HAW KINS' LAST HOPE.

The Both well Election Case before the Supreme Court.
OT'AWA, Feb. 12.—Political interest to day was divided between the Bothwell election appeal and the Pacific railway debates in the house. At noon a special sassion of the supreme court was opened, the judges except Justice Taschereau being present, to hear the appeal in the Bothwell case. Hector Cameron, Q.C., and Mr. Beck (Toronto) appeared for the appellant, and Z. Lash, Q.C., for the respondent. Hawkins was in court; Mills was absent. The court sat till 4 o'clock. Ballot after ballot was handed to the chief justice and the other judges, and all but four down to Exhibit "S" were confirmed as they had been by Judge Galt. Jugement on these four was reserved. There was a lengthy argument on ten ballots cast in a subdivision of Sombra, the numbers and initials on which had been erased with rubber. Mr. Cameron argued that these ten ballots should be thrown out and the election voided, not in the interest of any particular candidate division. This point was being argued when the court rose till to-morrow. The decision of the court is awaited with deep

The river has fallen steadily. The num ber of destitute is materially reduced, but there are several thousand still dependant on the relief committee, principally women, children and old men. Since the flood receded a peculiar phenomenon is noticed at Powhatan. Sand and water are thrown to a considerable height there by three regular geysers.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 12.—The Cincinnati Northern is the only road now able to take trains from the depot. It carries passengers for Cincinnati, Washington and Baltimore, and from the Panhandle to Loveland. Trains on the Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati and Indianapolis road are obliged to stop at Chester Park, seven niles cut. Ohio and Mississippi boats can no longer land and will use a ferry to con-rey passengers to and from the boats.

The situation to-day is more gloomy than ever. The river rose almost constantly from half an inch to an inch per hour. Great danger exists from weakened foundations. The two-story business house of C. A. Marsh & Co., fell from this cause to-day. day. In some cases it has been found necessary to rescue families from their homes. The masons have issued a strong appeal for assistance. At 10 this evening the river was 68 feet 1½ inches. It is rising half an inch an hour, and raining hard. LAWRENCEBURG, Iud., Feb. 12.—The situation grows worse. The mayor has asked help from abroad. London, Feb. 12.-In making a motion omplices in this dishonor.

Earl Granville said the policy of the govnent would not be directed according to the articles in foreign journals. England and India had no interest in the Soudan, nor indeed had Egypt any permanent in-terest in that country. Since the defeat of Baker Pasha it had been altogether impos-sible to relieve Sinkat. The government had no intention of annexing Egypt. It would remain there simply long enough to secure a stable government.

Dr. Kennedy, however, refused and the inquest was brought to a close. The jury brought in a verdict that the child was a victim of a wilful murder by some party or parties unknown.

Some members of the jury criticised the city detectives for their lethargy. They had not attempted to work up the case, although a woman's petticoat, a shawl and a blanket, and the fact that the child had lived two days, furnished material from which to make a chain of evidence.

Hear the Other Side

Andi alteram partem. The scientific side of the educational controversy has been so strong-voiced and masterful of late that we have special need to listen to what the literary side has to say for itself. The champions of science are the radicals in this controversy, they are flushed with many and important successes in recent years, and some of them would almost resent it as an impertinence that anybody or anything should stand in the way of their making a clean sweep. Mr. Matthew Arnold, who may be called England's literary man par excellence, has constituted himself the conservative champion in the arena, and his views have been for some time before the reading public. We do not require to accept them on all points in order to arrive at the present practical conclusion—that if they fall short of embracing the whole truth they do at least form an important part of it—the complement of the arguments on the scientific side. It is necessary that we should hear mentary talk at Ottawa or Toronto is com-narrow a sense. It must be held to include, not merely the ancient and modern classics, or belles lettres, but also the humanitiesthe history of human character and conis right enough, too, in believing that the joys and the sorrows, the victories and the defeats of men and women like ourselves will ever continue to be of more real inter est to the mass of mankind than any truths bake no bread; but she can give us God, Freedom, Immortality." This is what literature in the broadest sense does for us when it includes history, poetry, oratory, religion, politics, human conduct and the sense or instinct of beauty in both art and nature. Before we can dismiss all these and put in their place an exact knowledge of ascertained facts in mechanics, chemistry and other natural sciences, human nature will have to be changed. It is not in average human nature, and never will be, semer steel is made by adding hæmatite or spiegeleisen to commoner iron ores—as in the stories of Greek and Roman heroism, the poetry of Wordsworth, Burns, Byron and Tennyson, or even in the fictitious tales of Oliver Twist and Edwin Drood. He who knows literature but not science is much nearer being a complete man than he who knows science but not literature. Socrates and the writer of the book of Job knew nothing of chemistry and electricity; but who would think of putting upon a level with them, as men of mind and soul, say two clever youths of our own time who could stand a searching examination in these sciences? But if the of feasts."—Dryden. mind and soul do not make the man, what does? In this very practical age there need be no fear that science will not get its due meed of attention. The danger is, rather, that we may drift towards a hard material ism, which cares little about the morals of human conduct or beauty in either nature or art. So much the more necessary is it, therefore, that we should consider well what Mr. Arnold and those who think with him have to say on the other side. Even though Mr. Arnold's doctrine be not all gospel, we shall be the better for having heard, or read, and inwardly digested his views on the relative places of literature and science in education.

The Hudson's Bay Steamers.

Supposing that the Hudson's bay railway is completed and a line of steamships running between Liverpool and a port on Hudson's bay. Four months is the time of navigation, what will the owners of the steamships do with them during the other eight months of the year? If they are specially constructed for northern navigation will they be suitable for competition with other steamers?

ENQUIRER. The Hudson's Bay Steamers.

We do not know that we can answer the country. question exactly. But Enquirer should remember that our lake and river boats tion that the through line, as a commercial live and make money with five months of inland navigation. Perhaps the ocean sidies and this new one thrown in, will steamers in question could live on four months of traffic, provided no other employment could be found for them. But there is no reason that when the bay ports were closed they could not run to Halifax, New York or other winter perts. But more than this these boats are expected to effect such a saving in distance and in rail-trade very profitable, and be able to make money on a short season, say of only four ceive for the same quantity of grain, while rities will be checked by the higher interest for money. It is therefore believed in New York that shipments of gold to Europe must shortly begin.

Not long ago some English periodical, whether newspaper or magazine we cannot now say, bracketted together Matthew Arnold and Goldwin Smith as the greatest two living masters of our language. They stood side by side or. a Toronto platform yesterday.

It is said that in Chicago there are about 5,000 children who have homes only in the streets, where they are being educated to be criminals. An eminent minister of a christian church in Canada once resided with his family in Chicago, but from the general depravity which he found prevailing in the masses of society, and the moral neglect in the training of the young, he was impelled by a sense of duty to leave it for a better atmosphere in which to educate his children.

In many municipalities, perhaps in this, there is power given to the council to pro-hibit wheeled vehicles when the sleighing is good. Here there may be seen every day two-wheeled carts cutting ruts in the snow, and they bear on them the inscription "health department." What is that Boss swell, the mayor, about, that he permits such an anomaly?

The strongest card yet played for the Canadian Pacific railway is the interminable length of the discussion respecting the government proposition. The people are sick of the subject. They know it's going to be done, no matter what is said by the opposition, and would give another five illions to have it done quickly. Parliaing to be thought a method of puffing more Mr. Arnold rightly enough cautions us expensive to the public than serviceable to against taking the word "literature" in too the speakers. And possibly newspaper readers are equally sick of editorials on the subject.

The Real Nature of the Crisis.

To the Editor of The World. SIR: Kindly allow me again a few words on this all-important matter in reply to your editorial remarks of yesterday. You seem disposed to admit that the scheme for building the Canadian Pacific railway is not one that can be defended on business principles, and therefore I need not dwell upon that aspect of the case. But if this be so, surely the inference is obvious—that instead of bolstering up a non-business project, we had better let the bubble burst now than endeavor to distend it to a greater size. If it must collapse some time it will do less harm now than hereafter. If we have any chance of escaping it is not by adding to the weight of the millstone that is now attached to the neck of the

You do not venture to dispute my asserundertaking, even with the former sub to seek the international air line subsidized by the dominion parliament last session? You need an incre expect flour from Toronto to go round by the Bay of Chalcur than the historical ass to travel along two sides of a triangle to reach the bundle of hay which lies at the other end of the third side from him. Why was the Intercolonial ever built where it was? Would it not have done more to develop the resources of the country and at the same time have cost us less if it had been built by some shorter route? And are we not repeating the Intercolonial blunder in an aggravated form by paying heavy subsidies to build the difficult portions of the Canadian Pacific long before they are needed and where they will never be wanted?

needed and where they will never be wanted?

Mr. Wm. Macdougall once, in a moment of candor, described the long route of the Intercolonial as a scheme for throwing eight millions of dollars into the sea. At another time he stated on the public platform that the secretary of state for the colonies was "trepanned" into writing the imperial despatch which decided the contest in favor of the longer route as against the shorter one. The mad terms of union with British Columbia, the absurd bargain with Sir Hugh Allan, the indefensible syndicate contract of 1881, and the proposed $20,000,000 loan now under consideration are all parts of the same general plan of $20,000,000 loan now under consideration are all parts of the same general plan of building up a nation by the expenditure of borrowed money on public works without reference to their commercial utility. But the day of reckoning must come, and it is not unlikely that the drafts we have for years been making on our own future may be presented for payment sooner than we think. Even if parliament passes the resolutions now before it the country may have to pay dear for the money it has pledged itself to sink in an uncommercial undertaking, the outcome of jingoism as unmitigated as that which prompted the search for a scientific frontier for British India.

Your remarks about the coal deposits of prompted the search for a scientific frontier for British India.

Your remarks about the coal deposits of the Northwest are to me a curious example of the manner in which people will persist in hugging a delusion. The construction of the railway in British Columbia, or through the rockies, or north of Lake Superior, does not facilitate the transport of coal from the Saskatchewan or Souris coal fields to Winnipeg. Do you not see that what I and others object to is not the building of roads across the fertile belt where their construction could be defended on business grounds, but the building of them where the cost is enormous, the traffic nothing, and future prospect no better than the present. If the twenty millions were to be spent in building branch lines to the coal mines, to southern Manitoba, to the Peace river district, to any useful point, there might be something to say for the loan, but to sink the money in Rocky mountain canyons and the Laurentian rocks along Lake Superior, where nobody lives, and nobody ever will live, is a very excess of national fatuity which can end only in national ruin.

I persist in my former assertion that the time for us to sober up is now. Instead of giving this loan or subsidy—which you please—let us review the bargain of 1881, protect private people from loss, and put our railway enterprises in the Northwest on a proper business footing.

He considered that while there was a financial considered that while there was a financial stringency he did not recognize any serious industrial depression, and did not remember any period in the history of the country when the people had been better or more profitably employed than since 1879. Many thought that owing to the tightness of the money market the present time was inopportune for starting the enterprise, but it had evidently secured the confidence of the public and the success the directors had met with showed that there was still plenty of money seeking in there was still plenty of money seeking investment in legitimate lines. He pointed out an important fact that augured well for the bank, viz., that the list of share-

Lee, grand, secretary: M. L. Day.

After the usual loyal toasts Bro. John Graham rose to reply to the sentiment the Loyal Orange Lodge. He expressed sincere regret that the young men about him had withdrawn from the orange order but hoped that it was all for the best. Bro. Somers followed in the same strain. They were all good protestants and the objection all was to put down popery, which was increasing with such alarming rapidity. Bro. Funstone expressed to fear of the inroads of Romanism. He was delighted that of Romanism. He was delighted that Christopher Frazer, who was really the Ontario government, was about to introduce a law permitting the election of separate school trustees by ballot. The catholics would then be able to vote without any fear of the priests.

g Meeting at St. Andrew's Hall—The Speeches—The Liquor Men's Speaker Hissed—Strong Resolution Carried.

emperance people assembled in large ferce last night to protest against the ranting of liquor licenses to grocers, and t. Andrew's hall was well filled. The hair was taken by Ald. Brandon, and on the platform were Revs. J. F. Sweeny, R. Vallace, J. McLean Ballard, P. F. Mac-Leod and Messrs. Hamilton Cassells, H. Wilkinson, G. M. Rose, Isaac Wardell, James French, George Flint and others.

The first speaker was Rev. Mr. Sweeny, ho quoted from statistical reports published England that there are now in that ountry 180,000 beer shops and over three illions of paupers, whose support cost the nation about fourteen million pounds per annum and that nearly thirty-seven housand habitual drunkards had been sent thousand habitual drunkards had been sent to prison in one year: Amongst others one woman had been committed 146 times. The health of future generations, he said, depended on the health of the women, and these could not be healthy if they consumed strong drink. He exhorted those present to record their votes in favor of the passage of the bylaw to abolish the grocers' licenses.

Mr. Hughes, the next speaker, said the worst feature of the grocers' license was secret drinking.

Rev. Mr. Wallace said that female lrunkenness had increased ten fold in England since the grocers had been allowed o sell liquor, and he moved:

That the meeting emphatically demands the separation of the sale of liquors from that of groceries and pledges itself to exert every effort in order to promote the object, and earnestly calls upon all well-wishers to the cause of temperance to register their votes on the day of polling, February 28, in favor of the bylaw.

Rev. Mr. McLeod in seconding the resolution accused the city council of cowardice in not giving an opportunity for every member to record his vote squarely either for or against the by-law. Their policy was short-sighted; the law left the matter in their hands and they had no right to call upon the taxpayers to vote on the matter but should have settled it themselves, It was idle to talk of confiscation, as the Crooks' act under which the grocers held their licenses expressly provided that they were liable to have them taken away any year on receiving three months notice. Inspector Dexter had stated to some temperance people who waited on him, that if the grocers license were abolished more would be done for the temperance cause than by reducing the tavern licenses. Rev. Mr. McLeod in seconding the reso

Alderman Harvy explained the action of the council, and Mr. Miller supported the resolution which the chairman was of the council, and Mr. Mine support the resolution which the chairman was about to put to the meeting, when he was greeted with loud calls for "Fahey."

James Fahey came forward to the platform and opposed the resolution in a speech of several minutes, during which he was frequently interrupted by persons in the body of the hall, and often greeted with a storm of hisses. While still speaking the members of the salvation army entered the hall and marched to the front. The speaker was then stopped long enough for speaker was then stopped long enough for the army to sing Rescue the Perishing after which he concluded his remarks and was replied to by Rev.
