Men come and go in the thronging street,
They wander the worldwide sea,
They tread the forest with eager feet,
They roam like the sea bird free,
But we, in the mirk of the clanging marts
Drudge the dull hours away.
For our need—for their need who are near

The wind sings glad up the frosty sky,
The mad clouds flurry over,
The blown gull swoops high veering by
And calls to his comrade rover,
The striving trees toes free their gold
In the riot of wild November,
And we who roamed with the winds of old
In our servile cells remember.

H., who now lives in San Francisco, picked up this remarkable stone upon the edge of the cove. He was then a boy ten years old, and was attracted by its regular shape and smooth surface, which contains a good deal of mica schist and sparkles in the sun as if it had been sprinkled during the winter months, but as he grew older he lost interest in the plaything and it rolled under a lilac bush beside the front door. There it remained for fifteen years or so. When young Hammond returned from San Francisco he recognized it, but was as tonished to find that it had increased in size and weight to a most remarkable degree. When he was a child, as I said, he carried the stone in his pocket. When he recovered it, as a man, it was larger than the crown of a stovepipe hat and weighed at least ten or fifteen pounds more than when he saw it last. H. H. Hammond became so interested in the phenomenon that he removed it from the ground beneath the lilac bush and placed

Shortly after it was placed there, about six years ago, Mr. Hammond got the meat peddler to put it on his scales, and its weight was forty-one pounds, which was marked with a pencil upon the stone itself with the date. Three years later it had grown to fifty pounds. On 13th day of May last the was forty-one pounds, which was marked fifty pounds. On 13th day of May last the stone was weighed again by the same scales and tipped the beam at sixty-five pounds.

After 25,000 tests by the best educators of America, it has been absolutely demonstratel, for instance, that the length of time that a child six years of age can concentrate its mind does not exceed seven minutes, and occupation.

Senor Du Bosc has brought suit for $500,that all efforts to confine its attention upon mind does not exceed seven minutes, and that all efforts to confine its attention upon one subject beyond this limit are worse tnan useless. This power of concentration increases slowly; at the age of eight a child's attention may be easily held ten minutes. At the age of twelve his mind should not be riveted upon one subject longer than seventeen minutes. It is, therefore, a great mistake to keep a a child of this sqe—say at the piano, more than fifteen minutes; after a change of occupation, another quarter of an hour's practice will be of incalculably more benefit than the attempt to continue work after brain and nerves have become fatigued.

Indeed, most of the inattention and restlessness of children may be explained upon the physical basis. A boy's brain, for example, undergoes a certain shrinkage at the age of fourteen and fifteen. It actually weighs less than at the age of twelve and thirteen.

This is the simple statement, shown to be correct by the ballots deposited; but when we add that this majority indicates that the majority of the whole voting population of the Do minion is also in favor of a prohibitory law, the friends of the liquor traffic will probably join issue at once and question our right to such a sweeping assumption. We believe that more prohibitionists than anti's stayed away from the polls; their faith in the government was too small, and the impression prevailed, very generally, that the result of the vote would be dealt with much the same as were the expensive findings of the royal commission appointed some years ago In the lower and western provinces voting was meagre. Ontario and Quebec was the battle ground, and the fight there was evidently nearly as sharp as would be occathe cause of temperance. It was in these two provinces that work in the liquor interests was concentrated, and the result of the poll shows how effective that work was. The "ragged remnants by the sea" just saved the day for the temperance cause-for the vote in the maritime provinces, though small, was almost solid in favor of a prohibi tory law, and when added to the small majorities of Ontario and the western proviaces was sufficient to wipe cut the antiprohibitionist majority of Quebec and place a surplus of nearly 30,000 votes to the credit of prohibition. This majority is a small one, but it counts and may cause lots of trouble in parliament. If the government of the in parliament. The celebrated Bram murder case has assumed a new phase, and the lawyers of the convicted murderer are now trying to prove the illegality of his sentence. At the time the murders were committed, two years ago, the penalty was capital panishment; since then, however, Congress has passed a new act giving the jury the right to recommend either life imprisonment or capital punishment of the control of the contro mend either life imprisonment or capital punishment upon a conviction for murder, and so Bram's lawyers contend, that, inasmuch as he was convicted under the old law and sentenced under the new one, his sentence was illegal and he should be released. If this contention proves to be correct Bram may yet be a free man. Ninety per cent. of the sentences to death, or life imprisonment, imposed by a court, are executed without the sentences to death, or life imprisonment, imposed by a court, are executed without dispute; but, when objection is taken and money is supplied to retard or defeat justice, the convict's days are greatly prolonged at the public expense and he sometimes excapes—a murderer still in the sight of all men, with his innocence as completely unproven as it was when the crime was freshowing bis freedom to a defective law. a lite with temperance workers to bring the sentiment to the right condition? The government has simply been asking a question of the voters concerning this very temperance sentiment. What is there so very serious involved in having this question squarely answered? Surely the government has wisdom enough to know what to do in the matter after they have received the answer from the people. And if they have not, the matter can easily be remedied by sending Mr. Balcom to give them proper direction. I am sure he would be willing to sacrifice himself sufficiently to do that for the Dominion.

WELL KNOWN VIOLINIST Traveled Extensively Throughout the Provinces - Interesting Statements

Concerning His Experience. STELLARTON, N.S.-James R. Murray, well known violinist, of this place, wh has traveled extensively throughout the Provinces, makes this statement: "I was running down in health and my weight fell off from 175 to 150 pounds. Prescriptions did me but little good. My trouble was called nervous dyspepsia. I resorted to Hood's Sarsaparilla and after taking five bottles I was greatly benefited. I feel as well now as ever in my life, and have increased in flesh so that I now weigh 177 pounds. I am well known in this part of the country, having followed my profession, that of a violin musician for the last 26 years. I gladly tell my friends what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me. Before I began taking the medi-cine I did not have any ambition, but now all is changed and my dyspeptic trouble perfectly cured." JAMES R. MURRAY. N. B. If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, do not be induced to buy any substitute. Be sure to get Hood's.

Wasn't Wanted There.

She was a little old woman, very plainly nuch careful wear, and her bonnet was very old-fashioned, and people stared at her to tering up the aisle of the grand church, evidently bent on securing one of the best seats, for a great man preached on that day, and the house was filled with splendidly dressed her, of his learning, his intellect and goodness, and they wondered at the pre sumption of the old woman. She must have been in her dotage, for she picked out the pew of the richest and proudest member of the church and took a seat. The three ladies who were seated there beckoned to the sexton, who bent over the intruder and whispered something, but she was hard of hearing, and smiled a little withered smile as she
