Poetry. One Pair of Stockings to Mend. An old woman sat by her bright fireside, Swaying thoughtfully to and fro
In an ancient chair whose creaky frame
Told a tale of long ago;
While down by her side on the kitchen floor,
Stood a basket of worsted balls—a score.

"I reckon he'll do. But I reckon Mattie could do better. I d' know as he's jest the man I'd pick out for her.

After all this arrangement of the young people's affairs, it began to be noted in the village that Hiram Conner had suddenly ceased visiting the peaked white cottage of the Slossons. Speculation was rife.

Some ought to feel that more than you, Miss Sarah. When you've spoiled a man's happiness, being sorry don't help him. And I don't know as you've said anything about regretting—all that."

Miss Sarah drew a quick breath.

I ben sorry ever since. I have so. And the thing that haunts me worst is the feelin' that I didn't p'ison him for killin' the cat so much as for belongin' to you. There, now, I've said it."

She stood with a shaking hand upon the fence-rail.

Hiram Conner's face wore a bewildered expression.

Overworked Student.

Students, and especially those of weak constitution, run a terrible risk in "burning the midnight oil." In how many cases health is permanently undermined in this very manner. Nature exhausted by overwork, and no pains taken to restore the lost energy. Its great value as a nerve and brain invigorator and health restorer has won for Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic the name of the student's friend. It is sold by all druggists. useless to question Miss Sarah. In the first

For a month or so, of Friday nights, she crimped her fair hair and tied a riband about her slim throat, and lighted the parlor fire, "I don't seem to get your meaning just the evening. His exclamation was and played little tunes on the organ far into the evening. Then she seemed to give over for is for saying to folks that I was no match blace, and he is now well. He is to day able to go about all the avocations of his daily life. Nothing but Hawker's tonic saved him, for he was bedridden and the flat had gone forth that his case was hopeless."

It does not require a very brilliant mind to draw the right inference from the above clear and emphatic statement. It is that any person in an enfeebled state of health, from whatever cause, will find in Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic a sure agent for the restoration of health and strength. The terrible poacher, Disease, has no armour to withstand the power of these great remedies. There was a little, soft, padding sound on the porch outside. Miss Sarah's eyes fired. She laid a quick hand on the latch. A pair of round, bright eyes, set between long, flapping ears of yellowish brown, revealed themselves in the outer gloom.

"Begone!" said Miss Sarah, sternly. But Bose, apparently accustomed to her tones, and to the fact that something to eat generating the first of the fact that something to eat generating the first of the fact that something to eat generating the first of the fact that something to eat generating the first of the fact that something to eat generating the fact that a cogs a could for its expenses last year, including interest, were only 37,963,000 france, against a retook fourteen years of chicken bones and took fourteen years of chicken bones and took fourteen years of chicken bones and took fourteen years.

cat across the garden space between his macter's house and the Slosson cottage did not seem to weigh upon Bose's remembrance. He thumped his tail on the porch floor with the utmost good will, while Miss Sarah reflected upon the fate of the gray cat, and tried to be glad that the gray cat's slayer was in her hand.

Retreating into the room, Miss Sarah made a clicking sound with her lips. This note of invitation Bose responded to at once in the liveliest fashion, by leaping into the kitchen and about Miss Sarah's gaunt figure.

But his frisking only deepened Miss Sarah seems of the gray cat's sale was so used to being the one whose symptoms were matters of interest that, for a moment, Sarah's possible headache rather surprised her.

"You'd better go and get a little fresh air," she advised. "You've been cooped upon in the house too much lately. To please up in the house too much lately. To please up in the house too much lately. They were only half-sisters, the two "Slosson girls," and the difference in their ages had given an almost maternal character to Sarah's regard for Mattie. She had felt that, when Mattie married, life would be singularly empty, but she had reconciled herself to Hiram Conner because there was really no objection to be raised against him. He was the only son of a well-to-do family, "Good-day." Miss Sarah did not reply to the milk of 600 cows will eventually be received and turned into butter. Another one

—JUDGING by what has recently appeared in the columns of our contemporary we are led to believe that the members of the Town Council of our shire town must all be protectionists of a somewhat exclusive type. They have just enacted a by-law which protectionists of a somewhat exclusive type. They have just enacted a by-law which protectionists of a somewhat exclusive type. They have just enacted a by-law which protectionists of a somewhat exclusive type. They have just enacted a by-law which protecting a license for so doing. Under this rule the farmer who takes a load of wood to town must either sell it to a merchant or take out a license as a hawker and peddle before he can dispose of it. This license, it appears, will permit him to hawk and peddle his wood, but not the quarter of lamb or few quarts of milk he may have brought with him. Before he can dispose of these he must also provide himself with a butcher's license or milk vender's. This seems to be getting things down pretty fine,—much more so, one would suppose, than the interest of the business men of the town, in whose behalf these by-laws are enacted, would seem to require. That this is the case is shown by the reasoning of one of the members of the council, who discusses the question in the last issue of our contemporary. He defends the by-law on the ground that the fee exacted is such a little one. Dividing the amount of the fee by the number of days in a year, he finds it amounts to about seven-eights of a cent per day, and therefore, he argues, a farmer can take in his load, dispose of it for ten or twenty dollars, and "he has to pay to the Town Clerk the enormous sum of seven-eights of one cent." If this were really true, then it would appear rather a small piece of legislation on the part of the council to more of legislation on the part of the council to more of legislation on the part of the council to impose the Town Clerk the enormous sum of seven-eights of one cent." If this were really true, then it would appear rather a small piece of legislation on the part of the council to impose such an infinitesimal tax. But let a farmer take in such a load, and after selling it for ten or twenty dollars, tender to the town take in such a load, and after selling it for ten or twenty dollars, tender to the town of seven-eights of one cent, lity with which the offer will be beedily convince him that the soning is far from sound.

On several occasions advocated on of a license fee or tax upon hid peddlers, by our Municipal but in every case we referred to from outside the county who sold merandise. The agent of a city firm who goes from house to house taking orders for carpets, clothing and such things should, we think, some tax for the privilege, to offset those our own business men have to pay on stock of goods. But to tax the farmer hos sells the product of his farm for the privilege of selling it is an entirely different thing. Such a tax is certainly unwise, no matter how small the fee may be.

matter how small the fee may be.

To erect barriers of any kind between the people of one of our towns and the farmers of the surrounding country must certainly tend to injure the business interests of the town. So far as these barriers have any effect they must increase the cost of the necessaries of life to the people of the town, besides having a tendency to divert trade into other channels and to other places. There ought so be the freest kind of free trade between towns and country, and the men who have most to gain by such a policy are the business men of the town.

This is a meeting of delegates from the most important of the British colonies throughout the world, who are to discuss various matter of interest to each colony, and to the empire as a whole, principally from a commercial point of view. At this inter-colonial conference representatives are to be present from the Imperial Government, the various Australian colonies, New Zealand, Tasmania, Care, Colonies, New Zealand, Tasmania, expected to effect rather important results are to be present from the Imperial Government, the various Australian colonies, New Zealand, Tasmania, Cape Colony, and the dominion of Canada. The men chosen to represent these countries are, of course, taken from the ablest and most experienced of the statesmen of each country, and it is but reasonable to suppose that men of this stamp, on getting together, can devise ways and means whereby commerce may be promoted between the various countries represented, between the various countries represented. means whereby commerce may be promoted between the various countries represented, and increased facilities provided for carrying it on. At the present time, when the other nations of the world are adhering so tenaciously to the principle of protection, and hedging themselves in with such high tariff walls, it is well for all British countries to draw themselves closer together, and by such concessions as may be necessary, to promote as far as possible trade within the empire. To what extent this conference may take a practical turn and deal with some of the difficulties in the way of such a result remains to be seen. The possibilities of such a convention are certainly very great.

in New York during the past week, and the jury, after being out for several hours, brought in a verdict of guilty of forgery in the second degree, with a very strong recommendation for clemency from the court. Under this verdict Mr. Wiman should be sentenced to the penitentiary for a term not to exceed ten years: but the case will doubtless be appealed and fought over again by Other late subscribers are,every means known to the legal fraternity, and at present it is difficult to tell what the tion may be, or when it will be reached. From the evidence which was laid before the jury during the progress of the trial, it seems apparent that the prosecution had been undertaken more for the purpose of crushing Wiman than with the obpose of crushing Wiman thau with the object of vindicating the majesty of the law which he had broken. Had he accepted the terms offered him and left the country his wrong doings would never have been made public. But it was only when his prosecutors feared that he proposed establishing a rival commercial agency that the action was entered for the evident purpose of ruining his reputation and destroying his chances of success. the African, Chinese and Hindu languages. A silver collection will be taken at the close. Our street commissioners have done some excellent work on our streets during the past week. The improvements made on Commercial street are quite marked, the sides have been nicely rounded off, the ditches cleaned of all grass and rubbish, the sides walk straightened and levelled, and now with its new plank side-walk this street presents a fine appearance. Some good work has also been done by commissioner G. A. North on the hill near Dr. Sponagle's, which was much needed;

Mr. Armstrong, of the Commercial bank, left on Thursday last for Truro to take charge of the new agency about being opened there. S. E. Marshall, who has been the accountant here during the last two years, now has charge as acting agent. He is probably the youngest person in the province to occupy so responsible a position, but he has had a good training, thoroughly understands all the details of the work, and no doubt will fill the position with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of the directors of the bank. Those who have business relations with the agency here will find him courteous and painstaking and as ready to respond to every reasonable request as the late agent has always been. Stewart is the second and youngest son of N. F. Marshall, of this town, and is, we learn, but eighteen years of age.

A very neavy funders storm passed over this part of the valley about daylight on Sunday morning. The rain—a complete downpour—served as a double blessing to the farmer, as it not only placed his hay crop beyond injury from drought, but it beat the vermin from his fruit trees. All beat the vermin from his fruit trees. All crops at present promise well.

We were very sorry to learn that Mr. John M. Troop, of Granville Centre, met with a very serious and painful accident on Friday last. He, with the other proprietors of the marsh near his own place, was engaged in driving small piling outside the dyke as a protection against the tide, and while in the act of extracting a splinter or piece of bark from the pile being driven, was not quick enough in getting his hand away, the large wooden mallet, used for the purpose, coming down with great force upon his hand, crushing and lacerating it in a moss termile manner. The unfortunate gentlemm was at once taken to Annapolis, where the wound was dressed by Dr. Robinson.

confidential statement to us:

"When I was one year old, my mamma died of consumption. The doctor said that I, too, would soon die, and all our neighbors thought that even if I did not die, I would never be able to walk, because I was so weak and puny. A gathering formed and proke under my arm. I hurt my finger and it gathered and threw out pieces of bone. If I hurt myself so as to break the skin, it was sure to become a running sore. I had to take lots of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It has made me well and strong."

substance which is impregnated with them. Neither will it select a garment in regular use for its purpose. If all stray woollens and furs not in use are put away even in simple newspapers in which pieces of camphor gum have been laid, little danger may be apprehended from the ravages of moths.

These insects especially dislike the light of day, and are more likely to take up their habitation in some old woollen garment or cast-off fur cape, hung up in a dark closet, than anywhere else. Having once secured an abiding place, it is doubtful how far these ravages will extend. It is necessary, therefore, that a housekeeper should have no "clutter places" at this season. The closets should be in order, and there should be no clumps of wool left in the corners as an invitation to moths. If these precautions are observed, there is no necessity for insuring valuable furs. Long garments should behung up in a cotton bag, made of stout unbleached muslin, with pieces of camphor or DEARBORN'S ABSOLUTELY PURE SPICES, Put up in 1 lb. packages.

Coughs, Colds, Asthma and Bronchitis. MR. JOHN TEMPLEMAN, says: HAMPTON, Nov. 30th, 1893. HAMPTON, Nov. 30th, 1893.
Having been a great sufferer from Asthma,
I was induced to try Lingard's Cough Balsam, and with great success. I would not like to be without it. Having received so much benefit, I can confidently recommend Lingard's Cough Balsam to all who may have this dreadful complaint. Yours truly,
JOHN B. TEMPLEMAN.
