Hindoo Child Marriage.

English rule in India is prosperous and well established and the natives appear contented, although there is strong agitation going on for a native Indian Parliament in which both states and people shall be represented. Arother movement that is being urged by intelligent Hindoos is for a reform in the marriage laws. Females are married in infancy and their hvsbands take them home while they are yet children. Great strength has been added to the agitation for reform by a recent occurrence in the more starts.

Ka, has in his possession a singular stoned a few years ago on the banks of South Platte, in Colorado. It is a small, irregular, intended to a grayish hue time, dull and faint, like smoke, but which, if held tightly in the hand for a few minutes slight shocks like those on an electric battery, will be felt allower the body. When it is thus grasped, the pebble seems to be pulsing and throbbing as if endowed with life and produces an unmistakable exhiliration of the holders physical and mental organizations, a very pleasant sensation, resembling that for lowing a draught of wine.

My bachelor's den is a queer old pen, In the midst of a cit's din. O'crlooking the tide that goes ebbing out And the flow that comes rushing in. 'Tis cheerful and bright,' 'tis a home to me—

A quiet and peaceful place—
Tho' it ne'er knew the warmth of woman's heart
Nor the light of a woman's face.

I sit in the dusk as the sun goes down And smoke in a dreamful way, And gaze at the paintings that hang or the wall— The faces of friends far away.

She was my first, my only love;
Forget her I never can.
Her love has followed me all thro' life,
