Most cheering news comes from all parts of Canada, in regard to the approaching elections. The success of the Conservative party is assured. The country is tired of Grittism, and only awaits the opportunity of showing by their votes that Canada does not want a party of broken promises and unfulfilled promises.

The people of Victoria County during the last few weeks have been treated to a "sweet morsel" in the form of a circular letter Mr. Editor: from Dr. Bethune, accepting what he choses to call a "largely sign

And in the second place he offers no apology to the men who voted for him last electron, and whose political principles he betrayed. We do not imagine that the independence of the people of Victoria County will permit them to allow Dr. Bethune to be their political conscience, and that they will again honor a man with the County representation, after his late be-give the Dr. credit for straightforwardness, and political sincerity. The people of Victoria will remind him of this when they poll their votes.

The Dr's. letter is "oily". He In a burst of home loyalty he says: "This is my home. The best part of my life has been spent here, and here I intend to remain as long as my lite is spared". Nice taffy for the people. In other words. I am the great Dr. Bethune, I have honored the County of Victoria by my presence, and intend to do so. My honors will "never have the effect of making me too important, to find my greatest happiness in living among them, and sharing their interests".

Such stuff is an insult to intelligent people. Why does he inform the people of Victoria County that he will never be too "stuck up" to live among them? Why this assurance? Surely he does not think the people imagine that he will become greater than his surroundings and expand until the County cannot hold him. It is also presumed that an individual will never become greater than the circumstances that made him. and the individuals among whom, and from whom he derived his disturbed feelings of any Victoria man, who thought that the Dr wight become aloted to the might be alone to the migh might become elated, to have his ment in the Record, of 30 March, assurance that he will practice made agairst me by Jos. Would you feel perfectly safe to put all your money in a new bank? One you have just heard of?

But how about an old bank? One that has done business for over a quarter of a century? One that has always kept its promises? One that never failed; never misled you in any way?

You could trust such a bank, couldn't you?

A Syrian Relie of Pagan Worship and Human Sucrifices. Baal 'Bek, the city of the sun god, lies at the foot of Anti-Lebanon, in Syria. In at the foot of Anti-Lebanon, in Syria. In order to reach it you must ride many miles over bare brown plain, across ridges hoary with olive and green with mulberry, between massive hills streaked like the zebra. Suddenly out of the silent fields spring mighty walls and pillars—giants who lift their heads into the amber sky. The sight of these superhuman columns, beside which the tallest trees look like blades of gräss, fills one with amazement. It is not which the tallest trees look like blades of grass, fills one with amazement. It is not alone their size and strength and beauty that inspire wonder, but their very existence in such a solitude, far from the track of mankind. —are so in the habit of associating cities with modern means of communication that we are astonished at the presence of massive ruins in the heart of a valley remote from river and sea.

As we draw near our wonder grows, for out of the thick grove, whose dark branches sweep and moan like a troubled sea around the foot of imperishable cliffs, there rise new walls and new columns, massive, ornate, stately even in their heapthere rise new walls and new columns, massive, ornate, stately even in their heaped confusion. This is the Temple of the Sun, a relic of pagan worship that has looked unmoved on the birth and death of dynasties and faiths. Led as by some strong enchantment, we pass through the grove, whose dark avenues, overgrown with weeds, have echoed with the shrieks of the victims of Baal, lord of the heavens.

Why General Meigs Wanted a Thousand More Like it.

"It is mighty difficult," said an old fashioned sergeant, "to keep the accounts of an army post exactly straight, particularly those of the western posts. Hundreds of things are bound to turn up missing and simply can't be traced, yet the government requires an elaborate accounting for each particular article, and until its forthcoming the quarterly report isn't approved. So it became a favorite custom out west to carry such shortages on the books until we had a small fire.

"It -didn't make any difference how small it was or how quickly it was put out; it was sure to burn up all the trouble, some odds and ends that nobody had been able to find, and they were set down in the reports as 'lost in fire.' Softetimes there was an opportune Indian uprising, in which case 'lost in raid' answered equally welf or clearance purposes. There was no fraud about it. It was simply a handy way of getting around a piece of preposterous red tape, and that reminds me, by the way, of a comical little story. "In 1878 Lieutenant Wheeler was sent down to New Mexico to make a geological auryey, and when he came back to his post he reported among other details that one of his pack mules had tumbled over a precidont-care-to-work feeling that accompanies spring weather.

Riding a Snake.

Though it was a dangerous undertaking for the African explorers to travel through the land of the pygmies, there must have been a huge interest in observing the ways of these little imps, who were generally struck spellbound at the sight of the white men. Mr. Lloyd, writing in Chambers' Journal, says he was 90 days walking through the great forget inhabited by the pygmies, a forest so dark that in many places it was impossible to read even at noonday. The pygmies were fairly intelligent and peacefully disposed, although their arrows were tipped with deadly poison. They had a frightnend appearance and covered their faces, like shy children, when spoken to. The forest was alive with elephants, leopards, wild pigs, buffaloes and antelopes. After leaving the forest Mr. Lloyd came to one place where he took the opportunity of screwing together the bicycle which he had brought with him. A spin on the machine brought out thousands of men, women and children from their villages, and they danced and yelled with delight at seeing, as they expressed it, a European riding a snake. Roasting Meats. One of the small but essential points in the roasting of meats often neglected or not understood by the average kitchen priestess is that hot fat, rather than hot the fat of the roast with a little butter or good drippings and then depend upon the juices to continue the process. It should be remembered, too, that all roast meats need a hot oven to start with. Afterward the heat should be tempered.

"The brd men down my way haven't been fooling with tenderfeet much of late years," said George Craig, an Arizona man. "Tenderfeet have a way of coming to life once in awhile, and the wolf eaters have found this out. I remember the case of a tenderfoot who arrived at himself in Phenix back in 1887. He was a towhead, with white eyebrovs, a peachy skin and a slight lisp, but he made good. He had struck Arizona straight from a mining school somewhere back east. He hadn't made the 'maining engineer' proposition stick, and within a month after he landed in Arizona he found himself broke in Phenix. So he got a $5 a day job pounding the plane in the back room of Joe Ilardesty's Palais saloon. He was a pretty in Arizona he found himself broke in Phenix. So he got a $5 a day job pounding the plano in the back room of Jos Hardesty's Palais saloon. He was a pretty fair piano sharp and earned his wages. His name was Algernon Montelair, and he looked the name, with his girly skin, big blue eyes and mild, inquiring expression. The boys got to guying him a good deal, calling him 'mamma's angel child' and that sort of thing, and they tried pretty hard to get a rise out of the key puncher, but he stood for the whole thing and never stopped playing when they were guying him the hardest. Joe Hardesty called the gang down once in awhile for ridiculing the plano player, but when Joe wasn't around they poured it into the tenderfoot pretty hard. His two chief tormentors were Buck Freeman, a genwinely bad man, and Chop Suey Pollock, a bad proposition from San Francisco. Both were killers with records. They had both been warned to cease their picking on the tenderfoot plano player by Joe Hardesty, who was pretty quick with a gun himself, but one Sunday the pair, who were thick friends for some reason or other, went down to the Palais. They knew that Hardesty was out of town, and they wanted to have some fun with the plano whacker. The tenderfoot was thrumming away, when Freeman and Pollock lurched into the back room of the saloon.

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never-been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said. "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"
