'So it was,' said Lady Hayward. But that makes no difference. The brooch was taken while we were away, Besides, the thing is absurd. Taylor is above suspicion, I know the girl so well. Why, Vernon, she went with me all through France and Italy when I joined you in Rome; we were always together, and I used to talk to her a ward, a little crossly. great deal. She is a very superior

o it was on the face of it. They knew out a quiver on her face. Rose Mannering's family well; she was a lady, and little more than a child. A silence fellowed, during which both looked into the fire for inspiration All the servants in the house were born of families who had been for genera tions on the estate. The idea of suspecting any of them was too painful. Taylor was the only exception, and she had been with Lady Hayward two

'I begin to believe,' said Lady Hay ward, 'that it is one of our guests.' 'Good heavens, Kate, what an idea.' 'Can you suggest anything else?'

'No, I can't. There's some infernal deviltry at work, but beat my brains how I will, I can't see where it comes from.' I tell you what we must do, Vernon, said Lady Hayward decisively. 'We must be very careful, not frighten any one, and keep our own counsel. Ride over to the town early to-morrow morning and telegraph to Scotland Yard for a detective to come down disguised to the hall. There will be so many people the servants won't have time to notice him. He must stop on as a visitor until he finds out something.' 'That will do.' exclaimed Lord Hay-

'Now go,' said Lady Hayward, ringing the bell for Taylor; 'I must dress at

As he went out he met the maid in the doorway, and gave her a more curious look than usual. The result was only to give up his idea as preposterous. She had a very gentle, good face; her soft brown hair, brushed smothly over her ears, gave it an almost Puritanic look. Lady Hayward had made something of a friend of her, and the girl had never presumed in the least upon Vernon, are you a brute?' I believe you it, but had always retained her sub- are laughing. dued, sweet manner.

Lady Hayward scrutinized her, too, during the process of dressing, but she shrank from the thoughts in her own mind. She had grown fond of her treasure of a maid, and felt ashamed of her quickly suppressed suspicions.

Early next mornnig the telegram was sent to Scotland Yard by Lord Hayward who rode over alone to send it and waited for the answer. The reply seemed to please him and he rode back in good spirits to a late breakfast He even faced, with moderate cheerfulness, Lady Hayward's eldest sister, who was in a frightful state about her necklace. This lady was one of his pet aversions: she was not pretty or cle er like his wife, but she was more irreproachable, more moral, more perfect, and she was an old maid. Probably she was the only person in the world of whom Lady Hayward was afraid. Miss Collette was a severe censor in all things and kept her eyeglass well fixed an her younger sister who had an imon her younger sister who had an important position to fill before the world. At present Miss Collette was very angry because she did not know what was Cannot be Surpassed being done about the thefts; she had found out before that the exemplary

A number of other men the commodious warerooms recently of FOTHERINGHAM & CO. with superb shirt-fronts hung about the doorways and looked bored. Mr. Hawk was admirably gotten up for the purpose, and had only to mingle with these others and looked as bored as they.

Lady Hayward was delighted at this excellent effacement of himself and kept her eye on him with great interest. She managed to speak to him very late when the party was breaking up. He had discovered nothing so far-not even a "clew"- and she went to bed disap-
