Two Women Testify

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did For Their Health—Their own Statements Follow.

Halliburton, P.E.I.—"I had a doctor examine me and he said I had falling of the womb, so I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has done me a lot of good. All the bearing-down pains have vanished. I have gained ten pounds in weight, the discharge is all gone, and I feel better than I have for a long time. I think any woman is foolish to suffer as I did for the sake of a few dollars.

"You can use my letter as a testimonial. I may encourage other poor women who suffer as I did to use your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Geo. COLLAUERT, Halliburton, Lot 7, P.E.I.

I had bearing down pains, was dizzy and weak, had pains in lower back and could not be upon my feet long enough to get a meal. As long as I laid on my back I would feel better, but when I would get up those bearing down pains would come back, and the doctor said I had female trouble. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was the only medicine that helped me and I have been growing stronger ever since commenced to take it. I hope it will help other suffering women as it has me."—Mrs. Cassie Lord, New Moorefield, Clark Co., Ohio.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

Duke of Orleans Sells Historic York House at Twickenham—Kaiser's Son to Cologne as Political Move.

The Duke of Orleans, after having sold Wood Norton, his 4,000 acre estate to Sir Charles Eady, chancery judge, has now also disposed of his only remaining English landed property, York House at Twickenham, for which he has been looking for a purchaser for some time. Frequently confounded with Orleans House, Twickenham, York House was his birthplace, as well as that of most of his sisters. It was the scene of several royal marriages, and played a very important role in the history of the House of Bourbon-Orleans during the nineteenth century.

Build some time in the reign of James I., on one of the most picturesque of the upper reaches of the Thames, opposite Leil-Pie Island, it was acquired soon after the restoration by the great Earl of Clarendon, who wished to have a residence in the immediate neighborhood of Charles II. when the latter was staying at Hampton Court Palace. When Clarendon's daughter, Anne Hyde, married James II., then Duke of York, the newly wedded pair went to the duke's country seat for their honeymoon, and afterwards established their residence there. Hence is derived the name of York House.

Their daughter, Princess Anne, afterwards Queen Anne, was born there in 1665 in the room still known by her name. York House has changed owners several times since then, one being Prince Starnberg, an Austrian ambassador to England in the early part of the nineteenth century, and it was he who fitted up one of the wings as a private theatre, where French plays and operas were produced at his expense.

Its next possessor was an Archbishop of York, and then came the Hon. Mrs. Decker, one of the foremost of English sculptresses. The studio which she made for herself in the east wing was afterwards converted into a conservatory. Mrs. Decker frequently entertained Queen Caroline, consort of George IV.

Then it became for some years the suburban English home of Joseph Bates, of Boston, an American partner of the great banking house of Baring. Indeed it was there that all those distinguished Americans who visited England during the Victorian era, were enabled to meet the principal men of Great Britain.

Joseph Bates' daughter married Baron von der Weyer, Belgian envoy in London, and personal representative of Queen Victoria's uncle, Leopold I of Belgium. The Van der Weys' daughter is now the wife of Oliver Dreyer, who was lately an unsuccessful suitor for the hand of Miss Antoinette Heckscher of New York.

In 1848, when King Louis Philippe lost the throne in France, Marie Amelie found refuge at Clarendon Palace. The English queen also lent another of her country seats, namely, Bushey Park, to the exiled monarch's son, the late Duc de Nemours. The Duc d'Annamale, another Twickenham, and the Duc de Nemours, who was his sister in law, the widowed Comte de Paris and her two boys, the Duc de Nemours and the Duc de Chartres, were married, and it is there also that all his elder children were born.

In 1871, on their return to France, they leased the place; but when the Comte de Paris was forced once more into exile, he placed the place in his hands, and he and his eldest son, the present Duke of Orleans.

It remained the duke's principal home until the death of his uncle, the Duc d'Annamale, who lent it to her in 1864, for the use of her sister, the young Duke of Gloucester, who died there.

Queen Caroline, consort of George III, Defoe, of "Robinson Crusoe" fame, mentions the place in his "Tour through England, Scotland and Ireland." Through all the river side gardens, "I think that of Secretary Johnstone, for elegance and largeness, and the terrace on the river, makes much the brightest figure here."

King Louis Philippe on his return from the United States, where he had for a time learned his living as a school master, occupied the place in 1820, and gave it the name of Orleans House, he then bearing the title of Duke of Orleans. Queen Marie Amelie, his consort, died there, after her husband's loss of the French throne, and subsequent death at Clarendon Palace, when the Duc d'Annamale gave Orleans House in 1871, on his return to France, he lent it for a couple of years to the late Don Carlos, pretender to the throne of Spain; and in 1874 sold it to Sir John Acland, who converted it into a suburban sporting club under the name of the Orleans Club.

In 1885 it was purchased by the late William Cunard, from whom it passed to the possession of the nuns of the Order of the Compassion.

Prince Augustus William of Prussia, fourth of the Kaiser's sons, and the greatest late for science, art and literature, is so I hear from Berlin on excellent authority, about to take up his residence at Cologne, or rather, I should say, in the beautiful chateau of Brühl, a son of Rheinnist Veron, within easy drive of the city.

There is considerably less loyalty to the reigning house in the west of Prussia than in the eastern part, owing perhaps to the fact that the population of the Rhine provinces is largely Catholic, and as such were formerly discriminated against by the Berlin government, especially during the period of Bismarck's memorable war against the Catholic church.

Cologne has always displayed a marked spirit of independence towards the House of Hohenzollern, unable to forget that, in the beginning of the nineteenth century, it was a free city of the old empire, while the surrounding district formed part

Envy

By RUTH CAMERON

HOW much of the happiness in this world is built on the very ugly foundation of other people's envy!

That is a very disturbing and disheartening thought which comes to me whenever I have occasion to realize how largely the value we place on things is determined, not by their intrinsic beauty or utility, but rather by their rarity.

Luxuries would not be luxuries if everyone could have them. "Automobiles are so common nowadays," says one of the rich folks who was among the first to own a car, "that there is no fun in having one. Why, every plumber and two-penny clerk has his machine. I think I shall give up mine." You see, a large proportion of his pleasure in owning a car consisted in having something that other people could not have.

Could the woman who declares she loves her diamonds because of their fire and sparkle continue to love them if a peasant diamond mine were discovered and diamonds became as commonplace as corresponding common? Indeed she would not. She would forget all about that fire and sparkle which she had so long admired, and would want something else which common people could not afford. The fact that it had less intrinsic beauty would probably mean nothing to her.

A plain girl longed with all her heart to be pretty, and she would be perfectly happy if she might be good to people and cannot have that, she would be the object of other people's envy. "I will make you very pretty, and at the same time, since you tell me beauty is such a desirable thing, I will make every other plain girl in the world as pretty as you. Do you think the plain girl would be satisfied? Or would she be disappointed at the fairy godmother's capriciousness? I doubt if there is any motive which is behind more words and acts than this desire to outshine other people, to have something which other people want and cannot have, and to be the object of other people's envy.

It stands behind a woman's desire to have a richer, more beautiful gown than Mrs. So-and-so served at her function. It spurs the great statesman in his struggle for fame. It makes the miser hoard up his money.

But its commonness is no excuse. To my mind it is one of the ugliest and most ignoble passions in the world. It is the intrinsic beauty or utility, and for the actual happiness I can get out of them and give with them, rather than their rarity of the envy I can excite with them—this is one of my dearest ideals. Will you adopt it with me? Or perhaps you are one of the rare souls who have already attained it.

PAPER ON INFANT FEEDING

BY DR. McVEY OF ST. JOHN

Matter of Practical Interest and Value Presented at Meeting of Medical Society in Moncton

The subject of infant nutrition is one of much importance, when we take into consideration the fact that an infant normally doubles its weight in the space of five months and triples it in twelve months. It shows the wonderful activity of tissue building that is taking place to supply the necessary constructive material for such very rapid growth and development during this important period of life. It is therefore very essential to the extremely careful feeding of the proper kind of food given, and the frequency of the feeding, as well as the quantity; and above all the food should be capable of ready absorption and assimilation. And the only food which will perfectly fulfill all these requirements of early infancy is normal human milk.

When, for certain reasons, such as impossibility to procure, we are compelled to supply the large amount of milk necessary for the infant, we must use a substitute and the nearer such a substitute approximates to the milk of the mother the more suitable it is for the purpose.

Next to build up tissues or repair the system, the food must contain five important elements in certain proportions, namely: proteins, carbohydrates or fats, carbohydrates, salts, water.

In case of an infant, the digestive powers are very gradually developed. The saliva does not exist in the stomach until the age of three months, and the pancreatic juice, which plays the most important part in the digestion of starch, does not fully develop until the end of the first year. The starched nature should be given an infant during the early months of life. The required quantity of starch is approximately one-third of the total food.

It is necessary for an infant, a considerable amount of hydrocarbon is necessary. If the food is deficient in these elements, the infant is apt to show rickets, deformities, etc.

Infant Mortality. The very great mortality of infancy is largely due to faulty feeding; and the fact that feeding is responsible for the vast majority of disorders in infancy. The statistics of the hospital for sick children, London, show that 90 per cent. of the cases of diarrhoea in infancy occur in the first year of life, and 100 per cent. in infants fed by the breast.

Queen Caroline, consort of George III, Defoe, of "Robinson Crusoe" fame, mentions the place in his "Tour through England, Scotland and Ireland." Through all the river side gardens, "I think that of Secretary Johnstone, for elegance and largeness, and the terrace on the river, makes much the brightest figure here."

HORSE RACING AND ROWING; OLYMPIC FEATURES TODAY

Stockholm, July 17—The military horse riding competition for teams at the Olympic games was concluded this morning. It included a distance ride of about thirty miles, a cross country ride of about three miles, an individual steeple chase ride, prize jumping and prize riding. The Swedish team finished first with 139.00 points; Germany second with 138.48 points and the United States third with 137.33 points.

The Olympic regatta, probably the largest international rowing gathering on record, opened this morning with the race for barges, four with sliding seats and with a coxswain. The results of the heats were as follows—Stockholm best Christians by two lengths; Denmark beat Gothenburg by a length and a half; Norway beat France by five lengths.

The race for eight-oared outrigger shells with coxswain resulted as follows—Germany best France by a length and a half; time 6 minutes 45 seconds; Germany led throughout. Australia best Sweden easily, time 6 minutes 57 seconds. The race was practically a procession.

It is of blue and silver shoe taffeta bouche. There is a decided preference for these little dresses over the shirt waist and skirt. The pretty collar is of finely tucked batiste, and the design on the front of the bodice is done in blue silk tulle. A braided strip of the silk covers the fastening of the draped piece on skirt, which comes from the waist line at the back to the side, as shown.

A Newspaper Experiment (Amherst News)

It is reported from the west that the editor of the Springfield Daily News tried a rather novel experiment as far as the newspaper business is concerned.

He wrote to state the prominent men of his home city and asked them if they would write on a slip of paper and forward to him subjects for a dozen editorials, which he was to write, if the subjects chosen were suitable.

In due time the slips arrived with the twelve subjects, seventy-two in all, for editorial comment, but the editor found that it was a frightful aim at something or other, which he was to write, if the subjects chosen were suitable.

Every one was the airing of a private grievance which, if published, would call for the permanent appointment of a police officer on the staff of the paper.

"If," said the editor of the Daily News, "a man were to write for a week along the lines suggested by these six persons, he would be dubbed in the river as a common scoundrel—or should be so treated. The paper would become a sour, disgruntled organ of liver-affected people. And yet the six persons approached were of the everyday type, just such persons as one meets in business or society, and were in no sense those whom we often hear described as having 'soured' upon the world."

POPULAR VOGUE FOR PANAMAS

The season started with small and medium sized hats, and for tailored suits they are unquestionably better style, but now the big drooping Panama hat has come into their own. The Panama, with its pliability and creamy whiteness, is most delightfully becoming. There are various artistic modes of trimming, but the rose banded crown, and rose velvet bow, with a short fall of shadow lace on its brim, is particularly desirable. Inside the brim a band of similar colored velvet is introduced.

THE SANITARIUM

The municipal council yesterday advanced a stage further the matter of the sanitarium. The council has approved of the site selected by the Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis and approved by Dr. Townsend and other experts.

forts in the employment of convict labor on the highways and public buildings of the commonwealth. We know that great improvements and benefits, essential to every individual community and business enterprise, have followed wherever this class of labor has been furnished by the unwilling wards of the state.

JAIL AND FARM

Upon fuller enquiry Com. McLellan will no doubt be convinced that it is more a rest and not less that are needed in St. John, though that should not involve any enlargement of the jail. St. John has an unenviable reputation as the home of an unusually large proportion of drunken loafers and men who because of their drunken habits neglect or abuse their wives and children.

The improvement in the St. John river steamship service will be of great advantage during the tourist season.

Both these classes of persons should be taken off the streets and placed in an institution where they would be compelled to remain sober and to earn their living. If there were such a place, a prison farm with some industrial equipment, and if the persons who ought to be there were sent there for terms ranging from six to eighteen months, the present jail would be quite large enough for the casual drunkards and other offenders for whom such accommodation would be required; while the city would be relieved of the presence of a considerable number of wretches who either cannot or will not conduct themselves as responsible members of society.

The improvement in the St. John river steamship service will be of great advantage during the tourist season.

Com. McLellan is touching the fringe of a very large and important social problem which can never be solved by the mental processes of a policeman when he decides whom he shall gather in and whom he shall carry home. Let there be provided a prison farm for the province or a portion of it, including St. John, and conditions will at once begin to improve.

Commissioner McLellan is quite right in his contention that the policemen should exercise an intelligent discretion in the matter of arrests.

GOOD ROADS

The question of good roads is just now the subject of much discussion in the State of Montana. The governor has appointed a commission to draft a good roads law for the consideration of the next legislature.

The invasion by broadtail moths is a serious menace to this province, and efforts must be redoubled to prevent such ravages as they have committed in the New England states.

The Home for Incurables, the report of which is published today, is a beneficent institution whose value cannot be stated in terms of money. Funds should be provided for its enlargement.

THE CALF PATH

(By Sam Walter Foss.)

"All the Rights They Wanted."

One day through the primval wood

A calf walked home, as good calves

hould;

But made a trail all bent askew,

And, I infer, the calf is dead.

But still he left behind his trail,

And thereby hangs my moral tale.

The trail was taken up next day

By a lone dog that passed that way;

And then a wise bell-wether sheep

Pursued the trail o'er vale and steep.

And drew the flock behind him, too,

As good bell-wethers always do.

And from that day, o'er hill and glade,

Through those old woods a path was made.

And many men wound in and out

And dodged and turned and bent about

And uttered words of righteous wrath

Because 'twas such a crooked path;

But still they followed—do not laugh—

The first migrations of that calf.

And through this winding wood-way walked

Because he wabbled when he stalked.

This forest path became a lane,

That bent and turned and bent again;

This crooked lane became a road,

Where many a poor horse, with his load,

Toiled on beneath the burning sun

And traveled some three miles in one.

And thus a century and a half

They trod the footpaths of that calf.

The years passed on in swift feet,

The road became a village street.

And this, before men were aware,

A city's crowded thoroughfare.

And soon the central street was this

Of a renowned metropolis.

And men two centuries and a half

Trod in the footpaths of that calf.

Each day a hundred thousand rout

Followed the zigzag calf about.

And o'er his crooked journey went

The traffic of a continent.

A hundred thousand men were led

By one calf near three centuries dead.

They followed still his crooked way

And lost one hundred years a day;

For thus such reverence is lent

To well-established precedent.

A moral lesson this might teach,

Were I ordained and called to preach.

For men are prone to go it blind

Along the calf-paths of the mind,

And work away from sun to sun

To do what other men have done.

They follow in the beaten track

And out and in, and forth and back,

And still their devious course pursue,

To keep the path that others do.

But how the wise old wood-gods laugh

Who saw the first primval calf!

Ah! many things this tale might teach—

But I am not ordained to preach.

WHERE WILL CANADA GET IMMIGRANTS?

There Are Signs of Slowing Up in Britain And On Continent

A PROBLEM STATED

Scotland Wants to Keep Her Farmers; Ireland Will Not Allow Advertising for New Settlers and the Continental Countries Are Closing the Gates

(Times Special Correspondence.)
London, July 6--A statement by the Hon. George E. Foster that fifty years hence the population of Canada would be close on fifty millions brings up a question which has for some time exercised the minds of emigration experts here. Where will Canada obtain the quarter of a million or so settlers annually that she requires from Great Britain in the future? Successive years of emigration have so denuded the source of supply that it is impossible to continue exporting in such large numbers the class of settlers the dominion welcomes. Up to the present, efforts have been directed to obtaining emigrants from the agricultural population, and, to a degree, townsmen have been discouraged. In the opinion of many, either the avenues of supply must be widened or emigration from this country will be restricted.

Scotland and Ireland
Then the British government is awakening to the fact that the big drafts from the farming population form a greater menace than even the export of bullion. Powerful representations have been made by the Scotch landlords, who find it increasingly difficult to obtain skilled labor to till their acres, and the government is pledged to some system of reform. In many parts of the country agricultural wages have risen by fifty per cent, yet the departures are not less frequent.

In Ireland emigration is positively discouraged by the authorities. An official acting for one of the provincial governments recently told me that permission to distribute Canadian literature to the pupils in the Irish schools could not be obtained, and that government maps setting forth the advantages of "160 acres" were removed from the walls of the school buildings.

Several governments. Conscription requires the young men to give their best days to the army or navy. Germany has so controlled the movements of her people that emigration has practically ceased. In Norway, Sweden and Denmark, where the inhabitants are so suitable for Canada, active measures to encourage emigration are rigidly forbidden. Where then is Canada to obtain her population of fifty millions which some prophets aver will spread over the dominion in the next half a century.

Australia
Teeming millions and surplus population are out of date terms when applied to Great Britain. Australian competition is something to be taken into account. A Scottish booking agent the other day said that for every inquiry he received for Canada two came for Australia. The big considerations Australia offers to settlers supply the explanation.

It is said, however, that settlers are not fully satisfied with conditions in Australia, and we see much of Australians in London who are on the way to Canada, attracted by the wide-spread publicity given to the advantages of the rich prairie. I heard the other day that it is within the range of possibility that Canada may establish an emigration bureau in Australia itself, but it is charging the imagination to suppose that a country like Australia, which spends vast sums of money to encourage people to come to its unpopulated areas, will permit an active campaign among its people for the purpose of luring them to other dominions.

Finances
The treasurer has the honor to report, first as to the W. W. Turnbull fund for the fiscal year 1911. At the close of the fiscal year 1911, this fund amounted to $39,811.15. It has increased during the year to $100,496.15 by the addition of $59,584.94, a legacy from our late fellow member, G. S. Fisher, and payment of $25 by Mrs. Margaret Baxter -- a life membership fee. This fund is invested, as per statement, in stocks, bonds and mortgages, and a small portion is on deposit in the Bank of New Brunswick.

The current revenue account, which is the ordinary annual statement of receipts and expenditures, shows receipts inclusive of a balance of $1,765.19 from the preceding year, is as follows:

Women's Aid Committee

To the Board of Managers of the Home for Incurables:
Ladies and Gentlemen:
The women's aid committee closes the present year with a membership of twenty-nine on the visiting committee and nineteen regular or assisting members. During the past year two members have resigned--Mrs. George West Jones and Mrs. George F. Smith. Miss Miller whose name was accepted at the last annual meeting, has been added in place of Mrs. G. West Jones. The second vacancy is not yet filled. From the visiting committee we are sorry to record the loss by death of Mrs. R. J. Ritchie.

Since last December a better plan for the general arrangements in regard to the clergy and music for Sunday services, has been provided, which distributes the services more definitely than formerly among the different communions of the city, and Mrs. E. O. Zikin has been made convenor of that committee to assist the member in charge for the month. Most excellent services have thus been available, and your committee desire again to acknowledge the comfort and great benefit of these services to the home. As far as possible they are always well attended and thoroughly appreciated by the patients and staff, and frequently outside friends, and once again your committee feel deeply indebted and grateful for this assistance on the part of the city choir or musical friends of the city.

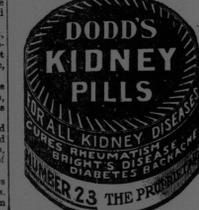

The entertainments that have been provided during the year on behalf of the home have been up to the usual standard as follows:

An afternoon tea, the 31st of August, 1911, held on the grounds, when the public were invited to be present and assist in the general entertainment--music, reading, etc.
A Thanksgiving tea and sale of home cooking, held in St. John's (Stone) church, Oct. 24 when a liberal contribution was reserved for the benefit of the home.
A Christmas treat, when four good-sized trees were gaily and generously trimmed and placed in public and private sections, giving the whole house an atmosphere of good cheer and plenty.
A house tea, given by the members in charge for the month, i. e., Mrs. Jas. P. Robertson and Mrs. H. A. Powell, on Feb. 28.

An Easter treat in March, consisting of individual potted plants for each patient, fruit, eggs, ice cream and cake, and one-half pound candy boxes with Easter decorations and Easter post cards.
A house tea again in June, with Miss Millett as convenor.

These house teas are an innovation, which promises to take the place of frequent public events of a similar kind. Being easy to manage, and more appropriate for the benefit of the patients and staff, they are simply an addition of a few delicacies to the usual supper of the home, when the members in charge for the month solicit a few of the committee at a time and plan to attend themselves, providing something of a short musical or literary programme as well. They can be given more often, with less care or management, and will be more of a direct treat to the home.
Respectfully submitted,
MAY E. McAVITY,
Sec. to Aid Committee.

DAN SMITH GIVES UP HIS POST AS UMPIRE

Keen regret is expressed by the Sydney Daily Post at the announcement of the retirement of Dan Smith, a former St. John man, who has many friends here, from the position of official umpire for the Cape Breton County Baseball League, after more than ten years of efficient and faithful service. He had many admirers among the fans for his capable work, his impartial judgments, and the clever manner in which he handled the indicator.

SEVENTY-ONE BROWNTAILS ARE CAUGHT

The seriousness of the invasion of New Brunswick by the brown tail moth is shown in the fact that seventy-one male specimens were captured by A. Gordon Leavitt in St. John streets yesterday. He caught them at the corner of Coburg and Garden streets and in Union street from Germain to Dock and last evening on the same ground captured forty-eight. In addition Mr. Leavitt saw hundreds flying or occupying places high up on electric light poles. Something was done early in the invasion to check this scourge but not enough and it is felt the government should take a grip with this insect pest at once.

Every Man Who Amounts to Anything Is a Man Who Respects Economy

For the man who Respects Economy, it's as clear as two and two make four that

- You can never get the most for your money if you buy clothing anywhere outside of Oak Hall.
- You can get more for your money at Oak Hall than you've been able to get at any time this season.

The reason for fact one is because you buy directly off the makers when you buy at Oak Hall, and you save the middleman's profit which you must pay when you buy elsewhere.

The reason for fact two is because we're now holding our Annual Mid-Summer Sale, and our less-than-others prices have been greatly reduced.
