Miscellaneous.

THE LAND BILL.

LONDON, August 17.

The following are the main heads of the Land Bill, as it has finally passed both Houses of Parliament:—

SALE OF TENANCIES.

1. Tenant may sell his tenancy for the best price he can get. Conditions:—

1. Sale to one person only.

2. Notice to landlord.

3. Landlord may purchase on receiving notice.

4. Tenant may state consideration.

5. Court may declare the sale void.

6. Landlord may object to purchase.

7. Court may reimburse landlord for debt out of purchase money.

8. Where improvements made by landlord, purchase money apportioned by Court.

9. Landlord may give notice that he has claims on the estate.

10. Where purchase money paid in Court, Court must determine all applications.

11. Tenant who has sold his tenancy shall not be entitled to compensation for disturbance or improvement.

12. Tenant if holding subject to Ulster tenant right system, may sell in pursuance of that custom or in pursuance of this section; but not both.

REVOLUTION OF TENANCY.

II.—When a person receives a tenancy as a bequest, he must be accepted by the landlord as though he were a purchaser.

INCREASE OF RENT.

III.—When landlord demands increase of rent, then

1 Tenancy shall be deemed, if tenant subject to statutory conditions for fifteen years.

2 If tenant does not accept, tenancy shall be sold and tenant shall receive amount by which Court decides the selling of tenancy to have been depreciated below amount which would have been selling value if rent were fair rent.

3 If tenant does not accept he is entitled to compensation for disturbance.

4 Tenant in place of accepting or declining such increase may apply to Court to have the rent fixed.

5 When landlord cannot agree with tenant on the subject he may also have access to Court.

The last clause was an amendment of the Lords. Mr Gladstone's assent to it provoked the hostility of the Irish party.

INCIDENTS OF TENANCY.

IV—Tenant shall not be compelled to pay increase of rent unless he violates what are in this act referred to as statutory conditions, viz:—

1 Punctual payment of rent.

2 No waste.

3 No sub-division or sub-letting.

4 No act whereby tenancy becomes vested in assignee in bankruptcy.

5 Not refusing landlord right of entry for purpose of mining, cutting, hunting or fishing.

6 Not opening a house for the sale of intoxicating liquors.

COMPENSATION

V and VI—Repealing portion of the Land Bill and Tenant (Ireland) Act of 1870.

INTERVENTION OF COURT

VII—1 Court may determine fair rent

2 Rent thus fixed, called judicial rent, payable first rent day after decision.

3 When rent thus fixed, tenancy to be held under statutory conditions for fifteen years.

4 Court may disallow any application under this section when improvements have been made and maintained by landlord.

5 When application is made, landlord and tenant may agree to fix a specified value for tenancy. Then if tenant wants to sell landlord has right to purchase at that value.

6 Statutory terms not renewed till preceding statutory term has expired.

7 No application for judicial rent may be made till the last twelve month of the current statutory term.

8 No rent payable in respect of improvements made by tenant.

9 Court may take action when it considers the conduct of landlord or of tenant to be unreasonable.

MISCELLANEOUS REGULATION

XII—1 Time of sale limited to one month after receipt of notice to quit.

2 Court may enlarge time.

3 Court may suspend proceedings taken against tenant, unless for breach of statutory conditions.

4 If notice to quit is served for breach of statutory condition tenant may apply to Court, and if Court think adequate satisfaction is made by payment of damages to landlord, it may so order.

DETERMINATION OF TENANCY

XVIII—Tenancy deemed to have determined when landlord has resumed possession by purchase, or default, or by operation of law.

EXISTING LEASES.

XIX—Existing leases to continue as though this Act had not passed. Provided that at their expiration they become subject to its provisions; and if, since the Act of 1870, the Court considers the acceptance of any lease to be unreasonable it may annul it.

PURCHASE OF ESTATES

XXIII—1 Estates may be purchased by the Land Commission to resell to "a competent number of tenants."

2 Sale by Commission to tenant may be in consideration of a fine and of a fee farm rent.

3 Land Commission may advance to tenant sum not exceeding seventy five per cent. of the price.

4 Commission may indemnify, and such indemnity will be a charge on the Consolidated Fund.

To this must be added the Lord's amendment, accepted by Mr Gladstone that any applicant to the Commission who may consider himself aggrieved may appeal to the Court of Appeals in Ireland, with the limitation that the leave of the Court must be asked.

SCREAMS IN THE COURT ROOM.

The Scene at the Sentencing of Eva Jacobs, the Pretty Sneak Thief.

Miss Eva Jacobs, the pretty Jewess whose system of sneak thieving in Brooklyn baffled the police for a long time, because she practiced it in the guise of a fashionable young lady, appeared at the bar of the King's Country Court of Sessions to plead guilty to an indictment for grand larceny. Her rich wearing apparel, having been taken from her in jail by its owner, was replaced by a black silk dress and a plumed white hat borrowed for the occasion from Miss Frankie Anderson, who was Miss Jacobs's love friend in better days. The prisoner's last hour of her liberty. She had her dark of hair fastened down to her forehead in waves. Miss Anderson who stood by her, seemed more distressed than the prisoner.

When Assistant District Attorney Oakley moved for sentence, ex-Assistant District Attorney Jere. Werburg said that he wished to make an appeal for the mercy of the Court for Miss Jacobs. She was, he said, 18 years old, and had two sisters, one 15 years old and the other 12. Until a year ago she was a hardworking girl. She gave up her employment to go home and care for her consumptive father, who in April, 1880, was left a widower. He was obliged to go to the hospital, and the girls were left to struggle for themselves. Eva tried in vain to get back to her own employment and for a time she lived as a domestic in a family. On July 3, 1880, she went with some of her shop-girl acquaintances to a picnic. While upon the dancing platform she was handed some wine. It intoxicated her, and she lost all consciousness until the next morning, when she found herself in a room in this city. Thence forward she led a reckless life, but committed no crime. One day she had occasion to make a call, and as the lady of the house was absent, Miss Jacobs yielded to the temptation to take some trinkets. Being undetected she became bold, and followed the career which ended in her arrest. She was now penniless and penitent.

Judge Moore said that, in consideration of her youth, the good character she had once borne, and of the fact that many of the goods she had stolen had been returned to their owners, it had been decided to accept her plea of guilty to an attempt at grand larceny. There must, however, be punishment for this, and while he had strong objections to sending any young girl to the penitentiary, he could not avoid the duty imposed upon him. He therefore sentenced her to the penitentiary for two and a half years. Miss Jacobs seemed stunned. She looked around her with a wild steer for a moment, and then uttered a piercing scream which echoed throughout the building. She tottered and would have fallen but a court officer caught her in his arms. She uttered shriek after shriek, and sobbed convulsively. She was led into Judge Moore's private room where she dropped into a chair and sobbed and moaned. When she regained her composure she was removed in a prison van to the penitentiary, where she was last evening put in a cage grab worn by the female convicts. She will be put to work at once in the shoe shop. —New York paper.

Another Conspiracy Baffled.

"Stalokoff Skupehrosky," said the Czar to the Captain of the guard, "have the guards been doubled at the palace gate?" "Yes, my liege," responded S.S., "and the man with the telescope sweeps the horizon, so that not even a solitary horseman can approach thy imperial dwelling." "And the lightning rod man?" "He sleeps beneath the Neva, so please your Majesty. The man for subscriptions to the life of Sergeant Bates? He speedeth to Siberia on a special train." "And the ladder and tree protector men?" "ask of the vipers in the palace dungeons." "The man who continues at his late day to say 'What, never?'" "Thy imperial headman wears his watch chain." "Is well." telegraph to Europe that another conspiracy has been baffled. keep the gumdrop and corn-ball boys, who spread sedition on the railroad trains, under thy vigilant eye, and may St. Isaac of Kownow bless thee." And the Czar, putting on his cast-iron night-shirt, retired to his princely couch. —Boston Transcript.

A Nugget of Gold.

In the early days of the Dunolly gold fields, writes the author of "A Glance at Australia in 1880," two working miners named Oates and Deeson, after experiencing many vicissitudes of fortune found themselves in the argot of their class, 'dead broke.' Their credit was exhausted at the neighbouring store, and one of them was actually in want of bread. In sheer despair, they began digging for gold in a very unpromising locality. It seemed a very hopeless task, but the two men worked on steadily, standing close to one another. Deeson plied his pick in some hard bricklike clay round the roots of an old tree, breaking up fresh earth and tearing away the turf from the surface of the ground. He aimed a blow at the clear space between two branches of the roots, and the pick, instead of sinking into the ground, rebounded, as if it had struck upon quartz of granite. "Confound it," he exclaimed, 'I've nearly broken my pick. I wish I had broken it, if it had only been over some nugget.' A minute afterwards he called out to Oates and told him to come and see what 'this' was. It was a mass of gold cropping several inches out of the ground. Like a boulder on a hill. As each successive portion of the nugget was disclosed to view, the men were lost in amazement at its enormous size. It was over a foot in length, and nearly the same in breadth. The weight was so great that it was difficult for the two men to move it. However, by dint of great exertion, they succeeded in carrying it down the hill to Deeson's cottage, where they commenced to inspect their wonderful treasure. It was completely covered with black earth, and so tarnished in color that an inexperienced person might have supposed it to be merely a mass of auriferous earth and stone. But its weight at once dispelled all doubt on that point, for it was more than twice as heavy as a piece of iron of the same size. Great was the rejoicing among Deeson's family. The wife piled up a huge fire, and Deeson placed the nugget on top, while the rest of the family stood around watching the operation of reducing the mass to the semblance of gold. All throughout the Friday night Deeson sat up before the fire, burning the quartz, which adhered to the nugget; and picking off all the dirt and debris. This was so rich that, on being washed in the puddling machine, it yielded ten pounds weight of gold. Meanwhile Oates had procured a dray to convey the nugget to town; and on the Saturday morning the two men set off for Dunolly. They carried their treasure to the London Chartered Bank, where it was weighed and found to turn the scale at two thousand and two hundred and sixty-eight ounces, or nearly two hundred weight; and the sum of ten thousand pounds was placed to their credit in that institution.

Hurricane at Savannah.

SAVANNAH, AUG. 30.
The hurricane reported as moving up the coast last week, struck Savannah and vicinity on Saturday evening. The wind has been blowing steady since Thursday night. On Saturday it attained 48 miles an hour, and the signal station was unroofed and instruments smashed. The last recorded 60 miles an hour, and it is thought it reached 75 to 80. The rain fell in torrents, houses were unroofed, stores and warehouses flooded, streets were littered with debris and prostrated trees; shipping in the river tore loose and was thrown on the banks after innumerable collisions. All down the river to Tybee vessels are ashore.
At Tybee great destruction was wrought. Most of the cottages were blown down or injured. The house of Henry Solomon was blown down and burnt Mrs. Wolf and daughter, Mrs. Folk, her little girl and young brother were burned to death. The wharf and tramway were destroyed, and sojourners on the island were in terrible peril all night. The family of Addison Stokes, opposite the city, perished in the river, but Mr. Stokes was rescued.
There was great damage and loss of life among the negroes on the rice islands. No estimate can be formed of the damage in the city. A number of accidents occurred; some fatal.
The steamer Desong, which left here on Thursday for New York, returned disabled.
A number of wrecks are reported along the coast. The revenue cutter Boutwell is in the marsh back of Fort Pulaski, and a number of other vessels are ashore in the vicinity of Tybee.

Mr. Dillon and the Land Bill.

Mr. John Dillon, M.P., was entertained at a banquet last evening in the Rotunda Theatre, Dublin, by the members of the Central Land League. Mr. Sexton, M.P. president. Dr. Dillon, responding to the toast of his health, referred to his action in regard to the land bill before his imprisonment, and said the passing of the bill would probably render impossible to carry on the Land League movement on the lines. He believed if the fight had been continued unconditionally for another six months they would have been in a position to dictate their own terms and abolish landlordism altogether. The majority on the executive of the Land League who are now at liberty seemed to be in favour of trying the Land Bill. Holding the opinions he did, it would be impossible for him to be a party to any such policy, and under the circumstances he would retire from public life for a few months, and leave those who believe in this policy to carry it out.

The Press Association is informed that there is no truth in the statement that Mr. John Givan, M.P., has accepted the post of Assistant to the Commissioners under the Land act.

About 50 men of the Emergency Association arrived at Longmask on Saturday night to cut Captain Boycott's crops. They were escorted by police. Another Orange expedition consisting of 20 men has left Dublin for the South and West.

Notices have been posted near Balla threatening death to anyone saving hay on a vacant farm belonging to Lord Clamorris.

Mr. Thomas Brennan, late Secretary of the Land League has received formal notice from the Irish Executive that he is "remanded" for a further period of three months to the custody of the governor of the Kilmainham goal.

A Land League meeting, held at Hilltown, County Down, yesterday passed a resolution to carry on the agitation with unaltered vigor.

A Land League demonstration was held in the Town-hall, Newcastle, last evening, Mr. Justin McCarty presiding, and Mr. Joseph Cowen, M.P., moved a resolution denouncing the continued incarceration of the Irish political prisoners. He condemned the Land Bill and said it would fail in its object.

During the week, the work of construction on the railway has been much impeded by the weather which, on Monday and Tuesday last, was so very wet and disagreeable as to put an effectual stop to proceedings all along the line. On Wednesday, however, work was resumed with renewed vigor, additional hauds were placed upon the line, and very considerable progress was made upon the west end of the work.

About the close of last week, the Blackmarsh road was crossed and the line opened just below and to the southward of Branscombe's ridge upon elevated ground. From this point the work was driven along toward the Topsail road, west of Steadywater in which neighborhood the line crosses the Topsail road, nearly the half-way station and about six miles from town. On Thursday this point was pretty nearly reached, the line following along the north side of the road upon the levels located last year under the survey of Messrs Kinnip & Morris. The Topsail road will be crossed before the close of the week, and the line be continued along the southerly side of the road towards Topsail, which it will not now take many days to reach with the increased force that has been placed on the line. Whilst the work is thus been carried to the westward operations were resumed on Thursday at the eastern extremity, King's Bridge Road having been crossed in the vicinity of the residence of Mr H. Reid, from which point, on the other side, the cutting is carried towards Quidi Vidi, at the lowest level of which the line is deflected to the southward, and will thence be carried to the east end of Water street where the terminus will be located at the Water Side. The levels of this part of the work were all taken last week and a very satisfactory route has been located by the engineer.

As the work thus progresses finishing gangs are detached along the line so as to complete the grading of the road and prepare it for reception of the rails which are expected to arrive in a few days, together with the necessary sleepers for this section of the line. It is fully anticipated that by the close of the month the rails will have been laid at least as far as Manuel's Bridge, and the work much expedited by the convenience thus afforded of getting the necessary materials and appliances over the road.

Mr. Blackman, general agent of the Syndicate, and principal manager, arrived here on Wednesday morning by the steamer Hibernian and at once proceeded to inspect the line and location; with which he appears to be perfectly satisfied. He will leave almost immediately for New York for the purpose of making final arrangements for putting on a large additional force of men. Mr. Blackman's views and anticipations in regard to the road and its results as an economic factor are of the most sanguine character. He is a thorough business man; clear headed and thoroughly alive to the importance of the work, and his views in relation to it are of the most comprehensive nature and full of value as regards the development of such economic resources as the line may develop in the course of construction. We think we may safely say that if his conclusions are even approximately arrived at, a new era, calculated to astonish the weak nerves of the New Party, has at length dawned upon us.

It is expected that contracts will be entered into almost immediately for the supply of several hundreds of thousands of sleepers for the use of the line; and as, with the exception of the few thousand now expected for immediate use on this end of the line, all these, it is expected, will be procured here, some of our people at least will have opportunities for putting in a good winter's work this season at profitable rates. It is to be hoped that these contracts will be so arranged as that they may be made available for employment of the people in the several districts, from Cape Ray to Cape John.—North Star

We copy the following account of the arrival and reception in his new Government, of His Excellency J. H. Glover, from the Antigua Observer of the 8th August:

The news of the week is the arrival of our new Governor, His Excellency Sir John Glover, K.C.M.G., who, with his Private Secretary, Captain Morgan, of the Royal Marines, landed from the S S Alhambra, from New York, about midnight on Friday. On arrival of the steamer, shortly after 11 o'clock, p. m., the Reception Committee, in a special boat, at once went off to greet his Excellency, and to ascertain his pleasure as to the time of landing, which was done at his desire at once; the Acting Colonial Secretary the Attorney General and other officials who also paid their respects on board to the Governor, accompanying him on shore, where he was received on the wharf by a guard of honor of the Police force, under the command of Inspector Thompson. Entering the carriage in waiting his Excellency, escorted by the Yeomanry Cavalry, at once proceeded to Government House where all due preparations had been made for his comfort, and some little time after the party sat down to supper.

On Saturday at one o'clock his Excellency, escorted by the Cavalry, repaired to the Court House when his Commission being read he took the usual oaths, the Artillery saluting. Both on his way to the Court House, and while returning, his Excellency was enthusiastically cheered by the crowds of people who lined the streets, and apart from the distinguished position which he holds, there was that in the personal bearing and aspect of his Excellency which seemed to command homage, and which impressed the multitude with the belief that our new Chief will prove the right man in the right place. Elsewhere we give a sketch of the antecedents of his Excellency, by which it will be seen that his career has been a highly honorable one, and that he has won his way to distinction by the force of meritorious services and achievements.

A private letter received a day or two ago by a gentleman here from his correspondent in Barbadoes, states that Yellow Fever is making alarming progress in Bridgetown, and that the Doctors admit their utter inability to check it. During the past fortnight several persons of note in Barbadoes have succumbed to the disease, amongst them the wife of the officer in command of the troops, a lady who is said to have been highly esteemed by all classes in the community.—Antigua Paper.

The schooner Victor, Captain John E. Sigsworth, arrived at Cape Ann recently from a Western Bank trip, and reported a sad accident on the Banks, resulting in the horrible death of one of the crew, George M. Sigsworth, a brother of the skipper. He and a companion named David Baye mond had been out to set their trawls and while returning to the vessel, a tub in the after part of the dory interfering with their rowing, they hauled in their oars to change its position. Just then a heavy sea struck and capsized the dory, throwing its occupants into the water. Sigsworth kept afloat by means of an oar held under his breast, and the air filling his oil jacket, and his companion succeeded in getting upon the bottom of the dory and holding on by the stern hook. Sigsworth made his way towards the dory, and had just reached out his hand to take that of Raymond, when he was extended to aid him, when a huge shark made its appearance, and seizing the unfortunate man, disappeared with its prey, who was not seen again, he was a young man of good character, about 27 years of age, unmarried and a native of Prince Edward Island, and followed fishing from Gloucester for several years.

If the Government could not govern Ireland without coercion they were unfit to rule it. Several Irish members spoke.

Deodtia, professor at Geneva, was one day asked what he thought of the preaching of Dumoulin; to which he answered, sneeringly 'Clear waters are never deep.' Shortly afterwards Deodtia himself delivered a sermon, and Dumoulin was asked his opinion. Dumoulin, who had heard the remark of the critic, parodied the expression, and answered, 'Deep waters are never clear.'

We (Advocate of Tuesday) last night received intelligence that a poor woman, whose name we were unable to ascertain, was recently poisoned in the vicinity of a village near Trepassy. It appears that whilst on her way to market to purchase some hogs, feeling hungry she sat down by the side of a stagnant well, and having soaked a biscuit, eat thereof. Becoming weak, she was immediately removed to some neighboring house where she expired in about an hour. The fatal result which ensued, is supposed to have been caused by poison which had been used by some parties in trapping foxes, and from which by some means or other the well became poisoned.

A large number of iron wheel-barrrows imported for the use of the railway laborer, left town yesterday, via Black Marsh, for distribution along the line. In connection with this undertaking, the construction of a pier, or jetty has been determined upon, for the landing of several cargoes of steel rails and other railway material, expected within the next fortnight or three weeks. The site selected for the erection of this pier, is to the eastward of the dock of John Woods, Esq., and its construction which must be completed within a fortnight, will give employment to a considerable number of men. Mr Blackman, who arrived here per last Allan steamer from England, left again per Carina on Friday night last for New York. Mr Blackman's departure, we understand, has been caused by business in connection with the railway, which, however, will necessitate but a brief absence from the colony.—Advocate.

LITERARY MEMORIES.

The happy, happy summer time,
How far off now it seems!
Those rambles on the seavirt shore,
Appear but brief, bright dreams.

Are they but dreams, those memories?
Can dreams thus change the life,
Once tranquil as the Summer sea,
Now wintry stormy strife?

'Twas then and now; can only weeks
In such long shadows fall?
Weeks!—And the fingers of one's hand
Suffice to count them all!

But he, the sharer of that dream,
What has it been to him?
A dream indeed—the memory
Already very dim.

He little thought, he little thinks
What that time was to me;
To him they were but idle hours,
Passed rather pleasantly.

To me! Oh where can words be found
Sufficient to express
The rapture of that blissful time,
Is more than happiness?

He'd smile—Yes men can always smile
At love so quickly won—
And say, as easy to replace,
If this now prized were gone.

With some it might. But oh, not so
Oh never so to me!
This shrine, its idol once destroy'd,
Is doom'd to vacancy.

Here, in my desk, some treasures lie,
Mementoes of those hours;
Some pebbles bright, a pearlly shell,
A bunch of faded flowers.

Flowers; ah, he called me a flower
How pleased was I that day!
Alas! a flower's fate was mine—
Thrown heedlessly away!

Not so shall these my treasures be,
But kept with sacred care;
More valued they, more dearly prized
Than holy reliques are.

How is it that I love him thus,
While he indifferent prove?
Ah; men live in a busy world,
A woman's world's her love.

M. T. C.

Surely Not.

Continued.

Mrs St Leger never received company at her own house, as she said she could not afford it. She went out of course for the sake of the girls, and her grand ambition was to marry them off well. "Their few thousands," as she would remark confidentially to her friends, "will be sufficient to keep them from being a drag on their husbands if they marry, or dependent on their friends if they don't." In reality these few thousands represented about twelve hundred pounds each.

Augusta was her second daughter, and as she was the prettiest and cleverest, she hoped to make her "go off" brilliantly. Mrs St Leger's disappointment was therefore grievous when, towards the close of her first season, Augusta after declining some very suitable offers, showed a strong inclination to look with favorable eyes on Mr Egerton's proposal.

Now Augusta had, as Mrs St Leger thought, very heretical notions; and these were particularly strong on the subject of matrimony. She was an instance, not so very uncommon as some people fancy, of a nature not spoiled by a thorough skillful worldly training. In addition to this she was possessed of a certain amount of firmness or obstinacy, which made Mrs St Leger rather shy in trying to thwart her. She had experienced considerable difficulty in the case of Mr Egerton, and she was obliged to acknowledge to herself that she had not been quite so successful as she could have wished. Augusta had barely decided in her own mind what she ought to do; but she did not make her mother a confidant of her uncertainty.

Mr Egerton had made his first appearance in their circle that season. He had had good introductions and he speedily made his way. It was reported that he had good expectations from an uncle in the country, who had brought him up. Very little was known about him, with the exception that at his uncle was a man of very good family but eccentric habits. But in reality he was the son of a younger brother of his uncle, Mr Egerton of Bush Knoll, who married imprudently early in life. Both father and mother died young; and their only child Gilbert, was left to the sole care of his uncle. He had acted altogether the part of a kind guardian; and rightly judging that his heir [for he intended to leave him his property] should enter society, he sent him to London, first of all having procured for him good introductions. He made one great mistake however, and that was in allowing him only five hundred a-year. This might not have mattered so much had not it been for a friend of Egerton's, one with whom he was formerly very intimate, but of whom he knew but very little now.

Charles Fanshawe and Gilbert Egerton had been at school together, and while there, one of those friendships had sprung up which are just as warm as they are short-lived. Their paths diverged widely after leaving school. Charles Fanshawe, who was two years Egerton's senior, entered general society in London almost immediately on quitting school. Egerton went to Oxford; and until they renewed their acquaintance in London, they had not seen or heard anything of each other for five or six years. Every one knows how great a change may come over a man's character and habits, more particular if he be young, in half-a-dozen years. Such was the case in this instance. While Egerton was improved, Fanshawe's nature was all but debased. Unhappy in the choice of his associates, he had been led on until he contracted their vices; and young as he was, his name had already been mixed up with some transactions by no means creditable to him or any one else. Of this, Egerton of course knew nothing, and he had no friend to caution him. Although he saw things he could not but disapprove of, he had as yet seen nothing that would warrant his breaking off an acquaintance that still retained some of the charm it possessed in the old school days.

The season was not very far advanced before Gilbert found that his allowance must be increased, or that it would be necessary for him to leave London earlier than he had intended. It may be asked how he had reconciled with his sense of honour to a young girl, when he knew that his circumstances far from being affluent now, were still more uncertain for the future. Before writing to Augusta, he had unintentionally let words fall which would have required some kind of explanation, even if he had not avowed the feelings that prompted them; and in his letter he had candidly stated his position and prospects, earnestly entreating her not to decide in haste, but to wait a month before replying, if she preferred delay. This letter Augusta never showed her mother, otherwise Mrs St. Leger would have had additional cause for arguing against the match.

Mrs St Leger and her daughter remained silent for a few moments, and Augusta had just risen to leave the room, when Mrs Arthur Riggleton was announced. The last-mentioned lady was no favorite of Augusta's, but quite Mrs St Leger's bosom friend, the confidante of all her little annoyances and troubles, the person to whom she breathed (in strict confidence, of course), all the plans she was in the habit of forming, using her as a kind of safety valve.
