubtful honor of being the only member of the Canadian parliament ever accused of taking liquor into the House of Commons, and perhaps it was owing to that performance that Mr. Sifton selected Mr. Talbot to act for him in Lisgar. Mr. J. Bureau, Liberal M. P. for Three Rivers, was with Mr. Talbot and did yeoman service. Among the exploits was the purchase of a dress for a young lady. The price paid was $10. Bureau worked with some of the most active of Mr. Sifton's helpers. Mr. T. O. Davis, Liberal M. P. for Saskatchewan, also contributed largely to Mr. Stewart's success in this howling "campaign." Liquor flowed like water. One young man received $5 to vote for Stewart and his mother received another $5 to keep quiet about it. And Mr. Sifton, according to one of his closest friends, played "a very principal part in the campaign." It will be Sir Wilfrid Laurier's duty, on his return to Ottawa, to at once dismiss Mr. Sifton, Mr. Stewart, Mr. Talbot, Mr. Bureau and Mr. Davis from the Liberal party. That was the treatment accorded by the premier to Mr. R. L. Richardson, because the latter's friends drove voters to the polls.

A COBDEN CLUB PROTEST.

Mr. Harold Cox, secretary of the Cobden Club, in a letter addressed to Hon. W. S. Fielding's organ, the Halifax Chronicle, effectively explodes the idea that Great Britain enjoys any privileges under the present tariff, that are not accorded other nations. His statistics, compiled from Canadian blue-books, are incontrovertible. During the past five years Canadian imports from five principal sources of supply increased to this extent: From Great Britain, 23 per cent. From Germany, 31 per cent. From United States, 93 per cent. From France, 102 per cent. From Belgium, 421 per cent. Great Britain, it will be seen, is last in the race.

Dealing with Canadian imports from Great Britain and the United States in 1901, Mr. Cox discovers the following remarkable conditions:

Duty collected on $31,701,654 worth of dutiable goods imported from Great Britain, $7,845,406.

Duty collected on $52,600,478 worth of dutiable goods imported from the United States, $13,311,790.

Average duty on British dutiable goods, 24.748.

Average duty on American dutiable goods, 24.833.

Duty collected on free and dutiable imports from Great Britain, value $42,919,995, $7,845,406.

Duty collected on free and dutiable imports from the United States, value $107,149,325, $13,311,790.

Average duty on all British goods, 18.322.

Average duty on all American goods, 12.424.

In the case of dutiable goods, therefore, Great Britain has an advantage over the United States in Canadian markets of nine one-hundredths of one per cent. On the other hand, taking free and dutiable goods in consideration, our tariff discriminates in favor of the United States to the very appreciable extent of 5.908. No wonder Mr. Cox is agitated over the outlook, particularly as Sir Wilfrid Laurier holds the Cobden medal for his supposed recognition of Great Britain's right to concessions on our part. The fact of the matter is, our whole tariff needs strengthening. It allows for eigners to control our markets, and at the same time, under cover of a bogus British preference, gives Americans every possible assistance in their effort to outstrip the products of the Empire.

WHO GOT THE MONEY?

From 1892 to 1896, under Hon. George E. Foster's management, the government of Canada cost $210,708,819, or an average of $42,141,764 per annum. During the past six years, 1897 to 1902, Hon. W. S. Fielding has been called upon to expend $314,542,026, or an average of $52,313,671, per annum. Last year the expenditure reached the enormous sum of $64,000,000, or $21,000,000 in excess of the highest figure of the Foster regime. The government had no extraordinary demand made upon them in 1902, and the population served was only about 300,000 greater than in 1896. For every inhabitant more than we had in 1896 Canada provided $70 last year. If we accept this as a legitimate outlay, the logical conclusion is that Canada instead of spending $64,000,000 per annum, should disburse $373,800,000. That proposition is an absurdity. Yet it only represents the proper cost of the government if each of Canada's 5,340,000 inhabitants costs $70 per year. The question that naturally arises is, where has the $21,000,000 of extra expenditure gone? It cannot be said that it was awful. No Minister of the Crown would dare to attempt to justify an annual expenditure of $373,800,000 in this country. Yet the Laurier administration has added to our expenses at that rate. It is impossible to conceive that the people benefited by the entire outlay. And if the people didn't, who did? In the face of such astounding evidence, it is not hard to credit the stories of the financial prosperity of Ministers and their followers. Our tariff is not the only thing that requires looking after.

FIELDING'S PAPER FOR INDEPENDENCE.

Hon. W. S. Fielding's organ, the Halifax Chronicle, moved by the thanks the Imperial authorities conveyed to Canada for her support of the Halifax Provisional Battalion, has openly advocated independence, giving as its reason for so doing its abhorrence of the patronising airs of the home government. The Chronicle says, in part: "We occupy, therefore, a degrading position. We must proceed to get out of it in some way at the earliest possible moment. Six millions of Canadians in contented dependency is a pitiful sight. The longer it continues the more pitiful will it become."

"If we cannot secure some free, dignified and certain position within the empire, in the name of British manhood let us get out of it, and take our stand among the independent and self respecting nations of the world."

The sentiments expressed are so much in keeping with those of Mr. Fielding in 1886, when he, as leader of the Nova Scotia government, endeavoured to smash confederation and make love to the United States, that one is almost led to the belief that the editorial was culled from one of the European pleasure resorts, where the Finance Minister sojourned for a few weeks at the country's expense. Mr. Fielding failed to secure repeal, and his paper can hardly hope to secure Canadian Independence. It shows, however, that Mr. Fielding's past feelings of hatred towards the Dominion have left their stamp on the journal he presided over for many years.

The Herald's Scoop-Net.

CONDUCTED BY TOM A. HAWKER.

WINDERMERE, Conn., Oct. 13.

Here I am away up in the Mountains of Connecticut, sniffing the gentle breezes that are constantly coming my way, laden with the aroma of sweet smelling herbs and real American freedom. It's lovely here, but at the same time it's not exactly the kind of a place to furnish the material for reading matter of the "Scoop Net" variety. There's not enough "incident" for me to sit down here and be nice and quiet. As long as I am able to enjoy this tranquility I have no objections to make. The weather has behaved splendidly ever since I left New Hampshire, being like the early autumn days in P. E. I. Everything is nice and quiet in this particular spot. All we can hear is the wind quietly sighing through the pines and hemlocks—but I'll take it back as I don't see any around. Most of the trees in this particular part of Connecticut are maples, and I've been thinking if Canada ever takes the notion to annex the United States, we can't say it's a splendid new stock of "incident" for me. But we'll wait a while yet for that.

Below the mountains one can distinguish another sound—the hum of industry. Hundreds of people are busy at the numerous factories. The men who have plenty of money in these parts believe in putting it out for the benefit of the masses. If the city of Charlotte town had half the manufacturing that are in this small town it would mean a great deal. Here the big Connecticut firm known as the Gilbert Clock Company turn out thousands of clocks every week of every variety from the little alarm to the big "eight day," and send them all over the world, including P. E. Island. There is another clock factory which also does a large business. The New England Pin factory is another great concern located here. To watch the manufacture of pins is a pleasing occupation to the uninitiated, but it is very trying on the ears. In one department of this Co's establishment there are over 100 machines all going together. The racket is something fearful and a man to make himself heard by another has to shout at the top of his voice into the other's ear. It's worse than an old-time football game. There are ever so many other manufacturing establishments here, where they manufacture stockings and underwear, hardware, boots and shoes, scythes, and all kinds of edged tools, paper boxes, silver plated coffin trimmings, shrouds, and other cheerful bits. The Morgan Silver Plate Co. has its immense works here employing many people.

I used to think the scenery of P. E. Island was beautiful. So it is in places, but the scenery in Connecticut is about the loveliest I've seen yet. On the north side of the town is a large eminence known as Jumbo Mountain. It takes quite a while to get to the top of this, but the climber has his reward. On the highest point of this peak there is built a square tower; in appearance like the block house at the entrance to Charlottetown harbor, but somewhat higher. This is what is called a gauging tower and from its lofty height you may spy out the land in all directions and "rubber" around to your heart's content. The whole country for miles around may be seen from this point. Men moving along the roads look like ants, and the houses like the kind children make with cards. Close by the gauging tower is a wonderful rock, probably weighing about 300 tons. On this rock is painted the words "Jumbo." Several years ago this gigantic piece of granite lay in such a position that it could be rolled to and fro by man's hand. It lays quite near to the edge of a cliff and some persons got it into their minds that they could roll the rock off the cliff by discharging a keg of gunpowder beneath it. The plan did not succeed, but Jumbo has retired from the rocking business. It would take me too long to write any adequate description of the many wonderful natural scenes around here. Talking about wonderful scenes, something out of the ordinary happened to me this morning. I hired a bicycle for the purpose of taking a spin around what is known as Highland Lake, a beautiful stretch of water surrounded by hills on all sides. The course around the lake is seven miles, and was going to enjoy a great ride. So I did for a while. All along the sides of the road are numerous apple trees laden with many choice varieties of apples. Nobody owns the trees and the apples lie upon the ground on the sides of the road in places, a half a foot deep and more. This is no exaggeration. I thought to myself, if the kids of Charlottetown would here they would do a thing to these apples, oh no! Well here's one of the Charlottetown kids that's going to enjoy them. So I jumped off and enjoyed a whole half hour sampling the different varieties. They were for the most part splendid apples and tasted fully as nice as if they had been stolen. After having finished sampling apples I jumped on my wheel. Now the wheel I was riding was provided with one of these patent brakes, which is worked by pressing backwards on the pedals. I had never ridden a bicycle of this kind, having been used to the ordinary chain wheel. The peaky thing didn't seem to want to work with me at all. The only time I could get any satisfaction out of that wheel was when riding on level ground. This wasn't very often. At last I thought I understood the contrivance, and to show confidence in the wheel I let my feet remain on the pedals while the machine gently covered down what seemed a very steep hill. I soon realized that the machine was gathering headway. Now is my chance to test the brake thought I but when I pressed back the contrivance didn't seem to work. I slowed the pedals and put them in another direction, but no I looked ahead. Where! There I was getting down a hill the equal of which is not to be found anywhere home. The wind whistled in my ears like some uncanny siren, and the machine began to rattle and bounce and my cap to dance a horpige on my head. I could think of nothing to do but hold onto that wheel like death to a freezing coon. Down I went. In a very short time the wheel struck a sandy spot. That sandy spot was my redemption. The next instant I was hurled off that bicycle like a shot from a gun, and struck the crust of creation with a jump which I have reason to believe

General News.

RAVAGES OF THE GALE. Recent advices from St. John's Nfld. contain the following: The mail steamer Virginia Lake which plies along Labrador, has returned from a trip to its northern limits, reporting the coast devastated by a fierce gale on Sep. 24, which has been the worst for seventeen years. Frightful damage has been done to fishing property along the sea-board, and no less than eighteen vessels have been driven ashore. The crews of these aggregating 139 persons, were brought home by the steamer. Fortunately there was no loss of life. The gale was worst on the northern section of the coast, and there the fishery was over. The craft were all in port and clearing up to come home when the storm struck them. The crews were thus able to escape, though the vessels were pounded to pieces on the rocks. The seaboard is a rugged and desperate one, and but for this fortunate fact there might have been some tragedies to chronicle. Even as it is the loss of the vessels is a dire calamity for the poor fisher folk. In several cases their catch of fish, the fruit of their whole season's labors, was destroyed with the vessels, but in others the fish had been transferred to the foreign-going ships which carry it to market, and so it escaped. The gale was the severest since 1885, when the coast was visited by a hurricane and a similar record of disaster was made. The scenes on the coast now are reported to have been appalling, so widespread had been the ruin worked. The Government have taken the necessary steps to deal with any distress arising from this storm and the shipwrecked people are being sent to their homes and provided with such assistance as the needs of the case demand. The effects of the catastrophe will not soon be recovered from.

Burns Mason, the first mate of the three masted schooner Georgia of Boston, loading lumber at Bathurst N. B. was brutally assaulted on the head with a bottle in Kenn's saloon a week ago Saturday night last by one of the crew named Frank Lyman. Mason was taken to the Marine Hospital where he lingered until last Saturday. An inquest was held and a post mortem examination made. Lyman was arrested. Mason was thirty years old and belonged to Guyaboro. His elder is a Californian.

The Foreign office London has issued an undated dispatch from Colonel Cobbe, commanding one of the columns of British forces operating against the Mad Mullah of Somaliland. The British forces were entirely of native troops and levies. Colonel Cobb says: "My force reached Ergo this morning. When about a days march north of Madog I was attacked in a thick bush. Two advances were made, and the enemy were beaten back in the morning. Our forces proceeded to collect animals for transportation purposes, and to join the detachment at the stockade camp. In the afternoon a reconnaissance was made and after sharp fighting the enemy were again driven off. I deeply regret to report the following casualties: Colonel Phillips and Captain Angus and fifty men killed and about one hundred wounded. The latter include Captain Howard and Lieutenant Everett, but both are doing well. There are severe losses among the transport and riding camels. The forces reaches the stockade camp tomorrow and will advance to attack the enemy."

General News.

RAVAGES OF THE GALE. Recent advices from St. John's Nfld. contain the following: The mail steamer Virginia Lake which plies along Labrador, has returned from a trip to its northern limits, reporting the coast devastated by a fierce gale on Sep. 24, which has been the worst for seventeen years. Frightful damage has been done to fishing property along the sea-board, and no less than eighteen vessels have been driven ashore. The crews of these aggregating 139 persons, were brought home by the steamer. Fortunately there was no loss of life. The gale was worst on the northern section of the coast, and there the fishery was over. The craft were all in port and clearing up to come home when the storm struck them. The crews were thus able to escape, though the vessels were pounded to pieces on the rocks. The seaboard is a rugged and desperate one, and but for this fortunate fact there might have been some tragedies to chronicle. Even as it is the loss of the vessels is a dire calamity for the poor fisher folk. In several cases their catch of fish, the fruit of their whole season's labors, was destroyed with the vessels, but in others the fish had been transferred to the foreign-going ships which carry it to market, and so it escaped. The gale was the severest since 1885, when the coast was visited by a hurricane and a similar record of disaster was made. The scenes on the coast now are reported to have been appalling, so widespread had been the ruin worked. The Government have taken the necessary steps to deal with any distress arising from this storm and the shipwrecked people are being sent to their homes and provided with such assistance as the needs of the case demand. The effects of the catastrophe will not soon be recovered from.

Mason was thirty years old and belonged to Guyaboro. His elder is a Californian.

The Foreign office London has issued an undated dispatch from Colonel Cobbe, commanding one of the columns of British forces operating against the Mad Mullah of Somaliland. The British forces were entirely of native troops and levies. Colonel Cobb says: "My force reached Ergo this morning. When about a days march north of Madog I was attacked in a thick bush. Two advances were made, and the enemy were beaten back in the morning. Our forces proceeded to collect animals for transportation purposes, and to join the detachment at the stockade camp. In the afternoon a reconnaissance was made and after sharp fighting the enemy were again driven off. I deeply regret to report the following casualties: Colonel Phillips and Captain Angus and fifty men killed and about one hundred wounded. The latter include Captain Howard and Lieutenant Everett, but both are doing well. There are severe losses among the transport and riding camels. The forces reaches the stockade camp tomorrow and will advance to attack the enemy."

He then went up to Anne, who was sitting apart, and talked some time to her. At first she seemed inclined to stand out, but presently she gave way, and he brought her to me. I shook hands with her, and seeing that she was in tears, I bade her keep up her spirits, for all would go well. Then she began to sob convulsively, declaring that her people never would forgive her the grief she had occasioned them. My only answer was to lay her hand on my arm and lead her upstairs into Uncle Bellamy's presence.

"Here is Anne," I said as we entered "heartily sorry for the rash step she took, which her youth and inexperience may well excuse." The young lady tried to throw herself at her uncle's feet, but he caught her in his arms and clasped her to his breast, soothing and caressing her in one breath, while she sobbed violently, accusing herself in the bitterest manner. I could not look on unmoved, so I left the room, and only returned half an hour later, giving her time to recover her composure before bringing Babington to the scene. When at last I took him up, we found uncle and niece sitting together at the window, through which the moonlight now streamed into the apartment, for the storm was over, and the clouds were dispersed. I acted as mediator, but I saw it cost Bellamy a struggle to lay his hand in that of the thoughtless youth, who had violated the rights of hospitality, and brought additional grief on an already suffering household. But he overcame himself manfully, and spoke kindly to Babington, calling him "nephew."

I was heartily glad of this, and felt I could now die in peace, if we were really to lay down our lives that night. For as nothing more wretched than hatred and strife, so nothing is more comforting and encouraging than the reconciliation and reunion of those who have been at variance.

In the meantime midnight had come and we waited in anxious expectation the dreaded signal of attack. The most extraordinary reports had, during the last half hour reached us; some persons asserting positively that gangs of hired assassins were assembled in readiness in St. Paul's churchyard at Charing Cross, on Tower Hill, at London Stone, and that the Catholics were all to be driven onto London Bridge, thence to be precipitated headlong into the river. Others, on the contrary, declared it was all an idle rumor, only set afloat for the purpose of driving Papists to desperation.

Some of Walsingham's emissaries had been heard to make the announcement in one or other of the taverns and wine shops of the city, which they frequented; hence it might safely be concluded that there was no truth in it, otherwise the Chief Secretary's agents would not let it get about beforehand. This reason had great weight with me; yet it was with no little trepidation that I listened for the stroke of midnight. At length it rang out from a neighboring church tower; a moment more, and with beating hearts, we heard it slowly toll out from St. Paul's. But the last stroke died away, and neither the great bell nor the Tower guns gave forth a sound. We breathed more freely. "It was a cock-and-bull story, after all," said I. "Do not make too sure of that," remarked one of my companions. "The signal may yet be given."

Ten more minutes passed; and then we determined to send Bill, and his boy, Johnny, out to get tidings. The bolts were cautiously drawn back, the door was opened, when we caught the sound of cries in an adjoining alley. The door was instantly closed again, and all exclaimed "They are coming!"

"'Tis but a few revellers getting home from 'The Jolly Sailor,' half sea over," said Bill. "Let me go out."

After a little more discussion we ventured upon opening the door again, and Bill and the boy issued forth to learn the real state of affairs. On their return they said there were a great many people in the streets and squares, all talking of a massacre that was to be, and of a hostile invasion; but nowhere were any armed men to be seen; neither on Tower Hill nor at Charing Cross, nor at St. Paul's.

"Only an idle scare again this time, thank God," said Babington, who with the others, had come down to the lower room before midnight.

"But how long are we to endure this intolerable tyranny on the part of the Queen's ministers? We all know that quite recently Lord Burghley was heard to declare, he would bring matters to such a pass that in a short time Catholics should be reduced to such a state of desti-ty that they should be unable to assist one another, and would be thankful to feed swine if thereby they could find husks to assuage their hunger?"

It would have been pardonable, if on such an occasion as this, a few words had been let drop, which the myrmidons of the law would have reckoned as treasonable. Yet such was the timidity and apprehension continually felt at that time by Catholics, that, although we English are wont to pride ourselves on our love of liberty, not one of those present ventured to utter a syllable against Burghley and his associates, in answer to Babington's indignant outburst.

At last one and another slipped away to their own homes, after thanking the worthy hostman for the shelter he had afforded them, and leaving a substantial proof of their gratitude behind them. When the excitement was over, I inquired after his sick daughter; he said she was not as well as she had been, he had taken her to a neighbor's house for the night, for the sake of greater quiet. I promised to visit her as soon as possible, and Bill rowed us back to our dwelling, where we were glad to take a few hours rest before a new day brought us fresh cares and fresh anxieties.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The sun already stood high in the heavens when we met for breakfast. Then for the first time I noticed that the roses on Anne's cheeks had faded sadly during the past weeks. Not only did she look ill, but there was a strange restlessness about her that I did not at all like; she seemed unable to sit still; her fingers were always at work on something, and in talking she passed from subject to subject incessantly. Yet she would not allow that there was anything the matter with her, only she had slept badly, she said. As I would be well if only she could be assured through uncle Remy of her grandmother's and sister's forgiveness. Consequently I told both Bellamy and Babington that the very best thing far her would be to pass a few weeks in the seclusion of Woxindon; in fact her health required it. The former said directly that he would take his niece back with him, and the latter, after some persuasion on our part, gave his consent. We agreed, however, that Uncle Remy should go down first and apprise his mother of our intention, and that Anne should follow under our escort on the morrow. Woxindon would only be a halting place for me on my way back to Charlton.

Bellamy set off betimes on his homeward ride, and Anne, at my suggestion, retired to rest awhile, to make amends for the preceding night. I availed myself of the opportunity thus afforded me, to question Babington about Savage and his murderous project.

He told me he had made the man's acquaintance through Pooley, who displayed the greatest sympathy for the Queen of Scots, and had disclosed to Babington many of Walsingham's secrets. I here made the remark that he ought to be careful how he trusted Pooley, for a man who is not true to his master will not be true to his friend. Babington answered that he had taken the precaution to make inquiries through Nan, of Mary Stuart herself, to whom Pooley had referred him, as to whether the man was trustworthy, and had had the most satisfactory assurances in reply. For himself he was more and more convinced that Walsingham was desirous that Mary should be set at liberty, and that was why he had appointed me as her physi-

den. He believed too that it was with Walsingham's consent that Pooley told him what he did, albeit he was obliged to appear to know nothing whatsoever of our plans.

"I was introduced to Savage some two months back," he continued, "in the 'Paris Garden,' as being a wonderful good shot. I pique myself on being no mean proficient in that line, but on competing with him, I found that my skill was nothing in comparison with his. Pooley left us together, and we were joined presently by Gifford, whom the French ambassador has entrusted us with the task of conveying all our correspondence to the Scottish Queen. He told me that Savage was the very man for us; he was a zealous adherent of the Catholic cause, and would gladly join our conspiracy. I therefore invited the sinister-looking man to my rooms, saying I wanted to show him some new pistols of Spanish workmanship and to speak a word with him in confidence. He came, and over a bottle of choice Alicante, his tongue was loosed. What was the use, he said, of complaining about the sad condition of Catholics in England? The time has come to act; the Pope himself had declared that Anne Boyle's daughter was not our rightful sovereign. I reminded him of the disastrous answer that the blow had been struck in the wrong place. 'A single bullet from the mouth of this pistol in the heart of the right individual would rescue England from the shameful tyranny of this bastard, and our holy faith from being trampled on by the heretics.'

I could no longer fail to understand his meaning, and upon my honor, I did my best to dissuade him from attempting such a crime. All was in vain. He is firmly convinced that he is chosen by Heaven to be an instrument of its vengeance, and the liberator of the Church of God; and would gladly die the cruellest death if he could only first succeed in inflicting on Elizabeth the fate she deserves."

"He told me," Babington continued, "that he was a soldier of fortune who had served for several years in the Netherlands. Having lost family and home and property in the religious wars, nothing remained to him but his sword; and he thought he could not employ it better than by fighting against the heretics under Parma. Embittered by brooding over his misfortunes, and exasperated by certain Scottish comrades in the camp, who reproached the English Catholics for their cowardice in submitting to be tyrannized over by a woman, he had become possessed with the idea that to take the life of one who used her power to such ill purpose, and who bad, in fact, no right claim to the sceptre she wielded, would be a good and laudable action, which Heaven would approve. He related to me that, on one occasion, after long hesitation, he distinctly heard a voice bidding him do the deed he contemplated; and that many remarkable coincidences had confirmed him in his resolution. Finding all persuasions powerless to deter him from the deed, what was I to do?"

"Inform against him instantly," Tichbourne answered. "I could not bring a man to the gallows, for what he told me in confidence," Babington rejoined. "I did threaten him with it, but I saw from the strange, wild look in his eye that if I persisted, he would not scruple to take a speedy means of preventing betrayal. So I changed my tactics, and suggested another argument; had it not occurred to him, I said, that the assassination of Elizabeth, so long as Mary Stuart was in the power of her enemies, would provoke her immediate death at the hands of her warden, by way of reprisal; and thus he would destroy a life he meant to spare, and defeat the hopes of all us Catholics? This staggered him for a time; then he said: 'God can protect her; I must keep my oath.' Nothing remained for me but to reveal to him, after swearing him to secrecy, the existence of our association for the liberation of the Queen of Scots, the arrangements for which were so far advanced, that we might reasonably hope to execute our project before many weeks had elapsed. Finally I induced him to give me his word of honor that he would do nothing until Mary Stuart had been removed to a place of safety. That is all that I have had to do with Savage."

Tichbourne and I could not but approve of Babington's conduct in regard to this affair. We resolved that Savage's project should not be mixed up in any way with ours, nor should he be admitted into our association. Not a word should be said about his proposal at our meeting that evening; above all, there was not to be a hint of it in any communication to the captive Queen. I then talked about my sojourn to Charlton, and my royal patient, describing her gentleness and patience in such eloquent language, that my hearers were quite touched. Before separating, we promised to be at the "Blue Bear" in St. Giles in good time that evening. (To be continued.)

IN THE COUNTRY IN THE FALL.

They are hauling in the buckwheat From the field upon the hill, And the swollen stream is roaring O'er the dam below the mill; The ripened nuts are falling, And the hungry peacock's calling.

For the breakfast that the gander grabbed away, While the squirrels gayly chatter, As if nothing were the matter, And the gobbler's getting fatter Every day.

The colts are in the pasture And the cows wind o'er the lea; All the swaying limbs are naked Where the green leaves used to be; The housewife, all a-flutter, Stirs the bubbling apple butter, With the wood smoke in her nostrils and her eyes;

On the line the wash is gleaming, On the steps the dog is dreaming, And, above, a hawk is screaming As it flies!

The glossy quail is resting On the weather-beaten log, And the hunterman from the city Stumbles down through brake and bog; Over roots and over boulders, With a pair of shining shoulder, He goes trudging with his fifty-dollar gun, Always to his purpose cleaving Never halting, never grieving, But contentedly believing It is fun.

The farmer's rosy daughter Helps the busy hired man; They are husking corn as blithely And as briskly as they can; They are very near together As they husk and wonder whether There are red ears they shall chance to find or not;

She is looking out to see one, He is hoping he may "tree one," But there doesn't seem to be one In the lot.

A subtle charm enfolds them As they tear the husks away; There is music in the cackle Of the hen up in the bay; Now she hears his exclamation And is full of perturbation, For at last—at last—the lucky ear is found!

Flashes mount into their faces, He the happy chance embraces— And she giggles as he chases Her around.

O the farmers lot is bappy, And the farmer's dreams are sweet, If there's money in his pockets And his bins are full of wheat— Free from all the city's clamor He may live denying grammar, And the leaves that fall serve not to make him sad!

Having cleared up all his labors, Fearing naught from ships or sabres, He plays checkers with the neighbors, And is glad. Chicago Times-Herald.

There is probably not a city or town where Hood's Sarsaparilla has not proved its merit in more homes than one, in arresting and completely eradicating scrofula which is almost as serious and as much to be feared as its near relative,—consumption.
