ST. ANDREWS, DEC. 5, 1866.

St. Andrew's Society Dinner.

The members of the St. Andrew's Society lately resuscitated here, with their invited guests celebrated the natal day of old Scotland's Patron Saint, by dining together in the hall of C. M. Gove, Esq., on Friday Evening last.

The room was tastefully decorated for the occasion, Scottish and Patriotic mottoes conspicuously displayed, whilst the walls were covered with flags and pictures, conspicuous among which was the Society's new nam-mouth flag St. Andrew's Cross with Union Jack in the centre. A new feature was the introduction of the Ladies, who were provided with entertainment at side tables. There was preparation made in expectation of the presence of at least 150 guests, but the weather was so fearfully bad, that persons from a distance could not come; during the day the wind blew almost a hurricane, whilst the rain fell in torrents. Three parallel tables were provided, and at one end of these raised above them, was the table for the President and guests, behind which was the St. Stephen Cornet Band, which discoursed sweet music during the entertainment.

C. H. Gray, Esq., President of the Society, presided. We noticed on his right were Rev. J. Ross, J. W. Chandler, Esq., M. P. P. Hon. James Brown, Geo. D. Street, Esq., D. Main, Esq., Editor "Courier," and Capt. H. O'Brien, while on his left were R. Stevenson, Esq., J. P. Vice President, Rev. Messrs. Morrison and Home, J. G. Stevens, Esq., M. P. P., and David Johnston, Esq., J. R. Bradford, Treasurer of the Society, Capt. B. R. Stevenson, its Solicitor, and J. Russell, Esq., J. P., of the committee of Management, Croupiers. About half past seven, at the call of the President, the company took their seats at the tables. The viands were of the most unexceptionable character, which might be expected when we mention that John Bradford was the caterer; his staff of waiters however were not as numerous as could be desired. It is as well here to state that the traditional "haggis" was on the table, and was so skillfully made as to tickle the palate of Scotchmen—but others preferred the roast beef.

Letters of apology were read from His Excellency the Administrator of the Government from Hon. John McAdam, M. P. P. and from others, regretting their inability to attend. The appearance of Militia and Volunteer officers in uniform added brilliancy to the scene. Rev. John Ross invoked a blessing, when all went to work with a will, and the good things speedily began to grow small and beautifully less. Dinner being over, the toasts were given in the following order:—

1. THE QUEEN. Chair. "Rule Britannia." Band.
2. Princes and Princess of Wales and other members of the Royal Family. Chair. "The Garb of old Gaul." Band.
3. His Excellency the Administrator of the Government of the Province of New Brunswick. Chair. "The Harp that once thro' Tara's Halls." Band.
4. The Army, Navy and Volunteers. Chair. Responses: J. W. Chandler, Esq., "Red White and Blue." Band.
5. Her Majesty's Ministers and Executive Council of New Brunswick. Chair. Responses: Hon. James Brown. "Hearts of Oak." Band.
6. The Members of the Legislature from County of Charlotte. Chair. Responded to by J. G. Stevens, Esq., M. P. P. "Souters of Selkirk." Band.
7. The Clergy. Chair. Responded to by Rev. John Ross, and Rev. P. Morrison.
8. "The Day and a while honor it." Chair. Was received with enthusiasm and responded to by the audience singing and the Band playing "Auld lang syne." One peculiarity connected with this toast was the mysterious crossing of arms and grasping of hands among the Scots.
9. Our Sister Societies throughout the world. Vice President. "Here's a health to them that's awa." Band.
10. The "Grand old Historic Land," David Johnston, Esq. Responded to by Jas. G. Stevens, Esq., M. P. P., in a speech displaying much beauty of composition and elegance of diction.
11. The Land that gave us milk and the land that gives us bread. Hon. James Brown. Responded to by B. R. Stevenson, Esq., particularly on behalf of the land that gives us bread in the course of which he very justly eulogised New Brunswick.

"The old Folks at Home." Band. Song.

12. The Naval and Military heroes of Scotland of the nineteenth century. Proposed by J. W. Chandler, Esq., M. P. P., in one of his usual happy speeches, in which he traced the history of many distinguished heroes including Sir Ralph Abercrombie, Sir John Moore, Lord Clyde, Lord Dundonald and Sir Charles Napier.

"Scots wha' hae." Band. Song.

"Draw the Sword Scotland." Band. Song.

13. The Poets of Scotland and the memory of Burns.

Proposed by Rev. John Home, in an able and interesting speech, interspersed with a few gems from Burns' writings, as bearing on the character of the man. He admitted "Robbie" was not perfect, but when he erred, he always manifested the deepest penitence.

"Ye Banks and Braes o' Bonnie Doon." Band. Song.

"A Man's a man for a' that." Band. Song.

14. The Press.

Proposed by John Campbell, Esq., who in course of his remarks made complimentary allusion to the Editor of the Standard, who very briefly responded, in compliment to Mr. Maile of the "Courier" spoke well and fluently, and did the subject that justice which it deserved; saying among other things, that the Press was our first friend through life; it announced the joyful tidings of our birth—the pleasant news of our marriage—and the sad account of death, dropping the curtain of charity over our faults, and holding up our virtues for emulation.

Music by the Band.

15. The town of St. Andrews and the Government officials residing therein.

James B. Bradford.

Was drunk with all the honora, and responded to by Major J. H. Widdell, Deputy Treasurer.

"The East neuk o' Fife." Band. Song.

16. Our American cousins. Capt. C. Mowat. Responded to by C. H. Gray, Esq., who said, as there was no American gentleman in the room, he would respond, that he had fought against them, but that he now wished them every success.

"Yankee Doodle." Band. Song.

17. The Bench and the Bar.

Rev. John Home.

Was warmly received. Responded to by Geo. D. Street, Esq., in a few chaste remarks, who observed that he could not say that any Scotsmen were on the Bench in this Province, he believed our Judges were above suspicion, and an ornament to the Bench—whilst our barristers, &c., with very few exceptions had proved themselves men of probity and honor, and never had betrayed the interests of their clients.

Music by the Band.

18. The Commercial interests of New Brunswick.

Proposed by Geo. F. Campbell, Esq., and responded to by J. W. Street, Esq., Henry Osburn, Esq., being called upon responded on behalf of the Railway as forming an important part of our commercial interest, and stated that the earnings of the Road for the past few years, and that the receipts for the present year would be 25 per cent. more than for the past; he urged upon the people of St. Andrews unanimity of action, in order to retain the benefits accruing from the Railway, and not to lose them for lack of building a wharf.

19. The Agricultural interests of New Brunswick. Proposed by Dr. Ross.

Responded to by John S. Magee, Esq., Sec. A. Society. He regretted that his venerable and learned friend J. W. Chandler, Esq., had not been called upon to respond, as he had some practice lately in Agricultural Speeches, or his hon. and learned friend J. G. Stevens, Esq., Secretary to the Provincial Board of Agriculture, who could do the subject justice, or his esteemed friend R. Stevenson, Esq., President of our local Agricultural Society; as he the speaker's connection with the agricultural interest was an accidental circumstance, and of recent date, he having been brought up in a city, and knew very little of farming pursuits. But as he was in the front, he would endeavor to do his duty.

He considered the Agricultural interest the most important in the country, as on the success of the farmer we depended for our "bread and butter," he thought farmers were the most independent people in the country, and from his observation, he had never yet known a farmer, bringing industry, perseverance and ordinary intelligence to bear on his work, fail. True, farmers do not always amass fortunes as rapidly as men engaged in mercantile, mechanical or professional pursuits, but as a class, they had more of this world's goods distributed among them, and were in a certain sense drawn into closer connection with the God of Nature; and if of a contemplative mind, nature in all its changes lay before him as an open book; and he had the Divine promise that "while the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease."

"Corn Riggs." Band. Song.

"When the kye come hame." Band. Song.

20. The Ladies.

Proposed by C. W. Wardlaw, Esq., and drank with all the honora. Responded to by Dr. Parker in a happy and felicitous style, observing that the Ladies added to our joy, double our sorrows and trebled our expenses.

"Green grow the rushes of." Band. Song.

"Here's a health to all good hoes." Glee Club.

The next toast proposed, was the Directors of the St. Stephen Branch Railroad and properity to them, which was given with applause.

John Bolton, Esq., responded and said St. Stephen was determined to drive all the bones it could from the Branch, cultivate and make it as fruitful as possible, but he did not think the Branch could flourish unless the Parent stone was healthy—that St. Stephen was not jealous of any place, but would do all that honest energetic man could do legitimately, to bring prosperity to their Town. His first lesson in mercantile pursuits, he had learned in St. Andrews from the late John Wilson, Esq., who deserved to be perpetually remembered by the people of St. Andrews, and indeed of Charlotte County, for it was mainly owing to his perseverance that we now had a Railroad.

J. W. Chandler, Esq., proposed the health of our host, C. H. Gray, Esq., which was drunk in a bumper.

Mr. Gray then announced that the Ladies and gentlemen if they choose could enjoy themselves on the light fantastic toe, which many of them did until pretty late.

During the evening, Hon. James Brown and Capt. Donaldson sang some songs. Mr. A. D. Stevenson sang by request of the President "Home, sweet Home." J. S. Magee, Esq., the Irish song, "Black Turf," and Mr. Andrew Lamb "When the kye come hame."

The entertainment on the whole was a complete success, and one of the most agreeable gatherings we ever witnessed in St. Andrews. Our only regret is, that we cannot give as full a report of the proceedings or do the affair that justice which it merits. But as our esteemed contemporary was "taken notes" our sin of omission, and commission, will be amply compensated for.

A BALL.—We have much pleasure in announcing that a Ball is projected under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Society, to take place between Christmas and New Year's days, and we may safely add, that whatever the Society undertakes will be well done.

The Rev. J. Home, is to lecture before the Young men's Literary Association at Saint Stephen in a few days. We can promise them a rich intellectual treat.

The Cable Telegrams, if correct, are rather ominous. The large number of troops reported sent to Ireland, and the city of Limerick being under martial law, justify the belief that Stephens, has arrived in Europe, and will attempt to carry out his mad scheme of endeavoring to excite a rebellion. The unveiling of the statue of Prince Albert at Wolverhampton drew large crowds of persons, Her Majesty took the chief part in the ceremony, and received an enthusiastic welcome.

The second lecture of the series under the auspices of the Wesleyans, was delivered in the Town Hall on Thursday evening last, by Rev. R. Wilson, who had to take the platform a second time, in consequence of the non arrival of the expected lecturer; it may be well to state that the delivery of the lecture was postponed from Wednesday to Thursday evening, the weather on the former evening being rough and boisterous, but unfortunately, Thursday proved quite as unpropitious which doubtless prevented the attendance of many.

Rev. T. Crawley, by request, took the chair called over and introduced the lecturer of the evening—whose subject was "Victoria—her life and Times."

The rev. gentleman handled the subject in a very able and instructive manner, tracing the history of our beloved Queen, from her earliest infancy, under the wise tutelage of her revered mother, the Duchess of Kent, who imparted to the royal maiden, such lessons of truth, modesty, virtue, and religion, that left an indelible impress on her youthful mind bearing fruit through every year of her life; after explaining how improbable it at one time appeared that she should ever wield the sceptre over the British Nation, from the number of persons then living whose claim to the crown were prior to hers, he showed how one and another had in the providence of God, been removed, and on the death of William IV., Victoria, while yet in her teens, called upon to wield the reins of government of a great and mighty nation. He touchingly told that when the Archbishop of Canterbury and other great officers of state waited upon her in the dead watches of the night, calling her from her slumbers to inform her that she had acceded to the Throne, her first act was to kneel in lowly reverence before the King of Kings, requesting the Archbishop to join her in supplicating grace to direct her in the proper performance of the duties, now devolving on her.

It was an impressive sight, and begged his hearers to remember, that our Queen began her reign with prayer, acknowledging by that act her trust in the great Ruler of Nations then gave a splendid word picture of the magnificent ceremonial at her coronation, describing for his lady hearers the dresses worn, the number of precious stones composing the crown, &c. &c., also the coronation oath, with the acclamation and homage paid by the assembled thousands to the young and noble Queen. Her courtship and marriage came next in order, telling us that Victoria did what almost all people do at sometime or other, fall in love, that the first object of her affection was a certain dashing young nobleman—Lord Elphinstone, but as he was a subject, she could not according to the laws of the realm be wedded to him, and what persuasion could not do, was accomplished by the tact of Lord Palmerston, who induced the young Queen to bestow on the nobleman as a mark of royal favor the Governorship of India, whence he was immediately dispatched and in a short time the old adage out of sight out of mind was once more verified—the lecturer then told us how her marriage with the late Prince Consort (then Albert of Coburg) was brought about passing a very high eulogium of that personage, for the sterling manly and high christian course he pursued through life, beloved by the nation as well as by the Queen his wife, and leaving an example worthy of the imitation of the head of every family on the earth—he also portrayed the immense wonderful depth of sympathy and profound sorrow expressed by the nation on the occasion of the death of the Prince, the lecturer related an incident showing Her Majesty's respect for the sabbath; on one occasion one of the great officers of state waited on her, very late on Saturday night with some important state papers, he suggested coming on the morrow to finish them, but Her Majesty replied to morrow is the Sabbath and in defiance of all state etiquette appointed a very early hour on Monday morning, commencing his attendance in the Chapel Royal on Sunday, where he heard a sermon preached from the text selected by the Queen on the sanctity of the Sabbath.

He then referred to the many wonderful things that have taken place during her reign—the introduction of steam, railways, telegraphs &c., and had witnessed the fall of many empires and nationalities, yet he sat unmoved amongst them all; and he hoped the day was far distant when she should resign the sceptre—the Rev. gentleman said he had no fear as to the future, but on the contrary he believed the British Flag would be floating proudly to the wind, even when the great Trump at the last judgment shall sound, he also said Victoria was destined to see these North Am. Colonies joined together in one vast confederation, going on side by side as her oldest child, prizing highly their privilege as members of the empire and priding themselves, on being Britons. Want of space precludes us from giving such an extended report of the lecture, which the beauty and brilliancy of its composition tempts us to, but we hope the Rev. gentleman may be induced to repeat it at no distant day when we think we can prognosticate he will have a crowded house. At the close of the lecture, a vote of thanks was moved by Mr. John S. Magee, who took occasion to remark that he was very glad indeed to hear the Rev. gentleman speak so generously in his lecture of the Established church, and of "his determination to resist any attempt made to destroy it," for he (Mr. Magee) knew of several people who declined to attend the lecture in consequence of a report prevailing in the community, that he had spoken against and displayed great hostility to the establishment. The vote of thanks was unanimously adopted and conveyed by the chairman to the lecturer. Who said he was glad his humble effort had met with their approval, and that he had an opportunity to refute the wilful and slanderous statement made about him which he had heard, before denying most positively that he ever displayed any hostility to the establishment, in fact those who knew him best, knew that he did not interfere with any other body of Christians. Three cheers were then given for the Queen, and the meeting adjourned.
