"Orange Lily Saved My Life"

These words, or expressions having the same meaning, are contained in hundreds of the letters I have received during the past year. Many were from women who had suffered agonies from falling of womb; others from women who had escaped dangerous surgical operations, as the tumors and ulcers had been removed by the action of Orange Lily; and others who had suffered from suppressed menstruation, leucorrhoea, painful periods, etc. For all these and the other troubles known in general as Women's Disorders, Orange Lily furnishes a positive, scientific, never-failing cure. It is applied direct to the suffering organs, and its operation is certain and beneficial. As a trial actually proves its merit, I hereby offer to send, absolutely free, a box worth five, sufficient for ten days' treatment to every suffering woman who will write for it. Enclose 3 stamps. The Romance of a Marriage.

CHAPTER XXI.

The major stooped and gave it to her, and she stood—as if too proud to sit down—and fanned herself.

"Now tell me all about it," she said in a voice of command that would brook no hesitation. "Tell me everything. When—when did it happen? Where is he?"

"At Powis," replied the major. "Won't you sit down, Flossie? Pray sit down. I beg—"

"No," she says, shortly; "you sit down. Sit there," and she pointed to a chair, "where I can see and hear you," and she began to pace the room.

"At Powis; that used to be his own place. And—and the girl; what is she like? How did he meet her? Who is she?"

The major, impassive as he was, staggered under this torrent of questions.

"He met her—Bless my soul, I don't know where! She's—she's a—"

"One of your grand ladies—a swell, I suppose," broke in the clear voice, bitterly. "It is always so: one of those that would look down on me—Flossie Hamilton, of the Frivolity—as if I were dirt. I know them. Don't I see them in the stalls, with those cold, fixed eyes staring at me like figures in a wax-works. Perhaps I've seen her there," with a snap of the small, white teeth.

"My dear child, it isn't likely; she is—a mere nobody."

"What?" incredulously.

"A mere nobody," repeats the major, plaintively, extending his hand.

"A—sort of farmer's daughter."

"What?" again, and Flossie's eyes ope incredulously.

"Yes, a farmer's daughter, without a penny," says the major, almost tearfully.

Flossie draws a long breath, and the fan goes quickly, keeping time to the rapid tread upon the thick carpet.

"Then"—suddenly, with a start—"if she is a nobody, and poor, she must be—beautiful. Is she? Tell me, what is she like?"

"Like," murmurs the major. "Really—I—well, my dear Flossie, impressionable as I am by your sex—"

"Can't you tell me?" with a stamp of the tiny foot. "Is she beautiful?"

"My dear child, no," says the major, or, uttering the falsehood with calm emphasis. "Nothing of the kind; the girl has red hair and freckles."

"Red hair and freckles," she echoes, incredulously.

"Yes; believe me, that makes the matter so inexplicable. The poor boy must be bewitched."

"Then"—with a sudden, swift glance at the glass—"then she is not so pretty as me. Is she, or is she not?" swifly, impatiently.

"My dear child," and the major holds up his hands, "there is no comparison. I tell you the girl has red hair and freckles, and no style, absolutely no style. Poor Rick must be bewitched, as I said, as I told him."

The pale face flushes suddenly, and the blue eyes sparkle dangerously.

"Not pretty, not a swell, not rich; and he leaves me for her. He—he must be mad!"

"He is, he is," assents the major; "but in this case that does not make it the less disastrous, Flossie; for, unfortunately, they marry madmen, and when they come to their senses it is too late to undo the mischief."

"Marry!" she says, turning upon him like a tigress, her eyes flashing, her hands clenched. "He shall not! Do you hear? He shall not! Leave me—me, for a girl with red hair and freckles; marry her! I'd sooner—I will—kill him first," and she raises the fan in her hand as if it were a dagger to strike the blow.

The major looks at her with veiled satisfaction in his cunning eyes.

"My dear Flossie," he murmurs, with feigned remonstrance.

"I tell you I would!" she says, with a gasp. "I'd sooner see him lying dead at my feet. No, no!" for the mental picture has smitten her suddenly, and gone straight to her heart, and she covers her face with her hands and shudders. "Not that! I didn't mean that!"

"My dear Flossie," he murmurs, "of course not. Ridiculous. I understand; and, after all, there's an easier and pleasanter way of preventing this absurd marriage."

"What?" and her hands fall, her eyes meeting his eagerly.

"Come and sit down and I'll tell you," he says.

CHAPTER XXII.

"And to-morrow you will be far away in London," says Paula.

It is evening; the sun is sinking to rest behind the woods, the sky, that has been like a sheet of steel, with the sun emblazoned in its midst, so clear and bright that the rods lying beside Sir Herrick and Paula have scarcely been used, and the fish have sported in safety defiantly; for fishing is impossible when the sun is as bright as it has been to-day.

And the Worst is Yet to Come—

But these two do not seem to care much. All the afternoon they have been wandering beside the stream, talking sometimes, but oftener silent with love's rare eloquence; in the minds of both of them is recalled that morning when they wandered there first, when Love stood at a little distance, but sitting his arrow to his bow, and ready to smite them.

Silent, yes, very silent; but their hands would meet and clasp, and their eyes would exchange those mystic glances which mean so much but cannot be written in any known language. And now, as the time comes for them to depart—for Sir Herrick is going up to town by the evening mail—a gentle melancholy sits heavily upon Paula's soul; so heavily that it feels like a presentiment, a sensation of coming disaster that, strange to say, another young lady—Flossie Hamilton—experiences about the same time; but Paula is not the girl to be overcome by foolish presentiments, or to make this last hour of their communion a miserable one.

And Sir Herrick is very quiet; he lies full length at her feet as she sits on the stump, the old stump behind which she hid when the Palmers came down upon Sir Herrick.

Very beautiful she looks, Sir Herrick's girl-love, this evening. Love is a powerful tonic; it will lend comeliness to the plainest of maidens, and it seems to have glorified Paula's fresh young loveliness.

Surely there is a deeper light in the expressive eyes, a brighter gold in the chestnut hair, a new and mystic grace in the lithe young figure. Love has sailed down from his empyrean heights and touched her with his magic wand, and added to her charms.

At least so it seems to Sir Herrick, as he lies back with his head on his arm, his eyes fixed on her face with that absorbed, watchful, devout look which true love alone wears; the look which longs and desires, and yet reveres, all in a glance and at one and the same time.

"And this is the last day," says Paula, with gentle sadness; "to-morrow you will be engulfed by the mighty London; it will swallow you up and devour you utterly."

"There will be enough left to hold memory of you, my darling," he says.

"Will there?" she says, looking down at him, "are you sure? You know what the poet says:

"'Love is of man's life a thing apart,
'Tis woman's whole existence!'"

"That's Byron," he says, with a smile. "I thought women never read Byron."

"Don't they?" says Paula, innocently. "I've read him. And you will remember Myrtle Cottage and its inhabitants. Are you quite sure? I wonder where you will be this time to-morrow evening?" And she looks down on him with dreamy enquiry.

"Oh, at the club," he says. "Very likely sitting in my chambers lonely and grim, and wondering what you are doing. What shall you do?"

"Are you going to ask me to look at the sunset at a particular moment, or drink your health at a quarter past six, or something of that sort," she says, with a too palpably affected gaiety. "Do not; I never remember vows of that kind; I should be sure to forget. And yet"—wistfully—"you might safely do so, for I shall think of you all the time; while you—"

"'Love is of man's life a thing apart,' don't sit all alone in your rooms; go to the club and enjoy yourself, smoke cigars and play billiards; they do at the club, don't they? Be happy. I should like to be sure that you were happy. I like to see that strange light in your eyes which shines there, all across them, as it were, when you are amused and happy. I wonder—"

"Well, little witch," he says, leaning forward with an air of enjoyment. He delights most in her when she is in this mood, when her clear intellect is soaring above the commonplace, or, rather, endowing the commonplace with good-natured humour and philosophy. At such times he says to himself, exulting, "I have won not only beauty, but intellect; not only purity and the sweetest maiden modesty, but wit and wisdom; I have won a pearl. Well, little witch!" he says.

"I was wondering whether I should always be able to fetch that light into your eyes?"

"Always, while any light is possible to them, or I have ears to hear your voice, my darling," he says—"always. And you are sorry that I am going?"

She looks down on him thoughtfully, with maiden tenderness; the sweetest of all tenderness.

"If you were to tell this stream here that the sun, which is now dropping into the west, didn't mean to rise for three days, do you think, if it could speak, that it would not say it was sorry? I think so; and the fish, and the birds, and the flowers. Well, then, you are my sun."

"My Paula!" he says, in a low, almost awe-toned voice.

"Yes," she says, and there was a touch of solemnity in her voice. "My sun. I see how cold the world must have been before you came—how cold! It makes me shudder. And I lose my sun for three days!" with a smile. "It is a long time; do not be surprised if, when you come back, I am pale and shrunken, with all my leaves blighted and bent earthwards," and she laughs.

He looks at her, and then a strange expression comes into his eyes—an expression which has visited them by flashes many times during the last two days, as the fullness of her sweet, pure nature has unfolded itself to him. Regret, remorse, even shame are embodied in the shadow which falls over his brows.

"Three days are not long, Paula," he murmurs. "Then I shall be back to stay with you as long—as long as you will let me, until—until we meet to part no more while life lasts. See, you make me almost a poet by example!" and he laughs, a restless, uneasy laugh. "More than that, you make me nervous and apprehensive. Say the words—just three words—'Don't go, Rick!' and I won't go—there!" and he rises on his elbow and looks at her resolutely.

She laughs softly.

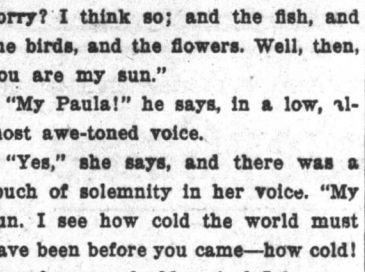

"They are the last words I should say," she responds. "Didn't you say that you ought to go, that business called you? No; you said more: you said 'honour' called you!"

His face darkens, and he plucks at the grass with a restless hand.

Venus will be the most brilliant of them all, and will rise at about 4 a.m., when Jupiter (not much

Bagdad and the British.

When on March 11, 1917, British troops marched into Bagdad, its capture marked an epoch in Imperial history, being as it was a vindication of British prestige among Oriental peoples, a prestige which had been severely shaken by the failures at the Dardanelles and Kut-el-Amara. The fall of the city of Haroun al Raschid, of Arabian Nights fame, began the disruption of the Empire of the Turk in Asia, and may eventually complete the ejection of the Ottoman from Europe, if not the final downfall of that once haughty conqueror and oppressor of the Christian. Of even more importance was Persia's liberation, from Turkish occupation, of some twenty thousand square miles of territory, and the securing of Britain's Indian frontiers: the stilling of Mohammedan unrest in the occupied region, and the preparation of the way for the ultimate victory of Britain in the East.

The city of Bagdad is rich in historical and legendary lore. It had for centuries held the position of being the key of the desert route to Damascus and Asia Minor, and was the eastern terminus of the overland route to Aleppo and Europe. Here the numerous caravans of hundreds of years halted as they arrived from Central Arabia, and pilgrims innumerable passed through the four great gates which face north, east, south and west. Situated on the banks of the River Tigris, the Hiddekel of Genesis—Bagdad is about two hundred miles north of the confluence of that river with the Euphrates—the fourth river which came from the river flowing out of the Garden of Eden, and from it, the ruins of the ancient cities of Babylon and Nineveh, the capitals of the one-time Chaldean and Assyrian Empires, and also the remains of the tower of Babel, all of Biblical fame. Bagdad was founded in the year A.D. 762, its Persian name of Bagadata being equivalent, in English, to "The Gift of God." For five centuries it remained the seat of the Caliphate, or until 1258 when the Mongols under Genghis Khan sacked the city, after which it ceased to be the spiritual home of Islam. Successively it was attacked and captured by enemies, its final conquest being on Christmas Day, 1638, when the Governor surrendered to Murad IV, Sultan of Turkey, and in Turkish hands it remained and under Turkish rule was administered until the date of its capture by the British nearly three years ago.

At the time of the British occupation the new conquerors found that the hand of time had not pressed heavily upon the inhabitants, but had passed lightly over the manners and customs of the people, leaving an unchanged, intact picture of the ancient East. Everything was done in primitive fashion: the old water wheels still spun; the old looms were still in use; the ox still trod out the corn; the women, as in old testament days still ground the grain between the upper and nether millstones, and the shepherds still led their flocks to the green pastures. Bagdad was still the Bagdad of Aaron the Just, tho' many of its ancient glories had departed. Yet the romance of old still surrounded it and pervaded the city with an atmosphere of mystery and adventure. But modern ideas demanded something different from the squalid, if picturesque, features of the one-time city of oriental magnificence. Of government there was practically none, the various Arab tribes, under their Sheiks being, each one, a law unto themselves, so the first business of the chiefs of the army of occupation was to organize British rule, and notwithstanding some initial distrust and suspicion, this was successfully accomplished, and now Bagdad has clean streets, electric lights, a municipal government under a military governor, a police force, a prison, a hospital and that absolute necessity to a populous city—a fire brigade. Religious and civil tribunals have also been established, liquor laws have been reformed and all sellers of spirits are under license. Schools have been opened, a Boy Scout movement inaugurated, agriculture has been developed and local industries fostered, and above all the population is pleased, contented and happy, but British occupation and British ideals may not remain long with the city of the Gift of God, for its ultimate fate, with that of Mesopotamia has not yet been decided by the Peace Conference.

C. E. I. Meeting.

Mr. C. E. Hunt occupied the chair at the annual meeting of the C. E. I. last evening. The reports of the Secretary and Treasurer showed that the past year had been a very successful one. A substantial balance to the credit of the club and an addition of forty new members showed that its affairs are in a flourishing condition. The election of officers was conducted by Mr. J. A. Gould, and resulted as follows:—
President—Mr. C. E. Hunt.
Vice-President—Mr. Joseph J. Long.
Secretary—Mr. Harold Moore.
Treasurer—Mr. John Farndale.
Council—Messrs. John Wellman, E. J. Snow, F. F. Harris, James Carberry, John Miller and W. Hardman.
Mr. Hunt, who was elected for the eleventh time as President, thanked the members on behalf of the newly elected council. The annual sale of papers concluded the meeting.

Guns Not Protected.

Due to the inexcusable neglect of some one or ones, the souvenir guns of the Newfoundland Regiment now placed in the two parks and in front of the Colonial Buildings, have not been in any way protected from the frost, wind and snow for the winter months, or in some way preserved from rust and ruin. These guns were captured by the Newfoundlanders from the enemy in France, and if enough is not thought of them to safeguard them from the elements, by all means scrap them and let them be forgotten. Either that or attend to them.

Fire Last Night.

Last night at 10 o'clock one of the double tenement houses in Willis Range, Mundy Pond Road took fire. An alarm was sent to the central and West End Fire Companies. Owing to the condition of LeMarchant Road the Central fire horses got bogged and did not reach the scene. Though the West End company arrived in quick time, their services were not required, the fire being put out by a bucket brigade formed by the men living in the neighbourhood.

Blaze Averted.

Yesterday afternoon a pot of pitch boiled over in the Overland Garage, on Prescott St., and ignited the floor. The firemen were called out, but their services were not required, as the fire was smothered by the employees of the place before any damage was done.

Of Interest to Women.

Every woman knows that cleanliness makes a bright home and prevents sickness. Cleanliness also makes a bright factory and ensures purity of the product. In KLIM plants cleanliness is the first consideration. The milk is received in the cool hours of the morning and then is put through the drying process. After the last can of milk is received and dried into powder form, every machine and utensil is washed with scalding water and live steam. Nearly half of every working day is devoted to cleaning and scrubbing, and this care is your best guarantee of the safety of KLIM. Bacteria cannot exist in clean places. KLIM plants are absolutely clean. Further and very important checks against impurity in KLIM are the daily tests of the liquid milk as received and the powdered milk produced from it. The maintain in Toronto a bacteriological and chemical laboratory which is under the direction of one of Canada's leading bacteriologists. He has had many years of experience in dealing with milk problems and his approval of the KLIM which is made in our plants is necessary before it is packed and shipped.

55 cents buys from your grocer a one pound tin which produces a gallon of delicious milk. In addition you make just what amount of milk you require at a time, and you always have a supply in powdered form on your shelf in the KLIM can.

Mothers should bear in mind that KLIM is not recommended for infant feeding owing to the fact that to prevent rancidity a percentage of the fat contents has to be removed in the process of manufacture.

City Club Annual.

The annual meeting of the City Club took place last evening and was well attended. The report for the past year was read and proved to be very satisfactory. A vote of thanks was extended the retiring President, Mr. Frank Bradshaw and his committee. Ten new members were balloted for and accepted. The election of officers resulted as follows:—
President, C. A. C. Bruce; 1st Vice-President, H. R. Brooks; 2nd Vice-President, Hon. R. Watson; Secretary, Treasurer, F. L. Bradshaw; Committee, J. F. Blackwood, J. S. Ayre, F. T. Brehm, H. E. Cowan, T. H. Griffiths and Vincent F. Burke. During the evening a framed photograph of Sergeant Ricketts, V.C., was exhibited and with acclamation was directed to be hung in a conspicuous position in the Club Room.

This is an application of the plaintiffs for an order that the letters of administration to the estate of Joseph Tilley, granted to the above defendant, Rhoda James, administratrix of the estate of Joseph Tilley, be revoked and that such person as the court shall appoint be appointed in her place and stead.

It is ordered that the Registrar be appointed administrator of the estate of Joseph Tilley and that the letters of administration granted to Rhoda James be revoked.

Majestic Secures Fox Pictures.

As will be seen by reference to the advertisement elsewhere in this issue, the Majestic Theatre has secured control for Newfoundland of the famous William Fox Pictures and henceforth will be the only theatre in the city showing them. As every movie fan well knows, the Fox Corporation Pictures, in which such great stars as Tom Mix, Theda Bara, William Farnum, William Russell and others, are the best produced. The famous Mutt and Jeff cartoons, and the equally famous Sunshine comedies are filmed by this corporation, and the Majestic Theatre deserves great praise for securing them for the benefit of its patrons. In addition to this, we are informed, the sole rights of showing select pictures in Newfoundland has been secured by the Majestic, and there can be no doubting the statement that this popular house will lead the line in good shows. The motto of the Majestic has ever been "The Best is None too Good for our Patrons," and with such a commendable standard, success is deserved and cannot be denied.

War Veterans Open New Club Rooms.

Rooms Are Splendid Ones—Bicketts, V.C. Presented With His Cheque—Governor and Suite Present.

The new club rooms of the Great War Veterans' Association were opened formally last evening by Governor Harris. After the reception of the vice-regal party, the President of the Association, Lieut.-Col. A. E. Bernard, "The Idol of the Regiment," read this address:
To His Excellency Sir C. Alexander Harris, K.C.M.G., C.B., C.V.O.

Your Excellency—
We, the executive committee of the Great War Veterans' Association, desire to express to Your Excellency on behalf of all returned sailors and soldiers, our deep appreciation of the great honour you are conferring upon us to-night by your presence at this ceremony.

As Your Excellency is no doubt aware, this Association owes its beginning to a little band of patriots, who, themselves unable any longer to bear the hardships of an arduous and lengthy campaign, determined to do all in their power to help their brothers across the seas. Their efforts were crowned with success; the seed, planted in good soil, sprang into new life; the tree has grown and will we hope bear fruit worthy of the care and labor of those early and indefatigable workers with whom the name of Mitchell must forever be associated.

We should like, Your Excellency to take this opportunity to pay a tribute of heartfelt thanks to the women of Newfoundland. Throughout the war, their thoughts, their prayers and their hearts were with us; their one object in life was, we know, to lighten the burden of their men-folk at the front and to comfort those who had returned maimed or sick. Well might they now lay their burdens aside, and enjoy the fruits of peace. Conscious, however, of a further good work to be done, a certain number of them consented to form themselves into a sub-committee which will eventually develop into a club, and are assisting us in a manner altogether beyond praise. We are proud to know, Your Excellency, that Lady Harris has graciously consented to extend her patronage to that Committee, and we pray her to accept our thanks and to believe that we are grateful for the deep and kindly interest she is taking in the welfare of the Association.

Your Excellency, these rooms which in a few moments will be declared opened, have been made possible as a Club only through the well-known generosity and good-will of the people of St. John's. In a few days they subscribed a sum of money sufficiently large to enable us to purchase this building and equip it as a home where the members of the Association will meet for innocent recreation, discuss the past, exchange views on the present and future and generally strengthen that wonderful bond of goodfellowship which was formed on the battlefield, and which we firmly believe will last as long as life itself.

Finally, Your Excellency, we beg to be allowed to express the hope that our aims, our endeavors and our struggles will meet with your approval and be worthy of the patronage which you have so spontaneously and so generously granted to the Great War Veterans' Association.

We have the honour to be,
Your Excellency,
Yours faithfully and devotedly,
The Executive Committee of the Great War Veterans' Association.

In replying, the Governor congratulated the Association upon the good work performed by it, and at the same time paid a tribute to the organizer and first President, Mr. Harold Mitchell. Thanks to Miss Furlong, of the Ladies' Association, and to all who helped, were expressed. After an inspection of the rooms, which are ornamented by nearly 1,000 photographs, the executive and vice-regal party drove to the C.C.C. Hall, where the dance was to be enjoyed. Before the opening of this, Sergeant Ricketts, V.C., was presented with the $7,300 which had been collected for him from the admiring countrymen of the gallant young warrior. This is to be deposited with the Eastern Trust Co. the interest to be drawn by Ricketts, Corp. E. Shea, one of the movers in the collection, replied on behalf of Sergt. Ricketts.

In the dancing which followed, the music was furnished by the C.C.C. band. Teas were served by a staff of ladies under the direction of Mrs. J. Browning. Some 600 people were present at the dance. Within a few days the club rooms will be open for one day for public inspection.

Obituary.

GEORGE A. COOK.

There passed peacefully away, on Tuesday, after a long and tedious illness, a well-known and highly respected citizen in the person of George A. Cook, in his 60th year. Of a kind, pleasing and jolly disposition, he endeared himself to all who knew him. Deceased was for the past 28th years a prominent member of the Masonic Fraternity, and was also one of the oldest members of the Nfld. British Society. He leaves to mourn him a widow, 4 daughters, one son, mother, 3 sisters and 2 brothers, to all of whom the Telegram joins its extending sympathy.

SISTER MARY VINCENT.

On Tuesday, an old and esteemed member of the Community at St. Michael's, Belvidere, Sister Mary Vincent O'Donoghue, passed peacefully away.

Deceased was born at Clogheen, Co. Tipperary, Ireland, on July 19th, 1844, and came to this country in her 20th year, to devote her life and energies to the training of its youth. She entered St. Michael's, Belvidere, November 28th, 1864, and at the expiration of her postulancy received the Holy Habit, June 28th, 1865 and commenced her Novitiate. Two years afterwards she pronounced the Sacred Vows, thus binding herself to the service of the King of Kings, as his elected Spouse.

In November, 1871 she was sent to Burin Convent, where she laboured assiduously for nine years.

To those of this generation it is inconceivable what hardships, privations and inconveniences had to be endured by the Missionaries of those days, in the early foundations and settlements outlying St. John's. We, who are reaping the benefits of their sacrifices ought to hold their memory in benediction and honour.

Change being deemed necessary for health, she returned in 1880 to her Alma Mater, where for forty years, if we except three (1888-1891) of labour in St. Lawrence, we find her, till her demise ministering to God's cherished little ones, "The Orphans."

Two years ago she celebrated the Golden Jubilee of her Religious Profession, when friends and pupils from far and near joined in the chorus of greeting with the members of her own community.

On Thursday last, about noon, she was stricken with paralysis, and as it became evident the attack was fatal the priest was summoned, and after he administered the rites of Holy Church, she calmly awaited the end, which occurred on Tuesday at 10 o'clock p.m. Of Sister Mary Vincent it may be truly said, hers was a prayerful hidden life of sufferings and sacrifices, and may we now hope she is enjoying the reward promised to those who forsake all for Christ and prove themselves dutiful servants.

Solemn Requiem Mass was celebrated for the repose of her soul Thursday morning at 10 o'clock in the Oratory Chapel at Belvidere, after which interment took place in the quiet nook allotted to the Sisters, many of whom resting there had been co-workers in Religion.

May she rest in peace. Amen.—Com.

In Civil Court.

In the civil court to-day a man belonging to Twillingate sued a mill man for wages. It appears that the mill man engaged the other to do some sawing at a mill near Villa Marie, agreeing to pay him $3.00 per day for the winter months. The plaintiff worked for 17 days, when the mill closed down. He was awarded $3.00 per day for his time less $11.83 an amount for board. The men logging were being paid 14 cents per log.

An Ancient Guild. OUTLERS' FEASTS HAVE TAKEN PLACE ANNUALLY SINCE 1648. When, recently, the British Premier went to Sheffield as guest of the Outlers' Company of that city, he was merely conforming to an old custom which decrees that a member of the Government in power shall attend the cutlers' annual feast, says London Tit-Bits. Incidentally, it is an unwritten law of the company that the visiting Minister's speech should deal with trade matters, and not with politics; hence Mr. Lloyd George's pronouncement regarding the brighter industrial outlook. Precisely how long Sheffield has been identified with the cutlery trade is not easy to say. Historians affirm that products of the Sheffield cutlers' art were forthcoming as long ago as the time of Chaucer—the fourteenth century. At any rate there is no doubt that the trade is one of considerable antiquity, and by it Sheffield has grown from a straggling village to be one of the greatest cutlery producing centres of the world. The history of the Company of Cutlers in Hallamshire—as that part of Yorkshire was at one time known—is rooted about as deeply in the past, although it would seem that the company was not placed on a firm footing until 1624, whence it has steadily risen to its existing place of importance among the guilds of the country. The office of Master Cutler, of Sheffield, is one of the most coveted positions in the north. In order of precedence among the city dignitaries it ranks next to that of lord mayor, and the high repute in which the office is held has always attracted men of the highest standing in Sheffield business circles. Among the Masters Cutler there have been not a few men of humble birth who have found fame and fortune in their native city. Such a one was Mark Firth, whose life-story is interwoven with the romance of a huge business. Firth was the son of a working man, a smelter with the old firm of Sanderson. He left school and went to work with the firm at a pound a week. On being refused a rise, he determined to start in business for himself. There were struggles and bitterly hard times ahead, but in the end perseverance triumphed, and Mark Firth died worth many thousands of pounds. In his lifetime he founded almshouses, gave his city a forty-acre park, and endowed the college which has since developed into Sheffield's famous university.

MAJESTIC THEATRE TO-DAY A SUGGESTION. Although the directions on the label say to use 4 tablespoonfuls of "KLIM" to a half-pint of water,—if you find it makes too thick a liquid it is suggested to use only 2 1/2 teaspoonfuls, which should produce a consistency equal to that of ordinary milk. "KLIM" is so economical! Why not a tin in to-day's grocery list? 'KLIM'

Riley's Little Joke.

Once on the State Fair grounds at Indianapolis an elderly Hoosier came up to the manager for Bill Nye and James Whitcomb Riley and said: "Excuse me, but ain't that little benchleg follow over there the Hoosier poet?" "Yes," said the manager, "but he can't hear much of anything in one ear, and the other is plumb gone. On that side he hasn't heard his own loudest thoughts for years. If you speak to him, you must let out your voice." So the man with the copper hair and soferino whiskers stole up to him and in a loud blast shot a question into Riley's ear: "Is this Mr. Riley?" The poet offered him the other ear, at the same time looking at him with large, blue, wondering childlike eyes. People stepped back out of range to give the man with the voice a chance, and he repeated the query in a way that shook the blue ribbon of the large iron gray Ross Bonheur stallion across the plaza. "Is this Mr. Riley?" The poet said softly, as he squirmed up a little closer, "I can't hear what ye say." About 300 people were now round there, waiting to see what would happen. Finally the Hoosier managed to break through Riley's profound solitude and made him hear and admit who he was. Then the surprised and delighted man shot into Riley's stunned and aching ear: "I knew your father!" "Yes, yes," said Riley; "so did I," and walked away.

At the City Hall.

The weekly meeting of the Municipal Council was held yesterday afternoon, Mayor Gosling and Councillors Ayre, Mullaly and Vinnicombe being present. The Inspector General forwarded a communication in which he referred to the present condition of our city streets. The City Engineer was instructed to give the suggestions outlined by the Inspector General his immediate consideration. Ordered the employee in question be paid the amount as allowed under the insurance clause. C. Merner forwarded price list and samples of automobile numbers. Communication ordered to be filed. J. W. Hedges, on behalf of Lever Bros., Ltd., offered to supply a quantity of disinfectant and quoted price of same. Architect J. C. Barter, on behalf of Mr. Jos. McKinley, requested permission to make repairs, etc., to house situated on Lime Street, and also permission to install electric motor in same. Granted subject to the approval of the Engineer. Asst. Engineer Holden reported the majority of the owners of property Water St. East, had cleared the sidewalks and side-drains fronting their premises, but that a few had not as yet done so. These delinquents are to be informed if same is not immediately attended to, legal proceedings will be instituted. The attention of the public generally is called to Section 12 of the Regulations governing Municipal Affairs: "Any person whether occupier or owner, who shall fail in keeping causeways or sidewalks free of snow and ice to the extent of the breadth of such sidewalks, and the surface drains adjoining the same opposite to his land, dwelling house, stores or other buildings, or shall throw any ice or snow in any of the streets, lanes or passages, without levelling the same, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding ten dollars." Plumbing Inspector Rooney tabled report of plumbing fixtures installed, houses inspected, etc., during the past year. Medical Health Officer Brehm reported on the health of the city for the past week. City Engineer Ryan reported generally on the various works for the past week.

The report on city lights out during the week was tabled and copies ordered to be sent the Reid Nfld. Co. and St. John's Gas Co. The usual amount was voted the Police Officer who kept tab on the motor cars, etc., of 1919. A number of tenders have been received for the purchase of the new houses recently erected on Quidi Vidi Road. In re the new City Charter, the Council requested the Mayor to approach the Government with a view to having the same brought forward at the next session of the Legislature. Bills and pay rolls were then passed, after which the meeting adjourned.

It Might, Indeed.

An optimistic old Scotchman's favorite expression was, "It might have been waur." One day a friend said to him, "Tammas, I had an awful dream about ye last night. I dreamt ye were dead." "Aye, man Sandy, that was bad indeed; but it might have been waur." "But it wis waur," went on the other. "I dreamt ye had gone to the bad place." "Losh me, Sandy! Me an elder in the kirk dead an' gone to the bad place. That was awfu', but—it might have been waur." "Hoo could it have been waur than that?" asked Sandy, amazed. "Weel, ye ken, it might have been true."

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

WHEN EYE MEETS EYE.

RUTH CAMERON

Here's an interesting thought — to me anyway. I can only hope it will be to you.

Isn't the way eye meets eye from a considerable distance, really a wonderful thing? Here's an example of what I mean:

I was walking past the dormitory of a girl's school the other day. It was a warm day and several of the girls were at open windows. I looked up at them and I could feel that one of them was looking down at me, and yet she must have been 40 or 50 feet away.

How Did I Know She Was Looking At Me?

How did I know that she was looking at me and that the other girls were not? Was it a question of seeing that tiny thing, the pupil of the eye, and knowing that it focused upon me? Could I have seen anything else as small as that and making so slight a motion, from that distance? And how could I tell so unerringly that it was focussing on me and not on something else near me?

The Authorman suggested that perhaps I could not really tell that; perhaps it was because I was alone.

One Catches the Speaker's Eye. To confute him, I brought up the way one can tell in a hall when the speaker or someone across the hall looks at one, and he admitted that was true.

To return to the main road: Not only could I see that the girl was looking down at me, but when I looked up, our eyes met. That is each could tell that across 50 feet of space the other's pupil was focussed, not only on her, but on her own tiny pupil!

Isn't that a wonderful thing?

Out Of the Trolley Car Window. Here's another example of the same sort of thing: You are in a trolley car that is moving slowly along the street. You glance out idly and your eye meets and catches the eye of some pedestrian. You probably withdraw your glance hastily (especially if the other is someone of the opposite sex), but isn't it wonderful that the thing could happen at all?

It seems to me there must be something more than physical about this consciousness of eye meeting eye—something in some degree psychical.

There is no question but that certain people have psychic powers (I do not mean spiritualistic), of one kind and another. Does it not seem likely that we all have this power in some slight degree, and that the way eye meets eye, and sometimes carries with it a message, may be a manifestation of that?

Train Movements.

The incoming express left Arnold's Cove at 10.30 p.m. yesterday, and is expected to reach the city to-morrow.

The outgoing express was at Grand Lake last night.

The Carbonear trains are moving on schedule.

The outgoing train to Carbonear, which left this morning, took only freight, a large amount of which has accumulated for there and vicinity.

WALT MARCH

Most things come back that go away; our ship comes sailing to its shore; the blooming flowers come back in May, the bird to its accustomed spray, but money burned comes back no more. Oh, often, when old age is here, the man of sorrow walks the floor, and thinks of joys that cost him dear, of spendthrift courses year by year, but money burned comes back no more. Old thoughts come back to break his heart, old memories of days of yore, when he forsook the shop or mart to joyride in a mortgaged cart, but money burned comes back no more. And there were gay enameled maids who helped him blow his scanty store; their forms come back, from out the shades, and march along in dim parades, but money burned comes back no more. There's nothing sadder 'neath the sky than seeing one whose head is hoar bewailing roubles he made fly, recalling chances with a sigh; and money burned comes back no more. So let us from the weekly wage salt down nine plunks, perchance a score; then we'll enjoy our green old age, if we still loiter on the stage; but money burned comes back no more.

SMITH.

The good Lord understood us when he taught us how to smile. He knew we couldn't stand it to be solemn all the while; He knew He'd have to shape us so that when our hearts were gay, We could let our neighbors know it in a quick and easy way.

So He touched the lips of Adam and He touched the lips of Eve. And He said: "Let these be solemn when your sorrows make you grieve. But when all is well in Eden and your life seems much worth while, Let your faces wear the glory and the sunlight of a smile."

"Teach the symbol to your children, pass it down throughout the years, They shall know their share of sadness and shall weep their share of tears; But forever through the ages man shall prove their faith in Me By the smile upon their faces when their hearts are trouble-free."

The good Lord understood us when He sent us down to earth, He knew our need for laughter and for happy signs of mirth; He knew we couldn't stand it to be solemn all the while, But must share our joy with others—so He taught us how to smile.

Charles the First Beheaded.

On January 30, 1649, at ten o'clock in the morning, Charles the First, King of Great Britain and Ireland, walked across from Saint James's Palace to Whitehall, in London, calling on his guard "in a pleasant manner" to walk apace; at two o'clock he stepped through a window of the banquetting house on to the scaffold and spoke to William Juxon, Archbishop of Canterbury, and the others attending him, declaring that he had desired the liberty and freedom of the people as much as any, "but their liberty consists in having from government those laws by which their life and their goods may be most their own, not in having a share in the government. A subject and a sovereign are two entirely different things." He then declared that he died a member of the Church of England, and after having spoken to Juxon his mysterious word, "Remember," he laid his head upon the block and it was struck off. Thus was the old rhyme true, that "Charles the First walked and talked; half-an-hour afterward his head was cut off"; but which sounds impossible to those not understanding that a semicolon divides the two lines. But though beheaded, he has since been honoured, as for example by Samuel Rawson Gardiner, who lived from A.D. 1829 till 1912, a graduate and fellow of Oxford, a most trustworthy and complete author of that period in history, so that while treating fairly his own ancestor, Oliver Cromwell, he wrote of Charles the First that he was "honestly anxious to take the right part, and would never for expediency's sake pursue that which he believed to be a wrong one," and "spoke of things as they appeared at the time to himself"; and was "never unfaithful to his wife"; and was in personal private life perfectly pure. He is called Charles the Martyr, because he was faithful to the ancient episcopal Church of England; to the Prayer-book was annexed a special service for January 30, beseeching that the nation might not suffer for the sin committed by his execution, which continued to be used till A.D. 1858. In 1874 an equestrian statue of Charles the First was erected at Charing Cross.

THE "COLD SUNDAY" OF 1904

Gales, Blizzards and Intense Frost.

From the Evening Herald, Monday, Feb. 22, 1904.

Yesterday was perhaps the coldest experienced in this city and suburbs in the past 30 years, or, in the opinion of some elderly and weather-wise folks, for 40 years. The frost was most intense while the gale of N.N.W. wind which blew accentuated the rigors of the atmosphere and it was anything but a desirable time for one to be abroad as the biting winds pierced the most comfortable raiment and no matter how well people were clad they were chilled to the marrow if on the streets for any length of time. The police doing night duty say that midnight Saturday the cold wave struck the city and about 1.30 a.m. yesterday

The storm began in real earnest the temperature becoming warmer as the hours went by, so that at 3 a.m. it was more than human flesh could stand and the officers on their beats could not leave their faces posted long or they would be badly frost-bitten. The wind blew with great force and when daylight dawned regular blizzard was raging, it being impossible to see for any great distance thro' the whirling drifts. The mercury ran very low in the thermometers exposed at different places and people compelled to be about early suffered more intense cold than they had ever previously felt.

Thermometer Readings.

The records of self-registering thermometers during the night were as follows:—
 Mount St. Francis (Christian Bros.) below zero.
 Monkstown Road (Mr. W. Harris) below zero.
 Mrs. Higgins (Prescott Street) 19 below zero.
 Mount Cashel, Orphanage 18 below zero.
 Mr. Harris, who has been keeping constant records for half a century, says this was the coldest day in forty years. The records of ordinary thermometers made after daybreak, when the blizzard was raging furiously, are as follows:—
 Signal Hill, 7.30 a.m., 18 below zero.
 Cape Spear, 8 a.m., 15 below zero.
 Cape St. Francis, 8 a.m., no glass, coldest for years.
 Mount Cashel, 8 a.m., 12 below zero.
 Dry Dock, 8 a.m., 15 below zero.
 Rise Island, 10 a.m., 19 below zero.
 Mrs. Higgins, 8 a.m., 15 below zero.
 Rennie's Mill Road, 9 a.m., 18 below zero.
 Portugal Cove Road, 9 a.m., 17 below zero.
 St. Bon's College, 8 a.m., 20 below zero.

The keepers at Signal Hill and Cape Spear believe it must have been at least 25 below at these points during the night, as no such severity of frost has ever felt in their recollection.

Milkmen Coming Cityward
 The delivery supplies received the full benefit of the blizzard and not many of them escaped being "nipped" with the frost, while some were more or less severely bitten about the face, hands or ears. In most instances the milk became solidly frozen in the cans and had to be thawed out in the houses of the customers. Possibly the worst sorefare to negotiate early yesterday was Harvey Road, especially its western end, which was swept by the wind coming off the Parade Ground, and the many passing there going to the early masses at the R. C. Cathedral were burned, mostly about the ears, very few escaping. It was similar with those mounting Garrison Hill, and on all sides could be seen people rubbing with snow the ears and faces of those noticed to be suffering from frost bite, to restore the suspended circulation of the blood. Those of other denominations

Proceeding to Worship
 at the churches in the lower parts of the city underwent similar experiences and very few escaped injury from the frost. A man named Cook, who came a long distance to the R. C. Cathedral, was so badly frost bitten about the ears and hands that Sacristan D. Cleatney worked on him for over an hour, rubbing the affected members with snow before animation could be restored. A woman named Walsh was also so badly affected that help had to be called to her. Some of the boys from Mount Cashel out with two milk teams were met by Constable Simmonds in the morning and were so benumbed with the cold that the officer brought them to the station, where they received a good heat and after partaking of some hot tea and left to proceed home. A lad named Nangle also became chilled coming down from the Cross Roads and went into the lockup suffering intensely. His boots were taken off his feet and the men in the station with the guard saw to his comfort, so that after he had spent a half hour before the glowing stove he was enabled to start again. At several of the city fountains the ice accumulated so thickly that pails could not be put under them and people had to fill the vessels by using dippers and cups to catch the running water and throw it into the larger receptacles. This was tedious and women and children who had to perform the tasks suffered terribly. The police on duty yesterday were relieved every hour to go to the station and get a heat, this being the first time for the winter that such an arrangement had to be made.

Felt Quite Restored

It Being Impossible
 to remain longer, exposed to the weather. A man named Tobin, aged 70, of the Wated Department could be seen all yesterday forenoon testing the water plugs in the West End. He did his work thoroughly, but became saturated with the water flying from the pipe used, and his clothes were frozen on his back as he walked the streets, though it did not afford him much concern. The street cars proved a veritable boon to the great many who had to go long distances to reach their homes, and who escaped facing the elements by journeying in them. All day the streets were practically deserted, and only those who were compelled by force of circumstances to go so, left the shelter of their homes.

To go about town.
 At 11 a.m. as worshippers were proceeding to the last service in the churches, the blizzard had renewed its force, and on the higher levels the record was 8 below zero. The congregations in the churches were the smallest on record. An hour later a most extraordinary meteorological condition prevailed, a dense rain of frost rime, or frozen particles of watery matter, falling and being whirled about in the form of gusts of fine powdery drift, penetrating everywhere and stinging exposed flesh as if struck with whip lashes. Church-goers were glad to hurry home to escape this

President of Parent Teachers' Association Says Tanlac Should be in Every Home.

"It certainly is wonderful how quickly the right medicine will get a person to feeling right again," said Mrs. O. J. Wheeler, residing at 1431 Harrison Street, Kansas City, Missouri, while discussing the merits of Tanlac, recently.

Mrs. Wheeler is President of the Parent Teachers' Association, Hamilton School District, a prominent member of the Women's Bee Hive Auxiliary of Macabees, also a graduate nurse, and is not only popular socially, but is active in all civic matters and is one of the recognized leaders among women in her community.

When asked if she was willing for her statement regarding Tanlac to be made public, Mrs. Wheeler said:

"Yes, indeed, and you may tell them I am speaking from experience when I say I consider Tanlac by far the best medicine I have ever found. If I had not taken it I believe I would still be a sick woman, as I had just tried everything, and I am glad to make a statement that may be of some benefit to others who are trying to find relief.

"Five years ago I received injuries in a fall, which resulted in my health becoming very poor and I could get nothing to do me any good. Then in the Spring of last year I was taken down with the 'flu,' and being already in a weakened, run-down condition, the attack was extremely severe on me. I was left with no appetite and my stomach in a worse condition than ever. I could hardly eat anything without suffering intense pain and such a pressure on my heart that I could scarcely breathe. I was losing weight, had the worst sort of headaches and was so dizzy times I could hardly walk. I also had severe pains in the small of my back, suffered with heartburn, constipation and bloating, and never knew what a well day was.

"I had been reading the testimonials for Tanlac for some time and, as some of them were given by people of my acquaintance, I concluded to try the medicine myself. Well, it just seemed to suit my case exactly and has acted so differently from other medicines I have used. By the time my first bottle was gone I had a good appetite and the gas had stopped forming on my stomach. Then I bought another bottle, then another and so on and just kept improving until my ailments all disappeared. I am now enjoying better health than I have in five years. In fact, I am feeling unusually strong and well and all the praise, thanks and gratitude for this wonderful change in my condition belongs to Tanlac. If everybody knew its value as I do no home would be without it."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative; in Harbor Buffet, by Thomas Wakely & Sons; in Pleasantia, by James Murphy & Son, and in Topsall by J. K. Bursell.—adv.

UP THE COUNTRY.

At Whitbourne yesterday morning the hardest frost for the winter was felt; the glass registered 22 below zero, with a fierce blizzard in the early morning, tho it became milder as the day advanced and last night went up to 10 below. At Clareville it was 12 below in the morning and 8 below last night. At Bishop's Falls 24 below, at day break, and 6 at night. At Quarry 25 below in the morning, and 22 at night. At Bay of Islands 20 below yesterday morning, and 15 last night; and at Conn River 25 below in the early morning, and 15 below last night. Cape Race reported it 10 below at daybreak, with a howling storm of wind and snow.

THE WOOL FACTORY FIRE.

Up to Saturday night and yesterday the night of the burning of the wool factory was considered the record breaker. The date was Saturday, Feb. 10, 1883. At five o'clock in the afternoon of that day, thermometers placed outside the doors, in sheltered positions in Water Street, showed that the mercury had sunk to eight degrees below zero. As the night advanced, the temperature became lower still, and thermometers in different places registered from 18 to 15 degrees below zero. The thermometer attached to Mr. Delaney's observatory, head of Garrison Hill, indicated 20 below zero, the situation here being peculiarly exposed, and the wind blowing keenly. Up to that time, we understand, there is no record for the previous thirty or forty years of such a low temperature.

YEAR OF THE THREE SUNS.

One of the coldest winters in our history is said to have been the winter of the three suns. They appeared about February 26th, 1840, and the mercury was 23 degrees below zero. Many of our old inhabitants remember the day quite well and say they have never experienced such intense cold since.

FROST "SNAKS"

Frumbers were kept busy yesterday for an almost every street in the city or more residents had water pipes burst or frozen owing to the frost, and calls for the man of soldier were frequent from the very early hours.

Twelve months ago yesterday a gale of N. N. W. wind raged in the city and the glass went down to 3 below zero. This was not a circumstance but more highly paid position of Chief of the Constabulary Force; and thus your contributor's elaborate piece of irony, be-

Positively none better.

There were several anti-freezing fountains in the city yesterday that did not sustain their reputation. Whether it was that the pressure was insufficient or that they did not act and became frozen. It was impossible to get water, and parties in the neighbourhood had to travel long distances or obtain a supply from some more fortunate than themselves.

The police on duty in the city yesterday were kept busy informing pedestrians that their ears or cheeks were frost-bitten, and in helping to restore circulation. One officer who came along Duckworth Street after 2 p.m., accosted no less than 20 young men and one woman, all of whom were suffering from the intense cold and had to receive a good rubbing with snow.

A report was current last night that three men who left town Saturday evening for Broad Cove were missing. It was also rumored that a man named Shea had been found frozen to death early yesterday morning on the Torbay Road. The police, however, had no report on these matters and regarded them merely as idle rumours.

Yesterday the Water-works men were busily engaged with the hydrants, about twenty of which were found to be frozen and had to be thawed out with great trouble.

Gambling.

A REPLY TO TIBERIUS.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—In your issue of the 27th instant, your contributor Tiberius, who is naturally well informed, and whose articles I read with much pleasure and profit, falls into a grievous error on the subject of "Gambling." He evidently rests under the impression that gambling is an offence against the law, a crime to be punished severely. Nothing is further from the truth.

"Wagers," said an eminent judge (Gorell Barnes) in a case heard in 1908, "which were not against morality, decency or sound policy, were in olden days allowed as the foundation of actions at common law."

"By common law," said another eminent judge (Fletcher Moulton) "wagers were not illegal."

Wagers which were "foolish" or which tended to annoy others, or to waste the time of the Court, or to outrage decency, were, however, discontinued at common law.

We have no statutory law in this country dealing with gambling, except the Lottery Act, and that does not apply to this case.

Under the English Gaming Acts all wagers are void, but they are not made punishable in a Criminal Court, but are merely unenforceable in a Civil Court. The English Gaming Acts, with the doubtful exception of the criminal sections, do not apply in this Colony, and so gambling is not alone not criminal, not even illegal.

Therefore, when Tiberius, in his vivid dream sees the Chief of Police arouse the Department of Justice to prosecute the Editors of the Star and News, for having inserted a gambling bet on the election results, he casts an aspersions on that capable official.

The Inspector General, who was a sound lawyer when he was Deputy Minister of Justice, has not lost any of his legal acumen since he accepted the subordinate but more highly paid position of Chief of the Constabulary Force; and thus your contributor's elaborate piece of irony, be-

Firemen Want Wage and Share.

Monthly wages of $65 and their share of the seals will be demanded of the ship-owners in the coming sealing voyage by the firemen. This decision was arrived at last night. Year before last the men received, in addition to their share, a minimum guarantee of $35. Last year it was increased to $35. This year, owing to the swiftly soaring prices of things, both wages and share are asked. It was decided, last night, that there be enforced a law which made it impossible for an unemployed fireman to sail. Action against employers who violate this rule will be taken.

The Prince of Wales in Canada.

(J. SAXON MILLS, in "United Empire.")

The light cruiser Dragon, accompanied by H.M.S. Dauntless, steamed into Halifax Harbour, Nova Scotia—Canada's eastern gateway—at ten o'clock on a fine summer morning amid thundering salvos from the citadel and foreign warships in the port. Here, again, the Prince set his feet almost in the footprints of his grandfather, an engraved stone actually recording the spot where the Prince, who was to be King Edward VII, first stepped upon Canadian soil. We need not dwell on the War services of this ancient British province. It stands on record that over a million troops passed through Halifax during the Great War. Here the Prince made a special allusion to the noble part Canadian women had played during the War in hospitals, canteens, and a hundred other spheres of service.

The next call was at Charlotte-town, Prince Edward Island, smallest but not least interesting and cultured of the Canadian provinces. Hence, pursued by the fervent cheers and regretful adieux of the little town and province, we steam northwards for the St. Lawrence and the quaint old French city on its shores. At Quebec the Prince entered another world, to which he readily accommodated himself. The "Bienvenu" of French Canada was as hearty as the British "Welcome" elsewhere, but touched with a characteristic French wit. In the historic city of Wolfe and Montcalm, His Royal Highness had much to see. He visited the monument on which the fame of the two opposing generals is commemorated with a noble impartiality: "Mortem virtus communem," runs the generous epigraph, "fama historia, monumentum posteritas dedunt." The Prince spent some time on the historic Heights of Abraham, part of which, as Fellows of the Royal Colonial Institute will be interested to hear, has been reserved for ever as a beautiful national park, chiefly through the efforts of their late President, the ever-lamented Earl Grey. The Prince replied in French to the addresses of welcome to Quebec, which were themselves in French and English. He recalled the great and valorous services of the Vingt-deuxieme Bataillon, the famous 22nd Battalion which was raised in Quebec. Here, too, he did not overlook the wider historic interest. "It was a real pleasure to make the acquaintance for the first time of the descendants of the valiant Frenchmen who first conveyed to these shores the benefit of Christianity and civilisation, and who, while enjoying the customs, laws, and religion of their ancestors, had been for more than a century faithful subjects of the British Crown." In such utterances, as in the other ceremonies in Quebec, we seem to touch the "secret" of the British Commonwealth, the deeper spiritual reasons why she stands to-day crowned with victory and clothed with unexampled honour and might. Peus fundavit eam in aeternum.

From Quebec, we motor through ninety miles of tith and woodland to Three Rivers, where the C.P.R. train is boarded, which will be the Prince's travelling home for ten weeks to come. Such a train, with its bathroom and telephones and glorious observation-platform, altogether 700 yards long and 700 tons in weight without the engine! So on to Toronto, most intrepid, enterprising, and British of all Empire cities. In that great Province of Ontario which, as the Prince said, has been "built up on the labour and faith" of the United Empire Loyalists. Here is not space to speak of the immense contribution of this loyal province to the Imperial forces in the War, nor of the welcome, bordering on adoration, extended to the heir to the British Crown.

Then, doubling back on his steps, the Prince calls at Ottawa, headquarters of the Dominion Government, where high officialdom gives him stately but heartfelt reception; and so to Montreal, thus called from its Mount Royal, the commanding height from which the Prince looked over one of the great world-views distinguished by the beautiful town and the mighty St. Lawrence River. Here, in a four hours' drive through city and neighbourhood, the Prince saw much and many people, the latter including the daughter of that Georges Etienne Cartier, the father of Canadian unity, whose centenary is being celebrated this year, viz. 1914, when the War intervened.

And now it is "Westward Ho!" At North Bay on Lake Nipissing, we enter a rich mineral district. At Sudbury, farther on, are the largest nickel mines in the world, a mineral in which the British Empire and Canada have a monopoly. At Algoma, on the shores of Lake Huron, whose bright waters and dark islets were flooded with moonlight, a night's halt was made. Perhaps we can imagine the excitement in this far-away lake village at the arrival of a real live Prince. And so on to Sault Ste. Marie, popularly known as "Soo," an important junction for the United States' railways, at the channel that links Superior and Huron.

The weather paid scant homage to the King's son on his fishing tour on the Nipigon River, unless a loud greeting of rain, hail, and thunder was intended as such. So we pass on, ever westwards, to those great emporia, the cities of Port Arthur and Fort William, through which yearly, in a mighty flood, stream the harvests of the prairies, where stand the colossal elevators ready to receive them. Here is an omen of the country we are about to enter, in a troop of that picturesque body, the North-West Mounted Police, the Red Riders of the Plain. It is also significant of conditions in the Middle-West that children of twenty-four nationalities, descendants of immigrants from the outer world, joined in the royal reception.

And so through the western gateway, into the vastness, the illimitable grain-land beyond—to Saskatoon, 400 miles beyond Winnipeg and onwards to Edmonton, 400 miles beyond Saskatoon, new cities that illustrate Canada's stupendous advance. At Edmonton are trappers bringing furs at this season from the far-frozen North; among them a party of Stony Indians come to see the great White Chief. Here the Prince witnessed a great cattle "stampede," and himself mounted on a high-mettled "broncho," led a wild cowboy gallop. "We have got West with a vengeance!"

At Calgary, a city which thirty years ago had 500 and to-day has 70,000 people, the Prince alluded with much eloquence to the building of the trans-continental lines. Fellows of this Institute will remember how Lord Milner, on a visit to Canada, spoke of the "imaginative statesmanship" which "leapt the wilderness" between east and west and laid the shining metals linking the two shores and making a Dominion of Canada possible. "I find it difficult," said the Prince of Wales, "to express my admiration for the great man who planned this confederation, who built the railways, and consequently bound together this northern half of the North American Continent in firm allegiance to British institutions and the British Throne." Some wise words he had also to say on the great task of assimilating the heterogeneous human material which migrates into Central and Western Canada. (To be Continued.)

More Profiteering.

Editor Evening Telegram
 Dear Sir,—After reading nearly all the latest news in your ever popular paper of yesterday, my eyes were attracted by a small advertisement, which stated plainly and emphatically that on and after a certain date "milk" would be 22c. per quart wholesale and 24c. per quart retail. Surely 20c. per quart retail is quite enough for it at any time, and then it would need to be the "genuine article," "not milk-water" as some of the farmers are daily handing out to their customers. I think it is high time to cry halt to all this deliberate and barefaced profiteering that is going on all around us almost every day.

It seems to me that the only thing necessary for a concern to do, who wishes to increase their profits, is to call a meeting of its members, and state simply and honestly that an increase is desired, and up goes the price immediately, no such things as any consideration for the consumer: he has to suffer all the time, whether he likes it or not. We are at the mercy of these profiteers and are being exploited by them to the limit. The sooner the Government wakes up to their duty, by fulfilling some of their promises as regards profiteering, the better for all concerned. Don't try or attempt to tell us anything about milk, how much we should use, or how beneficial it may be, to

A Sociable will be held in Canon Wood Hall, under the auspices of St. Margaret's Guild, on Tuesday, Feb. 3rd, opening at 7:30.

Avalon Battalion paraded as usual last night; Lt.-Col. Goodridge, O.C., Major Raley, Capt. Wearing Hayward, Lieuts. E. Fletcher, Norman Hanz, Fred Reid, A. R. Moty and Baz, Chaplain, Rev. J. Brinton were on duty. A and F Co.'s were given physical drill under their respective company commanders. The band was present under Bandmaster Morris. Orders for the week ending Jan. 29th, were as follows: Orderly Officer for the week, Lt. Miles; next for duty, 2nd Lieut. Lance Hayward, Duty, Co. A; Duty Chap., Rev. J. Brinton. Parade on Feb. 6th, the night of the annual mess dinner of the officers, will be in charge of Regt. Sergt. Major Rowland Williams. Following lads are posted to the band: No. 1860, Pte. Skirving, Ptes. F. Collett, F. J. Skeans and L.-C. J. T. Snow. Auditors for the Brigade Savings Bank are Capt. Avalon Goodridge and Lieut. E. H. Fletcher.

Last Tuesday evening the lads were assembled in the band room to listen to the lecture on "The Human Body" by Rev. Canon Jeeves, M.A., Rector of the Cathedral, and formerly Chaplain of the Forces. The Canon spoke at length to the lads on the subject of cleanliness, the care of the teeth, the digestion of foods in the stomach, regularity of habits in every day life, attributing the long life enjoyed by the late Queen Victoria to her regular habits of living. Major Williams, after the lecture, tendered the hearty vote of all ranks to Rev. Canon Jeeves, and expressed the hope that he will be able to find time to address the boys again.

A pleasant feature of last week's routine was the presentation to Rev. E. H. Fletcher who holds the commission of a Co. Lieut., of a fountain pen and an address from the W.O. and N.C.O.'s mess for the special interest Rev. Fletcher takes in the boys' athletics. Lieut. Fletcher is perhaps the most popular officer of the mess to-day with the boys, and stands high in their estimation.

Bandman Pottles reports that he will have the Educational Dept. desks, etc., all fitted up for the scholars on Tuesday night. Lieut. Emerson has charge of the school department.

The Warrant and N.C.O. mess are arranging their annual dinner for Monday, 10th February, in the gymnasium, the battalion band furnishing the music. All friends will please take notice and govern themselves accordingly.—Q.

Literary Institute Had Interesting Debate.

"That it is justifiable to Deny Freedom of Speech and Freedom of the Press in Times of Crisis," was the subject of last night's M. C. L. I. debate. Messrs. T. Soper, W. Butt and J. W. Windsor, speakers on the affirmative side, put forward a number of strong arguments, amongst which were the following:—Unrestrained liberty is a barbaric idea; countries that are most free apply most strictly the censorship. The only way to win the war and not to deliberately show our hand to the enemy and court defeat, was the application of a strict censorship. The absolutely false and apparently deliberately so, statements from the British press at the very earliest stage of the war demanded the Government's suppression, and received it. In times of crisis the Government of a country is generally backed by the Opposition, thus making a very strong and united body representative of the whole people, whose censorship is hardly likely to be detrimental to the country.

Hon. Alex. Mews, J. Bowden, and F. Gushue upheld the free rights of speech and press, and put forth the following statements to uphold their contentions:—All that we have and are comes from the fact that someone has a conviction and a purpose, and fearlessly expresses it; a free press drove Asquith from power; a free press demanded the leadership of a Lloyd George; speech and press should be free, because it is the only means to public expression, and to deny either is cutting the main arteries of our civilization; deny freedom and you deny civilization.

A general discussion, in which the following members participated, closed the debate:—Messrs. L. Curtis, S. J. Tucker, Geo. James, Allan Moore, E. V. Wylie, W. Bursay, A. E. Hayward, S. R. Penney, and C. Scott. A vote was taken and the affirmative won by a small majority. On Thursday night next another debate will take place.

Veterans to Get Berths.

Some 45 or 50 returned soldiers will be given berths to the ice-fields this year, as a result of efforts made on their behalf yesterday by a deputation consisting of Messrs. H. E. Cowan, Major Wes. Keen and Capt. Leo Murphy, who called on ship-owners. Last year sixty received berths.
