Warm Weather Now
Monday morning's downpour of rain was followed by a spell of very warm weather, and the growth this week has been simply marvellous. The trees are now almost fully leaved out, and all spring crops are shooting ahead at a great clip. Hay crops are also doing splendidly.

Tenders Awarded
The Carrick Council has awarded the contract of reconstructing the Steeple bridge on the 8th concession. The London Structural Steel Co. will supply the superstructure for $3875, and the concrete substructure and the bridge flooring will be done by L. J. Looby of Dublin for $2277. The Department of Public Highways will be asked to sanction these contracts.

Walkerton Road Closed
The Mildmay-Walkerton section of the Provincial Highway was closed to traffic last Friday afternoon, and the steam shovel is at work this week excavating at the northerly end of this road at Walkerton. Pavement will be commenced in the course of a week or ten days. The Elera road is now used as a detour road, with Provincial Road Overseer Hossfeld in charge.

Transferred to Lethbridge
Sister Frances Teresa, who has been superintendent of St. Joseph's Hospital at Antigonish, N. S., for some years, has been transferred to a hospital at Lethbridge, Alberta, to take charge of a hospital department. Prior to her departure from Antigonish, Sister Frances Teresa was presented by the directors of the hospital with a travelling bag in appreciation of her services during the ten years she has been connected with the hospital.

Bridge Was On Boundary Line
One of the bridges washed away by the recent flood was what was known as the "Holland Bridge," opposite lot-34, Con. 12. Owing to the deviation of the County line road at this point, it has been difficult to determine the exact location of the boundary line between Carrick and Normanby, and the Carrick Council decided, before laying out five or six thousand dollars for the construction of a new bridge, to employ an engineer to run the line through this section. Mr. E. D. Bolton of Listowel came on the job on Tuesday, and discovered that the former bridge was located on the County boundary line. This bridge will now probably pass into the category of a county boundary bridge. In the past Carrick has spent a few thousand dollars building bridges on this location, a portion of the cost of which should have been borne by Normanby or the County of Grey.

Steeple Jack Slashed
John McCosh, steeplejack, chimney sweep and umbrella mender, who spent a portion of the past three or four summers here, was taken from Brussels to the Wingham hospital last Saturday, suffering with a terribly gashed face. His face was slashed from his ear to his chin, and from the chin to his mouth, laying open his jaw. Two Brussels doctors examined him and found a knife blade imbedded in his jaw. McCosh refused to divulge the identity of his assailant, saying he would "get him" when he recovers. The police believe the attack was made by a man named Allen, a pal of McCosh's, who has disappeared. McCosh will probably recover, but he will be badly disfigured.

Didn't Notice Barricade
A new culvert is being constructed at W. J. Taylor's corner, to take the place of the arch culvert that was washed away by the flood on April 6th. The road is well barricaded but that didn't prevent Edward Kutz, making his way through with his Chevrolet touring car last Saturday night. When the machine got safely past all the obstacles it took a header down over the culvert excavation into the creek. The driver was very reasonable about it when the township officials came along, and agreed to say nothing about the mishap if the municipal fathers did the same. The matter was thus amicably settled and those who saw the position of the car are amazed that the driver escaped with his life. He got off without a scratch.

Fraud Case Postponed
The action of Mrs. Schohn and her son Anthony, of Deserment, against "Bob" McKenna, of Harrison, came up before Judge Owens at Walkerton on Monday. The defendant, it is alleged, is making an effort to raise funds to make restitution to the plaintiffs, and an adjournment was mutually agreed to, in order to allow the defendant to carry out his plans towards re-imbursement of the Schohns.

Sunday School Lesson

June 9. Lesson X—The Story of the Rechabites—Jeremiah 35: 5-11. Golden Text—We will drink no wine.—Jeremiah 35: 6.

ANALYSIS.

I. THE TESTING OF THE RECHABITES.

THEIR EXAMPLE URGED AS A LESSON TO THE MEN OF JUDAH, vs. 15-19.

INTRODUCTION—It will be remembered that Jehoiakim was the second son of Josiah to come to the throne of Judah, succeeding his unfortunate brother, Jehoahaz (or Shalum), who had been taken captive to Egypt, ch. 22: 10-12; 2 Kings 23: 31-34. Of Jehoiakim nothing good is recorded. "He did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord." Jeremiah denounces his crimes in strong language in ch. 22: 13-19. He had paid a high price for his elevation to the throne by the Egyptian King Pharaoh-necho, which he exacted from the people by taxation, 2 Kings 23: 35; 2 Chron. 36: 5, 6. While very little is told us of his reign in the books of history we learn from frequent declarations of Jeremiah, whose prophetic ministry continued through its whole extent, that the old practices of idolatry which had been banished by Josiah were restored, with all their abominations, that Bani and Ashtoreth were worshipped even in the temple precincts, that infant sacrifices were offered to Moloch in the valley of Hinnom, and incense was burned on the house-tops to the star gods. The people, Jeremiah says, "are turned back to the iniquities of their forefathers." So widespread is this evil in the days of Jehoiakim that he says again, "For according to the number of thy cities were thy gods, O Judah; and according to the number of the streets of Jerusalem have ye set up altars . . . to burn incense to Baal," ch. 11: 12-13. There was need for plain words to be spoken against this monstrous evil, and here, in the Lesson of today, Jeremiah contrasts the fidelity of the Rechabites to their ancestral tradition with the apostasy of the men of Judah from the service of the God of their fathers.

II. THE TESTING OF THE RECHABITES.

The Rechabites were dwellers in tents like the wilderness Arabs. They seem to have been a branch of the Kenites (1 Chron. 2: 55) with whom Moses had lived centuries before in the land of Midian (see Judges 1: 16), and who had come to live with the people of Judah, Num. 10: 29-32. They were worshippers of Jehovah, and were evidently warmly and loyally attached to the religion and to the customs of their fathers. Ordinarily they lived a nomad life, not cultivating the land, but pasturing their flocks and herds in open, unoccupied parts of the country. At this time when a Chaldean army was invading the land, they had come into Jerusalem for safety, and had apparently been permitted to pitch their tents in some open space within the city walls, v. 11.

Jeremiah is commanded to give them wine to drink (v. 2). No doubt he is quite sure when he does this that the Rechabites will not break the law of their tribe. But he applies the test in order, by their example, to convince the men of Judah of their own infidelity. He brings them into the house of the Lord, "into one of the rooms erected round the temple courts," and sets before them bowls of wine. Their reply is what he had expected, "We will drink no wine," vs. 3-6.

Jonadab, the son of Rechab, is mentioned in 2 Kings 10: 15-28 as one of those who supported Jehu in his revolt against the kings of the house of Ahab, and who seems to have approved the bloody deeds with which Jehu sought, not only to destroy all the king's house, but also all the worshippers of Baal. He shared Jehu's "zeal for the Lord," which, according to the ideas and practices of that time, sought to overcome a false religion by deeds of bloody violence. See Hosea's condemnation of these deeds a hundred years later, Hosea 1: 4.

Jonadab's commands were no doubt in continuance of the ancient custom of his people. They required not only abstinence from wine, but also that the people should not build houses, nor cultivate the land. They regarded, perhaps, the confined life of the cities and towns and the hard labor of the fields as a departure from the simplicity, purity, and comparative health of the open air tent life of their ancestors. (See vs. 6-10.)

III. THEIR EXAMPLE URGED AS A LESSON TO THE MEN OF JUDAH, vs. 15-19.

The prophet compares this steadfast loyalty of the Rechabites with the infidelity of the men of Judah and Judah to the words of the Lord spoken to them by their prophets. The prophets of Israel and Judah had spoken both against the worship of false gods and against evildoing of every kind, vs. 14, 15. Compare Jeremiah's own denunciation of idolatry in chs. 2, 9 and 10, and of other forms of evildoing in chs. 7, 9, 22, etc.

It is because of this indifference and disobedience, the prophet declares, that God is about to bring upon Judah the great calamities which he has foretold, v. 17. And because of their obedience God will bestow such blessing upon the Rechabites that that tribe shall never want a man to stand before him. How this promise was fulfilled to them in their subsequent history we do not know. One hundred and fifty and more years later a member of this tribe, Malchiah, the son of Rechab, helped Nehemiah rebuild the walls of Jerusalem, Neh. 3: 14. The first historian of the Christian church, Hegesippus (quoted by Eusebius), writing in the second century A.D., mentions "priests and sons of Rechab" as living in New Testament times.

The true sons of Rechab, or Rechabites, however, are those in every age who are willing for conscience sake to stand apart from customs of their time, and to abstain from indulgences of any kind which they believe to be harmful, who preserve with high resolve and pure motive, clean and healthy traditions of a past of which they are not ashamed.

The Well-to-do Farmer

Quebec Soleil (Lib.). It is false to say that agriculture doesn't pay, when we compare it with other occupations and professions. We believe on the contrary that the cultivator has had a good year, when after having brought up and educated his children, he has something left at the end. Very few salaried people can say as much. We will not go so far as to say that farming really makes anybody rich, at least in the East of Canada; but we can state that, in normal times, it gives a man comfort and security. Thousands of our farmers who sometimes complain of their lot are much more comfortably situated, though they may not know it, than four-fifths of the rest of the world.

The Grain Surplus

Le Devoir (Ind.). During the War an abundance of wheat was blessed by everybody. In these days some people consider that it has its inconveniences, from the point of view of the price. Man is never content; either it rains too much or it doesn't rain enough; either the harvest is poor or it is too good, which does not prevent, in many countries,—as in Britain, in the mining districts,—thousands of people suffering from hunger, despite the huge crops of the last twelve months.

Farm Notes

Lily Pools

Lily pools range from a simple tub let into the ground, to cement and stone tanks. Small lakes and streams in and through the garden are usually outside the range of the amateur gardener. It is possible, however, in many gardens, to have a small pool, particularly where running-water is obtainable.

Of course, if there is a particularly moist spot in the garden, the location of such a pool is not difficult to select. But failing this, an artificial pool can easily be made at comparatively small cost. If there is a clayey subsoil, nothing further than the excavation of the pool and puddling the bottom and sides with clay need be done. If clay is not present, the bottom and sides must be cemented. In either case, it will be well to dig deeply enough to allow of 12 to 18 inches of good holding loam being distributed over its bed, and then leave room for a depth of 2½ feet of water in its centre, gradually decreasing its depth to 9 inches or less at the sides. A broad border should surround the pool for the culture of plants which love moisture but which are not truly aquatic. A few large, irregular stones partly embedded in this border will form an excellent rockery whereon moisture-loving Alpine plants may be grown if desired. Small tubs may be inserted in the pool containing lily roots, so that they may easily be removed for winter storage.

A few goldfish in the pool will add charm and prevent the pool from becoming a breeding ground for the mosquito. Of course, some provision must be made for the supplying of fresh water to the pool and also overflow pipes to carry off the surplus water. Miniature pools may be formed by sinking halves of large barrels in the ground, and if a few nails are driven in near their tops and lumps of coke, stones or clinkers covered with cement are attached here, pretty little decorative pools may be formed. (Rev. G. W. Tebb, before the Ontario Horticultural Association.)

The Illustration Stations

Answering a question about the operation of the illustration stations supervised by the Experimental Farms Branch, asked by a member of Parliament in the House of Commons, the Hon. Dr. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, explained that the Government does not operate the 186 illustration stations distributed over Canada, but the Department does give the operators some assistance. He said, "The illustration area of man's farm includes only that part of it fronting on a well-travelled road and varies in area from eight or ten to forty acres. The privilege of saying what crops shall be grown, what rotation shall be followed and how and when cultural operations shall be performed, the Department pays the owner or operator a small amount ($5 per acre) each year. The purpose of these stations is to demonstrate the varieties of the different crops, the cultural methods and the rotations that have been found to give the best results on an experimental farm or station where conditions are judged to be similar to those which maintain on the illustration station under consideration.

"The crops harvested of these illustration stations are, of course, the property of the man operating them."

The Storing of Eggs

This is the season of heavy egg production when stocks not required to meet the daily demands are going into cold storage to be brought out for use when production is low. The storing of eggs is greatly improved in recent years—so much so, indeed, that stored eggs are no longer looked upon with suspicion and doubt. Eggs that go into storage have to be submitted to the candling process, which determines definitely their quality. Only those that are in prime condition are ever put away in storage quarters. The modern cold storage for eggs is a highly sanitary place not only in its cleanliness but also by reason of the manner in which it is maintained. The temperature is held at all times close to the frost line and of such consistency with respect to moisture as to reduce evaporation to the smallest degree. Not only are the eggs graded when put in, but the regulations governing eggs, covered by the Live Stock and Live Stock Products Act,

Canadian Air Mail Plane Establishes World's Record

Canada, in proportion to her size, is making greater practical use of aircraft than any other country and the "work" records of Canadian airplanes are regarded as even more important contributions to the advancement of aviation than the endurance and other stunt achievements of other countries. Canada's latest and most impressive practical record in air is in speedy delivery of air mail and Capt. D. S. Bondurant, pilot for Canadian Airways, as a result of a record flight between Toronto and Montreal, now holds the world's air mail speed record.

Capt. Bondurant, flying a Fairchild "71," powered by a Pratt & Whitney Wasp engine, on March 21st, covered the 340 miles from Toronto to Montreal in just one hour and forty-four minutes, and this has now been established as the world's fastest air mail flight.

Remarkable as this time is, Capt. Bondurant would have bettered it, but for fog encountered a little over 100 miles from Montreal. Up to this point he had flown 215 miles in just 60 minutes, maintaining a speed of over 3½ miles a minute.

Throughout the record-breaking flight Capt. Bondurant reported perfect performance from his plane which was fueled with Imperial Aeroplane Spirits and lubricated with Marvelube Motor Oil.

administered by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, require that they should again be graded when they are brought from the storage chamber to go into commerce.

The usual egg cold storage in Canada is what is known as dry cold storage into which eggs are placed in their natural state. In Western Canada many of the eggs are put through an additional process before being placed in the storage quarters. The fresh eggs are immersed for an instant in hot oil which not only sterilizes but seals up the shell, preventing evaporation from within and contamination from without. After treatment in this way the eggs are put through a sandblast machine, which removes the excess oil and restores the bloom of a fresh egg. They are then cold stored in the usual way. With the marketing of only graded eggs, whether fresh from the farms or out of storage, the losses from bad eggs has been almost eliminated in egg merchandising.

A Disease of the Hyacinth

The hyacinth bulb is subject to a disease that, when once admitted, does much damage to the plantation. It is especially important in commercial fields for its exceedingly destructive effect upon the plants. Under favourable conditions it spreads from bulb to bulb until the whole plantation is destroyed. The disease known as Yellow Disease is described in a new pamphlet numbered 104 of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, written by Mr. F. L. Drayton, plant pathologist, who made a study of this and other diseases of bulbs in Holland a year or so ago.

The disease appears first as a yellowing of the tips of the leaves which afterwards dry up. It spreads to the bulb, which soon begins to decay at the base, destroying its usefulness either for planting in the garden or forcing in the house. Certain varieties are less subject than others to attack. Among the most resistant are said to be Gertrude, Grand Maitre, King of the Blues, King of the Yellows and Yellowhammer. The disease is recognized as a serious one in Holland, where Mr. Drayton observed the means that are used to secure control. Specially-trained men are employed by the growers to inspect the fields during the growing season. Bulbs showing disease are each covered with a pot without a hole in the bottom and the plants near by are sprayed with a fungicidal solution such as a five per cent. strength of formaldehyde. The bulbs under the pots are allowed to remain until the crop is harvested when the diseased ones are destroyed by burning. Other practices for control are described in the pamphlet which shows by illustration the appearance of a diseased bulb cut crosswise and lengthwise. (Issued by the Director of Publicity, Dom. Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa, Ont.)

Undesirable Immigrants

Winnipeg Liberté (Ind.): (Central European immigration in the West is creating an undesirable element in the urban centres.) We are faced with a definite task—to keep a watch on these dangerous groups and to transform them into desirable elements. Now that we have been subjected to this type of immigration, we must absorb it, and not let ourselves be absorbed by it; it is incumbent on us to communicate our sense of order to it, instead of allowing ourselves to be dragged along in their disorder; we must make them understand that when they changed their hemisphere they also changed their atmosphere. Too many colonists make the mistake, when they come to Canada, of trying to bring their countries with them, instead of accepting ours.

The Return of the Exiles

Le Monde Ouvrier (Ind.): Why all the weeping and wailing over the lot of our brothers who live under the sunshine of the Stars and Stripes, and who live better than any of us here do, in the land of our ancestors? . . . If we sometimes hear of the unfortunate conditions in which they live—and in some places they certainly know how to exploit them systematically—that is no reason why we should cry out on the house-tops that our people find life untenable with our neighbors, that they live in misery and would be happy and content to find themselves once again on their own land in the village where they were born. We admit that sometimes some of them do not succeed as they should, and that homesickness—which is their greatest foe—becomes a powerful factor in their desire to return home, but to conclude from this that Canadians would do much better to return home in a body, is far from the fact, especially when we compare the conditions which have prevailed for some years in this "prosperous" Canada of ours.

BOOK NEWS

by Arthur Kent

"White Narcissus" by Raymond Knister. (MacMillan's, Toronto, $2.) This is one of the most significant Canadian novels yet written. It contains many of the elements of greatness; in places it rises to poetic heights. But it is an unsatisfactory book.

In "White Narcissus" Knister found a vehicle that might at once have placed him in the ranks of the world's important writers and secured him recognition as such. Unfortunately, he will probably have to wait for this distinction.

The book is essentially tragic. Its figures are sombre and heavily drawn. The circumstances with which it deals are inevitably calamitous. Chapter by chapter the story goes forward towards but one logical conclusion. Knister pointed this out in every sentence he penned. Swiftly, as the story unfolds, the dramatic interest grows to the point of tension. The last chapter is a complete let-down of everything that precedes.

It is a hard thing to understand why Knister tacked onto his story a happy, conventional, mechanical conclusion. It is nearly inconceivable that the man who wrote as he writes and conceived the background and characters of "White Narcissus" could make such a mistake.

The book proves, however, that Knister is a writer of unusual calibre. It promises that he will write books that will live longer than their author. Anyone interested in the progress of Canadian letters, such as they are, should read "White Narcissus."

"Theronymus Fracastorius and His Poetical and Prose Works on Syphilis," by the Honourable William Renwick Riddell, LL.D., D.C.L., F.R.S., etc., President Canadian Social Hygiene Council. Published by the MacMillan's in Canada. Price, $3.00.

This, the most recent literary work of the distinguished and versatile Mr. Justice Riddell is appropriately dedicated to "Dr. Gordon Bates and the Staff of the Canadian Social Hygiene Council."

"I, as a somewhat diligent student of mediæval Philosophy, had read the poems of Fracastorius," the author stated in his preface, "and had admired his mastery of Latin and his skill in moulding the uncouth terminology of early medicine and philosophy into smoothly-flowing hexameters; but I had not seen any advantage in paying attention to the content rather than the form. Reading his poetry, I thought it well to read his prose as well, and, rather to my astonishment, I found a mine of entertainment in his prose works also. The shrewd guesses and practicality of Fracastorius must strike every reader; while no student of the history of medicine can afford to leave him unread."

"If You Know What I Mean," by Joseph Easton MacDougall. (MacMillan's, Toronto, $2.00.) MacDougall, as the editor of "Goblin," is no stranger to the Canadian public but the MacDougall who presents the verses in this volume is far more refreshing than we believed any Canadian writer to be. Books of verse, it is understood, are not usually profitable commercially, but this one deserves, and will probably have, a wide sale.

There is no pretense about either the book or writer. The work is described on the cover as "nonsense verse." It is that, of course, but more. Some of the rhymes are decidedly clever. All but one or two are witty and mirth-provoking. A number are exceptionally penetrating and contain comments of a pungent flavor on the lighter side of human endeavor.

Smiles

Will you smile and make others happy, or be crabbed and make everybody miserable? You can live among flowers and singing birds if you will. The amount of happiness which you can produce is incalculable, if you will only show a smiling face, and speak pleasant words.

MUTT AND JEFF—By Bud Fisher.

A One Way Brain On a One Way Street.

Is your daughter enjoying life?

IT is just in her "teen age" that a girl should be getting the most fun out of life!—Yet so often it happens that girls of sixteen-to-twenty have outgrown their strength—are quickly tired, pale, nervous, generally run-down and unhappy!

These are sure signs of anemia, a condition that results from thin, worn-out, under-nourished blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have corrected this in thousands of girls. Here is the actual experience of Mrs. Ben Nicholas of Erieau, Ont.

"My daughter was in a run-down state. She was easily tired and did not wish to associate with others. As this was unnatural, I began giving her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they soon made a strong healthy girl of her. Now she is as happy a girl as one would wish to see."

Start your daughter on this proven treatment now by buying Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at your druggist's or any dealer in medicine or by mail, 50 cents, postpaid, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Rhodes Memorial Opened at Oxford

Designed in Honor of the Founder of University Fund

Oxford, Eng.—The Rhodes House, designed as a memorial to Cecil John Rhodes, founder of the Rhodes scholarships, was opened recently by Sir Otto Beit, a trustee of the Rhodes fund, in the presence of 300 invited guests and Oxford University authorities.

At the same time Sir Otto formally presented the library to the university as a branch of Rhodelian Library.

Viscount Grey, chancellor of the university, accepted the gift in a brief speech.

To building is an imposing structure on South Parks Road, close to Keble College, the University Museum and the School of Forestry. It will not only furnish living quarters for F. A. Wyle, Oxford secretary to the Rhodes trust, but will also serve as a centre for the activities centring around the trust and the Rhodes scholarships, which celebrate their twenty-fifth anniversary this summer.

In the small dome in the roof are symbols representing the dominions which compose the British empire. Upon the walls will be carved the names of Rhodes scholars who have deserved well of their country, whether that country be a Dominion of the British empire, Germany or the United States. Rhodes, the Empire builder, desired above all that those who benefited by his scholarships should devote themselves to public service.

At the entrance of the building, the names and countries of all Rhodes scholars who lost their lives in the World War have been carved.

Science and Health

"The old cry used to be: 'The greatest happiness of the greatest number,' to-day the cry has been changed to the greatest health of the greatest number: take care of the health and the happiness will take care of itself," writes Professor D. Fraser Harris in the Clarion.

"The young people should not be brought up to believe that science does not concern itself with the practical details of our personal daily lives. She teaches us a great deal about ourselves, our food, our clothes, our sleep and so forth. The science of personal hygiene is intensely practical, it tells us, for instance, why we must use hot water and soap to wash our skins, why even hot water alone is not enough.

"A scientific training is one of the most powerful character-builders there is. For science is not antagonistic to the cultivation of artistic taste or to the highest conceptions of ethics. The notion that 'science' and 'materialism' are synonymous is quite out of date.

"Science teaches us reverence and humility—reverence for the beauty in the Universe and humility in presence of its mystery. For although we know so much about the Universe there is plenty of mystery in it—the mystery, for instance, of the origin and maintenance of life and the beauty of numberless living mechanisms so perfectly adapted for their purposes or functions.

"Science—reverent science—fosters a love of beauty. Keats said that the rainbow, had destroyed the colors of its mystery. For although we know so much about the Universe there is plenty of mystery in it—the mystery, for instance, of the origin and maintenance of life and the beauty of numberless living mechanisms so perfectly adapted for their purposes or functions.

Children and the Movies

Le Monde Ouvrier (Ind.): The law prohibiting children under sixteen to attend the movies, whether they are accompanied or not, is a ridiculous law, as it is broken thousands of times every day in the year, for want of being able to apply it. How are you going to expect a ticket-seller at the door of a picture-house, especially when there is a crowd, to notice whether a young girl is under sixteen or not? If he stops her he holds up the entrance of others and hurts his employer's business and even then—will the young lady have her birth certificate in her pocket? What is he to do? Let her in or stop her? Whatever he does, his livelihood—generally a very poor one at that—will be at stake. What would you do?

BABY'S OWN TABLETS WIN GREAT PRAISE

Many Mothers Always Keep Them in the House.

Thousands of mothers state that they know of no other medicine for little ones to equal Baby's Own Tablets—that they always keep the Tablets in the home as a preventive of childhood ailments, or if sickness does suddenly grip their little ones they feel safe with such a remedy at hand.

Concerning the use of the Tablets Mrs. Danot Plouffe, Tingwick, Que., writes:—"I have nothing but praise for Baby's Own Tablets. They are the only medicine I have ever given my two little ones, and I am glad to state that the Tablets have always kept them in perfect health. I feel so safe with the Tablets that I always keep a box in the house."

Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative. They regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and thus banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fever and make the cutting of teeth painless. The Tablets are absolutely safe, being guaranteed free from all injurious drugs. They are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Government Ships

La Patrie (Cons.): (Sir Henry Thornton, being asked what would happen if the Canadian Government Merchant Marine belonged to a private company, said: "I would immediately be put into liquidation.") Hon. H. H. Stevens has made the suggestion that some of the C. G. M. M. ships should be allotted the task of trying out the navigation conditions of Hudson Strait. If they succeed in bringing out some cargoes from Churchill, it will encourage other ships to go on this presumably dangerous route; if they perish, the destruction of the cargo will be a loss, but that of the ship will be really be a gain.

How ever, Mr. Dunning has no desire for such an experiment. He wants to give the Hudson Bay route a real chance of proving its utility. He is even entertaining the notion of having special ships built for the route, which makes us quail at the prospect of still more unprofitable expenditure, in keeping with this whole enterprise of the Hudson Bay route.

The Mexican Revolution

Ottawa Droit (Ind.): President Portes Gil, in a public address, has said that he does not believe that the Catholic Church, as an institution, is responsible for the recent military revolution. He denounced certain Catholics, who, according to his statement, have committed reprehensible actions in certain States. But he praised the conduct of other Catholics who kept apart from the revolution. This is a praiseworthy appreciation. Portes Gil admits that the Catholic Church did not provoke the present revolution. If some of its members took part in it, even for religious motives, that would be no reason to throw the responsibility on the official authority of the Catholic Church. The position of the official authority in the present conflict has been one of absolute neutrality.

Leaven

A noted geologist is quoted as saying that "had a man been living during the changes that produced the coal he would not have suspected their progress," so slow was the mighty process. HOW BABY SPECIALISTS TREAT CONSTIPATION

Constipation in babies and children is the cause of colic, bloating, skin disorders, etc. It weakens them, just as it does grown folks; makes them cross, feverish and fretful. But don't use grown folks' medicine with them, baby specialists advise. Ninety per cent. of them recommend just one preparation for constipation, colds and other ills of babies and children. They say Fletcher's Castoria. Millions of mothers have proved its merit during thirty years of use. Castoria is purely-vegetable, harmless and pleasant-tasting. Genuine Castoria always bears the Fletcher signature. Avoid imitations.

WHAT CHANCE AGAINST FIRE HAS A ROOF LIKE THIS?

Old roofs like this are rapidly becoming things of the past. Fireproof, permanent, Rib Roll roofs mean lower insurance rates, banish upkeep trouble and give your building an attractive, up-to-date appearance.

MODERN BUILDING—for permanence, low-upkeep and appearance—sounds the death-knell of wooden roofs. The dangers of fire to the building itself, to other buildings and to human life is rapidly being banished by metal roofs of high quality.

RE-ROOF WITH RIB ROLL

The appearance of this roofing alone has sold thousands. Whenever a roof of this material is laid in any district, it immediately secures a preference, and others who are roofing any kind of building, whether it be barn, house, garage, shed or warehouse insist on Rib Roll. It is made to famous "Council Standard" specifications.

EASY TO LAY ON NEW ROOFS OR OVER OLD ROOFS

The cost of laying Rib Roll is lower than that of nearly all other types of roofing. Any man who is handy with a hammer can put it on. Its handsome appearance adds many dollars to the value of your property. Send ridge and rafter measurements of roof or roofs in question, for free estimate of cost.

A "close-up" of Rib Roll, showing the side-lap. When nailed this joint is so tight that it is quite invisible from even a short distance away. Illustration shows the neat and attractive pattern which is stamped into the sheets on large presses of 40 tons capacity. Several of substitutes. There is only one Rib Roll.

Use Led-Hed Nails with Rib-Roll Roofing. The lead on the head seals the hole. No more threading. 22c per lb.

PEACE OF MIND HIS SUMMER IS COTTAGE PROTECTED

FOR two successive summers Charles M. Bremner of Toronto worried about his family in their Muskoka cottage. Mainly, he worried about fire. Suppose sparks or flying embers from some nearby fire lodged on the roof. Suppose, while he worked in the city, his summer cottage became a prey to flames!

The very idea made him shudder—not the thought of losing his cottage, but the danger to his family.

Finally Mr. Bremner did a very sensible thing. He reduced the fire hazard in his summer cottage by roofing it with Brantford Asphalt Slatess. He thus not only recovered his peace of mind, but immeasurably beautified his summer home as well.

Hundreds of owners of summer homes are this year following Mr. Bremner's example. They are roofing their cottages with Brantford Asphalt Slatess because Brantford Asphalt Slatess combine distinguished beauty and permanence with the utmost in fire and weather protection. Sparks and flaming brands from a nearby fire die out harmlessly on their slate-coated surface. They are vigilant guardians of your home the year around—the months you live in it and the months you are away.

Write for booklet "Beauty With Fire Protection"—an authoritative treatise on the type, style, design and colour for your roof.

THE GREATEST TIRE THE WORLD HAS EVER KNOWN

The Royal Master was built without regard for cost. It is the finest tire that can be built. Its massive tread is double thick, cured by a new slow process. Its carcass is made with extra plies of web fabric. Side-walls are guarded against scuffing.

The Royal Master is made oversize. Or rather, the right size for real tire economy. If you want tires that will last as long as you keep your car, then buy Royal Masters.

Real Fishing
An enthusiastic fisherman was telling some friends about a proposed fishing trip to a lake in Scotland.
"Are there any trout there?" asked one friend.
"Tons!"

"Does your wife play bridge for money?"
"No," mournfully replies the husband, "but her opponents do."

"The ham is alright sir," insisted the shopkeeper.
"No, sir, it isn't," protested the customer, "it's bad."

"How can that be?" said the shopkeeper, "when it was cured only last week?"
The young man thought deeply for the space of half a minute, and then suggested:
"Maybe it's had a relapse."

The flapper called at the hospital the day following the accident.
"I want to see the young man who was injured in the auto wreck last night," she asked.
"Are you the girl who was with him?" enquired the matron.
"Yes," was the reply "and I thought it was only right to come and give him the kiss he was trying for."

An amusing story is told concerning the veteran, John D. Rockefeller. It appears that the multi-millionaire creator of the Standard Oil Trust had his portrait painted for presentation to a certain public institution. It was a water-color.
"Of course," remarked one of his business rivals, when viewing the picture, "it had to be in a watercolor. They couldn't do Rockefeller in oil."

"What was the most difficult part of the civil service exam you took at the post office?"
"Writing with the post office pens."

KEPT MONEY. RETURNED WATCH
(Walkerton Times)
While Jake Holtzman was absent at work on the C.N.R. section the forepart of last week, his home near the Knechtel factory was entered by what is thought to be some lads who knew the premises, and $8 in change taken from a box on an upstairs dresser, together with his gold watch which was lying nearby. Entrance was gained, it seems, through the forcing of a lock on the door. On being informed of the theft, Chief Ferguson advised Jake to keep mum on the matter in the hopes that the culprits would get scared and bring the watch back, or take to spending the watch back, or take to spending the watch back, or take to spending they were leaving around. The officers hopes were partly realized, for from the latch of his garage door the other day he found the watch and chain hanging, which was the most valuable portion of the plunder. Although the authorities have their suspicions, yet the clue is not sufficiently definite to warrant the laying of a charge in the matter.

AN UNSAVORY MISTAKE
A Pollock, working on the highway paving scheme between Mildmay and Walkerton, and who probably knows more about concrete than he does about fur-bearing animals in these parts, undertook to fondle what he supposed was a nicely striped cat that crossed his path the other day, but which put up a protest in its own peculiar way that caused this man to wish that he had allowed it to pass by like the Levite on the other side. Seeing his predicament three of his friends assisted him in giving battle to it with rocks. Soon the place seemed a second edition of Skunk's Misery, and while the quadruped succumbed in the encounter, yet it sold its life dear, for the human quartette had all to bury their clothes and don other raiment after the conflict. While the skunk may seem attractive to the innocent, yet those who moles it generally find themselves repulsive to their friends and entirely objectionable to the Board of Health.

GRAVEL TRAIN DERAILED
 About 1 o'clock on Monday noon a work train, which commenced on Thursday last hauling gravel from the Durham and Owen Sound Division, was derailed about half a mile this side of Turner's Station while returning with a string of empty cars, and for a time held up traffic on this line. Spreading of the rails caused the engine and tender to leave the track and tear up the road bed for a considerable distance. Many of the long string of flat cars also left the tracks and some of them were toppled over and a few badly wrecked. Happening about a half hour before the arrival of the mail and passenger train from the south, this train was held up at Turner's until the arrival of the down train from Southampton when the mail and passengers were transferred to this train which backed up to this station and on to Southampton. Transferring the mail and passengers took considerable time as the two trains were held up about a mile apart. It was close onto 4 o'clock before the train backed into this station. A wrecking crew and outfit were despatched here from Palmerston and work of clearing and repairing the track was carried on all night. Passengers on the late train due to arrive here at 10.30, were owing to the hold up and having to be transferred to another train, delayed for close onto five hours, arriving here about four o'clock in the morning. The track was cleared and temporarily repaired in time to allow for the early morning train to get through to Palmerston.—Port Elgin Times.

THE FORD CAR FUEL SYSTEM

A—Filler Cap.
 B—Filter spout screen filters gas and prevents splashing through filler opening.
 C—Gas gauge.
 D—Fuel line main shut off valve.
 F—Carburetor Connection.

Simple—Safe—and Dependable

THE Ford car fuel system is simple because it is direct. Gravity flow does away with forced feed. A short feed line with a minimum of elbows and connections is easy to service and eliminates approximately 100 parts required by the vacuum tank or fuel pump system.

The nine gallon tank is so placed that it is well protected from front or rear end collision. Any overflow runs off on the ground with no serious results, since the only point of possible spark contact is the rear end of the exhaust. Three screens instead of one, as in most fuel systems, prevent foreign matter reaching the tank. A solid steel dash separates the Ford gas tank from the engine.

The gas gauge on the dash of the Ford car is controlled by a simple float as shown in diagram, being more direct, simple and accurate than any other type. Another point of driving convenience made possible by the gravity flow system is the ease with which the tank may be filled, while the driver supervises the operation without moving from behind the wheel.

Antony gave Bill a smile and was silent for a little, thinking.

"Is there another inn at Stanton—fairly close to the station?"

"The 'Plough and Horses'—just at the corner where the road goes up to the station—is that the one you mean?"

"That would be the one. I suppose you could do with a drink, couldn't you?"

"Rather!" said Bill, with a grin.

"Good. Then have one at the 'Plough and Horses.' Have two, if you like, and talk to the landlord, or landlady, or whoever serves you. I want to find out if anybody stayed there on Monday night."

"Robert?" said Bill eagerly.

"I didn't say Robert," said Antony, smiling. "I just want you to find out if they had a visitor who slept there on Monday night. A stranger. If so, then any particulars you can get of him, without letting the landlord know that you are interested."

"Leave it to me," broke in Bill. "I know just what you want."

"Don't assume that it was Robert—or anybody else. Let them describe the man to you. Don't influence them unconsciously by suggesting that he was short or tall, or anything of that sort. Just get them talking. If it's the landlord, you'd better stand him a drink or two."

"Right you are," said Bill confidently. "Where do I meet you again?"

"Probably at the 'George.' If you get there before me, you can order dinner for eight o'clock. Anyhow, we'll meet at eight, if not before."

"Good." He nodded to Antony and strode off back to Stanton again.

Antony stood watching him with a little smile at his enthusiasm. Then he looked round slowly, as if in search of something. Suddenly he saw what he wanted. Twenty yards farther on a lane wandered off to the left, and there was a gate a little way up on the right-hand side of it. Antony walked to the gate, filling his pipe as he went. Then he lit his pipe, sat on the gate, and took his head in his hands.

"Now then," he said to himself, "let's begin at the beginning."

It was nearly eight o'clock when William Beverley, the famous sleuth-hound, arrived, tired and dusty, at the "George," to find Antony, cool and clean, standing bare-headed at the door, waiting for him.

"Is dinner ready?" were Bill's first words.

"Yes."

"Then I'll just have a wash. Lord, I'm tired."

"I never ought to have asked you," said Antony penitently.

"That's all right. I shan't be a moment." Halfway up the stairs he turned round and asked, "Am I in your room?"

"Yes. Do you know the way?"

"Yes. Start carving, will you? And order lots of beer." He disappeared round the top of the staircase. Antony went slowly in.

When the first edge of his appetite so on. Doesn't help much, does it? But still a woman. Does that upset your theory?"

Antony shook his head.

"No, Bill, not at all," he said.

"You knew all the time? At least, you guessed?"

"Wait till tomorrow. I'll tell you everything tomorrow."

"Tomorrow!" said Bill in great disappointment.

"Well, I'll tell you one thing tonight, if you'll promise not to ask any more questions. But you probably know it already."

"What is it?"

"Only that Mark Ablett did not kill his brother."

"And Cayley did?"

"That's another question, Bill. However, the answer is that Cayley didn't, either."

"Then who on earth—"

"Have some more beer," said Antony with a smile. And Bill had to be content with that.

They were early to bed that evening, for both of them were tired. Bill slept loudly and defiantly, but Antony lay awake, wondering. What was happening at the Red House now? Perhaps he would hear in the morning; perhaps he would get a letter. He went over the whole story again from the beginning—was there any possibility of a mistake? What would the police do? Would they ever find out? Ought he to have told them? Well, let them find out; it was their job. Surely he couldn't have made a mistake this time. No good wondering now; he would know definitely in the morning.

In the morning there was a letter for him.

CHAPTER XX.

"My dear Mr. Gillingham,

"I gather from your letter that you have made certain discoveries which you may feel it your duty to communicate to the police, and that in this case my arrest on a charge of murder would inevitably follow. Why, in these circumstances you should give me such ample warning of your intentions I do not understand, unless it is that you are not wholly out of sympathy with me.

"But whether or not you sympathize, at any rate you will want to know—and I want you to know—the exact manner in which Ablett met his death and the reasons which made that death necessary. If the police have to be told anything, I would rather that they too knew the whole story. They, and even you, may call it murder, but by that time I shall be out of the way. Let them call it what they like.

"I must begin by taking you back to a summer day fifteen years ago, when I was a boy of thirteen and Mark a young man of twenty-five. His whole life was make-believe, and just now he was pretending to be a philanthropist.

"He sat in our little drawing-room, flicking his gloves against the back of his left hand, and my mother, good soul, thought what a noble young gentleman he was, and Philip and I, hastily washed and crammed into collars, stood in front of him, nudging each other and kicking the backs of our heels and cursing him in our hearts for having interrupted our game."

"He had decided to adopt one of us, kind Cousin Mark. Heaven knows why he chose me. Philip was eleven; two years longer to wait. Perhaps that was why.

"Well, Mark educated me. I went to a public school and to Cambridge, and I became his secretary. Well, much more than his secretary as your friend Beverley perhaps has told you. Mark could never live alone. There must always be somebody to listen to him. I think in his heart he hoped I should be his Boswell. He told me one day that he had made me his literary executor—poor devil. And he used to write me the absurdest long letters when I was away from him, letters which I read once and then tore up. The futility of the man!

"It was three years ago that Philip got in trouble. He had been hurried through a cheap grammar school and into a London office, and discovered there that there was not much fun to be got in this world on two pounds a week. I had a frantic letter from him one day, saying that he must have a hundred at once, or he would be ruined, and I went to Mark for the money.

"Only to borrow it, you understand; he gave me a good salary and I could have paid it back in three months. But he saw nothing for himself in it, I suppose; no applause, no admiration. Philip's gratitude would be to me, not to him.

"I begged, I threatened, we argued; and while we were arguing, Philip was arrested. It killed my mother—he was always her favorite—but Mark as usual got his satisfaction out of it. He preened himself on his judgment of character in having chosen me and not Philip twelve years before!

"Later on I apologized to Mark for the reckless things I had said to him, and he played the part of a magnanimous gentleman with his accustomed skill, but, though outwardly we were as before to each other, from that day forward, though his vanity would never let him see it, I was his bitterest enemy.

"If that had been all, I wonder if I should have killed him? To live on terms of intimate friendship with a man whom you hate is dangerous work for your friend. Because of his belief in me as his admiring and grateful protegee and his belief in himself as my benefactor, he was now utterly in my power. I could take my time and choose my opportunity. Perhaps I should not have killed him, but I had sworn to have my revenge—and there he was, poor vain fool, at my mercy. I was in a hurry.

"Two years later I had to reconsider my position, for my revenge was being taken out of my hands. Mark began to drink. Could I have stopped him? I don't think so, but to my immense surprise I found myself trying to. Instinct, perhaps, getting the better of reason; or did I reason it out and tell myself that, if he drank himself to death, I should lose my revenge? Upon my word, I cannot tell you, but for whatever motive, I did genuinely want to stop it. Drinking is such a beastly thing, anyhow.

Trade With Russia

Washington Post: The experience of the British should silence those who are working for Soviet recognition by the United States. Stalin's Government is sparing no effort to entice the United States into an arrangement through which American capital would be poured into the coffers of the Soviet in the hopes of expanding trade. Loans and credit, besides diplomatic recognition of an insecure Communist Government, which is a deadly enemy of the so-called capitalist nation, is the offer that has been held out to England and America. Propaganda as to the advantages of trade with the Soviet is a poor brand of trickery through which the Reds hope to finance their communistic schemes. The Russian people have nothing with which to buy. They have been ruined by the fool theories of one dictator after another. Any amount of capital would not assure the reconstruction of the country as long as the Reds are in control.

China Unlocks Remote Ports By Road System

Motorbuses Penetrate to Backward Regions as Long-Distance Routes Open

Peking—Chinese officials are considering proposals for reconstruction of the war-torn country, but the money for them is not forthcoming. One project, however, has made headway during the past year, and that is the construction of automobile highways in several provinces, which open up hitherto isolated districts to the outside world.

Some highways have been built under the direction of the China Inland Famine Relief Association, with its American engineers, but perhaps more significance may be attached to those which have been built by the Chinese, with no foreign advice or assistance.

The Chinese Bureau of Economic Information reports that five great highways have been opened to motor traffic during the past few months, and that 13 other highways have been partially completed, and will be finished during the summer. Chinese engineers have also drawn plans for 11 others, and when these have been completed, China will have a finer highway system than in the most prosperous days of empire.

Chinese officials have been impressed by the fact that the highways already completed have paid for themselves within a short time. In a country where labor is so cheap the cost of construction is not great, and highway building is especially useful in times when so many men and women are out of work. As a rule, the provincial governments which build the highways have shared in the purchase of motorbuses which use them, and the profits from these enterprises have been quick and substantial. The Chinese farmers have taken readily to the new vehicles, and automobile buses now run into districts which had never seen such conveyances a year or two ago.

Some of the greatest progress has been made in Shansi, which has been known as the "model province" under the beneficent rule of Marshal Yen Hsi-shan. Some 3,000 miles were completed before the civil war stopped the work. Since then an additional 1,000 miles has been completed, and another 2,000 miles is contemplated during the summer.

Port of Agadis, Long Closed, Is Now Semi-Open

Coastwise Traffic Imports Admitted to Moroccan City—Exports Barred

London.—Agadir, that long-closed port south of the Atlas Mountains, in Morocco, which figured so prominently in the European diplomatic disputes which preceded the Great War, is now semi-open according to a report of the British Vice-Consul at Mogador. A considerable import trade has sprung up in certain overseas imports into Morocco, between Casablanca and Agadir, particularly in tea and sugar, and consequently the port of Agadir has been kept open for coastwise traffic (imports).—This is not likely now to be altered as, in the middle of this summer, the consul believes that Agadir will be thrown open to deep sea imports and exports on the lines of the other Moroccan ports.

At present, the Government does not permit Agadir to export at all direct but—as for the past 12 years—the inhabitants of Sous have to take their produce across the Atlas Mountains to the port of Mogador. The leading Mogador merchants, whose trade must be heavily hit once Agadir is fully open, have already secured sites and in many cases put up buildings at Agadir. The latest development is the opening by some of the Mogador merchants of a sub-depot at Sidi Mokhtar, about 60 miles east of Mogador on the road to Marrakech, in order to intercept there cereals from Sous destined for Marrakech.

Great building activity generally is now going on at Agadir, and land values at the port, which is naturally sheltered and the only sea outlet for a coastline several hundred miles long, have risen very rapidly. With the completion of three motoring roads which the Franco-Moroccan Government is now driving over the Southern

Atlas into Sous, two of which are actually open, that country must play a prominent part in Moroccan agricultural and commercial development. Its chief products are cereals, almonds, gum, wool, goatskins, olives and argan oil. The last is peculiar to this region but has not hitherto been used outside Morocco. Owing to shortage of supply of this of late, however, Morocco has been importing considerable quantities of Soya oil, the price of which is cheaper than olive oil. The Sous is very rich in copper and, according to the reports of the Mannesmann brothers, rich also in other materials, but no official reports are yet available on this point nor is it yet open to prospecting. The latter, however, will no doubt be allowed as soon as Agadir is thrown fully open.

HOME-BAKED BREAD IS BEST OF ALL

Atlas into Sous, two of which are actually open, that country must play a prominent part in Moroccan agricultural and commercial development. Its chief products are cereals, almonds, gum, wool, goatskins, olives and argan oil. The last is peculiar to this region but has not hitherto been used outside Morocco. Owing to shortage of supply of this of late, however, Morocco has been importing considerable quantities of Soya oil, the price of which is cheaper than olive oil. The Sous is very rich in copper and, according to the reports of the Mannesmann brothers, rich also in other materials, but no official reports are yet available on this point nor is it yet open to prospecting. The latter, however, will no doubt be allowed as soon as Agadir is thrown fully open.

Why go to Peru?

When crude oil is so plentifully available here in North America, why does Imperial Oil Limited go 4,000 miles to Peru for the crude from which Marvelube is made? It is because Peruvian crude has lubrication properties which make it particularly desirable as a base for a superior motor oil.

That is why Marvelube is giving aircraft operators longer periods between engine overhauls and a greater margin of safety.

Marvelube meets the needs of the modern high-speed motor, in the air or on the road, because its carbon-free and heat-resisting superiorities are created by Nature herself.

Let Marvelube give you the benefits of better lubrication. There is a grade of Marvelube refined to meet exactly the specifications of your car, truck or tractor. See the Marvelube Chart at Imperial Oil dealers and service stations.

Canada to Open Two More Trade Offices in West

Bureaus in San Francisco and Chicago Will Supplement New York Headquarters

Decision Made in Ottawa

May Install Branch in South as Business Develops

Ottawa, Ont.—Expansion of the Canadian Commercial Intelligence Service in the United States by establishing trade commissioners' offices in Chicago and San Francisco is announced by the Department of Trade and Commerce. Hitherto there has been only one establishment, namely, in New York, under the commission-ship of F. Hudd.

R. S. O'Connor, who was formerly located in Havana, arrived in Ottawa last week, will have charge of the Chicago office, while H. R. Poussette, formerly director of the Commercial Intelligence Service here and recently Trade Commissioner at Calcutta, has been appointed to the San Francisco office.

The Chicago office will cover the Mississippi Valley, all the territory between the Alleghenies on the East and the Rocky Mountain states on the West. This area in the latest period for which statistics are available took more than twelve per cent. of the total imports of the United States and sent out more than 25 per cent. of the total exports.

The territory of the San Francisco office would cover the entire West Coast, east of the Rockies, and include the Mountain states. The territory of the New York office covers the entire Eastern seaboard, including Pennsylvania.

There is a possibility, as trade develops, that another office will be opened in New Orleans, in which case the lower Mississippi Valley states would form the territory allotted.

Account of Daring Adventure Found

Historical Research Worker Makes Find in British Museum

Paris.—From the serene pages of a crumbling yellow book in the British Museum, Stella Cleaver-Cox, well-known historical and archaeological research worker, believes she has reconstructed the daring adventure of Prince Madoc, of England, and his band of Welshmen who, as early as 1170, journeyed across the sea to a land believed to be near the Gulf of Mexico.

According to the version she found, Prince Madoc, son of Owen, Prince of Wales, and brother of Prince David, set forth on his explorations to seek quiet retreat from the tumults of his time. Having a large fortune, he gathered adventurous spirits about him and sailed for new lands about which he had vaguely heard. After a long sail he reached a new country which he so vividly described as to leave small doubt that it is the Gulf of Mexico region.

Then Prince Madoc, eager to inform his royal relatives of rich discovery, returned to England, leaving 12 men behind him to settle and colonize the land. He set out again for the new world with ten ships filled with eager colonists, but the fate of this voyage is not known.

Miss Cleaver-Cox said the manner of writing and the longitudinal and latitudinal figures quoted give the volume a certain authenticity. She made her findings known when a report from the States reached here that evidence had been found that French fishermen hunted whales off Newfoundland as early as 1592.

Britain the Best Market

La Presse (Ind.): (Hon. J. A. Carson showed considerable foresight when, as Minister of Agriculture, he warned the cream producers of the counties adjacent to New England and New York that "a time may come when the United States will close their market, and with your plants closed up your industry will be ruined.") With the new tariff raised to 23 cents a gallon, our cream exporters must look for other markets, if not to the regenerations of their old butter and cheese factories. As we have an unlimited market in Great Britain for these products, it seems that the very moment has arrived to direct all our activities in this direction. Similarly the new American tariff is a severe blow to our exporters of meat and cattle on the hoof. The British Isles offer us a permanent market in this connection, and under the circumstances we should be well advised to take every step to profit by this advantageous market to the greatest possible extent.

Restocking the Lakes and Rivers of Canada

Important Work of Fish Cultural Service, Department of Marine and Fisheries

Canada's sea and inland fisheries are among the most extensive and valuable in the world. The natural reproduction of sea fisheries is not, up to the present, showing the need for artificial assistance, probably because the spawning grounds and sea pastures of the oceans are so extensive that the annual reproduction keeps pace with the toll taken by the commercial fishermen. Natural reproduction has not, however, been found sufficient to maintain the fishing in our lakes and rivers on account of intensive operations, and to counteract this situation the Department of Marine and Fisheries, through its Fish Cultural Service, operates a number of fish hatcheries located at strategic points across Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific. From these establishments annual distributions of fish eggs, fry, and fingerlings are made with a view to assisting nature in maintaining the productiveness of the inland waters.

During the fiscal year, 1927, the Dominion Fish Cultural Service operated 24 main fish hatcheries, 7 subsidiary hatcheries, and four salmon retaining ponds. These were maintained in all the provinces in which the Dominion Government administers the fisheries, namely, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, and British Columbia. Ontario and Quebec administer their fisheries and operate their own fish cultural services. The 1927 distribution from the Federal hatcheries reached a total of 295,283,782 fry, advanced fry, and fingerlings. This distribution included the more valuable food and game fishes, such as Atlantic salmon, rainbow trout, cut-throat trout, steelhead salmon, Kamloops trout, Loch Leven trout, brown trout, sockeye salmon, spring salmon, speckled trout, whitefish, salmon trout, and pickerel. The largest distributions were of whitefish, sockeye salmon, Atlantic salmon, and pickerel, in the order named.

In addition to the distributions that were made from the hatcheries, thirty-five lakes and streams received allotments of fry and older fish from other bodies of water. This work was largely confined to the Prairie Provinces, where many districts are not readily accessible to existing hatcheries, and involved the capture and transfer, in many instances for considerable distances, of 35,961 fish, comprising six different species.

The propagation of the commercial food fishes has always been given first attention by the Fish Cultural Service but in recent years the demands for the stocking and restocking of lakes and streams with game fish has been steadily growing so that now the hatching of trout and other game fish forms an important part of the work. At the St. John, New Brunswick, hatchery, where progress is being made in the development of a brood stock of trout, nearly two and three-quarter million trout eggs were produced in 1927. The growing value of a well-stocked angling stream may be gauged by a comparison of the rentals which were obtained in 1922 and 1927 for the angling privileges on certain portions of the Restigouche river and its tributaries. The angling in seventeen stretches of the river which was disposed of by auction at Fredericton, New Brunswick, in 1922 brought annual rentals amounting to $16,815. In 1927 the angling in the same waters brought the record figure of $75,500 per year for the following five years.—"Natural Resources."

Southern Cross Pilot Testifies

Capt. Kingsford-Smith Says Food Missing From Locker

Sydney, New South Wales.—Capt. Kingsford-Smith of trans-Pacific fame, appeared recently before the committee investigating the circumstances of the recent mishap to the Southern Cross and told the story of the plane's flight from Richmond air-drome and of the forced landing near the Glenelg River in North Western Australia.

RATIONS MISSING

He said that he and his companions had found, after the descent, that the emergency rations, which had been given them in America and which they kept in one of the machine's lockers, were missing. He could not explain how or why they had been removed from the plane. Had these rations not been tampered with there would have been enough food to last the four men a month.

In connection with the failure of the aviators to attempt to walk to the Port George Mission Station, which was only about 20 miles distant, Capt. Kingsford-Smith declared they did not have the slightest idea of the direction in which it lay.

"What do you think of the gas stove, Bridget?" "Sure, mum, it's a great invention. When you and the master was away for over Sunday, mum, I burned it all the time, and there seems to be plenty of gas still left!"

Prince Opens Exhibition At Newcastle

Northeast England Reaches Industrial Turning-Point, Says Heir Apparent

SAVES WORKMAN

Newcastle-on-Tyne, Eng.—A "challenge of the northeast coast to the world!" The Prince of Wales in these words described an exhibition covering 100 acres on Newcastle town moor comparable to the show held your years ago at Wembley which he had just opened amidst scenes of remarkable enthusiasm, 40,000 people having assembled at the Stadium to hear him speak.

The exhibition, which has been two years in preparation, comprises sample products representing the industries of northeast England, including especially shipbuilding, iron and steel production, engineering output, machinery manufacture and coal mining, supplemented by corresponding contributions from all parts of Great Britain and the Commonwealth's nations overseas.

It is to advertise British products and, taking place as it has done at the moment when trade has begun to improve after a number of years of deep post-war depression, it is regarded as the turning point in the industrial history of the undaunted north.

"To-day," said the Prince, "there are certain indications to show that the industries of this district which have had a good deal of punishment during the last few rounds are not yet out of the ring but are fighting back gallantly with a good northern punch."

After giving statistics supporting this statement, the Prince said the exhibition was an "announcement to the whole world that the great shop of this industrial district is still open, is determined to carry on and is prepared to meet all orders with the highest traditions of a not unworthy past."

The exhibition, the Prince continued, was to "revitalize the existing industries, to discover how they should be adapted and if necessary improved," not only as a general source of national income but "to provide fresh channels for labor in an area that has had more than its fair share of hard times."

The Prince of Wales was the central figure in an exciting episode when he dramatically rescued a man from being drawn into some machinery, shortly after the official opening.

In describing the rescue of the man, who was named Guinness, the foreman of the exhibition, an eye witness, said that the thing happened in a flash. Guinness was sitting on a ladder adjusting a machine for the manufacture of tin containers, which the Prince was examining. He was pointing out one of the intricacies in the process when one of the tins caught in the carriage. Guinness, in snatching at the tin to save breakage, slipped off the ladder and hung with his feet within a few inches of the machinery, which was rotating at great speed.

"The Prince grabbed at Guinness' overalls and pulled him towards the ladder," said informant. "The overalls slipped from the Prince's hand and Guinness, who was still clinging to an overhead gear, swung back to his dangerous position. The Prince then seized him the second time and succeeded in pulling him back clear of the machinery. He would have lost his leg had he dropped."

The Conservative Record

Edinburgh Weekly Scotsman (Cons.): The sneers of the opponent are the best evidence that Mr. Baldwin has taken the line least to their liking. People have short memories and it is well that they should be reminded of all the really big advances the present Government has made towards international security, the restoration of industry and agriculture, the establishment of a better spirit in industry, the removal of local burdens and the consolidation of local governments, and education, the extension of pensions, the promotion of housing and slum clearing, the development of the resources of the Empire and last, but not least, the extension of the franchise to all adult women.

Canadian Week in Glasgow

Glasgow Herald (Cons.): It is to the housewives especially, of course, that this Canada Week applies, as theirs is the job of choosing and buying the things which their husbands swallow without a thought as to whether they are eating Empire goods or not. Nor do many housewives give much thought to this point of view either. What they look for is something good that is not too dear. And in Canadian goods they find that Canada can produce everything, almost everything that is needed for the home except tea, coffee and spices.

King George's Warm Welcome Back to Windsor

King and Queen Loudly Acclaimed on Motor Journey to Their Home

Windsor, Eng.—King George came back to his own Windsor in this ancient home of British sovereigns.

All Windsor and the surrounding countryside were out to welcome their monarch back. Windsor was decorated as seldom before. Not a single house or shop on Castle Hill, or in the main street of the city, was without gay decorations.

The King, accompanied by Queen Mary, had had a remarkable reception throughout their 2 1/2 hour trip from Craigwell House, Bognor, where the King has spent several months. But it remained for Windsor to outdo all the others as it welcomed again its most prominent resident.

Thousands of cheering spectators, including 2,000 school children and 1,000 Eton boys lined the ancient thoroughfare. As the royal car drove through, bags of rose petals were emptied from windows and fell in a crimson cascade about the machine.

It was the first time most of the inhabitants of Windsor had seen the King since late last year. All along the line there were cries of: "God bless your majesties!" and "Welcome home!"

At the bottom of Castle Hill which rises steeply up toward the ancient gray stone pile were waiting the Mayor and aldermen. The royal car halted and the door near which the King was sitting swung open. The smiling face of the ruler appeared and he grasped the hand of the Mayor as he said:

"Thank you very much. We are very pleased to be back in Windsor and I am very glad to see so many citizens here."

The King shook hands with the rest of the delegation and the car then swung up the hill toward home.

Germany Buries Deadly War Gas

Left Over Supply Placed in Vaults Under Ground

FINAL SOLUTION

Only Means of Destruction—Several Proposals Failed

Berlin—In a coffin of concrete, ten feet beneath the surface of the earth, the little city of Wahn will lay its great post-war ghost—the skin blistering blue cross gas that forced soldiers to lift their masks in the face of death.

During the war, blue cross gas cut across No Man's Land, paving the way for the lung-destroying yellow cross gas. Perhaps the greatest plant for its manufacture was constructed at Wahn, about 20 miles from Cologne.

In accordance with the Versailles Treaty the plant was scrapped, but the great supply of gas defied disposition. For ten years the community struggled with the problem, and every means practical, theoretical and bizarre was given trial.

At first they tried to burn the gas but the farmers declared their crops were being ruined. Neutralizing processes failed to produce results. A suggestion that the stub be buried at sea was rejected when it was considered that it might be dangerous to transport the gas up the Rhine. Moreover, fishermen objected strenuously.

Compromise Solution

Meanwhile, as a compromise solution, the gas had been stored in about three feet of soil under the factory, but the soil was sandy, and it was believed it would infect the subsoil water. When the factory was dismantled, it was feared the gas might rise through the soil to pollute the air above it, a fear intensified by the Hamburg gas leak disaster. So the authorities cast about for a final solution.

The new plan called for two vast hermetically-sealed, underground vaults, one of which is still under construction. A crew of men, in gas masks, rubber suits and thickly padded gloves and shoes, was engaged to remove the blue cross gas to what it is hoped will be its last resting place. Officials similarly garbed and the city physician were on hand to help out in case of emergency.

The completed vault was built by digging a pit 20 feet below the surface of the ground. The walls are of six inch concrete, scraped and tamped to seal cracks. The floor is bedded with a one foot layer of water-imperious clay, and the sides are two feet deep in the same substance. When the vault was filled, a roof of tar, concrete and clay was placed over it, and on top of this about ten feet of earth.

Canada's Railways Make Big Gain In 6 Years' Earnings

Sir Henry Thornton Ascribes Increase to Better Business in Dominion

Port Huron, Mich.—Increase of $55,500,000 in the net earnings of the Canadian National Railways during the past six years was announced by Sir Henry Thornton, president and chairman of the board of directors, during a banquet in his honor here attended by citizens and railwaymen of Sarnia, Ont., St. Clair and Port Huron, Mich. Sir Henry ascribed the present prosperity of the railways to general improvement of business conditions in Canada; the support given the road by both political parties without political patronage or interference, and to the "splendid response from officers and men of the road."

He also announced plans for the creation of a 2,000,000 bushel elevator in Port Huron, which will receive grain from lake vessels in the fall and unload for rail transportation during the winter. Construction on this elevator, which is backed by large Canadian interests, will start this summer. In connection with this project, the Continental Ice Company is about to build a plant to cost $300,000 in this city to provide for cold storage and refrigeration, it was announced.

Courts of Divorce

Quebec Evening (Ind.): Every body knows that a court of justice will take at least a whole day and often several days to investigate a single petition for divorce. If the committee of the Senate were to show an equal desire to render a considered judgment on every request for divorce submitted to them, they would have to devote an entire year to this duty, whereas they are seen to dispose in a few weeks of several hundreds of petitions. The procedure actually practised is in no way satisfactory. As soon as the principle of divorce is admitted by our law, the practice should be regulated in a rational manner, and we believe that the controversy which has been raised in the House of Commons will have as its effect the introduction of a useful reform.

Nothing goes stale as quickly as a man's mind when he stops using it.
