THE CURE FOR CHOLERA

What a Cincinnati Man Says a Toronto Doctor Told Him.

"I can cure Asiatic cholera," said a young disciple of Eschschitz to a Post reporter. "That so?" returned the scribbler.

"Oh, yes; the thing is simple enough. 'How's that?'"

"Well, Asiatic cholera is always preceded by certain promontory symptoms that can be easily checked, and once checked that's the end of the disease."

"What are the symptoms?"

"The symptoms, or rather the symptoms, is an attack of diarrhoea, which comes on from 10 to 30 hours before the disease is manifested in its malignant form."

"And how can you stop that?"

"By the ordinary method—opium and an astringent."

GOVERNMENT NEWS AND POSTAL TELEGRAPHY

To the Editor of The World.

Sir: It will doubtless pain some of your readers to observe that the Montreal Daily Witness is weakening in its principles of free trade as applied to telegraphs. It advocates strongly a paternal government measure of postal telegraphy.

There is certainly much food for reflection and some force in the argument used; and it is to be hoped no one will suspect sarcasm in the attempt to apply them in telegraphy. In itself considered, telegraphy is but little use in the dissemination of news if deprived of the most powerful means by which such news is universally distributed, viz., the daily press.

Yet, printers have been known to "strike" and a universal, well organized "turn out" of these useful members of society would inflict serious inconvenience upon a suffering public, unable to afford private, direct wire dispatches from all over the world. In order to prevent this might it not be better, in the interests of the people, that the people's servants, the government, should make the telegraph a department of governmental service? Imagine if you can the added dignity of an "interview" with a "minister" who could call himself a salaried government official. What distinguished visitor to our hospitable shores dare refuse an "interview" with an emissary of government, anxious to diffuse his views among an expectant public? There is, moreover, serious danger to the telegraph business, long established and with immense capital, such as the New York Herald, London Times or Daily Telegraph, frequently make gigantic efforts to crush, or buy out and extinguish, a public rival, with a view to increased subscription and advertising patronage at higher rates. Some day they might succeed. In this awful fate government might save us by stepping in.

Unfailing accuracy in our news items would also be a pleasing feature under the new regime. Government infidelity would be quite as conspicuous here as it could ever hope to be in postal-telegraphy. Every item would be carefully checked and judicially granted high-toned official through whose hands and scrutiny it must first pass. The delay might be awkward; but what of that? The scientific accuracy, accuracy, accuracy, which is the great desideratum. It is too, too painful to read in our journals that a political meeting was "attended only by a mere handful of roughs and loafers," and in another that "the room was packed, every influential man in the country having his presence and his aid to make it a success." This kind of thing is a trifling consequence of the government's infidelity.

A BURGULAR'S BIRD

Marching from the King's County Penitentiary to the City.

In the vestry of the little unitarian church, within a season's throw of the King's county penitentiary, yesterday morning, Miss "Red Nell" Lyons was married to James Trevelyan Twiss, more familiarly known to the police as "Jimmy the Bracon."

Mr. Twiss is an Englishman, and was a "pall" of "Denny" Brady, the well-known burglar, who is now serving a twenty years' term of imprisonment in Auburn prison.

Mr. Twiss was released from the King's county penitentiary last week, after serving what is known in thieves' parlance as a "five years' stretch." Miss "Red Nell" Lyons was a shoplifter, who during Twiss's incarceration gave evidence of her affection for him by frequent visits and most frequent letters of sympathy and encouragement.

The couple were married in the presence of half a dozen friends. The lady wore a white brocade silk dress, very décolleté, with black velvet accessories and diamonds, set in black enamel, blissing on her neck, arms and luxuriant hair.

Mr. Twiss was attired as it for a funeral, in a suit of black broadcloth, with black necktie and black shoes. At the bride reversed the role in such cases, with a hearty laugh threw her arms around the bridegroom and kissed him on each cheek.

"If she does that again I'll get jealous," observed Mr. Twiss, as he sat at the head of a table, as a standstill, as he thrust a crisp $50 note into the blushing and horrified clergyman's hand. Three coaches were waiting for the bridal party.

"We are going to drive around my new dress (house) now and get a bit to eat and something to wash it down," said Mr. Twiss. "I'm going to live on the square, and the neighbors think I'm a dead straight."

In front of a neat white frame house on Vanderbilt avenue near Fulton street, the bride and groom were met by a party of eight and entering the house, were ushered into a handsomely furnished parlor by a colored maid.

At a table, set up at the end of a grand piano, was a collation, and a quart bottle of champagne at each place. Another table, standing in front of the large mirror, was a number of curious looking articles, which attracted the attention of the guests.

"These are the wedding presents," remarked Mr. Twiss. "There is a lot I made out, and the paper was expertly scanned by the visitors. The paper, read as follows:—

No. 1.—A handsomely-mounted sectional jewelry box, valued at $100.

No. 2.—A diamond necklace, valued at $100.
