The Mystery of Rutledge Hall

OR

"The Cloud With a Silver Lining"

CHAPTER XXVIII

It was the height of the season at Brighton, and Stephen Daunt had taken a house on the Parade for his young wife when she was sufficiently recovered from her severe illness to bear the journey. Dr. Arnold had ordered her entire change of air and scene, and Brighton had been fixed upon in preference to other resorts nearer home, because it possessed so many amusements and excursions. Its chief draw-back was its inaccessibility from Ashford, the trains being so inconvenient and so unaccommodating as to necessitate a day's journey or thereabouts. But when this was pointed out to Stephen as a disadvantage, he smiled bitterly and said it would not matter much—If Sidney liked Brighton, the personal inconvenience to himself would not signify.

"It will not do to send the child to a place entirely given over to invalids," said Mr. Daunt, on discussing the matter with his son. "It would do her more harm than good to be watching a succession of invalid-chairs and invalid-faces. She wants brightening up. Send Dolly with her to Brighton, Lady Agnes and her family are there, and your aunt is a kind motherly woman who will look after Sidney as if she were one of her own daughters."

So Lady Agnes Burton, Lady Eva's sister, was written to, and she had chosen a house for Sidney, and some of the Easthope servants were sent to get it ready for their young mistress, and Lady Agnes was very busy and a little fussy, and her daughters were full of pleasant anticipations about their cousin's arrival.

Lady Agnes had not made such a brilliant match—peculiarly—as her sister Lady Eva. Her husband was a baronet certainly; but his rental to his family was an unlimited one. There were Burtons of all ages and sizes, Sidney thought languidly once or twice, when she was first introduced to the family—a ceremony which threatened, as she said to herself, never to come to an end. They were young men—pleasant, agreeable young fellows—one quartered at Preston with his regiment, another home from college for the vacation. There were pretty grown-up daughters—two "outs," one coming "out," and one or two more in the school-room; and there were three chubby mites in the nurseries in the big house in Sussex Square, who were Sidney's great delight and whose chatter and comical loving ways contributed as much to her improvement as did Lady Agnes's motherly attention and cheerful kindness.

But the getting strong was a weary process, especially to one who brought so little heart to it as Sidney did, and a slow one. She was better, certainly; the fresh clear breezes were bringing a faint wild-rose tinge to her thin cheek and the strength was coming back to her feeble limbs, but not as quickly as it should have done.

She was a very obedient patient, and followed her father's instructions patiently and submissively. She drove out every day with Lady Agnes, or Dolly, or one or more of her pretty young cousins; she took tonics with equal regularity; she did not mope; there was always a merry party of young people round her sofa at afternoon tea—she was already able to enter into their pleasures, and even to share them, so far as her extreme delicacy would allow; but the progress she made was most unsatisfactory. Was it any wonder? If ever a poor aching human heart was breaking under the burden of a terrible secret, under a ceaseless, never-ending dread, Sidney Daunt's was. Ever present with her haunting her in her drives, in her lonely hours, in her sleep, was the dread that Stephen's crime might be brought home to him. At the gay sociable afternoon kettledrums the same dread was there; the door never opened suddenly but that she started nervously; a telegram was never left at the door but that she was agitated at the verge of faintness; and, though she tried desperately to conceal her emotion from those around her, she could not quite do so, although they naturally attributed it to her delicate health.

To Dolly the visit to Brighton was a very pleasant one. She enjoyed the society of her cousins to the utmost, rode with the young men, walked and worked and preened with the girls, whose admiration for their dainty little cousin—whose dresses were so exquisite and whose allowance seemed unlimited—was most sincere and utterly devoid of envy; and, moreover, Sidney, who was too unselfish to consider her own wishes before Dolly's, had written a pretty note to Lloyd Miller, asking him to come and stay with his pretty fiancée—an invitation which the young barrister was only too glad to accept. His visits were flying ones lasting from Saturday until Monday; and once or twice Stephen Daunt, still terribly anxious and unhappy about his wife's health, had come from Ashford for a similar space of time, alleging press of business as an excuse for not making a longer stay, when Dolly pressed it upon him, although his sister saw that he looked wistfully at the fair pale face of his wife, as if she wished she would second the entreaties. But Sidney never did, although the only few moments of comparative peace of mind she had were while Stephen was with her and she was sure that he was safe as yet.

Thus it chanced that one Saturday, as Lloyd Miller was hurrying along the platform at Victoria station to catch the afternoon express to Brighton, he came face to face with Stephen Daunt, bent on the same errand.

"Heureux rencontre!" exclaimed the young barrister, gayly. "Going to Brighton, I hope, and going to stay a few days at least? You look at it some fresh sea-breeze would do you good."

"Yes, I am going to Brighton," Stephen said slowly; but he did not say that he meant to stay there even for a few days; and, when they were seated opposite to each other in the railway-compartment of which they were the sole occupants, Lloyd saw that he looked haggard and worn and weary, as if with days and nights of worry.

"You don't look very fit," said Miller, in his kindly cordial tones. "A week or two at Brighton would do you no end of good."

"Would it?" questioned Stephen languidly. "I don't know. I want a more complete change, I think. As soon as Sidney is pretty well, I think I shall carry out my old intention of going abroad."

"It will be some time before Sidney will be strong enough for any long voyage," Lloyd said quietly, unfolding his newspaper.

"I am afraid it will," Stephen answered quietly. "But I should go alone, of course."

"Then things are as they were between you still?"

"Things are even worse," Stephen replied bitterly. "The hope you gave me was not a long-lived one, Lloyd. Let me tell you how soon it was destroyed."

Very attentively, and with much sympathy, the young barrister listened to his friend's story of his meeting with his wife at Lang station. He said nothing until Stephen had ended his short sad narrative, and even then he was silent for some minutes.

"Do I understand rightly that you offered to have an inquiry made into the Rutledge tragedy, and that Sidney refused?" he said quietly then.

"She shrunk from the suggestion with horror," Stephen answered.

"And yet she had been so eager and anxious for the inquiry at one time."

"Yes, my refusal to permit it made our married life what it is," Stephen answered wearily. "And yet I did it for the best. Heaven knows! She married, I believe, for no other purpose than to be free and have the means to prove his innocence, and it was no doubt a cruel disappointment to her, poor girl! I forbade her taking any steps in the matter, because I knew it would end only in misery for her."

SICK FOR YEARS

Wants Women to Know How She Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Cornwall, Ont. "I am now giving your medicine a fair trial and it is surely doing me good and I am going to keep on taking it. I used to feel so tired in the morning that I didn't want to get up, but that feeling is leaving me now. I also sleep better and feel more like working. For seven or eight years I have had headaches, tired feelings, pains in my back and across my body. I read letters in the newspapers saying what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done others. My husband says I quit too soon, but I am not going to stop taking the Vegetable Compound until Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Purifier until I am better and haven't an ache or a pain. Let it be the right way! I have great faith in your medicine. There must be good when those who take them speak so highly of them. I am recommending them to my friends and I will gladly answer letters from women asking about them."—Mrs. B. H. Murderer's Axe Found by Police at Rougemont

IMPORTANT CLUE DISCOVERED—THIRTY FEET FROM SCENE OF CRIME

Provincial police officers combing the Rougemont district, where stands the house where Charles Bernard and his wife were beaten to death by unknown thugs last Friday night, have discovered a blood-covered axe with which the murderers did their work, it was announced by D. D. Lorrain, chief of Provincial Detectives last night.

This is the most important clue that has so far been discovered in the case, detectives declared. The weapon, which is smeared with blood from top to bottom, bears traces of finger-prints. The axe was brought to detective headquarters last night for examination by finger-print experts.

If any finger-prints are found they might lead to the arrest of the murderer within a very short time, police state.

The axe was found hidden in a clump of bushes about thirty feet from the cellar door through which the assassins made their escape.

The finding of the axe supports the opinion detectives formed soon after the discovery of the murder, that it was the work of at least two persons. The blood-stained iron bar, made from a steel cart-wheel tire, was wielded by one man, while the axe was used by the second.

Killed By Axe.

In the opinion of officers, who have been working on the case since last Monday, Charles Bernard was killed by a blow from the axe. The wound which caused his death was a large and gaping one at the top of his skull. The iron bar, found shortly after the discovery of the tragedy, was heavy enough to have caused the injuries which killed Mrs. Bernard, detectives maintain.

Perpetrators of the crime are believed to have entered the Bernard home with the intention of robbing the bank, and not of committing murder, police declare. Evidence to support this theory was discovered with the finding of the axe, which seems to have been thrown away hurriedly. There seemed to have been no attempt to hide the weapon. Detective Gorman, who found it, says, "It is believed that the man who used the axe carried it with him from the house and cast it from him as he ran towards the nearby railway tracks. The fact that he did not take more time to hide the axe is ample proof that he was extremely frightened, police believe."

If the original intention had been to kill the bank manager and his wife, it is thought some care would have been exercised to destroy evidence. If only one man had been implicated, Mrs. Bernard would have had time to raise an alarm while the culprit struggled with her husband, it was pointed out.

The two men intended to rob the bank, but were unable to locate the money. Therefore, it is believed they went upstairs to Bernard's living quarters with the intention of forcing him to reveal the hiding place. Unexpectedly he put up a struggle, and the attackers were forced to murder him to escape.

Police declare this is the most probable theory, and it is from this angle that they are working to solve the mystery.—Montreal Star.

Near East Causes Britain Worry

PERSIAN AND SYRIAN INCIDENTS 'OCCUPY MINDS AT DOWNING STREET.'

LONDON, Nov. 9.—The situation in the Near East is causing the gravest anxiety. The Government was fully prepared for a change in Persia caused by the dethronement of the Shah, which is regarded in foreign office circles as purely an internal matter which is not causing any worry. However, those who know Persia well say that the Shah's removal is tangible evidence of the progress of the Soviet in the Near and Middle East, although Riza Khan is reported to be more of a monarchist than a Republican.

Nevertheless, the Soviet Government has been very friendly towards Riza Khan, and counting on their support he has been able to establish his influence. The British are waiting to see what he will do now, but they credit him with establishing some form of internal order and of reorganizing the army which will make him less dependent on Soviet support than he is at present.

The situation in Syria is causing far more anxiety in Downing Street. The French are known to be in a most precarious position, being surrounded by hostile tribes, and may at any moment be in such a predicament that it will be difficult for them to maintain their position in Syria. Yet so strong is the French determination to maintain their friendship with Turkey, and to uphold its prestige in the Near East that it is exceedingly unlikely that the French Government will adopt the suggestion put forward in Paris that they clear out of Syria.

The British are counting on France's moderation to secure some amelioration of the situation, but it is doubted if France will be able now to find a solution without a good deal of further bloodshed, that may even set wide areas afire.

All the colors of the spectrum may be utilized for different complaints, and in future doctors may describe their patients by their color rather than by their symptoms, said Lord Clifford, who added: "One shade of red is the most effective in all cases of blood poison."

Schooner Manned by Eskimo Crew Now at Liverpool

MONTREAL, Nov. 3.—Unique in the annals of Arctic navigation is the bringing down the Chesterfield inlet bordering on the 64th degree to Liverpool, N.S., a distance of nearly 3,000 miles, of a Northern trading schooner named by Paul Hooded Eskimos. The schooner Jean Revillon, is a fur trading craft belonging to Revillon Freres of Montreal. It was built in 1923, and since then has plied the Arctic waters north and west of Chesterfield Inlet. To overhaul the vessel, it was necessary to bring it to civilization to Shelburne, N.S. In charge of Capt. W. H. Robertson, a Newfoundland, and Mrs. C. J. King, of Montreal, an engineer, the vessel left on August first, with a crew of four Eskimos. Taking the Hudson Straits route, the schooner plodded its way through fierce gales. The whole of the journey was a perilous undertaking. Three weeks into, the Jean Revillon arrived at Liverpool, N.S., on Sunday night. The Captain, engineer and crew thanked that the voyage was nearly at an end. The crew are stated to have been profcient and the experiment has proved successful. It has never before been thought advisable to take Eskimos out of their own sphere, but this has proved that the feat can be done.

For about a year the native crew has worked on the vessel and they have had a good training. Although excellent seamen in their own waters, it was thought that the voyage so far south would be too much for them. The climate south does not agree with them and their journey north is being arranged as expeditiously as possible.

$27,000,000 to Improve Kansas

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—To speed civic improvements Kansas City proposes to spend $27,000,000 within the next few years. Voters will have an opportunity November 3 to act upon 25 bond proposals adopted by the city council. To cope with growing traffic congestion an expenditure of $7,500,000 is proposed for opening and widening traffic ways. This is the largest single item, but other proposals bring the traffic bill up to more than $11,000,000.

Parks and beautification would cost another $7,000,000, with more than $4,000,000 to be spent in acquiring and beautifying the section around the union station and the Liberty memorial, which has been envisioned as a civic center.

Sign boards perched on hills overlooking the $2,000,000 memorial and union station plaza will go if the bond issue is authorized by the voters for the purchase of adjacent property. Another proposal calls for $500,000 for a municipal auditorium.

For a municipal air field, bonds of half a million dollars would be issued and $5,000,000 would be added for better tourist camps.

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

Nov. 9th—Talking this day with Mr. Parsons, that is Governor of the Prison, he praises my journal beyond my expectations and says 'tis not with the desire to flatter that he tells me 'tis the most interesting feature in the Telegram sheet. He tells me also of the early days of the Telegram sheet, and how he was at one time editor, reporter and compositor. Indeed, 'tis a thing to marvel at that the sheet as it is at present should have grown from such small beginnings.

At noon, meeting with Mr. Baird, he tells me how the work of the Highways Commission is now night completed for the year albeit yet a few men employed in divers parts of the country.

Each day now sees an increase in the number of candidates for the Council and methinks the Corner Brook and Grand Falls mills are like to be kept working overtime to supply enough paper for the ballot slips which will have to be nigh a yard long to contain all the names.

Having promised an etiquette hint each day, do publish the following for the benefit of those ladies that do still wear their skirts to the ground, if there be any:—"When tripping over the pavement, a lady should gracefully raise her dress a little above her ankle. With the right hand she should hold together the folds of her dress and draw them toward the right side. To raise the dress on both sides, and with both hands is vulgar. This ungraceful position can be tolerated only for a moment, when the mud is very deep."

This night to see the opening game in the new B.S. Masonic billiard parlor, mighty interesting. So home, and to bed.

Eye-Election Unnecessary at Present

In connection with the petition presented to His Excellency the Excellency the Governor regarding the matter of holding a bye-election in St. John's East, we are informed that a reply has been sent to the Committee, intimating that the Governor does not consider the holding of a bye-election necessary at present.

Drink Water if Kidneys Bother

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Pains or Bladder is Irritated

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food form acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back, or sick headach, dizziness, your stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids; to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

RAILWAY MANAGER VISITS NORTH SYDNEY—Mr. H. J. Russell, Manager for the Nfld. Railway, who left town on Saturday last on an inspection tour of the railway, crossed over to North Sydney by the Caribou last night for the purpose of inspecting the new C. N. E. premises there. He is not expected to return to the city before Saturday next. It is understood Hon. M. S. Sullivan accompanied him.

Magistrate's Court
A drunk was fined $1.00 and black-listed. Three other drunks were released on payment of cab hire. A man, convicted of a breach of Section 24, 3rd Section 3, of the Alcoholic Liquors Act, was fined $10.00 or a 30-day imprisonment. A truckman, convicted of assaulting the watchman at Bowring's north side premises, was fined $10.00 or in default twenty days imprisonment. The evidence showed that while the watchman was washing down the wharf between the hours of 1 and 2 p.m. the defendant came down on the premises with his horse and truck, to take delivery of some fish. The watchman still continued using the hose with the result that the horse became frightened and made cuts about its legs. The defendant was annoyed over this, and after a few words had been exchanged, he grabbed the watchman by the face and pushed him aside. There was no evidence that he had hit the man.

Trail of the Caribou—1914-18

PILGRIMAGE TO BEAUMONT HAMEL PARK.

The REV. T. B. DARBY, D.D., on my return from the Near East found it was my privilege to spend five days in motor car following the trail of the Caribou in France and Flanders. As Remembrance Day is fast approaching may I be permitted to tell of my experience and perhaps to picture in all the memory of my gallant dead and recall to us our duty to those they left behind and these who have returned to us when in health or maimed for life. We left Paris in the afternoon for Beaumont Hamel where we spent the night. When the war ended, Albert was described by someone as a "heap of dust." We were surprised, therefore, to find a town so lately rebuilt in brick. Our hotel was very comfortable and moderately priced. At 9.15 we left by car for Beaumont-Hamel park and our long two days' drive in the country in this section had been greatly devastated but was now showing but little sign of the horrors of war. Smiling landscapes cultivated in every direction and rebuilt villages and towns speak volumes for the industry of the French. In fact Beaumont Hamel is the only spot in the whole of the vast battlefields of France or Belgium where you can see the battle and the battlefield as it was. The Agencies are already advertising the Newfoundland Memorial Park "as one of the place of greatest interest for visitors in France." The bronze caribou, (life size) lifted high in its mound can be seen for miles around the country, so we had our first sight of it before we reached the Park. The first thing that faces you as you enter the park is the entrance to the Twenty-Ninth Division, but the monument itself must be seen to be appreciated as no description can adequately picture its interest and beauty. We saw on that trip scores of monuments and cemeteries. Many of the monuments are impressive and all the cemeteries are beautifully and well cared for. The hand of man is in evidence everywhere in them. The flowers grow in proper order, and the hedges are trained and trimmed with military precision. They are as beautiful as art can make them. But the Newfoundland Memorial Park is in a class by itself. Art has been there since you know how to see it in replanting of the avenues and the selection of trees and shrubs of different shades, but it has been so cunningly done that Nature seems to have done it all. The Park is beautiful now, in five years time it will be superb. I find I have written in my diary at the close of the day: "Mr. Cechins, the man who built out the Park, must have the soul of a poet." Sergeant Major Brown of "Ours" who is now in charge there, seems to have caught the spirit of the designer, and is carrying out his plans faithfully. In one part of the Park there is a beautiful monument to Scottish troops; in another, the cemetery where some of "Ours" lie side by side with their British comrades. But the places of supreme interest to Newfoundlanders are the front line trenches with duckboards, parapets and dugouts which our boys left on that fatal July morning. We walk

Armistice Day Reveals

Should They Be Held—Hears That SUII Acha—Bishop and Cenotaph Spirit.

Not only in London but also throughout the country there is a growing feeling that such festivities as have hitherto marked the celebration of Armistice Day are not in keeping with the day's true character. Nearly a million men from the Empire died in the great War, and it is the memory of this heroic host and its sacrifice which on November 11 will impel men, women, and children in every town and village to gather at their war memorials and with bowed heads share the Great Silence. There are in this country to-day hundreds of thousands of people whose hearts still ache with the loss of dear ones in the war, and it is not difficult to understand how altogether alien to their thoughts on Armistice Night are fancy-dress balls, banquets, and other revels which have been indulged in on Armistice Nights in the past. On Armistice Day the consciousness of bereavement suffered during the four most terrible years in the nation's history is more deeply stirred than at any other time, and it is this fact which, in the opinion of many people everywhere, makes unnatural and incongruous any sort of expression of the festive spirit almost immediately after solemn services of remembrance.

Sir Ian Hamilton.

The Bishop of London, who will conduct the service at the Cenotaph, said to a Daily Mail reporter yesterday: "I am of the opinion that Armistice Day and Night should be observed in the tone of the Cenotaph service. General Sir Ian Hamilton declared that there was ample excuse for public rejoicing and merriment on the original Armistice Day. He said: "The exhibition of wild joy then was perfectly natural, and so also were the celebrations at night. There were many men home on leave fresh from facing death. There were many men going back who had thought that they might never see their girls again. They could well dance; it was human nature that they should be merry. At a time like that I myself would have joined in a "beau"—but I would not now go to a ball on Armistice Night. "And I would say this, that if anything is to be done on Armistice Day or Night for charity the money should go to those thousands of ex-Service men who to-day are in need. Colonel E. C. Heath, general secretary of the British Legion: "Most ex-Service men are not in favour of any sort of "mafficking" on Armistice Day, which is essentially a day of solemn observance. Indecent. Referring to the Victory Ball at the Albert Hall, arrangements for which are again being made, the Rev. H. R. L. Sheppard, vicar of St. Martin-in-the-Fields, Trafalgar-square, has stated: "Dancing is frequently the obvious and fitting form of grateful commemoration; a glad event, but a fancy-dress ball on a vast scale as a tribute to the Great Deliverance which followed on the unspeakable agony of 1914-1918 seems to me not so much irreverent as indecent. IF YOU WANT GRUEL CLOTHING, FUEL, VOTE FOR JULIA.—nov5,11

Monday's Editorial

(I.C.M.)

It is an easy matter to know when a writer or a speaker has convictions behind his statements. It does not require much logic nor many quotations to prove the sincerity of an author. His own words prove or disprove his case. That there is a lot of talk, both in Church and State, that falls heedless to the ground is very certain, and one of the reasons of this is the lack or absence of conviction. Any question that is worthy of the time or talent of the press should also be worthy of a little zeal, and should call forth a glowing share of enthusiasm. This, the Editorial of the Telegram of yesterday's issue, accomplished, for not only was the subject a live one, but it was also treated as such, and was full of that spirit which makes people believe in themselves—and when people have faith in themselves they generally gain their objective. Newfoundland and its people can afford to have more faith in their opportunities than seems to exist, and such sentiments as were published yesterday tend to inspire this confidence. Many of the ablest men of the past were desirous of placing Newfoundland in her right and proper place on the map, and with that purpose in view they devoted their energies to the task. Those men had a wider vision than their fellow, and they were sincere in their policy of development. Perhaps it was that they were a generation before their time, and like the leader of old they died without entering upon their promised land. The leader of old was hindered in the progress of his mission by the internal bickerings of the people, and by their lack of faith in the divine promise. Some murmured, others chided, and the result was forty years in the wilderness. In national life and in international relations this same thing has happened over and over again, and all the while, the promised land of peace and plenty has been forfeited. We in Newfoundland have indulged in too much bickering, and we have doubted the resources and the latent wealth of the country, and have almost entirely closed our eyes to its potential properties. As stated in yesterday's editorial, visitors come in and see these things that we fail to see, and they express surprise at the prospect. What a mistake we have made in not acquainting ourselves with the country that our fathers colonized, and what a shame it is that during all the period of our autonomy our leaders never got beyond the stage of party politics. Some of us have been recollections of the political feuds of sixty years ago, and it seems that quite enough of that same spirit is still in our midst; for at the present moment our political waters show signs of being troubled. Had Newfoundland less political animosity and more trade, she would be better off than she is, nor should her sons and daughters need to leave her shores—they did not wish to leave, but they had to seek a living, thus they went. The keynote of yesterday's editorial breathes of hope, and it implies that a forward movement is possible, and that we are coming into our own. It speaks of our landmarks and hints at our love, and mentions the gallantry of our pioneers. All these things should create more interest with us than they do. They constitute our own history, and are as much a part of Empire as any other record. And why not? Are not we a part of that brave band of colonists who faced the unknown, and amid the suspense of long years, laid the foundation of Christian civilization in the New World? We are. Therefore we should be united, and as citizens and British subjects we should lay aside these small ideals which make only for party and which divide but into sects. The outlook of the country is now very good, and a brighter prospect is before us than was possible a few years ago. We have rallied from the staggering blow of the war, and by unity and goodwill our leaders ought to make a good showing. Let us then give them a chance to do something, and buckling on the armour, let us march on to victory, and in good time come into our own, and like the Israelites of old, inherit the promised land. There should be a bigger programme for Newfoundland. There should be a larger population for her; she should be further advanced than she is. She must no longer lay in the march of the century. It is time that her hindrances were removed, and that she be allowed to advance; but if extreme party politics are to dominate then it is just as well to abandon hope, and let her drift; for while party is preferred to country then the latter must suffer—this is what has happened. Let us hope that a higher motive is now being adopted, and that Newfoundland will be first and foremost of all else. nov5,11

Storing Vegetables

Vegetables should be stored in a cool, dry, frost-proof place. So many people make the mistake of thinking that a dry place must be a warm place. Warmth will induce all stored vegetables to "sweat" and rot. Potatoes may be spread out in layers, which must not be more than 2 ft. to 3 ft. in depth, on straw, bracken, or sack, and they should be covered with the same material to exclude light. If space is limited the tubers can be stored in bulk in sacks or boxes and should be turned out at intervals for inspection as one rotting tuber will affect many.

A little slaked lime mixed with an equal quantity of flowers of sulphur and sprinkled among the potato crop will help to check any disease, and also keep mice and other vermin at bay.

Cover With Litter.

Carrots should be stored in sand or fine, dry soil or packed in a corner of a dry shed and covered with light litter. Beets should be stored in the same way as carrots and the top growth should be twisted off well above the crown.

Onions must be absolutely dry before being stored and should be spread on a dry, airy shelf so that it is easy to see those that begin to sprout and to use those first. Shallots usually store better than onions, but they, too, should never be stored in bulk, but in thin layers.

Celery will keep in excellent condition for many weeks after being lifted if it is packed upright in some corner of a dry shed and banked round with sand.

Embroidery in white beads gives the veined effect to a gown of white crepe and black velvet. nov5,11

A DAY OF REMEMBRANCE

On Armistice Day, which will be observed the world over to-morrow, it is inevitable that there will vividly be recalled the many incidents which went to the making of the most glorious, and at the same time, the most terrible chapters in history.

A bolt from the blue suddenly shattered the peace of the world in the early autumn of 1914, and citizens of all classes laid aside their every day work at the call to arms and within a few weeks were departing for the theatre of war. Unaccustomed even to the rudiments of warfare, and living in countries in which the atmosphere was never disturbed by the ominous mutterings which from time to time pressed a storm elsewhere, these citizens were by nature men of peace, but they realized the danger which threatened, and went forth to champion those principles, which they had been taught to regard as more precious than life itself.

Never before had such a scene been presented as was witnessed in practically every town and hamlet throughout the Empire, when the men, elated and inspired by the prospect of striking a blow in Freedom's Cause, took leave of parents, wives and sweethearts, and they, with courage no less praiseworthy than that of their heroes, bade them good-bye with smiles and words of cheer, thus hiding their feelings of anxiety and distress, in order to make the parting easier for their men.

Then the four years of slaughter and suffering and untold discomfort for those engaged in the fighting on land and sea, and for those at home, privation, weary waiting and watching, with the dread constantly before them of the message that would tell of a loved one who had made the supreme sacrifice.

At last, at the eleventh hour of November 11th, 1918, when it seemed that the limit of human endurance had been reached, hostilities ceased as suddenly as they had begun. An hour for rejoicing? Yes, because the order to cease fire came only when a relentless enemy had capitulated and victory was ours, but the Empire's joy was blended too largely with the Empire's grief for the million who had fallen to permit the occasion to be marked by hilarious outbursts and festive celebrations.

As a Day of Thanksgiving it should be perpetuated, as a day of remembrance of the debt the world owes to those gallant men and women who for the rest of us gave their all, or who even today are still handicapped in their struggle for existence by the injuries they received while they held the foe in check.

To-day, for the first time in the seven years that have passed since the cessation of hostilities, we have reason to believe that peace is really an accomplished fact, and that so far as it is humanly possible a recurrence of war between the great nations of the world has been prevented. The Locarno Pact is a triumph of statesmanship, but let us trust that it has been inspired by something loftier and far more binding than diplomacy, and that it is really an earnest of a growing spirit of worldwide fellowship. Treaties may place obligations upon nations which force of circumstances may compel them to respect, but war with all its horrors will no longer be possible only when, as a preacher on Sunday evening so eloquently expressed it, "a golden heart has come to man."

ARMISTICE DAY.

Silent we bow our heads, remembering Those who went forth returning not again. Young lives that knew no time beyond their springs, Young eyes, long closed, that saw their duty plain. A nation's splendid youth that gave its best. Ungrudging, unreckoned, in the faith that we, Freed by its labours, would not fail the test Of perfect comradeship and unity.

In such alone the glory shall survive For which they fought. The bitter tongues that rail, Urging the comrades of the past to strive. Class against warping class, shall not prevail. The voice that spoke of late throughout the land Was not of faction but an urgent call. Bidding us work together hand in hand Each labouring for the greatest good of all.

Those whom to-day we honour had no thought Of selfish ease or shelter in the fight. But in the noblest battle that they fought They triumphed over self in hell's despite. Have we, their heirs, no sacrifice to yield, No selfish prejudice to cast aside. To prove us worthy, in a lesser field. Of those high things for which these brave and died?

PROCEEDS OF SALE IN EXCESS OF LAST YEAR.

The ladies under the direction of Mrs. W. B. Fraser, who yesterday disposed of the Poppies on behalf of the G.W.V.A., met with a most generous response and the proceeds of the sales so far accounted for realized the sum of $1900, which was considerably in excess of the amount contributed last year. There are still reports to be handed in in the city and when these and the outport collections have been received, the total it is believed will be greatly augmented.

Two Minutes Silence

To-morrow from east to west and from north to south the world will stand still at eleven o'clock for the space of two minutes to honour the memories of those who gave their lives in the Great War. This simple tribute, the suggestion of His Majesty the King is one which all can pay, and it is to be hoped will be duly observed throughout the length and breadth of Newfoundland.

New Street Car Given Trial Trip

At 3 p.m. yesterday one of the new street cars made a trial trip with Mr. Hogg in charge. Amongst those on board were Supt. J. W. Morris, of the Newfoundland Light and Power Company, Supt. N. Andrews of the Street Railway, besides several motorists. The test which proved very satisfactory was made east along Water Street, and thence via Adelaide Street around the Bell line. The car ran very smoothly over the rails, a feature of which was its easy riding and comfort for passengers. The new cars will not be ready for the service before next week as they have yet to be adjusted and the motormen instructed in their operation.

Armistice Day at the Anglican Cathedral

To-morrow morning at 10.40 a service lasting about half an hour will be held in the C. E. Cathedral to mark the solemnity of the Armistice celebration. What place more fitting to spend a few minutes in silent remembrance of those who made the supreme sacrifice than within the walls of the churches to uphold whose teachings they gave their lives?

A Tribute to a Newfoundland Veteran

The following editorial comment appears in the Akron Times-Press in reference to the passing of Charles G. Foran, whose death was announced recently in the columns of the Telegram:

TRELL A HERO.
Until the fact was made known in death nobody in Akron realized what a true hero we had living and working amongst us. Charles G. Foran kept his cheerful smile and stuck to his daily task of selling without letting the people with whom he came in contact know that he was suffering from wounds received in the World War and without boasting about how these honorable wounds were received.

Death revealed that this man, whose smile was well known on Main Street, was the possessor of five medals awarded for valor in four campaigns as a member of Canada's famed fighting forces. One of them had been presented in person by King George of England 25 years ago. Had these facts been known Charles G. Foran might have capitalized his heroism and advanced in business, but he chose to keep the memory of these honors sacred to himself and to succeed in business thru his individual efforts, an example which many of us might do well to emulate. Here was a true hero.

THOUGHTS AT THE MEMORIAL.

ST. JOHN'S—1925.

Forget not, ye that pass this sacred spot. To bow your heads, reflect a while, and stand in humbleness before ye go your way. This pile hath cost an ocean deep with blood. And every stone, a thousand women's tears. Ten thousand orphans see their sire again in this flaming shape, it's every line. They know, and love its never-changing face. More during than the tender flesh of those it represents, and fathered with their blood. This many sired child, shall burnish bright. The shining diamond facets of remembrance. The Game they died in, just it was they knew. It mattered little, what they gained, they lost. A spark was struck, a call sent forth, they came. Nor asked, nor question made, away to die.

How Shall We Spend Armistice Day

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—It is quite clear that according to our temperament we shall observe Armistice Day to-morrow, November 11th. A handful of sincere church folk will attend the service provided; a larger number sympathetically (and from curiosity) will witness our Centennial Ritual; a much larger percentage of our people will make the day just what it means to them—a day of idle and innocent gadding about, or of reminiscent sadness and quiet repose.

As an ex-Serviceman, I wish to urge that our temperament be sober. Every cent is needed for the G.W.V.A.'s splendid efforts. Let us support all they do, for the sake of the "blessed dead." At the same time let us not forget the British Empire casualties 1914-1918.

LEST WE FORGET.
Killed . . . . . 670,986
Wounded . . . . . 2,041,040
Missing . . . . . 350,243
Total . . . . . 3,062,269

Yours truly,
MUSTARD GAS.

Entertainment at T.A. Rooms To-Night

The T. A. Athletic Association are holding a Card Party, Supper and Dance at the Club rooms to-night, and judging by the preparations, the affair will be most enjoyable. The Card Party will be held in the spacious reading room and the prizes offered are, for the ladies, a beautiful tea set, and for the gentlemen one that is itself well thought suitable. Dancing will be in the armory and will begin at 9 o'clock to the music of the Gem Orchestra, which will supply an especially prepared programme of music. The Ladies' Auxiliary are attending to the catering.

In the last act Grace brokenhearted, is again at home with her fancy parents and relatives from her father some straight talk which only makes matters worse. The Doctor again uses his influence and eventually the situation is relieved and husband and wife are brought together again. The play gives plenty of scope for clever acting and the various roles were well taken, particularly those by W. L. Phillips as Tommy, Miss Loreta Nicholson as Grace, and W. W. Hankins as Dr. Myron Anderson. Between the acts specialties consisting of songs and recitations, make the performance conclusive and while some of the acts tended to verge towards the vulgar, rather than the amusing side, the performers showed that they possessed the ability to enliven the audience, and in a somewhat different class of specialty are certain to prove popular.

The cast of characters was as follows:—
Fred Livingston . . . . . J. E. Ballour
Mrs. F. Livingston . . . . . Lillian Hampton
Grace Livingston . . . . . Loreta Nicholson
Dr. Myron Anderson . . . . . W. W. Hankins
Dick Loring . . . . . Chas. D. Hiser
Thomas Tracker . . . . . W. L. Phillips
Hattie . . . . . Marie Fisher
Peter Barstov . . . . . Ollie Newcome
"The First Year" will be shown again to-night and as a matinee to-morrow afternoon, and in the evening.

In Flanders' Fields

In Flanders' fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly,
Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the Dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved, and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders' fields.

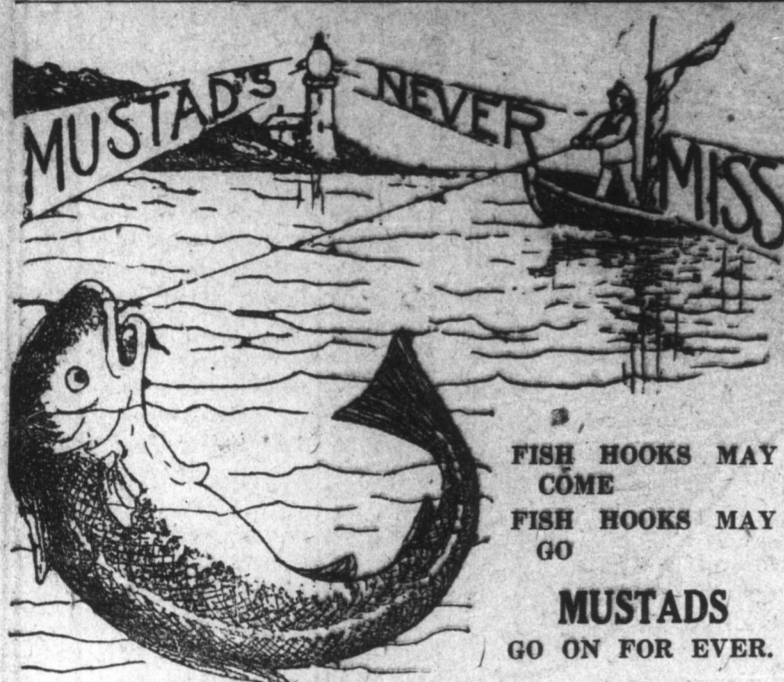

Take up our quarrel with the foe:
To you from falling hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.
If ye brake faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders' fields.

JOHN McCRAE.

Dear Mrs. Housekeeper:

Far too little attention in this Country is paid to the prevention of disease. We wait until someone in the house is ill and then say "I wonder how he got that." Mr. Meehan, in his address to the Rotary Club rightly stressed the dangers of the house flies. Now there are places in which you cook and in which you sleep. The walls are probably papered. Besides the flies which wander over these walls, there are numerous germs which make their homes there. If you were to paint part of these walls and rub with two different swabs moistened with sterile water and squeeze out into plates of agar sugar, in which germs easily multiply, you would find a POSITIVE BACTERIAL GROWTH FROM THE UNPAINTED AREA whilst the PAINTED AREA WOULD SHOW A NEGLIGIBLE GROWTH. Realizing these facts, you should lose no time in coating all your walls with "MATCH-LESS" Oil Paints which can be washed, and thus ensure the health of your family.

Yours faithfully,

The Standard Manufacturing Co., Limited.

Despite the heavy barrage of votes which fell for the last 48 hours, Mrs. M. V. Kinless still retains her position at the head of the column with 4,700 votes alongside of her name which gives her a lead of 400 votes over Miss Stella Crane. Miss Marion Moore, who only entered the fray Saturday moved into third place with 3,125 votes to her credit, only 25 votes more than Miss Doris Stick, who now has a grand total of 3,100 votes. Miss M. Moore showed great strength and within a few hours gained hundreds of votes and passed Miss Louise Q. Smith, who had held second and third places during the first two days' voting.

As the Yellow Dog Tramp finished speaking, the little rabbit looked up at Mrs. Bear and said:

"Oh, I'm so glad that good old dog just happened by to rove. So he could bring me candy for my mother's little stove."

"Why don't you call her on the telephone. Maybe she would like you to bring her something from the 'Three-in-One Cent Store,'" suggested the Yellow Dog Tramp.

"I will, I will," answered the little rabbit, and into the old Hollow Stump Telephone Booth he hopped, quick as a wink.

"One, two, three, Happy Bell, Snake Fence Corner, Clover Dell."

he shouted over the wire, and the next minute Lady Love's sweet voice answered, "Hello, dearest! That's the way loving mothers answer, I'm thinking."

"Do you want anything at the 'Three-in-One Cent Store,' Mother Rose," enquired the bunny boy. And the reason he called her by that name is because Lady Love always wears two roses, one in each cheek. And in the summer time, a thing for the little rabbit every morning gathers a red rose from the garden for mother to wear in her bunny brown hair.

"I need a hair pin," answered Lady Love, after a moment.

"Anything else?" asked the little rabbit.

"A clothespin. That's all," laughed his pretty mother. "But how does it happen that you are on your way to Rabbitville? Then, of course, the bunny explained how he had met Mrs. Bear on her way to the Three-in-One Cent Store. After which she and Lady Love spoke to each other over the phone while the little rabbit ate a lollypop and the Yellow Dog gnawed a bone.

Then, in a few minutes, all three started off again, down the winding

Spectators Gasp at "The Monster"

MYSTERY-THRILLER WITH LON CHANEY AND JOHNNY ARTHUR A BIG HIT.

Audiences at the Nickel Theatre yesterday gasped, grasped their seats in excitement and held their breath as "The Monster" unfolded its mysterious and gripping story on the screen. This is a Roland West production distributed by Metro-Goldwyn, and the picturization of the stage play written by Crane Wilbur.

Lon Chaney, famous for his characterization in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," and "He Who Gets Slipped," appears in the title role, portraying a mad surgeon whose twisted brain manufactures a scheme whereby he lures victims to his sanitarium that he may perform operations upon them. He is superb as the suave and evil Dr. Ziska.

Johnny Arthur, noted as a stage comedian, makes his second cinema appearance in the role of the hero, who longs to be a detective and whose ingenuity finally solves the town mystery and wins him the town beauty. The leading feminine role in the production is played by Gertrude Olmsted, who started her picture career via the Ellis-Herald-Examiner Beauty Contest, and who seems more beautiful than ever in "The Monster."

Small town mystery, romance and the thrilling experiences of two men and a girl in the haunted den of the Monster, make up a story which holds one's interest by its tense moments, harrowing incidents, and comedy relief.

Others in the cast are Hallam Coolidge, Charles A. Sellon, Walter James, Knute Erickson, George Austin, Edward McWade and Ethel Wales.

C. Gardner Sullivan wrote the titles, and Willard Mack and Albert G. Kenyon did the scenario. The photography is by Hal Mohr, and Roland West adapted the play to the screen, and also directed "The Monster."

Armistice Dance

The G.W.V.A. Armistice Dance which takes place to-morrow night at the Galety Hall promises to be a big event. Particular attention has been paid by the G.W.V.A. committee to the decorations which will be of unusually artistic character, and the catering will be attended to by the Ladies' Auxiliary, headed by Mrs. McKeen. A large supply of novelties has been imported from New York through Comrade Hugh Anderson, and many unusual items will be introduced. The Prince's Orchestra have prepared a special programme of music.

Cubes of tart jelly make an attractive garnish for the breakfast omelet.

Trail through the forest. Mrs. Bear in the lead, with her basket of honey on her arm, the little rabbit next, with his knapsack bouncing up and down on his back and his red striped candy cane swinging from his left paw, and the Yellow Dog Tramp, his tattered straw hat over one ear and his good hickory stick in his right paw.

By and by, after a while, and a hop and a smile, and more than a mile, they came to that famous store where all the little people of Rabbitville did their shopping. Mrs. Bear soon exchanged her honey for plenty of money and the little rabbit bought a hairpin and a clothespin, which, when wrapped in paper, he carefully tucked in his coat pocket. He hadn't forgotten how he had once lost a clothespin, as I mentioned in one of my Little Jack Rabbit Books called the "Police-man Dog." Then while Mrs. Bear placed her money in the Savings Bank, the little rabbit hopped into the next story.

So, little reader, you must wait And Uncle Dave must hesitate Until he gets his Thinking Hat To write what happens after that.

A Square Deal

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir—Please permit me to say in your valuable paper to say a few words in regard to a square deal to the tradesmen and labourers belonging to the city. There seems to be some discrimination against the men belonging to the city on some of the buildings under construction at the present time.

One day a short while ago I was on my way to work at the noon hour when I met a man with his tool box. He is a little inquisitive perhaps I inquired of him where he was going to work. He told me he was just fired. I told him and became a little more inquisitive, and asked him a few more questions knowing him as a good and honest worker who could do a fairly good job. He was paid off for reasons which he could not find out, while others with neither tools nor ability were kept on because they had friends in authority.

Now, Mr. Editor, I think this is a little too one sided when men who are being let up this city by paying taxes are turned down for the sake of those people who come in here after making a good summer's fishing and are not contributing one cent to the upkeep of this city. Now this is just what happened, for on the same day this man was paid off there were men taken on who were friends of those in authority of the job from which this man was fired.

Now where are our city members that came out seeking our votes with such a flourish of labour talk, and also where are our city councillors who should be looking out for the people of this city that are paying the taxes. Why should not those people that come in here seeking employment pay a proportionate part to the upkeep of this city?

Do our city members and councillors forget their promises which they made when seeking an election that they would stand by the workers and see that the city workmen would get a fair deal? Come now, city representatives, get on the job, or the producers of this city may have to quicken your memories.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for printing these remarks, I remain, Yours truly, LABOURER.

Free and Compulsory

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir.—We must thank Teacher and other knights of progress with the common weal at heart, who, from time to time keep agitating in the public press for Compulsory Elementary Education in this land of ours. The most convincing proof (in my opinion) one has that, either the masses as a whole are being exploited by a class or clique to whose personal advantage it is to keep them in a state of illiteracy, or Newfoundlanders are incapable of governing themselves in the twentieth century and therefore not entitled to that privilege.

Who will consent either of these statements? Does not the history of Russia prove the former? And as to the latter, does not every great modern and progressive country look at the enforcement of Compulsory Education as the wisest and most successful act of legislation, and the greatest boon conferred on the people for the benefit of all? And did not the time before its introduction savour of the dark ages, oppression and narrow mindedness?

We have thirty-six representatives, fully empowered by the people, to act for the people in our Parliament and each and every one of them is responsible to the people, and I may add to God for every work he does and for everything he does not do that he has the opportunity of doing.

Why does not the intelligent electorate by united action force those representatives to do the specific work they are elected by the people to do, i. e., make laws for the benefit of the people? Newfoundland or any other country will never progress unless the common people go forward in knowledge and in truth.

Here I emphatically state, in common with those who are looking, hoping and praying for the advancement of our Island Home, the most needed law in Newfoundland to-day is one making Elementary Education free and compulsory to all.

Thanking you for space if you are kind enough to publish this.
Yours truly,
EX-PUPIL

Wake up England

THE INDUSTRIAL OUTLOOK.
(By ECONOMICS in Review Of Reviews).

Sir George Hunter, the well known shipbuilder, was guilty of exaggeration in the letter he wrote last month to the Prime Minister on the state of trade. The condition of some of our industries—namely, those unsheltered from fierce foreign competition—is admittedly very serious indeed, but the prosperity of the sheltered was never greater. More people are employed to-day than before the war; many of them are infinitely better off, though the average standard of living must be lower. It is lowest in the unsheltered industries. It is true that bankers are unable to recall in their experience such a desperate condition as now besets the great export industries of the country. Probably Sir George is right in saying that the number of unemployed, or partially unemployed, is not less than 12 1-2 per cent. of the working population of men and boys. No one will deny the statement that a large percentage of our people are becoming unaccustomed to work and are losing in part the skill that is retained only by regular practice. It is true, too, that tens of thousands of young people are growing up without having learned to work, and in whom the innate love of idleness is being developed and fortified. That the "doles" is demoralizing hundreds and thousands of people is true in practice as well as in theory, and it is equally true that the mass of unemployed workers nevertheless prefer work to idleness. Up to this point we do not dispute the facts that Sir George Hunter's views represent a general experience. But when he proceeds to declare that the trade balance is now definitely against us, that dividends on our railway stocks and in most of our industries are being paid out of reserves or have ceased, the capital which is needed to maintain our industries and provide wages is dwindling, that we are on the road to bankruptcy and ruin, and that no improvement is in sight, he is practicing the easy art of sensational exaggeration.

To begin with, the balance of trade is not against us. While last year the tendency was against the country we still had a favourable balance. Now the tendency has turned in our favour. In the first four months of 1924 the adverse trade balance was $80,500,000; and in the second four months it was $108,500,000. Thus we were definitely losing ground, but the marked growth of imports was not accompanied by a marked decrease in exports; on the contrary, the latter increased, but the expansion of the former was still more marked. This was due to the foreign, especially American, expectation that the pound sterling would rise to par, which resulted in a lot of credit (which in other circumstances would have been withdrawn in the shape of exports) being left in London to wait for the profit on exchange when sterling reached par. It was a perfectly sound speculation; sterling did reach gold par, and will remain there, we hope. It was, of course, to be expected that the stimulus to imports and the discouragement of exports which an appreciating currency must give would disappear with the restoration of the exchange to par. And so it has.
In the first four months of this year (when the currency was still appreciating) the margin between exports and imports was wider than in 1924, the adverse balance being $140,000,000; in the second four months (that ended August 31st) the visible adverse balance declined to $106,500,000. Even with the temporary trade disadvantage of an appreciating currency the total trade balance (after allowing for invisible as well as visible exports) in 1924, amounted, according to a careful calculation made by the Board of Trade, to about $30,000,000. This figure represented the balance we had available for new investment abroad. In actual practice we lent a great deal more than this. Altogether, overseas investments made last year amounted to $134,200,000, of which $60,700,000 was lent to foreign countries and $73,500,000 to the oversea parts of the Empire. Of course, there is no necessary relation between the net trade balance of any one year and the amount we lend abroad in that year. Every year old foreign loans are repaid and replaced. In the aggregate, this represents a very large sum. Further, in some years we may lend as much as we have available, in which case the balance is carried forward. Or we may lend too much, in which case there is a debit carried forward which operates to reduce the lendings in the next and following years. Moreover, as an international money centre, we have the keeping of large foreign balances. Indirectly, we lend these—or part of them—to foreign borrowers. All the best information goes to show that last year we had a favourable net balance, though small.

It is early yet to indulge in a forecast, but the indications are that we shall probably have a net favourable balance this year, though, again, of small amount. As regards railway dividends, it is true that most of the companies have had to draw upon the Government compensation moneys (especially given to them with which to pay dividends during the period of post-control adjustments) for the purpose of making a moderate return to the stockholders. But it is wrong to suggest that dividends are being wholly paid out of reserves. As for industrial dividends, the record of 1923, 1924, and 1925 entirely contradicts Sir George Hunter's statement. If we take the complications published periodically by the Economist, we find that the profits of 1,351 companies in 1923 amounted to $122,536,064, an increase of $28,367,390, or 30 per cent. over 1922; these profits were equal to 8.5 per cent. of the total ordinary and preferential capital combined, against 7.5 per cent. in 1922. In 1924 the total profits of 1,411 companies were $139,862,378, an increase of $2,692,848, or 6.8 per cent. In the current year the calculations show that 492 industrial undertakings earned 11.1 per cent. more profit than was recorded in the reports issued by them last year. In face of these figures, to suggest that capital is dwindling is ludicrous.

Sir Burton Chadwick, Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade, at the opening of the Motor Cycle Show at Olympia, painted the industrial situation with a better sense of proportion. The cycle and motor cycle industry, he said, was one of the brightest stars in the industrial firmament. Its history, he thought, should be proclaimed from the house-top, for enterprise, ingenuity, pluck, and good British workmanship, the industry had overcome difficulties that were not inferior to those confronting other trades. During the war foreign competitors made serious inroads into the industry's overseas markets. In 1920 Great Britain exported only 21,000 motor cycles against America's 67,000; in 1924, however, the figures were 16,300 and 16,300 respectively. There was a note of protest in Sir Burton's speech against the action of leading industrialists in writing to the Prime Minister, painting a very gloomy picture of our industries, even with grave cause. He was much more impressed—and we confess we are—with the sturdy independence and businesslike attitude of the motor cycle manufacturer. The cut in prices of motor cycles since 1920 has been enormous, and yet the industry has thrived. Allowing prices to rise is therefore not harmful to prosperity; it is an encouragement to enterprise, ingenuity, and economy. The present prosperity of the motor car industry is due to cheap production, which has enabled manufacturers to reduce prices so as to put the purchase of a motor car within the power of hundreds and thousands of people. What the motor car industry has done, other industries can do.
History contains a number of close parallels with the present situation, the period following the Napoleonic wars offering perhaps the closest. We read in Cunningham's "Growth of English Industry and Commerce" that with the establishment of peace in 1815 a period of depression ensued. Though successful speculations had gained, the community as a whole suffered from the fluctuations of trade. The working classes suffered, as now, from the high price of food (particularly corn); and, with a view of increasing the home production, the enclosure of common land was pushed on in the belief that the whole rural community would be benefited. But this view, Cunningham says, proved to be mistaken. In a large number of cases the labourer lost the opportunity for amplifying his income. In the period of severe distress the justices granted allowances to the families of able-bodied men systematically (the "doles" of to-day, but on a different basis), but this had disastrous results, in pauperising the population. The famous Corn Laws were passed to encourage tillage and check the migration to the towns, but the laws were drawn up in the interests of landlords instead of consumers, and they failed to bring relief. In a moment of political panic (the equivalent of what Scarborough has produced to-day) the combination of laws were passed, forbidding the formation of trade unions. It was under conditions of starvation for many people that Malthus drew up his famous doctrine that the growth of population tends to outstrip the growth of the means of subsistence. Fortunately, Liberal opinion got to work and made considerable headway. Robert Owen had extraordinary practical success in his mills at Lanark, though he died a disillusioned man. The combination laws were abolished, and the right to form trade unions was established. The introduction of machinery led to distress for a time, and the effects of war did not disappear until the "hungry forties," when the final adjustments were made and England took the biggest step forward in material prosperity, the last fifty years of the nineteenth century being the most wonderful economic period in British history. Wages and profits rose while prices fell. Every body was better off in a double sense. They got more money and the money, too, was worth more. That was due to a vast increase in production, rendered possible by the employment of machinery.

People who are apt to lose faith in our power of recovery from the effects of the Great War would do well to study the economic history of the nineteenth century. They will find in it much to comfort and enlighten them.

To-day we are confronted with some acute problems, and their solution cannot be found except by bringing fresh minds and indomitable energy to bear upon them.
Coal is no longer an English monopoly. Hydro-electric power and oil are strong competitors. In Switzerland, for example, the huge Barbetine station was opened which will supply water power for 150,000 h.p. This brings the total power up to over 2,000,000 h.p., against 500,000 h.p. in 1914. As a result, Switzerland, which used to import 3,400,000 tons of coal, last year imported only 2,600,000 tons. To burn coal is to waste many of its constituents. Low carbonisation may offer the real solution of the coal question. Further, it may be necessary to work the coal industry as one unit, to eliminate middlemen, and to use State credit for the purpose. The capital value of royalties paid by the coal industry is about 1,500,000,000; this is a dead weight on the industry for which it obtains no consideration whatever. Electrical power is rapidly forcing its way to the front. In this matter we are at a disadvantage. Electric power costs more here than in Sweden or America. That is due partly to the unemployment of out-of-date generating stations. Some of the machinery used in London is more fit for a museum than for a power station in the world's metropolis. It is a scandal that British industry should be put at a disadvantage through having no pay for out-of-date generators. Restore freedom of competition in the electrical industry and the community will gain, or impose strict forms of control over the generating companies. Coal may have to be used at the pithead to generate electricity, and not transported at high cost to the towns for generation. Electrical generation does not stand alone. Some other industries are out-of-date in their methods. A thorough overhauling of accepted ideas and systems is necessary. A little of the free wind from the west would do no harm. Perfection for the incompetent and inefficient will do no good to the nation in the long run. Every war marks the beginning of a new economic era; new channels of trade are created, and old ones disappear. This is not the time for despair, but for a concentration of effort and a cheerfulness of spirit commensurate with the task of making good the destruction and impoverishment caused by the most expensive war in history, which cost this country alone as much in six years as it had spent in the 226 years preceding it, i.e., from the beginning of constitutional Government in this country.

It is not uncommon to read the opinion of this or that man of business that the Government should do something undefined. These people seem to overlook the fact that it is not the business of Government to run the industries of this country, and to foster interference in business it has always done harm in the long run. No Government can know as much about an industry as those engaged in it. The functions of Government are to administer the State's finances in the most efficient and economical manner possible; to preserve international peace by knowledge, understanding, vision and large-mindedness in its policy and attitude towards foreign countries; to maintain for the defence of the State an adequate force to repel aggression; and to remove by legislation injustices as between classes, and to maintain the health and well-being of the community. Because the country has had a most expensive war, because trade and industry have passed into a new era, and because other nations have learnt to do things themselves which formerly they used to pay us to do for them, there is an unthinking demand that the Government should do something striking and dramatic.

This demand is nonsensical moonshine. There is very little that the Government can do except stand aside and refrain from doing any thing that is calculated to delay the restoration of our power to produce and sell. We shall not sell by putting up prices, but only by reducing them. We shall not sell abroad by making it difficult for others to sell to us. We shall not become rich by tying the hands of consumers so that they shall be permitted to buy only from British manufacturers, which means in the dearest market, and to enable the same manufacturers to sell machines cheaper to the British users' foreign competitors. The public hardly realize the extent to which the business of this country has fallen into the hands of trusts and rings. There is scarcely a commodity that is not affected. These trusts are mostly existed in the sheltered trades, and those engaged in them hold the rest of the country to ransom. They enjoy a high standard of living at the expense of those working in the more vital foreign trades and industries of the country. A close supervision of the operations of trusts and rings by the Board of Trade would do good work; exposure of their operations from time to time would be healthy for them and for the public. Some years will elapse before unemployment in this country is reduced to normal proportions. It will be reduced by a variety of ways—by emigration; by the gradual reduction of prices and costs in the unsheltered trades; by higher efficiency and new methods; by the decrease in the birth-rate. The Government might perhaps serve the cause of industrial peace by proposing a reduction of 5 per cent. in the wages and salaries of all civil servants. This is a counsel of perfection, but if it were carried through it would facilitate the adjustments that are necessary to restore our prosperity and our power to compete in international markets. Meanwhile, the adjustments are being made, slowly but nevertheless surely.

India from 1922 to 1924. Among the public positions he has occupied are the following: Under secretary of the Duchy of Lancaster, 1921-22; Minister of Transport, 1923-24. Lord Peel was Conservative member of the House of Commons for the southern division of Manchester from 1900 to 1906 and M.P. for the Taunton division of Somersetshire from 1909 to 1912.

The largest whale caught this season, measured 98 feet. The world's record whale is 98 feet 6 inches. The Alaskan monster, weighing close to 100 tons, straightened out 400 feet of heavy hawser besides towing the whaler seven miles before tiring out. Whales were attracted to Alaskan waters this season. It is believed by great schools of small fish, squids and halibut. Years when these species are abundant whales are numerous. This is especially true of the sperm whale. One of the peculiarities of the sperm whale recently noted in that twice each month, with the changes of the moon, it switches its diet. The favorite food of the sperm is devil fish, squid, sharks or halibut. Certain periods of the month only remains of the squid are found in these mammals; then for weeks nothing but halibut. The sperm possesses large, tough molars and chews cow-fashion of the delicacies he devours. It is now believed the big feeding grounds for sperm and finback whales are off the coast of Africa, and by the end of October practically all the Alaskan leviathans will have started for the winter haunts. The whale oil from the season's catch has been marketed in the East with soap makers, steel and leather manufacturers. ### Whale Tows Ship Seven Miles

WITH 400 FEET OF HAWSER.

TACOMA, Washington.—The greatest whaling season ever experienced at Alaskan stations has been recorded this year according to officers of the Pacific Sea Products Company whose vessels are arriving here for winter wharriage. About 500 whales were caught and processed during the summer. Whaling, which began off Kodiak Island, May 1, kept 18 vessels busy for months, about 40,000 barrels of oil and an enormous quantity of fertilizer prepared for shipment. No

AND THIS WAS THE EVIDENCE.

A neighbor of a still in that room where she pretends to develop pictures. I'm surprised you hadn't heard. Why everybody's known it for months.

Another neighbor told me so. How did he know? Not a Him. I asked her and this is what she said:

"You hadn't heard about it? Every one knows he does it. There was a man down to his office the other day that Mrs. Jackson's cousin who happened to be visiting her, recognized as one of the most notorious bootleggers in the state. She said he came from her home town and had made a fortune bootlegging. And his car was in front of Mr. Gradman's office all the afternoon. (Mr. Gradman runs a real estate office). And then didn't you know that Gradman had that beautiful big new car? Where do you suppose he got that? You know the real estate business has been very poor the last six months. You aren't dumb enough to think he got it from that, are you? Everybody says it's plain enough now to see why the Gradmans took that house way out in that lonely place. It's just ideal for bootlegging. They say that little photographic business his wife is running is just a blind and that he has of bootlegging by the jury of popular opinion on the evidence as above stated.

Presumably he had not been given a chance to speak for himself. The man about whom such a rumor circulates is the last to hear it. People do not step up to a man and say, "I hear you are a bootlegger. Can you prove otherwise?"

It Only Know.

"Everybody knows." What mouth filling words those are! And how surprised some of us would be if we could know of some of the things that "everybody" knows about us. Many things perhaps that we didn't know ourselves. For "everybody" has a marvelous deductive faculty. He can deduce facts from more slender evidence than Sherlock Holmes himself. I suspect that we might know some of those things it would be a mighty fine thing for us. I suspect we might put less credence in what "everybody" knows about other people. And if "everybody" were not listened to or believed he might talk a little less. Which would surely be desirable for all concerned.

Wants Russia in League

GARVIN SUGGESTS DEALING WITH HER AS AN EQUAL.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—That the European question could not have been dealt with effectively except by meeting Germany at Locarno in equal terms and that the Asiatic question should be dealt with effectively except by meeting Russia on equal terms is the gist of an article by J. L. Garvin in The Sunday Observer, of which he is chief editor.

It is entitled "Russia Next," and is the most outspoken plea for complete recognition of Soviet Russia that has been heard here for many a day. Mr. Garvin writes:

"By the coming inclusion of Germany the strengthening of Geneva is made possible. But no matter what the present difficulties may be—and we are mindful of all of them—a greater league with authority and a scope equal to its ideals can only be achieved by the subsequent inclusion of Russia. This certainly was in fact recognized by the Protocol.

"President Coolidge has indicated his sound desire that European armaments should be considered in due season in the manner that only Geneva can undertake. Lord Oxford and Lord Grey have followed in the same spirit. Mr. Chamberlain represents, as a Foreign Secretary always ought to do, not merely a party but the nation. He has the full weight of the country behind him. We trust that in concert with his colleagues at Locarno he will bend himself to the certainty, whether we like it or not, that without Russia disarmament cannot be sufficiently achieved nor Europe sufficiently restored."

Commenting on M. Tschitcherine's recent Warsaw and Berlin visits Mr. Garvin continues:

"We have some reason to believe that the time has come when Russia is prepared to talk sense in foreign affairs. Why should not M. Tschitcherine come to London and Paris as naturally as to Berlin and Warsaw?"

"Any one acquainted with them both would wager that if the British and Russian Foreign Secretaries could converse face to face for one hour—utterly different men though they are—misconceptions would fall away, they would shake hands by impulse at the end, and after that the world's interests would go better and better."

ON THE ROCKS.

J. Jasper Beeswax made a soap to clean the human beard, and it was well designed to cope with evils strange and weird; it was a fine and famous o p e, whose e q u a l never appeared.

To mildewed sideboards 'twould bestow a rich and living sheen, and it would make one's handwings glow from rust and weevil clean; and everywhere you chanced to go, the Beeswax ads were seen. He advertised in every sheet the common people read; he painted his announcements sweet on fence and barn and shed; the magazines were all replete with ads in black and red.

When Jasper's roll was large and fat, he sold his business out; he sold it to a plutocrat who was a cautious scout; "I will not advertise like that," he said; "it's waste, no doubt. This Whiskers Soap has world-wide fame, it's known to far Cathay, and so this advertising game is money thrown away, and promptly 'll cut in the same old make the business pay. It's well enough to advertise a thing with no renown, to have announcements greet men's eyes from every sheet in town, but when it's famous 'tis not wise to put more money down." Alas, the people soon forgot the merits of a thing, unless its ads are daily met, in summer, fall and spring, though it may be the one best bet, to which all men should cling. And now that plutocratic sport who would not advertise, he figures in the bankrupts' court with wet and swollen eyes; and wiser people hold the fort, with other dopes and dyes.

WALT MATCH

Repairs are about to be undertaken on the bells in the Town Steeple of Lanark, the largest of which is reputed to be the oldest bell in Europe. The inscription on this bell is as follows:

Oldest Bell in Europe

Ann. 1100.

I did for thrice three centuries hang, And unto Lanark City ring.

The bell originally hung in the belfry of the old church of St. Kentigern, Lanark, whence it was removed to the Town Steeple. St. Kentigern's was a beautiful building when the Scottish patriot Sir William Wallace was whipped in it, and there first met Alison Bradfrate, whom he afterwards married in the old church.

The big bell is still in good condition, but the bearings are worn with age, and require repairing.

Certain Provisions of the Municipal Charter

Editor Evening Telegram.
 Dear Sir—I think you would be conferring a favour on the citizens of St. John's if you would publish the following Sections of the St. John's Municipal Act 1921. They all have reference to Sanitation, Housing and Finance.

Yours truly,
JAMES MURDOCH.
 Nov. 9, 1925.

Sec. 78.—The Council shall have power to lay water mains and sewerage pipes through any existing street of the city, and shall assess against all building sites on the said street or adjacent thereto, which may be benefited, such proportion of the cost of the said water and sewerage pipes as the said building sites bear to the total length of the frontages on the said streets.

Sec. 82.—The sums so assessed under Sections 76, 78 and 79 shall be paid to the Council in such annual instalments as will liquidate the cost of the improvements effected, together with interest therein at a rate to be fixed by the Council, within period not exceeding ten years, or within such lesser period as may be agreed upon.

Sec. 83.—The money necessary to defray the cost of such local improvements as above described, may be borrowed by the Council from a bank, and the amount so spent, with interest thereon, shall be paid to the city by the owners of the properties assessed, and until the amounts so spent are repaid, the Council shall have a lien upon the said properties, ranking next after the Crown.

Sec. 84.—The money borrowed from local improvements shall not be considered as part of the funded debt of the city.

Sec. 88.—The Council shall have power to acquire lands by purchase or gift, and to hold the same for the uses of the city, to make, provide and lay out on said land, streets, side walks, firebreaks, parks and playgrounds, to lay water and sewerage pipes through the said lands, to sell, lease or build upon the said lands.

The Council shall have power:—
 (a) To apply to the building of houses of moderate size and suitable for dwellings for the working classes such proportion of the general funds of the city as may be deemed expedient.

(b) To borrow money for the purpose of such building, to such amount as the Governor in Council may from time to time authorize;

Wedding Bells

LEWISSURIER—DELL.
 A pretty wedding took place at San Diego, California, on the 24th Oct., when Rita Georgina Isabelle LeMessurier, youngest daughter of the late Arthur J. and Mrs. LeMessurier, was married to Mr. George Leslie Dell of Illinois, U.S.A. The ring ceremony was performed by Rev. W. E. Crabtree. The young bride, who was attended by her sister as matron of honour, looked charming in a beautiful dress of wine colour satin and gold, a Spanish hat of velvet with drooping brim of gold. She carried a bridal bouquet of carnations and ferns. The matron of honour wore brown broad crepe dress trimmed with fur with hat to match, and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations and ferns. Mr. Alick D. Pushie was best man. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home which was beautifully decorated, the colour scheme being pink and white. After the usual toasts had been honoured the young couple amid showers of confetti and rice left by motor for Santa Anna and Los Angeles where the honeymoon will be spent. After their return they will reside at No. 819 Omond Court Mission Beach, Calif., where the groom has a home built. The grooms present to the bride was a piano, to the matron of honour a gold wrist watch, and to the best man gold cuff links. The presents were many and costly, testifying to the popularity of the young bride, who has only been residing here a short time, coming from St. John's, Nfld.

(e) To make rules, regulations and by-laws providing for the granting to the owner or builder of any dwelling house hereafter erected within the city limits not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars in value of a bonus not exceeding ten per cent. of the cost of such buildings, nor the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars in all.

Sec. 95. Rights of Lessee.
 Every such building lease heretofore made shall, any clause or condition therein contained notwithstanding be subject to a condition that the lessee or his assignee shall have the right at any time during the currency of the lease to obtain whichever of the following privileges he desires, namely:—
 (1) The extension of the lease beyond its original term for a further term of years; or
 (2) To purchase by the lessee or his assignees of the freehold of the land.

And shall at the expiration of the lease, if the privilege of extension heretofore provided for has not been availed of, be entitled to compensation for the unexhausted value of the improvements made on the said land during the term of lease, including in the case of business premises any goodwill which may have been created by him or his assignees during the currency of the lease.

Sec. 96. Conciliation Board.
 The terms of such extension and the amount to be paid by way of rental for such extension of the lease, or by way of compensation for such improvements shall, in default of agreement, be determined by a Conciliation Board consisting of three members to be appointed by the Governor in Council for that purpose. The Governor in Council shall have power to make rules and regulations prescribing the procedure of the said Board, and the fees to be payable to the members thereof.

Sec. 99A. Power to Borrow.
 With the authorization of the Governor in Council, the Council may borrow money for the acquisition of land or buildings for any lawful municipal purpose, for the construction of streets and sidewalks, for the extension and improvement of the water sewerage system, for the erection of bridges, and for any other purpose authorized by this Act.

Sec. 306. Repayment of Loans.
 All loans hereafter issued shall be repayable in annual instalments so divided that an equal part of the principal shall fall due each year, or in such manner that the total payment for principal and interest shall be approximately the same for each year, and the first payment shall be due twelve months after the issue of the loan.

Transportation, Taxi Fares and Tourist Traffic

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—A short while ago you mentioned the apathy existing with respect to various questions then before the public, mainly at that time (if I remember rightly) regarding taxi charges. One wonders if the cause of the apathy springs from the fact that so many people own cars these days, whilst the remainder can afford to hire so seldom that they are indifferent about the question. However, I think more interest might have been shown with respect to transport within the city limits, as there is perhaps no city of its size so deficient in transport facilities as is St. John's. One would imagine with a climate such as ours that an extensive tram or bus service system which would be hired by the cab owner. Montreal I note charges thirty cents per mile, whilst charges elsewhere run about to that, excepting in few cases. As one does not wish to be harsh with the drivers who are without exception very decent and obliging, perhaps they will state their case so that the public will appreciate their point of view. I often wonder if they have computed the number of hours spent on the stands, and whether cheaper fares would not pay them.

Another question which is not perhaps receiving the attention it should be, the tourist bureau. Mr. Meehan's address to the Rotary Club is full of interest, and I note he suggests 5,000 members each subscribing one dollar per annum to meet running expenses. This should not be hard to attain, more especially if the money is to be spent on advertising the Country and preserving our Forts, etc., as suggested by Mr. Dunnfield. I do not, however, agree with Mr. Meehan's idea of later on opening offices in the Old Country and the States as surely travel agencies such as Messrs. Thos. Cook, Dean & Dawson, American Express Co. as well as the various steamship lines, who are past masters in the art of attracting tourists, are best able to handle that part of the business. Then the hotels here should get in touch with those abroad, and the particular steamship lines running here would also do the same, so there should be no necessity for expending money on offices abroad.

As we shall probably get more American visitors than people from the Old World, if I were handling the hotel problem, I would aim at creating a distinct "old world" atmosphere in connection with our wayside inns. Timbered buildings, old open fire places, old furniture, brass, etc. I saw this scheme carried out in a London Club, and in spite of a well appointed modern dining room one always found the "Old English Kitchen" favoured. One drew the latch and immediately stepped back centuries. There were the bare deal tables, old cutlery, cottage loaf, brown jugs and pewter pots. The old chimney place was there together with the old brass, etc., and one was waited on by men dressed in brown breeches, waist coat, and white shirt with long-rolled collar. I often thought what a delightful surprise it would be for the American tourist if he were to step into some such place as at Topsail, for his lunch. The idea could be carried further with the adoption of the old English house signs. One would naturally expect to find the old dishes at such places and they are all really inexpensive.

 Are quickly, pleasantly relieved by Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine

If children's colds are not rid of promptly there will be less tendency to pneumonia and consumption in later life. It is the neglected, hanging-on cold that weakens the lungs and develops into serious trouble.
 No treatment for coughs and colds was ever so popular with the children as Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. It is so pleasant to the taste, so delightfully soothing and healing and acts so quickly that children soon seem as if instinctively when choked up with a cold or annoyed by coughing.
 It is mother's best treatment for croup and bronchitis, for she knows it will bring relief when the midnight coughing spasms set in. It is wise to always have a bottle at hand for prompt use in emergency.

New Method of Cleaning Silver

One of the most tedious of all household tasks is the silver cleaning, at least with the old-fashioned method used to be very irksome. When a polish was applied to each piece of silver with a cloth, then rubbed off and finally the silver washed and wiped dry, it took several hours' time and a great deal of energy.

Now the whole process takes about as long as just the washing used to consume. With Pat and Mellow.

This new method of cleaning silver is very simple. The necessary equipment consists of an aluminum kettle, or a piece of aluminum in an enamel kettle. An aluminum pie can in the bottom of a kettle will serve the purpose. It is necessary to have each piece of silver touch the metal, so a whole kettle of aluminum is really the most satisfactory inasmuch as more silver can be cleaned at a time.

Fill the kettle half full of water, pour in some chipped soap enough to make a very light suds. Add the silver pieces and boil for about five minutes.

Some people like to add a little soda and salt, about a teaspoon of each to the suds.

Remove the silver to a rinsing bath of clear hot water, dry it and polish with a soft cloth.

The only kind of silver which cannot be cleaned by this method is that which is oxidized or decorated with this gray or black oxidized design. Any other kind, plated or sterling, can be made as bright and shiny as by the old powder polishing method.

The Restless Age

We have heard much about dull sermons, the decay in churchgoing, and what the modern man does or does not believe. This is supposed to be an irreligious age, but there is more practical Christianity than in the Victorian Age. We do not leave the pews to starve, and transport them for life for stalling a bit of food as did our forefathers. Man's inhumanity to man is less pronounced, and there is a striving after a better world in which every human being shall have a chance. This is all to the good, and churchgoing is not the only test of the religious sense of a people. Nevertheless, the decay of public worship is a matter for concern, for there is a danger of a wave of indifference spreading over the country which would result in spiritual sterility. We are living in an age of flux. Man is questioning and examining everything, and, moreover, restlessness is becoming a vice; in fact, the Bishop of Manchester has gone so far as to state that "the first duty of religion in an age like ours should be to persuade people to stop jumping or running about." The Bishop realizes that nothing worth while can take root unless mankind pauses and reflects. The restlessness, which is so pronounced at the present day, is partly due to the desire of men and women to get away from themselves. They have no desire to reflect on the eternal verities. The call of Jesus is more potent than the call of the soul. But it is not this that character is built up.

As for restlessness, conditions in the motor industry do not indicate that there are more placid times ahead. There is a motor boom, and next year the roads will be more congested than ever. But there is some satisfaction to be derived even from this prospect. The British manufacturer is now turning out the finest low-priced cars in the world; regular employment is being found for thousands of men; and John Bull and his wife, together with the family, can now explore these islands at a minimum of expense. Even the working man, who cannot afford a car, is not out of from these pleasures, for the charabanc conveys him from place to place at a cheap rate, and is helping to revolutionise the outlook and habits of the working-class. All this may tend to increase the restlessness which the Bishop of Manchester deprecates; but on the other hand it enables the dweller in industrial towns to explore the countryside, and this contact with the beauties of Nature is bound to have an effect which will prove beneficial—Weekly Post.

TWO KILLED BY AN EXPRESS NEAR WINNIPEG.

Winnipeg—Engineer James Strouthers, of Canadian National train No. 408, made a record in moose hunting Monday, when he killed two with his engine about one mile west of Yelliff Station.

Yelliff, which is in the heart of the big game country, is about 35 miles from Sioux Look out, and Strouthers was running west when he suddenly saw a bull and a cow step out into the middle of the track and stand facing the engine in the broad glare of the headlight. The cow seemed somewhat uneasy at the approach of the engine, but the bull mistook it for a rival.

He did a few war stunts, bellowed a challenge, and then charged. It was a short battle so far as the bull was concerned. He was eliminated by a ten foot throw and wound up in the ditch a total loss. By this time the cow decided it was not the usual rutting season battle, but before she could jump to safety the engine also struck her. There is now plenty of moose meat at Yelliff.

New Film Invention

"Jealousy," a Ufa film produced in Berlin, directed by Karl Grune, whose artistic reputation is already known abroad, is remarkable for the new technique it displays. By a method patented under the name of the Schuffan system, the buildings necessary to the plot are no longer manufactured life-size either in the grounds of the film company or in their studio. They are small models of what is required, magnified by an arrangement of mirrors to such an extent that they are photographed by the camera lens as being of normal construction. The experiment is not quite perfected, as the lights reflected from illuminated windows and street lamps do not react to the lens in quite the same way as the dark masses of shadow.

The patent has been bought by America already, and it is firmly believed that very soon the days will be past when expensive architecture, to be destroyed after one or two pictures, have been taken, runs away with the shareholders' money before a single picture is taken.

TESTS TO ASCERTAIN WHAT DRUNKENNESS IS.

LONDON.—The disagreement of doctors on the result of tests for drunkenness has led, it is understood, to the formation of a special committee—with the full approval of the Commissioner of Police to study the question.

The disparity between the opinions of police surgeons and special doctors called in by detained persons caused keen discussion early in the year, and the police surgeons of the metropolis were instrumental in calling the committee, which has met privately on several occasions.

A report will in due course be made to the Home Secretary.

The Golden Eagle

No one who is interested in nature study should miss an article in English Life on the golden eagle: "It seems that a picture of the golden eagle at the nest is one of the greatest prizes that a nature photographer can hope to secure." The author, however, Captain H. A. Gilbert and Arthur Biscoe, secured many, some of which, of extraordinary interest, accompanying the article. They themselves experienced numerous difficulties before they were successful. They spent one whole season, during

'A Bundle of Matches' Has Good Reception

The Aula Maxima of St. Bon's College, was filled to capacity last night and all were glad to be present, as the concert and sketch presented by the ex-pupils of the Presentation Convent, made for all an evening of much pleasure. The sketch "A Bundle of Matches" was cleverly executed, every part being portrayed in a manner that left nothing to be desired. The story deals with the efforts of Mrs. Massenger to obtain a "match" for her son, Harold Messinger, and the various situations created were very amusing.

load of 47, but this was greatly reduced by Edwards before the second hundred had been completed. In the next hundred Merner made big gains on his opponent, having a lead of 123 points at 8:06. However, Edwards kept playing steadily, and soon worked the balls into position from which he rolled up a splendid break of 68 points, to be followed a few minutes later by another break of 48, and when Merner was 340 up, only two points separated them. The game at this stage was brimful of good plays and the spectators were kept very much interested. In the final hundred the players exchanged the lead several times. Drawing towards the end, Merner wanted only 100 to win and Edwards seven. The latter made a fine shot, missed the next, and left the balls in position for his opponent, who went in and finished the game, thus closing what proved to be a very fine exhibition of billiards from beginning to end. Both players received the plaudits of the gathering at the close.

WILLIES CONQUER IN 10-MILE RUN AND 7-MILE HIKE.

The two Willies-Ritola and Plant-had everything their own way yesterday at Lewisohn Stadium in the removal of the 10-mile run and 7-mile walking championships of America, when they scored winning honors in decisive fashion under the poorest conditions under which these titular events have ever been decided.

PLANT LETS OUT.

First on the card was the 7-mile walk. Five starters made it a fair sort of a battle for the first four miles, when Plant appeared content to take pace from Weis, who was in front up to that stage, the intermediate times being 7:29 1-5, 15:18, 23:16 and 31:05 2-5. At four miles Plant let out a few wraps and went to the front, with a 7:44 mile in the fifth, which put the race on ice for him, as he was a hundred yards to the good. The watches showed 54:55 for the full distance.

WEIS WAS 125 YARDS TO THE GOOD OF HARRY HINKEL.

Harry Hinkel, Harlem Evening H.S., the metropolitan champion, while Frank Vasilopoulos, Greek American A.C., finished fourth. Ritola proved himself a real champion in annexing the 10-mile honors. The Plan, a thorn in the side of the wonderful Nural at the Olympic Games, raced throughout in powerful style on his toes.

WHILE WACHMUTH CLUNG TO HIM TO THE END OF THE FIRST MILE.

While Wachmuth clung to him to the end of the first mile, when Ritola led by three yards in 4:09 4-8, with Henigan fifty yards further back and Whitney Michelson fourth, that was as close as he ever came to heading the wonderful Plan. From three and a half miles to the finish the crowd's greatest interest was in the race for the place between Wachmuth and Henigan. First one and then the other would temporarily flash to the front. About 150 yards from the tape Wachmuth let go with a sprint which the Bostonian couldn't match and grabbed the second honors by a dozen yards in 24:45 2-5.

BATTILING SIE GETS SUSPENSION.

TRENTON, N.J., Nov. 5-Battling Siek, Senegalese lighter, has been suspended from fighting in New Jersey by Platt Adams, of Newark, Chief Inspector of the State Boxing Commission. It is said that Adams' ban upon the boxer, honor was taken upon the grounds that the dusky pugilist "was an undesirable person" to appear in the New Jersey ring.

Mrs. Courtney's Beauty Parlor will be open from 9 to 1 tomorrow, Wednesday, Nov. 11th. nov10,11

WHEN YOU ATTEND AT THE MAJESTIC THEATRE ASK AT THE WICKET FOR A

SWAN SOAP TICKET OR COUPON. It will enable you to get 1000 Extra Votes in the Majestic Theatre Pony Contest.

- You know that every Swan Toilet Soap Wrapper is worth ..... 100 Votes
The front side of a Hudson's Super-Soap Package is worth ..... 100 Votes
The back and front of a Lux Package are each worth 50 votes
So one Lux Package will give you ..... 100 Votes
The large Lantic Red Balls which you cut off a Lantic Sugar Package are worth 50 votes each, and as there are 2 on a package the package will give you ..... 100 Votes
Every Sunlight Soap Wrapper is worth ..... 100 Votes

All other Soap Wrappers & Sugar Containers are Worth Nothing in the Pony Contest

Take care not to lose your votes through buying the wrong kind of Soap or Sugar. Lantic Sugar is the only sugar which will give you container votes. The 2 large Red Balls which you can cut off, will give you 50 votes each, or 100 votes for the two.

The only Soap Wrappers on which you can get votes are Swan Toilet Soap Wrappers and Sunlight Soap Wrappers. Lux is the only flaked soap which will give you votes. A Lux Package will give you 100 votes, 50 votes for the front and 50 for the back.

Hudson's Super-Soap Powder Costs Only Three Cents a Package

The Front of a Hudson's Super-Soap Package is Worth 100 Votes

If you buy 40 packages of Hudson's Soap Powder for one dollar, you can get 5,000 votes. Ask your grocer. Hudson's Super-Soap Powder is best quality English Soap Powder; it contains no sand or lime. It's cheaper than soap for scrubbing floors, washing greasy dishes and dish cloths, windows, etc.

Each week while the Pony Contest is on, count your Sunlight and Swan Soap Wrappers, your Lux package fronts and backs, your Lantic Red Balls and your Hudson's Soap Powder package fronts. Put them in an envelope, mark on the envelope the number of votes it contains, write your name and address on the envelope and bring it to the Majestic Theatre. Then get busy collecting another lot of votes.

NOW LET US TELL YOU ABOUT THE THOUSAND EXTRA VOTES THAT YOU CAN GET WITH THE SWAN SOAP TICKET OR COUPON.

You will get a ticket or coupon each time you attend the Majestic Theatre; it may be a Swan ticket or some other one, but if you prefer to get a Swan Ticket take care to ask for it. Say "I want a Swan ticket, please!"

WHEN YOU GET THE SWAN SOAP TICKET, bring it with you to the shop where you buy Soap and Sugar. Buy a dollar's worth of Sunlight Soap, Swan Toilet Soap, Lux, Hudson's Soap Powder or Lantic Sugar, and your shopkeeper will fill in and sign the Swan Soap Ticket, giving you a thousand votes, which will be in addition to the votes you get on the wrappers. If you don't buy the dollar's worth of goods you won't get the extra thousand votes, but your wrappers and container votes will still count.

You won't have any trouble making up a dollar's worth of these goods. You can buy 1 cake of Swan Soap, it costs only 10 cents; it's a white floating toilet soap made by Lever Brothers, who are soap makers to His Majesty King George, so you see it must be a first class soap. Then a package of Lux costs only 10 cents; your mother knows how good Lux is. You will want Sunlight Soap as long as you live, so you can buy 3 cakes of Sunlight, it won't be wasted. You certainly will want a package of Hudson's Super-Soap Powder, it costs only 3 cents, and the empty package is worth 100 votes. Now you always want Sugar in your home, and 3 packages (2-lbs. each) of Lantic Granulated will just make up your dollar, or 2 packages of Lantic Granulated and 1 pound package of Lantic Iceing will square off the dollar.

If you wish you can buy a dollar's worth of Sunlight Soap alone, or of Lantic Sugar, or you may buy any assortment you like, and you may give your grocer the ticket and buy 50 cents worth one week and 50 cents worth the following week, but your ticket is not worth 1000 votes until you buy the dollar's worth.

REMEMBER! When you buy any of the above articles a cake of Sunlight Soap or a 3-cent package of Hudson's Soap Powder, etc., you get the 100 votes for the wrapper, etc., and when you buy a dollar's worth of any assortment of the articles referred to in this advt., you get one thousand votes in addition to the wrapper and container votes.
