

COOKING FOR THE KING.

(By W. B. Thompson.)

Our present King, like his father, never allows a Royal menu to be published. If one does appear anywhere it is against King George's wish. He shares King Edward's prejudices. His late Majesty thought it unbecoming, ostentatious, and besides he disliked seeing the menus in print, because they might be seen by people short of food.

But the head of a state, however frugal-minded he may be, must make some display of luxury at tables. It is part of his duties to the people he governs to represent. Other high personages are not so particular or so thoughtful as our monarchs, and like the fact remains that the most highly reputed royal kitchens in Europe are those at Windsor. They were placed there several centuries ago under the auspices of the castle and have been adapted to the most modern needs.

They are very handsome. While those at Windsor are covered in black oak, a work carried out by George III, at a cost of a special cook, who is an expert in producing either soups or fish, entrees or roasts, vegetables or other courses. There are four separate cooks—if the term may be used—under the head chef. For the sweets and pastry there are two special chefs. In all about thirty persons are engaged. For cooking purposes there are about eight hundred pots and pans, for the most part in copper, and five men have nothing else to do but keep them scoured. They are worth, these dishes alone, about $10,000.

For the table itself the dishes are enormous. Anyon who has not seen the buffets set up in St. George's Hall at a state banquet cannot imagine how superb is the collection of gold plate. The silver is not inferior. Ordinarily it is kept in a safe set in walls three feet thick, and always guarded by police. Much of the plate could not be replaced because it is old, and of incredible artistic value. Some still bears the arms of the Tudor kings. Some formed part of the treasure of Tipoo Sahib.

Service of Gold. Above all, there is the complete service of gold, with 800 forks and spoons to match. That is for great occasions, but there are several other wonderful services for ordinary use. Much of the silver is modern. The plate is valued in millions sterling. A large part is only silver gilt, and excelled by several Indian rajahs' solid gold dishes.

During King Edward's reign the chef was a Frenchman, M. Menager, who drew the handsome salary of $10,000 a year. He shortly left the royal service, and becomes head of the kitchen of that vast caravaner in Bill Mall, which was built by the Automobile Club on the site of the old war office. M. Menager was twenty-five years with King Edward at Marlborough House, and afterwards at Buckingham Palace. The last official dinner he put on the table at the latter place was that to the monarchs and special envoys who attended the funeral of his royal master. He is succeeded by another Frenchman in M. Henri Cedard, who has accompanied his present majesty in most of his voyages, and will uphold the high repute of the royal cuisine.

Usually monarchs when in private do not linger over the table. They are too busy. King Edward was a very rapid eater, but his son has to be more careful. Dinner never lasts more than forty or fifty minutes. Each service is presented in double, so that a choice is available, and each bears the name of the under-chef responsible for it. This is an old custom due to cooks in past times claiming all the good dishes and repudiating any share in the bad ones. Since the days of the Jacobites no finger bowls are provided. The Jacobites utilized them to drink the health of the king "over the water."

Kaiser Has No French Chef. Not in all royal palaces are there French cooks. The Kaiser must not have one. German public opinion is against it. In fact, for years a grand culinary quarrel has been in progress in Germany. There are at least four hundred French cooks in the best houses in Berlin. Even the chancellor has a French cook, but the emperor, owing to the Pan-Germanic idea, keeps to the native articles. Unhappily, the German cuisine is not rich in good dishes apart from its sausages, chateaubriets, its beans and its varieties of cheese tarts. These are not enough to give constant change to a dinner. The most important of these are French, but even they are modified—often became "kafee" and "soup" in English. Some phrases are utilized as in England, and have been in the Kaiser's menus "fillets of sole," "fillets of beef," "chocolate puddings" and even "rosbif" and "sausage."

French influence is supreme in the cuisine of the czar and has been for long. Once it was not without danger, for there is a tradition of a cook who, having spilt a roast, was impaled and himself roasted before his fire. But in the eighteenth century, when French cooking was most famous, a chef got as much as a hundred thousand livres per annum. What is more, he was so important that when in a fit of pique he left suddenly the czar sent couriers after him to induce him to return, and he did so when he got an apology from the sovereign.

The present czar's chef is M. Pierre Dubut, who is also a major domo. He is a regular Parisian and comes to Paris always to purchase his best materials. The most important of these are files, grass truffled and chickens. He has to provide food each day for 300 people, because not only are meals provided at the royal table for Nicholas II. and his family, but all the members of the court down to the civil and military officials. M. Dubut receives $20,000 a year. One has to remember his responsibilities, for, as has been well said, in that country of nihilism and worse, each cutlet, each piece of bread, each portion of dessert may carry death to the czar in it. M. Dubut never will say how his monarchs keep their precautions a strict mystery. The truth is that the imperial kitchens are full of "mouches" (flies), accents of the police, who are engaged as scullions, dish washers, coal carriers and other things.

Precautions of Abdul. These are nothing to the precautions taken by the deposed Abdul Hamid. He had his meals in what was practically a strong room, and before he touched anything the cook or the superintendent of the kitchen had to partake. Yet the cost of the Sultan's meals was apparently large, and a great estimate puts it at two millions sterling, because custom decrees that

WHERE THE SEA IS DEEPEST.

The ocean has been sounded in nearly all directions with modern appliances, and these soundings show that the floor of the ocean consists of vast undulating plains lying at an average depth of about two and a half miles beneath the surface of the waves. In some places high ridges and cones rise from these submerged plains to within a few hundred fathoms of the sea surface, or they may rise above the surface as volcanic islands and coral atolls.

The greatest depth hitherto recorded is in the Challenger (or Nero) Deep in the North Pacific—3269 fathoms. If Mount Everest were placed in this deep 2866 feet of water would roll over the peak of this, the highest mountain in the world.

The greatest depth in the Atlantic is in the Nares Deep between the West Indies and Bermuda—4662 fathoms. The greatest depth in the Indian Ocean is 3225 fathoms, in the Wharton Deep, between Christmas Island and the coast of Java. We now know fifty-six of these deeps where the depth exceeds three geographical miles, ten areas where the depth exceeds four miles and four places where it exceeds five miles.

The sea is saltiest where strong winds blow across the surface, as for instance, in the trade wind regions and in the Mediterranean and the Red Sea. It is less salt, says Harper's Magazine, toward the poles, and in the deeper layers of the ocean. It has long been known that the very salt water of the Mediterranean flows as an undercurrent outward thru the Strait of Gibraltar, and thus affects the salinity of the deeper waters of the Atlantic over a wide area.

Altho the amount of salt in sea water varies, the composition of sea salt remains very constant; slight differences have, however, been noticed along the continental coasts, in the polar regions and in the water in direct contact with deep sea deposits.

The temperature of ocean water varies at the surface from 28 degrees Fahrenheit at the poles to over 80 degrees Fahrenheit in the tropics. The cold water toward the poles has an annual variation of less than ten degrees Fahrenheit at any one spot, and the warm water of the tropics also has an annual variation of less than ten degrees Fahrenheit. In a band that nearly encircles the earth; this is the region of coral reefs and atolls. Between the regions of small annual variation there are two bands surrounding the earth where the annual variation is greater and may exceed in certain regions 40 degrees

JIM HILL'S HAND IN IT (RECIPROCITY TO BUILD UP U.S.) GOOD FOR YANKEE ROADS

Short Hauls and Decreased Earnings for Canadian Railway, Undoubtedly the Effect of Pact is Ratified.

It is justly claimed that, with the breaking down of the protective barrier between Canada and the United States, which the Fielding-Knox arrangement would effect, trade across the North American continent would assume a longitudinal direction, and interchange of commerce would be between provinces and states. The proposed agreement would allow many articles of commerce to cross the line free of duty, and a substantial reduction in the tariff would effect many others.

Canada's Twentieth Century. Trade built up the ancient Cities of Rome and Carthage. To Great Britain's trade and commerce is due her sovereignty and first power of the world. What will trade do for Canada in the twentieth century?

Undoubtedly it will mean the development of her vast resources, and the bringing of millions within her bounds. But will it culminate in the establishment of a strong and healthy Canadian nationality, a political union with the kindred people to the south, who would become our closest associates in the event of reciprocity?

Trade links peoples together, but highways are necessary for the furtherance of trade. The Canadian Pacific Railway built up the Dominion and the prairie provinces; and it was this trade relation that made confederation possible.

For the past century and more, both in Canada and the United States, the people of the Atlantic slope have traded with the people of the Pacific, and to facilitate this, railroads have been constructed on lines east and west. It is interesting to note how these railroads, which to a great extent are responsible for that inclination, would lead to a diversion in the trend of trade.

Three Transcontinental Roads. The three Canadian transcontinentals at present monopolize the carrying trade from the Maritime Provinces to British Columbia. Their lines have been constructed to meet the demands of the west for the products of the east, and vice-versa. They are now enjoying unprecedented prosperity.

Would their dividends increase with trade running at right angles to their main lines, or is the present barrier between the United States and Canada the mainstay of their enterprise? An examination of the locations of American and Canadian roads, their co-operative tendencies and affiliation with each other in some cases, might without a due consideration of the facts leave the impression that, as they are in a position to carry trade north and south by direct routes from the principal distributing points in the northern and central states to the main points of distribution in Canada, Canadian railroads would be the chief beneficiaries of a reciprocal trade agreement.

Let us weigh the advantages as they would exist under reciprocity and under a continuation of Canada's present protective policy. If trade retains its present course, or if it diversifies north and south, the Canadian Pacific, Grand Trunk, and Canadian Northern will receive a portion of the carrying trade. A change in present tariff arrangement will either mean a decrease or an increase in their gross revenues.

East and West Traffic. At the present time the main traffic along these lines is eastward and westward. Every day long trains start on journeys of 2000 miles and over. In the event of reciprocity there would be no long hauls from Alberta to Quebec, but short ones from Alberta to Montana, and from Quebec to New York and Montreal.

It has been these large shipments of grain from the far west to Montreal that have placed the C.P.R. in the front rank on the New York Stock Exchange. Reciprocity would mean short hauls and small shipments, and it is on the long hauls that railroads depend for their largest earnings. The railroad that has to make provision in its time-table for six-minute differences in the chronological column, although operating less mileage, will show larger earnings than the road that grinds the long hauls to shreds. The policy of all railroads is to cross as many meridians as possible, sometimes at the sacrifice of much needed branch lines. Canada has afforded great opportunity for the working out of this policy. Her resources vary in their latitude and this has compelled people further removed to become most closely associated in matters of trade. Canadians may well regard this natural circumstance as provincial, since it has done much to preserve our autonomy and promote national progress.

What is Our Destiny? The United States is similarly situated, both geographically and geologically. But the United States is the stronger state. Americans number 127,000,000. They have always held hope of annexing us, and the high tariff wall has been in their way. If it falls our people in the west will form close associations with the peoples of the northwestern states, and Canadians in the east will have to look southward for trade. The east then develops more rapidly than the west. The man on the plains has had to send east for goods, look east for his markets. Our transcontinentals have been retailers to the west and traveling salesmen for the east. If the two principles of dealing with each other, the distributing agents may fall.

Under Trade Pact. Under reciprocity traffic would naturally cross, instead of paralleling the international boundary, with the result that Canadian roads would have short hauls while American roads would have the long hauls. The latter pays better, hence reciprocity would mean a lasting injury to our great national highways and force us to contribute to the wealth of American railways. History has taught us that railways exercise a potent control over the people. If free trade is established between the two integrals of the continent we can only expect that American railways will operate through the entire Dominion and we shall be obliged to conform to their ideas and principles of colonization and become the victims of their influence on the trend of trade.

Will Jim Hill, whose control over American railways is undisputed, become the "czar" of Canada? At the present time he is endeavoring to control both American and Canadian markets by extending his roads into Canada. During the past decade his interests have advanced $20,568,983.75 stocks and construction accounts to the following Canadian companies, whose properties are operated as a portion of the Great Northern Railway: Midland Railway of Manitoba, Brandon, Saskatchewan and Hudson Bay Railway, Crow's Nest Southern Railway, and the Vancouver, Victoria and Eastern Railway and Navigation Company.

Jim Hill in Canada. Three years ago he purchased a right-of-way into the territory of the City of Winnipeg at a very high figure, and last week it was announced that construction will be commenced this spring on a million dollar line from Winnipeg for the Great Northern Northern Pacific and Midland Railways. The Great Northern has already gained entrance into Canada at 18 different points on the international boundary, 12 by British Columbia, by Alberta, and 5 by Manitoba. Hill will now construct lines from Emerson to the point of entrance of his two main roads, to Winnipeg, and the construction of lines east, west and north will soon follow.

The effect of the advent into Canada of these two great American roads which extend from St. Paul north-easterly to Duluth and thence west to the boundary states, in the coast cities of Washington and Oregon, and control, or operate nearly every western American road, including the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway, would alone, backed up by reciprocity, revolutionize continental trade.

Figures of freight carried by Canadian and American railways show that manufactured goods make up the greatest tonnage, then lumber, grain, flour and live stock, respectively. With such immediate transportation facilities, the northern and central states will flood the Canadian live stock, grain and timber markets, and these products are allowed to come in free. With so marked a reduction in the price of breakfast cereals would be forced to give way to the combine at Battle Creek; Canadian farm implements would become subjects for museums and the milling industries of the western provinces would fall, in competition with Minneapolis. "The Milling City."

Under Protection. Under a continuation of our present protective policy, our railways will keep on growing and advancing, until Canada shall become a network of SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS. ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON BY REV. DR. LINSBOTT FOR THE INTERNATIONAL PRESS BIBLE QUESTION CLUB. (Copyrighted 1910 by Rev. T. R. Linscott, D.D.) I have read the Suggestive Questions on this Sunday School Lesson, by Rev. Dr. Linscott, in this issue of The Toronto Sunday World.

Date, March 5, 1911.

THE CONTEST. The most popular and the most practical plan for Bible study, together with a prize Bible contest, is running in the Sunday World. In short, the "Sunday School Lesson" must be read each week for 52 weeks; also the "Suggestive Questions" and the coupon should be cut out each week and signed, certifying that this has been done. Then any five of the questions that are indicated to be answered in writing must also be answered, and at the end of the term the coupons and written answers, duly signed with name and address, must be delivered to this office. The prizes will be awarded according to the number of coupons sent in, and the merits of the written answers. You can get all the help you want with the written answers.

Go in to win one of the solid-gold medals, if you complete the course, you will get a beautifully engraved Diploma, in three colors, in any event. Get all you can to do on in this course of Bible study.

Verse 1—What is the reason that people in the towns and cities are not as free in tendering off-hand hospitality, to preachers, as they are in the country? (2) Are people in the country as free, in tendering hospitality to preachers, as they are in the city? (3) What qualities does a man need to be called a "great woman"? (4) When we entertain a man of God, in our homes, which gets the greater benefit, the man of God, or the man of the world? (5) What was probably this woman's motive in urging her hospitality upon Elisha? (6) Verse 8-11—What rule should govern a wife in consulting her husband before inviting a man of God to make his home at her house? (7) What benefit would naturally come to a home entertaining a man of God? (8) If a woman of godly character frequently entertaining a man of God, in the days of her widowhood, would she be a blessing to the community? (9) To what extent should the association of a godly woman and a godly man be governed by the evil surmising of the gossip of the community? (10) The restoration of the blind man, Elisha, led to the home, how much value is there in conferring with a man of God? (11) Is it legitimate to desire to be introduced to the king, or the president, or the rich society? (12) Verse 12—What characterizes the refusal of this woman to be brought into the society of royalty and the rich? (13) Verse 13—What is the calamity for a home to be childless? Why? (14) If by plan and preference there are no children in the home, how does it affect the character of the husband and wife, the happiness of the home and the good of the community? (15) What is the value of each child born into an average home? What will you do for your baby? (16) What, if any, difference is there in the character and disposition of children born in answer to prayer and children born under protest? (17) Verse 14—What is the difference between a man of God and a man of the world? (18) Verse 15-16—When is it right, if ever, for us to say one thing while we mean another? (19) Verse 17—Would it ever be right or seemly, in these days, for a woman to act toward her pastor as this woman did to Elisha when she met him? ## WEDDING NOTICES

GLADISH-HALL.
The marriage of Miss Annie Louise Hall, youngest daughter of Mr. John Hall, to Mr. William Milton Gladish, took place on Wednesday afternoon at the home of the bride's father. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Hamilton Dicker, rector of St. Luke's Church, in the drawing-room, which was decorated with daffodils and palms. Miss Winnifred Cryer played the wedding march.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was attired in a traveling suit of coronation blue and tulle with roses and blue ribbons and carried a bouquet of roses. Miss Florence Hall, attended her sister as bridesmaid in grey striped cloth with black picture hat and carried pink roses. Mr. David Black was best man.

After the ceremony a reception was held by Mrs. A. J. de Carlo, the bride's sister, who was wearing mauve, and Mrs. Gladish, mother of the groom, wearing blue. Mr. and Mrs. Gladish left later to spend their honeymoon in New York.

CONNOR-COOK.
The Church of St. George the Martyr was the scene of a quiet wedding at half-past two o'clock on Wednesday

Vogt, Mr. Frank Weisman.

Society at the Capital

Hon. Mr. Justice and Madame Groulx, who were unfortunately in a rather bad accident on Sunday owing to their horses running away, are both doing as well as can be expected. Madame Groulx is suffering from a broken arm and the judge is very much cut about the face and head.

Teas given in the early part of the week had as hostesses Mrs. Edward Houston, who invited about forty guests to meet her mother, Mrs. J. A. Clayton, whose guests enjoyed a bright little game of bridge; Mrs. George Thompson, whose guests of honor were Mrs. Bookish Fellows (formerly Miss Lucille Watson), who appeared with "The City" company at the Russell Theatre on Monday night, and Mrs. Richard Lebe of Grenfell, Sask. (formerly Miss Dorothy Fletcher), who entertained a number of her former companions and several of Ottawa's prominent matrons.

Mrs. W. D. Gwynne of Toronto, who was about a month ago called to the Capital owing to the illness of Miss Norah Gwynne, has returned to Toronto. Miss Norah Gwynne, who has completely recovered, will remain in Ottawa with her aunt, Mrs. Collingwood Schreiber.

Mrs. H. Allan Bate has gone to New York to be with her daughter, Mrs. Peter, who is recovering from an attack of measles. Mr. and Mrs. Peter are on their way home.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Fleming, Miss Winnifred Gormully, Mr. Robert Gormully and Miss Lillian Dalnaly of Cobourg compose a party who have gone to New York to spend a fortnight, having left on Sunday.

Mrs. Douglas Armour of Montreal spent the week end in the Capital as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Woods in Chapel-street, and Mrs. Wood entertained informally on Saturday evening at dinner in her honor.

Mrs. A. W. Fleck was the hostess recently of a charmingly arranged luncheon at which the guests were: Lady Aylesworth, Mrs. R. L. Borden, Mrs. Rodolphe Lemieux, Mrs. Frank Olympe, Mrs. George E. Cowan of Vancouver, Mrs. W. E. Northrup of Belleville, Mrs. E. H. Bronnson, Mrs. J. A. Seybold, Mrs. T. Cameron, Mrs. S. Charles Moore, Mrs. Hugh McLachlan, Mrs. J. S. Ewart, Mrs. J. G. T. S. Smith, Mrs. L. A. J. McFarlane, Mrs. W. H. Davis. The table was a perfect picture of spring with masses of violets, jonquils and lilacs-of-the-valley.

Mrs. Louis Outley and Miss Helen Outley have left for St. Catharines on their way to spend several weeks at the Welland for the benefit of Miss Outley's health. Mrs. Charles Moore will also be a guest at the Welland for a short time and will be joined there by her daughter, Mrs. Edwin Force of Niagara Falls, who has been in poor health recently. Later Mrs. Moore will go to Vancouver, B. C. to visit her younger daughter, Mrs. G. Haliburton Burnett.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth MacLaren, with their little daughter, left Ottawa on the 10th of March for Okeanago, B. C., where they will in future reside. Mr. and Mrs. MacLaren will shortly leave for Edmonton, which will be their future home.

Mrs. D'Arroy McGee entertained at a "Foster" luncheon in honor of Mrs. Russell Blackburn's guest, Miss Frank Thompson of Toronto, which ten of Ottawa's bright young girls were the guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Keefer left on Wednesday for New York and will spend the remainder of the winter on the continent for the next few months, reaching London in time for the Moonlight Ball.

Mr. Dan O'Connor, K. C., accompanied by Dr. and Mrs. Edward O'Connor of Montreal, and his daughter, Mrs. Charles O'Connor, have left for Bermuda to spend some time.

Commander and Mrs. Howe are occupying apartments at the Kenilston. The Dowager Countess of Arrian and her daughter, Lady Winifred Gore, who are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm at Rideau Cottage, have postponed their departure for Canada for another week or so.

Mrs. Northcote of Toronto was in town for a few days visiting her daughter, Mrs. Edward Houston.

Mrs. E. L. Jordan entertained at a luncheon on Wednesday, and her guests being sixteen, among them Lady Tilley, Mrs. Howland of London, Mrs. E. L. Jordan, Mrs. J. A. Macdonald of Vancouver, B. C., Mrs. A. Gemmill, Mrs. W. G. Perley, Mrs. Milton Crawford, Mrs. Dunne of In-law, Mrs. Charles Roper, Lt. Col. J. Lyons-Biggar, Miss Cartwright, Miss Anna Oliver, Mrs. Crombie, Lord Lansdowne and Mr. W. Campbell. The table was beautifully arranged with violets and pale pink roses.

MISS MAE DICKENSON.
Miss Mae Dickenson, who has been some years in a number of our leading churches, has been doing musical mission work in New York City for the past month. She has been in the Jewish, Italian and other settlement quarters and last Sunday officiated in one of Dr. Parkhurst's missions. Her engagements have been extended throughout Easter. For rendering the British National Anthem at the Home of Detention for Boys she was given an ovation of a most enthusiastic character.

REGINA BADET, THE FAMOUS DANCER AND COMEDIENNE, WHO HAS TURNED LECTURER.

The engagement is announced in Winnipeg of Miss Madeline Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William John Cook, to Mr. William Alexander Connor, the Rev. B. A. Moore officiating. The bride, who was given away by her father, was attired in a cream broadcloth gown, white lace picture hat and ermine furs. She carried a bouquet of lily-of-the-valley. There were no attendants and after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Connor drove to the station and left to spend their honeymoon in New York. On their return they will reside at 100 Geoffrey-street.

GASKELL-MILLAR.
A pretty but quiet wedding took place at "Ingleide," Pembroke, the home of the bride's mother, last week, when Jessie Small, daughter of the late John P. Millar and of Mrs. Millar, was married to Manfred James, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Gaskell of Owen Sound, and relative of Mrs. Gaskell, the author of "Cranford." The Rev. W. J. Knox, B. A., pastor of Calvin Church, Pembroke, conducted the ceremony.

The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. John P. Millar, and was attired in a gown of grey crepe de chene. The only attendant was Miss Jessie Miller, the small niece of the bride, who wore pink silk cologne, and carried a basket of lily-of-the-valley and maidenhair fern. The rooms were decorated with roses, lilies, carnations and lilies-of-the-valley.

After the supper, the bride and groom left for New York, whence they will sail for Europe by the Mauretania. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Gaskell will reside at 100 Geoffrey-street.

MRS. BRITNELL'S TEA.
Mrs. A. Britnell was the hostess of a tea Thursday afternoon last at her home in Tacoma-avenue, which was aglow with lights and flowers. Mrs. Britnell was wearing a gown of apricot crepe de chene with velvet lace trimmings, and a sheaf of lily-of-the-valley. She was assisted in the drawing-room by Mrs. R. E. Cook, Miss Louise Miller, the small niece of the bride, who wore pink silk mull and lace, and Mrs. W. Wilson, in champagne silk and lace trimmings, each wearing a corsage bouquet of violets.

The tea table, which was in charge of Mrs. Johnston, was attractively arranged with cluny lace and shiraz candle sticks shaded in yellow; a large rustic basket of marguerites and lily-of-the-valley, smilax draping the table. Assisting Mrs. Johnston were Miss Britnell and Miss Inga. Miss Little took charge of the library, which was prettily decorated with ferns and red carnations.

Spring Millinery Opening. Miss E. J. McCool, 404 Yonge-street, is holding her Spring Millinery Opening Tuesday and Wednesday, March 14 and 15. All are cordially invited.

RECTOR GIRLS BUT LESQUERS AT THE STAR

There will, most assuredly, be a notable week at the Star Theatre, commencing Monday evening. No less an attraction than that "The Rector Girls Burlesques" could have been selected for this event.

Not only is this particular organization popular for its carefully blended sharp and playful satire and delightful comedy, but it is looked upon as the best all round burlesque attraction that has, so far, visited this city, which is certainly something to be proud of.

Mr. Morris Walmsley, the director of "The Rector Burlesques," has introduced quite a number of novel features into this season's offering, "A Trip to the South Pole," which is the principal vehicle for the splendid laughing show that makes no stops for reflection, but keeps pulling laugh on laugh from rise until final fall of curtain.

Tom McRae, who is considered by competent critics to be the best comedian on the burlesque stage and pretty much the best actor, will be included among these starling artists as Cody and Sonette, George C. Johnson, Joe Field, John Hanson, Romeo Briant and Ruth Schom.

An extra feature for this engagement will be the great Brazilian Trio, a direct import from Rio de Janeiro, which, whose realistic acting, sweet singing and complete mastery of musical instruments have made them the most sought after act in vaudeville.

An agreeable feature of "The Rector Girls Burlesques" is absence of servile imitation of former successes which is fast losing favor with the discriminating theatregoers.

In addition to the above the Star Theatre has engaged the two brightest stars in the plastic world, John L. Sullivan and Jake Kilrain, who will give a lively sparring bout at every performance.

The New York Herald in commenting upon the stunning costumes worn by Maxine Elliott in the play "The Cowboy and the Lady" as produced at the Knickerbocker Theatre, New York, stated that they were more suited to her individuality than the play itself demanded.

These perfectly fitted costumes were the exclusive product of an artist in that line, Mr. Matthew Vise, who cut and fitted these gowns for Maxine Elliott. He is now located in Toronto at 50 College-street, and respectfully solicits the patronage of those who demand smart costumes at very reasonable prices.

MAXINE ELLIOTT.

The marriage of Marion Howard will make their home in Toronto. Mrs. Howard, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George Ross, of Montreal, to Mr. Wm. T. Pugsley, son of Hon. Wm. and Mrs. Pugsley, of St. John, N. B., took place on Thursday afternoon at the American Presbyterian Church, Montreal, where Rev. Dr. Johnson performed the ceremony. The bride wore a gown of white Duchess satin, with a court train, and was assisted by Mrs. J. A. Mackay, matron of honor. The bridegroom was supported by Mr. Jack Pugsley, of St. John, his brother. After the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents, and Mr. and Mrs. Pugsley left for Bermuda.

CRUSADE AGAINST RACE TRACKS IN THE STATES

Forty Have Been Closed Since Guttenberg and Gloucester and Fight Is Being Kept up.

More than 30 race-tracks in the United States, not including nine in the State of New York and three in Florida, have been closed by adverse legislation since 1902, when the first successful crusade against racing was carried out in New Jersey.

The New Jersey crusade was chiefly due to the inequities at Guttenberg and Gloucester, where winter race meets were held in defiance of the racing law and the sure thing gambling circuit ruled with an iron hand.

In spite of powerful influences the Chicago tracks were soon put out of business. Washington Park, where the $50,000 American Derby was run, Hawthorne, where Edward Corriean presided, Worth and Racine, in which the blind John Condon was more than ordinarily interested, were forced to close their gates.

Several attempts since have been made to revive the sport in the Windy City, but the reform element in each instance has developed sufficient power to successfully oppose favorable legislation.

Reformers held Whip Hand. Condon put nearly a million dollars into Oaklawn Park at Hot Springs, Ark. only to find that after one season the reformers had the whip hand in the legislature at Little Rock.

Corriean was caught again when the Louisiana Legislature closed the gates at New Orleans, where he had thrived for many years. The master of Hawthorne invested a fortune in the construction of City Park track, which was run in opposition to the old Fair Grounds, in which Corriean and Condon were said to be heavily interested.

Montgomery Parks Boarded Up. Montgomery Park, Memphis, where many past events made history, and the Nashville track were boarded up because of the anti-bookmaking crusade in the State of Tennessee.

Florida. A new law goes into effect on May 1, which, it is said, will make further meetings at Jacksonville, Tampa and Pensacola out of the question.

It is needless to record the fact that the Agnew-Perkins bill, passed by the New York State Legislature last year, made it advisable for the owners of the Aqueduct, Jamaica, Belmont Park, Gravesend, Sheepshead Bay, Brighton, Empire City and Saratoga tracks to give up the fight temporarily at least.

The only states in which racing and betting can go on now are Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Utah, Montana and Kentucky. There are tracks ready to resume business at Salt Lake City, Ogden and Butte, while Pamlico will hold a spring meeting as usual in April.

Jamesstown, near Norfolk, will try another session this spring and open before it will not be interfered with, in view of a recent court ruling in the Juarez Will Be the Big Show While Tennessee and Missouri Are Likely to Have Tracks.

The tolling of curfew in California, together with the impending legislative enforcement of the anti-gambling bill in Florida, which, beyond a question of a doubt, will close the gates of Monticello Park on May 1, has not lessened the enthusiasm of the participants and patrons of the thoroughbred turf.

American Army Gets Stallions

August Belmont Presents Henry of Navarre and Octagon for Breeding Purposes Free Service of Other Famous Sires.

By Jonathan Winfield.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—The United States Government now owns two of the most famous race horses in the world, Henry of Navarre and Octagon. The two kings of the turf are now in France, but will be shortly brought to the United States and turned over to the army establishment.

August Belmont gave the two famous racers, with four other thoroughbreds and free service by his great stallions in Kentucky, as a nucleus for a government breeding bureau for the production of the horses suitable for cavalry mounts.

When his offer was first made there was the question raised as to whether the United States Government could accept any present of value, without congressional sanction. The legal opinion was given that the gift of the horses could be accepted. Immediately Mr. Belmont was notified to that effect and the treasury department is now paving the way to have the two horses brought in from France without the payment of duty.

General H. T. Allen, who is at the head of the cavalry bureau of the army, is enthusiastic over the gift of Mr. Belmont, and the immediate prospects for the establishment of a bureau of breeding, declaring that in this way only will the government be able to solve the remount problem.

"European countries," he said today, "long ago found it necessary to supervise the breeding of horses in order to supply the demand of their armies, and every European country of importance, with the exception of England, has for years been encouraging the breeding of the proper type of army remount. England, one of the most important horse countries in the world, has for many reasons only recently been forced to this step. It is interesting to note that practically the same conditions confront England that confront this country at the present time, and that almost identical steps are contemplated in the two Anglo-Saxon countries to vading army recrossed the Niemen with 1000 cavalry horses. In six months the horses had all disappeared.

Major-General Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the army, in pointing out today that the army is sadly in need of a source of certain supply of cavalry remounts, said that the department is grateful to Mr. Belmont's type to offer good breeding stallions to the government.

Already one man has followed Mr. Belmont's lead. He is Edward Cassatt, the millionaire son of the late president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, A. J. Cassatt. Mr. Cassatt, a former officer of the United States cavalry, has presented three high-class breeding stallions, which have been accepted by Major-General Leonard Wood on behalf of the army.

AUTOMOBILE DEALERS FORM ASSOCIATION

Will Promote Motor Shows and Demonstrations—W. S. Smith, President.

There has long been a feeling among the automobile users in Toronto that some kind of an association should be formed, such as exists in Buffalo and all the big automobile towns of the States.

During the recent show the local dealers held a luncheon at the King Edward, where this project was taken up. Mr. G. M. McGregor proposed that the association be called the "Toronto Automobile Dealers' Association," and he explained its object and purposes. Reliability runs and hill-climbing contests will be arranged and everything pertaining to the interests of the automobile such as gymnasiums and motor shows will be handled by the association.

After his address there was a lengthy general discussion which ended in the formation of a committee composed of the following gentlemen: W. Hyalop, M. Thompson, P. A. Fox, Fox, Morse Fellers, O. Hazlewood, M. A. Kennedy.

Election of Officers.

This committee then held a meeting, at which the following officers were appointed: President, W. S. Smith, of the Automobile Supply Co.; 1st vice-president, W. Hyalop, of Hyalop Bros.; 2nd vice-president, A. M. Thompson, of the Dominion Automobile Co.; secretary, P. A. Fox, of the Ford Motor Co.; treasurer, Morse Fellers, of the White Motor Car Co.; directors, O. Hazlewood and M. A. Kennedy.

A motion was then put before the general meeting and the foregoing officers were unanimously elected.

"In view of the fact that Toronto is such a strong automobile city there is certainly room for an organization of this kind," said a member. "We have long felt the need of a body which would be competent to organize and conduct sporting and social events always been very ready to give support to open air contests of any kind climbing contest or a reliability run under the auspices of such a reliable dealer has as the Toronto automobile tremely popular."

DO BIRDS HIBERNATE?

Hollow Trunk of Tree Filled With Black Martins.

A reader of the Sunday World writes as follows: Let me ask a question. Do birds hibernate? Yes, as a friend of mine, with others, was cutting timber in mid-winter not far from Peterboro. They felled a large tree that proved to be hollow. The hollow was found to be literally full of martins—a large blue-black swallow that comes when spring is well begun. There were numerous, but in this tree there were thousands of them. The heat given off by the birds was extreme. The poor things were left to perish in the snow this week, and for years afterward they were rarely seen in that vicinity. Does anyone know of a similar instance of birds hibernating?

UNBINDING THE FEET OF CHINESE GIRLS.

"I visited a girls' school in Choutsum, where every pupil is required on entering to unbind her feet." writes a traveler in China, in an exchange. "I have been very curious ever since I have been in China to see a naked bound foot, but it is not a thing one can ask of a woman, so it was only lately that I had the opportunity at this school in Choutsum. "Every Saturday a Scotch lady visits this school and treats the unbound feet, massaging them with oil. She invited me to accompany her, which I gladly did. Here I saw a lot of girls between the ages of 12 and 16 who were getting out their feet. The unbinding must be done gradually, first loosening the bandages and wearing larger shoes. Then loosening a little more in some instances the massaging and straightening out of the toes was painful, and the girls winced, but insisted that it was better and less painful than to bind them. One girl of 16 tried to walk, but not having the support of a shoe could not manage it with her bare feet and stumbled and fell. She cried with pain.

Choutsum. On a kang were seated a lot of girls, and in turn my friend massaged their feet. It made the girls go up and down my back to see these feet so distorted. The great toe was normal except the nail. I think in every instance the nails of the great toes were thick and horny looking. The other four toes being pressed against the sole of the foot, were some of them abnormally long, being pulled out of shape, or abnormally small, as if hindered in growth. "When my friend laid them flat on the palm of her hand they sprung back under the sole when she released them, as if they worked on a spring. She put rolls of cotton under them to keep them from being tight against the sole. The insteps had a high arch, some being quite curved, while immediately underneath the sole was a deep crease. "In every instance the heel was abnormally large and callous. All the weight in walking comes on the heel. In some instances the massaging and straightening out of the toes was painful, and the girls winced, but insisted that it was better and less painful than to bind them. One girl of 16 tried to walk, but not having the support of a shoe could not manage it with her bare feet and stumbled and fell. She cried with pain.

On Parliament Hill

As an interlude to the reciprocity discussion, Hon. Geo. P. Graham brought down his railway budget on Friday. This is a statement that the minister of railways has no objection to the house before he is able to get at his estimates. The most important item in the speech was the reference to the Hudson Bay Railway. Notwithstanding the possibility that reciprocity with United States will have the tendency to divert products of the provinces to the markets of Minnesota and Chicago, the government is avowedly determined to construct the Hudson Bay Railway. The government, however, has not the courage of its convictions. Admitting, in the first place, that the Hudson Bay Railway is an economic necessity for the west, and recognizing the principle of government ownership, Mr. Graham is not prepared to go the whole distance and provide for government operation. The day of land subsidies in Canada he said was passed, but there is no reason why the administration should not emerge into the brighter light of ownership and operation for the people.

A snap verdict in the house of commons on Wednesday afternoon, Mr. Borden's motion for delay in the consideration of the reciprocity proposals had the effect of giving the Liberals a majority which they could not have had. Happily Clifford Sifton and Lloyd Harris were on hand, but W. M. Graham, whose denunciation of the trade pact was now the least of his troubles, that of Mr. Sifton, was unable to record his approval of the delay, and a further declaration in the house the following day was necessary to make his position clear. There is no doubt that if Mr. Borden's amendment had carried it would have brought relief to a large section of the eastern Liberals, and even if the vaunted arguments of the Liberals had been based on sound premises, the merits of the proposition would not have suffered by the cooling process.

Incidentally, the speech of H. H. Miller (St. Grey) was remarkable for a pervasion of previous arguments. Mr. Miller contended that United States natural products were diminishing, and would soon reach the vanishing point. This would give Canadian products a market in the republic. In this respect, the member for South Grey disregarded the able argument of Andrew Broder on the debate on the address, when the member for Dundas severely criticized the department of agriculture for lack of aggressive methods in promoting intensive farming in Canada. Mr. Broder's statement in no uncertain manner that the resources of United States farms were largely discounted in this country. That in five years the total crop produced could be increased fifty per cent, and in ten it would be doubled. He also showed by actual government statistics that the acreage under cultivation could largely be increased, and the return per acre be made to exceed that of European countries. In the face of this it was a curious argument for Mr. Miller to make and the Conservative speakers during the coming week have promised to throw considerable light on this interesting phase of the discussion.

Along this line it is interesting to point out that Mr. Miller is shaping for the next session a bill to amend the trade question is said to be at variance with a large section of his constituents, and it is doubtful if he will represent South Grey after the next election. Perhaps it is a government job he has in view?

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's eulogium on reciprocity on Tuesday last did not add that degree of enthusiasm to the government's supporters that was anticipated. The prime minister is not an able exponent of trade questions, and he failed to touch the pertinent points of the opposition. In fact his argument was negative for the most part, and for the two hours that he spoke he made little or no headway in the direction of positive reasoning. It was well enough for the premier to deal with the annexation cry, but he was unable to satisfy the house that annexation to the U. S. was not in the mind of a great mass of men of influence, and he seemed to ignore the fact that in the southern states annexation is today one of the live topics of discussion. It is not enough to let trade follow natural channels. That is what the free traders argue. But in the case of Canada, trade should be made to follow those channels that bring the most lasting results to the country. Since Canada has blazed a trail for heretofore, it is not surprising that she should be so enormously, and the old adage not to "swap horses when crossing a stream" is shortly applicable in this case.

How They Take the Census in Austria. The method of taking the census in Austria is interesting. The great diversity of race and speech in this country and the influence of this diversity on political questions, makes it important to have accurate statistics thereof. The census returns therefore include religion, race, and usual language spoken in the family. The information is collected in a practical way. Sheets calling for all details as to the buildings themselves, such as the ownership, rent, and number of occupants, number of windows, exposure of same, etc., and all details as to the occupants thereof, and the relation of the minimum of inconvenience to the inhabitants, excepting that as the sheets pass from door to door, publicity is given to details which it might be wished to conceal.

The Japanese Government detailed certain of its own civil employes to study Austrian methods of census enumeration. Teachers from the Austrian public schools were employed as census agents and the school were

How Birds Keep Warm. The high temperature of birds generally is due to their feathers. They are able to resist cold more effectively than they could otherwise do. Whereas blood heat in man is 98.4 degrees Fahrenheit, in a bird it is 104 degrees. The domestic fowl and more in some other birds. Nevertheless they feel the cold cruelly, as you may see any frosty night if you visit an ivy creeper clad with a lantern; the sparrows nestle together in a closely packed mass, and if there be a chimney you may be sure the birds will have chosen its exterior as their roosting place for the sake of such warmth as it may give.—Detroit Free Press.

Will you tell me if there is any way to permanently destroy a disfiguring growth of superfluous hair on my face and arms? I am 55 years old, and the growth is very bad. My daughter, who is 22, is similarly troubled. I have been told that depilatories are worthless, and about a new method, which I hesitate to try, as I am told it is painful. I should be glad if you would give me your advice.

CHARLOTTE K. You are wise to avoid the electric needle, it is a dangerous operation, and besides being painful, often leaves severe scars. I have frequently stated in these columns that it is better to endure the annoyance than to suffer the pain of the electric needle. I have also warned enquirers against depilatories, which are worse than useless, because they cause the hair to grow out thicker than before. Recently, however, I have received some enthusiastic and reliable reports about a new method (originating in Japan), which has been successfully used in this country. I do not know its name, but a friend of mine who received a complete cure by its use, told me that she would gladly furnish full particulars, without charge, to anyone who would write her. If you will write to Mrs. Osgood, 885 K. Old P. O. St., Providence, R. I., enclosing a stamped envelope, or by mentioning my advice, she will send you quite free of all cost, complete instructions, which will undoubtedly enable you to be permanently rid of all trace of the blemish. The Rink Patronized by Toronto's Best People Opens for the Spring Season.

Elsewhere in this issue is an advertisement announcing that the Parkdale Roller Rink, 212 Cowan-avenue, opens for the spring season next Saturday night, March 18. This is always good news to a certain class of Toronto's young people, who never think of patronizing another skating academy. Parkdale was the first to introduce roller skating in this city about five years ago, and at the great management made it plain that the rink catered to Toronto's best people, and along these lines the rink has established a nice reputation. To those who enjoy a healthy exercise, combined with a good amusement, here is the place to go. Where Parkdale outshines other Canadian rinks in more than any other one feature, is the superior skating surface, it being the only noiseless floor in the Dominion. Skaters find hardly more noise here than in an ice rink, and it is a wonderful improvement over the old style floors where the loud, deafening roar is always present. Like the best American rinks, the floor is treated with a liquid preparation called Dugless Anti-Slip, which, as the name implies, prevents the floor from becoming slippery and eliminates dust. The writer is informed that a new lot of resilient, velvet-tread skates, with all the latest improvements, has been ordered for this season, and it looks as if Parkdale Rink is going to be the most popular place of amusement in the city from now until next June. To show in what high esteem Parkdale Rink is held by the young ladies of the city, the following remark was made by a Toronto lady a short time ago. She said she could hardly wait until Parkdale Rink was opened. "I do not know what it is about Parkdale, but skating there is so much different from the other rinks. At Parkdale you seem to fairly sail along, skating is so easy and with practically no effort, and another thing, you do not slip on the floor, like in most rinks. Why she said, "I have never yet felt tired skating out there." It is a fact, and a large number of spectators have often made the remark, "the floor is not slippery and skating requires so little effort, the skater gliding gracefully over the polished surface. On account of the big crowd opening night, the doors will be opened at 7:15 sharp. No skates will be reserved by phone for this night.

ANNUAL MEETING THE CROW'S NEST PASS COAL COMPANY LIMITED

The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company, Limited, was held on Friday, March 10, 1911, at the head office of the company, West King-street, Toronto, with Mr. Elias Rogers, president, in the chair.

It was announced that a dividend of 1 per cent. would be paid to shareholders on March 20. Mr. Rogers, in delivering the president's address, said: The coal mining industry in the Crow's Nest Pass, both in British Columbia and Alberta, where there is now an output of about three million tons of coal and over 300,000 tons of coke per year, is the result of the expenditure of capital and the industry has advanced a little over the short period of ten years.

In the year 1898 only 8986 tons were produced by this company, and no other coal was shipped at that time from the district above referred to. In 1910 this company alone produced 1,209,762 tons of coal, and no other coal was shipped at that time from the district above referred to.

From 1900 to 1910 inclusive this company was paid out in wages in British Columbia $15,200,788.90. Last year the pay roll was $2,253,357.20. The company also paid for plant and equipment from 1900 to 1910 inclusive $5,031,251. A considerable part of this sum has been distributed throughout the eastern provinces for machinery, etc. The coal tax paid to the British Columbia Government in 1910 amounted to $75,468.40.

From these figures some idea will be had of the value of the industry to Canada, and especially to the Province of British Columbia, where the large expenditure in wages is made. The directors report with the statement attached, indicates the result of the past year's operations of this company, and, rightly understood, shows considerable progress. It is necessary, however, to say, that without explanation it is not possible for shareholders to obtain an intimate knowledge of the results of the mining operations by comparison of the annual statements. The accounting is at present a quite different line from what it was formerly, and, besides this, there are other elements pertaining to the question of profits which have varied considerably. For instance, large profits were shown from the sale of townships at different times in former years. There was the Fernie townsite, the Morrissey townsite and the Michel townsite. In the annual statements these profits, also profits from miscellaneous sources, are not distinguished from profits on coal and coke. Again, in former years, no account was taken of depreciation. This perhaps was not necessary, as the property was good enough to take care of it, and probably is still. However, in accordance with prudent business practice, we are now charging to "cost of coal" all renewing work, and, in addition, are setting aside 10c per ton on all coal mined and 10c per ton on all coke produced and the coke made, as a "renewal" fund, during the year 1910 was $19,216.23, as against $8,115.37 in 1909, or 10c per ton of coal produced, 0.016c in 1910, as against 0.012c in 1909.

The Crow's Nest Pass Electric Light and Power Company, Limited, have paid to the coal company a dividend of $10,000 and carried forward to credit of profit and loss $28,881.11. The Morrissey, Fernie and Michel Railway Company carried forward from 1909 a charge of $20,274.77. That loss has been made up during the year, and on the 31st of December there was at the credit of profit and loss account of this company $11,296.51. During the year this last company has paid off bonds amounting to $13,871.28, which has reduced the amount of outstanding bonds to $27,500.25 as of December 31st. These bonds are $115.84 each, payable monthly, and they are the only outstanding bonds against any of the companies.

In the month of October the slack coal bins at Fernie were partially destroyed by fire, interfering to some extent with the operations. The bins were fully insured and the repairs are now nearing completion. The agreement entered into by the company with the miners, April 1st, 1909, for two years, expires on April 1st next, and negotiations for a new agreement are now pending. It is hoped that a satisfactory agreement will be arrived at, the terms of which is respectfully submitted.

redevelopment in nearly all of the mines will be necessary in order to put the operations on an up-to-date economical basis. This can probably be done without seriously interfering with the present output.

It seems necessary to bring these facts briefly to your attention, and before moving the adoption of the report I would like to say that we are deeply indebted to the officers and employees of the company for their industry, zeal and fidelity in the consequence of which we are able to present this, under all the circumstances, to my mind, very satisfactory statement.

The directors beg to submit to the shareholders their fourteenth annual report, including statement of assets and liabilities as of 31st of December, 1910.

The balance at the credit of profit and loss account, brought forward from 1909, amounted to $116,021.12. The net profit during the year 1910 was $88,800.17, making the total amount at the credit of profit and loss account $204,821.29. From this amount your directors have paid two dividends of one per cent. each, or a total of $124,216, and have carried forward to the credit of profit and loss $80,605.13 to 1911.

The coal mined during the year amounted to 1,209,762 tons. The coke produced during the year was 394,979 tons. The production of coal shows a month over the corresponding month of 1909; the total increase for 1910 being 10,717 tons.

The amount spent on improvements during the year was $144,514.48, as against $215,339.15 the previous year, and the coke made, as a "renewal" fund, during the year 1910 was $19,216.23, as against $8,115.37 in 1909, or 10c per ton of coal produced, 0.016c in 1910, as against 0.012c in 1909.

A WISE PIGEON. If the pigeon patient whose left leg has been in a plaster cast from the Relief Hospital for eleven days were able to talk probably the first thing it would do after its "discharge" from the hospital would be to fly to Pemberton-square, the general meeting place of the pigeons, and tell the others what a wonderful thing surgery is.

The pigeon at the Relief Hospital had the plaster cast taken from its leg by Dr. Shedd this morning. There were many surgeons present, and they manifested no little interest in the work of Dr. Shedd, who has taken considerable interest in the case of the helpless pigeon, which a week ago Sunday tapped its bill repeatedly against a window of the hospital, until an attendant came to its assistance. The pigeon was "admitted," and Dr. Shedd, after setting the injured leg, placed it in a cast, also placing the right leg in a cast.

MANUEL'S ENGLISH HOME Abercorn, an Unpretentious House at Richmond.

Abercorn, the residence which King Manuel has taken for a year from Kaid Sir Henry Maclean, was built some forty years ago by a Scotsman named Graham, who made a fortune in New Zealand, whence most of the wood used in the construction of the house came.

Mr. Graham spent $25,000 on the house, and after his death it was occupied by A. M. Becker. In 1909, on retiring from the service of the late Sultan of Morocco, Sir Harry Maclean purchased it for about a quarter its original cost.

It is an unpretentious, comfortable house, and its exterior is mid-Victorian in aspect. Its privacy is doubly secured by a high brick wall and by numerous trees. It stands in four acres of grounds, which include two tennis courts, a croquet lawn, a charming roseary, fruit and kitchen gardens, and attractively laid-out flower gardens.

The chief feature of Abercorn is the entrance, an almost circular in shape, and lighted by a large dome. There are only two floors in the house. On the ground floor are a large and lofty drawing room and dining room, a boudoir and a library, well stocked with books of reference and travel.

Both the drawing room and boudoir open into a large conservatory, arranged as a winter garden or smoking lounge, with the dining room and library opening into it. If not very extensive views over the garden. The view from the house nowhere extends beyond the grounds.

The bedrooms on the first floor are approached by a stone staircase, on which hangs a life-size portrait of the late Sultan of Morocco. In all there are fourteen bedrooms and dressing rooms and three bathrooms. The servants' quarters are well arranged. There is stable for five horses attached to the house, and also a motor car garage.

Four Portuguese servants are already in the house preparing it for the arrival of the new tenants. The furniture in the way of redecoration. Several trunks containing King Manuel's and Queen Amelia's clothing and personal effects have arrived. They will not bring anything in the way of furniture.

Both a large Portuguese colony is already springing up at Richmond. Messrs. W. J. and A. Long, who let Abercorn to King Manuel, say that they are overwhelmed with applications for houses from Portuguese families.

The Marquis de Lavradio, King Manuel's private secretary, has just taken Susex House, a large furnished house near Abercorn, and the Count and Countess de Pignatello, lord chamberlain and lady-in-waiting to Queen Amelia, have taken a large unfurnished house in Queen's-road, Richmond Hill.

Good and bad companions. Good and wise associates are like princes in defensive leagues. One defends the other against devices of the common foe. Vicious ones are like the treacherous lanterns. If not very extensive views over the garden. The view from the house nowhere extends beyond the grounds.

LIFELESS TRADING IN NEW YORK PUBLIC LITTLE INTERESTED

Attempt Being Made by Wall Street Syndicates to Build Up Market Following.

World Office, Saturday Evening, March 11. The reduction in the Bank of England rate to 3 per cent, and the lowering of the dividend of New York Central were items calculated to work at cross purposes in the New York stock market this week. The drop in the English bank rate has been anticipated, and as the trend of money rates is still downward another reduction is not at all unlikely. A lower N. Y. C. dividend has also been expected. A year ago the dividend was raised from 5 to 6 per cent, and the former rate is now returned to. The sudden change in the dividend of so prominent a company matters of high finance which always exists in Wall Street, and places the handling of this company on the plane of what are termed the "cats and dogs."

N. Y. Central has not earned its dividend for many years, and the payments to shareholders have been made from the earnings of subsidiary companies. The raise in the rate a year ago showed a terrible deficiency of business foresight, or an attempt to influence the stock market. Both are bad, and whichever is the real reason it only corroborates the statement that Wall Street values are only to be judged by the caprices of the market. The reduction of the N. Y. C. dividend has established a precedent which in all probability will be followed later by

Easy Money Conditions a Favorable Factor, But Market is Still Faced With Uncertainty.

St. Paul and some other railroad companies. New York stocks have been almost lifeless during the week and in the absence of public buying, attempts have been made by the various syndicates to build up a short interest. Investors are not being pressed with real money, as most of those who are long of the market are too high up to let go without taking a loss, and these are seldom taken when small. It is difficult therefore to keep prices steady and occasionally to bring on spurts against the four trading and outside shorts. Nothing except cheap money can be eyed as an argument for higher prices, and this is not at present an appealing influence to any large body of speculators.

Wall Street is now faced with a special session of congress, at which attempts will certainly be made to make a drastic change with tariff. This and the supreme court decisions which have to be made are sufficient to cause anxiety to those who would like to make the market attractive and get in some new buyers. The advice given last week ago, that it will be hard to make money from purchases, is still good, and the clear-cut speculator's short sales on moderate rallies are likely to remain the only present method on which he can make profitable terms.

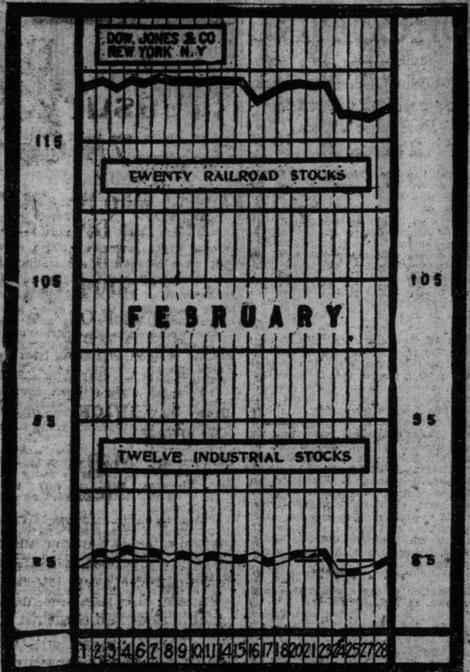

On the Toronto exchange little attention has been paid to the listed issues during the week. Porcupine notations have claimed any speculative interest, and for the time being exhibited any operations of importance in former listed specialties. A number of the Montreal rumors was shown to be only a market canard by the regular dividend declaration by the Toronto Railway directors, and the shares subsided six points much more readily than they advanced. Towards the week-end there were subdued murmurs in regard to Mackay, and the stock advanced. The public has not yet been informed what the dealer in Mackay is actually contemplating, and will not likely be informed until the shares have discounted the proposition.

Money is now freely available for market requirements and the loaning institutions have gracefully submitted to the inevitable. The money market is compelling investment purchases, but these are largely confined to the real good securities. To this extent the market is getting a support which might be transformed into a small speculative movement. E. P. R. is feeling the benefit of the lowering of the Bank of England rate and has carried speculation into the shares of its subsidiary organization. Current conditions are if anything favorable to prices and may be expected to have results accordingly. The Mexican disturbance should cause unrest among the stockholders of companies operating in that country as their interests will be fully protected, but this will not prevent the market being manipulated in accordance with the new needs.

The Trend of Prices in New York Market

The general trend of the New York Stock Exchange during the month of February is shown in the above chart, which indicates the average prices of 20 railroad and 12 industrial stocks, which are taken as representative of the whole list of securities. It will be seen that no movements of importance occurred until the last Friday of the month. The Interstate Commerce Commission announced its adverse decision in the railroad rate case after the close of the market on Thursday. For twenty-two immediately preceding business days the fluctuations in the averages had been less than a point in either direction, and at the close of the market on Thursday all stocks opened off following the lead of London, but had recovered partially by the close, so that the twenty rails showed only 2.16 points loss. The averages continued to fall and on the following Monday the averages were 116.20.

ANOTHER RUBBER BOOM

Old London Getting Ready for Another "Killing."

A revival of the speculation in shares of rubber plantation stocks has been the leading feature of the London stock market within the past fortnight. The movement there in the securities of this class has again assumed some of the characteristics of a "boom" and Wall Street also to some degree reflected it by increased dealings and advancing quotations for its own stocks representing rubber interests. The market in fact, has the appearance to a large extent of an artificial manipulation of another downfall of inflated valuations. Leading English authorities, like The London Economist, have taken occasion to warn the British public against the multitude of rubber schemes which have been placed on the market on an overvalued basis as to their capacity and a disregard of the long time which must elapse before they can become, even under the most favorable conditions, highly remunerative enterprises.

Week's currency movement results in nearly $7,000,000 loss New York City banks, mostly because of shipments to the interior.

The statement of exports of domestic products from the United States for February shows a total of $87,969,161, against $95,545,550 in February, 1910.

Albany: Public service commission authorized New York Central to issue $20,000,000 three-year notes, to be sold at a price and interest rate, to give the company equivalent of par on 5 per cent. interest basis.

Fresh misunderstandings concerning Missouri Pacific cleared up and agreement reached between George J. Gould and Kuhn, Loeb-Rockefeller interests a month ago, will be carried out substantially as then outlined.

The outlook is improving, but patience is necessary. Canadian issues are still full of headlines that will give little reason for holding them. Pennsylvania may be safely taken on even little recessions. With abatement of Mexican troubles smelters will be sold by Wabash. Joseph's Financial News Bureau.

ON WALL STREET.

Plenty of persons stand ready to prognosticate the future of the market, but it is a habit doing the opposite of what most of them predict. One thing however, is reasonably certain, that stocks will be high, irregular for some time to come, and that best results will be secured by making frequent turns and being satisfied with moderate results. A person who waits for five or ten points profit is apt to be disappointed, although he may be able to make a number of two or three-point turns. While the possibility of so many unfavorable things developing would adopt the uniform policy of buying only on drives and letting go on sharp spurts.

Hudson's weekly letter to Erickson Perkins & Co. (J. G. Beatty), Charles Head & Co. to R. R. Bongard. The stability of the market doubtless finds an explanation in the ease of money, that also fosters absorption of new security issues, the supply of which seems inexhaustible. The reduction in the Bank of England rate to 3 per cent. points to the same favorable monetary condition. From the standpoint of the consumer there is a source of gratification in the large grain reserves of the farmers, which suggest lower prices for breadstuffs. Moreover, the outlook for the basis of our prosperity. The decisions of the supreme court in the so-called trust cases, we look for a quiet professional market, and speculation at a low ebb. At the same time the outlook is not bad, and speculators should be taken advantage of to purchase good issues for turns, with sales on bulges.

BUICK OIL CO. SHARES Treasury Stock Will Soon Advance From 75 Cents to $1.00 (Par) Per Share

Those Who Buy at 75-Cent Price Should Receive Enough Dividends in a Short Time to Pay for Their Stock and Receive a Handsome Profit for Years to Come

The Buick Oil Company is now a producing company. It has just sold over 100,000 barrels of oil to the Standard Oil Company, which will net them over $45,000.00 cash.

Buick Midway Well No. 1 Now Earning Nearly $1,500.00 Per Day is the wonder of the Midway district. It is flowing over 3,000 barrels per day under control. The opinion of Oil Experts is that it is now the best and largest well in the district.

The Company will withdraw its shares from sale after the small block of remaining shares, which has been allotted for further developing purpose, is sold.

Read the statement of A. G. Wilkes—one of the large oil operators of the Midway California oil district—who has just sold the January and July consolidated wells to an English syndicate for $1,750,000.00 cash.

Chicago, March 7, 1911.

back your applications until too late. We told you that this company would bring in this well, and the well is now in, we have already sold over 100,000 barrels of oil to the Standard Oil Company.

Now is the Time to Buy

We want each and every man who reads this not to delay or wait one single moment. We have told you in words that cannot be doubted, in the actual telegrams received from Mr. Buick himself, in the proof and figures of some of the greatest authorities on oil in this country, just exactly what the California oil fields are and what they are producing now.

The Buick well was brought in by a Johnson rotary and about fifty tons of mud and water were carried above the rotary bit in order to hold down the gas pressure.

In estimating the life of this well we can only judge from gushers that have been producing in the California oil fields in the past.

The most conservative business men in this country are now placing their money in Buick Oil. In California, and especially in the oil fields, the Buick Midway No. 1 well has proved the Buick Oil Company to be one of the best doing business in this field.

FitzHerbert is the FitzHerbert of Old

Sam Hildreth Says the Sensational
Racer is Ready for the Best Season of His Career.

By Ed. Curley.
"Fitz Herbert is the Fitz Herbert of old." This information direct from Sam Hildreth means that the sensational racer of the past few years is ready to take up the course of his career from where he left off last season. It was only last year at Saratoga that the turf world was disturbed when the rumor cropped up that Fitz Herbert had broken down and would be retired. Hildreth always contended that the ailment was of little consequence and caused by a stone bruise. Nevertheless, the owner threw the phenomenal runner out of training rather than take the slightest chance of ruining his fortune. That his judgment was correct is now amply proved. Hildreth's announcement of the recovery of Fitz Herbert came with a sense of pride and pleasure. And properly so. The equis of Fitz are at a few that the great Ethelbert colt will go down in turf history as one of the fastest and truest runners that ever scrode down a homestretch in America.

That the inherent qualities of Fitz Herbert are appreciated by horse lovers can be well estimated when Hildreth turned down an offer of $65,000 for his charges over a year ago, and also declined $75,000 last summer. And these are dark days in the turf world. It is not beyond the realms of possibility that Fitz Herbert may change owners before the end of this season. Sam Hildreth is a rich man, but not a millionaire. Many foreign breeders have their eyes cast covetously at the horse. The natural deduction is that Hildreth will receive an offer so tempting that he will be compelled to let Fitz go. It will be a severe blow to this turfman to part with the horse, which won him a fortune. But in the era of dollars and cents sentiment cannot play the leading part.

Down at Sheepshead Bay, quartered in a commodious box stall, Fitz Herbert reigns. The flashy brown lives the life of a gourmet, steadily munching away at the hay that completely fills his stall. His persistent appetite is filling him out to proportions as big as old Roseben. Fitz has not been out romping around for the past three weeks. Each day, however, he trots around the spacious barn and during this performance he is as skittish as a bear cub. His rider has his time occupied in trying to remain in the saddle. Fitz specially delights in trying to bump the ceiling in his travels.

In addition to the champion there are twenty-five other high class runners quartered in Hildreth's barn. The most notable of this bunch is Novelty, the colt that made turf history last year by sweeping away all claims to the two-year-old title. Novelty is getting along famously. And, according to his owner, will be one of the "hot cuts" this season. There are also eight two-year-olds awaiting the call of the bugle. The one that is expected to prove the sensation is Fire Heath, a full brother of the great Highball. There is also a chestnut colt by Baronmaster, four youngsters by Conard and two colts sired by Ethelbert. Fire Heath reeled off a furling in O.I.I. last fall, so if indications point to anything he will be one of the dangerous little racers this year.

Regarding his plans for the coming season, Hildreth is undecided. "If the sport prevails here I will remain," he says, "but if there is any hitch there is only one thing to do—ship the horses to England, race there and possibly dispose of them after the English turf season is over. At the same time, Hildreth would rather stay here and race. If there is the slightest likelihood of the restoration of the sport he will be right on the scene. That this may be depended upon is only to scan the turf records of the past few seasons. Hildreth was the most liberal purchaser of high-priced thoroughbreds, despite the fact that some of the colts of the turf were over-anxious to dispose of their stock. Among the turfmen, Hildreth has the reputation of being one of the best trainers in the country. More than that he is game to the core. Unlike other trainers, he wants to own a good horse, instead of developing him for another owner. A few more Hildreths and the turf would not now lack good horses.

Good News for Owners of Player-Plano.

The Bell Plano Company have recently placed large orders in the United States and England for Plano Player rolls preparatory to inaugurating a complete and up-to-date library exchange system, which will be a boon to all owners of player pianos or piano players. With a thorough characteristic of this old house they have spent many months investigating the various systems in operation in the large musical centres and will incorporate in their organization of the system the best features obtainable. The arrangement contemplates the deliveries at your home of any number of rolls desired for any standard player, and these will be called for and exchanged at intervals of two or four weeks, as you may wish. The system will be in operation within a few days and the rates may be had on application to the Bell Company, either personally or by phone.

LIGHT COMPANY DEMANDS ENQUIRY BY COMMISSION

"Dear Sir, I see that the newspapers this morning have published the report of Mr. Ross to the hydro-electric commission. In view of the fact that the stock value of the city of the company's property is $125 a share. I am quite sure that you will be almost as much concerned about this publication as the company is, because a solemn pledge was entered into, as you know, between the hydro-electric commission and myself, that the enquiry by Mr. Ross and his report would be absolutely confidential between the parties, and were not to be communicated to any person whatsoever.

"The publication of this document without explanation places the company in a false position before the public. I am instructed by the directors and shareholders of the company to request that you will now authorize the publication of the report of your own expert, Mr. Dow, which places a higher value upon the property of the company. Yours truly (Signed) H. H. Macrae, General Manager."

Nothing Hidden, Says Mayor.
Mayor Dew replied to the remark of Sir Henry Pellatt that the true position of the negotiations between the Toronto Electric Light Company and the city had never been disclosed to the public by sending the following statement:

"As far as I am aware all the negotiations between the city and the company have been made known to the public. The question of arbitration was discussed some months ago at a public meeting of the board of control and the proposition as to arbitration made by the company was then flatly declined. At that meeting the object of the board of control holds now as it did then. The board of control for the electric light company seemed to consider that all negotiations should be at an end. The city, however, was always desirous of making a fair offer to the company, and thought that in the past it has done so, although without sufficient information.

No Valuations by Dow.
"Mr. Dow advised the city that it was practical for the city to acquire the company's plant under proper terms and with proper information. Mr. Dow's position has been that of a confidential adviser of the city and at no time has he been called upon to make a valuation of the company's assets.

"It was well-known by both parties that in view of the hydro-electric act and the city's relations to the commission, and the city's undoubted loyalty to other municipalities, that the commission would have to be retained in view of the situation before any definite offer could be made, and with this end in view the commission appointed Mr. Ross to make a proper valuation of the company's assets so that the commission to determine what action could be taken by the city without defeating the objects of the commission or injuring the rights of other municipalities.

"Mr. Dow's valuation is the only one that has been made."
Mr. Dow, Emphatic.
Alexander Dow of Detroit, the city expert, was in the city on Saturday afternoon most of the day in consultation with the mayor and corporation counsel Drayton. He was adverse to discussing the situation and said he had no opinion to express on the offer made by the board of control of $125 per share for the Toronto Electric Light Company's stock. He intimated that he had gone carefully over the report of Mr. Ross and had given his opinion to the board of control on it. They had not taken action before his opinion was given.

"Did you make a valuation of $150 per share on the stock of the company?" he was asked.

"I did not," was the reply. "I have never been asked to place a value on it, and as I am paid for my opinion in such matters, I was not volunteering any valuation."

Mr. Pellatt has addressed himself to the premier and the members of the legislative council on the matter as follows:
"To the Hon. Sir James Whitney, Prime Minister and President of the Council, and to the Honorable members of the council of the Legislative Assembly:

"Sir, I beg to address you on behalf of the directors and shareholders of the Toronto Electric Light Company and humbly request that you will give your serious consideration to the situation as it now exists between the company and the City of Toronto. The confidential report of Mr. R. A. Ross, which was published in full in the newspapers this morning from a source hostile to the company, with the view of assuming the present position, and future prospects have been incorrectly placed before the public without any opportunity being afforded of making those explanations which are absolutely necessary for an intelligent consideration of the subject."

Shareholders Miffed.
"Mr. Ross' report appears to say that the company's stock is only worth $125, whereas in fact it says nothing of the kind, but published as it is jointly with the offer from the city to purchase at $125, the conclusion naturally follows, and there can be no doubt that whoever is responsible for giving out that report, has done it for that express purpose, and in order that the shareholders of the company would feel that there was no alternative for them but to accept the offer."

The facts shortly put are that the city's representatives and those of the company have agreed to accept the offer as a reasonable value for the stock, upon the supposition that the assets were worth $3,000,000, and that the city would be getting a bargain if it did not make a final bargain without the consent of the Hydro-Electric Commission.

Premised to Keep Lid On.
"The commission refused to authorize the purchase of (as they said) the stock in a public and open market, to see broadly whether or not there was value in the company for the suggested price of $125 per share. The did not see any reason why Mr. Ross should be brought into the matter, but after strong pressure, they agreed that he should be allowed to give his opinion on the understanding that his enquiry and report were to be absolutely confidential, and that the company's flag would be even raised before the commission, and a solemn pledge was entered into to that effect: Mr. Ross himself emphasized that it must be so, because he would be manifestly unfair to the company that its internal affairs should be made public, and particularly its confidential files like the commission's report."

"I enclosed a copy of the letter written by the company's manager to the corporation counsel on the subject which contains the above given. This letter was sent to Mr. Ross before he came into the company's premises, and he assented to its correctness before commencing his work."

"The company assumes that the report was given by Mr. Ross in confidence and in full compliance with the understanding that was made to the hydro-electric commission.

"Who is it that has given it to the press? What was the object of giving it to the press?"

"From the earliest receipt of the report, implied items have appeared in general newspapers proving that the contents of the company's confidential report had been handed out for publication.

"The company furnished the city with the reports of independent expert valuers from Chicago and New York, Messrs. H. M. Bylesby & Co. and Mr. W. F. Wells, providing the value of the company's physical assets to be $1,500,000, and placing the stock value at approximately $200.

"The city expert, Mr. Alexander Dow, examined these valuations and readily admitted that, having regard to the value of the physical assets and the earning power of the company, the city could easily afford to pay $150 for the stock.

"No lower figure was ever thought of by the accredited representatives of the company and the city until Mr. Ross' report was received, and what happened then? The city council threw over the advice of their expert, Mr. Dow, disregarded his figures and selected upon the low figures of Mr. Ross."

"The city before it three figures in respect of the stock value; those of the company, $200 per share; those of Mr. Dow, $150 per share; and those of Mr. Ross, $125 per share."

"The city naturally wished to avail itself of the low price, but knew well that the company would never entertain it, and have accordingly introduced a bill into the legislature placing the company under the jurisdiction of the hydro-electric commission, and at the same time blocking effectually the litigation now in progress.

IRISH HOUSE OF PARLIAMENT

THOMOND BRIDGE, LIMERICK

IRELAND is the legitimate prize of St. Patrick, and Irishmen for centuries have taken a peculiar pride in acknowledging his regency. When Patrick determined upon the conversion of Ireland it was no ignoble ambition that prompted him. Ireland was then one of the important nations of Europe. With a tradition which is still more brilliant than any of the same period, the names of Finn and Cuculain and Oscar and many others shone like stars. The seven great gods were worshipped in Ireland as in Greece or by the elder people, and Lu Lamfada, the Mor Reaga, Bove Derg, Angus Og, the Dagda Mor, Mananan and Lir were sacred names. During the reign of Crimthann, which began in 365, the Irish swept over Britain, and in 367 occupied London. Commerce between Ireland and the Roman, the Tartarian, and Carthaginian merchants was greater in the time of Tacitus than was Britain's, and the development and civilization of 300 years had given Ireland a fleet equal to any in the world. Britain paid tribute to Ireland, and as the power of Rome grew weak in Britain between 350 and 410 the Irish kings supplanted the Roman rulers. Ireland was at this time the land of the Scots, what is now Scotland being then the land of the Picts, the Scots not yet having colonized it. In 378 Niall Mor of the Nine Hostages succeeded to the Ardriehi of Ireland. Ireland has produced no greater historical figure. He defied Stilicho and the Romans. He led his armies thru Britain. Twice, at least, if not oftener, he plundered Gaul, and in 388 when he invaded Brittany, he carried away captive into Ireland St. Patrick, then a boy of 16, his two sisters, Lupida and Darerca, and thousands of others. Niall was slain in 405.

His mother, Carinda, was a Saxon princess. The culture and literary attainments of Ireland at this time were noted thruout Europe. The faith of "the old people," as they are still called, was long in dying out, and is by no means wholly extinct to-day. The bards were fond of contrasting the two standards. It is the hound of Cuculain and the sunburst of Finn that are Irish emblems yet.

And when St. Patrick took in hand to convert Oisín, everything he would say Oisín had an answer for it. "How could it be that God or his priests could be better men than Finn, the King of the Fianna, a generous man without crookedness?" he asked the saint. "If there was a place above or below better than the Heaven of God, it is there Finn would go, and all that are with him of his people. Ask of God, Patrick, does He remember when the Fianna were alive, or has He seen east or west any man better than themselves in their fighting. The Fianna used not to be saying treachery; we never had the name of telling lies. By truth and the strength of our hands we came safe out of every battle." But Patrick prevailed and the joy of Angus Og died down before the creed of the Man of Sorrows.

Under the influence of the Gaelic League there has been a marvelous awakening of the old chivalrous spirit, and of the natural, simple feeling that at one time distinguished the Island of Saints. The literature, the poetry, the drama, the art, the music, the folk dances, have been revived and the bardic ideals seem likely to restore to Ireland what has long been wanting. As Patrick conversed with Oisín, so the younger and the older faiths may mingle the inner spirit of each in a true renaissance. This mystery is beyond the art or the power of politicians, and it is only after long absence that the subtle changes may be detected. No purer element than the heart of St. Patrick will be found in the new Ireland, and his shamrock will not be wanting while the round towers stand.

Ireland and Home Rule

This is Ireland's week, and her demand for Home Rule, or as it should properly be called to avoid misunderstanding, Irish local self-government, is inseparable from the Green Isle. A generation has nearly passed since it was suddenly elevated to the rank of a leading issue in British politics by Mr. Gladstone's acceptance of its principle. Opinion differs, and will continue to differ, regarding the true motive of the great Liberal leader's change of front. At the general election of 1885 331 Liberal members were returned to parliament, giving the government a majority of two in the House of Commons over the 247 Conservatives and 82 Nationalists. This, of course, was not enough for a working majority, and it was in these circumstances that Gladstone declared for Home Rule. His first bill provided for the establishment of a statutory parliament in Dublin for the discharge of Irish business, reserving from it matters of imperial concern and removed Irish representation from the parliament of the United Kingdom. His proposals, particularly the latter, caused the bolt of the Liberal and Radical Unionists of whom the late Duke of Devonshire, then the Marquis of Huntingdon, and Mr. Joseph Chamberlain were the most conspicuous. Defeated in the House of Commons, Gladstone appealed to the electors who returned a Unionist majority of 123 pledged to maintain the supremacy of parliament.

At the general election of 1892 Gladstone resumed office supported by 273 Liberals, 72 Anti-Parnellite Nationalists and 9 Parnellites, giving him a majority of 39 in the commons. His second Home Rule bill was modified in important respects, the principal being retention of Irish representation in parliament, the membership, however, being reduced from 102 to 80, but precluding them from voting on any bill directly affecting Great Britain. It was found impossible, however, to frame a satisfactory definition of what were or were not strictly imperial concerns and the bill was again altered. The measure passed the commons by 247 votes against 304, but was rejected by 419 to 41 on the motion of its second reading in the House of Lords. On March 3, 1894, Gladstone resigned the leadership of the Liberal party and was succeeded by Lord Rosebery, whose ill-starred administration came to an end in 1895. At the general election of that year the country gave the Unionists a majority of 159 and confirmed them in power at the Boer War election of 1900. During the currency of this parliament the Marquis of Salisbury, the prime minister, died, and was succeeded by Mr. Balfour, who held office till his resignation in the winter of 1904. At the general election of the following year Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the Liberal premier, was sustained by a majority of 354, the highest on record.

During his brief premiership, terminated by his death in the spring of 1908, it became more than ever apparent that the House of Lords presented an insuperable obstacle to real political reforms, and particularly to the bestowal of Irish self-government. But of this there is no doubt Sir Henry, who was a convinced, even an enthusiastic believer in Home Rule, would have tackled the question. His attention was, however, turned to the restriction of the veto power of the peers, and the resolutions he carried in the Commons are now substantially embodied in Mr. Asquith's bill now before parliament, and approved at two successive general elections. Recent years have witnessed a gradual approximation of the Liberal and Nationalist views as to the character of the system to be established in Ireland. During the earlier period the Nationalists, especially when on their annual peregrinations thru the United States for financial assistance, injured their cause thruout the United Kingdom by pandering to the extreme supporters of absolute independence in the republic. Their rhetorical outbursts designed for United States consumption were extensively quoted against them and undoubtedly created distrust among moderate Liberals.

Various causes have co-operated to bring the Nationalists into a more reasonable frame of mind. Not only was it patent that virtual separation could never be obtained, but the operation of the land purchase acts tended to renew the innate Conservatism of the Irish people. Ireland is prosperous, agrarian outrages are no longer common, if not wholly absent. Then the more favorable attitude adopted by prominent Irishmen, like Lord Dunraven, and the later movement of a section of the British Unionists towards the introduction of a federal system in the United Kingdom has aided in removing the antagonism to Irish self-government. Thus the last debate on Home Rule in the House of Commons placed on record the full acceptance by Mr. Redmond on behalf of the Nationalist party of the absolute supremacy of the imperial parliament over all measures passed by the Irish legislature and his declaration of loyalty to the British crown. No doubt difficulties will arise when the actual details of the bill have to be handled, but it is undeniable that never before in the history of the agitation have its prospects appeared more hopeful of realization. Nor is it without weight that the British overseas states are in substantial sympathy with the movement. The imperial parliament is overburdened with the mass of local affairs with which it has to deal and which could far more easily and efficiently be disposed of by local legislatures. Devolution of this part of its power has become imperative and the Irish Nationalists have made it clear that they desire no more for Ireland than is granted to the other nations of the United Kingdom.

The People's Affair

The argument set up in some quarters that the reciprocity agreement entered into by two aged gentlemen of the Federal cabinet is no affair of Sir James Whitney and of the Legislature of Ontario will not carry much weight with unbiased people. The only regret is that the pact will probably be discussed by members on both sides of the house in a party spirit.

If reciprocity carries with it the advantages that its supporters claim surely there can be no harm in affording ample facilities for its discussion whether, in the federal parliament, the provincial legislature, boards of trade or political debating clubs. Why should Liberals want to limit debate on so important a question? No measure introduced by the present administration at Ottawa has caused such widespread dissatisfaction or more completely obliterated party lines. Everywhere men of light and leading in the Liberal camp are pronouncing against the government policy. On the other hand, no Conservative of standing is supporting the action of the government.

For this reason, therefore, Sir Wilfrid Laurier should not pursue the course that his two colleagues have mapped out for him without warrant from the great body of the electors. Surely this is an occasion for slow-going. If Sir Wilfrid is sure that his policy is popular, as he says, why will he not trust the people for a verdict? He can secure a mandate in a month's time.

Rhetoric Versus Facts

It is admitted that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is a master of rhetoric. Not even his most obsequious follower will claim for him that he can get hold of facts.

For that reason "the chief" always comes in at the end of a debate, when the facts have been pretty well worked out and when statistics drop like a pall over the weary house and when the jaded commoners are ready for the hoary and the flag-waving. Then he waves the flag to the King's taste. And thus it was when the reciprocity agreement was under discussion.

No one will claim that the speech of Sir Wilfrid was a business pronouncement, but it was full of high-flown phrases and it did what it was intended to do, namely—it got some of the boys who don't like this reciprocity agreement worth a cent pounding their desks. Oh, what a wonderful thing is leadership! Sir Wilfrid is absolute master of the majority of his followers. "What do you like? Nonsense. Come in and listen to the chief," will say the party whip to the recalcitrants, and as sure as a member who has made up his mind to vote as his reason don't dictate, he will see the chief is doing the flag-waving and hurrying out the rhetoric, just so sure does the party whip get his man.

And there is a great deal more than that. Now many are held fast within the lines by the knowledge that to oppose the government means social ostracism, the loss of patronage, or a judgeship or a seat in the senate, or something else that the member of parliament wants and the government has to give. Is it any wonder, when you consider the way this thing is worked, that the government is able to carry thru unpopular measures.

The Anger of the Deep

Merrily the tiny wavelets raced along in the warm cheery sunlight. The soft summer breeze whispered indulgent encouragement, the sun beamed happily from the blue, unclouded firmament and as they rippled along, even old ocean himself wrinkled his placid face in merry appreciation of their irresponsible glee. Sparkle and life and merriment the whole bright summer's day.

The merry wavelets raced along by a small green ball of tightly-rolled seaweed. And they lapped carelessly at its dull-colored sides, or shouldered it riotously aside as it halted clumsily in their headlong way. Motherly the great ocean heeded not the wailing of the gentle seaweed beset upon it and the vififying sunbeams penetrated into its secret places. And as the days passed the spark of life grew and grew within that unprepossessing ball of seaweed. Tiny unmouth creatures burst the bonds of the containing ova and began their wondrous independent life. Their yolk-sacs depleted they fed naturally and with zest on the seaweed that formed the bounds of their floating home and in due time ate their way out into the great, perilous, uncertain world of waters beyond.

Strange in the manner of their origin and early life, their further development was more uncommon still. Once beyond the stage of helpless weaklings, they became great, powerful, unapproachable. The Hermaphrodites and night-males of the deep. Day by day they grew apace until at last in length they measured a couple of yards or even more. Their gills were now fully developed and they were swimming independently until at last they could reasonably be classed with the giants of the world of waters.

Platine-frog was the name by which they were frequently called and the association of name was no compliment to the marsh-loving creature of the land. For ugliness pure and unadorned by any attractive feature whatever, was the special and distinguishing feature of the platine-frog. On his little, spine-armed body he carried a head, broad, flat and of an enormous size, altogether out of proportion to his other parts. And at the opening of this head there was displayed opposing arrays of closely-set, formidable-looking teeth such as signified the murderous habits of the fishing-frog. And all along his body and absurdly enormous head, he flaunted stripes and filaments of loose skin, for all the world like the rags and tatters of some miserable beggar.

And the fishing-frog was as ugly as his looks. From the day of his release from the nest-ball of seaweed he was completely adjusted companionship, even with his kind and led a solitary life on the rocky bed of the ocean. He was quarrelsome to the last degree and did not hesitate at murder of his own fellows who, unwarily falling into his power, were not strong enough to withstand his attacks. And seldom after such a fight did the fishing-frog disdain a cannibalistic feast. The problem of livelihood was to him always a most insistent one. With his big head and capacious maw was associated an insatiable appetite, and he was at first sight strikingly unfitted to appease it. "The plan of capturing another fish in full flight was altogether out of the question—the fishing-frog was too clumsy, unwieldy and slow-going to thrive on that business. Fish of all kinds took alarm as soon as his broad front came in sight and thereafter the race was to the swift, which was emphatically not the fishing-frog.

But prey such as would ordinarily be utterly out of his reach he oftentimes secured by craft. In the recesses of the sea he loved to lurk amongst the weed-covered boulders and he always took care, chameleon-like, to adapt the color of his body to his surroundings. Hence it often happened that many small fish, ranging the shadowy bottom unwittingly entered the death-trap of his ever-open jaws. Sometimes, too, the fishing-frog leaped from his sheltering boulders as a wild beast upon his prey and his quick onslaught brought sudden destruction upon all within reach of his terrible teeth.

Set at the back of his great head were two broad openings. Oft-times significant name of Angler-fish. It was not enough that he should endeavor to catch them in unguarded moments to lie in waiting in the shadows of the depths and play the patience game until prey came within reach—the fishing-frog further employed a device that appeals to the instinctive curiosity of fishes and so lured them on to destruction.

Out from the broad space between his big eyes grows a slender, flexible filament, nearly half the length of his body. Surmounting this, his fishing-rod is a little membrane of a bright metallic lustre. As he lies on the bottom the fishing-rod clouds the water in his vicinity with sand and mud, then elevates his rod and waves his bright bait enticingly to and fro. It is not long before myriads of fish hasten to investigate and are speedily engulfed in the unseen pit of destruction below.

But the fishing-frog fell a prey to his own voracity. Swimming slowly along over the bottom one day he happened upon a tangled mass of fishing gear whereon a fat codfish had been hopelessly hooked. It was a splendid chance for a feast and the fishing-frog did not hesitate. For a while he lay there unmolested happily digesting his victim. But the fisherman at length began to overhaul his gear and was much puzzled at the dead weight of one portion for a while. Then the big fishing-frog came to the surface, tenaciously holding on to his booty and was speedily given summary punishment for his robbery and lack of discretion.

He sucked in the water thru his mouth and forced it out by way of these holes and the motion of the rushing water was such that many unwary creatures of the sea were overwhelmed thereby and swept down to help still the ache in his great maw. And the better to conceal his position when carrying out these operations, the fishing-frog stirred up the mud from the bottom until it formed a dense cloud round about him.

But the craftiest of all his designs to capture food-fishes was that which earned for him his other and equally

Great is Baseball

Baseball is a greater thing than business, according to the decision of a court in Pittsburg, not long ago. Jurors were being selected. A business man's name had been drawn and he was in court asking to be excused. He explained his business to the court and said that his absence would hurt it greatly. The court listened to him patiently and when he finished stated that it was sorry but he would have to serve.

The next man called was the great Honus Wagner of baseball fame.

Honus was there himself but he did not have to do his own pleading. Then men, who, besides being lawyers, are experts on baseball, explained the situation to the court. They said that the training season was about to open. They told how the absence of Honus would hamper the practice of the Pirates' infield. And they said that Honus would be in poor shape when the season opened if he was kept penned up in a court-room for a few weeks.

The court showed no hesitancy at all. It at once excused the ball player from service.

FAIRLY WARNED

CRUSTS & CRUMBS

BY Albert Ernest Stafford.

"Such then are these five questions, which seem fit to be proposed concerning the system itself, namely, is there a system? What is the centre of it? What the depth? What the connexion? and what the order of the position of the parts?" Sooner or later every man finds himself considering these problems of the universe around him and of which the forms a part. The questions were propounded by the great author of "Description of the Globe" nearly 300 years ago. I remember as a little child going to the door of a winter's night, and looking into the star-studded sky with the blaze of the Milky Way beating thru the frosty air, and wondering as children wonder. Early school days were not devoid of satisfactory. The declaration in a geography that if you wished to become warmed at a fire you would stand at a distance engendered a youthful suspicion of the wisdom of official science which I never shaken myself free from. Another fixed distance according to the theory of the tides, which I believe to be the result of electric attraction and repulsion; and the Great Stream and the climate in the British Isles was another example of the same kind. If one declined to hold, of course, if one desired to preserve any reputation at all it is most unwise to disagree with official science. Science is in many respects, a splendid freedom in many respects, do but touch with doubt upon the major tenets of the scientific faith, and you become a heretic in the official scheme of things and naturally there is nothing to be done but to leave you out. And no system of science, philosophy or religion that leaves anyone or anything out, can ever continue to give satisfaction. Science itself, indeed, demands a complete accounting.

The most complete and inclusive conception of the earth and the heavenly bodies and the heaven of heavens I am acquainted with, is that set forth in the Vedas, and is more or less familiar to the ancients under various systems, while it formed a part of the ancient scientific period during the Hellenistic and the Mysteries. The view taken is that matter exists in several conditions between which there is a constant interchange. Science recognizes a second form or aspect of matter in what is called ether. A second and third ether is recognized by the ancient scientific thinkers, and they used the four elements, earth, water, air and fire to symbolize these four conditions of matter, altho the correspondence is not to the official scheme of things and either may be regarded as differing in vibration as octaves of sound differ, or as vibrations of sound and light exist in the same space, but are not cognizable except by senses developed to respond to the vibrations to be sensed. Physical senses respond to physical vibrations, but the finer vibrations of the etheric conditions beyond. As these senses have been developed by evolutionary processes, other senses have developed, the perception of other ranges of phenomena, should such an advance be necessary for the preservation of the species which nature appears to be endeavoring to bring to perfection. Such an evolution involves an infinity of time and patience requiring attainment to a certain type of mind which reverts at the responsibility involved, and existing merely for selfish considerations, has no other purpose or larger purpose or any purpose outside its own ends. Nature is prepared for all such rebels and complacently brings them back to the pole, where fealty must be learned, as often as it may be necessary. Death is certain to all mortals, and rebirth is just as certain to those who are still growing into perfect manhood.

Our earth, altho so huge to us, is but a tiny speck in space. And yet it is larger than we fancy. We ordinarily think of it as about 8000 miles in diameter. While its atmosphere and terrestrial ether it constitutes a sphere 50,000 miles in diameter. It revolves around the sun as a centre, because, according to the formulae of the solar part of, and is involved in a globe of solar ether with a diameter of 300,000,000 miles. This globe revolving on its solar axis, is itself swept round a mighty centre, that is a globe of still finer ether. This centre of gravity is in Aicyone which in turn has a vaster centre in a still more vast globe of ether. The centre is poised somewhere in the Galaxy. Of course the earth belongs to each of the four systems, just as the city is in the province, and the county in the province, and the province in the Dominion. There are still more refined divisions beyond, but as the revolution around Aicyone occupies 8,640,000,000 years they are not of immediate interest. Like all nature's systems, and provisions upon one becomes acquainted with them, these systems are simple enough and easily understood. They are but wheels within wheels, as some of the older writers have tried to describe them. It is not difficult to imagine a wheel with spokes like a bicycle revolving at a rate rapid as to render them invisible. They begin to sound after a certain rate has been worked out, and the revolutions sufficiently rapid, the notes of the scale would be sounded as the noise of vibration along cycles revolving at a rate rapid as to render them invisible. Another fixed distance according to the vibrations of the etheric conditions, and where at first a musical note was sounded one of the primals of color would appear. Where a note of color or a sounded, red would appear, where so or sounded blue would appear, as on. This is what the ancients meant by the music of the spheres, and modern astronomers have found that the planets are set at distances from the sun corresponding to these notes of sound or shades of color. Kepler, moreover, determined the law which governs the distance of the planets from their centre. The law is that "the square of the times are as the cubes of the distance."

In this law lies one of the great mysteries of the universe—the mystery of the balance between attraction and repulsion. The centrifugal force, between what we call gravity and what used to be called apery. The real bearing of Kepler's three great laws has been ignored up till the present, and is still ignored. It follows from his laws that the earth must be 50,000 miles in diameter, and as soon as one studies the matter it becomes obvious. Similarly it becomes clear that the planets move in orbits that they are impelled thereto between the two forces and that they move in a mean curve between them. It was only in 1882 that this was generally accepted that the mean between two forces was a curve and never a straight line. Most of the school books still teach the repulsive force of the sun, and the speed of the earth is about 60,000 miles an hour. The attraction of the sun exactly balances the repulsive force of the sun, and the speed of the earth is about 60,000 miles an hour. The distance of any planet from the sun gives its time, or its time gives its distance, and the law applies thruout the universe, in everything and everywhere.

The moon has a time of 29 days and a speed of about 50,000 miles a day. If the time were 14 days, the distance would be 240,000 miles, and if it were 24 hours, its distance from the earth would be 24,988 miles, and that is just the distance to the true surface of the earth, and the boundary of terrestrial ether. Beyond that line one would get into the solar ether, and the sun is listed within that limit it would have to revolve with increasing velocity in order to overcome the earth's attraction. The moon's orbit is a curve, and the Mars phenomenon, which is the Mars' atmosphere. What is true as between the earth and the sun is true of the sun and Aicyone, and of Aicyone and the vaster centre to which it is attached. The sun revolves on its axis in a period of 21,000,000,000 years. The solar ether is related to kindred motions. The zodiac is the calendar of the universe governing the solar progress, and astrology, as a science is no more unfounded in its prediction of universal events than the arts of the farmer and gardener, who prepare for the return of the seasons. The solar seasons are as regular as the terrestrial.

The Art of Growing Younger

Nobody—at least, no woman—wants to feel sure that the passage of successive birthdays is being plainly marked upon her face and figure. She feels young, brisk, full of energy and spirit, and it is hard on her when the glass tells her plainly that her looks do not quite match her feelings.

The falling and dulness of the hair, for instance, are signs that the blood does not circulate quite as freely under the scalp as it used to do. The hair is being slowly starved; it cannot feel itself as well as it once could, so it must be helped a little. Massage of the scalp is most useful, as this encourages circulation. It should be done gently with the tips of the fingers for five minutes, night and morning, so that the head is put into a thro' glow. Then, the amount of brushing should be increased, rather than decreased, as years go on, for the natural oil at the roots of the hair keeps in the course of time, and more energy is needed to distribute it down the length of the locks.

What is known to dressmakers as a "middle-aged figure" is simply a figure of which all the muscles have grown a trifle slack. The chest falls between the shoulder blades, the bust droops a little, the lower parts of the figure "spread" just as a coat spreads out of shape when it has been stretched by a long time of hard wear. We sometimes hear that elderly people "grow downwards," and lose a few inches of their height; this is due to the fact that they drop the habit of pulling themselves up, and allow every part of the body to hang forward, instead of bracing it back against the firm support of the spine.

The easiest way of curing this condition is simply to stand before the glass for a few minutes each day, and adopt, as nearly as possible, the pose of a strong young girl. Arch the chest, force back the hips, hold your arms with the palms outward, and the elbows back, press the neck right back on to the collar. Stand like this for two or three minutes. Then rest, and then stand again. Press your feet well together, and stand as if you were about to fall, with the heels and elbows touching, but with all parts of the body between the neck and waist as far away from the wall as you can bring them. This practice is much safer than any kind of gymnastic exercise, and so simple that it can be done anywhere, without need of troublesome appliances.

Skin tends to wrinkle because it has worked a little loose in the course of time, and the muscles under it have shrunk a trifle. If you can stimulate the circulation and strengthen the muscles, the skin will soon fill out again.

An easy way of doing this is to bathe the face first with a very hot water, and then with very cold water. Then with hot and then with cold again; repeating the process for about five minutes. This will cause the blood to the skin and drive it back again in a way that exercises and stimulates all the little cells. After this is done massage the face gently with the finger tips, rubbing across the wrinkles, just as you would smooth across a crease which you wished to bring out of material. Do this gently around the eyes, nose and mouth, and strongly on the neck, forehead, and chin.

New Irish Club To Promote Union Non-Sectarian and Non-Partisan Organization Makes Start in London.

LONDON, March 10.—A new Irish club with the aim of promoting the union of the four provinces of Ireland is being started in London under the united auspices of the Irish Association, the Ulster Association, the Gaelic League, and the Irish Literary Society.

More than fifty prominent Irishmen in the leading professional and commercial circles of London have already handed in their signatures as founders and the membership lists contain over 300 Irish names. The club, which will be absolutely non-partisan and non-sectarian, is arranging for a large banquet to be held towards the end of the month and invitations are to be sent to leading Irishmen in America and Canada.

A Recessional

Protect Our Country's Destiny. God of our fathers, in this day Of brilliant promise for our land; So rule the hearts of all, we pray, That base intrigues unholily hand...

Our fathers' God, be Thou our Guide, All e'er from our land dispel, May we in unison abide, In bonds of love together dwell, Our splendid mission to fulfill, Give us a vision clear to see, The grandeur of our destiny.

We pray Thee, Lord, sound wisdom give To those who rule affairs of State; That each may well and truly strive To make our country's future great And keep our laws inviolate. Endow us, Lord, with power to save The glorious heritage we have.

Our fathers' God, we Thee beseech To keep Thy people ever true; Let us base politics impeach And bring the faisty to view. In righteous wrath, oh Lord, undo All recreant schemes, in clever guise, Which doth our future jeopardize.

That greater blessings we may win, To Thee, our fathers' God, we pray, Do Thou deliver us this day; In peace and plenty be our stay, Answer, oh Lord, Thy people's cry, And shield from harm our destiny.

Grant unto us Thy ample benign, That we, as now, may ever sing, Our country's cause be always Thine, Prosperity and greatness bring, God bless our land and save the King, In days of peace we cry to Thee, Protect our country's destiny.

Victoria Memorial Unveiling May 16 National Tribute Ten Years in Building Inaugurated by Balfour and Chamberlain.

LONDON, March 10.—The date of the unveiling by the King of the Queen Victoria memorial at the head of the Mall has now been fixed for May 16.

The King will be accompanied by the Queen, and the German Emperor and Empress will be present at the ceremony.

The Victoria memorial, which is the work of Mr. Thomas Brock, R. A., has taken ten years to complete.

The gateway will be situated midway between the existing eastern and western entrances to the courtyard, and thus directly opposite to the centre archway, giving entrance to the quadrangle.

There is an almost chaotic condition of things in the attempts that have been made to define the doctrine of regeneration. In fact, we have almost as many definitions of this doctrine as we have churches.

MRS. MAURICE BRETT, formerly Zena Dars, the spinning English coquette, whose husband, Capt. Maurice Brett, has been dropped from the Coldstream Guards for violating their unwritten law that no member of the organization shall marry an actress.

Investiture of Prince of Wales Outside Carnarvon Castle 60,000 Spectators Will Stand on Special Stage.

LONDON, March 10.—Preparations are to be commenced at Carnarvon at once for the great festival week when, on the 16th inst., the Prince of Wales will be invested with his title at Carnarvon Castle.

A choir of 500 is to be organized to sing national airs on the occasion, while for six days there will be historical pageants with performances.

It is estimated that between 10,000 and 15,000 people can be accommodated in the ancient castle at whose gates Edward I. presented to the Welsh people the first Prince of Wales.

Carnarvon Station as it stands is quite inadequate for dealing with such multitudes as will flock to the city in its week.

Back To The Farm For Surrey Pupils

Taught the Science of Agriculture Boys Know More Than Fathers.

LONDON, March 10.—The back-to-the-farm problem is being worked out in many ways with varying degrees of success. In Surrey the educational committee have faced the question.

Instruction in the A. B. C. of farming has gone far beyond the experimental stage for the school at Ripley is only one of the 140 in the county where the boys are turned out twice a week for some practical work of the soil.

I saw some twenty of these scholars who had exchanged pen and exercise book for spade and hoe, at work on a half-acre plot adjoining the school. Some of them had to be content with ordinary digging, others were carefully preparing the soil, and the more advanced, with an obvious sense of weighty responsibility, were sowing the seed that will provide the test of the term's work.

The boys were taught all the processes of the cultivation of growing plants and how to ascertain the value by actual demonstration of nitrates, phosphates, potash and farmyard manure.

The fathers of these lads can teach them the rough work of gardening, the schoolmaster pointed out, "but few of them can explain the why and wherefore of things. Many of these boys already know more about the theory of farming than their parents."

"Altho one aim of the school garden is to keep the boys on the land, that is not the primary aim. We find it to be an excellent method of correlating all the other subjects of elementary education. For instance, the boys are taught the practice of measuring, the estimation of values, observation drawing, the elements of chemistry, facts of arithmetic and the rewards of industry."

This year there will be 2900 boys receiving garden instruction in the country, in addition to 180 at evening continuation school gardens.

"The boys properly trained," added the schoolmaster, "there is more money and a better life in farming and gardening than in the town work into which they would probably drift."

Royal Automobile Club Has Fine New Quarters

English Motoring Club Sump- tuously Housed in Pall Mall —A Description of Club House.

LONDON, March 11.—Some particulars are now available of the new Royal Automobile Club house in Pall Mall, which will be opened at an early date. I cannot boast an acquaintance with any of the swell West End clubs, but I should say that, after having made a tour of inspection of their new club house, the members of the R. A. C. will be unapproachable to the common motorist not boasting membership. There is sure to be a large influx that will include the most aristocratic in the land, and it will be interesting to observe how fare the humbler members—many of them connected with the trade—who have been interested in the club since its early associations with the automobile industry. I fancy there will be a rather sharp line of distinction, but for those who feel "out of it" there is always the cheerfulness and bonhomie of the Coventry-street house. However, I do not intend to write about the R. A. C. and its future policy, but some particulars of its new premises will be interesting for the Pall Mall palace may be taken as indication of the wealth and importance of the automobile industry.

An Expensive Building.
In the first place the cost of the building is more than a quarter of a million pounds, and it presents a magnificent front to Pall Mall, as will be seen from the illustration on this page. At the rear is a pleasant terrace overlooking the Park. In the front of the building is a curved representation of science, and the facade has four emblems representing earth, air, fire, and water. On the right of the vestibule is the Georgian visitors' room, and beyond that is a fine club room, measuring 90 feet long and 35 feet wide, the handsome ceiling of which comes from the old war office, which formerly stood on the site of the present club. The reception room (Louis XIV.) is to the left of the entrance hall, and gives an approach to the magnificent restaurant (Louis XV.). The late manager of the Savoy Hotel is in charge here, and the catering may be expected to be in keeping with the luxurious appearance of the apartment, in which are to be observed a number of fine pictures in panels. The kitchen is in the basement—(sorry!) lower ground floor—with separate apartments for every department that can be covered in the most comprehensive culinary establishment.

The Lounge.
The lounge is beyond the vestibule, which itself is one of the features of the club. This lounge is finished in Louis XIV. style, with painted ceiling, and is provided at one end with a stage to allow of lectures, concerts, etc., while the floor is of oak and suitable for dancing. In addition to the restaurant, there is, on the first floor, a dining-room measuring 90 feet by 35 feet. On this floor also are the billiard room, library, silence room and card room. On the second floor are some of the members' bedrooms, and a beautiful Georgian room, leading to a terrace 100 feet long and 22 feet wide. On the two floors above are the remainder of bedrooms.

In addition to all these, on the lower ground floor will be found the swimming bath, which is 86 feet long, and proportionately wide, and is noticeable for its splendid columns in mosaic. On this floor also are a fencing room, three racquet courts, and a rifle range. It will be gathered from the foregoing description that the new club will be about the most complete and magnificent in the world, and if any of our horse-breeding magistrates, or county chief constables, happen to wander inside, we may expect fines on motorists to be forthwith doubled in the respective courts in which these gentlemen unfortunately occupy a few of their leisure hours.

THE JOY-RIDER.

There was a man in our town
Who dearly loved a lark.
He jumped into his motor-car
And speeded thru the dark.
And when he saw his lights were out,
With nerve at highest pitch
He sped on faster, till he hit
The whole car in a ditch.
—John Kendrick Bange.

THE TRANSPORT HORSE

Must Give Way to Stout Motors and Tires in War Time.

The military display at the Motor Show recently was one of its most original features. The possibilities of gasoline-driven vehicles for hard service on rough country roads are such that they bid fair to work a great change in the present transport system of the army. In addition to the maxim gun and the balloon-destroying gun, mounted on motor trucks, several large motor transports were shown. One of these, with a carrying capacity five times greater than the ordinary transport, was loaded with all sorts of military supplies and baggage—enough to make a small camp. The huge vehicles, from their stout Goodyear tires to the stanch fittings and braces are made with the one idea—strength. By actual tests the motor transports have proven very satisfactory and can be put over rough roads for a continuous period that would prove the death of horses or mules. Moving troops give but little heed to what follows in their wake and transports very often have some hard going. It is one case where tires must be good.

Before You Put a Penny in a Motor Car

Get all the facts. Make your comparisons. See how secure your investment is going to be. What are its safeguards and why? Go over it with a fine tooth comb. See how it is built and what it is built of. Examine the painting—the body—the engine—the gasoline tanks—the mechanical parts—the whole equipment. See that you are getting all the very latest practical improvements that have been invented right down to the present day. See that your money goes into a car that will yield you profit and pleasure for years to come. See that you get a car that is really a 1911 car by virtue of its character, construction—and conception.

THE FORD RACER

Fast Little Car is Sensation of Mardi Gras Meet.

Frank Kulick and his Ford Model "T" were the sensations of the big Mardi Gras speed carnival at New Orleans, according to returning Detroiters. Kulick and his 20 horse-power car won no less than five firsts and a number of other places, including two seconds.

The Ford pilot on the mile track of the Crescent City Jockey Club defeated all except "Wild Bob" Burman and Caleb Bragg. Burman drove his great 100 horse-power Buick Special, while Bragg had his 90 horse-power Fiat, the fastest thing on wheels.

The first day's races saw Kulick win three firsts and a second, the latter being in the 10-mile handicap where he was given but a few yards lead on Burman who started scratch. "Wild Bob" drove his widest and was only able to defeat the 20 horse-power car by three seconds. Kulick kept the great crowd on its feet with his daring on the corners. The 100-250 and the 25-30 classes both went to Kulick in a walkaway. He also won the one hour race with a distance of 55 miles, dashing in and out among the big cars and aggravating rival drivers into a frenzy.

The best event of the Saturday afternoon card was a five-mile free-for-all in which Kulick and the Ford, Burman in his five times racer Buick, Bragg in his Fiat, Diebrow and Aitken in the big Nationals were entered. It was a thriller. It took the two big cars to beat Kulick and they had to smash a record, doing the five miles in 4.49.17.

In the 10-mile handicap on Saturday, Kulick's work in almost beating the 100 horse-power mount of Burman caused him to be the boggie of all the entrants.

The veteran Detroit pilot gets all the power in his machine and his light car enables him to turn the corners as tho he were tied to the fence.

The light 20 horse-power Ford never had its hood lifted during the races, only at night to go thru a lightning-up process. At the completion of the three-day carnival it was in perfect running order while Burman's Buick and Bragg's Fiat had to be scratched from some of the last races, the rough track shaking the heavy cars badly. Kulick attained a speed of 57 miles per hour at times during the meet.

A GREAT YEAR FOR TRUCKS.

"We are at the beginning of a great year in the buying of motor trucks," said Benjamin Briscoe, president of the United States Motor Company. "What is more, the middle and far west will, in my opinion, keep pace with the east. The result of the New York and Chicago automobile shows convinces me that business men will throw aside horse delivery systems as never before."

If queries made by them at the shows may be taken as an indication of their attitude, the good name of a company will be a great selling asset. The business man wants to buy from a corporation known to be firmly established. He wants to feel that he will be properly taken care of thruout the life of his truck.

"This has been proven by the Alden Sampson Manufacturing Company. More than 450 trucks have been sold to men who never saw them. These business men brought on the name of the company. They knew from seeing other trucks of the company and from hearing of the performances just what the Sampson is doing."

ALCO HUB-FLANGE.

This is the day of the importance of small things in automobile construction as well as in everything else.

One of the engineers of the American Locomotive Company was singularly justified in his prophetic belief last summer that the hub-flanges of Alco cars should be made of alloy steel. There was some opposition from the rest of the corps to this belief as a hub-flange of that material seemed unnecessarily strong but an owner of another car while touring last summer skidded his car against the curb when many miles from home and the hub-flange of the rear wheel broke. The wheel collapsed and the rear axle gave way. His tour ended in that town.

Knowledge of this came to the engineer who had insisted on alloy steel for Alco hub-flanges. "That would never have happened," said he, "if that man had been driving an Alco." Within three days an Alco owner touring near Boston wrote to the factory at Providence, telling of an exactly similar experience in which his car had skidded against the curb. The Alco hub-flange withstood the impact, and the doubting engineers had to buy a dinner for the adherent of the alloy steel.

Motor-Building Helps Numerous Other Trades

Many Industries Have Increased in Importance Since Manufacture of Autos Began — Great Demand for Machine Tools.

It is a peculiar fact that there are to-day hundreds of manufacturing plants all over the country, flourishing and paying big wages and dividends, tho yesterday they were but small, struggling affairs, whose present prosperity is due entirely to the tremendous growth of the automobile industry. Some of these lines of business that have grown far beyond the wildest dreams of those who started them are seemingly far removed from the head of motor-car manufacturing.

Take the business of snake-skins, for example. For years snake-skins were a feature of the leather business, nearly as large, but with a demand great enough to be worth the attention of a few people, in conjunction with other branches of the trade. The only difficulty was that so few wanted this particular leather that it did not pay to hunt out members of the constrictor family systematically, slay them and bring their skins to market, because the market was quickly glutted. But, one day, some experts in automobile upholstery, constantly on the hunt for new and rich effects, chanced to come across some snake-skins. Ever since then the trade in that particular branch of leather has been considerable. It is difficult to find a more beautiful surface for the interior fitting out of costly cars—and there is a nice, new, unexpected profit where one would never have been thought of. It pays to bring in any number of these skins now.

Striking commercial romances like this of snake-skins are, of course, rare, but there are innumerable lines of industry, some very nearly as remote, that the automobile stands god-father to. There are few cities, towns, or villages that have not been benefited in some way by the cars that shoot thru them like a blurred streak of light. They may not know it, but the effects of the building of nearly 200,000 new machines each year are very far-reaching. Should the automobile factories close down, many a payroll in shops entirely outside of the trade would be clipped so that the dinner-pail would show it badly.

Machine Tools. One of the big businesses of America that the ordinary public hears very little about, but that buys many a pair of little shoes and makes many a home comfortable, is the machine-tool industry. Machine tools is the trade name for the thousand and one tools used in the machine-working of metal. Every new development means new batches of tools and new principles and adaptations in the use of the old ones. Since the automobile fairly got going in this country the production of machine tools has just doubled. New concerns have come into the trade, and old ones have had to enlarge their plants.

The automobile has completely revolutionized this machine-tool industry. When the "horseless vehicles" as they were called in the good old days when everybody doubted them, first began to be really practicable, their makers found so much that was new in the construction and adjustment of the complicated parts that the machine tools already in existence were inadequate. So, borrowing ideas freely, they began to get out machine tools of their own. Very soon the auto business commenced to reach a high state of mechanical perfection, and the machine-tool men, falling quickly into line and turning out the new tools themselves, saw they had a better product than ever, and the hosts of new customers who wanted speedy deliveries were not disposed to be at all niggardly about the price if they got them.

In other lines the demand has arrived unexpectedly. Manufacturers who had men out on the road painstakingly drumming up business that, when secured, brought in only a fair profit, suddenly found themselves deluged with unsolicited orders. There is at least one marine-engine establishment in this country, for instance, that had this experience. That is, it was a marine-engine factory several years ago. It still clings to its speciality, but that has become merely a side line nowadays. The plant has been enlarged more than once, but it can scarcely fill its orders for automobile engines, for which there is an enormous demand and a good profit.

Rubber Business. Where the automobile has influenced general business the most has undoubtedly been in rubber. In the first place the new and unlooked-for demand created possibly the wildest commercial excitement of the past twenty years. This was by no means confined to this country. It really reached its height in England, where the British have been exploiting shares in South American rubber fields. Tremendous fortunes have been made and lost in this commodity owing to the new use that has been found for it. Tires are but one part of an automobile, yet they call for so much of the annual production of rubber—something more than forty per cent, according to the most accurate statistics—that all rubber goods are steadily becoming costlier.

A new and decidedly profitable industry has grown out of this situation. What was only a short time ago merely a sort of side line of the business has come to be an independent industry. The automobile alone has created it, and the more automobiles turned out each year the more prosperous it becomes. Many men have preferred to engage in it instead of the making of automobiles themselves. This is the gathering up and reclaiming of old rubber. It might be called the daughter of the junk trade, for it is a direct offshoot of that. Always, ever since rubber goods were invented, something has been done in the working over of old rubber. But until comparatively recently the junk capitalists did all the handling of old rubber and never thought very much of it. The new demand made many a wise man see differently. Hundreds of rubber-reclaiming concerns have sprung up, until to-day "scrap" hand "rubber" is as big an industry as the entire junk trade used to be. The concerns engaged in it are to be found in every locality where the junk business is done, which means in every commercial centre in America. Millions of dollars are invested in the new line, and fortunes are being rapidly heaped up.

Rubber Values. The rubber-tire demand has changed values all around. Certain grades of rubber scrap used to go into coarse rubber matting at not any too good a profit. Now that same scrap is highly valued by newly invented processes and is converted into pure rubber again.

Among the classes of business men that have profited most from the industries that the auto has helped are those which are concerned with the making of little things, the trifles that would not ordinarily be thought of. Screws go into the making of motor-cars, of course. A single screw factory in Cleveland has nearly doubled its capacity and output in five years, merely on account of its orders from automobile makers. The managers' main work is to see that the orders get out on time and that the quality state of mechanical perfection, and never been collected, there must be more than a hundred other such concerns in the East and West who find the automobile people by far their best customers.—Harper's Weekly.

MAKE YOUR BETS, GENTLEMEN.

A prominent local doctor who makes a study of the sporting capabilities of the round-town car outfit, dropped in at the "Event" office, 168 King-street west, the other day and propounded a puzzle. He offered to bet a box of fine Havannas that he could not make the round of the Belt Line completely high noon, thru the thick of the traffic, in an "Event" without getting off the high speed. This he thought would be a fine test of the flexibility of the much boasted "Event" motor. So it was.

It will be noticed, however, that Fred Inwood, the local "Event" sales manager, is now putting a remarkably fragrant variety of Havannas Perfecta. Moral—Put the odds on the "Event".

Famous Detective Play Will Be Seen at Princess Theatre All This Week.

Monday night Kyrle Bellew will come to the Princess Theatre, when he will inaugurate a week's stay in Toronto, in Charles Frohman's revival of that detective classic, "Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman." The revival of this favorite play of the detective class was made by Mr. Frohman at the New York Garrick Theatre a few months ago and was received with such evident favor that a road tour was immediately arranged for. On tour, Mr. Bellew has duplicated the success with which the revival met during the New York run, and has proved the strength of Mr. Frohman's play has on countless occasions. The revival has been made with all the careful attention given the original production some seasons ago and the play is said, in the meantime, to have lost none of its charm or thrilling interest.

In "Raffles" thrilling episodes abound, and the most sensational adventure in the Cracksman's career, taken by Mr. Frohman from Mr. Horning's stories, is that which has to do with the theft of the Meirosa diamonds, during a week-end stay at Amersforth Abbey, when under the mysterious circumstances, Lady Meirosa discovers the absence of the priceless necklace. Thereafter occurs a battle of brains between the intrepid gentleman-burglar and the avenging lieutenant of the law in the person of Captain Bedford, the detective. The encounters between the two are indeed thrilling up to the moment of the sensational last scene, the big surprise of the play. There is, of course, a charming love story interwoven into the more melodramatic texture of the play and Mr. Bellew has several opportunities to please his large following among the "matinee girl" element with numerous love scenes of the most approved Bellew type. Mr. Frohman has surrounded Mr.

Will Make First Appearance Here in Latest Successful Play, "Two Women."

Mrs. Leslie Carter will begin her engagement of one week at the Royal Alexandra Theatre to-morrow night, making her first appearance here in her latest successful play, "Two Women," by Rupert Hughes, under the management of John Cort.

"Two Women" is said to give Mrs. Carter quite a number of scenes for the display of her wonderful emotional acting, for which she is famous. She portrays the role of a demure seamstress as well as that of a woman of the Parisian underworld, and she makes the distinction very clear by her characterizations.

The play is in five acts, the first showing Jeannette Moreau struggling painfully in poverty with her husband, an impoverished, but earnest young count who has gone the pace. Just when the young man's invention brings him fortune, his faithful and deeply beloved wife dies.

Count Remy de Margry, two years later, at the Bal Tabarin, falls across the living counterpart of Jeannette in the person of a coquette of the musical hall, Jeannette Barlet, whom he hires to pose for an unfinished portrait of his wife. This second act scene is unblushingly true to the atmosphere of a reckless resort, where loose women barter their charms and rakes come to carouse. It serves to point out the apparently utter hopelessness of the salvation of the thoroughly abandoned Jeannette. Yet the transformation occurs in act III, when under the influence of Jeannette's memory in the handsome and steadfast painter's Auteuil cottage, the woman is animated with an honest love for him and a desire to let her better self conquer. In a transport of deep feeling and sincerity she proclaims her love for this man and begs him to save her from the sordid life she has been living. When he refuses it is with bitter heart-burning and hatred for "the cruelty of good people" that she goes back to her ardent admirer, the Marquis Pascal de Foudras. But upon his entrance (Act. IV) she revolts against the reaction to shame and drives the marquis off about his business, turning him out of his own house.

Bellew with a distinguished supporting company, including Gladys Hanson, Jane May, Frolott Paget, Jane Tyrrell, Elsie Romayne, Ernest Stalard, Frank Connor, Frank Westerton, Frank McCormack and Bernard Fairfax. The scenic equipment is an elaborate and tasteful one, made from the original models.

Splendid Revival of the Famous Racing Play the Offering at the Grand This Week.

The fatal objection to so many of the newer plays is that they lack the interest required to keep together by swiftly succeeding incidents, the hold of the story upon the listener. A review of all the big stage successes will prove them strong in this needed element. David Higgins comes to the Grand for an engagement of one week beginning Monday in a splendid revival of "His Last Dollar," a well known and well regarded character melodrama of the natural school.

This play is filled with just that element of interest written of above; it grips the fancy of an audience, and what is more, it holds that fancy during its five acts. Most theatregoers are familiar with the story of "His Last Dollar." For the benefit of those who are not it is enough to say that Joe Branton, its main figure, brings his trunk full of money to New York from the west, where he made it, intending to clean up his millions, as others have done before him; but does not like others have done before him he didn't reckon on the tricks of the Wall-street game, and before he discovers the treachery of his trusted friend and newly-betrothed wife, he finds himself in the situation the title of the play described—down to "His Last Dollar." The young girl he has befriended uncovers the plot to ruin him, and with the aid of the flying heels of her Kentucky thoroughbred, wins him enough race-track money to fight his way back to fortune.

The love story is plainly seen and sweetly told, and at the end Joe and Eleanor are ready and eager to leave Wall-street and the New York social whirl and go back together to old Kentucky and happiness.

Mr. Higgins, as usual, has a strong company in support; the principal role of Eleanor Deane being taken by Miss Claire Armstrong—herself a daughter of the south with the genuinely unaffected accent of the land of sunshine—and a score of others, including: Bliss Milford, W. Burton, Cartwright, Claire Grey, Harry McKee, Joseph Coughlin, Charles Fleming, Alma McLaughlin, George Hoy, Jo' a De Weese, Ellen Bellew.

The bet is promptly covered and much to the delight of the man from Elmira he loses everything but a ticket home. R. J. Webb, in the humorous role of the stout Mr. Jones, who congratulates himself on losing four ounces leads in the incidental songs and gives an excellent performance. In the course of a carouse the previous night he has picked up two unshaven soot-covered grime men who contribute considerable low comedy to the act.

Clara Ingo and Marguerite Farrell are newcomers at Sheas and they have a dainty and singing novelty. They have been a hit wherever they have appeared and are among the prettiest and best dressed girls on the vaudeville stage. Harry Breene has been

Famous American Comedienne Will Be Headliner at Shea's This Week.

At Shea's this week the show is headed by the dainty American comedienne, Carrie de Mar, who comes to Toronto with an entirely new repertoire of songs, stunning gowns and special settings for many of her songs. The special extra attraction on the bill for the week is Schieler's Royal Marionettes, an international novelty. These Marionettes are unlike any other act that has been to Sheas. The mechanism used in the working of tiny figures makes them strikingly lifelike and they will be liked by children and grown ups alike.

Thomas J. Ryan needs no introduction to Sheasgoers and with the Ryan Richfield Company will present Mag Haggerty, osteopath. This is the newest of the Mag Haggerty episodes and is said to be the funniest. Thomas Ryan is one of the best Irish comedians on the stage and is always welcome at Sheas.

A feature of the bill is Joseph Hart's "A Night in a Turkish Bath," a one act farce effectively staged and well acted. The setting represents a lounging room in a New York establishment where men who never saw each other before, meet and strike sudden friendships. They play cards, sing and tell their life histories to interested listeners and alternate between cold plunges and electric baths. In all this the little piece is quite true to life and it is an original and entertaining number woven about an incident rather than a full fledged story. A man from Elmira has been squandering his substance in riotous living and when he reaches the bath with only bright and brilliant burlettas, including a new version of that everlasting fun creation, "The Gay Modiste." No greater vehicle for continuous outbursts of laughter has ever been on the burlesque stage. In this particular burletta, Watson is seen at his best. No opportunity is overlooked to crowd laughter on top of laughter with results which must be most flattering to the popular comedian as well as to his well selected support. Among the many extravagantly beautiful and fascinating scenes, the one, laid in the foyer of the Grand Opera in Paris will undoubtedly create the greatest admiration.

There is no end in the display of charm, grace, frivolity and merit, forty girls furnishing their sweetest smiles and melodies to those, fond of feminine loveliness.

For the week of March 20 Manager Shea announces Nat. C. Goodwin and a company of players in "Lend Me Five Shillings," for the head of the bill.

Watson bears more than a mere guarantee for excellence and merit. Among the many burlesque comedians none has achieved greater prominence, than "Billy" the fast and furious merry-maker, who is known throughout the country as "the whirlwind comedian of the nation."

KYRLE BELLEW'S FLAG.

Kyrle Bellew, the delightful actor who is once more to appear in his famous role, "Raffles," at the Princess this week, was born on ship just outside Calcutta and spent all of his youth in British territory. When asked to designate the flag to which he acknowledged allegiance since he had spent most of his life in the United States, Mr. Bellew replied with a whimsical smile, "I'm an Irishman."

A Leading Man Who is an Accomplished Chef.

To know the subtle differences between eggs au Burro Noir, Buffet Russe and Lobster Sante, Bordelaise, and still be able to play the stalwart Bunny in support of Kyrle Bellew in "Raffles," is to have accomplished something of a distinction, but that is a claim to fame which can legitimately be made by Frank Connor, Mr. Bellew's handsome leading man, to be seen in "Raffles" at the Princess Theatre, this week.

Frank Connor belongs to that young school of American players represented by William Elliott, Douglas Fairbanks, Robert Dempster, Wallace Edinger and Foster Winsant, but among his friends in the profession he is even better known as an admirable host, an expert planner of sumptuous dinners, and in the preparation of rare dishes he has few equals. The Bellew-Connor ménage, for Mr. Bellew and Mr. Connor have been close friends for years, and make their home together in West 57th St. in New York, and has been the scene of numerous functions at which were entertained the flower of the musical, literary and theatrical sets in the metropolis. At all of those the genius of young Mr. Connor as a chef was flattering and commented on, for the preparation of the dinners is always in his hands and he has been known to often relegate the two maids to the background, while he takes an actual hand in the concoction of some rare sauce or wondrous dessert.

Among the guests at the Bellew-Connor functions during the period when these players are at their home in New York, have been Geraldine Farrar, Mrs. Farrar, Mr. and Mrs. James Forbes, the former known as the author of "The Chorus Lady," "The Traveling Salesman" and "The Commuters," Ada Lewis, Anne Sutherland, Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, the veteran actress, William F. Connor, the manager of Madame Bernhardt, and the brother of young Mr. Connor; Jane May, Gladys Hanson and "Mori" Lennox, the crack-shot. The greatest compliment that can be paid Mr. Connor is found in the fact that not one of his guests has ever suffered any ill effects after any of the Bellew-Connor entertainments. While Mr. Bellew and Mr. Connor spend their summers on the former's big yacht, "The Moonstone," Mr. Connor has entire charge of the galley, presiding over three Japanese.

I want to claim that which I believe with all my soul, that he who lives in the faith of Jesus Christ lives in the freest action of his mental powers and then sees before him and makes himself a part of the large world into which man shall enter, in which he has perfect liberty and can exercise his powers as he never could have exercised them without.—Phillips Brooks.

ANCIENTS HAD CIGARS, TOO

The idea that tobacco has been known in Europe only since the discovery of America is incorrect. In fact, the Medes and Persians, a long time before our era, smoked narghiles, as ancient scriptures prove. A philologist has suggested that the Greeks and Romans smoked tobacco, at least in their colonies. In the Malay Archipelago the use of cigars and cigarettes is said to date much farther back than the discovery of America. The word cigar seems to show that man's comforter did not originate in the West Indies, but is most likely derived from sakara, an Arab word, meaning smoke.—La Tabac.

CURIOSITIES OF THE BIBLE.

There are many curiosities of the Bible seldom noticed by a person who simply reads the book's pages. The book contains 2,535,489 letters and 773,693 words; 31,173 verses and 1189 chapters, besides 66 books. The books were written by 40 men during a period of 1600 years. The 23 books of the Old Testament were classified: Law, 5; history, 12; poetry, 5; prophecy, 17. The 27 books of the New Testament were classified as history, 5; epistles, 21; and prophecy, 1. The word "and" is found in the Bible 4,278 times and the word "reverend" but once. The nineteenth chapter of II Kings and the thirty-seventh chapter of Isaiah are alike. The middle verse of the Bible is Psalm xxvii, 8.

HOW OTHERS HAVE BUILT

Edited by
FRANKLIN E. BELFRY

This is another solution of that ever difficult problem added to the many varied shapes and types of house building. Laid out successfully to suit the necessary conditions and designed in good taste with principal features well grouped.

The right hand of the picture shows the end of the house facing the street and in this a unique idea is suggested. It is logical that a house is viewed to advantage as you approach from down the street and in this case you are facing its main facade.

Again we see the entrance as an open terrace or stoop with simply a hood over the doorway with the verandah reserved for private use at a more secluded point.

With the large archways in the hall you have a view thru the best rooms from end to end and a pleasant feature here are the strong rays of yellow light down the stairway from a glass which quite resembles sunshine, but from the north.

The general working space in the kitchen is large and access to dining room and piazza from the kitchen is direct in either case. The planning of the upper hall and bath room with linen room adjacent is worthy of note. Also the size and number of windows to the sewing room and its position close to the balcony.

The interior decoration has been handled with a masterly touch. Handsome effects gained in the simplest manner.

Art canvas has been used to some extent, painted in even tones and then stippled.

In the reception room a figured or leaf pattern of the mantel tiles has been reproduced upon the canvas in the shape of medallions and outlined with composition put on with tube

THE CENTENARY OF FRANK LISZT.

Probably the greatest genius who was born in 1811 was the Hungarian musician, Franz Liszt. He was a great virtuoso, one of the most prolific composers that ever lived, a writer of distinction, a churchman, and the idol of all the women of Europe. The celebration of his centenary in Toronto will take the form of a Liszt recital by his famous pupil, Arthur Friedheim, in Massey Hall, Monday evening, March 13.

Burglar and Fire Alarms.

A burglar and fire alarm, depending upon light, is the idea of E. Dafah, French engineer, and is set in action by the faintest glimmer of an intruder's dark lantern or match or by the slightest blaze of any kind.

A coil of selenium tape in a little cylindrical box forms a light-sensitive cell, of which any desired number of duplicates may be distributed over the premises.

The cells are in an electric circuit, and if a ray of light enters one, the selenium is instantly changed from an insulator to a conductor, the current passes and the needle of a galvanometer makes a contact sounding the electric alarm bell at a distance. A lid over the sensitive cell prevents alarm during ordinary lighting.—Newark News.

Unless you are perfectly formed (and few women are) your dresses or gowns will not really look well over a Ready-Made Corset. Meeting the public in all avocations open to women the business woman's personal appearance must be a pleasing one and while every detail of dress must be considered, yet the corset, as a foundation, is of most importance. Why then try to fit your figure into a ready-made model which you may admire and suffer the discomfort and injury to your health when you can have a pair of designed to meet your personal requirements. The defective points in your figure lines can be scientifically improved to conform to the prevailing fashion tendencies, with the result that your dresses and gowns will at all times look smart. Your daily duties demand a comfortable, hygienic corset that will support your figure with ease and grace. Ask your business girl friends what they think of Woolnough Tailored-to-Order Corsets. If they cannot tell you come to us and we will make you a pair on approval. You pay no deposit and do not require to purchase unless they are entirely satisfactory.

THE VATICAN OBSERVATORY.

The Vatican observatory came into existence shortly before 1582, when Pope Gregory XIII. succeeded in amending the calendar. The Council of Nicea in A.D. 325 has assigned March 21 as the date when the sun entered the sign of Aries, but as Alfred Parr points out, the day was not really a fixed one and by Gregory's time the accumulated error, which amounted to 10 days, seriously affected the date of Easter. The really active phase of the observatory work began after the jubilee of Pope Leo XIII. in 1888, when a scientific exhibition was held and among the presents received by the Vatican were a number of meteorological and astronomical instruments. The latter are now housed in domes built on the massive turrets forming part of the fortifications erected in the ninth century by Leo IV.—Knowledge.

DAVE HIGGINS AS "JOE BRAXTON,"

Joe Braxton, of "His Last Dollar" fame, appears to have as many marks of continuity as Uncle Josh, Mrs. Wiggs or Anna Moore of "Way Down East." Joe's line of life is good and strong, for Joe is put into solid setting of a good strong play. No one takes very much interest in a fellow to whom all things are coming "too easy"—at least this is true on the stage. He's inclined to be a bore with his gold-headed luck, if it lasts too long; Joe's luck begins well, too well, in fact; he has roughed it—cow-boy and rancher—miner and prospector—since he first struck out years before the play begins to seek his fortune in the far west. He's made good, and comes east unspoiled in his big-hearted prosperity "to sweep up all the yellow dust in Wall Street," but, like many others finds it not a street, but in fact a stone wall that he comes to hammer at in vain. How his fortunes, now on the edge of ruin, are recouped by an outside force—"Just a Horse Race"—is told as the leading dramatic point of interest in this standard American drama. He assists the daughter of his own boyhood benefactor, and in turn Eleanor Downs this charming southern girl, with her thoroughbred horse brought north to win the money to buy back the old plantation, repays the favor and saves Braxton's fortune, and gives herself to him as well. David Higgins, as Joe, is too well known in the part to need any additional praise, and Miss Clare Armstrong, a young actress native to the south, is a charmingly effective Eleanor. The company in support consists of many well known players, including Bliss Milford, Claire Grey, Alma McLaren, Helen Bellow and Messrs. Harry McKee, W. Burt Cartwright, Charles Fleming, Thomas McGrath and others. Mr. Higgins and company in "His Last Dollar" will begin an engagement at the Grand Monday. The big scene of this drama is the hot finish of the great Futurity Handicap with its thoro-bred runners on the home stretch.

International Competitions.

It is said that when the time arrives to consider designs for a Shakespeare memorial national theatre architects of all the world will be invited to enter into the competition. This would be in accordance with modern practice in such matters. At the present moment competitions that are open to all, without respect to nationality, are awaiting decision for, among other works, a monument to the Czar Alexander II. at St. Petersburg, new courts of justice at Athens, a new Presidential palace for Cuba, and the planning of the capitol of the Australian Commonwealth.

International competitions of this description are apparently a modern institution, the artists and craftsmen of great ability have at all times readily found employment in foreign countries. We in England have used these desirable aliens as much as any people. The names of Holbein, Zuccher, Rubens, Vandyke, Rouilliac, Angelica Kauffman and numerous others may be cited as proof, while quite a legion of distinguished living artists who are closely identified with British art were not born under the Union Jack.—Westminster Gazette.

THE ASSEMBLY OF THE GODS ON MOUNT OLYMPUS FROM RAPHAEL'S FRESCO IN THE VILLA FARNESINA

WHERE THE GODS OF OLYMPUS REALLY LIVED.

A Mountain Found in Cyprus Whose Ruined Shrines and Temples and Wonderful Broken Statues Seem to Prove it the Actual Fabled Home of Thundering Jove, Frivolous Venus, and the Whole Family of Greek Gods and Goddesses

A CUP OF ANCIENT WORKMANSHIP USED AT SACRIFICES.

THE poets from the days of Homer down have sung of high Olympus, where the gods dwelt among the clouds and settled the fate of man. These lines from the "Odyssey" show how Homer conceived of Mount Olympus: "So saying, Minerva, goddess, azure-eyed,

The gods were divided into two classes. The higher moved in the region above the clouds. They were Jupiter (Zeus), Juno (Hera), Neptune (Poseidon), Ceres (Demeter), Apollo, Diana (Artemis), Vulcan, Hephestion, Minerva (Pallas Athene), Mars (Ares), Venus (Aphrodite), Mercury (Hermes) and Vesta. They met occasionally on the summit of Olympus for consultation. The inferior gods lived far below and in mansions like earthly princes. It has always been supposed that Olympus was a creation of ancient mythology and the poets' imagination, and that though there was a Mount Olympus in Greece, it was not regarded as the dwelling place of the gods. The true Olympus was thought to be as immaterial as Heaven.

Now it has been found that the Greeks really worshipped a certain mountain as the dwelling place of the gods. The true Mount Olympus is Mount Rantidi, in Cyprus. It is a beautiful site in an exquisite climate. It has been discovered by Dr. Max Ohnefalsch-Richter, the famous German archaeologist. Here the worship of Jupiter and the other Greek gods arose for the first time. Here, perhaps, in some dim period of the past, the actual human ancestors of the gods lived. Dr. Richter has found on the Hill of Rantidi many crypts and altars inscribed with the names of Greek gods, from Zeus (or Jupiter) to Apollo, and has traced the existence of this worship as far back as 2000 B. C. One of the altars bears the inscription, "I am consecrated to Zeus." This is the oldest known—perhaps the original altar to the father of all the Greek gods. Here also was an altar to Apollo, the god of music. An especially interesting temple was found built around a holy water pool, hollowed out of the rock, the water of which was undoubtedly used in the worship of the ocean-born Aphrodite. A fine head of Aphrodite, of primitive style, different from any of the known specimens of Greek art, was among the many remains found. To the north of the pool-temple was another temple with five rooms. In the three larger rooms, built without roofs, was found a layer of ashes, several inches

My Secrets of Beauty

No. 115-A WALKING VACATION

By MME. LINA CAVALIERI, THE MOST FAMOUS LIVING BEAUTY.

MME. CAVALIERI handles in interesting manner to-day a topic which has a firm, scientific basis. She not only says a walking vacation will promote health and enhance beauty, but tells in detail how and why.

She describes the stimulus which walking gives to the various organs. Reading this article will convert the laziest person to the benefits of walking.

"The shoes should be moderately heavy with perfectly straight heels."

By Mme. Lina Cavaleri

ALREADY busy folk are planning their vacations. Perhaps it is the Summer vacation of two or three weeks...

Spent a few days or a fortnight in a walking vacation, and I will guarantee that you will return to the routine of your life not only healthier and happier but handsomer.

To convince you of this, let me recite the advantages to be gained from walking:

It forces you to breathe more deeply, so causes you to take more oxygen into the lungs, and so into the body, and throw off more of the waste, dead matter that would otherwise clog the system...

It stirs up that notoriously lazy organ, the liver, making it do its work faster and better. The lazy liver is that traitor to beauty that makes the skin sallow, the movements heavy, the eyes dull...

It whips the skin into new activity. It forces open the gates of the seven million pores so that they empty out the fluid poison that has knocked at the gates for exit...

The stomach, that, like humans, grows lazy if permitted, feels the spur of the general activity and does its work more quickly and thoroughly.

To the large and small bowels, inert unless urged to their duty, is communicated this new spirit of up and do. The kidneys feel the beneficial effects and fling off the lingering poisons.

All the internal organs feel the exhilaration that comes with this one of the best, and certainly the cheapest, of exercises.

I hope I have convinced you that this awakening of the entire body is desirable for those who are healthy, and indispensable to those who are not.

All the internal organs feel the exhilaration that comes with this one of the best, and certainly the cheapest, of exercises.

three hundred are in a state of soundness, which is perfect health. Now, how to take this walking vacation?

Choose, if you can, country of diversified scenery. This will be more interesting and will give exercise for different sets of muscles.

A hill climb will rest the muscles that were wearied by a level walk in the valley.

Wear the simplest clothes in your wardrobe. Combine lightness with warmth as, for instance, in the tweeds and serges, that are serviceable, yet not heavy.

Wear large, loose shoes and cotton hose. Let the shoes be moderately heavy.

Women's feet are too delicate and sensitive for the very heavy soled boot. Take with you an umbrella to protect you from a too drenching rain and to ward off dogs.

But when you set forth walk, don't saunter. Walk with upright carriage, chin up, chest out, abdomen in, feet parallel. Let the leg swing out freely from the hip joint.

When tired change your gait. Some of the best walkers whom I have met talking views afoot in Europe, and there are thousands of happy students who see Europe this way, hundreds of rich men who cure indigestion in the same simple manner, have rested from their walk by breaking into a "fox trot" or a slow run.

Now and then stop and test yourself to see whether you are walking well. To do this observe whether you fall into the right standing posture. Place the feet so that they are parallel. Holding the knees straight and steady, lean far forward, keeping the chest up and the head back to balance the body.

Carry as little baggage as possible. A light dress suit case is enough. And if you can arrange to forward this to the inn or farmhouse, where you will stop that night, it will be a great relief.

Don't overwalk the first day. The first two or three days are the most difficult. At first you will suffer from some lameness of limbs and soreness of feet. But continue the walk nevertheless. The very walking readjusts the muscles and loosens the strained sinews.

water, leaving them there for three to five minutes. Enthusiastic walkers now carry pedometers. They add to the interest of the walk, for they exactly record the distance you have travelled and the rate of your walk.

A cry comes out of Brooklyn for remedies for freckles.

I should try the simplest remedies first. These are lemons or buttermilk. Rub thick slices of lemon upon the freckled part of the face, letting the pulp and juice dry upon the skin.

Apply next, this remedy, which softens as well as whitens the skin. Honey..... 2 ozs. Glycerine..... 1/2 oz. Rectified spirits..... 1/2 oz. Citric acid..... 1/2 drams. Essence ambergris. 3 drops.

This is the last resort for deep or winter freckles. The bottle containing it should be marked "Poison" and placed out of reach of the children, or those who cannot read and write.

But I think it well to rub a tonic into the scalp after every shampoo to prevent the consequent dryness and possible brittleness. This is one of my favorite hair tonics.

Oh, These Men!

By FANNY FERN

IT sometimes happens that the loyalty one man exhibits toward other men originates in no higher motive than self-protection.

A man will put a woman on a pedestal in their courtship days, and after marriage will demand that she climb down and give him the place.

Before marriage he has a great deal to say about his heart, and after marriage he expects her to be equally entertained in hearing about his liver.

His idea of forgiveness of a sin is often the privilege to go on sinning.

Of course, he shouldn't have a past, but after he has accumulated one he becomes a more interesting subject of conversation than the man who has only a future.

HOW TIME CHANGES ONE.

"Glad to see you, sir—glad to see you!" exclaimed the host. "Why, it must be let me think—ten years since you came to our party."

"Yes, times change—eh?" replied the old gentleman meditatively.

"They do, sir," replied his host. "But you don't seem to suffer from that complaint. Your wife's changed more'n you, if I may say so."

"Indeed," said the old man.

"Ay, she looks thinner than when she was here last. Used to be—plump. Grown a bit taller, too, ain't she? Afraid she's not the same health, eh? She's not the same complexion—"

"In fact," replied the old man dryly, "she's not the same wife!"

A DESMOND-LIKE VILLAIN.

The haughty, imperious beauty handed him back his ring.

"Now that all is over between us," she said, "I suppose you will buy a revolver and put an end to your wretched existence?"

"Worse than that," he hissed, being careful to introduce the necessary sibilant, "far worse—s-s-s. I shall steal a revolver. And I shall shoot your meek little rose-eyed puddle."

A wild shriek burst from her lips. She fell upon her knees and—

HER RETORT

Marie Dressler is as famous for her epigrams as she is for her generalities. An actor was recalling one of her just-famous bits of repartee.

Miss Dressler was inviting her friend to a birthday party.

"There'll be a birthday cake I suppose?"

"Yes, there'll be a cake, never fear."

"And candles, of course?"

"My friend," said Miss Dressler, "it is to be a birthday party, not a torch-light procession."

What Vocal Diction Means

The singer is saying something to the listeners. It is interesting to them the words of the poet, the dramatist, or the sacred writer, but in tones more expressive than ordinary speech. Singing is speaking enlarged or magnified. The ordinary spoken sounds are magnified in three ways—namely, in regard to extension, intensity, inflection.

Royal Welsh Ladies' Choir

When this organization, under the direction of Madame Hughes-Thomas, appeared in Cleveland, Ohio, The Leader, speaking of their work, said: "The concert justified all the glowing accounts written in the public press wherever the choir has made its appearance. It is a pleasure to listen to such a body of female voices, where almost every member, it seems, need feel ashamed to step out of the choir and before the audience, because they are Welsh, and as a nation of singers nature has endowed them with an inherent facility of musical comprehension and with beautiful and natural voices.

CROTCHETS & QUAVERS

A WEEKLY COLUMN OF MUSIC GOSSIP CONDUCTED BY FRAULIN VAN

Mr. R. S. Pigott and Mrs. Barton announce a joint recital for the last week in March. Their program will consist of a cycle of songs by Strauss, Debussy and Wolf, a series by Sinding and two songs by Mr. H. J. Lauts, which were written specially for Mr. Pigott's voice.

Mr. R. Craig Campbell, who created the tenor role in Savage's opera, "The Love Cure," with such immense success, is a pupil of Mr. David Ross, baritone, who for the past several years has been devoting three days each week to his pupils in Toronto, coming over from Franklin, Pa., for that purpose.

Signor Basselli, the husband of Tetrassini, who accompanies her on all her tours, is himself quite a famous operatic singer and has appeared in many important roles in the great cities of Europe.

An open meeting of the Toronto Travel Club was recently held at the home of Mrs. Pentecost, to bid farewell to Miss H. M. Hill, who is making her thirty-eighth European tour. An entertaining musical program was arranged by the hostess and presented by Miss Spencer, Miss Edith May Yates, and Miss Groat, pianists, and Miss Muriel Ralston, soprano.

Miss Marie C. Strong has issued invitations to a "studio recital" to be given in the auditorium of the Margaret Eaton School on Wednesday evening, March 15. The entire program will be given in English. Since Miss Strong came to this city six years ago, she has by her pen and studio work done much to encourage and stimulate a greater love for our own language in song and her students are listened to with pleasure and interest.

The sacred cantata "Olivet to Calvary," which was so successfully given at the Avenue Road Presbyterian Church, under the direction of Mr. James Quarrington, will be repeated on the 25th of this month at Olivet Congregational Church, Hazelton Avenue.

Miss Hazel Adelaide Fagan, an exceedingly attractive young pianist of excellent technical and musical attainments was heard in a recital of piano music last Wednesday evening at the Margaret Eaton School, and achieved great success by reason of her most admirable playing. She is a thoughtful, expressive player, having a very elastic touch and a most lucid tone, and plays with much poetic imagination, while her finger technique is bewilderingly crisp and fleet.

It is not at all certain that Richard Strauss' new comic opera, "Der Rosenkavalier," will be given at the Metropolitan Opera House next season. Director Gatti-Casazza says that, even if the success of the opera is taken for granted, it will be necessary to obtain some reasonable agreement with its publishers such as would tend to assure a profit and would not bind the Metropolitan management to impossible conditions.

Professor (at restaurant)—Do you care for Puccini? Soubrette—No thanks, I couldn't; another bite.—New York American.

Sonata in B Minor: (a) At the Lake of Wallenstadt. (b) The Chimes of Geneva. (c) Will O' the Wisp.—(From Transcendental Etude). 5. (a) Mephisto Waltz. (b) Carnival of Pesti.

Why You Shouldn't Have Only 1 Baby

THE recent statement of President Emeritus Charles W. Elliot, of Harvard, that the number of children in every family should be at least five or six, has raised considerable discussion among scientists, but the question has been considered mainly from an economic standpoint. Can the average man earn enough to support so many children? Isn't it better to devote all of one's resources to the bringing up of one child than to dissipate one's available income in trying to bring up five or six?

These and similar questions have been raised and answered both negatively and affirmatively by well-informed men, but little attention has been paid to another phase of the subject: Are the chances of an only child for mental and physical strength as favorable as those of the child who is blessed with brothers and sisters?

Professor J. Friedjung, of Vienna, has been looking into this matter and has come to the conclusion that the only child is apt to be far more morbid than other children.

In his report to the Pediatric Section of the Society of Internal Medicine and Pediatrics, in Vienna, Professor Friedjung gives some interesting statistics along these lines.

He took one hundred "only" children, forty-five boys and fifty-five girls from two to ten years old. Examination disclosed that eighteen of these were severely neuropathic—that is to say, suffered from some disease of the nervous system—sixty-nine were slightly neuropathic and the remaining thirteen were normal.

He then examined one hundred children belonging to families and subjected them to the same tests. He found that only thirty-one were neuropathic.

Among the neuropathic "only" children, fear was conspicuous, seventy-five out of the eighty-seven being thus affected. Forty-nine of them were restless at night while eight suffered from pavor nocturnus, or night terrors. Habitual vomiting and mal-nutrition were found in a large number of these children.

Where there is more than one child in the family, the elder children usually play an important part in the upbringing of their younger sisters and brothers, and all of the children acquire self-reliance and independence.

In those cases where the home is blessed with but one child, Professor Friedjung recommends that the company of other children be provided for the youngster.

Going Into the Kitchen for Hat Ideas--and How Tailored Skirts Grow Narrower and Coats Shorter

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, illustrating it with sketches and photographs of her own original modes.

One of the Extreme Models of the "Coal Hod Hat," with Broad Embroidered Band of Velvet and Lopped-Over Velvet Top.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

THIS week I am going to let you into some secrets and give you first news of those still private decrees of the "Powers That Be," whose public proclamation, a little later, will decide the dress destinies of the feminine and fashionable world.

But understand, please, that these are not just my own secrets and styles, but those of Paris, whose decrees and doings are always of interest to every woman and always, too, must be taken into consideration, even though they may not be slavishly followed, as the foundation for schemes and styles, whose building up and whose beautifying details shall depend upon the personal inspiration of the moment and the model.

First a word of mild reproach to the fashionable extremists, who are responsible for the "Coal Hod Hat." The photograph reproduced on this page will impress you with the truth I have so often expressed in these columns—that extremes are always inartistic and in bad taste.

The "Coal Hod Hat" fortunately has not made much headway. It is conspicuous without exciting admiration. Why should it possess any aesthetic advantage when its kitchen origin as to shape is so obvious? There is nothing new in the effect produced by its pen-house brim in front. Its height gives room for a broad band of embroidered velvet, which is of more than doubtful advantage on a hat. Neither is the top of velvet, lopped over and fastened at the side, possessed of enough charm to recommend it.

The other model shown here, with its helmet-like effect, is less objectionable, and, when trimmed with a plume-sweeping backward almost horizontally, may not be unsuited to some profiles.

The new costumes are entirely suggestive of both the Directoire and first Empire periods, but in one and all the Eastern influence will also be made evident by many beautiful blendings of colors and by brocades and trimmings generally.

The transparent tunic will still be a feature of many of the frocks, being generally of knee depth length, while the underskirts will be so cut as just to clear the ground. It has a fashionable and somewhat formidable rival, however, in the way of the narrow, apron-like panels, whose transparency veils both the back and the front of the skirt, leaving the under fabric in full evidence at the sides. The "Quaker girl" deserves being to a certain extent responsible for this, and many another detail of the new modes and models.

So much at the moment for gowns, while now as regards the tailored coat and skirt costumes you must know that coats are to be very short, reaching barely to the hips, sleeves and shoulders being cut in one piece and the sleeves being often of three-quarter length and like those of the dress models, often widening into the bell form, which, by this time, is sufficiently old-fashioned to be revived as a new fashion.

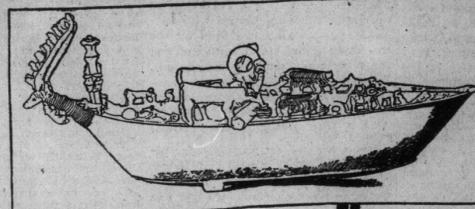

And then, as you will probably want to know about the most favored fabrics, let me at once recommend an early and extensive purchase of printed foulards, as these soft and charmingly colored silks are going to enjoy an almost unprecedented vogue, though truly they have been among the most popular productions of the past two or three seasons. Paris promises to make extensive use of stripes and small geometrical patterns and is also favoring black and white effects.

I also want to introduce you to an entirely new scheme of draping, which is that demi-toilette of charmeuse and printed gauze provides a shawl-like veiling for one shoulder and arm, the other being closely outlined by a flesh-pink transparency, while last, but by no means least in my estimation or recommendation, is a tea coat—again of charmeuse and chiffon—which is destined to be worn over a little underslip of faintest pink almon, its own soft opalescent coloring being set off by one touch of black in a long fringe reverse of velvet.

The Oldest Noah's Ark—10,000 Years B.C.

The Ancient Etruscan Noah's Ark Found in a Pre-historic Grave.

ONE of the most remarkable facts discovered by archaeology is the antiquity of the legends of Noah and the ark, or similar versions of that story.

A prehistoric ship has been found in a grave at Vetulonia, in Etruria, one of the cities of the mysterious ancient Etruscans. These people enjoyed a high degree of civilization in Italy long before the Greeks or Romans rose to greatness. In the earliest days of Roman history the last of the Etruscans were passing away. The grave discovered may have been made ten thousand years before Christ.

The ancient ship contained little models of a vast number of animals. Clearly it was a Noah's Ark, and it is the earliest Noah's Ark yet discovered. Its presence in the grave indicates, according to the editor of the Open Court, who discusses the subject, that the meaning of the Noah legend was a promise of immortality.

The ancients believed that life came to them from the sea, and the idea is symbolized sometimes by an ark, or by a fisherman, or by a fish.

The idea permeated the new Greek mysteries, in which Dionysus, Orpheus and other divinities played a prominent part. In these mysteries Dionysus rode on a dolphin, or on a fish. Eros, the god of love, crossed the sea on a dolphin, and Apollo himself, seated on his tripod, took wing and crossed the ocean, accompanied by dolphins and fishes.

Dionysus, the Greek Equivalent of Noah, in a Festive Procession.

Marduk, in ancient Babylonia, and Dionysus, in Athens, enter in festive procession in a ship called "The Ark of Plenty." Even to-day its modern successor, Prince Carnival, sits on a float in the carnival parade.

The cult of Zeus, in primitive Greece, was one connected with the same notion of crossing the ocean, either on a fish or in an ark or ship. The Greek Noah is called Deucalion, which is a form of Zeus, meaning "Zeus, the Child." It signifies that when Zeus first came into the world over the ocean he was small.

That the story of Noah is also well known is Asia Minor is evidenced by the fact that Kelainai, a city of Phrygia, was reputed to be the place where the ark touched land when the waters subsided. In the days of the Emperor Augustus this city was called Kibotos, which means "ark," and coins were struck, in the days of Septimius Severus and other Roman emperors, exhibiting on their reverse a memorial of the deluge. In these cases the hero of the flood is not called Deucalion, but Noe, which is practically the same as that of the biblical patriarch.

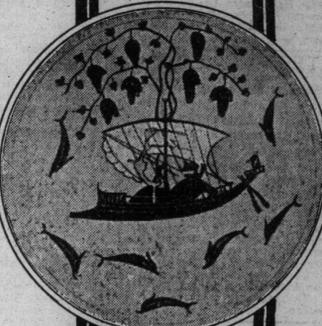

In Palestine an ancient tomb is still shown which, according to tradition, is that of Noah, but it can hardly be as old as that.

It is also remarkable that the fish is one of the commonest symbols in the earliest Christian inscriptions in the Catacombs and elsewhere.

It is believed by some scholars that the fish in these inscriptions represents Christ. In the symbolism of the earlier religions the fish was the divinity that promised everlasting life.

THE TORONTO WORLD AT LARGE AND SPORT IN GENERAL CONDUCTED BY H. J. P. GOOD

Affairs of the Day

An Advocate of Talk.
 William Jennings Bryan, being a master of oratory himself, believes that everybody should follow the simple and become an orator. In an address at the Lane Technical School, Chicago he said: "The age of oratory never can pass. We have more today to correct misrepresentation than we ever did before. Newspapers often take the wrong position with reference to public affairs, and there can be found men of brains and ability who will champion the wrong side of any question if they are not checked. You must become orators to counteract these influences. And you cannot fail. Words spoken from the heart, by a man who knows what he is talking about and who believes what he says can overcome all kinds of opposition." The worthy piece with reference to parliament and the legislature, what a dear sweet time there will be. And if the closure were applied, judging from the stunts that are being played, the violence resorted to by the ladies of the franchise, a riotous time would be constantly raging. It is to be feared that more often than not the honest summary of parliamentary proceedings would be "Business, nil."

Female Franchise.
 In spite of the probability of an excess of talk it is rather strange to say why women should not enjoy the franchise. The ancient argument that their sphere is "home" was long ago exploded as regards sufficiency. There is hardly a walk or pleasure in the nowadays in which they do not take a leading part. As a matter of fact it is the "better men" who deny them the right to vote and to allow the male electorate and the male drunkard to restrict the franchise to themselves. It appears an anomaly in any and every form of national government. Whether the country were a democracy or a monarchy, the franchise is not possible to say, but this much can be said and said with truthfulness that Toronto has no more intelligent or more disinterested women than any other city to exercise the franchise in municipal affairs. Personally I am inclined to the opinion that if the franchise were given to women it would mean a great deal more to the city than it would mean to the country. It would mean a great deal more to the city than it would mean to the country. It would mean a great deal more to the city than it would mean to the country.

The Morality Rage.
 In Toronto a morality venture to be the moralist according to The Tribune of Chicago, the censor in that city is Andy Moynihan, a popular bartender. There is even a widespread morality on and it is being carried to ridiculous extremes. In Toronto the brevity of the skirts of the ladies of the city is not the only thing that is being carried to ridiculous extremes. In Toronto the brevity of the skirts of the ladies of the city is not the only thing that is being carried to ridiculous extremes.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Speech.
 Sir Wilfrid Laurier's speech on Tuesday night was of course eloquent, but the portion of it contained nothing new. He vamped the story of Sir John Macdonald's desire for reciprocity. That is all that is new. He vamped the story of Sir John Macdonald's desire for reciprocity. That is all that is new.

Why at this juncture we should yield to them Sir Wilfrid and Mr. Lillierap.
 Why at this juncture we should yield to them Sir Wilfrid and Mr. Lillierap. Why at this juncture we should yield to them Sir Wilfrid and Mr. Lillierap.

English Racing Statistics.
 During 1910, 3877 horses raced in Great Britain and Ireland, including 149 two-year-olds; 1646 three-year-olds; 617 four-year-olds and 74 five-year-olds and upwards. The total value of stakes won was $2,575,817.88, namely in England $2,575,817.88 and in Ireland $166,668.48 and in Scotland $62,562.78.

A Postal Suggestion.
 At the general post office in this city an automatic stamp box has been placed that on Canadian cents being deposited will produce one-cent or two-cent stamps as required. But why not cut out stamps altogether and place an official mark on each envelope brought to the post office or its branches to be mailed? Even firms and companies having large mailings could be supplied with machines that would mark and register the number simultaneously. This would save both time and money. The present method of cancelling stamps is used now in the case of large packages of letters, but why not endorse the letters themselves with a machine like the cancelling machine? Suppose I have ten or twenty letters or even more to mail where is the use of my going to the window, buying and sticking on stamps which have to be cancelled, when I might pay in my little ten or twenty cents or more and the machine that cancels could also be used to stamp the letters with a date and time and therefore healthier process.

Know An Ancestral Race.
 I know I am laughing at my proposition, but I am going to make it nevertheless. Why should not Toronto give a hundred thousand dollars to the first time a city, as a city, did anything of the kind. It would be helping forward to a solution of the grand problem of the day—racial prejudice. It would interest hundreds of thousands of people. It would mean very little as regards outlay to this city of 400,000 people and would return a hundredfold in the way of publicity amounting to untold thousands. It looks to me very much like Toronto's opportunity. Even supposing not one cent only mean the loss of fifty thousand dollars for the other fifty thousand dollars. The former is usually paid over by the exhibition to the city treasurer. Bands and extra art are hardly becoming minimized as a result of the exhibition. It is about time we did something out of the common, out of the rut, something startling and a hundred thousand dollars would return a hundredfold in the way of publicity amounting to untold thousands. It looks to me very much like Toronto's opportunity.

Pastimes of the People

When Boxing Was Boxing.
 In my young days prize fighting was prizefighting, everything practically went above the belt, but boxing was boxing, and the science of the thing was to stand off and land a blow, hard one if possible, but good and clean. Wrestling and clinching were entirely out of the question. Boxing was on a par with fencing. You stood off and tried with legitimate wariness to get over, below, thru, or in some way past your opponent's defence. That was boxing, but in prize fighting on the other hand the combatants could fight until one or the other was knocked down. The weakness of the game was that the seconds could help a man back to his corner and pretty easily enable him to go on. Did I say, the only weakness of the game? Oh, no, there was another—the referee who wouldn't act pretty easily allowing almost everything to go except deliberate murder and the afore-said sponging. The last heavy-weight championship fight was between the Dwyer-Elliott affair at Long Point, opposite Port Dover, where Mace and Coburn were supposed to fight, but Mace, like school children, refused to knock the chip off each other's shoulder, and Al Smith was the referee. Al Smith was beaten and cooked but having been weakened in prison and being blinded by the glare, I do not hesitate to say that had the rules been strictly enforced and he won on a foul for at the end of the final round, after knocking his opponent down, Dwyer fell on his ribs with both knees. The spectators were always according to points and order that the sum total of these might be arrived at in proper order the only man inside the ropes should be the referee as the judge on fouls, and there should be two men, one each right and left of the ring, to score the points. The fairer game would be objectionable and popular it will become, and in this way it appears to me boxing will have a chance of regaining its old position. At present it is generally little less than fighting with gloves.

Horse Show Prize List.
 The prize list is out for this year's Canadian National Horse Show in the Toronto Armory. It calls for the distribution of upwards of seven thousand dollars between 88 classes. Once more it is necessary to deplore the lack of an arena for the holding of such events. Not only is it regretted that the Horse Show Association should be indebted to the military for accommodation but that a building adaptable to the needs of such a permanent seat is not available. At present, some fifteen hundred dollars has to be expended each year to validate the prize list could be gratifyingly increased. Vancouver, B. C. has an arena of exactly the same dates as Toronto, but will give a thousand dollars more in prizes. The western city is able to do this because of the arena. Thus in this instance alone Toronto would gain fifteen hundred dollars in cash, to say nothing of the reputation of the erection of such a building. However, the horse show people are doing their utmost to have things satisfactory. They have both increased and revised the prize list in some particulars. Especially have they given care to the hunting fixtures. Not only is it a great deal to have a horse show on exactly the same dates as Toronto, but will give a thousand dollars more in prizes. The western city is able to do this because of the arena. Thus in this instance alone Toronto would gain fifteen hundred dollars in cash, to say nothing of the reputation of the erection of such a building.

Cost of College Athletics.
 College experts all over the United States are considerably stirred up over the declaration of Dean Lebaron R. Briggs of Harvard that "the cost of organized athletics is almost scandalous." Harvard, in spite of its enormous receipts from football and baseball, can barely meet its athletic bills. Simple honesty and common sense are needed, he says, to eliminate the luxuries. The other big schools are in the same fix. Football and baseball at Yale support the other branches of sport. This is also the case at Princeton and Penn. Cornell, Chicago—in fact, everywhere. They are all trying to find a way to retrench. It is said that owing to the new football rules and consequently decreased interest the University of Pennsylvania fell $2,000 behind last year.

Greatest Amateur Athlete.
 "Mike" Murphy, who has a continental reputation as a trainer, has been telling The New York Herald the men he considers the four greatest amateur athletes American ever possessed. He gives "Lou" Myers, Kranzlein, Jewett and Gavel. As regards Lou Myers he is undoubtedly right but as regards the other three Malcolm W. Ford, who could both run and jump, and actually won the individual all-round championship in 1885, '86, '88 and '89, had them beaten a block. Ford like Myers won championships in three countries, Great Britain, Canada and the United States, and if points were counted I am not certain he would not come out ahead of the Manhattan man, he represented the N. Y. A. C. Murphy posted out that in 1880 Myers won the hundred yards, 200 yards, 400 yards and 800 yards American championships. In 1885 Malcolm W. Ford won the hundred yards, 200 yards, and running long jump American championships and the same year the 220 yards and the 440 yards Canadian championships. In 1886 he won the 100 yards, 200 yards, and running long jump United States five times, the hundred yards run three times, the 200 yards run twice, the running high-jump once and compelled W. B. Page to go six feet to beat him in the latter event.

Death of W. L. Murdoch.
 W. L. Murdoch, the great Australian cricketer, who died on the 11th of glory recently during the interval of a test match at Melbourne with South Africa, was regarded as the W. G. Grace of Antipodes. Being that he was so closely associated with Australian cricket, captaining four teams east, visited Britain, he also played his part in English cricket for Sussex and leading that county's eleven into the field from 1882 to 1899. In the latter year he was named as captain by Prince Ranjitsingh, and afterwards played his last English cricket with W. G. Grace for the now defunct Victoria. Born at Sandhurst, Victoria, on October 18, 1855, he first won his place in local teams as a wicket-keeper. He was the first to stand up to fast bowling without a long-stop. His earliest appearance as a batsman was in 1876, when he scored as captain by Prince Ranjitsingh, and afterwards played his last English cricket with W. G. Grace for the now defunct Victoria. Fraud in Hockey.
 My attention is called to The Globe is certainly not hesitating to call a spade a spade in its handling of the affairs of the suspended Chatham Hockey Club. "Fraud" is a word which is used in connection with an amateur sport in a nineteenth-century paragraph. Such a use of the word is undoubtedly unwarranted, but it does not say much for the advance of the amateur spirit that such strenuous denunciations should be necessitated. It may be that it is a case of exception proving the rule and that the conduct of the Chatham club appears to be a just cause of its rarity. Let us hope that it is so, also, that the fact cannot be overlooked that the "tricks" were from Goderich, thus making it seem that the men of more than one place are willing to engage in nefarious transactions. Rangers in business supposed to be conducted in a pure spirit of sport should be prosecuted with the same rigor that they would be if they were conducted in a false pretence. Their crime is morally as great and socially greater.

The Man Who Left Nothing for the Tiger

An Example of a Species of Ingratitude That Is Not Growing Less Common
as "Civilization"
Progresses.

FEW weeks ago a man for whom a faithful horse had worked for twenty-five years discovered that the creature was broken down and useless. Tolling in the harness eleven or twelve hours a day, patiently earning for the man a considerable part of his bread and butter, subsisting on short rations, and always making the best of it, the old animal at last gave way. Horse flesh is pretty tough, but twenty-five years at hard labor is a severe sentence.

One would imagine that an ordinarily constituted human being for whom even a lower animal had worked so long and so willingly as this would make an effort to give him the rest he deserved. But the man took the horse up to the Bronx Zoo. He had conceived the idea that a little more money might be squeezed out of the poor old carcass. He thought he could sell the brute for tiger meat, and actually made this ingenious proposal to the keepers.

He was told that tigers, especially those that are kept in captivity, and must be kept in good spirits and good health, lest they grow peevish and die, must have good meat, and would undoubtedly refuse the thin strips of tough muscle that still clung to the luckless beast of burden. The meat was, therefore, not offered to the tigers. There is no doubt that they would have turned away in disgust had they thus been insulted.

THEN THE MAN TOOK THE OLD HORSE AWAY WITH HIM AGAIN. AS HE WAS WALKING IT HOME THE HORSE LAY DOWN AND DIED. PERHAPS THE SHOCK OF BEING REJECTED EVEN BY A TIGER WAS TOO MUCH FOR IT.

We trust that the readers of this editorial will not be too deeply sympathetic with the gentleman who was thus disappointed of selling his horse for the tigers to devour. He might have enjoyed the spectacle of their meal on his old friend and servant—if it put an extra dollar or two in his pocket. It is probably that that kind of a man would have considered it good "sport" to turn the horse loose among the tigers and watch them pull the animal down.

But his case forms too much of a parallel to that of many other cases of human ingratitude and cruelty to entitle him to many tears of sympathy.

Look at the patient, hard-working horses you see on a Winter's day, slipping and falling in the sleety streets, but bravely thrusting forward against their collars to resume their work as soon as they are given a chance again to get their feet under them.

It may be that their owners will leave enough of them for tiger meat when their work is done, but in that case the chances are that they will be sold to kindly farmers, or street car companies, to be driven till they are in such a condition that they will not be attractive even as a menu in a zoological park.

They are not consulted as to what they shall do when they begin life. As soon as they are old enough to work a harness is clapped on them and they are set to bearing burdens and EARNING MONEY for their human owners.

Some of them of blue blood, and born to the purple in rich men's stables, trot proudly in front of light, fashionable buggies, or spend a few hours a day training, a few minutes racing, and the rest of the time lolling in easy box stalls or paddocks, to be looked over and admired and praised and petted by stable boys and bookmakers till their heads are fairly turned with flattery.

But there comes a time when even these equine aristocrats, who win races at the track and prizes at the horse show and get their names and pictures in the papers and the magazines, become too old for racing or showing off and must take their turn at burden bearing till not an acceptable meal for a tiger is left on their ridgy ribs.

It seems to be an accepted fact that horses were meant for beasts of burden. Man could have done little without them in the past, although with the aid of automobiles he will soon be able wholly to dispense with them.

But the very fact that they are his beasts of burden, that they have for centuries done so well the work he has for them to do—hauling the food that he eats, the lumber and bricks for his buildings, and the very guns that he sends out into the field to fight other men with—ought to entitle them to a few quiet years in the pasture when their work is done.

In the years that are to come the horse will be wholly ornamental—in the days that are past he has carried crack-brained knights to foolish lance battles; he has stood up against shot and shell on the battle field; he has been wherever man has been and run every risk that man has run, and "consent of the governed" is a term that he knows nothing about.

Which brings us to the human horses that have borne a great deal of the heat and burden of the day and who would consider themselves fortunate, perhaps, if at the close of their lives, when all the spirit is gone out of their souls, all the light out of their eyes, they could find a welcome, even at a zoological park.

There is no doubt about the high and noble quality of our civilization. That is brought in evidence every time some human being who is kindly disposed and has been sentimental enough to pity some poor old burden-carrying woman, introduces a bill providing for an old-age pension.

THE INTRODUCTION OF SUCH A

MEASURE, EITHER ON THIS SIDE OF THE WATER OR IN ENGLAND, IS THE SIGNAL FOR HOWLS OF DERISIVE LAUGHTER.

Automobile-fattened captains of industry, for whom thousands of men and women have worked themselves into a useless old age, chuckle over the old-age pension "foolishness" in their clubs and become righteously indignant if any one tries to talk with them about it seriously.

"Why," they cry, "it would pauperize people. A man who knows that his old age will be provided for would stop working altogether. What is the sense of our supporting more of the people than we are doing now?"

An ingenious argument, and the sort to be expected from that kind of men, who fancy that because they are paying poor wages to men and women—and children, if they can beat the child labor laws—that they are supporting their employes.

No doubt the driver of the horse that went to the zoo fancied that because he had occasionally given the animal a handful of oats and had daily issued to him a scant ration of hay that he was supporting the horse.

A man like that would lack the intelligence to understand that the horse was supporting him!

The reverence, the respect, the gratitude that is due the aged is probably not to be expected. In thousands of homes there are old men and women, who have given the best of themselves to their children, who sit in corners granted them grudgingly, who eat food that is given them reluctantly, and who are made to feel that they have outlived their usefulness and that the only thing they can do that will be appreciated is to die.

There is no way to compel a son or a daughter to honor the father and mother who have given up their lives for their children. At present there is no way to compel the man, who, because he has had an advantage over other men, has subsisted on their earnings through their lives and turned them out to the questionable humanity of organized charity when they could earn no more.

Men's consciences sleep soundly. It takes a long time to awaken them.

But there will come a time when, in spite of the objections of those who do not want to "pauperize" the worn-out old men and women who feebly, often blindly, go their uncertain ways among the younger and happier of the world's population, civilized countries will care for them.

There is little fear of making paupers of men and women past sixty, who have toiled as long as there was strength to toil left in them.

There is little danger by a pension or by any other means of reward of making a professional mendicant of a mother who has given the world children and who has sacrificed her health and strength in supporting them as long as she was able to support them.

There is nothing either visionary or Utopian in making men treat their horses and their dogs humanely. It is easy enough to pass laws for that purpose. It would be easy to pass a law which provided for the offense against humanity which the man who wanted to sell his horse for tiger meat committed.

But as soon as it is suggested that something be done for the old, editors and legislators alike set up a howl that the Constitution has been torn to ribbons, and that the country is on the brink of utter ruin.

We do not expect that any change will be made immediately in this condition of affairs. But we do suggest to the gentlemen whose habit it is to work their employes, till their health is broken down and then turn them adrift that they ought to be a little more gentle—that they ought to stop before the shrivelled rags of flesh that remain are so scanty and so shrivelled that they are not even fit for tiger meat.
