A Tip to Hubby—
Bet you never thought of it, but isn't it just a wee bit selfish to sit there in your big chair, your feet upon the fender, pipe-dreaming, while that little housekeeper of yours works over a sink full of messy pots and pans or finishing up the day's odds and ends? Have a heart, help her keep those rosy cheeks of hers. Be a real sport, step into Stewart's Fancy Bakery and ask for a loaf of Stewart's Homemade Bread, it's the best. Also Xmas Cakes, Mince Pies, Ladies' Fingers, Pastry Shells, Oyster Pattie Shells, etc. Take it home and tell her to quit baking. If it's anything fancy in the baking line Stewart's have it.

The Romance of a Marriage.

CHAPTER VII.

"You must just take pot-luck, Sir Herrick," says Mr. Palmer, waving his fat hand towards the table, which "groans" beneath an elaborate, cold collation, set off by all the Palmer plate, every article bearing the Palmer crest—an ostrich standing on one leg and holding a palm branch with the other—an impossible attitude for anything but an heraldic fowl. The crest is everywhere: on the centre of the plates, on the chair-backs, on the candleabra, and on every article of Stancy de Palmer's jewellery, and the corner of his handkerchiefs.

How they came by it, who invented it for them, were mysteries; but there it was—conspicuous and obtrusive. "A little 'omely meal,'" says Mr. Palmer, as they take their seats; "but you must take the will for the deed, Sir Herrick. I hope both you and Miss Paula are rather hungry after your exertions."

Paula smiles.

"I am always hungry," says Sir Herrick, calmly. "I'm afraid Miss Paula must be famished. Your arrival was providential, for it's my opinion she was just on the point of sinking for want of food," and he glances at Paula, who sits opposite him, a little gleam of amusement in her dark eyes.

"I believe I had more than half of the sandwiches," she says.

"You did," he says, solemnly, but with such a quaint curve of the clear-cut lips that, for the life of her, Paula cannot help laughing. Mr. Palmer, upon whom a joke is worse than lost, stares and smiles vaguely, and the two gorgeous footmen, who stalk about waiting during the "omely" meal, gaze vacantly into space.

May, the daughter of the house, looked from one to the other timidly, and with a little air of wonderment at Paula's courage in daring to laugh at the tall, distinguished Sir Herrick; and Mr. Palmer, clearing his throat pompously, and nodding at the empty

ROBUST CHILDREN

A child should not look pale, thin or worn. Such condition denotes malnutrition. To keep up growth and robustness a child needs a plenitude of food rich in vitamins.

'SCOTT'S EMULSION' abundant in growth-promoting properties, is an ideal supplemental food that could well be a part of the diet of every growing child. Children always do well on Scott's Emulsion.

chair at the end of the table, asked where Mr. Stancy was.

The door opened as he spoke, and Mr. Stancy entered. Short as had been the time, he had exchanged his many-coloured coat for one of a different hue, and had got on another necktie. Mr. Stancy de Palmer was rather given to changing his coat, and never missed an opportunity of washing his hands.

He comes in now, with a languid, sauntering gait, and a too palpable air of being very much at his ease, which is a dismal failure. But Sir Herrick scarcely appears to notice his advent, and seems quite absorbed in his plate. So the heir of the Palmers sinks into his seat, and glances round with rather a sullen look in his fair face.

"Stancy, give Sir Herrick some of that pie. Try some pie, Sir Herrick," says his father. "Are you looking at that omelette, Sir Herrick? Handsome piece of work, eh?"

Sir Herrick, who was looking at his plate, glances at the silver ostrich balancing a palm-shaped fruit-dish, and says, "Yes."

"Our family crest," continued Mr. Palmer. "Perhaps you may have heard of the Palmer that came over with the Conqueror?"

"Can't say I remember," says Sir Herrick, carefully avoiding the twinkling eyes opposite him.

"Yes," says Mr. Palmer, "our great ancestor. I'll show you his portrait in the gallery, after lunch."

Sir Herrick looks rather alarmed, but inclines his head politely.

"And so you're stopping at the King's Arms," continues Mr. Palmer—"that is, you were stopping: for I hope you will make the Court headquarters. We shall be very much honoured if you will. We are a 'omely family."

"Thanks," says Sir Herrick, a little more quickly than is usual with him; "but—I'm afraid I shall have to get back to town."

"Oh, come! you mustn't desert us, just as we're getting friendly," says Mr. Palmer. "But think it over—think it over. Stancy, Sir Herrick will take a little more pie."

And a footman takes a plate.

"No, thanks," says Sir Herrick.

Mr. Palmer calls his attention to the Burgundy, the champagne, "or perhaps a glass of dry sherry," and meeting with no success, suggests an adjournment.

"We gentlemen will go and have a cigar in the billiard-room," he says, "while the ladies do a little gossip."

Sir Herrick rises and looks at his watch; and Paula, who is watching, sees that he is ardently longing to escape.

"I'm afraid we ought to be moving to the stream again," he says, and he glances at Paula; but Paula will not help him.

"Oh, just a cigar," says Mr. Palmer. "Mustn't run away directly, you know, Sir Herrick!"

And so Sir Herrick is led off, Stancy de Palmer following up with a sullen, dog-in-the-string kind of fashion.

Paula looks after them with a smile of intense enjoyment, then she puts her strong arm round May's waist.

"Let us go into the open air, May," she says; she almost adds, "out of hearing of those gorgeous nuisances," but remembers herself in time.

They go out on the lawn, smooth as the billiard-table upon which the gentlemen have gone to play, and "Oh, Paula!" exclaims May, piteously.

"What is the matter now?" says Paula, looking down at the gentle, timid face, with its upturned eyes.

"Paula, it is dreadful! How could you sit there and laugh as if you enjoyed it? It—it made me turn cold."

"What did—the claret?" says Paula, teasingly, though she fully understands.

"The claret! No, of course not; but—but the way he went on. It was wonderful that he shouldn't have remembered that Sir Herrick was actually born here, and that—that he must have been thinking about the old place all the time."

"Do you think so?" says Paula, with her head on one side. "If he was, he concealed it with admirable art. But I don't think he was. No; pity would be thrown away upon Sir Herrick Powis, May. He doesn't feel anything."

"Are you sure?" says May, doubtfully. "Of course I don't understand him. He is so different to anyone I have ever seen—so cool and quiet and self-possessed. And, Paula, don't you think he is wonderfully handsome, in an awfully commanding, princely sort of way?"

Paula stoops to pick a flower, and smirks at it with careful criticism.

"Handsome? Yes. But his beauty hasn't filled me with any particular awe," she says.

May looks at her admiringly.

"That's because you are so cruel and self-possessed yourself, Paula!" she says. "I wish," with a sigh, "I were like you."

"Don't wish anything so foolish," says Paula, swiftly. "You are the prettiest!"

"—The sweetest little bit of Dresden china in the world, while I am a red-headed savage, with no manners, and no—nothing! Wish yourself like me! Have you broken all the looking-glasses in the house, May?" and she laughs.

May sighs.

"That's all nonsense, Paula," she says, wistfully. "Everyone knows how beautiful you are. Papa says that you will be a Cleopatra!"

"I'm much obliged," says Paula, laughing. "If I remember right, Cleopatra wasn't much of a woman—no better than she ought to be. I don't take that as a first-class compliment, May. But never mind. And so you had a nice evening, last night?"

"Oh, beautiful!" says May, "but," wistfully, "I did so wish you could have been here! And did you choose Alice's dress? It was so much admired. She was the prettiest girl in the room. Stancy said so himself."

"And Mr. Stancy ought to know," says Paula.

"Simply lovely," goes on May, upon whom the ironical comment is lost. "I suppose Sir Herrick admires her very much, doesn't he?"

"I don't know," says Paula. "I don't see how he can, considering that he hasn't seen her."

"But he is sure to admire her," says May, confidently.

"Quite sure," assents Paula. "I never knew a man who didn't Alice's method is very hitting; they generally fall at the first shot. I have no doubt that he will fall at her feet and die on the spot," and she laughs.

"What queer things you say!" exclaims May, laughing herself now. "I don't think you are afraid of anything or anybody, Paula."

"Only of the footmen and the butler inside there," says Paula. "But, May, I think I shall have to run for it. If I know anything of Alice, there is a storm brewing, at this moment, up at Myrtle Cottage, which will take off the roof. I expect it is all descending on poor Bob's defenceless head, which is scarcely fair, though it is all his fault that I am wandering about with a strange young gentleman."

May looks up at her with a quaint mixture of awe and admiration.

"Yes," she says. "I wonder you weren't afraid. I couldn't have done it."

"Well," responds Paula, blowing a thistle-down from her fingers, and watching it as it sails through the air, "he hasn't eaten me, up to now."

"—Shouldn't know what to say to him," says May, with a sigh.

Paula laughs.

"He has done the greater part of the 'saying,'" she says, "and that is not much."

"Is he married?" asks May, after a pause.

Paula is silent for a moment, her dark eyes fixed on the fleecy clouds drifting across the bright June sky.

"I don't know," she says, quite gravely. "By some mischance I omitted to ask him. I'll do so when he comes out."

"Paula!" exclaims May, clutching her arm, "you wouldn't do—" then she laughs, as she sees the smile on Paula's face.

"Why shouldn't I?" says Paula, calmly. "I wonder whether he would be surprised? I don't think so. I don't think anything would surprise him, or, at any rate, he wouldn't own it. Here they come; shall I ask him?" and May's face grows so horror-stricken that Paula burst into a loud, rippling laugh of enjoyment.

The three men come down the steps, Stancy de Palmer still in the rear, and still sullen and wrapt in a haughty cloak of silence.

"Here we are, Miss Paula!" says Mr. Palmer in his most affable manner, "and we've come with a little proposal."

"For me or May?" says Paula, with an admirable air of innocent curiosity.

Mr. Palmer stares, unconscious of the joke; but Sir Herrick laughs with his lips and eyes.

"What's the matter, eh?" enquires Mr. Palmer, blandly. "Have I got black on my face, Miss Paula?" and he wipes his red countenance with a huge silk handkerchief.

"No, oh, no!" says Paula. "Well, what is the proposal, Mr. Palmer?"

"A little outing, my dear young lady," says the sugar-baker, waving his handkerchief. "I was saying to Sir Herrick that we ought to make his visit as pleasant as we can; and I thought we'd bet up a little himproo-pter picnic to-morrow—just a 'omely little affair; bit of bread-and-cheese in the hopen air, you know."

"That would be very nice," says Paula. "If there is enough bread-and-cheese."

PROVISIONS OF HOME RULE BILL

LONDON, Dec. 22.

Premier Lloyd George addressed the House of Commons this evening on the Irish question. The Premier last week announced his purpose of presenting to the Commons on this occasion the details of the Government's Irish Home Rule Bill. In opening his address to-day, Lloyd George remarked upon the extreme difficulty of his task, difficulty, indeed, he said, after such a discreditable outrage as has just been perpetrated. The Premier said Parliament must get the fact right into its mind that in existing circumstances no possible scheme for Irish Home Rule was universally acceptable. Therefore, he continued, Parliament must assume responsibility and propose what it thinks fair and just. A settlement would be found not in the enactment of a Home Rule scheme, but in its working. Ireland, said the Premier, was the only country in Europe, except Russia, where the classes, who elsewhere were on the side of law and order, were out of sympathy with the ministry of Government. While Ireland was never so alienated from the British rule as to-day, any attempt at secession, the Premier announced, would be fought with the same determination, force and resolution as had been shown by the Northern States in America. The Premier said it was proposed to establish self-government over the whole of Ireland and to create two Parliaments, one in the north and one in the south. Every opportunity would be given Ireland to establish unity to be established at the outset selected by the two Legislatures to form a connecting link between the two parts of the country. The two Legislatures to be created in Ireland, the Premier

PROVISIONS OF HOME RULE BILL.

LONDON, Dec. 22. Premier Lloyd George addressed the House of Commons this evening on the Irish question. The Premier last week announced his purpose of presenting to the Commons on this occasion the details of the Government's Irish Home Rule Bill. In opening his address to-day, Lloyd George remarked upon the extreme difficulty of his task. Indeed, he said, after such a discreditable outrage as has just been perpetrated. The Premier said Parliament must get the fact right into its mind that in existing circumstances no possible scheme for Irish Home Rule was universally acceptable. Therefore, he continued, Parliament must assume responsibility and propose what it thinks fair, and just. A settlement would be found not in the enactment of a Home Rule scheme, but in its working. Ireland, said the Premier, was the only country in Europe, except Russia, where the classes, who elsewhere were on the side of law and order, were out of sympathy with the ministry of Government. While Ireland was never alienated from the British rule as today, any attempt at secession, the Premier announced, would be fought with the same determination, force and resolution as had been shown by the Northern States in America. The Premier said it was proposed to establish self-government over the whole of Ireland and to create two Parliaments, one in the north and one in the south. Every opportunity would be given Ireland to establish unity if she desired it, and a council would be established at the outset selected by the two Legislatures to form a connecting link between the two parts of the country. The two Legislatures to be created in Ireland, the Premier said, would be clothed with full constitutional powers to create a single Irish Legislature, and to discharge all the powers not specifically reserved to the Imperial Parliament. The Premier said that the Irish contribution to Imperial services was estimated to be £18,000,000 annually. The joint exchequer board would settle the rate of contribution for the future and the question of taxable capacity. It was proposed to place £1,000,000 at the disposal of each of the two parliaments to cover the initial expenditure. Representation of Ireland at Westminster, Lloyd George announced, would be reduced under the proposal to forty members. Each of the two Parliaments would have taxation powers equivalent to those of the State Legislatures of the United States. The income tax and excess profits and super-taxes would be levied imperially. The Irish Parliaments would control all local matters and all machinery for the maintenance of law and order except the Higher Judiciary and Army and Navy. Customs and excise services would be retained by the Imperial Parliament, the Premier stated, but when Ireland was united it would be open to the Imperial Parliament to consider whether a united Ireland would have control of the Customs. The Premier said the bill would contain clauses protecting minorities. The postal service would not be transferred, he added, until there was a single parliament in Ireland. The government proposed to give the Irish government's advantage of all duties and taxes paid in excess of a fair contribution to the Imperial Services and a free gift in addition to finance the development of the Irish Parliament. It would rest with the Irish people, said Lloyd George, whether they desired union. The consent of the British Parliament would not be required and in order to offer greater inducements the Government then proposed that certain additional taxing powers should be entrusted to the Irish Parliament when the union was accomplished. All these proposals, added the Premier, would be embodied in the bill for the consideration of Parliament, and he appealed to all to give the measure a fair consideration. The present, he said, was not the time for recrimination.

A TRAGIC BLUNDER.

LONDON, Dec. 22. Statements in official quarters that 500 persons were killed and 1500 wounded in the tragedy at Amritsar, India, last April underestimates the casualties greatly, according to a narrative of an Indian Lawyer, Said Hassan, printed by the Pall Mall Gazette to-day. Describing scenes of the tragedy, which he says were witnessed by relatives of his, the lawyer, a native of Amritsar, says the people had gathered from all Punjab for a religious ceremony which was being held in Galliwatabach, where a dais had been erected upon which several hundred speakers stood surrounded by a gathering of 20,000 or 30,000 persons. The military appeared and opened fire without warning. The soldiers stood on high ground and fired on the helpless, unarmed gathering from a distance of a hundred yards. Many stumbled over the ridges and were trampled to death, others fell into an open well nearby. I am sure that Capt. Dyer's admission that 500 are dead and 1000 wounded is below the actual casualties.

Colour Snapshots.

If the claims of a Russian professor--Dr. S. M. Prokudin-Gorsky--are correct, a revolution in photography and cinema shows is promised.

The professor is said to have discovered a secret emulsion which will make colour photography possible for the million.

For many years colour photography has occupied the minds of experts, one of the chief problems being to make the process capable of snapshot as well as time work. As a result of the professor's discovery, it is claimed that the problem has been solved, and the exposure can be as rapid as with the ordinary emulsion--thus fitting the invention for cinema work.

The amateur photographer will merely have to provide himself with a special camera designed for colour work and plates or films covered with the secret emulsion. After exposing in the ordinary way he will then have to reconcile himself to developing with three separate solutions, and printing will be rather more complicated than with the usual paper, but he is promised a result which will reproduce natural colours without any of the crudity of some colour processes. It is hoped that the special camera and plates will be put on the market within a few months by a British firm.

Conclusive Proof.

"Yes," said the traveller, "I had an amusing journey up to town. There were two Scotsmen in the carriage." "How do you know they were Scotsmen?" asked the cashier curiously. "By their accent, I suppose?" "No; you see, they both happened to take their pipes out together. Well, they filled them, and then each calmly waited for the other to strike a match." "Well, what happened?" "Oh, I brought out my pipe, so both of them waited for my match!"

A President's Shadow.

Wherever he goes on State business, the French President is shadowed, not like President Wilson, by secret service men, but by his "Chef de Protocolle," or Master of Ceremonies. M. William Martin, a gentleman of British ancestry, occupies this all-important post. His business, when at the Elysee, is to instruct French and foreign visitors in the complicated rites and customs of Republican etiquette. When abroad, his study is to advise the President as to the manners of the country whose honoured guest he happens to be, and the formal practices of its Court. For "la politesse francaise" is such that it essays when in Rome to conform to Roman habits, and when in London to those of White's, or Brooks's, or the Marlborough!

M. Martin, who has served as such under half-a-dozen Presidents, is as discreet as he is efficient, and as gracious as he is learned and wise. He is as much at home in fannels as in "l'habit a la francaise."

Divers' Dangers.

There is, at any rate, one post-war activity in which Britons have to take a back seat.

That is as deep-sea divers in the work of salvaging vessels which have been sunk by mine or torpedo.

It is here that the Jap shows his superiority. The Japanese diver can descend to a greater depth than the British diver, and, what is more, he will remain longer under the water without apparent injury to health.

This is no mere boasting claim by the Japanese themselves; it is the expert with a long association with marine salvage work. Few Japanese divers are engaged at work round the coasts of Britain, their activities in this direction being mostly confined to the Mediterranean.

The greatest depth at which a British diver can work under water without doing himself a serious injury is from twenty to twenty-two fathoms that is, at the most, 130 feet below the surface. Even then our divers can remain only a comparatively short time at that depth, and they are obliged to prevent the blood from gushing from their bodies.

In some of the Government salvage ships what is known as a decompressing chamber is now provided, which the diver on ascending can enter and gradually become acclimatized to the natural atmosphere on the surface. A Japanese diver can work with comparative comfort at a depth of twenty-seven or twenty-eight fathoms, or nearly 170 feet below the point where the salvage ship is moored, and as a rule he is not in such haste to give the signal to be hoisted up as his British colleague.

Eastern fatalism enters largely into the composition of these Japanese divers, and on this account the yellow men are inclined to take risks far below the surface, which British divers, no less intrepid, would hesitate to take.

Unexpected danger often confronts the deep-sea diver who has located a wreck which has been sent to the bottom by torpedo.

The pressure of the water frequently has the effect of crumpling up parts of the vessel near the spot where the torpedo has shattered the sides, and sometimes even an ordinary touch will cause part of the splintered hull to collapse. The danger in such circumstances of being enveloped by a mass of wreckage is ever present.

NOW WE

"We know very little about the emotions. Until recently nearly all the ideas we had about them were wrong. Now we know that they are intimately connected with, and largely dependent upon, changes in the circulation of the blood, variations in the building up and tearing down process in the cell. We also know—"

I copied that passage out of an article on psychology, not because what it intentionally says about psychology is interesting (though I think it is) but because what it intentionally says about psychology is more interesting.

"Until recently all the ideas we had about them (the emotions) were wrong."

"Now we know." How naive that is, and how natural!

As Stevenson puts it: "Undying hope is co-ruler of the human bosom with inflexible credulity. A man finds he has been wrong at every preceding stage of his career only to deduce the astonishing conclusion that he is at last entirely right."

We Felt Sure This Was Final. Do you remember, when you were to school, how you were told about the strange and mistaken ideas of physics and chemistry men used to hold, and then were informed that at last we had arrived at the whole truth about the universe in the formulation of the atomic theory?

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

NOW WE KNOW.

"We know very little about the emotions. Until recently nearly all the ideas we had about them were wrong. Now we know that they are intimately connected with, and largely dependent upon, changes in the circulation of the blood, variations in the building up and tearing down process in the cells. I copied that passage out of an article on psychology, not because what it intentionally says about psychology is interesting (though I think it is) but because what it unintentionally says about psychology is more interesting.

A Comment on This Eternal Hope.

Observe these two sentences,—are they not a comment on the psychology of eternal hope? "Until recently all the ideas we had about them (the emotions) were wrong." "Now we know." How naive that is, and how natural! As Stevenson puts it: "Undying hope is co-ruler of the human bosom with infallible credulity. A man finds he has been wrong at every preceding stage of his career only to deduce the astonishing conclusion that he is at last entirely right."

We Felt Sure This Was Final.

Do you remember, when you went to school, how you were told about the strange and mistaken ideas of physics and chemistry men used to hold, and then were informed that at last we had arrived at the whole truth about the universe in the formulation of the atomic theory?

And now,—well, doubtless some bright school child has already shaken your universe as one did mine a short while ago, by informing you that the atom theory has been modified. Of all the times I have experienced the shock of discovering I had been wrong at some preceding stage of my career, none ever shook me in my hope of getting truth—pigeon-holed and settled once for all like that. They had been so sure that atomic theory was the whole truth at last. "Now we know," they had said triumphantly.

When Bathing Was Forbidden.

When stationary bathtubs were first introduced, (only so long ago as 1850, would you believe it?) there was a great hue and cry against them on the ground that bathing was unhealthy. Ordinances were actually passed against them and in the vanguard of the opposition were the physicians. Now although I have the most profound respect for the devotion and real sacrifice of this profession, it does seem to me that this sort of opposition is one of their weaknesses. One wonders sometimes why when they are opposing some such innovation as the twilight sleep, for instance, they do not remember some of the previous times of their career when they were wrong, and feel a little less sure they are at last entirely right.

Which is by no means saying that doctors are the only people who need such a reminder.

THE CHANGE.

She used to help her mother with the dishes after tea. She often swept the parlor and was useful as could be. A month ago, not longer, she would even mop the floor. But sister isn't helping with the house-work any more. She has changed into a lady and we stagger from the blow; for her place is in the parlor, now that sister has a beau.

Time was she did the dusting and she used to make her bed. But the soft and lily whiteness of her hands may change to red. And she isn't taking chances; she remembers if she toiled. That the charm of her complexion and her beauty might be spoiled. So she's reigning in the parlor like some queen of long ago. And the work all falls to mother, now that sister has a beau.

It must be that she fancies that she'd lose him, like a fish. If by chance, he should discover that she'd ever washed a dish; Or maybe that he'd never come to see her any more. If he learned his little sweetheart sometimes had to sweep the floor. But I notice dad and mother in the evening chuckle low. As they watch the ways of sister since she has a steady beau.

The Oldest Writer.

Sophocles, the famous Athenian dramatist, lived to be ninety. The author of "Ajax" is the oldest writer, and he is unique in his degree of longevity. The next in point of age is Thomas Carlyle, the author of "Sartor Resartus" and "The French Revolution," and other works of noble conception, undoubted brilliance, and lofty aspirations. He died at the age of eighty-six. Jeremy Bentham, whose disciple was John Stuart Mill, and who is the author of works on Government, "The Principles of Morals and Politics," and other lucid expositions of the Utilitarian system, underlived Carlyle by one year; while Voltaire, whose "Philosophical Letters" and "Discourses on Man" make his name to live, died at the age of eighty-four.

TIME OF TRIAL.

I set down this plaintive ditty in a time that tries my soul; for in our afflicted city water's scarce, and there's no coal. And the river that supplies us is a mockery that's vain, and a cloudless sky denies anything that's like rain. Life's so dismal I could chuck it, with a last despairing yell, for I have to take a bucket and pack water from a well. From the coal mines all the tollers have departed, as I write, and we cannot fire our boilers, and there's no electric light. And I have to use a candle that is made of rancid grease, and the adjectives I handle would astonish the police. And the street cars have been stabled, and the town has doused its glims, and a fellow is enabled to try out his rusty limbs. Through the darkened streets I stumble, spraining foot and bruising knee, and I grouch around and grumble when I bump against a tree. I have many woes and bothers, but through all this thought survives: It's the kind of stuff our fathers had to stand for all their lives. When in bed, beneath its tester, I am glad things are so planned that I'm not my own ancestor, with a candle in my hand.

War-Bonds for Jam-Pot Covers.

Some years ago, an old lady, observing her Government Bonds to be printed on stiff paper, used them to "back up" a quilt she was making! The Government, when the time for conversion came round, insisted on having the bonds, which made it necessary to take the quilt. A further somewhat amusing instance of the use made of precious paper is that of a holder of some Dutch Bonds "to bearer." About sixty years ago, the owner, a provincial lady, used these bonds for covering jam-pots, and after having made her jam she would trim the edges of the precious "stock" quite freely with her scissors. The dividends were paid regularly up to 1886, however, for it seems that she took good care of most of the bonds, and sent in the detachable parts for fresh coupons. When, however, the old lady died, the peculiar facts were revealed; for, upon the relatives sending in the bonds for conversion, the old lady's own writing was identified on some of them, viz.: "Strawberry Jam—1887—first lot"—while the marks of the ring of the jam-pots were left on the bonds!

Not a Peacemaker.

The other day a lady was passing a waste piece of ground where two teams of youthful footballers were busily engaged, and for a few moments she stopped to watch the game. Suddenly what appeared to be an angry dispute arose between the rival teams, and there was a lot of excited shouting. Very soon the boys generally began to fall upon one of their number, who had evidently been trying to settle matters quietly, and he was

"You wicked, wicked boys," she pounced in an unmerciful fashion. This was too much for the lady who had been watching, and she rushed to the rescue of the poor lad. He screamed as she shook her umbrella at them, "aren't you perfectly ashamed to treat that little fellow in such a way—and he acting as peacemaker, too?" One of the leaders of the attacking party turned from the unfortunate victim for a moment. "Peacemaker?" he cried in derision. "He isn't no peacemaker! He's the reverse!"

Monsieur: For 15 days in the month of January I was suffering with pains of rheumatism in the foot. I tried all kinds of remedies but nothing did me any good. One person told me about MINARD'S LINIMENT, as soon as I tried it the Saturday night, the next morning I was feeling very good; I tell you this remedy is very good; I could give you a good certificate any time that you would like to have one. If any time I come to hear about any person sick of rheumatism, I could tell them about this remedy. Yours truly, ERNEST LEVILLER, 216 Rue Ontario East, Montreal Feb. 14, 1908.

Pleasing Presentation.

A very pleasing presentation took place in the Commercial Class Room of the Civil Re-establishment School, when the ex-service man presented their teacher, Mr. Bown, with a silver Cutlery Set, as a small token of appreciation. The address and the presentation were made by ex-Sgt. T. J. Mahoney, and Pte. G. Martin.

Dear Mr. Bown:
It is with great pleasure we tender you this small memento as appreciation of the interest and untiring energy which you have manifested in the welfare of the ex-service men who are fortunate to possess such a zealous teacher.

Realizing as we do that it requires a great deal of patience and no little amount of labour on your part to handle the education, or to be more correct, the re-education of the men who have been handicapped so much during the past five years, and we cannot let this season of Good-will pass without showing in some small way that we appreciate your efforts to the fullest extent.

Assuring you of our heartfelt interest and co-operation during the remainder of our time under your tuition, and wishing you a Happy Christmas and a Bright and Happy New Year. We are, on behalf of the Commercial Class,

(Sgd.) T. J. MAHONEY,
G. F. MARTIN.

REPLY.

My Dear Men:

You have taken me by surprise this morning and I can hardly find words to express my feelings on this occasion. I do not think I deserve a Christmas Present from you seeing that I have been with you for such a short time. However, if that is your intention to give me this I have much pleasure in accepting it in the spirit in which it is given. I know it comes from an appreciative class. I have tried to do my best for you all; the need has been great and I consider it a noble work. "Patience is a Virtue" and we all must endeavour to practise it.

I have done only what was my duty to do and consider that I have been fully honoured by you from the fact that you have given me such an elaborate Christmas Gift.

I trust that you will all enjoy a very Happy Christmas and be recuperated after your hard term's work, for the coming term, after your vacation.

Again thanking you from my heart for the way in which you have shown your sincere appreciation,

I am,
(Sgd.) O. E. BOWN.

Shakespeare No German Lover.

The Germans are great admirers of our greatest poet, William Shakespeare. It is one of the curiosities of their impudent and thievish character that they had deliberately written learned articles attempting to prove that his mind was German, that in temperament and feeling he was German, and therefore by descent or spiritual adoption he was a German. Shakespeare himself had no love for Germans, and had the same opinion of the worth of their manufacturers as prevails commonly to-day, outside of Germany. Here for instance is a quotation from one of his plays, "Love's Labour Lost":

"A woman, that is like a German clock,
Still a-repairing, ever out of frame,
And never going aright
But being watch'd that it may still go right!"

Give a Thought to Music!

The festive season of Xmas will soon be here. Have your piano put in good shape and help to brighten up your home with tuneful music. A trial of my services will convince you that your work can be done with care and precision.

Newspapers.

(From the Ottawa Citizen.)
Newspapers are primarily distributors of news. They depend largely on advertising revenue to provide better facilities to gather news, and most of them seek to print the best news available. It may be that some camouflaged advertising creeps in, but it is safe to say, and only just to say, that in such instances the camouflaging is put on so thick that 99 per cent. of readers do not "fall" for the thing or person advertised. Shrewd advertisers and experts in the business will tell you that the best place to advertise is in the advertising columns of the newspapers, in honest type, in announcements that leave no doubt as to their purposes. And we prefer to believe that the motives of most people are as honest as the straightforward advertisement, whether they are in politics or business. We know the other kind, too, but he is in a very large minority, instead of controlling news sources.

CIGARS Make an Ideal Xmas Gift!

A good Cigar is a delightful smoke. Not only is it particularly satisfying to the smoker, but the aroma from a good Cigar is almost as delightful to most ladies as a good perfume. How often have you heard your wife or sweetheart say "I just love the smell from a cigar."

Therefore, wives and sweethearts, why not present your husband or husband-to-be with a box of Cigars on Christmas morning? We can supply you with the three most popular brands.

NITTI WILL HANG ON.
PARIS, Dec. 22.
A vote of want of confidence in the Government was carried in Chamber of Deputies on Saturday by 242 to 216, but the smallness of the majority will not, it is believed, cause the Nitte cabinet to resign.

WANT VOGEL EXTRADITED.
THE HAGUE, Dec. 22.
Germany has asked for extradition from Holland of former Lieutenant Vogel, for the murder of Rosa Luxemburg, and the request will be heard today before the tribunal at Haarlem.

NO AGREEMENT YET.
PARIS, Dec. 22.
The Supreme Council, it became known to-day, is making every effort to reach an agreement with Germany on the question of separation for the sinking of the German fleet at Scapa Flow, so that Protocol may be signed and ratifications of treaty on vessels exchanged before Xmas.

PROTECTING BELA KUN.
VIENNA, Dec. 22.
A plot to kidnap Bela Kun, former Communist Dictator of Hungary, and hand him over to the Hungarian authorities, has been frustrated by the Austrian police.

TOMSK EVACUATED.
IRKUTSK, Dec. 22.
Tomsk has been evacuated by the Siberian troops of the All Russian Government.

WHO DESTROYED, RESTORES.
LENS, Dec. 22.
A solution of the difficulties in opening up the big coal mines of Northeastern France must await the coming of German military engineers, who wrought the destruction.

TAKING TO WATER.
PARIS, Dec. 22.
D'Annunzio is reported to have abandoned the command at Fiume, and is said to be on the high seas.

TIME TO DO SOMETHING.
PARIS, Dec. 23.
The heads of the Allied delegations met last evening and decided upon the text of the reply of Allies to the last German note concerning clauses in armistice, which have not been carried out, and compensation demanded for sinking of former German fleet in Scapa Flow. The note is firm in tone, and makes known to Germany precisely what Allies will require of her.
It will be presented to-day.

Street Car Strikes Sleigh

As the eastbound street car passed down Water Street opposite Garland's Bookstore this morning, about 12 o'- clock, the steps caught the outside runner of a small sleigh, to which was attached a pony, and dragged it and the animal for a distance of several feet. The pony was knocked down and the shafts broken. No other damage was done. A young son of Mr. Chas.
Hutton, who was in Garland's store at the time, was the owner.

Schr. Allan F. Rose Lost.

A message received to-day by Mr.
H. W. Lemessurier, C.M.G., from Rames, via Burgeo, says that the schr. Allan F. Rose, 89 tons, Benjamin Keating, master, bound to Sydney in ballast, went ashore there during Saturday's snow storm. She slipped off the rocks during Saturday night and sank. Crew are safe but lost all their belongings.

Miss Emma Morgan, while Mr. Ralph Fowlow supported the groom. The happy couple are spending their honeymoon in the city.

Personal Mention.

Miss Maud Hiscock, daughter of Mr. Arthur Hiscock, who had been undergoing treatment in hospital at
New York, was a passenger by s.s.
Rosalind last evening, and her many friends will rejoice to hear that she is now enjoying perfect health.

The Point of View.

"I'm afraid you won't do for us,"
said the Editor, controlling his temper with an effort, as he eyed the new reporter coldly.
"Why not, sir?" asked the reporter
in surprise.
"Well, you said you had had considerable experience as a political reporter."
"So I have," retorted the scribe.
"Then why on earth did you make use of such unjournalistic language in this report? You said that Mr. William Blank addressed the meeting."
"Well, isn't that right?"
"Right!" the Editor's voice was torn with scorn. "It's all wrong. One would imagine that the meeting was in support of our candidate instead of the opposition."
"What difference does that make?
How should I have—"
"Why, 'Bill Blank next harangued
the mob,' of course."

Of His Own Choosing

William Hohenzollern is willing to be tried before an international court, providing certain conditions of his own making are complied with by the Allied Governments. The ex-Kaiser does not ask much, when you come to think of it. Only with truly German arrogance he demands that the time and place be of his own selection and that he be defended by German experts and lawyers. It is a wonder that he did not ask that the court which will ultimately try him be constituted of Germans. This willingness of the All Highest to be arraigned before a tribunal, practically of his own selection, is not calculated to deceive anybody outside Germany. Its purport is obvious. The Prussian war lord is desirous of enlisting sympathy, and possibly his object is to pave the way for a return to Germany with prospects of the restoration of Imperial rule. The Allies' refusal to accept his offer of trial, under the conditions named will be seized upon by the monarchial section of the German press, and that section forms a considerable part, which will pose the exile in Holland as a martyr, and will also give it an opportunity to shriek its head off in condemnation of the Allies.

Almost simultaneously with this announcement, comes news from Paris that Holland expresses the determination never to give up the ex-Kaiser to trial, and a Hague despatch says that the Dutch Government will stick to its original intention to refuse all demands of the Allies for the extradition of the former Emperor. The Hollandaise have long been inclined to think that no such demand would be made, but now they expect it, and are preparing to resist. Some powerful influence is doubtless behind the Dutch intention to refuse extradition, for it would not be supposed for a moment that a little country like Holland would defy the power of the Entente, if a formal request for the extradition of the late ruler of Germany were made. Upon what grounds Holland expects to base her refusal for the handing over of the royal criminal the despatch does not set forth. That there will be a formidable array of documents to buttress Holland's refusal, should it be persisted in, seems assured, but what the Dutch Government has to gain by studied defiance is doubtful. The Kaiser, when he fled to Holland, was not invited by that country to make it an asylum of refuge to escape the righteous vengeance of the Allies, though the authorities did provide him with sanctuary subsequent to his arrival across the border, and they may now claim that the laws of national hospitality do not approve the surrender of a guest, even though that guest be the arch-criminal of the age.

It is difficult to reconcile the ex-Kaiser's willingness to stand trial, with the attitude of Holland. That there is some possible connection between the two cabled announcements is obvious. Holland's persistent refusal to hand over Wilhelm may be because of a fear that he will not get justice, but should the Entente agree to the conditions laid down by Mr. Hohenzollern, which is not at all likely, the Dutch may, by request, allow him to proceed to the place of his own selection, which might be Amerongen or Berlin or anywhere else where sentiment is favorable to the late Emperor. But if the Allies have made up their minds, definitely that the course of justice is to be kept, and the trial proceeded with, Holland's determination not to give up the Kaiser will not be allowed to stand in the way of bringing him before the bar of an outraged world to be tried and sentenced according to the magnitude of his crimes. When notice is served on the Dutch Government that the ex-Kaiser is wanted, he will be handed over without parley. It will be safer for Holland to do so.

Xmas Issue.

To-morrow (Xmas Eve) the Telegram will be issued about noon. Look out for it. Replete with interesting articles from the pens of well known city writers, and with numerous lively items all pertaining to the festive season, together with the current foreign and local news, this sixteen-page edition will make a capital souvenir of the first real Peace Christmas since 1913. The price—well it is scarcely necessary to say that one cent will cover the purchase.

To our Advertisers.

To-morrow being Xmas Eve, we will, as has been our custom, go to Press at Noon so as to get our papers into the hands of the purchasing public as early as possible on that day. All advertisements must therefore, be handed in to us this evening to ensure insertion.

Broken Tow Line.

CAUSES WRECK OF SORDELLO.
The 600-ton-gross schooner Sordello, newly built by the A.N.D. Co., which left Seldom-Come-By in tow of the tug Inghram on Saturday last, has become wrecked at Rocky Bay, Hamilton Sound, carrying a cargo of pulp, the Sordello was being towed here by the Inghram and on Saturday night, while in a fierce S.E. snow-accompanied gale the tow line parted at eight o'clock and the schooner went adrift. Waiting near until the Sordello's crew landed safely at Appay Cove, the Inghram steamed back to Seldom. This intelligence was received yesterday by wire by Mr. F. H. Ellis, manager of the Tug Company, and he wired back to the Sordello's captain to make an attempt to tow the wrecked schooner off, and also to Capt. Rose of the Inghram who replied that he had been to the wreck, and that the sea was too rough to permit rescue. In the same message he told that the schooner Carl Tibbo also was a total wreck there. The latter had 6,000 gals. of bulk fish on board. This was laden by Elliott & Co., of Change Islands.

Gertrude's Crew Arrives

The crew of the vessel Gertrude recently wrecked near St. Pierre, and taken to Bell Island, by the S.S. Watuka, arrived in the city last evening by the S. S. Mary. The schooner was on her way from Sydney to Fortuna with a cargo of coal when she struck the storm of Thursday and Friday last. The decks were swept and the steering gear gave out making her unmanageable. When the Watuka was sighted the vessel was in a sinking condition and no time was lost in taking the crew off, though all their belongings had to be left behind. The crew belongs to Fortuna and consisted of Capt. John Brushett, mate Berky Morris, steward Israel Buffet and seamen Wesley Pierce, and Thos. Bomister.

Schooner Adrift.

The Deputy Minister of Customs received the following message from Stone's Cove yesterday:—Harvey & Co.'s trading schooner Louis H. 25 tons register, drove out of Stone's Cove, Saturday night with a load of salt and provisions. Nobody was on board, and no tidings of the missing schooner have been received.

Died From Exposure.

Yesterday afternoon, Deputy Minister of Justice Summers, K.C., received a message from Magistrate Cook of Fogo, saying that two men Frank Diamond and Enos Gatehouse, of Change Islands, were caught cut in a punt during the storm of Saturday last and were driven into Pain's Harbor, Fogo Island, on Sunday morning. Gatehouse died from cold and exposure while the other man saved himself by crawling over the sloe ice to the shore.

Put Ashes on the Walks.

Shortly after 11 o'clock yesterday morning as Mr. Hy. Blatch was proceeding down Beck's Cove just after leaving the concrete steps, he slipped on some ice covered with snow, and falling, his head came in contact with the ice rendering him unconscious—he was carried into George Neale's office where he recovered after some time and was assisted home. The present slippery conditions of the streets suggests that the Council should strew ashes over the ice, especially on steep gradients.

Suggestion for a Memorial.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—May I through the columns of your paper recall to the memory of the Public a duty, the performance of which should not be delayed any longer.

I refer to the erection of a Memorial to our Glorious Dead.
His Excellency, Sir Alexander Harris, appointed a Committee of the Patriotic Association to report on this matter, but, I am informed that the members of the Committee are by no means unanimous, and have not yet reported. It is said that a majority is in favour of an extensive University proposition which may cost several hundred thousand dollars to build, and tens of thousands of dollars to support. Other schemes are proposed by various churches in memory of the members of their congregations who fell, and several places outside St. John's have already offered memorials to the men of the locality who made the supreme sacrifice. The matter is evidently getting out of hand, and it would appear that the object we so greatly desire—the erection of an impressive monument to those who laid down their lives for us in the Great War—is in great danger of being lost.

Let us not confuse the issue with any utilitarian scheme, but keep strictly to our purpose—to erect a memorial. Something which will immediately and unmistakably bear witness, down through the ages to come, that when our Empire was in peril, our young men willingly offered their lives in its defence. A Technical School, Hospital or University may be wanted, and as soon as the country can afford it, each should be erected for its own sake—but not as a memorial. A generation, or even ten years hence it would be said of a University for instance—"It is done splendid work, has over a hundred students, and is supported by public subscription, etc." but would any one think to say that it was erected as a memorial? The conception of a memorial would be lost in the University idea. It can be stated as an axiom, that the more utilitarian a memorial is, the less it becomes a memorial.

I cannot hold with those who say that an obelisk, a cross, a group of statuary or an arch, erected to commemorate a great and noble deed is a useless waste of money. What can be more ennobling for the coming generations than the constant reminder that the young men of this generation fought and fell for a great cause? I submit, therefore, that it is a memorial we want, and nothing but a memorial. Two or three years ago I suggested that a site should be prepared on the King's Beach, and on it an obelisk, monument, cross or statuary should be erected bearing upon its base in imperishable bronze, the names of our heroic dead. I beg now to suggest an alternative and perhaps a better plan.
That a Memorial Hall, built of marble or granite after the manner of a Grecian temple, should be erected in some open space, such as the centre of the Parade Ground or Bannerman Park. That on the walls inside, the names of those who fell in the Great War should be recorded on bronze tablets, and that the Hall should be the repository of all our war records. It need not be a large building, but it must be noble, lifted above the level by marble steps. Avenues of trees should lead to it, and the whole place made as dignified and beautiful as possible. Such a building could probably be erected for $50,000 to $60,000, and who can say it would not be money well spent and an example for all times? I suggest that one half of the cost shall be borne by the Government of the Colony, and the balance raised by public subscription.
Yours truly,
W. G. GOSLING.

JOINT MEETING OF PARTIES.

Liberal Progressives Unite With Labor -- Messrs. J. T. Martin and Wm. Linegar Selected as Candidates--N. I. W. A. Rooms Unable to Contain Gathering

The campaign in the interests of the Liberal-Progressive-Labor candidates who will contest the forthcoming bye-election in St. John's West, was opened last night at a joint meeting of West End Liberal Progressive committees and Labor committees in the N.I.W.A. Rooms, Springdale Street. The candidates chosen were Messrs. J. T. Martin and W. J. Linegar.

At 7.30 the Liberal Progressive committee met, Mr. J. Fitzgibbon presiding. The chairman briefly outlined the object of the meeting, which firstly was to hear the candidates in the recent election address the committee, and secondly because of arrangements with the Labor Party to nominate one candidate for the bye-election pending.

Mr. J. R. Bennett, the successful candidate, being called upon dwelt at some length with issues before the people in the general election, the conduct of the campaign by their opponents, and what led to the defeat of his colleagues. Messrs. Mullaly and Martin had been loyal and true throughout the fight, which had been honestly and fairly fought, and his regrets were that they had not succeeded. To the committees who worked so energetically during the campaign he offered sincere thanks on behalf of himself and colleagues. He also referred to the manly and straightforward campaign put up by the Labor candidates, who though defeated had fought well. Not once during the elections did himself or colleagues in any way antagonize the Labor representatives. The uniting of the parties for the coming contest was the result of conference, and due consideration on the part of both sides, and he looked for successful results. The present representatives of St. John's West were not elected by a majority vote, and a contest was decided upon by the united Liberal Progressive-Labor parties to give the people another chance to express their opinions as to who would represent them. In his opinion it was right that a contest should be held, and he was quite sure that the people's choice would be Martin and Linegar.

Mr. Mullaly followed, and in thanking the old committee said no more enthusiastic or energetic body of men had come together. Extraordinary conditions arose, however, and his defeat with Mr. Martin followed. On this occasion he was voluntarily retiring from the contest, because he believed that Labor had its rights and these being recognized by the Opposition, he was willing to waive all claims he might have on that party in the interests of Labor. He was ready to stand loyally to Martin and Linegar, and whatever lay in his power to help towards their return he was willing to do. In concluding he asked that the Liberal Progressives and Labor put all their energies into the fight, to work day and night, and success was then assured.

Mr. Martin also thanked the committee for the great interest shown and the work done during the last campaign. He asked for the same loyal support in the coming fight, and assured the present that so far as he was concerned nothing would be left undone to merit their confidence and support.

A joint meeting of both Labor and Liberal Progressive committees was now held, and Mr. John Cadwell, one of the candidates of the Workingmen's Party, in the November election, was appointed chairman amidst great enthusiasm. Mr. J. Fitzgibbon was elected vice-chairman; Mr. C. J. Myler, Secretary and ex-Sergt. Jack Moakler, Asst-Secretary.

The chairman, after thanking the gathering for the honor conferred on him, invited Sir Michael Cashin to speak. The leader of the Opposition in an address of more than half an hour, set out in detail what led to the bringing together of the two parties to fight the coming bye-elections. He said it was prepared to stand by the Governments of the last ten years, and also the present Prime Minister's. All the sins of the Government of that time were thrown on him, but Mr. Squires, who held an executive seat in the same Government up to 1911, disclaimed any responsibility. It has been asked why the other districts had not been contested in the bye-elections. The answer was that these districts have decided by majorities in favor of the present Government, but so far as St. John's West was concerned, the majority had not decided, and it was to give the people a chance to decide that a contest would be held. So far as the Opposition was concerned, it was proposed to stand by the Labor Party's candidate, Mr. Linegar, on the floors of the Assembly, and he would pledge himself to-night publicly to that end, and as the campaign progressed every member of his party would individually do likewise. Sir Michael also dealt with the housing problem and other matters affecting the workmen, and contended that an easy solution of these matters was possible. But from a Government hostile to St. John's and its interests, very little could be forthcoming. If in the coming contest, Labor wanted to be represented on the floors of the Assembly with a strong combination be-

Mrs. McDonald Went for Days Unable to Eat

Sydney Woman was Hardly More Than Frame But Tanlac Soon Made Her Feel Fine.

"For the past seven years I have suffered from indigestion and stomach trouble and never found anything to help me until I began taking Tanlac," said Mrs. William W. McDonald, who resides on Prince street, Sydney, Nova Scotia, recently. Continuing, she said:

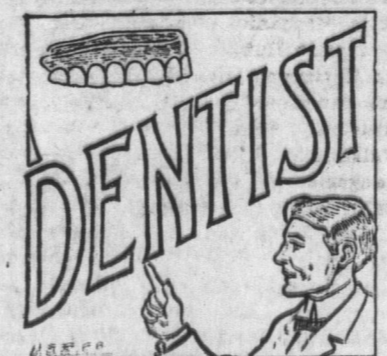

"I had scarcely any appetite at all and when I did manage to force down a little something it would sour and ferment and I would blast something dreadful. At times I would also become terribly nauseated when it would be utterly impossible for me to retain a thing, not even a glass of water. I finally was in such bad condition I would go for days without being able to eat a mouthful. I could get but little sleep, and felt tired and worn out all the time. I had no energy and my work was simply a burden to me, and most of the time I would just have to leave a great part of it undone. I would have the worst sort of headaches, that would nearly drive me wild. I lost weight until I was scarcely more than a frame and became so weak I thought I would just have to give up entirely."

"One day I saw a statement in a newspaper from a friend of mine in which she told of the remarkable benefit Tanlac had been to her, and this decided me to try it also. Well, when I started taking Tanlac I was looking so well, I could scarcely get about, but now, after taking only three bottles, my recovery is simply remarkable. I feel stronger than I have in years and am able to do all my own household work with the greatest ease. My stomach never gives me the least trouble, my appetite is just fine and everything I eat agrees with me perfectly. My headaches have all gone and I can sleep all night long as peacefully as a child. I have gained in weight considerably, and all my friends tell me they never saw me looking so well. Tanlac is certainly a great medicine, and I am glad to say a good word for it."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac Representative: in Harbor Buffet, by Thomas Wakely & Sons; in Placentia, by James Murphy & Son, and in Topsail by J. K. Bursell—adv't.

filled the position with much acceptance and dignity. Informing those present that the rooms would be open from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. daily, Sundays excepted, and he invited every member of the committee to enlist a friend to do so, so that at least 600 would be on the roll by Friday night, when a whirlwind campaign would be started, the like of which was never witnessed in St. John's or in the Dominion, and which would result in the absolute defeat of the Government candidates.

After a hearty vote of thanks had been passed the chairman, his very valuable services, the meeting which was one of the most enthusiastic ever held in the city, closed at 11 o'clock with the singing of the National Anthem.

Passengers Story of Collision.

Richard Croker, Tammany Poli- tician.

Halifax, Dec. 8.—Richard Croker, eminent New York politician, for many years ringmaster of the celebrated Tammany Hall faction, but now retired and able to gratify the dearest ambition of every Irish-born American to spend a portion of his well-earned years of leisure in Erin, was among the passengers on the Cunard liner Carmania, which docked at pier 2 at nine o'clock this morning. He was accompanied by Mrs. Croker. He has been in Ireland since the early summer, and his health, which was then impaired, has been much improved by the climate of his natal land. When interviewed he spoke of the collision between the Carmania and the Maryland off Cape Race, eschewed the subject of politics, and registered brief, but emphatic opposition to prohibition. He will not en- train here, but will remain on the Carmania until she sails for New York, probably Wednesday.

We were somewhat afraid that if we clambered on board the Carmania before ten, that Mr. Croker might not be numbered among the early risers. We were mistaken for when we tapped shyly at the door of A-25, which, by the way happens to be our lucky cabin on the Carmania, everyone in it is always awfully nice to us—a feminine voice responded and the swinging hinges disclosed Mrs. Croker, very charming in tweeds. She said that the famous gentleman of Dublin and Gotham was on deck and, flinging on a huge woolly scarf, she led us to him.
The air was grey and sticky with a peculiarly disagreeable fog, but Croker was striding up and down with surprising briskness. He looked more like a man in his fifties than a near octogenarian, his hair was white, his eyes sparkling, and his face radiant with Irish kindli- ness. He puffed constantly at a cigar and his fingers played with his watch chain. During the inter- view he kept pacing up and down and was not particularly talkative, most of the information coming from Mrs. Croker.
The first question was about the collision.

"It gave us a scare," said Mr. Croker.
"It certainly did," agreed the lady.
Explains the Collision.
"Another minute and every life might have been lost. It was this way." Croker took his knife and began to sketch an imaginary diagram on the railing. Then he borrowed pencil and paper and drew two little lines, showing the course of the Mar- yland and the manner in which she had struck the Carmania near the stern, glancing aside. "That the accident wasn't more serious," he said, "was due to the prompt action of the crew. The Carmania put on full speed when she found that the Maryland was head- ed toward her, otherwise she would have hit her amidships."
"It would have broken through Mr. Croker's cabin," interpolated Mrs. Croker. "There was quite a lot of damage done. A number of plates were broken and the water flooded in. The people in the aft cabin might have been killed if they had been in them. The accident occurred just at eight o'clock at night. The fog was very thick and later a heavy sea came up."
"Mountains!" added Mr. Croker, swinging around on his six foot prom- enade. "No lifeboat could have weathered it. But for the presence of mind of our crew, there might have been an accident like the Titanic or the Lusitania, worse, perhaps, because there were more people on board of the Carmania and Maryland. It is a miracle that it was averted, and it was only strange that two boats could col- lide in the open sea."
"Was there any panic?" we asked.
"No," said Mrs. Croker. "It was over too quickly. I knew that the collision was coming because I heard the siren of a strange steamer very close to us. After the crash, when I looked out in the corridor and saw no one and could not find a stewardess, I was a little alarmed, but I found out that all the stewards and stewardess- es had immediately reported, as they have been trained to do."

Training School Closes.

Last night some 35 Returned Sold- iers and Sailors who are being train- ed in Mechanical Engineering at the Recreation Hut closed their course for the Christmas season with a concert and dance, Mr. A. H. Whitman, the principal, with Messrs. Thomson, Walsh and Green, looked after the management of the affair. During the night, Dr. W. W. Blackall, Vocational Officer, visited the party, and on be- half of the Civil Re-Establishment Committee wished the veterans a happy Xmas. Hon. Justice Kent, Capt. Leo Murphy and Mr. H. E. Cowan were also present. The school will re-as- semble after the New Year.

Disabled Ship Reported.

Captain Mitchell of the Rosalind re- ports that at 6 p.m. on Sunday a wire- less message was received from Cape Race saying that the S. S. Kamerina, was in distress with her circulating pump broken. She was in the trough of the sea and unmanageable in lat. 48.85 N., long. 48.52 W. A ship with the call sign E. O. V., supposed to be the Messala of the C. F. R. Ocean Ser- vice, twenty four hours run from that position, receiving the S.O.S. call started for the disabled ship at 4.25 p.m. At about 9 o'clock yesterday morning the Kamerina was in lat. 49. 02 N. long. 47.29 W. and expected to drift east magnetic at the rate of 3 miles per hour. All her boats, except one had been stove in. Up to the ar- rival of the Rosalind in port nothing further was heard of her. When the Rosalind made Halifax Harbor, from New York, there were three trans- Atlantic liners have too outside being unable to enter the port on account of a fierce storm then raging. It is not likely that the ship will get away before Saturday as she has a big ship- ment of Xmas goods, and a large quantity of freight, outward is offer- ing.

Too Much for Him.

When it came to acting, Johnson thought he had Oscar Asche and Owen Nares beaten to a frazzle!
As a first step on his way to fame, he joined the local dramatic club. And because there were ten small speaking parts in the next "production," and ten male members, he got a place on the programme right off. It wasn't a long one. He had to exclaim: "Hark! Methinks I heard the sound of a pistolshot!"

"He did work hard at it, poor chap, and on the night of the show felt quite ready. His cue was, of course, the report of the pistol. Johnson was standing in the middle of the stage, his nerves all strung up.

At the sound of the explosion, he jumped three feet into the air and squealed out:
"Great Scott! What's that?"

Spencer College Prize Distribution.

The annual distribution of prizes to the pupils of Bishop Spencer College took place at the Casino last night before a very large gathering. The proceedings opened with the one-act operetta Florida, or The Rose and Pearl in which the principal characters were taken by Aubrey Chafe, Constance Crane, Sybil Chalker, Audrey Stirling, Anna Wilson, Jean Ayre, Shirley Green, and Gladys Brooks. The presentation was an excellent one, the singing and dancing earning the highest praise for all taking part and their instructor, Mr. H. W. Stirling. Following the playlet, His Excellency the Governor and Miss Harris who were accompanied by Capt. Hamilton, P.S., His Lordship Bishop White, Rev. Canon Bolt, Dr. Blackall, Mr. J. W. Withers, Mr. H. W. Stirling, Miss Stirling principal of the College and other ladies of the staff took their seats on the platform, when the annual report was presented by Mr. B. E. S. Dunfield, Secretary of the Board of Directors. This showed that the past year had been the best in the history of the college, splendid success being attained by pupils in every grade. Mr. Dunfield dwelt on the great improvement in class rooms afforded by the taking over of the British Hall where some 250 pupils are now under instructions, and paid tribute to the Spencer Club in assisting affairs of the College. He also referred to the splendid physical training afforded the students by Miss Stirling and her staff and announced that the operetta would be repeated this afternoon at the Casino at 3 o'clock in aid of the Orphanage Fund. The prizes were then graciously presented by Miss Harris. Following is the list:—

Prizes have been kindly presented by Lady Bowring, Mrs. John Brown, Mrs. Bolt, Miss Bremner, Mrs. Clayton, Mrs. S. W. Cornick, Miss Kelly, Miss Carmichael, Mrs. I. R. McNetley, Mrs. Archibald Macpherson, Mrs. Noseworthy, Mrs. J. D. Rendell, Miss Worrell, Miss Somerton, Dr. Blackall, Sir Joseph Outerbridge, Mr. T. J. Seymour and Mr. H. W. Stirling. Following the distribution of the awards, Dr. Blackall congratulated the pupils on their splendid performance and the teaching staff on the excellent results in the exams. He spoke of the work of Miss Lillie who is training as a teacher at a college in Truro and of the many institutions in Canada affording the higher courses, and hoped to see such advanced instruction here in the near future, as it makes for the prosperity of all. His Excellency the Governor, in a brief address, congratulated the staff on the results of their labours and expressed the great pleasure it had given him to witness the operetta. A vote of thanks to His Excellency and Miss Harris was proposed by Mr. J. W. Withers, seconded by Rev. Herbert Rendell, B. F. Gough, the unavoidable absence of Lady Harris, and tendered by His Lordship the Bishop. The evening closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Capping His Dream.

Having given instructions to the "boots" that he was to be called at 4.30 the next morning the traveller went up to bed.

The bed was an example of what a bed ought to be. He was very tired, and was soon in dreamland. The night wore on, and our traveller was just booking a five thousand pound order—dreamland is the one country where that kind of thing happens occasionally—when bang! bang! came at the door.

He turned over drowsily, and was about to receive the money in advance when—bang! came something at the door again.

"Who's there?" he asked his pillow. "Me, sir!" said a voice. "Please come quickly, sir and sign this receipt, sir."

"Receipt?" he repeated vaguely. "Yes, sir. Most important, sir. Must be signed at once, sir!"

With ideas of checks, orders, legacies, and registered letters floating dimly through his brain the traveller staggered out of bed and switched on the light. As he did so a piece of paper was pushed under the door. He seized it and read:

"Called at 4.30, as requested. Please sign here."

Where Fish Explode.

To the Russian people Lake Baikal, in Eastern Siberia, is a holy lake, and they believe both the lake and its surrounding country are endowed with supernatural powers and inhabited by unearthly beings.

All kinds of weird tales mingle with their explanations of any feature of the lake. Even so simple an object as a great rock lying in the middle of a river just where it flows from Lake Baikal takes on a mysterious significance. If the stone were to slip from its place, they say, the whole of Lake Baikal would pour out of its basin and flood the river and probably the continent.

But there are actually many strange things about Lake Baikal. There is, for example, a species of fish that inhabits the deepest part. These fish have been seen by few persons, for as soon as they are lifted out of their accustomed atmosphere of high water pressure they explode.

Aerial Lighthouses.

By erecting an aerial lighthouse on Hounslow aerodrome the British Air Ministry appear to have taken the first step towards the realization of a proper service of commercial aeroplanes which will travel by night as well as by day.

On several occasions of late machines arriving from the Continent have been greatly inconvenienced by the early darkness, with the consequent danger of having to land on a strange aerodrome under unfavorable conditions.

Many authorities have urged the adoption of some form of aerial lighthouse, but it has been left to the Air Ministry to take practical steps to make night flying a commercial possibility.

Each evening for a period at sunset the lighthouse in the aerodrome will give a series of flashes, and, in addition, landing flares and searchlights to illuminate the aerodrome will be operated.

If notification is made to Hounslow illuminations will be provided at any hour of the night for machines wishing to land.

There is now little reason why mails should not be carried to France during the night.

Press and Peerage.

A notable figure seen recently in the Peers' Gallery at the House of Commons was Lord Russel of Liverpool, a distinguished journalist, who numbered Gladstone amongst his friends.

His presence as a peer of the realm reminded one that the personal connection between journalism and the peerage dates back beyond the time when newspaper proprietors and writers had titular honours bestowed upon them.

The Cecils are of the old aristocracy, but how many people know that the present marquis and his "illustrious brothers," as Mr. Timothy Healy once called them, are, on the maternal side, the grandsons of a man who was once a member of the Press Gallery?

The late Lord Salisbury, twice Prime Minister, struggled as a younger son before he came to the title, and wrote for the Press. He married a daughter of Baron Alderson, of the Exchequer, who in his youth had been a Parliamentary Journalist.

The late Lord Russell of Killowen, Lord Chief Justice (father of the new judge), was also in his youth a "gallery" man.

Heading for Christmas with those superb quality lines whose merits have marked the stages in "KEARNEY FIRSTS" progress on the road to his "Victory Xmas". Individually, the greatest leaders from our lines have kept the pace set by the "KEARNEY FIRST" prestige; their wear-famed qualities have been made known to you in every separate announcement. You have seen their points analyzed; you know our goods as we know them. You have read our claims for service—our guarantee—our challenge—unaccepted.

BUT—STOP!

We made one claim, because we believed it then—"the Costliest Store in Town". Our throne has been usurped. We have fallen. Our goods have not gone back one whit in quality; they are still the finest products of the greatest markets. They are still sought after by men who want to pay for the best. But we believed that because we had world-famed trade marks on what we sell that our prices must have been higher because the quality was higher. We have deceived ourselves; our prices are LOWER on many lines. It is true. One word for you—compare! We give our prices here for every article. Mark what others charge. The difference between buying elsewhere and buying here goes right back into your pocket in what we save you.

RETURN OF THE PRINCE OF WALES.

The Prince of Wales returns from his North American trip to take up a new position in England, for the verdict of the New World, although not readily accepted here in most things, is generally right about personalities. It was thought at first that the visit to the United States was a somewhat difficult experiment for English Royalty. Every ordinary English visitor there knows the circumspection demanded in touching on American institutions and methods, scenery, and people. Our diplomats in America have found orange skins and cellars flaps wherever they moved. The Prince, however, seems to have come triumphantly through his speeches and remarks. He has been fairly loquacious and no one has called him "reserved." Yet he has made no mistakes. If not witty, he was always bright, and his look of enjoying everything did the rest. In Canada his success was quite a great. I have spoken with several Canadian business men who were present at receptions of the Prince and who knew what was being said about him, and the general opinion there was that he was a live man with a quick uptake. An instance of this that I have not seen mentioned here may be given. At one city after the Prince had been made an honorary Doctor of Laws the Mayor said to him, "Well, Prince, what sort of doctor are you?" The Prince took in the full import of the question and replied: "I'm a doctor all right—would you like a line for a bottle or a barrel?" This greatly delighted the city.

FEWER CHILDREN'S PLAYS.

The coming Christmas will see fewer pantomimes and plays for children than there have been within memory. The reason is not necessarily any decrease in the demand for such entertainments. Good children's play is certain of crowded houses for seven or eight weeks. But theatrical impresarios are either too busy preparing spring productions, or doing too well, for any change to be necessary. The average child of to-day seems to be as pleased with a revue or a musical comedy as the child of ten years ago was with the usual pantomime. As far as is known recently, Drury Lane and the Lyceum will be the only theatres in London to provide pantomime; while "Peter Pan" will reappear at the New Theatre, and "Where the Rainbow Ends" will be put on at the Victoria Palace for matinees. In the suburbs there is a marked decrease in the number of pantomimes, and this is probably due to the ever-increasing popularity of the cinematograph. In fact, the proprietors of many suburban picture houses have arranged for the films of well-known pantomimes to be shown after Christmas.

FRENCH UNIVERSITY FOR LONDON.

Unlike our own, French propaganda has never been more active nor more lavish in a financial sense than since the Armistice. I am officially informed that the French Government, with the concurrence of the French Parliament, has voted an annual grant of not less than £20,180 for the establishment of a fully fledged French Faculty of Arts in London. This faculty will probably be so extended as to include a section devoted to political, economic, and administrative sciences. It represents an enlargement of the existing "Institut Français de Londres," which has done such excellent pioneer work for the spreading of French culture in this country. This Institute, was, as remains, what we should describe on this side as an affiliated college or recognized school of Lille University, and it is likely that the new university professors will be responsible to the academic authorities of Lille. But, although the studies of the faculty will be subject to the Lille rector, the general policy and direction will be largely autonomous, and in the hands of a council, where, side by side with prominent representatives of French diplomacy and education in London, we find numerous British representatives. The sum of £120,000 has been voted for a French University and French Schools in Brazil.

The Great War has been responsible for many and various issues of postage stamps, especially since the signing of the Armistice. All the newly formed States of Europe have competed with each other in the production of postal labels, most of which have been in the nature of emergency or provisional issues. Such issues are naturally restricted, and are eagerly sought after by stamp collectors. The most extraordinary of these provisional stamps is undoubtedly the five kopeks red of the Republic of Lithuania, or Lettland. When the Germans hurriedly evacuated Riga, in 1918, a parcel of German ordnance stamps was left behind, and were at once used for the manufacture of postage stamps owing to the dearth of paper. The size of the maps permitted 228 stamps to be printed on the reverse side, the gum being applied to the maps themselves. A collection of 71 different maps was shown privately this week by R. H. Marmers. Both from the historical and philatelic point of view this collection is most interesting, as it shows the turn of the tide which swept the invaders out of Riga. Collectors will cherish this stamp as a curiosity, owing to the map printed on the reverse side. This is a very unusual occurrence, probably the only other case to approach it being when Nicaragua, in 1911, printed postage stamps on the back of ordinary revenue stamps. Russia, too, in 1915, issued three stamps, on thick paper, having an inscription on the left which made them available as bank notes for silver currency.

WHIST.

Symptomatic of the present thirst for money, and the ease with which channels whereby it can be diverted to the pocket are found, is the increasing vogue of whist drives for cash prizes. The card table and the dancing floor share in London to-day the greenest laurels of public patronage, but with the growth of the restless craving for games of gain, whist promises to outstrip its active partner. There are even now as many drives as dances, all with tempting prizes, and accessible to anyone at a florin for fees. In some cases as much as £60 are reaped by the winner. Both as a symptom and questionable inducement, moralists decry the growing craze; but whist lovers of the Mrs. Battle type, who enjoy a quiet rubber on Saturday nights and conscientiously cease at twelve midnight, may also regard these new means of money-making as a deplorable and debasing trespassing upon sentimental preserves and a distortion of a virtuous pastime.

CHESS AND THE COMMONS.

The House of Commons is responding with enthusiasm to the invitation of Senor Capablanca, the famous chess player, to encounter simultaneously any number of members of Parliament up to forty. Up to now about thirty members have enrolled for the tournament, which is to take place on December 2nd, while others have given notice of their desire to enter the lists, and Press Gallery will be represented, one of the members having very recently acquired the rare distinction of securing a draw with the redoubtable "master" in a stiffly-contested competition at the National Liberal Club.

NEW GERMAN "EVIDENCE."

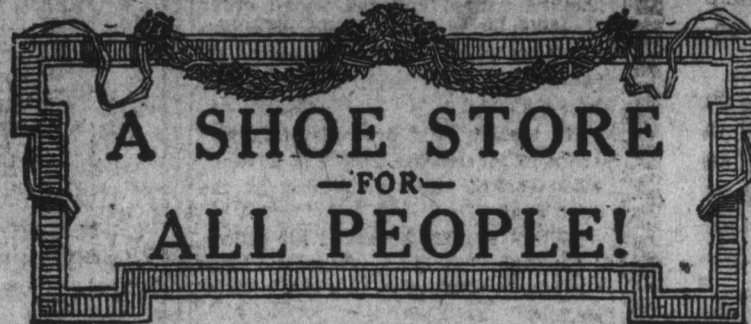

Lloyd George has on occasion given the Germans a chance to use his words for their own ends in the days of war, but he little thought when he placed a wreath on the whitehall Cenotaph that his written tribute—"A humble token of gratitude to those who died that we might live more abundantly"—would be taken by the German newspapers as an admission, "astounding in its frankness," of the real objects for which England went to war. Yet so they do, for it means, they say, that England's object was "the destruction of a successful competitor in the world's market." As an effort of German deduction this surely is not to be surpassed, and in its grotesque nonsense far exceeds their war invention (which amused all England) of the calling out of the Guards from Shepherd's Bush "to quell riots in the pimpurpious of Regent Street."

HORRORS OF THE ORCHESTRA.

Modern composers for the orchestra have accustomed us for some time to an extensive use of what we might call the top department of the orchestra. Tambourines, castanets, cymbals (both gonged and clashed), xylophones, triangles, and various kinds of drums are now ordinarily employed. Even respectable instruments like the fiddle are made to do things they were never meant to do, and make noises that would have infuriated Amati or Guarnerius. But the innovations of Berlioz and Strauss pale into insignificance beside the repertory of unpleasant sounds introduced by the nigger minstrels who are so fashionable to dance to nowadays. They give us the noises of dropping bricks, breaking crockery, tearing

A Gentle Hint.

An elderly examiner was putting a young medical student through his paces.

"Supposing," he began, "there was a gunpowder explosion and a man was blown into the air. You, as the nearest doctor, being called in, what would you do?"

"Wait for him to come down again," was the prompt reply.

"Well, let us take another case. A man has dug a pit forty feet deep. At the top he slips and falls right to the bottom again. What would you advise?"

"Fill up the pit, and save funeral expenses!" answered the student glibly. The examiner snorted angrily, and then barked:

"If I was to raise my foot and give you a kick, what muscles would be called into play?"

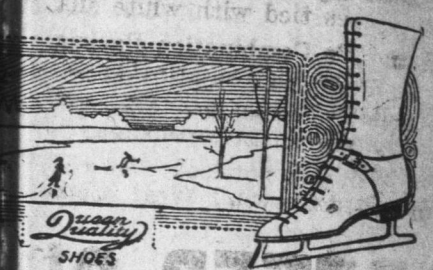

With a steely light in his eyes, the young man retorted:

"The flexible and extensive muscles of my right arm!"

The Will of a Boozehoarder.

Know all men by these presents, that I, John A. Boozehoarder, being of sound mind and body, do hereby make and declare this my last will and test-ment:

Firstly, I do desire that all my legal debts be paid, including my funeral expenses, and unpaid bills for two cases of bourbon, five bottles of gin and three bottles of rye, which will be found among my effects (unless one of the chief mourners should happen to get to them first).

Secondly, to my beloved wife, who has stood by me all these years and often been just as thirsty as I was,
I hereby bequeath all my sixteen-year-old stock, which will be found in a secret panel near the fireplace in the library. Also, in token of my love and affection, she shall have the last three bottles of Scotch, which are secreted in the piano.

Thirdly, to my dear sons, Tom and Jerry, I bequeath three cases each of fairly good rye, which I have managed to hold on to, and which I hope they will enjoy, both the flavor and the fullness therof.

Fourthly, to my respected relative,
Auntie Saloon, I bequeath three bottles of near-beer, which I have never been able to give away, and which I have been afraid to pour into the river for fear of polluting the water supply.

Fifthly, I do request that one pint bottle of bourbon, which I have deposited in the safety vault at the bank, be placed by my side during the final obsequies, so that in case there should be any delay in crossing the Jordan
I will be fortified.

Sixthly, the remainder of my estate shall be turned over to the rest of my relations to quarrel over as they see fit.—N. Y. American.

"Starboard" to Go

FOR "RIGHT" ON MERCHANT SHIPS.
Captain C. A. McAllister, Secretary of the Navigation Laws Revision Committee of the United States Shipping Board, said recently that the traditional sea terms of "starboard" and "port" may soon be changed to "right" and "left," respectively, in the American merchant marine. The committee will act on the matter shortly.

The reason for seeking this change is that American boys are entering the life on the ocean as they have never done before, and the strange words work a great deal of confusion to young men reared in the corn and wheat fields of the Middle West, or,
in fact, any part of the country.

The words "starboard" and "port" were discarded on the ships of the United States Navy a number of years ago by Secretary Daniels, who then received a great deal of adverse criticism, but the shippers are now gradually coming around to his point of view. Captain McAllister said.—N. Y.

Why Viz. and Oz?

Do you know what these everyday signs mean, and their origin?

Viz. is the first two letters of videlicet, a Latin word meaning "namely." The a is a corruption of an ancient sign, something like a 3, that was placed at the end of the abbreviated word, in course of time this 3 has become z.

The same thing applies to oz., the abbreviation for ounce.

The letters lb., standing for pounds in weight, are the first and third of the Latin word libra.

Cwt. (hundredweight) and dwt.
(pennyweight) are also abbreviations of Latin words. C is the Latin numeral for a hundred, d the first letter of denarius (penny), and wt. is short for the word "weight."

Account current is written a/c.
L. s. d. are the first letters of libra,
solidi, and denarii, all Latin words,
meaning pounds, shillings, and pence.
Sic. meaning "literally," idem, meaning "as before stated," and this, meaning "in the same place," are also from the Latin.

Microbe Methuselabs.

Is it possible that the latest scientific discovery may bring a return of the Egyptian plagues or the Black Death—the most terrible epidemics in the history of the world?

The question arises from the announcement of Dr. Galippo, of the French Academy of Science, that in Egyptian papyrus (manuscripts) twenty centuries and more old, he has found living micro-organisms. He cites this as the most remarkable discovery to which his investigations have led, although it is equally true of documents dating back, for instance, to the Middle Ages.

Modern hygienic conditions, of course, are vastly different to those of the early Egyptian days or Middle Ages, but there is a possibility that those germs of centuries ago might convey the old plagues.

For they are very much alive! The microbes discovered by Dr. Galippo were subjected to the usual test of heat, and although the temperature was carried to 243 degrees Fahrenheit, they hopped about like two-year-olds in spite of their 2,900 years.

"Evangeline," The Perfect Shoe for Women.

THIS IS THE HOME OF GOOD SHOES FOR LADIES
 It is with a feeling of pride and pleasure that we announce the arrival of our Women's footwear for the Fall and Winter Seasons.

Evangeline Shoes are far superior to the ordinary sort of Shoes, that can be had at every store, where Women's Shoes are sold.

They come to us direct from the workshops of one of the world's noted makers of Women's Shoes.

There's many a new style feature in the Fall models, and we will take the greatest pleasure in showing our lady patrons the handsome Footwear that will be in vogue during the coming season.
