One in a Thousand, BUT TRUE TO THE LAST

CHAPTER XII.

"I am eighteen," I say, with dignity; "at least, I shall be so very soon."

"Oh, here are the gentlemen!" she says, with a flutter, evidently expecting that Adrian will rush up to her at once.

But he does nothing of the sort. He lingers a few minutes with Mrs. Herbert, and presently comes leisurely across the room to us.

"Mrs. Herbert hopes you are going to sing for us," he says, bending down to my companion.

"Oh, yes—certainly!"

She takes his arm, and, as they turn away, he looks at me in such a comical way that I would give anything to laugh right out. But I repel the desire. After a good deal of mincing, she begins. The song is pretty and the voice sweet, but the only words I hear are those of the refrain:

"When night is darkest,
Dawn is nearest."

I have never heard it before; it is one of those little, sweet, commonplace songs of which one hears so many during the year, and yet what a truth it conveys! We do not see it, and, when others remind us of it, we will not believe it. We firmly believe, and assure ourselves, that no night ever was so dark as our night, and that the dawn never can or will come.

I am afraid of getting dreamy, for I have utterly forgotten that I am in Mrs. Herbert's drawing room, until Adrian tells me the carriage is waiting.

"Good-by, dear Lady Charteris," says our hostess, blandly. "I hope you'll enjoy yourself very much in Devonshire."

I catch the old-young lady's eye as we are leaving the room, and I fancy she will not forgive me very soon for not telling her who I am. I wish I had done so.

"Well, thank goodness," exclaims Adrian, when we are in the carriage, "we shall have no more dinner parties for a long time."

"Whom did you take in?" I ask.

"Haven't the least idea, except that she was the daughter of the fat man who sat next to you."

"What a pity he cannot give her a little bit of his fat!" I say, thought-

WOMAN'S ILLS DISAPPEARED

Like Magic after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

North Bangor, N. Y.—"As I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound with great benefit I feel it my duty to write and tell you about it. I was ailing from female weakness and had headache and backache nearly all the time. I was later every month than I should have been and so sick that I had to go to bed."
"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me well and these troubles have disappeared like magic. I have recommended the Compound to many women who have used it successfully."
—Mrs. JAMES J. STACY, R.F.D. No. 3, North Bangor, N. Y.

Another Made Well.
Ann Arbor, Mich.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done wonders for me. For years I suffered terribly with hemorrhages and had pains so intense that sometimes I would faint away. I had female weakness so bad that I had to doctor all the time and never found relief until I took your remedies to please my husband. I recommend your wonderful medicine to all sufferers as I think it is a blessing for all women."
—Mrs. L. E. WYCKOFF, 112 S. Ashley St., Ann Arbor, Mich.

There need be no doubt about the ability of this grand old remedy, made from the roots and herbs of our fields, to remedy woman's diseases. We possess volumes of proof of this fact, enough to convince the most skeptical. Why don't you try it?

CHAPTER XIII.

"What an improvement it would be to both of them!"

"Would it not? And, while they were about it, a little of his stolidity for as much of her gush."

"Was she very gushing?" I ask, with a little laugh.

"Awfully so. She actually asked me if I ever wrote poetry!"

The idea sets me off laughing, for the very look of Adrian is enough to tell one that he is no poet. Then I tell him what she said about him after the dinner, and we joke and make very merry over this old-young lady who wants a poet, a baronet and an athlete rolled into one.

CHAPTER XIII.

A LETTER FROM LOYS.

We leave London early in the morning, and are soon speeding on our way to our second honeymoon. How am I going to enjoy it—nay, how I do enjoy it; for we have secured a carriage to ourselves! We have four foot warmers, two fur rugs, all the illustrated papers and an immense sack of lollipops, and, best of all, here is no Theo coming in to make me miserable or carry my husband away from under my very nose.

Our journey is a long one, for our destination is Torquay; but I do not find it tedious, for I have Adrian all to myself—once more, and the only car I have is that some unprincipled person may invade our carriage, and make him or herself disagreeable. The longest railway journey must come to an end, and our does at last, without our having a travelling companion the whole way. We are breathless hungry, and cry out loudly for food the instant we reach our hotel; and, having satisfied the cravings of our inner beings, we saily forth to look about us.

Oh, the bliss of the days that follow! I feel as if that last week in London must be a hideous nightmare—nay, I even laugh at myself for having been so foolish as to trouble about it. I do not try to explain that conversation I overheard at the opera. I simply put it away from me, and do not think of it at all. I resign myself to the happiness of the present, and make no attempt to unveil the future, or to rake up the past. It is a grand plan; I firmly believe that half the happiness we might enjoy is lost through anxious forethought for the morrow or fretful repinings for what is gone.

I propose to Adrian that we avoid making acquaintances of any sort whatsoever.

"Because you know," I say, "there are lots of idle people about here, who will try to join us wherever we go; and we don't want them."

"Then, I think we had better leave this," he says, with a laugh, "and find out some quiet, little village, where there are no visitors at all."

"Ye-es," I answer, doubtfully; "but then, the squire will make a point of calling, and the parson, and very likely the doctor; and, besides those drawbacks, we shan't get anything decently cooked."

"You gormand!" exclaims my husband.

But, indeed, I am not such. I was thinking more of him than myself. He tells me that is what women always say. So we remain at Torquay, and every day make pilgrimages to the places of interest within reach. Adrian is fortunate enough to hear of a small yacht, and that makes us very independent, for we are under no fear of tourists. Yet, happy as I am here, I am not permitted to remain so. Into my bed of rose leaves there comes one that is crumpled, for I got a letter. It is not from Theo, for, as I have not written to her, she does not know our address; it is from Loys.

"How on earth did Loys find us out?" I say, pettantly, to Adrian.

"Teddy got it out of the orderly room, of course," he answers, looking up from his paper.

"The orderly room?" I say, blankly.

"Of course, little stupid. All the fellows that are on leave have to telegraph their address, to be put up in the orderly room."

"What a nuisance!" I comment.

"Grant you there," he laughs.

"Whom is your letter from? Loys, did you say?"

"Yes."

"It's a long one. I wonder what on earth she can have found to fill all that?"

"Let me fill your cup before I begin," I say; "for to read all this will take some time."

"At last I begin, and the letter runs thus:—"

"My Dearest Audrey: I think Theo must have taken leave of her senses—I knew it was something to do with Theo—for she has written me to-day, and actually proposes coming down to stay with us in the course of a few days. Now, my dear sister, it is the very best part of the season, or, at least, it will be, or she proposes staying a few weeks." Oh, no! Theo is not out of her senses, I think! "Whatever am I to do with Theo during all that time? You know, Audrey, how quiet we are. When you were staying with us, we were exceptionally gay, for here were the Yeomanry and our own balls, and a few concerts, and so on; but now there is absolutely nothing at all going on. Hardly any of the officers are at home, it being leave season. Indeed, poor, dear Teddy has been on duty three days during the last week, and we are the only married people here. I am thoroughly perplexed; for, though, of course, we have a room, still, it is only a soldier's shakedown, as Teddy calls it, and not at all the sort of place to offer Theo, who has become very grand. I really don't know that she can be thinking of! Do think she has quarrelled with Lassels? Still, if that were the case, I should imagine she would go home to her father for a while. I cannot understand it. Baby grows lovelier every day, and more like his father, and has another tooth. Write and tell me you know what Theo is after.

"Love to Adrian. Your loving,

"Loys Vincent."

"Why, baby, what a dismal face!" laughs Adrian. "Loys must have had very bad news to communicate."

"Very," I say, shortly.

"Well, what is it?"

"Theo has written to say that she'll visit them for a few weeks."

"The deuce!" begins Adrian, then breaks off suddenly. "Oh, you mean asking Loys to visit her?"

"No, I don't. I mean that Theo is going to Idleminster."

"Why?"

"How should I know?" I say, crossly. "I suppose she will be coming to us continually. She won't want to stay with Loys."

"I think I'll telegraph at once to take this place I got an offer of this morning," says he, after a moment's silence.

"What is that?"

"Hebden Hall. We can have it as long as the regiment stays at Idleminster, and it is five miles out."

"Out of the town?" I ask.

"Exactly. Then, you see, we shall have some chance of being by ourselves."

"Then let us go round to the office."

On Looking After You Leap.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Two men who had not had a great deal of social training were among the guests at a dinner where the paraphernalia of eating was extremely complicated. A number of them had the least idea which fork to use for a certain course. One of them took up an implement, hesitated, laid it down and tried another. The other calmly took up a fork and used it. Now, it was the wrong fork. But, as it happened, the guests immediately about him were no better informed than he, and they at once followed his example.

So the first man was set down by observers as a social blunderer, and the second as a man who knew. And the reason was simply that while the first man vacillated from one decision to another, the second made up his mind and stuck to it.

Deliberation, the habit of calmly weighing and measuring values before you choose, of looking before you leap, is a splendid quality; but indecision—the habit of unhappily weighing and measuring values after you have chosen, and of looking back after you have leaped, and perhaps trying to leap back again—is the sign of a mind diseased.

If you want to succeed in life, you must learn to make up your mind to a thing and stick to it. He who hesitates is lost, is true in more than one sense.

Once in a while, of course, it is wise and necessary to "back water," but for the most part there are a hundred times when we weaken our cause, fail of success or spoil our chance of happiness by reversing a decision that has once been made.

"The thing we drivers have to fear most," an automobilist said to me the other day, "is these people who start to go ahead and then change their minds at the last moment. Half the people who get killed get it just that way."

Again, there was a terrible accident on a railroad crossing the other day in which a man and his wife were killed instantly. It was a blind crossing and the man did not see the train until his machine was on the track. At first he tried to back the machine, then he changed his mind and tried to get across. If he had made up his mind quickly to do either thing, and stuck to his decision, he would probably have been alive to-day. But his mind was weakened by the disease of vacillation, and he paid the penalty of his weakness in a swift and terrible way. So, in both the big and little things of life, vacillation is a dangerous habit, and the very best moment to fight it is the very first moment you feel you are getting into its clutches.

Household Notes.

A delicious sandwich is made of cream cheese and dates.

Pillow cases should be ironed lengthwise and not crosswise.

Dry sponge cake smothered in custard makes a delicious dish.

Cocoon matting should be well scrubbed with hot water and soap.

Castor oil rubbed thoroughly into boots and shoes will make them soft.

A veil can be made crisp if dipped in alcohol and hung up inside to dry.

When curtains are hung up to dry they should be hung double over the line.

Cold slaw served in green pepper shells is a dainty bit for luncheon.

Tablecloths should be slightly starched. They keep cleaner longer and look better.

The old-fashioned Shetland shawl should be washed in bran and warm water—no soap!

Cotton hosiery are more economical than linen; they last longer and are much more healthful.

When making sandwiches, it is best to butter the end of the loaf before cutting off the slice.

In sleeping, keep the head as low as possible so that the blood may have unimpeded circulation.

If a piece of sugar is put into the water that flowers stand in, they will keep fresh quite a long time.

The stove polish will be blacker, glossier and more durable if you mix it with turpentine instead of water.

Remove the scales from palms by washing them in water, to which has been added a few drops of cedar oil.

Clean fire irons, brass and nickel ornaments with rotten stone and sweet oil and polish with a chamouis skin.

Wet shoes should be stuffed with paper before they are put away; they will dry more quickly and not be so hard.

Tomatoes for sauce cannot be cooked in a hurry. If you cannot give them two or three hours, do without them.

Finger marks on the doors will clean off easily if the cloth is first dipped in kerosene; then wash in the usual way.

Spare linen should be used occasionally, or it will yellow, and when brought into full service will go very quickly.

In preparing eggplant, press it under water instead of just salting it. This prevents the vegetable from turning black.

If you dampen your brush and pass it through your hair two or three times a week, it will prevent superfluous greaseiness.

Wallpaper can be cleaned by making a paste of whiting. Lay it thick

Salt.

If your eyes are tired and smart, dissolve a teaspoon of salt in a glass of water and use it in the eye cup, opening the eye and turning it around so that the surface is thoroughly bathed.

It is a splendid tonic and refreshing.

Then for tired feet a hot salt soak followed by a dash of cold water is one of the best things you can use.

If your throat tickles gargle with a salt solution as hot as you can bear it. Many a sore throat would be killed in the beginning if you did that.

Even when the throat is very sore salt will help it greatly.

Many women rub fine salt that has been wetted till it is sloppy into the skin of the face, sponging off with warm water, and claim that it is an immense aid to the complexion. Certainly it is good for the hands, keeping them smooth and soft.

If there is no other antiseptic handy salt is a good, if painful, cleanser, especially for a slight cut or scratch.

In fact, to be worth your salt you ought to know all that salt is worth to you. Use it outside more liberally than you do in. For it is easy to get into the habit of eating more salt than is good for you. —Jessie Roberts.

The Cat

The old gray cat that haunts my flat is late, vain and vicious; on silent feet he steals the meat, and swipes the cream, delicate. A mile he'll rush to kill a trush, but let the rats be round him, and he'll not stretch himself to catch a single one, confound him. To bug the fire is his desire in every kind of weather; at night he yowls like fifty owls, and swears for hours together. The lazy freak is such a sneak he'll never gain my pardon; he brings strange cats, all lungs and slats, to visit in the garden. All useless things he dogs, by flings, but nothing that is helpful; he breaks my dreams with midnight screams, and scraps with bow-wows yelpful. Throughout the town the people frown whenever they behold him; they'd like to kick him in the creek, with divers bricks to hold him. And this old brute, then, says I grieve, that by my fire relaxed is all I've got around my cot on which I don't pay taxes. They tax me up for my nigger pup, that's harmless as a rabbit; they tax the sow, the shorthorn cow, and even poor old bobbid. And so I say again to-day, with wholesome indignation, in language warm, we should reform our system of taxation.

Leper Escapes Quarantine.

Port Townsend, Wn., July 9.—Dominick Pittori, a leper who was sent to the Diamond Point quarantine station from Minneapolis several months ago, escaped on Saturday, and is believed to be making his way back to Minneapolis by way of Canada.

John Early, the Spanish war veteran who was declared a leper and appointed an attendant at the quarantine station, leper at Pittori's escape, but failed to report it until yesterday. Since Early has been at the station, he has acted strangely, at times becoming violent.

St. Petersburg, July 9.—Society has been surprised here by a remarkable novelty in institutions issued for the golden wedding celebration of M. Spiridov, a very wealthy man of Moscow. All of the two hundred invitations on cards of pure gold, each weighing three-quarters of an ounce, and the words are wrought in embossed.

Have You An Open Mind?

When we find a man who is willing to listen to new doctrines, new politics, new creeds, we call him "a man with an open mind."

But when we find a man who goes through life without thinking things out for himself, who has to have his breakfast eggs and his evening discussions turned just the same way, we call him a man of precedent and prejudice (or if we are kind, a man of habit) and we know that there is not much hope of leading him into new ways.

Are you a man with an open mind or not? Do your brains or do your prejudices rule? Are you a follower or old precedents or a seeker of new roads?

When you have finished this article you can answer that question for yourself.

A new power has come into the business world. It has made no great fuss in coming, but it has slowly become a force impossible to withstand.

That power is advertising.

By that power men get a greater efficiency in business than the turbine engine has brought in steam power, or than electricity has brought in motive power or light.

By his advertising a storekeeper can sell two suits for practically the same money that it used to cost him to sell one. He can increase his sales efficiency, and reduce not only his cost to himself but his cost to you.

And as it is at the present time, when the summer has come and his season is over, he can put a price on his suits or his shoes, his haberdashery or his furniture stocks, and fairly clear his surplus merchandise from his floors.

This is the clearance season of the year for all stores.

And now you want to know whether you are of an open mind or not? This is the answer:

If you are selling merchandise and do not investigate this great advertising power you are not of an open mind.

If you are buying merchandise, if you need suits or shirts or shoes or anything else, and do not look for the advertising of these things—do not take advantage of this advertising power which is giving you merchandise at a low cost in these Clearance sales—then you too are not of an open mind.

The advertising is here in this paper to-day—the power of publicity, to make up your own mind concerning your own mind.

PITTMAN-RUSSELL

On July 9th at St. Augustine's Church, New Perlican, the marriage of Amelia C. Pittman, only daughter of Mr. Luke Pittman, J.P., to Stephen Russell, A.A., of Coley's Point, Principal of St. James' High School, Carbonear, took place. The bride was handsomely attired in a dress of Liberty Satin (white), with a veil of orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of white apple blossoms and asparagus fern. During the singing of hymn "How Welcome was the Call," the bride entered the Church, leaning on her father's arm. The bride was assisted by Miss Russell, sister of the groom, as maid of honor, and Miss Frances Bemister who were dressed in cream Lama, relieved with pale blue, with cream hats and carried bouquets of apple blossoms and fern. The flower girls were Misses Alice Pittman and Barbara Sansom, both cousins of the bride, who were dressed in pale blue silk and cream hats. They carried baskets of pansies and ferns. The groom was ably supported by Mr. E. T. Sansom, J.P., cousin of the bride and Mr. Harold Martin. Rev. Frank Smart, Rector of the Parish officiated. The groom's present to the bride was a very handsome silver tea service (5 pieces), to the bridesmaids gold brooches, to the flower girls silver brooches mounted with gold. Miss Elsie Bemister, assistant operator at New Perlican, very kindly acted as organist at the marriage ceremony. The Church was very prettily decorated by friends of the bride for the occasion, and was packed with guests and friends who were ushered by Master Wm. Pittman. A reception was held immediately after at the residence of the bride's parents. The wedding festivities were kept up for two successive days. The number of guests who partook of the wedding feast on the first day was 70, and on the second 150, making in all, a total of 220 guests. During the afternoon, several telegrams, conveying messages of congratulation and good wishes were received by the bride and groom. The bride had acted as organist at St. Augustine's Church for eleven years, and as teacher in Sunday and day school for a number of years. St. Augustine's Girls' Guild was also formed by her, which was the means of contributing quite a sum of money annually to both Church and school. She was also a member of the C.E.W.A. A brass kettle with spirit lamp was presented to the bride for service as organist, and a silver salver and fruit spoon from the congregation. The presents received were numerous and costly. EMBLEM OF PURITY AND EXCELLENCE SINCE 1860.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

is an absolutely pure distillation of malted grain, and as none but sound, clean grain can be malted, it has for its base the most carefully selected grains of the field. It is a predigested liquid food in the form of a medicinal whiskey; its palatability and freedom from injurious substances render it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach. It is a gentle, invigorating stimulant and tonic that influences for good every important organ of the body. It is a remedy that should be in the family medicine chest. Get the genuine; sold by druggists, dealers and hotels at $1.25 a large bottle. Medical booklet and doctor's advice free on request. The Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

The Milkman.

The milkman is an early-rising member of the vanguard of civilization who keeps an intricate set of double entry books on his fingers and is abused with great freedom by forgetful housewives, who are always sure that they have been short-changed to the tune of several half pints. Whenever he shows that his count is correct, the housewife suggests that if he would sell his pump and put the proceeds into a new milk cow the results would be more satisfactory to all concerned. Nobody has ever attempted to explain just why the milkman and his co-conspirator, the ice-man, find it necessary to tear around the neighbourhood two hours before anybody but the restless Buff Cochon rooster thinks of getting up. The minute a citizen exchanges a position in the

Minimise The Loss.

Practically farmers may easily minimise the loss, due to a backward and cold season, by the judicious use of Sulphate of Ammonia as a fertilizer. Sulphate of Ammonia contains over 20 per cent of nitrogen, as against 15 per cent in Nitrate of Soda, and is therefore more than 25 per cent better than nitrate of soda as a means of quickening and increasing the growth of crops. The use of Sulphate of Ammonia has increased enormously of late years and it is recognized to be the most valuable fertilizer obtainable. By its judicious use the production of root crops per acre may be doubled, and the growth of late crops stimulated. We invite the attention of Farmers to our special pamphlet on the best methods of using Sulphate, copies of which will be forwarded free to any address on application. The price of Sulphate is moderate, and our terms are accommodating. ST. JOHN'S GAS LIGHT COMPANY, Board of Trade Building, St. John's, July 8, 1913.

Child Nearly Burned to Death.

Yesterday Mildred, the twelve months old infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Farrell, of Signal Hill Road, narrowly escaped being burned to death. During the forenoon Mrs. Farrell left the house for a couple of minutes to throw some water in a drain on the opposite side of the street leaving her son John, five years old and her daughter, Gertrude, aged three, in charge of Mildred who was asleep in the cot which was standing near the stove. Jack followed his mother and at the same time Mildred awoke. Immediately she sat up in the cot and fell forward and her face coming on the hot stove was badly scorched while her hands were also very much burned. Although suffering intense agony the child managed to get clear of her predicament unaided. On returning Mrs. Farrell, who was absent only five minutes, was horrified to see the condition of her baby who moaned frightfully. Dr. Rendell, who was on a visit to a patient in the immediate neighborhood, came hurriedly and dressed the wounds of the young sufferer whose recovery is hopeful.

Pendergast, was attended by her cousin Miss Hannah Botsford, who was becomingly attired. The groom was supported by Mr. E. Morris, uncle of the bride. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The happy couple were the recipients of many handsome and useful presents.

More Destruction.

Some time ago the Telegram referred to the destruction going on in the city caused by boys who worked overtime at stone throwing and broke numerous electric lights and lamps in various sections of the city. For a while the conduct ceased as the police rounded up a great many of the delinquents who were severely dealt with by the Magistrate. However, it is reported that similar destruction is now going on with more aggressiveness and determination than before. The police have the matter in hands and will endeavour to hunt up the vandals who, if caught, will get the punishment that they deserve.

Married at New Haven, Conn.

A very quiet but pretty wedding took place at Trinity Church, New Haven, on June 28th when Miss Laura G. Moore, of St. John's, Newfoundland, and Mr. James G. Johnson, of this city, were united in marriage by the Rev. George Heyn. The bride was given away by her sister, Mrs. Ellsworth W. Smith, assisted by Mrs. George L. Koehn. Owing to a recent death in the bride's family, the wedding was private. After a trip abroad, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will be at home after August 1st, at 142 Homestead Avenue—Hartford, Times. [The bride is a daughter of Mrs. M. Moore, this city, and sister of Mr. A. Moore, of the Telegram staff.]

They Burned Him in Effigy.

Over a conception of falsehood and bitterness, which appeared in the Evening Herald yesterday, Mr. McGrath asks: "Will the Public Swallow this Shammyard? The answer is obvious and the reason is plain. The public will not swallow McGrath's shammyard because it is sour and nauseating. It is sour because it is flavoured with the bitterness of disappointed hopes, and it is nauseating because it is brewed with a stock of untruths such as Herder and Lloyd were trying to sell out to Morris two years ago. The public will not swallow the McGrath concoction no more than they will stand the McGrath sandbagging with falsehood. The public has shown this by their manifestation of delight when the P. U. burnt him in effigy in Bonavista last December. The alleged quotation from an article of ours of May 1906, is fraudulent and false. It is concocted out of an article published at a different date. We say concocted, because one sentence is quoted falsely and there is annexed to this sentence fabricated out of the whole cloth by Mr. McGrath. The whole is placed together within quotation marks and given as a composite sentence written by us. It is a fake. Dyer was the best man. After the wedding a very enjoyable time was spent at Smithville by the friends of the happy pair. Many valuable presents were received. The Telegram extends congratulations.

Manufacture of Pulp Wood Now Rapidly Growing

Ottawa, July 9.—The home manufacture of wood pulp, in place of exporting it, is gradually developing in Canada, according to a report just issued by the Forestry Branch. Forty-eight pulp mills, reporting in 1912 consumed $68,942 cords of raw material, valued at $5,215,582. In the quantity consumed this is an increase of 28.8 per cent. over 1911. The increased value of the output is over 20 per cent. despite a decrease of 43 cents per cord in the average price of the raw material.

The pulpwood cut totalled 1,846,910 cords, valued at $11,911,415 more than 50 per cent. of this, unmanufactured, was exported to the United States. It is estimated that if the material had been manufactured in Canada, the value would have been $13,220,864. The amount actually received was $6,695,833.

Enough pulp was exported last year to supply 54 average mills. However, the situation is improving every province except Ontario, having increased its home consumption. Quebec did so by 48 per cent. New Brunswick by 14 per cent. and Nova Scotia by 18. The decrease in Ontario was 18.6 per cent.

It Keeps Radium Safe.

Perhaps the most interesting safe in the world is one which has lately been built in London, for holding that priceless metal, radium.

Even the thickest and toughest of steel would be as useless for the storage of radium as a safe of plate glass would be for the storage of light. The valuable rays would easily pass out. Lead is the only metal impervious to the rays of radium, so the inside lining of the safe, which on the outside looks much like any other safe, is composed of a thick leaden box.

The valuable rays keep accumulating inside as the particles of radium throw them off, and in the ordinary way the opening of the safe door would allow them to escape. But by an ingenious arrangement the escaping emanations are caught by a couple of valves and pass into tubes filled with mercury, which keeps them safe.

This radium safe has been built to store a million pounds' worth of radium, though so large a quantity has never yet been got together. A million pounds' worth would take less room than a football.

Digby, N. S. Minard's Liniment Co., Limited. Gentlemen,—Last August my horse was badly cut in eleven places by a barbed wire fence. Three of the cuts (small ones) healed soon, but the others became foul and rotten, and though I tried many kinds of medicine they had no beneficial result. At last a doctor advised me to use MINARD'S LINIMENT and in four weeks' time every sore was healed and the hair has grown over each one in fine condition. The Liniment is certainly wonderful in its workings.

Millionaires Crowded Out.

OF LONDON HOTELS.

New York, July 9.—A cable from London says:—

The Daily Express states that if many more visitors crowd into London some one will have to start a "society for sheltering homeless millionaires."

For an hour or more after the boat train arrived from Fishguard early yesterday, quite a number of wealthy Americans scoured the West End in taxicabs in search of hotels with unbooked bedrooms. First-class hotels were full to the roof.

When the advance guard of trans-Atlantic travellers arrived at the Savoy they found the hotel clerk turning over a batch of wireless orders for rooms which it was impossible to satisfy.

Telephonic appeals to other hotels brought replies that there were no rooms to be had. This was at three o'clock in the morning, and the visitors growing desperate, chartered taxicabs and rushed off in search of beds.

Guns Fired on Ceramic

New York, July 9.—A cable from London says:—

The White Star Liner new Australian steamship, Ceramic, arrived in the Mersey yesterday after a successful trip, on which two 4.7-inch quick-firing guns were tested at distances from 1,300 to 5,500 yards. This is the first time big guns have been discharged from a White Star passenger steamship.

Ship's Engineer Battered to Death.

Battered beyond recognition, Bert Varney, sixth engineer on the C.P.R. liner 'Montreal,' was killed at sea on July 2nd last, the accident being reported where the ship berthed here. No one saw the man meet his death, but it is supposed that he was reaching across the big shaft of the ship, which makes eighty revolutions per minute, when he missed his footing or his hand slipped and he fell upon it. It hurled him into the shaft pit crushing his body in a most horrible manner. He was making his first voyage at sea in the 'Montreal' when he was killed.

The young man, who was about 21 years of age, and who resided in West Cowes, Isle of Wight, was attending to his duties as ordinarily in the engine room. Suddenly there was a shriek from Varney, and he was seen to shoot from the shaft into the pit beneath it. The crank hit him a terrific blow, probably killing him instantly, and before his body was so horribly mangled.

The engines were stopped, and the shattered body of the engineer gathered up, and the signs of the tragedy removed. The next day Capt. McNeill read the simple burial service, and Mr. Varney's remains were committed to the deep. Then the ship sailed on its way again.

Hero of Several Dangerous Feats

Hackensack, N.J., July 8.—Rodman Law, after being shot out of a cannon, dropped from balloons and air ships, dumped into the ocean on a speeding motor cycle and escaping unharmful from a score of other dangerous feats, came to grief yesterday in a three foot fall from a wagon. His shoulders were sprained badly, and a finger so lacerated that it will have to be amputated. Although not serious, yet his injuries are the worst he ever had.

Boys Seek to Emulate Dime Novel Characters

London, Ont., July 9.—Charles and Ernest Wright, aged fourteen and sixteen, after breaking into the home of Mr. J. E. Telford, a magistrate at Durham, and stealing a large quantity of valuable and cash, took to the woods and lived as outlaws. Finally tiring of the life, they gave themselves up and were each sent for three years to the Industrial School at Mimico.

It is stated that the lads had been reading dime novels and sought to emulate some of the characters.

The colour of their red coats is the obvious explanation why soldiers are often called "lobsters," but is not the true one.

In the process of manufacture the soldier's red coat changes colour under the influence of heat, just like a lobster when it is boiled.

When it has been dyed, "Tommy's" tunic is not, as might be supposed scarlet, but saffron, that is, deep yellow in colour.

What is technically called a "mordant" is then applied to it.

The next step is to subject the cloth to heat, under the influence of which the saffron colour changes to red.

It was men in the dyeing trade who, being acquainted with this process, first called Tommy Atkins a "lobster."

Real Irish Anecdotes.
 It is the complaint of natives that the anecdotes which are frequently related as illustrations of Irish wit and humor are by no means characteristic of the Irish people, and are in fact, but inferior imitations of the same.
 Mr. W. T. Stead once told a story of a bet which was made two Irishmen. It was to the effect that Pat would not carry up three ladders a box of bricks with Mike sitting on the top of the box. Two of the ladders were ascended without mishap but on the third Pat missed a step. He held on however, and thus saved himself and Mike from falling a distance of forty feet.
 "I have won the bet," he exclaimed when he reached the top.
 "Yes," replied Mike, "but when ye shipped I thought I had ye."
 A writer on Irish humor in the London Times mentions that the type of story which is often told to illustrate the humor of the Irish people.
 A laborer who fell off a building and fractured his ribs was awarded £55 compensation by the court. But his solicitor kept £15 for professional services. The laborer gazed at the ten sovereigns that were handed to him in great surprise.
 "What are you looking at?" asked the solicitor.
 "Well, as you ask me, sir," replied the workman. "I was just wondering which of us it was that fell off the building and broke his ribs!"
 During the great railway strike of 1911 an amateur engine-driver in pulling up at a country station, took the train a long way past the platform, and then, backing the train, went as far again beyond the platform at the other end.
 "Stop where ye are," shouted a Dublin playboy among the pickets; "we'll shift the station for ye!"
 In some notes on Irish bulls the same writer says: "It is a curious effect of an Irish 'bull' that however it may turn a thing the wrong way round, it always tends to its completion and more perfect understanding. Simple and true to Irish nature was the description, recently given by a Nationalist member of the dissolution of a firm in Ireland. 'The only animals that can live on it' said he 'are the assails, which fly over it.'"
 "Happy, again, as an example of the fundamental incongruity between the ideas associated in a 'bull' is the report of a thirsty car-driver to his English fare, who had just refreshed him at the roadside public-house.
 "Well, has that made another man of you?" said the traveler.
 "Faith, it has, sir," replied the jarvey.
 A member of the Royal Irish Constabulary, taking the agricultural statistics of a rural district, called at a farmer's house when the occupier was out, and was directed by one of the family—a young lad—where he would find him.
 "He's out in the paddock with the ass," said the boy. "You'll know father by his straw hat."
 As an example of unconscious humor this story may be told:
 "How does this damp weather agree with you, Mrs. Maloney?"
 "Badly, thin. I'm just confinin' to keep out of the hands of the undertakers."
 "Faix, an' I'm sorry to hear that same ma'am."

Stamp Stories.
 "It beats me," the man in the street will say "how anybody can be such a fool as to spend £1,000 in buying a dirty little piece of paper, which once has done duty as a postage-stamp!"
 And yet, strange though it may seem, there are many men with their wits very much about them who, had they but the chance, would gladly pay this price for certain postage stamps.
 The collector, for example, who could obtain for £1,000 the one cent British Guiana stamp issued in 1857 would have every reason to congratulate himself; whilst even if he paid twice that sum for it, he could still feel that he had made a very clever bargain.
 Similarly, the so-called "Post Office" Mauritius stamps, issued in 1847 in two values, 1d. and 2d., are worth to-day anything from £800, according to the condition of the individual specimen.
 Stamps such as these are within the reach of the really wealthy collector. Still there are also treasures which can be procured by the man of lesser means; and this it is, no doubt, which has made stamp collecting a hobby universally popular.
 "It is one of the greatest pleasures of my life," our present King once wrote; and this Royal sentiment has since been voiced by thousands of his humblest subjects.
 Almost all men, in fact, are smitten at some time or other with the fever for collecting postage stamps.
 Most large towns—not only in Britain, but on the Continent and in America—have philatelic societies whilst Canada, South America, and Australia number collectors by the thousand and of all ages.
 But to the ordinary man—the man, that is to say, who, as a school-boy, collected, and since then has taken but little interest in his erstwhile hobby—the idea of investing money in postage stamps may seem ridiculous. Perhaps at some time he thought of selling his collection, but was unable to find a dealer willing to give for it more than an eighth of what it cost originally.

If so, he has only himself to blame for his disappointment. He collected the wrong stamps—those stamps which dealers buy wholesale for a mere song, and sell, say, at one penny each so as to clear a small profit, pay the expenses of their establishments, the salaries of sorters and assistants, and the cost of having catalogues, and so forth, printed.
 No man can hope to realize a fortune by purchasing such stamps. Still collectors can make money. In 1870, for example, a certain stamp dealer in London for the sake of advertisement papered the walls and windows of his shop with unused Ionian Island stamps, then a drug in the market. These stamps are worth three to four shillings each.
 Again, there was a gentleman at Torquay who made a collection, which cost him, all told, £360. For thirty years he left it untouched then he sold it to a London dealer for the huge cash price of £4,000.
 The man with a short purse cannot do better, perhaps, than to buy unused stamps, and preferably those belonging to small Colonies with small populations.
 Stamps, of course, are printed by the million. The supply of used stamps, therefore of almost any issue will, to all intents and purposes, be unlimited for a very long space of time. But when that issue becomes obsolete, unused specimens probably will advance in price immediately, for the simple reason that the supply is no longer able to cope with the demand.
 Here are a few cases in point. The 6d. Cyprus of the 1880 issue, unused was worth 1s. 6d. in 1886, 12s. in 1893, and 30s. in 1897. The 1s. Gibraltar stamp, 1886 issue was worth, 3s. 6d., in 1890 and 7s. 6d. in 1893 whilst to-day any would be lucky to secure one for 80s. A used specimen of the 1d. blue, triangular Cape of Good Hope stamps, 1861 issue, is worth to-day anything from £75. At one time the firm of Messrs Stanley Gibbons were retailers of these stamps at 2s. 6d. each.
 With profits such as these in view it is to be wondered at that shrewd business men often invest large sums of money in postage stamps? One noted collector—a Frenchman, be the way—is known to have invested in thirty years nearly a quarter of a million pounds in such bits of paper.
 That stubborn headache can likely be removed by properly fitted glasses. No doubt it is caused by one of the various forms of astigmatism or hypermetropia. Go to TRAPNELL, the Eyesight Specialist, and have your eyes tested.—1914

How Not to be Shocked.
 With electricity becoming more and more a part of everyday life the necessity for caution in regard to its use should remain uppermost in our minds. Fatal or severe injuries received from contact with electric light fixtures and other wiring in house holds are not common in Philadelphia, but it does not follow that persons should be warned.
 Throughout the country there have been many deaths due to electric shocks where poor insulation was to blame. Insulation may wear off; consequently, it is a good thing not to handle exposed wires. Among the most common dangers of electricity is that in connection with water. A person should never touch an electric fixture while standing at a water faucet, or while standing at the bath tub or on a wet floor, or while barefoot. Likewise never attempt to use an electric machine, while in the bath tub. These have been cases where bathers have attempted to use electric vibrators while in a tub of water, and the results have been serious.
 Two telephones should not be grasped at the same time, and neither should a telephone and an electric light fixture. Loose electric wires of any sort should be avoided and never touched. Trying to get shocks may be entertaining, but it is dangerous, for electricity is treacherous. In a trolly car on a rainy day never touch any of the electric lamps or metal decorations in the ceiling of the car with an umbrella or hands.
 Because dangers of electrical shocks are frequent it is no reason they should be invited by recklessness.

The Household Bully.
 When your family is afraid of you, it's time to be afraid of your family. Fear breeds deceit, not respect. The household bully soon turns his wife into a hypocrite and his children into sneaks and liars.
 Attention is a better monitor than harshness. Intolerance always incites revolt. The only family ties that hold are the heart strings.
 You pride yourself on your justice, but we can find justice in the courts of law.
 You have no right to bandage your eyes and weigh your own flesh and blood upon impartial scales.
 You should be a haven of refuge, a merciful confidant in hours of error and terror.
 When a father is not the "best friend" of his children, it is because he is their worst enemy.
 The slums of the world are packed with women exiled to degradation by the false pride and relentlessness of men such as you.
 The prisons of the land are choked with felons whose criminal careers began in the swagging and defaults of a broodmother's household.
 You forget that you are an adult, and demand an equal intelligence and realization of right and wrong from those who have neither the reasoning faculty nor the experience to see life as plainly as you behold it.
 Punishment without sympathetic explanation is not correction, but revenge.
 Girls do not prefer the hardships and uncertainties of adventure, unless the unhappiness they leave behind them is more definite than that which lies ahead.
 Boys do not betray fathers who have taught them loyalty and self-respect. The sins of your children be on your stubborn, anything-but head!
 God gave them into your keeping, to guide and guard and cherish—to inspire with ideals, to rear in kindness and comprehension.
 Your sternness is not strength, but stupidity.
 Your harshness is not a mark of character, but of callousness.
 You're an ignoramus—a bigoted, blustering braggart, cheating yourself of the joys of tenderness—robbing your family of the opportunity to develop its finest and noblest traits.
 The animal trainer eventually pays the penalty of his cruelty—the whiplash and prodded tiger is cowed, not tamed—sooner or later he strikes.
 Beware of the day when your son or your daughter, sullen and hardened, by your uprearing will rend your peace and stain your name and break your stiff pride.
 There is but one ruling power and it is love.
 Fear of the law, fear of the hereafter, fear of the world's condemnation, are not morality's great protecting forces.
 But fear of losing the love, fear of destroying the faith, fear of violating the confidence of those who are nearest and dearest—this is by far the Revamps Old Plan to Rob Jeweller.

 New York, July 9.—Louis Freeman, the 18-year-old clerk, who found bound and gagged in his employer's jewelry store, in Maiden Lane, yesterday, told a story of having been attacked by a pretended customer, was arrested last night, charged with grand larceny.
 Jewelry, valued at $4,068 and $98 in cash, were missing after Freeman recovered consciousness and was released.
 According to the deputy police commissioner, Mr. Dougherty, Freeman confessed he entered into an agreement with a second man to rob his employers, Louis Stern & Company.
 August Sachs, 19 years old, a clerk in the jewelry district, was arrested accused of robbery. He was Freeman's "assistant," the police say. The jewelry has been recovered.
 Several hours later Henry Rosofsky, wearing the full uniform of an American sailor, was arrested on a charge of receiving stolen goods.

The Height of the Season

Some Glimpses of London Out of Doors. "It is not very long since the London season used to end with the first week of June. 'Alas! London becomes a mere blank after the 4th of June,' wrote Malcolm in 1807. 'Nobody remains in town; it is too hot, too suffocating! Everybody therefore retires to their seats, if they have them; and the rest fly to Margate, Ramsgate, and Brighton.' 'At that time, we are told, to see London gaily in full tide it was necessary to attend in the Park on any Sunday at 3 o'clock from February till May. Now, just at the moment when London, a hundred years ago, was being deserted, we are entering on the most brilliant phase of the season," says the Times.

A Picture of Wealth. Mr. F. A. McKenzie thus describes the scene at Piccadilly at 8 o'clock one evening recently. "The streets were packed with motor-cars," he writes in the Mail. "In a little over a minute a line of vehicles had drawn up behind us, stretching back as far as one could see towards the Royal Academy. Regent Street showed a waiting triple line of cars on one side of the road. Motor-cars of every kind—many of them six-cylindered monsters costing from £1,000 to £1,500 a piece—were gliding down Coventry Street, up Shaftesbury Avenue, or in the direction of the Athenaeum. Mostly they contained parties in evening dress, going to opera, ball, or theatre. The whole spectacle made a brilliant moving picture of crowded wealth, of luxury, of prosperity. These packed streets meant that London is 'full up' as she has not been before in my time. If London were a western city its boasting citizens would make the world ring with the tale of their era of well-being."

Full Hotels. "Fifteen or twenty years ago London was a somewhat solemn and solid place," adds Mr. McKenzie. "If you wanted good hotels or supreme cooking you went to Paris. If you wanted a good holiday you did not come to London, because London had relatively little to offer. All that has been changed, and the world has discovered the change. Our hotels rival those of any land. You can live in the centre of it and have the most beautiful rural scenery on earth within an hour's journey. The world has discovered the beauties of London."

"Hotels were full up two months ago. Hotels which have banqueting departments and ball-rooms report that never has there been so much private and public entertaining. 'We are turning away numbers of applicants for rooms daily,' is the monotonous reply of manager after manager in the West End when asked about the state of business. "To the average Londoner it might seem that the hotel business was being overdone. As a matter of fact, the supply cannot keep pace with the demand. As I write, enormous sites are being cleared in several of the choicest parts of West London to make room for more hotels. In Piccadilly, facing the Green Park, there will soon be a vast establishment of first rank, the Park Lane Hotel, under the control of the manager of the Plaza Hotel of New York. The site alone is said to have cost £275,000, and another £600,000 is being spent on the building. Not far off, in Glasshouse Street, cornering on Piccadilly Circus, Sir Joseph Lyons is erecting the largest hotel in the

Girl's Nerves Fully Restored

Was Never Able to Obtain Lasting Benefit Until Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Was Used. "Too many girls grow up with weak, anemic bodies and exhausted nervous systems. Indoor life and too much application in school are sometimes the cause. The blood needs enriching and the nerves need strengthening by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This food cure is doing wonders for many thousands of girls whose parents had almost despaired of their ever developing into strong, healthy women. Mrs. J. Bagnall, 395 Woodville Avenue, Toronto, writes: 'My daughter suffered from nervousness since childhood, and any medicines she tried did not do any lasting good. We read in the papers about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and my daughter used it with wonderful results. This treatment has built up her system and so strengthened the nerves that she feels like another girl.' Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, $ for $2.50, all dealers. Wm. Manson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

world, with over 1,000 rooms. An hotel with 300 rooms is being built over the District Railway Station at Victoria, and another, with a trifle of 566 bedrooms, over Baker Street Station.

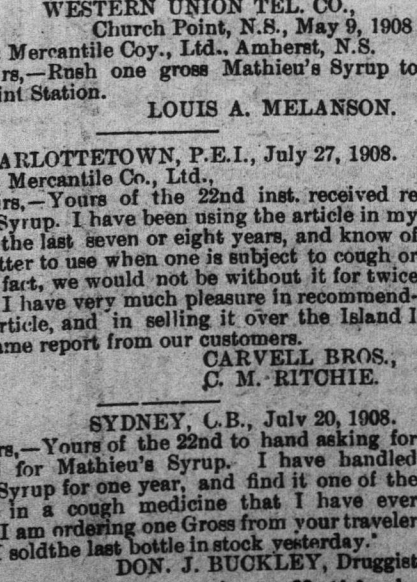

On The Thames. The splendid scene on the Thames is thus described by the Daily News: "Thousands of river girls and river boys floated in boats and punts and Canada canoes on the olive-green surface of the water under a dove-grey sky, while hardly enough breeze disturbed the heavy air to lift the lightest curl. They slept away the day when there was nothing left to eat and drink—tied up to a willow or an eye, or repositively stretched upon the grass in defiance of such notices as 'Landing Here is Forbidden.' All they knew was that something had happened to the sun. And what of the river girl this year? Her note is still simplicity—a sweet, captivating simplicity in every detail of dress. All the best-dressed girls yesterday wore the plainest of white frocks and large white hats, reminiscent of the old-fashioned 'leghorn,' trimmed either with a plain black band or a piece of daintily flowered ribbon. "The river girl is just as workmanlike in 1913 as her friend the river boy, and the pair of them would take a lot of beating, as the saying goes, for grace of attire and the peculiarly English virtue of 'freshness.'"

Coaching Club Meet. "There are times when the most ardent devotee of the motor-car is constrained to admit that horses, and the love of them, are very far from being displaced in the heart of Englishmen. The meet of the Coaching Club on Saturday provided such an occasion," says the Telegraph, "and the turning-out of twenty coaches, for the most part superbly horsed, must have given furiously to think to those who are constantly prophesying the rapid disappearance of the horse."

London's Open Spaces. This is the time of the year when London and all big cities find out the value of their parks and open spaces, and on Saturday, Lord Curzon and Mr. John Burns pointed out the need for ever increasing vigilance in securing all the open spaces possible. Lord Curzon dedicated 60 acres on Colley Hill, by Regate, on Saturday. It has been secured by the National Trust. Lord Curzon said certain things which cannot be too often repeated if England is to continue to be a garden and not a big city.

"Lord Curzon said that beauty-spots like Colley Hill were a part of the national heritage of England. They were survivals of the past, ere yet the countryside of England was cut up in plots for the building of houses. They reminded us of the England our forefathers lived in hundreds of years ago."

The Burden of London. "Those open spaces were needed also as an outlet for our urban population, stunned by the noise, jaded by the excitements, fatigued by the burdens of life in the towns of England. Some of them who lived much in London felt there as if their spirit were crushed by vanloads of brick and mortar. In some parts of the year they were stifled by the smoke, in other parts they were choked by the fog; and they could never escape the deafening clamour around them. London was spreading out, in that direction to clutch at them. It was like a great octopus, stretching out its tentacles in order to lay hold on the rich pastures and leafy lanes of the countryside. They had to defeat it in that, for on a glorious spot like the top of that hill they found breezes bowling that were enough to give new life to an entire people."

The Beauty of England. "The whole civilized travelling public were interested in the preservation of the beauty spots of England. Every year, more and more, the travelling public of Europe and America were drawn to England. They came principally, not to go to the theatres and music-halls of London, but to see the charming old-time villages, the medieval mansions, the little village churches with their sacred tale of by-gone days and romance. Above all, they came to see the beautiful, unequalled scenery of England. Let them not sacrifice that which was such a priceless possession to the nation. "I often see remarks in the papers about the growing prosperity of this country and its marvellous trade boom," Lord Curzon concluded, "and I see evidences, indeed, of increasing welfare in the comfortable appearances and improved dress of almost all classes of the people. We are often asked to contemplate our great industrial concerns—our coal mines, our factories, our workshope, the rise in wages and so on, as evidences of the abounding prosperity of the nation. All that is quite true, although behind it there is a background of misery, equal, and gloom which some of us see very little of, but which we all deplore. But what profits it us to be fat with material prosperity if we lose our souls? The soul of the nation is to be found far more in the countryside than in the dark and crowded cities, and it is because we want to preserve the soul of the nation uncontaminated and pure that we attach such value to the preservation of open spaces like Colley Hill."—Public Opinion.

Tea Dances.

WHAT GIRLS MUST NOT DO. The action of a grand jury of New York recently in demanding stringent supervision of the numerous "tea and dance" establishments has had an immediate effect in the shape of a series of "don'ts for waiters" which are to-day placarded in full view of the dancers. The "don'ts" are designed to meet objections formulated by the grand jury against the practices to which the crowded "tea dances" give rise. They run as follows: "It is absolutely forbidden, under penalty of instant dismissal, for any waiter to take a gentleman's card or a message of any kind to any lady patron. The manager or proprietor is to be notified immediately when such a request is made. "Head waiters must prevent gentlemen alone from going to any other table to speak to any lady unless invited by the gentleman accompanying her. "Should any lady be left alone temporarily the head waiter and waiters must see that no gentlemen addresses her until her escort returns. "It is absolutely forbidden, for any lady to speak to a gentleman alone. Any lady doing so must be reported immediately to the manager, who will refuse her admittance in future."
