Great Fire in the Heart of New York Fifteen Business Houses Wiped Out

Hundreds of Tenement Dwellers Driven from Homes by Flames==Fear-Crazed Horses Charge Through Crowded Streets==Two Big Blocks Destroyed.

New York, Oct. 7. — Two city blocks burned, over fifteen business establishments destroyed, hundreds of tenement dwellers forced to flee for safety from their flame-threatened homes, one fireman injured, a watchman burned, 250 fear-crazed horses roaming through crowded streets for more than an hour, and a desperate three-hour struggle with the flames, were the results of a fire which threatened destruction to a large portion of the upper east side water front shortly after midnight. The loss was $1,000,000.

Starting in a rag-picker's shop in One Hundred and Eighth street, near First avenue, the flames gained headway so quickly that within a few minutes it was necessary to turn in four alarms and 25 engine companies, a fire boat, and half a dozen towboats, were rushing to the scene to combat with the flames, which were sweeping southward. The block between One Hundred and Eighth and One Hundred and Seventh streets, composed of small buildings, was swept within a few minutes, and flying embers had ignited the big lumber yards of J. Rebers, Sons & Co. From the lumber yards the fire threatened the entire district. Half a dozen firemen, caught in a back draft of flame and smoke when a lumber shed collapsed, were blinded and choked, but with one exception all escaped without serious injury. Pipeman O'Neil was struck by a falling timber and fell unconscious. He was rescued by his companions.

It was three hours after the fire started when the firemen controlled it. They gave up the fight in the lumber yard and devoted their attention to Meyer Bros.' coal yard and building on One Hundred and Sixth street. When they succeeded in checking the southward march of the flames they went back to the lumber yard, which had been blazing unhindered. The loss to the lumber company aggregated about half the total.

TEXANS WANT MOB LAW LEGALIZED

Ask Governor Not to Protect Negroes Who Are Guilty of Assault.

Chicago, Oct. 7.—A dispatch to the Tribune from Houston, Texas, says: 'A petition from a number of citizens, headed by G. W. Knight, of San Marcos, has been presented to Governor Lanhan, asking that the state permit mob punishment of negroes who assault women.

The governor is asked to indorse a policy of absolute unprotection to negroes guilty of assault, insuring that they be given no trial by legal inquiry of any kind, and that they may be hanged instantly as soon as apprehended.

Governor Lanham's response principally is directed to the legal phase of the proposition. It is set forth that it is impossible for him to countenance the policy in view of the oath of office and the state legislation, which he is bound to protect.

OCULISTS ON ENGINES

Chicago, Oct. 6—For the purpose of making eye tests and studying conditions under which train signals are displayed, oculists will be placed on the engines that pull the fast trains on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad. The tests will be made preliminary to a revision of the system of examining trainmen for defects of sight. A change in the present manner of displaying lights and semaphore arms may also result.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is responsible for the proposed unique test. The roadmen have complained that their eyes are tested theoretically rather than along practical lines.

BULLS CHARGE HORSEMEN

Lisbon, Oct. 7. — Twelve full-grown bulls, followed by a long train of horsemen, were being led to a bull ring near Liston, when an unknown person threw a bomb in front of them.

They instantly turned and charged the horsemen, overturning them as they rushed madly along the crowded streets. Hundreds of spectators took to flight, and many were trampled under foot.

By a miracle no one was killed, but ther were scores of casualties, and sevral horses were ripped up by the horns of the infuriated bulls.

Allan Liners Arrive.

Montreal, Que., Oct. 7. — The Allan liner royal mail steamer Virginian, from Liverpool and Moville for Quebec and Montreal, arrived at Rimouski at 8:15 p.m., and sailed thence at 9:30 p.m., Oct. 6. The Allan line steamer Sardinian, from London for Quebec and Montreal, passed Fame Point at 8 p.m. on Oct. 6. The Allan line royal mail steamer Bavarian, from Montreal and Quebec for Moville and Liverpool, arrived at Rimouski at 6 a.m., and sailed at 7 a.m. on Oct. 7.

TOGO TO VISIT EUROPE AND U. S.

Japan Thinks Sight of Ships and Magnificent Fighters Would Be Useful.

New York, Oct. 7. — According to a cablegram from London to the American, Admiral Togo, with his squadron of the best ships in the Japanese navy, will visit European and American waters some time next year. According to reliable reports from Tokio, the Japanese Government believes that Japan's position in the family of nations will be strengthened by the appearance abroad of her magnificent sea-fighting machines and their crews, which have accomplished such results in the war just ended. The understanding is that the squadron, which Togo will bring with him, will consist of two of the first-class battleships, two armored cruisers, and several smaller craft.

He will go first to England, and may visit France as well. He will then proceed to America, and from there go home.

TARIFF REVISION PLANK

The Republicans of Massachusetts Put One In Their Platform.

Boston, Oct. 6. — The Republican state convention was called to order at 10:10. The committee on resolutions presented the platform, which pledges President Roosevelt "unswerving support," and indorses most heartily his fearless enforcement of the laws enacted to prevent great corporations from oppressing the people by unjust discrimination or by the destruction of lawful competition.

"We recommend the enactment of a tariff provision which shall protect our exports against discrimination, and secure to the United States the treatment accorded to the most favored nations in all foreign markets."

After the resolutions had been read the chairman of the committee moved that the report be adopted by the convention.

Henry B. Blackwell, of Boston, on behalf of the committee of 100 on reciprocal trade, caused a stir by urging the adoption of the resolutions. This was interpreted by the delegates to mean that the committee of 100 was satisfied with the revision plank.

The motion to adopt was carried by a practically unanimous vote.

Inverclyde Very Ill.

London, Oct. 6.—Lord Inverclyde, chairman of the Cunard Steamship Line, who is ill with pleuro-pneumonia in Scotland, underwent an operation yesterday. His condition is still dangerous, but Profesor McEwan, King Edward's surgeon, who is attending him, is hopeful.

A cammite Suicides.

New York, Oct. 7.—Unable to pay his advanced assessment in the Royal Arcanum, Thomas Ascott, of Brooklyn, went to a vacant lot in Sixteenth street, near Eleventh avenue, and shot himself through the head. He had been a private watchman, but had been out of work several weeks. The first assessment under the new rates of the Royal Arcanum went into effect Oct. 1. Ascott was unable to get the increased amount saved up in time to save his policy. Desperate at the thought of losing it, after struggling to keep it paid up, he was driven to suicide.

IS THE HEALER A CHARLATAN?

Investigator Fails to Find a Single Authentic Cure by Sharman.

Sharman, the healer, is still doing a great business at his old stand. Yesterday he was visited by a large number of women. Quite a number of men tested his divine powers.

It may be imagined that Sharman is a hare-brained fanatic, who really believes that he is divinely inspired. Such a belief never entered his head. He is simply working for the money, and has acquired a few magician's tricks, and also a few simple physiological facts to help him.

Sharman is shrewd. His cures for the most part are promises to cure. In a week, in ten days, in a month, the patient will be better. The momentary exhilaration due to the massaging of the affected parts is taken for a sure cure.

Now, his consistency. They tell of his miracles of healing without a smile. One man related how Sharman had cured a man of asthma by rubbing his ear. The reporter did not smile. The man believed almost as much as he believed the catechism. One man with one leg shorter than the other, went to Sharman, had it pulled, and was forever cured. That's what this patient said, and when he was asked how much Sharman got out of him when his leg was pulled, he indignantly replied, "Only $2."

As a successor of Schlatter and the rest of that ilk, he has every claim for recognition.

An incident happened during his visit that was amusing. A man suffering from deafness visited him. Sharman rubbed his ears diligently, took a heavy-ticking watch out of his pocket, held it to the man's ear, and murmured, "Dost hear it?" "I dost," answered the victim. He held it a foot away from his ear, "Dost hear it some more?" "I dost," said the man, his eyes bulging. Sharman held it at arm's length, and with a regular Robert Mantell air, asked again "Dost hear it yet again some more?" The man was now thoroughly convinced that Sharman was possessed, and he jumped up, and said: "Man, you must be possessed of the devil." Here Sharman uncorked a sad, sad smile. The aforesaid smile soon flitted away, and in its place came a look of ineffable woe. The devil! such impunity. With bowed head he picked up the cotton batting, replaced it in the patient's ear, and said: "No more shalt thou hear," and led him out. To insinuate that Sharman had several devils doing business in his anatomy was more than that paragon of virtue could stand, and he called back the cure that he had made. There was the greatest miracle of the whole business—making a cure, and then by a simple passage of his tiny mitt, making the man deaf again. Oh, Lacremans! Oh, Lacrimosa. That's great.

One individual was treated for rheumatism of the shoulder, and when asked about it declared that the healer was full of electricity, and when he removed his hand a stinging sensation resulted. He reported that he was stung. Most of them have been "stung" in the sporting sense, which means that they paid out their good money for something that was not bread. So it might be caried on ad infinitum

The coppersmiths and boot-sellers are reaping a harvest. He tells every patient to wear copper soles in their shoes, and also to wear nothing but broad-toed shoes. At Crediton the shoe dealers sold out their entire stock.

Thus Sharman, the healer, is doing a land-office business, and the suckers are many. Gullible people are as plentiful as they possibly can be.

DOMINION VS. ONTARIO

Argument Concluded Regarding the Interest on Trust Funds.

Toronto, Oct. 7.—Argument was concluded and judgment reserved yesterday afternoon in the friendly action of the Province of Ontario against the Dominion of Canada regarding interest on trust funds, which was heard by Mr. Justice Burbidge, of Ottawa, in the exchequer court at the city hall.

The judge stated that his decision when reached would be announced at Ottawa.

The dispute arises over the reduction last year from 5 to 4 per cent of the interest payable by the Dominion on funds held in trust for the province.

The contention of the Province is that the rate of interest is fixed by the statutes creating the funds, and the argument of the Dominion Government is that they may pay off the debts at any time or reduce the interest.

SURPLUS OF NEARLY $8,000,000 IN CANADA'S ANNUAL ACCOUNT

Ottawa, Oct. 7.—The Canadian surplus on ordinary account for the last fiscal year was $7,871,320. This is shown by the financial statement for 1904-5, which was issued yesterday. It is a little below the estimate made by Hon. Mr. Fielding in his budget speech, when he predicted a surplus of about nine millions. The revenue last year was $71,180,626, which is half a million greater than the amount collected the year before. Hon. Mr. Fielding estimated the probable revenue at $71,250,000. The expenditure during the year was $63,309,305, against an estimate in the budget speech of $62,250,000, and an expenditure in the previous year of $55,612,832. The expenditure on capital account amounted to $15,441,403, which is $4,392,200 more than in the previous year. Mr. Fielding's estimate was for a capital expenditure of $12,500,000.

The debt is increased $5,349,113, against an estimate of $1,250,000. The customs revenue showed an increase of $731,037, postoffice an increase of $473,047, public works an increase of $422,123. Excise collections declined to the extent of $372,233, and the miscellaneous account declined $743,166. The principal items of increase in expenditure on capital account are public works, railways and canals. The canals show $9,840,028, an increase of $4,007,075; bounties, $2,234,685, an increase of $1,104,643. For railway subsidies the amount paid was $1,275,629, or $771,248 less than in the year previous. The principal items of revenue for the past two years compared were as follows:

Excise	12,958,708	12,586,474
Postoffice	4,652,324	5,125,372
Public works, including railways	6,972,218	7,394,342
Miscellaneous	5,383,954	4,640,787
Totals	$70,669,816	$71,180,626
Expenditure	55,612,832	63,309,305
Capital expenditure	11,049,203	15,441,403

There was an increase of $5,759,438 in the circulation of Dominoin notes.

RUSS RAILROAD DISASTER

IS MULOCK TO RETIRE?

A Toronto Paper Says So, But Report Is Discredited.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Ottawa, Oct. 7.—Sir William Mulock was too busy in his office at the department this morning to be interviewed in regard to the report in a Toronto paper that he was retiring from the cabinet. The report is not credited here. Those who ought to know something about it say that there is nothing in it. It is well known here that Sir William would not accept any position under the crown, and he is too active and energetic to retire from public life. Here he is known as "The man who does things."

A TRIUMPH FOR TOGO

Jap and British Ships for the Great Naval Review at Tokio.

Tokio, Oct. 7. — The coming visit to Japanese waters of the British squadron, commanded by Vice-Admiral Sir Gerard Noel, commander-in-chief of the China station, will, it is expected, be made the occasion, soon after the ratification of the peace treaty, of a grand naval review, which, with Admiral Togo's triumphal entry into the city, will offer a splendid occasion for diverting the people's attention from the unsatisfactory terms of the treaty. It is believed that the authorities will do everything possible to utilize these events as demonstrations of the fact that the peace of Asia is guarded by the two powerful allies. American warships are expected to be present at the naval review.

UNCLE SAM IS CAREFUL

Secret Service Men Attend Departure of Gaynor and Greene.

Montreal, Oct. 7.—The departure of Gaynor and Greene for the United States after three years of fighting against extradition, was not marked by scenes out of the common. About 7:30 the two men were taken from the jail and driven direct to the G. T. R. station, where they had breakfast in the restaurant. They afterwards took the Delaware and Hudson train, which drew out at 8:40. The only thing to attract attention was the extent of the precautionary measures adopted by the United States marshals who are taking the prisoners back to Savannah to stand trial for defrauding the Government. Secret service men were apparent in every part of the station, so that any attempt that might be made to rescue the prisoners might be defeated.

Stock Company for Booth.

Ottawa, Oct. 7. — It is rumored that John R. Booth will amalgamate all his Chaudiere industries, lumber, pulp and paper mills, into a stock company, with A. W. Fleck as secretary-treasurer.

Edhem Pasha Dead.

London, Oct. 6. — A dispatch from Constantinople today announced the death of Field Marshal Edhem Pasha, who was commander-in-chief of the victorious Turkish army in the war with Greece and who also distinguished himself during the defense of Plevna against the Russians in 1876.

CUT OUT KISSING SAY THE SCIENTISTS.

New York, Oct. 7.—A special cablegram to the Sun says that among the various anti-phthisis measures discussed at the International Tuberculosis Congress yesterday, was one vehemently advocating the discontinuance of kissing. Prof. Fournier opened the discussion, and other delegates strongly supported him, adducing numerous instances of the mischief done by kissing, and giving scientific reasons why it should be abandoned.

One learned physician described it as "That unpleasant custom." Some referred to the custom with impatience, hardly removed from disgust, while others treated it as being almost criminal.

M'CURDY'S SON MADE FORTUNE

Millions Paid in Twenty Years by Mutual.

RAN THE FOREIGN BUSINESS

Had Been General Agent in U. S. and Drew From Both Sources at One Time.

New York, Oct. 6.—That Robert H. McCurdy, a son of the president of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, and Louis A. Thebaud, the elder McCurdy's son-in-law, have made enormous profits through their relations with the Mutual company was disclosed yesterday in the hearing before the Armstrong insurance committee.

Robert H. McCurdy, who is 46 years old, has been general manager of the Mutual Life since 1902, and at present gets a salary of $30,000 a year. Since 1886 Mr. McCurdy has received a commission on all foreign business written by the Mutual company, and this income kept up even after his appointment as general manager. In some years the commissions have amounted to more than $99,000, which is almost as much as his father draws as president of the Mutual, and considerably in excess of the amount which President Paul Morton, of the Equitable is receiving.

Mr. McCurdy collected these commissions under a contract which he entered into with the Mutual Company back in 1886, when he went to Europe as the company's foreign manager. At that time the Mutual agreed to pay him 5 per cent on all premiums from the foreign business. The volume of business increased so rapidly, and the amounts to which Mr. McCurdy would have been entitled assumed such stupendous proportions, that the commission was gradually reduced—he says at his own request—until he is receiving now but 1 per cent on the renewal premiums of the foreign business for a limited period. Even at this rate his income from this source amounts to more than $80,000 a year, and the Mutual, according to its contract with Mr. McCurdy, will have to pay him these commissions until 1910. The Mutual Company has the right to terminate its contract with Mr. McCurdy at any time. The total amount which he has received as commissions in the last twenty years aggregates almost $1,200,000.

It was shown further yesterday that during the greater part of the time in which Mr. McCurdy was collecting commissions on foreign business he was also receiving large amounts as profits from the firm of R. H. Raymond & Co., who were the Mutual's general agents for the New York city district.

Mr. McCurdy left this firm in 1892, and upon his retirement Louis A. Thebaud, his brother-in-law, made his appearance in the firm. This firm, it was shown yesterday, has received from the Mutual as much as 80 per cent of the premiums on first year business written by the concern, and has had at the same time advantageous terms as regards the percentage on renewal premiums. In one year the firm had a contract with the Mutual by which it got 96 per cent of the first year premiums. Out of the receipts under this contract, however, the firm was obliged to pay about $23,000 rent for branch offices.

Mr. McCurdy's net receipts from this firm since 1889 amount to $530,728, a part of this being his interest in renewals, from which source he still continues to derive a small income.

Mr. Thebaud, since he became a member of the Raymond firm in 1892, has received net profits aggregating $932,822. In 1904 he cleared $147,687. For the last few years Mr. Thebaud has been receiving three-fourths of the profits of this firm.

Mr. McCurdy's net profits from his foreign commissions, from Raymond & Co., together with his salary, amount in the last twenty years to more than $1,700,000, and Mr. Thebaud and Mr. McCurdy have together cleared more than $2,700,000. Besides this, there has, of course, been going into the McCurdy family from the Mutual the salary of Richard A. McCurdy as president, which is at least $100,000 a year.

CITY ASSESSING IS A BIG JOB

Mayor Thinks Rearrangement of Department Would Greatly Facilitate the Work.

The force in the assessment commissioner's department was reduced today, when Assessor Black, who was called in to assist in ward 3, and Mr. Arthur Essery, clerk to Mr. Andrus, completed their work. This leaves Assessor O'Sullivan and Messrs. Gillean and Dobie, clerks, still employed. They will be through in a few days.

Asked today if he considered Ald. Cooper's plan to have the rolls for the different wards returned at given times, was feasible, Mayor Campbell said he was not prepared to give an answer. He added, however, that there was no doubt by a little rearrangement the work in the assessment department could be better equalized, so that the staff would not be overrushed at certain times and not have enough to keep them going at others.

"It only requires a little investigation," said the mayor, "but to bring it about the aldermen must not think about the employes, but the work of the office. They will have to let the personnel of the office be a secondary matter if they want to carry out such a plan."

Mayor Campbell pointed out that the difficulty was not in getting the assessment completed in time for the next year but in getting the rolls in the hands of the city clerk in time to have the voters' lists prepared for the elections in January. In regard to the attacks made on Assessor Andrus, he said that last year the assessment of Mr. Andrus' territory was done by Mr. McCoubrey, and that it was not completed until Sept. 30. This year, Mr. Andrus would be ten days or so later, but this was not due to inability on the part of the assessor, but to the fact that the work this year was much heavier than in 1904, owing to the growth of the city.

Another U. S. Bank Closes.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 7. — The comptroller of the currency has received a telegram announcing that the Peoria National Bank, of Peoria, Ill., has closed its doors upon the order of its directors.

CROWE PLANNED TO KIDNAP JOHN D.

PAL WITHDREW FROM PLOT

Butte, Montana, Oct. 6.—Pat Crowe, arrested here Tuesday, furnished another sensation today when he declared but for the fear of his partner, who deserted him, he would have kidnapped John D. Rockefeller and held him for $2,000,000 ransom.

Crowe expressed considerable regret that he was unable to carry out his bold scheme, as he declared that had he been successful, today he would be a million dollars better off and he would be in some foreign country and not in the Butte jail.

Crowe says the daring plot was hatched in Chicago, and later there was an investigation of Rockefeller's residence near Cleveland. When everything was ready his partner got "cold feet."

"It was immediately after the Cudahy affair that my partner and I —never mind his name—were lying low in Chicago, laughing at the excitement over the Cudahy affair. It was so easy that I suggested we go after bigger game, and the result was that within a week we took the train to Cleveland to kidnap old Rockefeller and get the big bunch from the boy.

"Well, we go down there, went out to his home at Forest Hill and sized up the place. It was dead easy. The old man was there. It is a quiet country place. It was a snap I tell you.

"Well, to get down to business, we planned to hold up the watchman, get into the house at night—we had a plan of the entire place — we fixed it to hustle the old man into a rig and make the young fellow dig. You bet he would have come through so fast it would make your head swim.

"We fixed the thing for Wednesday night. About 6 o'clock my partner said he wasn't feeling well, and he asked me to put it off until the next night. Well, I put it off, and at noon the next day, Thursday, he broke down and got cold feet and said he thought we were being watched right then. That settled it.

"I began to fear he was going to give the whole snap away about the Cudahy affair, so I lit out for New York and went from there to South Africa, and that was all there was to it.

"Rockefeller is holding up the world and getting his ransom, too. Why shouldn't I make him divide if I have the chance?

"I am not the originator of the ransom business. Did you ever read any Roman history? Caesar was the boss 'kidnapper' of the world. When he was running the world he used to send old Brutus and some of his generals over to Carthage, grab one of the big kings in that country and make them put up several millions before they gave him back. History is full of the same.

"They call it kidnapping nowadays. In those days it was statecraft."

COMPANY'S BELT LINE PROPOSITION

A special meeting of the city council has been called for Monday evening to consider the proposal of the street railway company in respect to the Edward street belt line.

A letter outlining what the company is willing to do was yesterday placed in the hands of Ald. Stevely, chairman of the city council's special committee, and each member of the council has been furnished with a copy of it in order that on Monday night they will be in a better position to discuss it.

The company is prepared to accept a clause in the Edward street bylaw providing that in the event of the work not being completed by a certain date, the right to operate cars on South street, Beaconsfield avenue, the Hamilton road east and the Wortley road

HAPPY CLIMAX TO ROYAL ROMANCE

Cyril Weds Victoria Defying Czar and Kaiser.

BRIDE WAS ONCE DIVORCED

Bridegroom Was Aboard the Petropavlovsk With Makaroff, But Made Miraculous Escape.

Munich, Oct. 6. — The wedding of the Grand Duke Cyril and the Grand Duchess of Hesse, announced yesterday, is the climax of one of the most romantic love affairs known to royalty of modern Europe.

The two were sweethearts almost from childhood. The grand duchess was Princess Victoria of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, her father being Duke Alfred, son of Queen Victoria and brother of King Edward. He died in 1900. Cyril met her at a party when both were 16 years of age, and at once they fell in love. Afterwards the Russian grand duke journeyed to England and asked Queen Victoria's consent to his marriage with the princess. Queen Victoria refused, because she already had decided that the princess should marry Grand Duke Ernest of Hesse.

The princess obeyed her grandmother and married the Duke of Hesse, to her sorrow. They were man and wife for seven years. She was high-spirited, he was a man of sullen, querulous temper.

The year following their marriage, the grand duchess presented a daughter to her husband, greatly to his disappointment, as he earnestly desired an heir to the throne.

Queen Victoria succeeded in restoring a semblance of peace in a visit to England, and for some months all seemed to go on well, but the bickering soon recommenced. A second time the Queen of England was successful in reuniting her grandchildren.

Within a year the duke grossly insulted his wife. Immediately, without luggage and accompanied only by a waiting maid, the princess left Darmstadt, and for several days no one, not even her husband, knew her whereabouts. She had again returned to her sister's court.

The cause of the cleavage was a practical joke, of the kind which the grand duke was fond of playing on his wife. It seems that at a dance given in the palace the night previous to the flight of the princess all the lights had suddenly been extinguished, whereupon the duke and several of his boon companions produced syphons and began squirting cold water at random, the women, with their decolette ball dresses, becoming, of course, the principal victims. The grand duchess, who got not only drenched, but likewise hugged in the dark by several young officers, was so furious that she left Darmstadt by the first train on the following morning for Budapest.

Their divorce followed, and it caused trouble in three empires. King Edward sided with his niece. The Czar turned his back upon her because the grand duke was the only brother of the Czarina.

The Kaiser dismissed her from the army, for she was the honorary colonel of the Third Regiment of Hessian Infantry, and, as such, in a special uniform, always rode at the head of the regiment on parade.

The divorce left the grand duchess free to marry the Grand Duke Cyril, but the Czar refused his consent. Cyril went to Port Arthur at the beginning of the war, and was on the staff of Vice-Admiral Makaroff. When the battleship Petropavlovsk was destroyed on April 13, 1904, Cyril was on the bridge with the admiral. The admiral was killed, but Cyril, thrown into the sea, escaped with his life.

Returning to Europe Cyril again sought the Czar's consent to his marriage to the Grand Duchess of Hesse. King Edward also urged the Czar to yield. But the Czar, guided by the strict rule of the Greek Catholic Church, forbidding the marriage of cousins and divorced persons, was persistent in his refusal.

After waiting more than a year for consent, Cyril and the divorced grand duchess have defied the Kaiser and the Czar, and are now husband and wife.

Election Petitions Dismissed.

Toronto, Oct. 7. — As was anticipated, the provincial election petitions in West Huron, Monck, South Ontario, Sault Ste. Marie, North Norfolk and South Norfolk were all dismissed when they were called this morning at Osgoode Hall. No costs were allowed in any of these.

Smoot Didn't Vote.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Oct. 7. — At the semi-annual conference of the Mormon Church last night, all of the officers of the church were sustained without a dissenting vote. Because of the charge made during the Senate investigation that Senator Smoot had sustained President Smith in polygamous practices, much interest was taken in his vote. The voting is done by the raising of hands. Observers say that the apostle-senator did not raise his hand with the others of the quorum. He did not, however, give any sign in the negative.

Atrocious Triple Murder In New York State Town

Middleton, N. Y., Oct. 7. — A triple murder was revealed here today, when the bodies of Willis and Fred Olney were found in the woods half a mile from their home, at which last night was found the murdered body of Alice Ingerick. Both brothers had been shot. Before night the crime is expected to number one more victim, Mrs. George Ingerick, mother of the girl Alice. The mother, who was found unconscious in the barn of the Olney brothers' farm last night, has not regained consciousness, and was said by physicians today to be dying with three fractures in her skull.

As soon as daylight permitted a search to be made for Fred and Willis Olney, who were missing from their home last night when Mrs. Ingerick was found unconscious and her daughter murdered, wagon tracks leading across two fields to a woods near the house were seen by the searchers. The tracks were fresh. Just beyond them in the woods were found the bodies of Fred and Willis, each lying in the same position on their backs, with one arm across the breast. All the pockets in their clothing had been turned inside out. Marks in the underbrush showed that the bodies had been dragged from the wagon to the place where they were found.

LONDON, SATURDAY, OCT. 7.

The Centenary of Trafalgar.

Preparations are now being made throughout the length and breadth of the British Empire and the Seven Seas for the celebration of the centenary of Trafalgar on Oct. 21. There will be no intent or desire to wound the susceptibilities of the French people, to whom the British nation now cordially extends the hand of friendship. The keynote of the celebration will not be one of triumph over Nelson's victory, so much as an apotheosis of the victor.

No British hero has had such a grip on the affections of his countrymen. He had a combination of qualities which made him a truly representative hero, appealing to the instincts of a maritime people, with whom the sea is a passion. On the personal side there were grave blemishes, and a great moral catastrophe, strangely blended with a strong religious feeling. The chaplain of his flagship, the Victory, who was also Nelson's confidential secretary, says that he never went to bed or arose without kneeling down to say his prayers. He had an almost child-like vanity and love of praise, but it was untainted by jealousy, and combined with the most generous recognition of merit in his superiors and subordinates. His impulses were those of a magnanimous, simple, and ardently affectionate nature, which drew to him the hearts of men. It was not success alone which made him the idol of the navy, but his intense humanity. With his naive egotism he could justly say that when he joined his seamen for the last time "the whole fleet felt the Nelson touch which went through it like an electric shock." "The Nelson touch," in another sense, was the term he familiarly applied to his usual mode of attack, which was to touch the enemy's ships with his own and grapple with them hand-to-hand. Thus on the eve of Trafalgar he wrote:

"I am anxious to join for it would add to my grief if any other man was to give them the Nelson touch, which we say is warranted never to fail."

Again, in prefacing his plan of attack at Trafalgar, which he issued in the form of a circular letter to his officers, he wrote:

"The business of an English commander-in-chief is first to bring an enemy's fleet to battle, on the most advantageous terms to himself (I mean that of laying his ships close on board the enemy as expeditiously as possible, and secondly, to continue them there, without separating, until the business is decided."

Captain Mahan, his latest biographer, himself a naval expert, in analyzing Nelson's professional methods, says his instinct was always inclined to instant and vigorous action, and was commonly by itself alone an accurate guide. His forte was in quick resolve, not in deliberate consultation, as, for example, his sudden change of plan just before the battle of Trafalgar opened. He acted upon inspiration, but it was the inspiration of genius.

It has been well said that Nelson died at the moment the most propitious for his fame. His death in the flush of victory and in the prime of his powers, threw fresh rays of glory around his figure, and veiled with their brightness the shadows that lay upon his life. To the British people he will be always the supreme embodiment and expression of that sea power which has made Great Britain what she is.

The City's Population.

The municipal census places the population of the city at 43,144, an increase of 1,402 in twelve months. The assessment commissioner thinks that the correct figures would be nearer 45,000. On the outskirts of the city there is also a thick fringe of population, so that it is probable that London and its immediate environs embrace nearly 50,000 people.

The increase of 1,402 within the four wards of the city is moderately satisfactory. The city of Hamilton, which is a greater manufacturing center and is attracting many new industries, shows an increase of less than 2,000. It is growing relatively no faster than London.

In the past ten years the population of this city has increased by 9,000, including 2,000 by the annexation of London West. If the rate of progress during the past two years could be maintained we should add 15,000 to the population in the next ten years. In other words a city larger than Guelph, or Stratford, of St. Thomas, and nearly as large as Kingston, will in all probability be added to the present city of London in a decade. This will not necessitate the extension of the boundaries of the corporation, which already covers an area great than Hamilton. The city can expand a good deal before filling out its clothes. It can remain a city of detached houses, which it one of its greatest charms. During the past two years blocks of vacant land in the outlying parts of the third and fourth wards have been built upon, and people who visit these localities for the first time in two years are surprised by the change. Within the next ten years the appearance of large sections of the city will be transformed, and householders who now look from their windows over vacant fields will find their homes comparatively downtown.

This Glorious Autumn.

Everybody is putting in a good word for the weather. These golden days are calculated to make Canadians aggressively proud of their climate, and they can challenge any country to produce its equal. The sunshine is bright, the air is crisp, and the foliage is a blaze of color. Nature has been lavish with her gifts, and the harvest is abundant. Even the fall fruits are plentiful, and the apple crop is the largest in years. Cellars are filling with vegetables, and the farmers are busy with their fall plowing. Everything is favorable for the fall work, and the weather is ideal. Such days are a tonic, and the man who is not glad to be alive is a pessimist indeed.

The Canadian fall came from the immortal Nelson himself. His ship, the Albemarle, was ordered to Quebec in the summer of 1782. He had the average Englishman's conception of this country as a sub-Arctic region. "I want much to get off from this —— voyage," he wrote. "Mr. Adair (an eminent London surgeon, who a year before had treated him for paralysis of his limbs) has told me that if I was sent to a cold, damp climate it would make me worse than ever."

The Albemarle reached Quebec on July 1, 1782, but sailed three days later for Boston Bay, returning Sept. 17. One of Nelson's biographers writes:

"The fears for his health that he had expressed before sailing from England had happily proved groundless, and a month's stay in port, which now followed, at the most delightful and invigorating of the American seasons, wrought wonders for him. His letters to Locker state that the voyage agreed with him better than he expected; while from the St. Lawrence he wrote to his father, 'Health, that greatest of blessings, is what I never truly enjoyed until I saw Fair Canada. The change it has wrought, I am convinced, is truly wonderful.'"

It is to be hoped the members of the Board of Trade on Monday night, and the public on Tuesday night, will turn out in large numbers to hear Mr. J. S. Larke, the Canadian trade commissioner to Australia. Mr. Larke is an accomplished speaker, and has represented this country in a highly creditable manner. His addresses are certain to be instructive, and Canadians should cultivate more interest in their fellow-subjects in the Antipodes.

A Subtle Warning.

[Montreal Gazette.]

The Minneapolis Times has suspended publication after an existence of sixteen years. Some months ago a paper in the nearby city of St. Paul also found it advisable to go out of business. In Canada within a shore time daily papers have gone out of existence in London, Hamilton, Woodstock, Kingston, Quebec and St. John, N. B. There are a variety of causes at work forcing up the cost of producing a newspaper that only well established concerns can overcome and prosper. The lesson does not, however, seem to be comprehended by those who suffer most when a source of employment is cut off.

Advertising Wisdom.

[Montreal Witness.]

Genuine advertisements, such as make no effort to cheat the public, are often among the most interesting parts of a newspaper. To make advertisements effective requires great skill. The secret of making them successful we do not mind telling. It is to have them contain truthful information, interesting to readers. Exaggerating this information is not wise. The article must be what it is cracked up to be or it will only exasperate.

LATE MILITIA CHANGES

Reorganization of Oxford Rifles—Promotions and Withdrawals.

Permanent Force.—Royal Canadian Regiment — To be lieutenant-colonel and to command the regiment, Major and Brevet-Lieut.-Col. Robinson Lyndhurst Wadmore, vice Buchan, promoted. To be major, Capt. and Brevet-Major Albert Edward Carpenter, vice-Wadmore, promoted.

Twenty-second Regiment, Oxford Rifles — Lieut. R. B. Ross is permitted to resign his commission. Provisional Lieuts. C. C. Caister, A. C. White, W. E. Long and E. L. Odlum are permitted to retire.

Twenty-fifth Regiment — Lieut.-Col. E. H. Caughell is permitted to retire.

Twenty-ninth Waterloo Regiment — Provisional Lieut. E. B. Mallett is permitted to retire. To be provisional lieutenant (supernumerary), Hugh Ernest Reid.

Thirty-second Bruce Regiment—Provisional Lieut. F. Shaw is permitted to retire. To be provisional lieutenants, H. D. Robertson and J. J. Fraser.

Royal Military College—The undermentioned, among others, have been admitted as gentlemen cadets to the Royal Military College: Joseph Athol-stan, Pembroke Marshall, London; Kenneth Broad Richards, Woodstock.

AN AUTUMN WEDDING

Pretty Event at the Home of Mr. and Mrs. John Timms.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Timms on Wednesday evening, Oct. 4, when the marriage of their second daughter, Helen, to James A. Forrest, a prosperous young farmer of Blanchard, took place. Rev. Mr. Rogers, of Thorndale, officiated. The bride, who was daintily attired in a dress of white organdie, trimmed with lace and insertion, and carrying a handsome bouquet of white chrysanthemums and maidenhair fern, entered the parlor with her father, to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Blanche German, of Wellburn.

The young couple, who were unattended, stood under a beautiful arch of evergreens and autumn leaves. After the ceremony had been performed, and congratulations extended, the guests repaired to the dining-room, where a sumptuous repast was served, to which ample justice was done. The dining-room was prettily decorated with bunting and the table with flowers. The many costly and useful presents bore testimony to the esteem in which the bride and groom are held.

Mr. and Mrs. Forrest left on the morning train for Toronto and other eastern points. The bride's traveling suit was of green broadcloth with hat to match. On their return they will reside at their home on the 10th con. of Blanchard.

Wants a Tenor Rooster

New York, Oct. 6.—Wanted—"A Rooster with a Baritone Voice," read an advertisement in a Yonkers paper yesterday.

R. C. Phillips, who keeps a grocery store at No. 205 Elm street, said one of his neighbors had objected to a rooster he owned because it crowed in a tenor key, and had had him summoned to the Court of Special Sessions in the morning on a charge of maintaining a nuisance.

Toronto, Oct. 7. — In the police court this morning James Henry was remanded for a week on the charge of feloniously wounding Robert McWhittor, a plumber's helper. Bail was refused by Crown Atorney Curry, who stated that Mr. McWhittor might die from his injuries. McWhittor, who is quite a young man, was riding his bicycle last night on Avenue road, when he was run down by a team carriage being driven by Henry at a rapid rate. He sustained concussion of the brain and is still unconscious.

THE FALL TRADE IS VERY ACTIVE

Bradstreet's Tell of Conditions in Toronto, Hamilton, Montreal and Ottawa.

Montreal reports to Bradstreet's say: Trade conditions here continue to reflect satisfactory conditions generally and a bright outlook for the future. Some apprehension had been felt regarding the way in which paper due on the 4th of this month would be met as collections have hardly been as good recently, and there had been a number of small failures throughout the country while some country concerns were asking for extension of time or seeking compromises. But serious apprehension was not justified, as in most cases the paper was well met. In some cases complaints have been heard, but the volume of trade at present moving and the cheerful outlook for the immediate future imparts a hopeful tone. Wholesale drygoods men report trade exceedingly active. Orders are large and well assorted. Woolen goods are very firm, and prices are expected to advance. Retail stocks are moving fairly well. Orders for staple lines of groceries are good and general hardware is moving well, with values showing a firm tone. Large orders placed with Canadian manufacturers of steel rails are the first evidences of activity in Canadian railroad building which will have a far-reaching effect upon Canadian trade generally. Markets for country produce here are generally steady. Exports of cattle and apples continue to show a falling off from those of last year while there is an increase in most other lines.

Toronto reports say: The volume of wholesale trade here continues very large and all lines are moving briskly. On the whole, collections are good and there is little complaint heard about the way paper was met on the 4th inst. Activity in the drygoods trade is general. Orders for winter goods are large and there is an exceedingly big demand for carpets. Wools hold very firm. Grocers say their trade compares well with that of any previous year. They are now busy delivering canned goods, the pack of which was generally large, and in every case of fine quality. Exceptionally fine weather has permitted great activity in outdoor industries, and the building trade has profited. The demand for all lines of hardware is brisk and prices are firm. Retail trade is generally active. Farmers are making good deliveries of grain and country produce here, but prices hold up well. There is still a superabundance of poor cattle coming and trade for them is slow. Hog prices have advanced 12½ to 25 cents per hundredweight during the past week. The demand for barley here has been brisk and prices have gone up about 5 cents per bushel. Hides and leathers hold steady to firm. A big trade is being done with Western Canada, orders for all lines of goods from that part of the country being heavy. Western collections are generally fair.

Hamilton trade reports to Bradstreet's say the condition of trade there continues satisfactory. Wholesale houses report a good business in all lines with seasonable orders coming in well. Values generally are steady to firm. Receipts of country produce are large and local industries continue busily engaged.

London reports to Bradstreet's say fall trade continues active. Wholesale houses are meeting a brisk demand in all departments and retail trade here and in the surrounding country has shown some expansion in the past week or so. Collections show a corresponding improvement.

Reports from Ottawa say there is little change in the trade situation there. All lines of goods are moving fairly well, and owing to activity in industrial lines and the successful season which the farmers have had, the outlook generally is bright. Collections are generally fair.

MT. BRYDGES FAIR; A NEW DEPARTURE

Mount Brydges, Oct. 7.—One of the most successful Fairs ever held in Mount Brydges came off yesterday. The show of 1905 marks a new era in the history of this fair. In years gone by the fair was divided. One part consisting of ladies' work, roots, poultry, etc., was exhibited in and around the town hall on Main street, while the horses, cattle and all live stock, were shown in a separate place, and no entrance money was charged to visit the grounds.

This year the directors erected a suitable building on the fair grounds, and had all the exhibits in one inclosure. This is considered quite an improvement, and rightly so, from various points of view, as the management were in a position then to charge the small sum of 15 cents admission to the grounds, and people were better satisfied.

The fine weather, of course, is helping the smaller fairs wonderfully.

In the palace there was a very fine exhibit of ladies' work and fruit.

The roots were excellent, including some very large mangels and potatoes. Mr. Hunter, of Darch & Hunter, placed the awards on all roots and garden stuff, and C. J. Murphy, Avonbank, was judge of dairy products.

The poultry was not such a large class as at some previous fairs, but the quality was good, some fine birds being shown in several classes. The White Leghorns and Black Minorcas were especially worthy of mention. Mr. Thos. Bogue, of Strathroy, was the judge.

Cattle, sheep and hogs ranged about the same as previous years, some very fine animals being shown. C. Simons, of Lobo, was the judge of cattle, and W. H. Beattie, of Pond Mills, ticketed sheep.

There was a nice show of horses, including some good teams in the agricultural, general purpose, and roadster classes. D. A. Graham, Ivan, was first in the agricultural class, with a fine, well-matched span of bays, and Enoch Daniels, of West Williams, was second. In the general purpose class, G. W. Keays, of Hyde Park, was first, with Archie Campbell, of Lobo, second. Neil McLachlan, Ailsa Craig, placed the awards.

The races were hotly contested, and excited much interest. In the three-

The Original Remedy that "kills the Dandruff Germ."

DON'T BLAME YOUR MIRROR

Many ladies compel their mirrors to bear silent witness to needless hair destruction. Day after day they see beauty and attractiveness despoiled by the removal of great combfulls of slightly diseased hair that could be saved. If your mirror could talk it would plead with you to "save your hair—not the combings." It can be done with Newbro's Herpicide, which kills the microbe that causes dull, brittle and lusterless hair, also dandruff and falling hair. Destroy the germ and the hair's natural luster and abundance will return. Marvelous results. An exquisite hair dressing.

A special prize for the best lady driver was awarded to Miss Kennedy, of Ilderton, and the prize for best single outfit, driven by a lady, style and value to be considered, was also won by Miss Kennedy.

A special prize was offered for the best turnout, owned and driven by a farmer living on the farm. This was a large class, and it was very hard to decide who was winner. George Kennedy, of Ilderton, was given first; James Hill, Mount Brydges, second, and Walter Steer, Mount Brydges, third.

E. Douglas and G. A. Scott, London Township, were judges of light horses, and Wm. Collins, London, was judge of the races.

The society should certainly award Mr. Henry Hardy, auctioneer, a gold medal, for the manner in which he called out the programme. He has a voice clear as a bell, and could be heard—well, some say he was heard in Strathroy. However, it might be so, as the wind was in the south.

The Oneida Band furnished the music.

The directors are well pleased, and all feel satisfied that the change already referred to will be beneficial.

All the officers worked hard to make the fair a success. They include: President, E. Trott; first vice-president, A. Graham; second vice-president, J. Brodie; secretary-treasurer, W. E. Sanders; directors, W. A. Trott, R. Sutherland, W. Young, H. Hardy, J. P. Grigg, J. A. McGugan, J. D. Carruthers, G. B. Marshman and D. J. Donaldson; superintendent of grounds, W. A. Trott.

Failure of Landlord to Pay Taxes Takes Away Vote.

London, Oct. 6.—Enthusiastic politicians who live in London flats have just received a severe shock on finding that they may be disfranchised through no fault of their own, but on account of their landlord's misdeeds.

This is the season when revising barristers hear the claims of new voters to be placed on the registry list and re-register old ones. Yesterday flat occupants found that so far as their votes were concerned they were at their landlords' mercy.

Non-payment of rates is a disqualification for the franchise and as rates are included in flat rents the tenants of one landlord yesterday found themselves struck off the register, as the landlord had not paid his rates from the 15th to the 23rd of July.

The tenants pleaded that they had actually paid their rates in rent, but as the landlord had not handed them over the revising barrister pointed out that from the community's and the law's point of view, the rates had not been paid.

Food Value of Chocolates.

Medical opinion on various food values seems to move in cycles. For many years confectionery was condemned as a fruitful cause of indigestion and various stomach ills. Now it is recognized that nothing is more nourishing and sustaining than good pure confectionery and chocolates. Absolute purity of materials used and the cleanliness in making, however, are prime essentials.

Stewart's Chocolates and Confectionery are pure, wholesome and delicious. Nothing but the best of materials and purest fruit extracts are allowed to enter the Stewart factory. From top to bottom the factory is a model of cleanliness and neatness. It is situated in a large open space and having light on all sides is airy and well ventilated.

Stewart's Chocolates are a purely Canadian product. Canadian workers only are employed under the direction of experts. From the extremely attractive boxes in which Stewart's Chocolates are put up are Canadian-made and do them credit.

Stewart's Chocolates and Confectionery can be had from retailers everywhere in Canada. If you ask for the best they will tell you it is "Stewart's."

A story full of heart interest and comedy is told in "On the Bridge at Midnight," Klimt and Gazzolo's famous success, which is at the Grand this afternoon and evening at popular prices. A blind mother and her only child are prominent characters. The child is stolen and the mother makes a long, sad search for it. The doings of Germany, the professor, arouse frequent laughter, and Reddy, the newsy, brightens the play. Tears and laughter often follow in quick succession, and one of the main incidents involves the jackknife bridge which opens as a ship passes through the draw in full view of the audience. This realistic setting and the acting of the strong company which Messrs. Klimt and Gazzolo have provided this season makes this attraction one of the best on the road.

In Gismonda, Melbourne MacDowell, who comes to the Grand on Monday next, has one of the best characters in all dramatic literature in his keeping. He plays the part of Almerio, the falconer to the Gismonda, Duchess of Athens, with Miss Charlotte Deane. There never was a more intense love story written than Gismonda. Victorien Sardou has for the last 20 years been the head and front of the best dramatic school of France. The play calls for some fifteen supporting characters and a large body of auxiliaries, all of which will lend distinction to the forthcoming performances. The other great play that Mr. MacDowell presents on the present trip is "Fedora," with Mr. MacDowell in the part of Loris, which he played with singular distinction to the Fedora of Fanny Davenport, who in her time was the leading tragedienne in America in the Sardou plays. It is of record that Miss Davenport staged "Fedora," "Gismonda, "The Empress Theodora" and "La Tosca" in a manner that distanced anything seen in all the world in her time. Much of this scenery and these properties were so elegantly constructed that they have survived the use of many seasons, and in the present instance, in "Gismonda" and "Fedora," the theatergoers of London will have the advantage of an inspection of the most beautiful stage drama now at the public disposal. The company numbers some 25 actors and actresses, all of whom have played with Mr. MacDowell all last season, and know his style, and in consequence most highly interesting presentations of these famous plays stand in prospect. Mr. MacDowell's engagement here is for two performances only, namely Monday and Tuesday evenings next, when "Gismonda" and "La Tosca" will be presented respectively.

MR. GUS ARTHUR.

Pierce Kingsley, the young Canadian author, has written a play that meets the demands of all theatergoers. It is real and not a trashy play, abounding with touches of nature, clean wholesome comedy, startling stage effects, powerful dramatic scenes and good specialties. It will be seen at the Grand on Saturday, Oct. 14, matinee and night. The title of this interesting production is "Deserted at the Altar."

If next week's bill at Bennett's Vaudeville Theater does not surpass any bill as yet offered at that popular resort, then Manager Bennett will be deeply disappointed. And indeed, on paper, the list of stars secured by Mr. Bennett warrant the good opinion he has of his next week's attractions.

A sketch worthy of the name is always acceptable to all classes of theatergoers, and knowing this, Mr. Bennett has secured one which will be sure to prove a hit with his patrons. It is none other than "Bill Casey, Burglar," which will be presented by Horace Vinton and Eda Clayton. It is a laugh from start to finish—a wholesome, legitimate comedy playlet, fresh and crisp—one that is sure to please all.

The Clarence Sisters are also featured on next week's bill. They are known as the cleverest sister team on the stage today. They dance gracefully, with ropes, and, according to the criticisms of American papers, they possess voices of a very rare quality.

A very fine comedy musical act is that of Bryant and Saville. They were here last season at Bennett's, and their return engagement will be greeted with pleasure by patrons of the house.

Another splendid sketch which will be presented is that known as: "A Fair Musketeer," which will be put on by Haight and Dean. It is a lively little comedy, full of bright lines, and bubbling over with humor.

Somewhat of a novelty will be the Swede comedy turn of Hall and Colborne. Wherever presented the turn has won popular favor, and that Londoners will appreciate it may be taken for granted.

Besides these splendid acts the bill will include Martinette and Sylvester, the famous comedy acrobats; Billy Hines, the well-known trick clog-dancer and pleasing vocalist, and the "D's and D's," a clever singing and dancing duo. The latter carry a wardrobe second to none on the vaudeville stage today.

Then there will be the moving pictures showing the leading characters in the famous peace conference at Portsmouth, when the war between Japan and Russia was settled. This film is a very costly one, and it will be sure to make a great hit with the public.

Special overtures will also be played by Prof. Stevens' fine orchestra, and as a whole next week's bill should prove the best as yet offered at Bennett's Vaudeville.

This afternoon and tonight Manager Bennett has arranged for a reception at the Vaudeville Theater for all the children who attend the performances. The little ones will be allowed to go on the stage and they may fondle the trick pony Don to their hearts' content.

The play with one of the best titles any of the dramatists have made use of in many years, namely, "The Woman in the Case," will be seen at the Grand Opera House shortly, with the famous dramatic actress Blanche Walsh at the head of the cast. This is the latest of the Clyde Fitch dramas, and was voted by the public and critics of New York as being the best of the many popular successes contributed by this prolific author. The scene is laid in New York and its action is supposed to be of the present time. There are four scenes, two of them representing sumptuous interiors reflecting the luxurious homes of New York's 400. Managers Wagenhals and Kemper will carry the complete production on tour just as seen for four months at the Herald Square Theater, New York City.

It may take more than one swallow to make a summer, but one summer has been enough to "make" Elsie Janis. She went into New York city last spring as little known as the average vaudeville artist, whose light has long been hidden under the bushel of continuous performance. In a night she became famous; in a week she was the reigning Broadway favorite. At the beginning of the summer she accepted an engagement at the Wistaria Grove on top of the New York Theater, and remained three months. At the end of that time she went on the road as firmly established in the ranks of stardom as though she had been struggling for recognition for years. One summer in New York did the trick, and now she has her name in the biggest, blackest type, the star dressing room and all the calcium. "The Little Duchess" with Miss Janis in the title role is announced for the Grand Opera House at the latter part of the present month.

In Bernard Shaw's new play, "Major Barbara," Miss Annie Russell will play the part of an American heiress who falls under the sway of the Salvation Army and eventually rises to the rank of "major." Her sweetness, sincerity and zeal, win many converts, including a prizefighter, who attacks her in revenge for losing his sweetheart — another adherent gained by the "major." But he in turn is won over by the influence of Barbara, and as penance, he remorsefully challenges another and much superior fighter, knowing that he will be very severely mauled in the encounter. But he finds that this champion of "the ring" has also been "converted," and will mete out to the penitent no punishment more severe than sitting upon his head while he offers prayers for the descent of grace upon his vanquished and repentant brother.

BRYANT AND SAVILLE.
In Their Latest Great "Start Me," at Bennett's Vaudeville Theater Next Week.

HAIGHT AND DEAN,
Presenting a Comedy Sketch, Entitled "A Fair Musketeer," at Bennett's Vaudeville All Next Week.

The Shuberts continue to perfect their circuit, and if the record of the current week is continued they will soon have houses in all the principal cities of the country for the presentation of their attractions and those of their allies, David Belasco, Harrison Gray Fiske, Frank L. Perley and John C. Fischer. To Washington, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Pittsburg, Kansas City and a few other cities they have added Cincinnati, Detroit, Richmond, Va., and Norfolk. One of the members of the combination said this week: "We are determined to have a house wherever the business seems to warrant it, if we have to build them ourselves. We have the backing and the attractions, and already have won the fight against the syndicate."

News from London says that Mrs. Lily Langtry is to pay another visit to the United States, perhaps early next year. She is first to make a theatrical tour of South Africa, and then come to New York. She has, it is said, been offered a guarantee of $1,500 a week by an American manager, name not mentioned. I also learn that Miss Annie Russell is to present Bernard Shaw's new play, "Major Barbara," at the Court Theater in London in November. The play is devoted to a Salvation Army lassie, and was to have been presented by Eleanor Robson.

George Ade has met failure and said: "Howdy, glad to make your acquaintance." Failure is something new for Ade—and yet, for the sake of the experience, he is not sorry—and besides the oat crops of Indiana broke all records this season, and no matter what Savage and the critics do to Ade he is happy.

Ade's first failure has been recorded. There are discussions as to whether "The Bad Samaritan" failed because it was bad or because certain theatrical powers wanted it to fail; but, regardless of the question at issue, Ade takes a philosophical view of the matter.

"Drew is the wittiest man I ever met," he said. "He is never at a loss. In any crisis, any emergency, his wit saves him.

"Once, in his youth, he forgot his lines in a Sheridan comedy.

"He looked impatiently at the prompter. The prompter's lips moved, but Drew could not make out what the man said. So, he muttered, 'Louder, prompter. Louder!' And a murmur came to him, but it was a murmur which he could not understand.

"In this crisis many a man would have given himself up for lost. Not so Mr. Drew.

"'I will return anon,' he said, and stalked off to read up his part.

The Gossip of the Stage From New York Rialto

[Special to The Advertiser.]

New York, Oct. 6. — De Wolf Hopper has rarely if ever been seen to such advantage in New York as in the current week's offering, "Happyland," at the Lyric Theater. The lofty comedian with the resonant voice was received with a tumult of acclaim on the opening night, and his work was constantly applauded and otherwise vociferously indorsed by an audience that filled every inch of space in one of the largest of the metropolitan theaters. There can be no doubt about the hit registered by star, company and play, all three blending their separate values into a whole that amounted to a triumph. "Happyland" is the work of Reginald De Koven and Frederic Ranken. Prior to its New York presentment it had enjoyed a run of unusual length and distinction in Boston, where it had been rounded into perfection of detail and complete smoothness of outline. I have no doubt that it will continue to attract and highly amuse large gatherings at the Lyric for a considerable time to come. Indeed, it would by no means surprise me if "Happyland" were to run until the holidays, or perhaps longer. The story of the piece is that of a petty monarch who promises the hand of his unborn son in marriage to the unborn daughter of a neighboring sovereign. But the child of the first king proves to be a daughter and that of the nearby potentate turns out to be a son, whereupon complications absurdly droll, as they are innumerable, arise, and the fun progresses at a high rate, both as to speed and temperature. Mr. Ranken's work upon the libretto is the best that I remember in association with his pen, and Mr. De Koven's score is beyond all measure the strongest, most finished and most graceful he has given us since "Robin Hood." The overture and opening chorus are especially impressive and musicianly. They are interpreted by a carefully-chosen orchestra, almost classic in quality, and on the opening night the instrumentalists evoked ardent plaudits by their brilliant illustration of the composer's theme. Mr. Hopper's interpretation of the chief role in "Happyland" was characteristic and fairly saturated with the comedian's individual humor. It will easily rank with the same player's "Wang" and the best of the other stage pictures he has given us during his long and faithful career. Chief among his supporting forces in "Happyland" are the petite and attractive Marguerite Clark, the grotesquely funny Ada Deaves, the fine-voiced John Dunsmuir and a number of other notably talented principals, backed by a chorus which vocally and in point of comeliness is worthy of commendation.

The only other opening of Monday was the revival of "One of Our Girls" at the Fifth Avenue Theater, by Mr. Proctor's all-star stock company, headed by Amelia Bingham, Charles Richman, J. H. Gilmour and Charles Dixon. Mr. Proctor's venture into the domain of production management has been so daring, and so utterly regardless of possible disaster as to attract earnest attention in his direction. He has demonstrated beyond any question of doubt that it is easily possible to draw profitable results from an immensely costly organization at a material reduction of the prevailing prices of admission on Broadway. Mr. Proctor's highest charge at the Fifth Avenue Theater is a dollar and a half, and his company is quite the most expensive that has ever been seen in America in connection with stock revivals. These are conducted upon lines of the utmost liberality in the matter of scenery and other adjuncts, and they have served to draw crowds so far in excess of the capacity of this large playhouse as to compel the turning away of great numbers of persons from every performance, afternoon and evening. "One of Our Girls," which, as a play, seems rather behind the times, is so admirably performed in all its roles as to fully satisfy the densely-packed spectators.

Another sensation of the week must be credited to Mr. Proctor in the vaudeville debut of the rarely radiant Lillian Russell at the Twenty-third Street Theater. Press agents usually lie about the emoluments of the stars they draw away from the "legitimate" stage to the vaudeville palaces, but there is no falsehood, nor even a stretching of the truth, in the declaration that Miss Russell during her twenty-weeks' period as an attraction under the Proctor standard receives the extraordinary compensation of three thousand dollars a week. In return for this large wage Miss Russell appears twice a day, singing two or three songs upon each occasion, and arraying herself in garb beside which that of Solomon in all his glory would be a mere two-spot by comparison. In physical charm, Miss Russell is as brilliantly dominant as at any point in her career, and in vocal delight she shows not the slightest mark of deterioration. She will be a great attraction to the Proctor temples, drawing from the very best element of social life. The Twenty-third Street Theater has been filled at every performance thus far since her first appearance with audiences mostly in evening dress, many of the members there of doubtless until now total strangers to the world of vaudeville.

Henry E. Dixey, in Miss Furniss' dramatization of "The Man on the Box," was Tuesday evening's revelation at the Madison Square Theater, where he was received by an audience-room full of earnest admirers. Mr. Dixey has been one of the prime favorites of this metropolis from the old "Adonis" days, when he broke all then existing records with his memorable run at the Bijou Theater. Since then Dixey has contributed many highly artistic portraitures to the stage of his time, and has become recognized as one of the brightly shining lights of his profession. In "The Man on the Box" he plays the part of a young fellow who is madly chasing a girl with whom he has fallen in love, but cannot approach, assumes the place of her coachman in order to be near her. This brings him into contact with life below stairs and leads to a great deal that is of the most amusing kind. In the end, of course, the adventuresome young chap wins the bride of his choice and resumes the place that belongs to him in the social world. Dixey's work is admirable, wholly admirable, and that of his associates is generally satisfactory. Carlotta Nillson, Fred W. Peters, Sidney Booth and Marie Nordstrom may be mentioned in terms of praise for the quality of the assistance Mr. Dixey derived from them.

Liebler & Co.'s munificent production of Hall Caine's "The Prodigal Son" after its current run at the New Amsterdam Theater will be taken for a brief tour through a few of the other large cities and will then be brought back to New York for a more extended stay. The author has quite largely rewritten his manuscript since his arrival in New York and has greatly strengthened it in most of the stirring situations. The work is now as satisfactory to him as the London presentation, the enormous success of which may be realized from the fact that last week's receipts at the Drury Lane Theater were not less than twenty thousand dollars. "The Prodigal Son" is now being made ready for production in Paris, Stockholm and Copenhagen, and it promises to be the most widely presented play at one time that the world has ever seen.

At the Hippodrome they are announcing the last few weeks of "The Raiders," but the term is of such elasticity that the great military spectacle, with its plunging horses and otherwise hitherto unknown effects, may be continued for a considerable time to come. In any event, it seems assured that "A Yankee Circus on Mars," which, aside from its merits, pictorial and otherwise, enables the introduction of novelties of all descriptions, will not be disturbed in its position upon the hill before midwinter, and possibly not at all during the entire season. The Hippodrome hereafter will be open the year around. The cooling apparatus installed in this establishment at extraordinary expense is now a demonstrated success. Even on the hottest nights of the tail-end of summer the thermometer never registered above 70 degrees inside the Hippodrome gates.

George C. Tyler, managing director of the Liebler corporation, is off for Europe, mainly to receive the manuscript of the new play which Eleanor Robson is to produce at Daly's Theater along toward the new year. Mr. Tyler does not reveal the author's name, and will go no further than declaring him to be one of the most famous playwrights now before the public. The abrupt withdrawal by Gerge Bernard Shaw of the drama he had written for Miss Robson, for the sole reason that the young actress declined to give up a profitable American tour and cast her company adrift in order to play for a very few weeks in his piece in a little London Theater to a sure loss, has quite naturally piqued Mr. Tyler, but has not found him off his guard. His star is not likely to suffer in prestige through the change of authors.

The heated newspaper discussion that has arisen over James K. Hackett's production of "The Walls of Jericho" at the Savoy Theater has had the quite unusual effect of drawing greater crowds than could squeeze themselves into the playhouse named. Usually when the critics are as widely divided as in the present instance (a part of them say the drama is the best ever, when the others declare it is the merest trash) the public stays away. But this time it seems a certainty that Mr. Hackett's stay at the Savoy without change of bill will be continued far beyond the term of his most sanguine expectations.

Although Thompson & Dundy have thrown the veil of secrecy about the contemplated alterations to be made at Luna Park during the coming winter, at a cost of considerably more than $100,000, it is ascertained from an inside source of information that one of the new features for next season will be a tremendous spectacular production, involving the services of fully 1,000 dancers, principals and supernumeraries. This great show piece is to be under the direction of a man whose name has long been famous in connection with large undertakings in the spectacular field in Europe as well as in America. A part of Luna Park is now being cleared for the erection of an enormous stage and an amphitheater that will seat 10,000 spectators at one time. A big lake, it is understood, will form a part of the equipment.

Grace George and her supporting company, under the stage as well as the business direction of William A. Brady, began on Monday the rehearsals of "The Marriage of William Ashe," a dramatization of possibly the most popular novel of the time, in which Miss George is shortly to begin her annual starring tour in Philadelphia. H. Reeves-Smith, an exceedingly capable actor of English origin, has been engaged as Miss George's leading man, and the entire company has been selected with the utmost care by Mr. Brady, whose gift for organizing strong and evenly-balanced casts was long ago demonstrated.

What Dodd's Kidney Pills Did for H. M. Spears.

Thought He Would Have To Stop Work, But the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy Made Him Strong and Active.

Antigonish, N. S., Oct. 6. — (Special.) —Mr. H. M. Spears, a well-known farmer living near here, is shouting the praises of Dodd's Kidney Pills. "When I came to Nova Scotia about six years ago," says Mr. Spears, "I was so troubled with backache I began to think I could not attend to business. However, I got a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills and was able to attend to work.

"I had not taken enough to root the kidney disease out entirely, however, and the following winter I was troubled with pains in my back and limbs. Then I got more of Dodd's Kidney Pills and after using three boxes all my pains and lameness left me.

"I can't say too much in favor of Dodd's Kidney Pills. They put me in a way to attend to business after two doctors had failed. I was a cheesemaker for years, but now I am a farmer with a good strong back."

Lame back is the first symptom of Kidney Disease. Cure it with Dodd's Kidney Pills and you will never have Bright's Disease.

IN TIME OF STRESS

By Suse Clements Willis.

"Money may be a foolish obstacle," declared Clarendon, "but it is a very real one, nevertheless."

"I don't see why a few thousands should make such a difference, Jack," objected Margaret. "Money isn't everything, you know."

Clarendon smiled, but made no answer. He was thinking what a great deal money was, when one loved the daughter of a banker and was himself a clerk in that very banker's offices.

He wondered how Jerome Sewell had come to invite him to spend his vacation with the family, in spite of the old friendship between Sewell and Clarendon's father. He had been shown all too plainly in the office that Sewell's money was built into an impassable barrier about the financial magnate.

"A penny for your thoughts," Margaret's voice broke in.

"I was wondering," he laughed insincerely, "how far it was to Spain. I have castles there, but I cannot reach them."

"The boat is headed the wrong way," she smiled back, with a glance at the pocket compass she had placed on the seat beside her. "We are more likely to hit the north pole."

"And as likely to reach that, as my castle," he added.

Margaret looked at him a moment. "Jack," she asked carelessly, "if we should upset, what would you do?"

"Sink," he answered promptly. "I can't swim."

"Neither can I," she confessed. "I should hate to upset. It's so far from shore."

"I did not realize how far we had come," the man admitted, with a glance at the distant sands.

"Sit very still," he suggested, "and we won't upset."

For a few minutes he pulled at the oars without a word, then Margaret looked up. "Jack," she asked, "what would you do if you were out in a boat like this with the woman you loved and were afraid to propose to?"

"I don't think I would propose, if I were afraid to," he answered promptly, searching her face. Margaret was merely impersonally interested apparently, and he wondered what had induced this odd chain of speculation.

"I meant if you knew you were going to die," she amended. "Would you tell her then that you loved her?"

"Yes," he said slowly. "It would not matter then, and there would be some comfort in the telling, even on the brink of eternity."

"I just wondered," remarked Margaret. "Sometimes I like to wonder what would happen if things were different."

"I hate to think about it," he admitted. "Things might be so much worse."

Margaret occupied herself with the line that trailed over the stern and furnished an excuse for the excursion. Clarendon, thinking of what might be, if things were different, bent to the oars to forget the griping at his heart.

Margaret discovered that the bait had been nibbled from the hook, remedied this, and then, with a cry, pointed to the bottom of the boat.

"Is it a leak?" she asked fearfully.

"I guess not," he answered cheerfully. "Better bail out, though," and he caught up the leather scoop.

For several minutes he worked regularly, but the water gained upon him and with a despairing look he turned to the girl. She sat in the stern apparently unconscious of their danger.

"Can't you get it dry?" she asked.

He shook his head. "The water seems to be coming in faster than I can get it out."

"Then it's useless to bail," she said, calmly. "Do you think the oars will support us?"

"The boat will not sink," he suggested. "It will merely become submerged."

"No," she gasped, "this is a steel boat. As soon as the water fills it it will go right to the bottom."

Clarendon seized the scoop and began to bail with redoubled energy, but to no purpose. Margaret stopped him.

"Jack," she said softly, "is there anything you want to say before——" she paused significantly.

"I am afraid there is no hope for us," he said softly. "We are out of sight of the house and there are no boats about. You asked a little while ago if I would reveal my love in time of stress and I said it would be a comfort.

"I could never have hoped to win you, Margaret, but I have loved you, dear, for years. Had it not been for your father's money I should have told you, long ago."

He followed her glance at the water. It was rapidly rising now. "May I kiss you once—before we go?" he asked.

Their lips met in a long caress. To Clarendon it was at once a kiss of acceptance and renunciation. In a few minutes they would be struggling in the water; then it would close over their heads and all would be over. He drew back and caught her golden head in his hands—only to look into laughing eyes.

"Jack," she said tenderly, "you had to be frightened into proposing or you never would have confessed your love, dear, forgive me."

"What do you mean?" he cried. For a moment he thought that fright had crazed her.

"It will be a great deal easier to handle father than it was to handle you," she laughed. "I just had to make you speak, so I kicked the plug out of the bottom. It's to drain the boat, when she's on the beach. Anyhow, there are air-tight compartments at either end, and the only danger was that my scheme would not work."

"And you did it on purpose?" he asked.

"To create a 'time of stress,'" she admitted.

Stretchable Paper.

Prior to the invention of stretchable paper there had been no way of increasing the resistance to strains of the heavier grades of paper except by the use of better and more expensive stock or by making a heavier, thicker paper. In such cases, however, the paper is practically unyielding, and is, therefore, liable to rupture when put under sudden sharp strains. Stretchable paper for wrapping or packing purposes is entirely new, although the paper itself is more as less familiar in the crepe wall papers that had such a vogue a few years ago. It is claimed that a paper in which are formed fine, deep and tight creases or wrinkles, which enable the paper to stretch under strain so that the paper will not break, permits of the use of cheaper paper stocks, and economizes their use. The improved paper is readily produced. A suitable finished paper is passed through a saturating bath, such as water, and is thoroughly wetted. This paper is then deposited upon a smooth-surfaced roller, to which it is made to closely adhere, and is carried by this roller against an obstruction which crowds the paper back against itself, thereby forming the crinkles, which are given a permanent set during the drying process. It is asserted that the stretchable feature of crinkled wrapping paper makes it superior to uncrinkled paper made out of paper stock, better in quality and greater in amount.—Philadelphia Record.

A HEAVY PENALTY

Mme. Halevy became more and more accustomed to the presence of the pretty English girl, with her slight, graceful figure and her fair hair, and more than once she said sighingly to her husband:

"Ah, if heaven had only given us a little daughter like that, how happy we should be!"

"I wonder what will become of the poor girls," answered her husband, who was as soft-hearted as his wife. "I dare say, poor children, they will be thrown upon the cold charity of their unfeeling English relations, who have never hitherto taken the slightest notice of them."

And then the worthy couple held a long and deeply interesting discussion, of which Florrie King was the subject.

"Well, we shall see what they propose doing," said M. Halevy in conclusion. "Wait a day or two, and see what will happen before we speak to her."

So the matter was allowed to rest.

It was the day after the funeral that Florrie came into her old friend's room, with tears of real despair and mortification in her eyes.

"Oh, Madame Halevy, Stella has writen to our English grandfather, whom we have never seen, and she says we shall have to go to England to live with him. Poor mamma told her to write to him, she says, and that we are going there if he will take us in."

"My dear child, it may be very much for your advantage to go and live with your grandfather."

"Oh, no, it will be terrible. It is a great empty house, quite in the country, miles from any town—poor mamma has often told us about it; and there is nobody there but this bad-tempered old man. We might as well go into a convent at once."

For Stella, in her wisdom, had thought it better at first to suppress all mention of Mr. Norman Allingham. It was better, Stella argued to herself, and believed herself to be perfectly sincere in her argument—it was better if Florrie were destined to marry her cousin, that she should encounter that young gentleman with a perfectly free and unbiased mind.

Then came Mme. Halevy's coup d'etat.

Taking the young girl's hands imploringly within her own, she told her that if the prospect of going to England was so very dreadful to her, there was yet another plan open to her, if she would only consent to it.

She and her husband were old and childless; they had money enough and to spare; would Florrie remain with them and be their daughter?

Florrie expressed herself surprised and grateful, but she was evidently doubtful. The fact is that the idea of a perpetual existence at Valency, alone with these old people and without Stella, did not at once present itself in very attractive colors to her imagination. Would it not be almost better to go to England? And then Mme. Halevy, seeing that she hesitated, began to paint her scheme in brighter hues.

"My dear, we will live only for your happiness, my husband and I; we will devote ourselves to you. We will leave Valency, if you like, and go to live in Paris. You shall go out into society, and be admired as much as you deserve, my pretty one; and we will find a husband for you who shall be worthy of you. Will that suit you?"

Yes, that would suit Florrie King very well, indeed. Paris, that El Dorado of all French girls—the aim and end of every hope and desire—glittered temptingly before her eyes. To be well dressed, and admired, to go to balls and to drive in the Bois—all that would be delightful to Florrie; decidedly it would suit her very much better than the dull respectability of her grandfather's country house.

For once in her life Florrie was truly and sincerely grateful. She flung her arms about the old lady's neck and embraced her rapturously, vowing to be a daughter to her and her husband, and to love her as a mother, with the prettiest and most grateful manner, and in the best chosen words that could have possibly been selected.

But Stella, when she was told of it, was horrified. What was to become of the scheme of marrying Florrie to her cousin? And how was she to fulfill her mother's dying wishes if her sister persisted in being adopted by the old Halevys?

In vain she argued, and entreated, and prayed — in vain she pleaded her own affection, her own dismay at being separated from her sister, the duty which they both owed to their mother's last desire, and the deference which it was only right they should pay to their unknown grandfather.

Seeing that no arguments had any power to move her Stella at length confided to her sister the scheme which their grandfather had laid out for the future of the two sisters.

"One of them," she told her "was destined to marry Norman Allingham, their cousin, in order that their grandfather might leave the money and the estate together, and at the same time make a sufficient provision for the other sister.

Florrie pondered a good deal over this communication; it evidently produced a great effect upon her.

"Well," she said at last, "it will be best for you to marry him."

"Oh, no," cried Stella, blushing violently. "I assure you that poor dear mamma wished it to be you, Florrie." She would not have owned to her sister that she had already seen and refused her cousin, and that it was he who was the hero of the fancy dress ball adventure for the whole world.

"I might not like him," demurred Florrie. "Why should you not have your chance?"

Stella could not confess to her that the chance had been already hers and that she had lost it.

"Well, I will tell you what I will do," said Florrie at last; "I will stay with the Halevys for six months in Paris, and then I will come over to England and join you. In that way I shall be able to see if the Halevys can find me a suitable husband, as they promised to do, and you will see if you care about the cousin; he is probably a dreadful cub, with no manners—and then, if nothing better turns up, I will come over to England and join you. But go to Paris with the Halevys I must, for I shall never have such a chance in my life again."

It will be seen that, for her years of age, Miss Florrie King had tolerably advanced views of life.

"After all, my dear Stella," she added, laughing, seeing that her sister looked rather grave over her worldly-minded speculation—"after all, you and I have got our way to make in the world, and only our faces to do it with. You can tell that old grandfather that I will marry our cousin, if you like; it will not prevent my marrying somebody else meanwhile, if I choose; and since it grieves you so, I will tell the Halevys I cannot live with them for good, but if they will take me to Paris I will pay them a long visit."

And from this determination Florrie was not to be moved.

The Halevys began to make active preparations for moving for several months to Paris at once, for Florrie managed to make them believe that she was so upset by her mother's death that nothing but an immediate change of air would save her from being seriously ill.

It so happened at the same time, that one of the professors at the ladies' college where the two young girls had been educated had occasion to go rather suddenly to England upon a matter of business. This gentleman, who was white-haired and eminently respectable, and had, moreover, a middle-aged wife and several grown-up daughters, offered his services as an escort to Stella, whom he was told was shortly bound to return to her native land.

So good an opportunity was not to be neglected, and Stella made up her mind not to wait for her grandfather's letter, but to start at once for Wrexham.

She bade an affectionate and tearful farewell to her sister and to the Halevys, and set off upon her travels, telegraphing before she did to her grandfather in these words:

"I have found an escort, and am coming to England at once. My sister cannot come; remains in France with friends."

And when Mr. King opened this telegram he was very angry indeed.

CHAPTER VIII.

"One, two, three—one, two, three! B flat, Maud, in the bass; that is the second false note you have played in one line. Please repeat the passage over again."

"How you worry me, Miss Finch," said Maud Dyson shaking her shoulders sulkily.

"Miss Finch, what is seven times six?"

"Miss Finch, how is a fellow to find out the velocity of a falling body by reducing the given time to seconds, and multiplying the height by the square of the number of seconds? It breaks one's head only to think of it!"

"Oh, Miss Finch, who was the King of France who was shut up in somebody else or other in an iron cage where he couldn't stand upright?"

Lily Finch turns round from her place at the piano, where she is superintending Maud's slovenly practice, and tries patiently to answer the three clamoring voices behind her. She forces her mind successively from the multiplication table to the velocity of falling bodies, and then on to the kings of France and their doings. She manages to give some kind of answer to each; but she is not quite sure in her own mind that her answers are right for how is one to be a walking encyclopaedia upon every subject under the sun at twenty years of age, and all for thirty pounds per annum?

She turns back again to the piano, and sighs a little wearily. Willie, Tom and Alice, behind her, go on murmuringly and groaningly with their respective studies, while Maud, the eldest of her pupils, who is fourteen, and torments her more than all the other three put together, strums away more vehemently and blunderingly than ever at the airs out of "Norma."

Lily glances away longingly out of the window, where the sun is shining brightly over the park, and the leafless trees and the white sprinkling of hoar-frost glitters like a shower of diamonds all over the grass. Lily wishes she were free to run out and take a long ramble by herself across the fields.

She is a pretty, graceful girl, with soft, large eyes that have a gentle, pleading look in them, and smooth, brown hair, twisted up into a tight, shining mass of plaits; her sensitive lips have at times a little tremulous quiver that reminds one of a little child in trouble; the lower part of her face is, perhaps, altogether rather childish and weak and wanting in decision, and there is a timid, almost a frightened, expression in her soft eyes.

She looks very frightened just now, as a shadow crosses the window rapidly, and a man's face from without looks hastily into the room out of the sunshine.

"One, two, three," she repeats nervously, concentrating her attention back upon the variations from "Norma." "Maud, dear, do be more careful with those chords in the bass," but her voice shakes a little for all her efforts, and Maud notices it.

"Aren't you children going out this fine morning?"

"Oh Edgar, do beg Miss Finch to let us have a holiday," says Willie.

"Mayn't we have the pony and go to Datchley Woods?" imploringly from Tom.

BEWARE OF LIQUID CATARRH CURES.

Alcohol Holds Out False Hopes.

Catarrh sufferers who have become slaves to liquid catarrh remedies, as soon as they stop the treatment find themselves worse instead of better. These unfortunate victims often learn from their physician for the first time that a liquid catarrh remedy simply makes the mucous membranes drunk, destroys the natural sensations of the parts, deceiving them by false stimulation into the belief that the medicine is helping. Everyone knows that alcohol in any form will deceive. It deceives the head, it deceives the hands, it deceives the feet, but nowhere in the body is alcoholic deceit more apparent than upon the mucous membranes. Catarrh can never be cured by alcoholic deceits and the people are learning to avoid alcohol catarrh cures. Furthermore, they are fast learning that Smith's Triple Cure, handy, efficient and in tablet form, is far better and yields more lasting results. Catarrh sufferers know that while liquid remedies give temporary relief, because the alcohol makes the membranes drunk, such medicines soon intensify their trouble. They become slaves to the alcohol habit as surely by using liquid catarrh remedies as when whiskey is used as a beverage. Smith's Triple Cure not only is free from alcohol, but it actually cures catarrh in every part of the body—dry catarrh, stomach catarrh, bowel catarrh, systemic catarrh, in fact, there is no form of catarrh that Smith's Triple Cure does not cure fully and completely. Have nothing, therefore, to do with alcohol or liquid catarrh remedies, but use Smith's Triple Cure, which consists of four separate preparations, three in tablet form, to be used internally, curing catarrh of the stomach, liver, bowels, pelvis and systemic catarrh, and making rich, red blood, and a catarrh cream used locally, curing catarrh of the head and nasal passages, bronchial catarrh and catarrh of the lungs. A full two weeks' course of the four preparations in one large box, sold at only 50 cents by all dealers, the greatest value for the money ever offered. If your druggist won't supply you, send 25 two-cent stamps by mail today and we will send it postpaid and guarantee safe delivery. Address W. F. Smith Co., 185 St. James St., Montreal.

Daintily gowned in shell pink crepe, Miss Helen Richardson made a most charming hostess at the tea hour on Wednesday afternoon. The event was in honor of Miss Elsie Gordon, a tall, fair belle from Winnipeg, who looked stunning in blue and white silk muslin. The weather was ideal and the country walk from the street railway terminus to St. John's Rectory was most enjoyable, and appetites were whetted for the cosy tea hour dainties so kindly dispensed in the dining-room by Miss Graydon and Miss Helen Harris assisted by Misses Jessie Hale, Marjorie Gibbons and Madeline Pavey. Among the merry group of guests were noted the Misses Allie and Laura Hyman, Annie Scatcherd, Marian MacLaren, Maud Pavey, Helen Gunn, Elsie Gordon, Marian McCallum, Dorothy Betts, May Hague, Hill (England), Louie Puddicombe and Ada Somerville.

Toronto Globe: A pretty wedding took place at the Church of St. John the Evangelist on Saturday afternoon, when Mr. Edward R. Dewart, of Dunnville, the younger son of the late Rev. Dr. Dewart, was married by Rev. Alexander Williams to Miss Julia Ida Blackwell, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Blackwell, till recently resident at Dunnville, Ont. Only the near relations of the bride and groom and a few intimate personal friends were present. The bride wore her traveling gown of blue melton cloth. Her sister, Miss Gwendolyn Blackwell, was bridesmaid, while the groom was supported by Mr. Frank D Fearman, of Hamilton. Messrs. T. Hillhouse Brown and Stanley D. Robinson, of Hamilton, and Mr. Harry C. Rae, of Toronto, acted as ushers. After a recherche luncheon the newly-married couple left for a fortnight's trip to New York, Atlantic City and Washington.

The golf tea at Wolseley Barracks on Saturday last was most enjoyable. An event of the afternoon was a putting contest in which Miss Norah Dann came out victorious. Miss Ada Somerville was the hostess of the day, and among those in attendance were Mrs. Drake, Mrs. Norman Alexander, Miss Tabby Moore, Miss Helen Richardson, Miss Elsie Gordon, Miss Edith Scatcherd, Miss Lillian Puddicombe, Miss Emily Pope, Misses Allie and Laura Hyman, Miss McKillop, Miss Helen Gunn, Miss May McKenzie, Mr. W. Pope, Mr. Robertson, Mr. Little and Mr. Riddle.

Miss Ridout, of Toronto; Miss Edna Kent, Miss Nora Niven, Miss Edith Scatcherd, Mr. and Mrs Raikes, Mr. and Mrs. George King, Mrs. Frank Reid, Mr. Boucher, Mr. Innes Carling and a few others combined to make the tennis courts at Wolseley Barracks on Wednesday afternoon very bright and picturesque. The different sets were so absorbing that the usual afternon cup of tea so kindly dispensed by Mrs. (Major) Carpenter, was neglected.

A very charming English lady, Miss Whitely, who is traveling through the different dioceses of Canada to organize branches of the Girls' Friendly Society, was the guest of Mrs. MacDougall, Wolseley Barracks, this week. On Tuesday evening Miss Whitely addressed a most appreciative audience in Cronyn Hall, and the following afternoon a drawing-room meeting at St. Paul's Rectory, Miss Whitely also addressed the pupils of the Park school on Wednesday morning.

Mrs. (Colonel) MacDougall went down to Toronto on Thursday to spend a few days.

Deaconess Hildegarde von Brockdorf returned on Thursday to St. Mark's Parish, New York, having enjoyed a most delightful visit in London, the guest of Mrs. Beattie, Elmhurst.

Mixed foursomes are on the calendar for next week for members of the London Hunt Golf Club.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hunt and their niece, Miss Nita Hunt, and Miss Brunton, of Newmarket, have returned from a four months' visit to Great Britain and the continent.

Mr. Robertson, formerly of the local staff of the Merchants Bank, has severed his connection with the bank in Montreal in order to accept a splendid post in Seattle. Mr. Robertson spent the past week in town the guest of Rev. George A. and Mrs. Dann, St. Paul's Rectory.

Mrs. Dann, St. Paul's Rectory, has returned home from a long visit in Ireland, where she was the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Arthur Patton.

Condolences are given by his many friends in London to Mr. Kelly Evans on the death of his father, Mr. Evans, at Gortmerron House, County of Tyrone, Ireland, which occurred very recently. Mr. Kelly Evans has met many during his visit in town with Colonel Smith, Belvidere.

Mrs. F. F. Harper and Mrs. Frank Reid will be the hostesses of the golf tea at the Kennels on Monday next.

The St. Catharines Ladies' Golf Club were unable to accept the invitation of the London Hunt Ladies' Golf Club for Thursday last, having previously arranged to play Paris.

A quiet wedding took place in Ottawa on Wednesday afternoon, when Miss Edith Masson Low became the bride of Mr. George Clegborn Mackenzie, of Londonderry, N. S., son of the Ven. Archdeacon Mackenzie, rector of Grace Church, Brantford.

The Morgan-Smallman nuptials are arranged for early in the second week of November.

Several gentlemen members of the Lambton Golf Club, Toronto, came to London today, the guests of the London Hunt Golf Club, and were entertained at luncheon at the Kennels.

Rev. and Mrs. H. B. Ketchen (nee McMahen) who have been spending a short visit with Mr. and Mrs. A. T. McMahen, left yesterday morning for their home in Hamilton.

The engagement is announced of Miss Beryl Mackenzie, only daughter of Major Donald Mackenzie, of Amoy, China, and granddaughter of Col. and Mrs. C. Coote Grant, of Hamilton, to Mr. Irving Thomas, manager of the Standard Oil Company, of Amoy, China. The wedding will take place in March. Miss Mackenzie has many Canadian friends, having spent the greater part of her life in Canada.

Colonel Septemus Denison and Miss Maud Denison leave very shortly for England, where, after a short visit, they will return with Mrs. Denison, who has been spending several months in England.

At Knox Church, Woodstock, on Wednesday afternoon, Miss Annie A. McKee, only daughter of Mr. G. W. McKee, manager of the Bank of Commerce, was married to Mr. G. Temple McMurrich, son of Mr. George McMurrich, of Toronto. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. Dr. McMullen. The bridesmaids were Miss Butler, of Berlin, Miss Ruth McKid, of Toronto, and Miss McMurrich, of Toronto, who has frequently been a bright visitor in London with Miss Olive Peters.

Dr. and Mrs. Alfred Peel, of Edmonton, who have been spending a fortnight's visit with Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Williams, Spruce Villa, leave for Montreal on Tuesday and sail for England on Thursday next.

A wedding of especial interest to the bride's many London friends, was solemnized in All Saints' Church, Ottawa, on Wednesday afternoon—that of Miss Mary Frances Toller, eldest daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Toller, to Dr. James Goldie Cranston, son of Dr. D. G. Cranston, of Arnprior. The Rev. A. W. Mackay, rector of the church, officiated at the service, which was fully choral, special music being rendered by the choir, which preceded the bridal procession. The bride, who was given away by her father, was attended by her sister, Miss Laura Toller, as maid of honor, while her youngest sister, Miss Vera Toller, and Miss May Beddome were bridesmaids. The best man was Mr. Dan McLachlin, of Arnprior, and the ushers were Mr. Guy Toller, of Winnipeg, and Mr. Philip Toller, of Toronto, brothers of the bride; Dr. Howland, of Toronto, and Mr. Godfrey Greene. The bride's robe was of ivory crepe de soie over ivory taffeta, richly trimmed with rare old Honiton lace, which had been worn by her mother at her mariage. She wore a coronet of orange blossoms above a short veil of exquisite old rose pointe lace, the gift of a great-aunt, Mrs. Premridge, who has reached the advanced age of 104 years, and beneath the short veil a long tuelle veil floated behind to the hem of her robe. The Misses Toller and Miss May Beddome were gowned alike in Directoire suits of forget-me-not blue crepe de chine, over pale blue taffeta. The long full skirts were made demi-traine, the Directoire coats which were overlaid with white lace and finished with crepe rosettes and cut steel buttons, opened over a draped vest of the crepe, with a chemisette and jabot of the lace. The skirts of the coats were of lace, bound with the crepe and the full sleeves, overlaid with lace, were caught at the elbow into Directoire cuffs of lace. The hats worn with these unique and handsome costumes were tricorne shapes of pale blue panne velvet and folded blue chiffon. That of the maid of honor was trimmed with three pale blue feathers and those of the bridesmaid's with double Dresden bunches of pink bebe roses, forget-me-nots and heliotrope, separated by fancy buckles. They carried shower bouquets of pink roses with pink satin streamers, and wore the bridegroom's gifts, dainty safety pins with the letters T. and C. in pearls, intertwined. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Beddome, Mr. and Mrs. John Gilmour, Sir John and Lady Grant, Lady Tilley, Mr. and Mrs. Travers (Brockville), Colonel and Mrs. Vidal, Colonel and Mrs. Lyons Biggar.

Miss Florence Harvey, the celebrated lady golfer, of Hamilton, is being much feted in golfing circles in Ottawa.

Mr. and Mrs. Beddome, of this city, stayed at the Russel while in Ottawa.

Mrs. George C. King, of 400 Burwell street, will receive on Tuesday, Oct. 17, instead of Tuesday, Oct. 10.

Practical Modes for Winter Blouses

For Morning Wear the Most Sensible Waist Is of Heavy Wash Material, Which Is Set Off This Fall by Flat Trimmings of Bright Scotch Ginghams, Soutache Braid or Fagoting—New Flannel Materials Are Less Wooly in Texture and Can Be Laundered Without Shrinking.

Fetching Bodices for Afternoon Wear Are Built of Softest Silks in Subtle Colorings—The Surplice Waist Again Finds Favor, But Its Becomingness Lies in the Care With Which It Is Fitted to the Figure.

Two Sleeve Models That Add Distinction to a Separate Blouse and a Few Hints as to Parisian Methods of Trimming With Simple But Charming Effect—Shapely Norfolk Sweaters for Adding Warmth to Thin Waists When Out of Doors.

[By Katharine Anderson.]

Thin waists, both for morning and afternoon, have become an absolute necessity to comfort in steam-heated houses and apartments. To the business woman especially they are indispensable adjuncts in a practical wardrobe.

Performing the daily round of duties in a heavy cloth dress soon leaves the bodice mussed and with none of the clean freshness so characteristic of summer shirtwaists. On the other hand, a light, dressy waist which can be slipped on in a twinkling at the close of the day's work, freshens a woman's appearance without the fatigue of changing her entire costume. These thin blouses, however, have little, if any, warmth in themselves, and even with a heavy winter wrap they are not sufficiently warm for comfort in wintry days out of doors. Consequently the woman who values her health must consider, along with her separate blouses some kind of a jacket to supplement their lack of warmth.

This is especially true of light waists for morning wear. Many of the new models are built in wash material which has merely the semblance of a woolly weave. Even the popular Scotch flannel is now considered most desirable when woven in combination with a goodly supply of cotton. Heavy piques and basket weaves, with or without a fleece lining, are serviceable materials and come from the laundry in immaculate freshness.

In the fashioning of these tub waists, severely tailored effects have given place this fall to flat trimmings, which take the form of stitched bands or braids in self-tone or contrasting color with a finish of pearl or enamel buttons.

One charming model of heavy white pique is set off in a very stunning manner by electric blue Scotch plaid. Outlining a V-shaped neck in sailor collar style, a broad band of the plaid is edged with a fold of pique on either side and extends to the waistline as a wide pleat. A pointed band of plaid turns back over the edge of a stiff mannish cuff, finishing a narrow shirt-sleeve. A smart white dickie laid in fine pleats fills in the neck. Large pearl buttons trim either side of the front pleat of the waist and form links for the cuffs.

Noteworthy among the late importations in flannel are cream and white grounds showing rings or coins embroidered in shadings of one color. Fascinating new plaids are also being displayed, while hair-line stripes and checks, either in black and white or in delicate colorings, are not a whit less popular than they have been for the past year or two.

Most of these flannel waists are finished at the neck with dickies or stiff embroidered turn-over collars. The latter, particularly when they show imported designs, are rather costly, but immeasurably smart.

Two methods of trimming stand out as simple but effective for the flannel shirtwaist. One is a winding line of fagoting up and down the front of the blouses and the sleeves. Starting just at the side of a high chemisette neck, it extends straight down to within two inches of the waistline. There it turns with a wide curve and passes straight up to turn again at a point on a line with the original starting point. From there it runs directly down and loops up under the arm. The other trimming is a narrow wash braid showing coin embroidery. This is employed to outline the opening and yoke of the blouse.

Cashmeres, mohairs and a crepe flannel in subtle coloring are popular materials for the separate blouse not intended for tubbing. Delicate soutache braids trim them, and the sleeve is a most important feature. Simulating the elbow length, a leg o' mutton sleeve of one model is laid in rather deep pleats over the elbow, where it terminates in flaring turnback cuffs that require stiffening to retain their shape. Fagoted strips of the material emerge from this cuff and cover the arm tightly, reaching to the wrist.

Other smart sleeves are gathered at the elbow in bishop fullness and have long, tight-fitting cuffs which appear to button to the upper sleeve just above the elbow, concealing the gatherings.

For dressy use the thin blouse is built in the softest of silks, crepe de chines, chiffons and poplins. Radium silk, which is a cross between taffetas and liberty, has a surface that shimmers with a wealth of shaded lights. Its suppleness renders it especially well adapted to the gathered surplice bodice—a last year's design reappearing with added attractiveness this fall.

This style of waist is remarkably becoming and graceful if it is made with care. It requires, however, a fitted lining, and the gatherings of the material must fit snugly to the figure. To prevent giving a flat appearance the fullness should slope in a curve from the under arm seam.

One instance of a graceful surplice effect is a youthful, exquisite blouse in palest yellow poplin. Extending from the under arm seams the material is fastened at the edge over two small cords. These shape the fullness, which comes to the waistline at the sides and circles around and up about two inches in bolero fashion. Here the four cordings meet and hold the fullness taut quite to the bust line. A pointed girdle finishes front and back. Fine mesh lace, appliqued with pompadour lace insertion, covers a circular silk yoke. Quillings of poplin trim elbow sleeves and yoke, while a circular lace bertha adds a touch of elegance.

To make no mention of black silk waists would be to ignore a woman's favorite separate blouse for dressy wear. Supple weaves of a taffeta and crepe de chine are the most effective of thin black materials. These are combined with insertions and medallions of sheer lace, Chantilly being in particular vogue.

Tuckings of muslin de soie also mingle with delicate laces to form a soft finish for neck and sleeves. If heavy lace adorns black bodices it should be in cream color rather than pure white.

Other dark colored blouses show trimmings of heavy cream lace insertion or bands of flat embroidery. The latter display gold or various jewel colorings, and are so handsome in themselves that they constitute the sole trimming on a waist, and are applied simply and sparingly.

A last word as to the chic waistcoats and jackets that fit under winter coats to support the warmth of a woolen waist. So smart are the knitted garments which have grown out of clumsy sweaters that they frequently are the only wrap worn in first fall days. Stitched bands, and buttons of leather or broadcloth set off the popular Norfolk jacket sweater and make a splendid garment for rough outdoor wear.

FAN ORIGINATED LONG AGES AGO

Feather Fans Still Play an Important Part in Religious Processions in Rome—In Japan Fans Grow.

In an age when evolution is claiming much thought and attention, there is yet to come. I think the writer who will tell us of the evolution of dress, writes Miss Margaret P. Boyle, in the New York Observer. Without a doubt, a history of its changes from the garment fashioned by Mother Eve to a modern Worth creation, would be of sufficient interest to attract many readers. Take, for instance, that simple article the fan. Perhaps no one can tell for how many ages it has been in use in countries where the climate is hot. But it must have been since a very early date, for in the British Museum is to be found a bas-relief of Sennacherib with figures of women attendants carrying fans. And since it was more than seven hundred years before Christ that Sennacherib began his reign in Assyria, fans must be at least twenty-six centuries old.

Like the umbrella, the fan in those days long ago was intended for the use of royalty only, and if one examines the plates of the old Egyptian and Theban sculptures he will see the ancient rulers with their fans. As in the case of the umbrella, however, the fans carried by those old rulers differed greatly from the costly painted articles wielded by society ladies of today. For the fan of three thousand years ago consisted really of a wooden handle, in which were holes for feathers. One of these handles taken from the tomb of Amen-Lotep, of the seventeenth century B. C.—more than a thousand years before Sennacherib—may still be seen in a museum near Cairo, Egypt. In the matter of economy these fans seem to have been an improvement upon our own. Instead of having a fan to match each costume, it would be necessary to have only different sets of feathers to insert in the handle, and the change would be easy.

In India, as well as in Egypt, fans were a symbol of authority, though people of the former country sometimes held them as sacred emblems also. And perhaps from this eastern land was derived the custom, in vogue during the middle ages, of holding fans as sacred, since they were used to keep the flies from the sacred elements during the celebration of the sacrament. These fans were usually rounded, and the fact that silver bells were attached to them must have somewhat distracted from the solemnity of their use. However, that they were an important part of church furnishings is shown by the fact that they were mentioned in the old records of St. Paul's, Salisbury Cathedral and other churches. The custom of using fans for this purpose has long ago passed away, except in some Oriental rites. But feather fans still play a part in the state processions of His Holiness the Pope.

Ancient Roman ladies, like some women of our time, used to consider fans a necessary part of their trousseau. Fans are always so associated in our minds with Japan that one is not surprised to learn that folding fans had their origin in that country. In Japan even the trees grow fans, as you will see if you notice the gingkho tree, largely used in this country as an ornamental shade tree. For you will find each small leaf a perfect fan. This tree in Japan is sacred to the god, Gingkho, therefore our slang phrase "by Jingo" is probably derived from the Japanese oath of by Gingkho. In 1635 the Japanese gave a site on an artificial island in Nippon for the settlement of Portuguese merchants, and had the space laid out in the shape of a fan, signifying an object agreeable for general use.

From Japan the fan soon found its way into China, and in both of these countries it is used by men and women of all ranks. Even workmen may be seen working with one hand and fanning with the other. The Chinese make very beautiful fans of carved ivory, fastening the sticks together with a ribbon, as you have often seen; while the Japanese sometimes show their skill by making the outer sticks of iron beaten very thin and damascened with gold.

Probably the first European women to use fans were the Portuguese, perhaps introduced by merchants from their trade with Japan, though we find mention of their having them in the fourteenth century. In France, the inventory of Charles V. at the end of the same century, mentions a folding ivory fan. Doubtless, the wicked Catherine de Medici, with her knowledge of and love for the luxuries of Italy, introduced fans to her sisters in France. The many wives of Henry VIII. of England, and their court grew into general use about this time in Italy, France and Spain. A regular code of signals was arranged, so that ladies and their admirers were able to carry on a regular fan flirtation. Perhaps it might be easier for an anxious suitor to have his rejection come by means of a fan than to receive a "no, point blank from the mouth of a woman," but an acceptance by means of signals would certainly have its drawbacks.

During the seventeenth century Paris became a great fan manufactory of Europe. The sticks were of wood or ivory, and the parchment mounts were painted by artists of renown. Once Queen Christina ventured a remonstrance to the young ladies of the French court, which so enraged them that their fans grew even more splendid, being set with jewels and mounted in gold. Some of these fans have been preserved, and they were exhibited at an exhibition of fans held in the museum at South Kensington, in 1870.

The great upheaval that came to France with the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, affected fan makers as well as other people, and many were driven from their own country to England and Holland. The Stuart sovereigns welcomed and protected them, so the fan trade in Great Britain was soon well established. India, however, had been sending fans to that country. So a petition was presented to Charles II. asking him to stop the importation of fans from India, and in consequence a heavy duty was levied on Indian fans. During the eighteenth century fans grew very splendid and costly. The sticks of mother-of-pearl were carved with skill, clever artists painted them, circles of glass were set into the sticks, and sometimes miniature telescopes were attached. Often they were mounted with fine point lace. That these fans were highly prized is shown from the fact that the municipality of Dieppe presented one to Marie Antoinette on the birth of her son the Dauphin.

The French revolution put an end to costly fans as well as many another luxury. But since the South Kensington exhibition in 1870, there has been a revival of fan making, and they may now be found in many varieties and in prices to suit any lady's purse.

A BABY CHANGED.

"One could hardly believe the change Baby's Own Tablet have wrought in my child," says Mrs. Angus Morrison, Port Caldwell, Ont. "He suffered terribly while teething, vomiting his food and was weak and puny. One box of Baby's Own Tablets made him a changed child. They eased the pain of teething, strengthened his stomach, and he is now a big, healthy child, growing finely and never sick a day." The experience of Mrs. Morrison is that of thousands of other mothers who have found health for their little ones and comfort for themselves in the use of Baby's Own Tablets. Mothers need not be afraid of this medicine. It is guaranteed not to contain an atom of opiate or strong drug. They could not harm a child of any age, and they are good for them at all ages. NEW HOSIERY IS A FALL EXTRAVAGANCE

In Sheer Weaves and Exquisite Embroideries, It Is Irresistible to the Well-Dressed Woman.

Among the pet extravagances of the well-dressed woman, fancy hosiery takes first place this fall. Time was that the summer supply of stockings, with a little darning and perhaps a few extra pairs of plain black hose, lasted her through the winter months. This year, however, the decided vogue of pumps for housewear, and, the necessity of having the entire costume in harmony, has caused this fastidious woman to discard all the delicately sheer frocks.

Gowns in autumn colorings must have hosiery in the same shades, and this fall even embroideries on stockings must match the handwork that ornaments the dress with which they are worn. So miladi, instead of spreading a large portion of her allowance on fine handkerchiefs or other small accessories, has chosen beautiful stockings as the object of her lavish expenditure.

The new offerings in hosiery are well suited to meet the most exacting tastes. In sheerness and filmy weave they are not a whit less gauzy than summer stockings. Heavy woolen and cotton stockings have become only a memory in the feminine world, and transparency is what the up-to-date woman insists upon above all else even in cold weather. As a consequence, not only silk and lisle thread weaves are of exquisite fineness and delicacy, but less costly hosiery that is within the reach of the average purse, has much the same cobweb appearance.

Embroidery plays a very extensive role in fall hosiery. Quite the newest thing is the stocking showing designs done in English eyelet work. Very delicate patterns are employed, and the effect of the openwork over pink flesh, vies in loveliness with the more elaborate lace weaves. The latter have long been favorites with the woman who does not wear her stockings through quickly. Eyelet embroidery however, combines durability with the same fetching openwork effects.

In the French handwork, self-tone embroideries have taken the place of florid or contrasting colorings. Jewel embroideries in opalescent shadings are sometimes seen in instep motifs, but the one color scheme is by all odds the smart embellishment for hosiery this fall.

Tiny figures in imitation of the various cuttings of precious stones, decorate the fronts of many of the new stockings. Circular disks, both hand embroidered and woven, also stand out from sheer silk and lisle backgrounds. No less fascinating are the miniature flower and leaf designs, such as wee poplar leaves, rosebuds or forget-me-nots. Many of these outline Marie Antoinette garlands. One very stunning ornamentation on a gauze lisle hose shows a vine of tiny leaves and flowers which extends over the instep half way to the knee, in curling branches.

But silk and lisle thread stockings are not alone in their new loveliness. Beautiful embroideries and filmy weaves render cotton hosiery equally as captivating. In fact, many women whose purse admits of the most costly sort, buy very sheer cotton in preference, or have the feet of cotton and the uppers of lisle.

When selecting the winter's supply of sheer hosiery, the cautious woman will look well to two points. Garter knees, that is, a double fold from the opening almost to the knee, prevent fine weaves from tearing out, and a spliced seam at the back of the stocking strengthens the joining and insures against raveling.

Armour's Extract of Beef in the Kitchen.

Armour's Extract of Beef gives a rich flavor of roast beef to hash, stews, ragouts and potpies. It restores to left-over meats the full flavor lost in the first cooking. With Armour's Extract of Beef in the kitchen a soup or sauce is made ready for the table in a few minutes that it would take an hour or two to prepare with fresh meat, and it would not be as good and would cost more.

Don't forget that a 2-ounce jar of Armour's Extract of Beef will go further than an 8-ounce bottle of Fluid Beef. It is therefore less expensive. Use a quarter teaspoonful to make a cup of beef broth, etc., etc.

Of Interest to Brides.

There is an ancient rhyme running in this wise:

Married in white,
You have chosen all right.
Married in gray,
You will go far away.
Married in black,
You will wish yourself back.
Married in red,
You'd better be dead.
Married in green,
Ashamed to be seen.
Married in blue,
You'll always be true.
Married in pearl,
You'll live in a whirl
Married in yellow,
Ashamed of the fellow.
Married in brown,
You'll live out of town.
Married in pink,
Your spirits will sink.

If a bride be very thoughtful and also superstitious she carries a rabbit's foot somewhere about her when married.

May used to be regarded as a desperately unlucky month for weddings, but as it comes at the loveliest season of the year custom and convenience have banished superstition, and now the evil is said to be removed.

In the selection of a day it is interesting to remember the old rhyme which says:

Monday for health,
Tuesday for wealth,
Wednesday the best day of all,
Thursday for crosses,
Friday for losses,
Saturday no luck at all.

It is considered unlucky to change the date of the wedding.

Home Nursing.

Tenderness, in fact, is more called for in convalescence than during acute illness. That the sick room wheels run with apparent ease will be infinitely more grateful to a person in actual pain or discomfort than assurances of undying affection. Instead of smoothing the patient's brow, quietly guard against wrinkles in the under sheet. Instead of "feeling" if the poor soul is feverish or chilly, see that the hot water bottle is hot and properly rolled in a soft towel, or that the ice bag has not sprung a leak. Put your whole mind to disposing the furniture so that yon neither take extra steps in walking around tables and chairs, nor stumble twenty times a day over the same footstool. Set all bottles, measures and medicine droppers in tidy groups, upon large, flat plates, to avoid sticky marks on window sills and table covers. See that no light dazzles your patients' eyes—if necessary, change the head of the bed to the foot. Keep fresh drinking water always at hand, and be sure that no used implements are left about "till someone goes downstairs," also that no half-consumed food is left in sight, destroying appetite for the next meal. In your inevitable struggles with cut flowers no one can help you. Like poor Peggy in "Miss Killmansegg," before the patient is out again many a nurse fairly "hates the scent of roses." You can at least see that no faded ones pollute the atmosphere. In the matter of visitors be very sure that the doctor directs how many may be seen with advantage, and how many at a time, as this may insure an immense saving of discussion.—Success.

LONDON AUTHOR'S LATEST WORK FINDS FAVOR WITH THE CRITICS

Arthur Stringer's Study of Child Life in Lonely O'Malley.

What the Irish Novelist, Alexander McArthur, Says Of It.

Arthur Stringer's latest book, "Lonely O'Malley," a study of childhood, will issue from the presses in a few days. Admirers of Mr. Stringer will welcome in this new work the development of the rich vein which he revealed in "The Loom of Destiny" a few years ago. The advance reviews of "Lonely O'Malley" promise us something worthy of his best powers. So competent a critic as Alexander McArthur (Mrs. Joseph Nicchia), the Irish novelist, now in New York, is among his eulogists. Miss McArthur was born in Dublin in 1872; began her musical studies under Sir Robert Stewart, and left her Dublin teacher in 1886 to attend the Hans von Bulow classes at the Hoch Conservatorium, Frankfort-on-Main. In 1888 she went to study under Anton Rubenstein, remaining there until 1892. As Rubinstein's pupil and confidante, Miss McArthur came to have a familiar knowledge of the great musician's personality, his habits of life, and of the strangely mixed society of musicians, artists and personages of the court and the great world that frequented his house. The knowledge thus gained the author embodied in a biography of Rubinstein, which the great musician accepted as a satisfactory account of his life. Her success in literature has been no less marked than in music. Of Mr. Stringer's latest work, she writes:

"The son of Canada, like the son of Erin, seems destined to win his literary laurels abroad. All our William Yeatses and our George Bernard Shaws leave their beloved Ireland for the dust and tumult of London. All the ambitious young Canadians, it seems to me, at some time or another, try their fortunes in New York. Not that either the Irishman or the Canadian can ever forget his home! He sees it clearer and sings of it sweeter, I maintain, because he views it at a distance. But the call of the metropolis, nowadays, is implacable. The impersonal and disinterested stamp of centralized and nationalized approval must be placed upon him before he can be judged and adjusted. In other words, the provincialism has to be pounded out of him. It is good for the author, and it is good for his country.

"Of the many Canadians who have invaded the United States to win fame—I was going to add 'fortune,' but the two, in these days of the booming of sensational rubbish, seldom go together—few have shown greater versatility than the author of "The Silver Poppy," a very serious book with a very silly title. As a poet, Mr. Stringer's "Hephaestus" at once placed him in the front ranks. His efforts in fiction proved him a past-master of a prose style, rich, pure and exquisite. His studies in Shakespeare demonstrated that his days were not divorced from scholarship. And now, between the covers of his latest volume, 'Lonely O'Malley,' lies a surprise for his followers. For it is as a humorist that this volume brings him forward. It is a quiet and restrained humor, circuitous, kindly, sophisticated, and not that lugubrious mockery of Manhattanese comic weeklies. It is the humor that comes of a fine play of fancy and an intimate knowledge of the pathos and drolleries of all boy life—of boy life dissected for us in a fashion deft, inimitable and laughter-compelling. It is a study of that most complex and interesting of human wonders, a real boy's soul. From the moment in which we first meet this handy-legged, freckled-nosed, sandy-headed Lonely, until the end where we find him an accidental and unwilling hero, he holds our sympathies. Incident is piled upon incident, in almost bewildering abundance. Lonely at home with an inebriate father and a baby sister, bearing the name of Alaska Alice; Lonely disposing of Gilead, the ancient goat that always returned to his former owner; Lonely in love; Lonely in battle—and the book holds the best boy fight I have ever read; Lonely in theft and piracy; but always a Lonely that captivates, and keeps a touch of pity to our laughter, and a trace of admiration in our scorn. He is a fraud and a poseur, a braggart and a pagan, but in some mysterious way Mr. Stringer makes us love this child of his creation. So vital does he stand that one is tempted to ask in how far the drawing of this boy-life is autobiographic. Besides this, too, it is so brimful of those intimate little touches, it is so packed with the prose and poetry of boyhood, it is such a vivid picture of life in a quiet little Canadian river town, that Mr. Stringer will find it hard to dissuade his readers that he knows more of Lonely O'Malley than he cares to say. It is this quiet yet vital directness, without trickery and bombast, which gives worth and life to the book. Of the mawkish sentimentality with which so many writers spoil their studies of child-life, Mr. Stringer's volume shows not a trace. Nor has it the occasional brutality which now and then showed through the surface of his earlier study of children, 'The Loom of Destiny.' It is maturer, more sane and mellow, than that earlier work. It will never be one of the much-advertised "six best sellers," but those fortunate ones who once read it will keep it beside them for a second and perhaps a third reading, just as I always keep my 'Sentimental Tommy' beside me to offset an especially gloomy day.

"The final impression, on putting down 'Lonely O'Malley,' is that the author has not given us quite enough of him, that he has played a trick on us, as it were, by interesting us in a character and a career and then suddenly dropping the curtain on the scenes. In other words, I think I am pretty safe in prophesying that Mr. Stringer's readers will not allow Lonely O'Malley to remain an unexplained enigma and an undeveloped young barbarian. We want to know what becomes of him later. We long to find out, even as the preacher's wife did, what he would be ten years later. We are too interested in him to say good-bye to him so early in the day. Some time, I repeat, he will have to be reintroduced to us. Sequels, I know, are dangerous things, but I think more readers than one would run the risk, just to find out what Lonely's ultimate fate may be.

HOW TO MAKE TASTY MEAT PIES

There Is No Better Method for Making a Small Quantity of Meat Go a Long Way.

Making a small amount of meat go a long way is a problem for the housewife in these keen October days. The family comes in from the biting autumn air with a good-sized appetite, and a service of roast or chops that causes the butcher's bill to mount well into the dollar's sign, seems hardly adequate. Offered in the form of a pie, a much smaller quantity is sufficient for just as many persons, and the crust forms a wonderfully delicious accompaniment.

To be appetizing, however, crust must be prepared with as much care as for the ordinary sweet pie, and it should never be placed over the dish to be baked until the meat is thoroughly cooked. Four different kinds of crust may be used on top of the pie.

Suet Paste—Place two cups of flour sifted with one teaspoonful of baking powder, in a mixing bowl. Add one cup of suet freed of skin, and chopped very fine and dredged with flour, also one-half teaspoonful of salt. Mix into a rather firm dough with one cupful of ice water.

A potato crust is made as follows: Boil and mash twelve sound white potatoes. Add two tablespoonsfuls of cold butter, one-half cupful of milk or cream and one teaspoonful of salt. With pastry flour, make a dough which can be rolled out.

Plain Crust—Rub into three large tablespoonfuls of sifted flour, one large tablespoonful of cold butter, a pinch of salt, and mix with sufficient cold water to form a stiff paste.

Biscuit Dough—Rub one tablespoonful of lard into one quart of flour. Add one teaspoonful of salt, and then, slowly, one-half pint of milk and water mixed, stirring as your pour in the liquid until you have a hard, almost dry dough. Put the dough on a floured board and knead continuously for fifteen minutes. After this, beat it, folding continually, for at least twenty minutes. Roll out half an inch thick.

For baking a meat pie, a deep pudding dish is most satisfactory. These come in fascinating blue and white ware, as well as the popular brown, glazed porcelain, and can be sent to the table with or without a folded white napkin tied around them.

Beefsteak Pie—Cut two pounds of round steak into cubes an inch square, and place in the baking dish with one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, one chopped onion, a teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper. After removing the skin from a quarter of a pound of suet, chop it fine, and add gradually one cup of flour and a pinch of salt, with sufficient ice water to moisten. Do not allow the crust to become wet. Knead for a moment, and roll out in a thin sheet to cover the baking dish. The suet crust given above may be substituted for the one just given. Now cover the meat with a gravy made from two cupfuls of hot water thickened with a tablespoonful of flour and one of butter. Cover with the crust and bake for one and a quarter hours. This is one instance where it is better to bake the crust with the meat, as the steam rising from the gravy permeates the crust and gives it a delicious flavor.

An Especially Fine Chicken Pie—Prepare the chicken as for fricassee. Stew until tender, season well and drain off the gravy. Thicken the latter with a tablespoonful of flour. Remove the bones from the chicken, and add the meat to the gravy. Line a baking dish with the biscuit dough given above. On this place part of the chicken meat, a few lumps of butter, a dash of pepper and the same of salt. Slices of cold boiled egg can also be added to advantage, and cubes of potato. Pour over whatever of the gravy remains and cover with the biscuit crust, making a hole of good size in the center. Brush the top with beaten egg and bake for three-quarters of an hour.

Veal Pie—Put small pieces or slices of veal into a stewpan with sufficient water to cover. Add a tablespoonful of salt and set on the fire to boil. Remove the scum as it rises to the top. As soon as the meat is tender, turn it out to cool. If thoroughly cooked, the bones will fall away from the meat and they should be removed. Line the baking dish with pie paste and put in a layer of the parboiled meat. Season with bits of butter and pepper, and dredge with flour until it looks white. Continue these layers until the dish is nearly full. Now pour over it the juice in which the meat was boiled and put on the upper crust. Bake for an hour. Corned pork, cut in slices, may be cooked with the veal, or even slices of sweet ham.

Pork Pie—Cut 2½ pounds of the thick end of a loin of pork into three-inch slices. Place a layer at the bottom of a baking dish. Add a sprinkling from a handful of parsley and one onion chopped finely, and a dusting of pepper and salt. The next layer of pork should have a similar seasoning, with an addition of a little grated nutmeg. When the dish is full, cover with a cupful of hot water and a spoonful or two of catsup. Place a tin cover over the dish and allow it to bake in the oven for at least an hour and a half. Baste occasionally, and when the meat becomes tender remove from the stove and put on a cover of puff paste. Return to the oven and bake until brown.

Pigeon Pie—Stuff six pigeons with the following dressing: Take some of the inside of a loaf of bread and let it stand in tepid water for just a minute. Now squeeze dry and hard with both hands. When the water is quite pressed out, season with salt and pepper, a bit of sage and a teaspoonful of summer savory. Work well together. As soon as the pigeons are stuffed, loosen the joints with a knife, but do not separate them. Put in a stewpan, cover with water, allowing them to cook until tender. Season with butter, salt and pepper, thicken the gravy and remove from the stove to cool. Line the sides of a pudding dish with a rich puff paste. Add the meat in layers, alternating with slives of hard-boiled eggs. Cover with paste and bake.

A recipe which may be used for quail or woodcock is the following: Clean half a dozen birds well and split them in half. Boil with one quart of water and remove the scum as it rises. When tender, add salt, pepper, a bunch of minced parsley, one onion and three cloves. Now cut up quarter of a pound of salt pork in cubes and boil again with the birds, being sure that all the meat is immersed in water. This should be placed in a pudding dish lined with a thick crust. Pour over it the gravy browned and let it boil up. Stir in a piece of butter, cover with an upper crust and bake a golden brown.

Pies Made from Cold Meat—Tomato meat pie utilizes the scraps left from veal, beef or lamb. Cover the bottom of a pudding dish with bread crumbs. Chop cold meat very fine and place a layer over the crumbs, followed by a layer of sliced tomatoes and a seasoning of salt, pepper and butter. Repeat until the dish is full, having bread crumbs for the top. Place bits of butter over it and bake one hour in a slow oven.

WHEN PHYSICAL BANKRUPTCY THREATENS BUILD UP WITH

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.

Gloomy forebodings, fear of the future, apprehension of something dreadful to befall you, worry over little things, restlessness, insomnia, irritability—these are the indications of an exhausted nervous system.

They tell more plainly than words, more plainly than pains and aches, that, gradually but certainly, the nerve force of the body is being consumed more rapidly than it is being created. They point to physical bankruptcy—to helplessness of mind and body—to prostration, paralysis or locomotor ataxia.

There are certain elements of nature which go to form new blood and new nerve cells—to create new nerve force, the foundation of life, energy and vitality. These elements are so combined in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as to be easily assimilated by the most weakened human body.

Being composed of such ingredients, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cannot possibly fail to be of benefit to you, and its regular and persistent use will build up and revitalize the most exhausted and discouraged sufferer.

You cannot compare Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with any medicine you ever used, for it cures by the building-up process wherees most nerve treatments merely soothe and deaden the nerves. Test this treatment by noting your increase in weight.

A LITTLE AMBASSADRESS

"Come in!"

My office door opened very gently, and a little face I knew well peeped round. In sheer astonishment I dropped my pen.

"Kathleen!" I said. "How in the world did you get down here? You're not by yourself, surely?"

"Oh, no; course, nursie's with me," and the blue eyes smiled at me so sweetly; "but she's gone shopping. I'm not to go till she comes for me."

"But what will mother and auntie say? They'll think you're lost."

"I'm too growed-up to get lost," she said, with a dignified little air.

I could not help smiling.

"Now, you little rogue," I said, "when I've helped you off with that pretty blue coat and hat I shall expect to be told why you've honored me with a visit to the city during business hours."

She settled herself sedately in a chair opposite to me, quite unconscious of the pretty picture she made with her mass of fair hair and her sweet little face.

"It's a most 'portant visit," she said. "I've come to ask you to my party nex' We'n'sday."

"Indeed? I shall be delighted to come. So that's what brought you down here, is it?"

I had heard great tales about this party, but not from Kathleen. This was evidently her surprise for me.

"Shall I be expected to do anything in particular?" I asked.

"You'll have to make believe all the time, like you always do at our house."

This was certainly a candid statement. I wondered if the rest of the family shared the same view. I hoped not, because I was, as a rule, particularly serious after Kathleen had gone to bed.

"Aunt Merva will be there, of course," I ventured to suggest.

"'Course she will," replied Kathleen. Then she made a tour of the room, came back and resumed her seat, and asked me seriously: "Is this where you play all by yourself in the daytime?"

"Well, yes, I suppose I do."

"Do you keep your toys in those big tin boxes?"

"Well, they're not toys like those in your nursery."

"Do you sit here all by yourself, then?"

I nodded.

"And never feel lonely?"

"I heard mummie tell daddy one day you were a lonely man."

"Oh!"

I was certainly hearing some home truths.

"But you won't be lonely when you come to my party, will you?"

"No, dear. I like to come as often as I can to your house," and I spoke the truth.

By this time Kathleen's nurse had returned—I expect she had been waiting outside all the time—and with strict injunctions not to forget the party next Wednesday," my little visitor kissed me goodby, and I tried to settle down to work again.

But a pair of blue eyes would keep dancing in front of me on my blotting pad. Sometimes I thought they were Kathleen's and sometimes I thought they were—some one else's. Kathleen's eyes and her Aunt Merva's were strangely alike. I had noticed it before.

The room seemed quite cheerless now that she had gone.

Sometimes the missives were stuck together with jujubes, but I had no difficulty in deciphering the signs. They read: Don't forget the party next We'n'sday." As to the crosses — well, the most ignorant person knows what those mean in a letter.

"We'n'sday" came at last, and, of course, I went to the party. It was a great success. The house was turned upside down by a merry crowd of little folks who kept the fun going until long after they ought to have been in bed.

Kathleen queened it all very prettily, and after the last little guest had departed and the blue eyes could scarcely keep open, she persisted that she wasn't a little bit tired, "on'y hungry." That was a subterfuge she was always guilty of at bedtime.

Next day I saw Kathleen in the park and we discussed the party.

"You were a funny man," she said.

I was glad to know that I had given satisfaction in this direction.

"Did you learn all those stories from pitcher books, or were they just make go home like little Charlie did, did you?"

I assured her I was able to refrain from weeping.

"And you liked me the best of all the little girls there?"

"Of course, I did."

"Quite sure?" she said, coaxingly.

"Quite sure," I repeated.

"Then mummie was wrong," she said, triumphantly.

"How's that?" I asked.

"Well, when mummie and Aunt Merva came in to say 'Goodnight,' I heard auntie say how fond you were of me, and mummie said, 'Yes, and I know some one else's he's very fond of, too, or would be, if she'd let him,' and auntie went quite funny, and said: 'Don't be ridiklus, Daisy' — Daisy's what daddie calls mummie — but mummie only laughed and said: 'I don't think you're always kind to him."

Kathleen stopped to take breath after this long recital, and then went on: "So after mummie went downstairs, and auntie brought me a sweetie 'fore I fell 'sleep I asked if it was true if you liked some little girl better'n me. Auntie said 'No,' and then I asked her if she wasn't always kind to you. Auntie said, 'Perhaps not, sometimes.' Then I said she ought to love you like I did, 'cos you were lonely and had no nice little girl of your own like my daddy had. Then she stooped down to kiss me, and her cheek was quite wet, just as if she'd been crying. I've never seen Auntie Merva cry before."

There was a serious look in Kathleen's blue eyes.

"What made Auntie Merva cry, do you th'nk?" she asked, quite distressed.

"I think I can guess," I said, and with a full heart I kissed the little upturned face.

Kathleen had told me something I wanted to know — something that I have been grateful to her for telling me all my life.—Alan Sanders in Baltimore Evening Herald.

IN NATURE'S STOREHOUSE THERE ARE CURES.—Medical experiments have shown conclusively that there are medicinal virtues in even ordinary plants growing up around us, which give them a value that cannot be estimated. It is held by some that Nature provides a cure for every disease which neglect and ignorance have visited upon man. However this may be, it is well known that Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, distilled from roots and herbs, are a sovereign remedy in curing all disorders of the digestion.

THERE IS NOTHING EQUAL to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

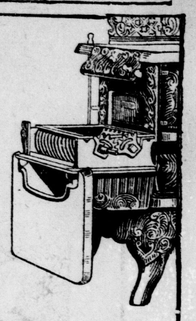
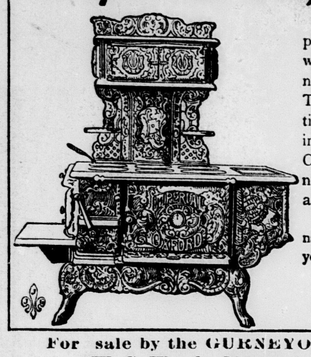
THE GRATE of a range will get out of repair. If you let ashes accumulate in the pan until they come near the grate you are sure to burn it out or warp it. On account of the construction of ordinary ranges, repairing a grate means taking out the fire bricks and practically taking the fire-box to pieces. It is the work of a stove expert.

The Imperial Oxford Range has a patented draw-out duplex grate. By this construction the grate and frame is readily drawn out over the ash-pan without even disturbing the linings. Repairs are thus easily effected even by one without experience.

The life of the fire-box linings is thus prolonged, as they do not require to be moved to repair the grate.



Imperial Oxford Range



This is only one of the exclusive points of the Imperial Oxford Range which make it last long and reduce the necessity and expense of repairs. Though the baking and roasting qualities of the oven are the most vitally important features of the Imperial Oxford Range, we have forgotten nothing that will make it last long and add to the ease of its operation.

Write for some of our booklets and the name of the nearest dealer who can show you an Imperial Oxford Range. 19

How to be Healthy and Beautiful

by Mrs. Henry Symes

HOW to KEEP the NAILS BRIGHT and MAKE them GLISTEN

Rub in an Unguent at Night

THE best manicures of to-day work in so simple a fashion that you often look at the rosy, polished nails after they are through with you and wonder how it all came about. It is the same with caring for the nails yourself. Too many women make too much of an operation of it; too heroic treatment is almost as bad as not enough.

Any woman who is willing to devote a half hour once a week and five minutes every day can have attractive-looking nails. Some, of course, are less responsive to treatment than others, but none is hopeless. Some nails are too brittle, which causes them to break, and others are too soft, and bend in an annoying manner. This shows plainly that they need an emollient of some sort.

If you can, consult a reliable manicure, who will advise you just what will be best for your particular case. Persevere until you find a preparation that is beneficial, and then persevere in using it until your nails are in a healthy, normal condition.

The beauty of the nails depends upon three points: the shape, color and satiny smoothness. Long, pink nails, beautifully polished, with a moon-shaped curve at the base, are greatly to be desired.

After getting your nails in a healthy condition, the next step is to get them well shaped.

Fashion at present decrees that the nails should follow the curve of the end of the finger, and this is much the prettiest and most sensible way. For shaping the nails emery boards are the best. Run the board around the outline of the nails and shape them as prettily as possible; then let them alone.

Constant snipping with curved scissors is responsible for many a misshaped nail. The cuticle should next receive attention. There is no possible excuse for using scissors upon the cuticle, and the sooner the woman who is doing her own manicuring learns this the better for the appearance of her hands. After soaking the fingers in warm water, push the cuticle gently back with a bit of soft Turkish toweling. If it is slightly obstinate, use a little cold cream on an orangewood stick very gently and with much caution. This will keep the nail long and almond-shaped and cause the moons to appear. There are moons at the base of every nail, and perseverance in this treatment will make them appear.

Brilliantly polished nails are now in style, and I will tell you how you can make them look like polished rose leaves.

If there are any stains, bleach them with a solution of fifteen drops of carbolic acid to a tumbler of water. Apply with the orangewood stick, dipping it into the solution frequently. When about to polish the nails run a little finely powdered pumice over them, dampen the buffer slightly and dip it in the pumice. This will take off any roughness and prepare the nail for the polish.

For polishing, use the buffer and one of the good powders that come for this purpose; and it is most important that you get a good one, otherwise you may injure the nails beyond redemption. The final polish should be given by putting a little powder on the palm of the hand and rubbing the nails swiftly across the palm.

Once a week is quite often enough for the general shaping, removal of stains and pumice treatment, but once a day the cuticle should be raised and a little cold cream pushed under it; and at least once a day the nails should be briskly polished with the powder and buffer.

Many wrongly believe that manual or domestic work dooms the nails to ugliness, but this is not so. The treatment advised above will bring out all the natural shell tints of the nails and preserve their beauty indefinitely. But they must have regular attention, or their beauty will disappear.

HEALTH THROUGH HYGIENE

REDUCING FLESH

By Dr. Emma E. Walker

Copyright, 1905, by A. S. Barnes & Co.

LIGHT, moderate exercise for a short period will have very little effect in reducing flesh. If you have allowed yourself to become awkward and heavy, it will take very serious attention on your part to reduce this superfluous fat. It is only through vigorous exercise and profuse perspiration that this can be accomplished.

An actress famous for her beauty, and now approaching middle life, has solved this important problem by swathing in flannel the overdeveloped parts and throughout an hour's vigorous exercise, drinking freely of hot water. These are legitimate aids in reducing flesh.

Choose a few exercises and practice them faithfully, constantly increasing the number of repetitions and you will be rewarded by a return of symmetry and elegance of figure.

To make the waist small and flexible try this exercise of body raising. Stretch out on top of a table face down. With the feet held, or caught at one end of the table, bend the body at the hips over the opposite end of the table. Now, with feet firmly held, hands at back of the neck, elbows well back and head up, chin in, bring the torso to a horizontal position; bend downward toward the floor, then backward to horizontal position again; repeat three times. Do not practice this exercise if you find it strains the muscles of the back, as serious results may ensue without proper precautions. Always have an attendant when this exercise is taken. Do not take it alone.

The waist will be much smaller when the trunk is uplifted and the internal organs held high, in proper position, than it is when they are allowed to sag. The wearing of corsets is not the way to reduce the waist naturally.

Following a simple exercise will accomplish this within hygienic limits. Take standing position, slightly advancing the right foot; sway the body well forward, throwing the weight onto the forward foot; raise the arms upward, hold well back, at the same time inhaling the breath gently and slowly, until, by the time the arms are fully extended upward, the lungs will be fully inflated. Hold this position for a moment, then exhale the breath quietly, allowing the arms to descend to their normal position, at the same time relaxing the muscles.

To reduce the double chin.—The various neck exercises are a wonderful help in reducing a double chin. Stretch the head first to one side as far as possible, and then to the other. Extend it backward as far as possible—first directly back—and then twisting the head at various angles. All of these movements put the flabby muscles of this part on the stretch and help to tone them up.

In order to reduce a fat, ugly back, practice with a broomstick, using it as a wand. Keep it always behind the back; raise and lower it, jump with it in your hands, twist and turn and swing it, always working with it behind you.

MRS. SYMES' BEAUTY RECIPES

Ruddy Nose

Would you kindly answer the following: I am 21 years old and am troubled with a red nose, and very often with pimples. My skin seems to be clear. It is only on my nose that the pimples come, and they make my nose so red that I am ashamed to go out. Would you be kind enough to give me some advice? ELLA.

So many internal difficulties may cause this disfigurement that it is first necessary to find the origin. Poor circulation, digestive trouble, acidity of the stomach, tight clothes, etc.—all these will inflame the nose. Heat and cold have the immediate effect, both reddening, so that a person with a red nose should use only tepid water on the face, taking care that no hot water or cold fluid touches it. The lotion for pimples, for which I am giving you formula, will be beneficial.

Fossati Cream for Pimples.

Lanolin, 5 grams; sweet almond oil, 5 grams; sulphur precipitate, 5 grams; oxide of zinc, 2½ grams; extract of violet, 10 drops. Apply a very little of the cream to each pimple.

To Remove Pittings

Will you kindly give me formula for the removal of small-pox pittings and directions for same? I am 22 years old. Thanking you in advance, I remain an ADMIRER.

I am afraid treatment by a skin specialist is the only way to remove such scars, for which I am giving you formula.

Witch Hazel Cold Cream.

One ounce each of white wax and spermaceti; ¼ pint of oil of almonds. Melt; pour into a mortar which has been heated by being immersed some time in boiling water. Very gradually add 3 ounces of rosewater and 1 ounce of witch hazel, and assiduously stir the mixture until an emulsion is formed, and afterward until the mixture is nearly cold. This cream is particularly useful to heal sore or stretched skin.

Scars.

To Restore Gray Hair

I used the henna according to your direction, and it made no impression. My hair is gray. Will you please tell me if there is anything like alcohol to be put in it to keep it? I have tried it faithfully and cannot seem to make it work. I have been using a tint for five years, but it is too much trouble, and think it is injurious. I would like something harmless and easy to apply to give my hair a light brown shade. Mrs. L. A. F.

Henna is not a dye for gray hair. It is a stain to produce an auburn or reddish tint in the hair. I advise you to try the Physician's Remedy for restoring gray hair to its natural color, formula for which I am giving you.

To Remove Wrinkles

Will you kindly tell me what your astringent lotion is? I read in last week's paper of one jubilant who has used your lotion, and would be very thankful indeed if you will repeat it. MINNIE.

Lotion for Premature Wrinkles.

Worried by Superfluous Hair

Having read so much of the good you have done for others, I have taken the liberty of writing to you, hoping you will help me, too, if you can. I am troubled and worried about superfluous hairs, of which I am a victim, and have read where you mentioned pumice stone treatment. I will be very grateful to you if you will publish as soon as possible how to treat with it, and if you have to use it constantly to keep hair from coming back. If you will do so, you will oblige J. F.

Pumice Treatment for Superfluous Hair.

Get an ordinary 5-cent cake of pumice stone. This is not pumice soap, but the regular old-fashioned pumice stone. To remove the hair rub the skin affected with the superfluous growth and the pumice stone will wear the hair off. Be careful not to be too heroic and irritate the skin. In case the arms are made red by this treatment, use a little cold cream. The pumice stone is best used at night before retiring.

In last week's paper I see where you had given advice in the paper for pumice treatment for superfluous hair. Will you please tell me how you use the pumice stone and if you use the powdered or other, and if any charge for same? M. E. W.

See answer to "J. F."

Skin Too Oily

am giving you, and abstain from eating rich, greasy foods and sweets. There are excellent rubber face brushes on the market.

Blackheads of the Skin.

Shampoo to Lighten Hair

I have been an interested reader of your column for some time, and at last ask your advice. Can you give me the formula for an egg shampoo which will make the hair light and fluffy, and will you please tell me how often the hair should be washed? Also, I would like to know if Dr. Shoemaker's bleach is a good skin bleach. I presume I can get any of your recipes filled at any reliable drug store, can I not? A. L. E.

You will find the egg shampoo given below excellent. I think about once in three weeks is often enough to shampoo the hair, unless it is very oily, in which case it may be done more frequently. Dr. Shoemaker's bleach is intended more especially for the removal of tan and freckles. For ordinary purposes, I think peroxide of hydrogen is a good bleach.

Egg Shampoo.

Yolk of 1 egg; 1 pint of rainwater (hot); 1 ounce of rosemary spirits.

Beat the mixture thoroughly up and use it warm, rubbing it well into the skin of the head. Rinse in several waters.

Used Formula With Success

A few weeks ago I read in your column a prescription to make the hair dry and auburn. Have used same, with good results. Would you please have it in again, as I have been unfortunate to lose it, and would be very grateful to you, as it is very good? VIOLA.

Lotion for Oily, Damp Hair.

For greasy, moist hair, the following is an excellent drying lotion. If used daily it tends to produce a crispy condition and an auburn shade:

Powdered bicarbonate of soda, borate of soda, calcu powdered, ¼ ounce of each; eau de cologne, 1 fluid ounce; alcohol, 2 fluid ounces; tincture of cochineal, ½ fluid ounce; distilled water, 16 ounces.

Mix and agitate until solution is complete.

Mother Wants Help

I have taken an interest in your Health and Beauty Column. I will ask you to give a formula of something that will kill lice and nits in the head. My little girl has had lice for some time. I fine-comb and wash her head every day, but without success. I am at a loss what to do, the efore appeal to you. ANXIOUS MOTHER.

Cure for Parasites.

Get a cake of bichloride of mercury soap (the imported is the best) and cut it into halves and shave one half into fine bits. Dissolve it in boiling water. You may set the mixture on the stove over a gentle heat if you choose. You should have enough water to form a jelly-like mixture when cold. To use, first wet the hair thoroughly with clear, warm water, then rub the soap mixture into the hair, taking care that every particle of the scalp is thoroughly saturated with the soap mixture. Give the head a good shampoo with this mixture and rinse several times.

ingly the new growth is coming in white, as they vary in length from one to five inches, none being the full length of my brown hair, which is below my waist in length. Also a harmless preparation in the form of a liquid face powder? Is my little son of 6 years too old to be benefited by having his outstanding ears bound back, as I object to a surgical operation. AVEN.

It is hard to tell what causes premature grayness. Sometimes it seems to be hereditary. Keeping the scalp and hair in perfect condition will do much toward retarding the appearance of gray hairs. Keep up the circulation of the scalp by friction with a good tonic, and keep the ends of the hair carefully trimmed or singed. Am giving you formula requested. Let your boy of 6 wear an ear cap whenever he is sleeping. It will aid greatly in making his ears set close to the head.

For Whitening the Skin—A Liquid Powder.

Sift the zinc, dissolve it in just enough of the rosewater to cover it, then add the glycerin, next the remainder of the rosewater.

Shake well and apply with a soft sponge or an antiseptic gauze. The face must be well wiped off before the liquid dries or it will be streaked.

To Stop Hair From Falling

I would esteem it a favor to a reader of your paper if you would give me a formula to stop falling hair. I am 29 years old and my father and grandfather were bald before me. My hair is falling out very fast, and seems to be very dry and brittle. Hoping you can relieve me as you have others. G. R. S.

Formula for Dry, Falling Hair.

Apply to the roots of the hair once or twice a day. It is positively necessary that the scalp should be kept clean. Shampoo at least once a week.

Wart on Chin

I have been a reader of your column for years, and have received many blessings from them. Will you please be kind enough to tell how to get rid of a hairy wart on my chin. I pull the hairs out and put ammonia on it, and it is killing out the hair some, but the wart is still there. I asked my family doctor about it. He advised me not to bother it for fear of turning it into a cancer; but doctors don't always know about these things. I thought of trying your formula for warts, but thought best to ask your advice first. I. T. C.

From your description, I think it probable that the growth on your chin is a mole instead of a wart. In that case it can only be removed permanently and safely by a specialist.

To Fatten Arms and Neck

What skin food is the best to use to fatten the arms and neck, and if not asking too much, what will fatten the legs and make them larger. What is the orange flower cream? Is it to whiten the skin or is it a skin food? J. M. C.

I know of no better skin food than the orange flower cream. Although it is not a bleach, it tends to whiten the skin. Exercise is the best possible method of enlarging the legs. A gymnastic feat which is said to be a certain enlarger for the lower limbs is to stand on one foot and with the other leg held out as nearly at a right angle to the body as possible, try to touch the knee to the floor. Rubbing with skin food or olive oil is also fattening.

Troubles of a Blonde

I am a constant reader of your advice, and you help so many others that I want you to help me. I am a disappointed blonde and my hair is a very ugly color. I want it a golden color, and I wish that you would give something in the paper that will turn it either a light or a golden color. J. M. C.

Shampoo your hair frequently with the following mixture and keep the scalp in good condition by massage. This treatment will keep your hair light and give it a lustre.

How to Clear the Complexion

I am in utter despair over the condition my face is in. All the lower part is covered with little pimples, which seem to be under the skin, but when you mash them you get a little white substance, which comes out almost like a little worm. And then some of them are large festers, which have to be picked and mashed every day until they heal. I have taken a tonic with iron in it, and bathe my face every night with warm water and castile soap, using a brush and then have rubbed it with a preparation of alcohol and glycerin. I did use skin food on it, but was afraid it might make it worse. Tell me if you think the skin food is bad for my face now. I use it as I am quite thin. Does it make the pores look open? The grain of my skin is not good, the pores look so open. Will you kindly come to my help and tell me how to treat my face to get rid of the festers and how to make my skin nice and smooth. If you think I need a blood purifier, will you print the prescription for a good one to use to clear the complexion? My face has been in this condition for months, but previous to that had good complexion.

Do you think the bust treatment would have any effect on me if my lungs are weak, and am thin in the chest for that. I will appreciate your advice so much.

E. B.

To improve the appearance of your complexion, abstain from rich, unwholesome foods. I think you need a good blood purifier. There are several good preparations of sarsaparilla on the market. A simple, old-fashioned remedy is to take sulphur and molasses three times a day. Just before washing the face, rub it over with two teaspoonfuls of flowers of sulphur mixed in half a pint of new milk. Taking the Vaucaire remedy for bust development will not affect your lungs in any way. Try deep breathing; it will strengthen your lungs wonderfully.

Pimples on Face

Being very much interested in your beauty page, I would like your advice for pimples. For the last year I have been troubled with breaking out on my face. Most of the pimples are on my forehead, fewer on my chin and around the nose. I also have blackheads. And, indeed, until now I have had a very good complexion. I am a girl 14 years of age and am 5 feet 4 inches. I weigh 100 pounds. I am rather light in complexion, with brown hair. My general health has been good, with now and then a severe cold. I am subject to catch cold very easily in the least little draught. Only that about three or four years ago I have had diphtheria, that was the only severe sickness I have ever had. I never eat much candy. I am slender, but have a good figure. Hoping that I have not written too much. EDITH.

Follow advice given to E. B.

Hair Growing Dark

I have been a constant reader of your columns for some time and have used several preparations with good results. I have light hair, but it is fast turning into a darker shade. I am young and wish for my hair to stay light, as I have a very fair complexion and light blue eyes. I have used the shampoo, and I think it has prevented my hair from turning darker, but I want something that would make it several shades lighter. I do not care to use peroxide. Isn't it considered injurious to the hair? Is pyrogallic acid used for turning the hair lighter? If so, please tell me how to use it and how much to use.

I read in one of the papers something about this acid, but you did not in that certain one give the formula. Will it injure my hair or cause it to fall out? I do not want to do anything that would make it fall out, and if you can help me, you have my grateful thanks.

Is there anything for taking white spots off of finger nails? I have a good many and they spoil one's hand so bad. MAMIE B.

The only way of keeping the hair light besides shampooing it is to bleach it, and this I do not advise. Don't think of applying peroxide or any other bleach yourself, as you might ruin your hair. Such treatment should only be given by an expert.

Shampooing the hair too frequently will cause it to become dry and brittle, and it is well to substitute a dry shampoo sometimes. Take the finest ground white cornmeal, add a little powdered orris root, and sprinkle the powder through the hair. Massage the scalp and rub the powder over it. Shake the powder through the long hair, letting it remain for half an hour. Remove from the hair by brushing. This is especially good for keeping the hair light.

Hair on Face and Arms

I am indeed sorry to bother you with my questions. But am greatly troubled with superfluous hair on my face and arms. I have tried your recipe of ammonia and peroxide, but, as I have pimples on my face, it is very painful and does not seem to help me much. My hair is very dark. I have your recipe for depilatory, but before using would like to ask if one would have to use it often? And if after using it leaves any noticeable mark at all? Also a good cream for using after that does not form the growth of hair. M. D.

Depilatories do not permanently remove superfluous hair, and the treatment must be repeated when the hair is should only be administered by an expert.

Wants Brown Lashes

Will you kindly tell me if the eyelash stain you give (Chinese) will in any way injure their growth, and also could you give me an equally effective stain for brows and lashes—harmless—that would be brown instead of black?

2. My hair is a light brown, with sometimes red lights in it. Could you tell me some wash that would make it naturally (I do not want any dye or anything that could possibly injure it), that could increase the red shade some, perhaps a little darker, more auburn. Z. W.

The Chinese eyelash stain will not in any way injure the lashes. You can make a brown stain by steeping walnut shells in alcohol. Care should be taken not to get the minutest portion in the eyes. Henna is a vegetable stain which will produce a reddish or auburn tint in the hair.

How to Get Slim

I have read your advice to other people, so I thought I would ask you to advise me. Well, what could I do to get slim? I don't want to use any remedies, but I thought you could suggest something. I am not very tall, but very fat. My hips are too fat, I think, and what could I do for a high stomach? My stomach is very high. BUTTERFLY.

Rules for the Reduction of Flesh.

Avoid all starchy and sweetened food, all cereals, vegetables containing sugar or starch, such as peas, beans, corn, potatoes, etc. Have your bread toasted; sprinkle it with salt instead of butter. Milk, I regret to say, if it be pure and good, is fattening. Skimmed milk may be drank. Hot water is an excellent substitute for other liquids. Add a little of the juice of limes or lemons to it, if you choose. Limit your sleeping hours to seven at the outside. No naps. You must take exercise.

If you cannot walk at least five miles a day and do not wheel, go to one of the institutions where mechanical massage is given. Several of my correspondents report excellent results from this method of getting the vigorous exercise they require. The system is thoroughly wholesome and not expensive. In reducing flesh the one fact to recollect is that fat is carbon—oxygen destroys or burns out carbon. You must consume the carbon by the oxygen you take through your lungs. The more exercise, the more oxygen and consequent destruction of fat by the one healthful method of curing obesity.

The more starch and sugar you eat, the more carbon to burn away.

Troubled With Dandruff

Kindly give the recipe for dandruff that "Leonia" says has so benefited her, and oblige C. F.

To Remove Dandruff.

Tincture of cantharides, 1 ounce; liquid of ammonia, 1 dram; glycerin, ½ ounce; oil of thyme, ½ dram.

Mix all together with six ounces of rosewater. Rub the scalp thoroughly with this preparation until no further evidence of dandruff is noticed.

Brown Spots on Hands

Will you kindly tell me a recipe for removing brown spots from the backs of the hands? E. A. P.

Try the lemon and glycerin lotion for freckles so often published in this department.

Sallow, Oily Complexion

I noticed so many remedies for blackheads. I have tried some, but they did not seem to do me much good. I hereby wish to describe my case: The blackheads I have are a mixture of large and small ones, and after some time they turn into sores, that is, they ulcerate. Now, if you would be so kind and publish a good remedy in next week's paper. H. P. R. B.

P. S.—My complexion is pale and sallow and very oily.

To clear your complexion and banish blackheads and pimples, go in for hygienic living. Eat plenty of wholesome food, with fresh fruits and vegetables; drink eight glasses of water every day between meals; take a full bath daily; take daily exercise, abstain from pastries and highly seasoned, greasy foods. Use the lotion for blackheads given in answer to "Pearl," and every night before retiring wash your face with soap and hot water, and rinse thoroughly.

Skin Peeling Off

Will you kindly inform me of a remedy for my skin? It is constantly peeling off, especially my nose, and has for a long time. I have tried several remedies, but they have failed to help it. O. O.

I think it quite possible that you are using hard water, which causes your skin to be dry and peel. If possible, use rainwater for a while; if you cannot procure this, put a pinch of borax in the water to soften it.

Permanent Remedy

Will you please say if the Vaucaire treatment is permanent? A recipe for a face cream with which to massage and cleanse the face. I refer to the kind that rolls out again, dirty. My skin is coarse

The Return of Sherlock Holmes

VIII.—SILVER BLAZE.

BY A. CONAN DOYLE.

Copyrighted by Scribner and McClure, Phillips & Co., and published by special arrangement with the Canada Newspaper Syndicate, for the exclusive use in this paper.

"I AM afraid Watson, that I shall have to go," said Holmes, as we sat down together to our breakfast one morning.

"Go! Where to?"

"To Dartmoor; to King's Pyland."

I was not surprised. Indeed, my only wonder was that he had not already been mixed up in this extraordinary case, which was the one topic of conversation through the length and breadth of England. For a whole day my companion had rambled about the room, with his chin upon his chest and his brows knitted, charging and recharging his pipe with the strongest black tobacco, and absolutely deaf to any of my questions or remarks. Fresh editions of every paper had been sent up by our news agent, only to be glanced over and tossed down into a corner. Yet, silent as he was, I knew perfectly well what it was over which he was brooding. There was but one problem before the public which could challenge his powers of analysis, and that was the singular disappearance of the favorite for the Wessex Cup and the tragic murder of its trainer. When, therefore, he suddenly announced his intention of setting out for the scene of the drama it was only what I had both expected and hoped for.

"I should be most happy to go down with you if I should not be in the way," said I.

"My dear Watson, you would confer a great favor upon me by coming. And I think that your time will not be misspent, for there are points about the case which promise to make it an absolutely unique one. We have, I think, just time to catch our train at Paddington, and I will go further into the matter upon our journey. You would oblige me by bringing with you your excellent field glass."

And so it happened that an hour or so later I found myself in the corner of a first-class carriage flying along en route for Exeter, while Sherlock Holmes, with his sharp, eager face, framed in his ear-flapped traveling cap dipped rapidly into a bundle of fresh papers which he had procured at Paddington. We had left Reading far behind us before he threw the last one of them under the seat and offered me his cigar case.

"We are going well," said he, looking out of the window and glancing at his watch. "Our rate at present is fifty-three and a half miles an hour."

"I have not observed the quarter-mile posts," said I.

"Nor have I. But the telegraph posts upon this line are sixty yards apart and the calculation is a very simple one. I presume that you have looked into this matter of the murder of John Straker and the disappearance of Silver Blaze?"

"I have seen what the Telegraph and the Chronicle have to say."

"It is one of those cases where the art of the reasoner should be used rather for the sifting of details than for the acquiring of fresh evidence. The tragedy has been so uncommon, so complete and of such personal importance to so many people that we are suffering from a plethora of surmise, conjecture and hypothesis. The difficulty is to detach the framework of fact, of absolute, undeniable fact, from the embellishments of theorists and reporters. Then, having established ourselves upon this sound basis, it is our duty to see what inferences may be drawn and what are special points upon which the whole mystery turns. On Tuesday evening I received telegrams from both Colonel Ross, the owner of the horse, and from Inspector Gregory, who is looking after the case, inviting my co-operation."

"Tuesday evening!" I exclaimed. "And this is Thursday morning. Why didn't you go down yesterday?"

"Because I made a blunder, my dear Watson—which is, I am afraid, a more common occurrence than anyone would think who only knew me through my memoirs. The fact is that I could not believe it possible that the most remarkable horse in England could long remain concealed, especially in so sparsely inhabited a place as the north of Dartmoor. From hour to hour yesterday I expected to hear that he had been found, and that his abductor was the murderer of John Straker. When, however, another morning had come and I found out that beyond the arrest of young Fitzroy Simpson nothing had been done, I felt that it was time for me to take action. Yet in some ways I feel that yesterday has not been wasted."

"You have formed a theory, then?"

"At least I have got a grip of the essential facts of the case. I shall enumerate them to you, for nothing clears up a case so much as stating it to another person, and I can hardly expect your co-operation if I do not show you the position from which we start."

I lay back against the cushions, puffing my cigar, while Holmes, leaning forward, with his long, thin forefinger checking off the points upon the palm of his left hand, gave me a sketch of the events which had led to our journey.

"Silver Blaze," said he, "is from the Somomy stock, and holds as brilliant a record as his famous ancestor. He is now in his fifth year, and has brought in turn each of the prizes of the turf to Colonel Ross, his fortunate owner. Up to the time of the catastrophe he was the first favorite for the Wessex Cup, the betting being three to one on him. He has always, however, been a prime favorite with ten racing public, and has never yet disappointed them, so that even at those odds enormous sums of money have been laid upon him. It is obvious, therefore, that there were very many people who had the strongest interest in preventing Silver Blaze from being there at the fall of the flag next Tuesday.

"The fact was, of course, appreciated at King's Pyland where the colonel's training stable is situated. The trainer, John Straker, is a retired jockey, who rode in Col. Ross' colors before he became too heavy for the weighing chair. He has served the colonel for five years as jockey and for seven as trainer, and has always shown himself to be a zealous and honest servant. Under him were three lads, for the establishment was a small one, containing only four horses in all. One of these lads sat up each night in the loft. All three bore excellent characters. John Straker, who is a married man, lived in a small villa about two hundred yards from the stable. He has no children, keeps one maid servant, and is comfortably off. The country round is very lonely, but about half a mile to the north there is a small cluster of villas which have been built by a Tavistock contractor for the use of invalids and others who wish to enjoy the pure Dartmoor air. Tavistock itself lies two miles to the west, while across the moor, also about two miles distant, is the larger training establishment of Mapleton, which belongs to Lord Blackwater, and is managed by Silas Brown. In every other direction the moor is a complete wilderness, inhabited by only a few roaming gypsies. Such was the general situation last Monday night when the catastrophe occurred.

"On that evening the horses had been exercised and watered as usual and the stables were locked up at nine o'clock. Two of the lads walked up to the trainer's house, where they had supper in the kitchen, while the third, Ned Hunter, remained on guard. At a few minutes after nine, the maid, Edith Baxter, carried down to the stables his supper, which consisted of a dish of curried mutton. She took no liquid, as there was a water tap in the stables and it was the rule that the lad on duty should drink nothing else. The maid carried a lantern with her, as it was very dark and the path ran across the open moor.

"Edith Baxter was within thirty yards of the stables when a man appeared out of the darkness and called to her to stop. As he stepped into the circle of the yellow light thrown by the lantern she saw that he was a person of gentlemanly bearing, dressed in a gray suit of tweeds with a cloth cap. He wore gaiters, and carried a heavy stick with a knob to it. She was most impressed, however, by the extreme pallor of his face and by the nervousness of his manner. His age, she thought, would be rather over thirty than under it.

"'Can you tell me where I am?' he asked. 'I had almost made up my mind to sleep on the moor, when I saw the light of your lantern.'

"'You are close to the King's Pyland training stables,' said she.

"'Oh, indeed! What a stroke of luck!' he cried. 'I understand that a stable boy sleeps alone there every night. Perhaps that is his supper which you are carrying to him. Now, I am sure that you would not be too proud to earn the price of a new dress, would you?' He took a piece of white paper folded up out of his pocket. 'See that the boy has this tonight and you shall have the prettiest frock that money can buy.'

"She was frightened by the earnestness of his manner and ran past him to the window through which she was accustomed to hand the meals. It was already opened, and Hunter was seated at the small table inside. She had begun to tell him of what happened, when the stranger came up again.

"'Good evening,' said he, looking through the window. 'I wanted to have a word with you.' The girl has sworn that as he spoke she noticed the corner of the little paper packet protruding from his closed hand.

"'What business have you here?' asked the lad.

"'It's business that may put something in your pocket,' said the other. 'You've two horses in for the Wessex Cup—Silver Blaze and Bayard. Let me have the straight tip and you won't be a loser. Is it a fact that at the weights Bayard could give the other a hundred yards in five furlongs and that the stable have their money on him.'

"'So you are one of those damned touts!' cried the lad. 'I'll show you how we serve them in King's Pyland.' He sprang up and rushed across the stable to unloosen the dog. The girl fled away to the house, but as she ran she looked back and saw the stranger was leaning through the window. A minute later, however, when Hunter rushed out with the hound he was gone, and though he ran all round the buildings he failed to find any trace of him.'

"'One moment,' I asked. 'Did the stable boy, when he ran out with the dog, leave the door unlocked behind him?'

"'Excellent, Watson, excellent!' murmured my companion. 'The vital importance of the point struck me so forcibly that I sent up a special wire to Dartmoor yesterday to clear the matter up.'

"The boy locked the door before he left it. The window, I may add, was not large enough for a man to get through.

"Hunter waited until his fellow grooms had returned, when he sent a message to the trainer and told him what had occurred. Straker was excited at hearing the account, although he does not seem to have quite realized its true significance. It left him, however, vaguely uneasy, and Mrs. Straker, waking at one in the morning found him dressing. In reply to her inquiries, he said that he could not sleep on account of his anxiety about the horses, and that he intended to walk down to the stables and see that all was well. She begged him to remain at home as she could hear the rain pattering against the window, but in spite of her entreaties he pulled on his large mackintosh and left the house.

"Mrs. Straker rose at seven in the morning to find that her husband had not yet returned. She dressed herself hastily, called the maid and set off for the stables. The door was open; inside, huddled together upon a chair, Hunter was sunk in a state of absolute stupor, his favorite's stall was empty and there were no signs of his trainer.

"The two lads who slept in the chaff-cutting loft above the harness room were quickly aroused. They had heard nothing during the night, for they are both sound sleepers. Hunter was obviously under the influence of some powerful drug, and as no sense could be got out of him, he was left to sleep it off, while the two lads and the two women ran out in search of the absentees. They still had hopes that the trainer had for some reason taken out the horse for the early exercise, but on ascending the knoll near the house, from which all the neighboring moors were visible, they could not only see no signs of the missing favorite, but they perceived something which warned them that they were in the presence of a tragedy.

"About a quarter of a mile from the stables John Straker's overcoat was flapping from a furze bush. Immediately beyond there was a bowl-shaped depression in the moor and at the bottom of this was found the dead body of the unfortunate trainer. His head had been shattered by a savage blow from some heavy weapon, and he was wounded on the thigh, where there was a long, clean cut, inflicted evidently by some very sharp instrument. It was clear, however, that Straker had defended himself vigorously against his assailants, for in his right hand he held a small knife, which was clotted with blood up to the handle, while in his left he clasped a red and black silk cravat, which was recognized by the maid as having been worn on the preceeding evening by the stranger who had visited the stables. Hunter, on recovering from his stupor was also quite positive of the ownership of the cravat. He was equally certain that the same stranger had, while standing at the window, drugged his curried mutton and so deprived the stables of their watchman. As to the missing horse, there were abundant proofs in the mud which lay at the bottom of the fatal hollow that he had been there at the time of the struggle. But from that morning he has disappeared, and although a large reward has been offered for him and all the gypsies of Dartmoor are on the alert, no news has come of him. Finally, an analysis has shown that the remains of his supper left by the stable lad contained an appreciable amount of powdered opium, while the people of the house partook of the same dish on the same night without any ill effect.

"Those are the main facts of the case, stripped of all surmise, and stated as badly as possible. I shall now recapitulate what the police have done in the matter.

"Inspector Gregory, to whom the case has been committed, is an extremely competent officer. Were he but gifted with imagination, he might rise to great heights in his profession. On his arrival he promptly found and arrested the man upon whom suspicion naturally rested. There was little difficulty in finding him for he inhabited one of those villas which I have mentioned. His name, it appears, is Fitzroy Simpson. He was a man of excellent birth and education, who had squandered a fortune upon the turf, and now lived by doing a little quiet and genteel bookmaking in the sporting clubs of London. An examination of his betting book shows that bets to the amount of five thousand pounds had been registered by him against the favorite. On being arrested he volunteered the statement that he had come down to Dartmoor in the hope of getting some information about the King's Pyland horses, and also about Desborough, the second favorite, which was in charge of Silas Brown at the Mapleton stables. He did not attempt to deny that he acted as described upon the evening before, but declared that he had no sinister designs, and had simply wished to obtain first hand information. When confronted with his cravat he turned very pale and was utterly unable to account for its presence in the hand of the murdered man. His wet clothing showed that he had been out in the storm of the night before, and his stick, which was a Penang-lawyer, weighted with lead, was just such a weapon as might, by repeated blows, have inflicted the terrible injuries to which the trainer had succumbed. On the other hand there was no wound upon his person, while the state of Straker's knife would show that one at least of his assailants must bear his mark upon him. There you have it all in a nutshell, Watson, and if you can give me any light I shall be infinitely obliged to you."

I had listened with the greatest interest to the statement which Holmes, with characteristic clearness, had laid before me. Though most of the facts were familiar to me, I had not sufficiently appreciated their relative importance, nor their connection to each other.

"Is it not possible," I suggested, "that the incised wound upon Striker may have been caused by his own knife in the convulsive struggles which follow any brain injury?"

"It is more than possible; it is probable," said Holmes. "In case one of the main points in favor of the accused disappears."

"And yet," said I, "even now I fail to understand what the theory of the police can be."

"I am afraid that whatever theory we state has grave objections to it," returned my companion. "The police imagine I take it, that this Fitzroy Simpson, having drugged the lad and gotten rid of the horse, for some purpose, would be buried away. The horse may be at the bottom of one of the pits or old mines upon the moor."

"What does he say about the cravat?"

"He acknowledges that it is his, and declares that he had lost it. But a new element has been introduced into the case which may account for his leading the horse from the stable."

Holmes pricked up his ears.

"We have found traces which show that a party of gypsies encamped on Monday night within a mile of the spot where the murder took place. On Tuesday they were gone. Now, presuming that there was some understanding between Simpson and these gypsies, might he not have been leading the horse to them when he was overtaken, and may they not have him now?"

"It is certainly possible."

"The moor is being scoured for these gypsies. I have also examined every stable and outhouse in Tavistock, and for a radius of ten miles."

"There is another training stable quite close, I understand?"

"Yes, and that is a factor which we must certainly not neglect. As Desborough, their horse, was second in the betting, they had an interest in the disappearance of the favorite. Silas Brown, the trainer, is known to have had large bets upon the event, and he was no friend to poor Straker. We have, however, examined the stable, and there is nothing to connect him with the affair."

"Nothing at all."

Holmes leaned back in the carriage, and the conversation ceased. A few minutes later our driver pulled up at a neat red brick villa with overhanging eaves which stood by the road. Some distance off, across a paddock, lay a long gray-tiled outbuilding. In every other direction the low curves of the moor, bronze-colored from the fading ferns, stretched away to the sky line, broken only by the steeples of Tavistock, and by a cluster of houses away to the westward which marked the Mapleton stables. We all sprang out with the exception of Holmes, who continued to lean back with his eyes fixed upon the sky in front of him, entirely absorbed in his own thoughts. It was only when I touched his arm that he roused himself with a violent start and stepped out of the carriage.

"Excuse me," he said, turning to Col. Ross, who had looked at him with some surprise. "I was day-dreaming." There was a gleam in his eyes and a suppressed excitement in his manner which convinced me, used to his ways as I was, that his hand was upon a clue, though I could not imagine where he had found it.

"Perhaps you would prefer at once to go on to the scene of the crime, Mr. Holmes?" said Gregory.

"I think that I should prefer to stay here a little and go into one or two questions of detail. Straker was brought back here, I presume?"

"Yes; he lies upstairs. The inquest is tomorrow."

"He has been in your service some years, Col. Ross?"

"I presume that you made an inventory of what he had in his pockets at the time of his death, Inspector?"

"I have the things themselves in the sitting-room, if you would care to see them."

"I should be very glad." We all filed into the front room and sat round the center table while the Inspector unlocked a square tin box and laid a small heap of things before us. There was a box of vestas, two inches of tallow candle, an A D P brierwood pipe a pouch of sealskin with half an ounce of long-cut Cavendish, a silver watch with a gold chain, five sovereigns in gold, an aluminum pencil case, a few papers, and an ivory-handled knife with a very delicate, inflexible blade marked Weiss & Co., London.

"This is a very singular knife," said Holmes, lifting it up and examining it minutely. "I presume, as I see the blood stains upon it, that it is the one which was found in the dead man's grasp. Watson, this knife is surely in your line?"

"It is what we call a cataract knife," said I.

"I thought so. A very delicate blade, devised for very delicate work. A strange thing for a man to carry with him upon a rough expedition, especially as it would not shut in his pocket."

"The tip was guarded by a disk of cork, which we found beside his body," said the Inspector. "His wife tells us that the knife had lain upon the dressing-table, and that he had picked it up as he left the room. It was a poor weapon, but perhaps the best that he could lay his hands on at the moment."

"Very possibly. How about these papers?"

"Three of them are receipted hay-dealers' accounts. One of them is a letter of instructions from Col. Ross. This other is a milliner's account for thirty-seven pounds fifteen, made out by Madame Lesurier, of Bond street, to William Derbyshire. Mrs. Straker tells us that Derbyshire was a friend of her husband's and that occasionally his letters were addressed here."

"Madame Derbyshire had somewhat expensive tastes," remarked Holmes, glancing down the account. "Twenty-two guineas is rather heavy for a single costume. However, there appears to be nothing more to learn, and we may now go down to the scene of the crime."

As we emerged from the sitting-room, a woman, who had been waiting in the passage, took a step forward and laid her hand upon the Inspector's sleeve. Her face was haggard and thin

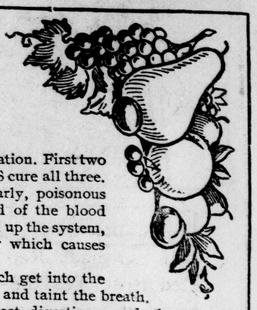
Good Complexion

When Pimples and Blotches Disfigure the Skin



it means bad blood, bad digestion or constipation. First two are the result of the last. FRUIT-A-TIVES cure all three.

When the bowels don't move regularly, poisonous matter remains in the intestines. Instead of the blood taking up wholesome nourishment to build up the system, it absorbs part of this poisonous matter which causes pimples and blotches on the skin.

Gases are formed by this matter, which get into the stomach, upset digestion, coat the tongue, and taint the breath.

"I am on my second box of Fruit-a-tives now, and can honestly say they are the best medicine for Constipation and Stomach Trouble I ever used."

Pandora Savings

Because the Pandora range utilizes all the heat in the fuel it does the work quicker and better. If a range sends half its heat up the chimney it must burn more fuel to do a given work. It takes longer to burn a large piece of wood or chunk of coal than a small one, also it takes a longer purse to pay for the large stick of wood or big chunk of coal.

The quicker you can get the necessary units of heat to boil the kettle or cook the roast, the quicker your work is done and the less it costs to do it.

Because of the scientific construction of the Pandora range it gets more units of heat from a given quantity of fuel than any other range. It keeps all the heat in the range where the work is to be done.

For these reasons the Pandora range lightens the labor of cooking—eases the drudgery of kitchen work; it helps to make life easier; it gives more leisure because it saves time; it saves worry because it is absolutely reliable, and thus it saves the nerves; it saves the muscles because it is so easy to handle; it requires less attention than any other range; it does its work uniformly; it is an A 1 range in every particular; it is an economical and a handsome range.

and eager, stamped with the print of a recent horror.

Have you got them? Have you found them? she panted."

"No, Mrs. Straker. But Mr. Holmes here has come from London to help us, and we shall do all that is possible."

"Surely I met you in Plymouth at a garden party some little time ago, Mrs. Straker?" said Holmes.

"No, sir; you are mistaken."

"Dear me! Why, I could have sworn to it. You wore a costume of dove-colored silk with ostrich-feather trimming."

"I never had such a dress, sir," answered the lady.

"Ah, that quite settles it," said Holmes. And with an apology he followed the Inspector outside. A short walk across the moor took us to the hollow in which the body had been found. At the brink of it was the furz-bush upon which the coat had been hung.

"There was no wind that night, I understand, said Holmes.

"None; but very heavy rain."

"In that case the overcoat was not blown against the furz-bush but placed there."

"Yes, it was laid across the bush."

"You fill me with interest I perceive that the ground has been tramped up a good deal. No doubt many feet have been here since Monday night."

"A piece of matting has been laid here at the side, and we have all stood upon that."

"Excellent."

"In this bag I have one of the boots which Straker wore, one of Fitzroy Simpson's shoes, and a cast horseshoe of Silver Blaze."

"My dear Inspector, you surpass yourself!" Holmes took the bag, and, descending into the hollow, he pushed the matting into a more central position. Then stretching himself upon his face and leaning his chin upon his hands, he made a careful study of the trampled mud in front of him. "Hullo!" said he suddenly. "What's this?" It was a wax vesta half burned, which was so coated with mud that it looked at first like a little chip of wood.

"I cannot think how I came to overlook it," said the Inspector, with an expression of annoyance.

"It was invisible, buried in the mud. I only saw it because I was looking for it."

"What! You expected to find it?"

"I thought it not unlikely."

He took the boots from the bag and compared the impression of each of them with marks upon the ground. Then he clambered up to the rim of the hollow, and crawled about among the ferns and bushes.

"I am afraid that there are no more tracks," said the Inspector. "I have examined the ground very carefully for a hundred yards in each direction."

"Indeed!" said Holmes, rising. "I should not have the impertinence to do it again after what you say. But I should like to have a little walk over the moor before it grows dark, that I may know my ground tomorrow, and I think I shall put this horseshoe into my pocket for good luck."

Col. Ross, who had shown some signs of impatience at my companion's quiet and systematic method of work, glanced at his watch. "I wish you would come back with me, Inspector," said he. There are several points on which I should like your advice, and especially as to whether we do not owe it to the public to remove our horse's name from the entries for the cup."

"Certainly not," cried Holmes with decision. "I should let the name stand."

The Colonel bowed. "I am very glad to have had your opinion, sir," said he. "You will find us at poor Straker's house when you have finished your walk, and we can drive together into Tavistock."

He turned back with the Inspector, while Holmes and I walked slowly across the moor. The sun was beginning to sink behind the Mapleton stables, and the long, sloping plain in front of us was tinged with gold, deepening into rich ruddy browns where the faded ferns and brambles caught the evening light. But the glories of the landscape were all wasted upon my companion, who was sunk in the deepest thought.

"It's this way, Watson," said he at last. "We may leave the question of who killed John Straker for the instant, and confine ourselves to finding out what has become of the horse. Now, supposing he broke away during or after the tragedy, where could he have gone to? The horse is a very gregarious creature. If left to himself his instincts would have been either to return to King's Pyland or go over to Mapleton. Why should he run wild upon the moor? He would surely have been seen by now. And why should gypsies kidnap him? These people always clear out when they hear of trouble, for they do not wish to be pestered by the police. They could not hope to sell such a horse. They would run a great risk and gain nothing by taking him. Sudely that is clear."

"Where is he, then?"

"I have already said that he must have gone to King's Pyland or to Mapleton. He is not at King's Pyland. Therefore, he is at Mapleton. Let us take that as a working hypothesis and see what it leads us to. This part of the moor, as the Inspector remarked, is very hard and dry. But it falls away toward Mapleton, and you can see from here that there is a long hollow over yonder, which must have been very wet on Monday night. If our supposition is correct, then the horse must have crossed that, and there is the point where we should look for his tracks."

We had been walking briskly during this conversation, and a few more minutes brought us to the hollow in question. At Holmes' request I walked down the bank to the right, and he to the left, but I had not taken fifty paces before I heard him give a shout, and saw him waving his hand to me. The track of a horse was plainly outlined in the soft earth in front of him, and the shoe which he took from his pocket exactly fitted the impression.

"See the value of imagination," said Holmes. "It is the one quality which Gregory lacks. We imagined what might have happened, acted upon the supposition, and find ourselves justified. Let us proceed."

We crossed the marshy bottom and passed over a quarter of a mile of dry, hard turf. Again the ground sloped, and again we came on the tracks. Then we lost them for half a mile, but only to pick them up once more quite close to Mapleton. It was Holmes who saw them first, and he stood pointing with a look of triumph upon his face. A man's track was visible beside the horse's.

"The horse was alone before," I cried.

"Quite so. It was alone before. Hullo, what is this?"

The double track turned sharp off and took the direction of King's Pyland Holmes whistled, and we both followed along after it. His eyes were on the trail, but I happened to look a little to one side, and saw to my surprise the same tracks coming back again in the opposite direction.

"One for you, Watson," said Holmes, when I pointed it out. "You have saved us a long walk, which would have brought us back on our own tracks. Let us follow the return track."

We had not to go far. It ended at the paving of asphalt which led up to the gates of the Mapleton stables. As we approached, a groom ran out from them.

"We don't want any loiterers about here," said he.

"I only wished to ask a question," said Holmes, with his finger and thumb in his waiscoat pocket. "Should I be too early to see your master, Mr. Silas Brown, if I were to call at five o'clock tomorrow morning?"

"Bless you, sir, if anyone is about he will be, for he is always the first stirring. But here he is, sir, to answer your questions for himself. No, sir, no; it is as much as my place is worth to let him see me touch your money. Afterwards if you like."

As Sherlock Holmes replaced the half crown which he had drawn from his pocket, a fierce-looking elderly man strode out from the gate, with a hunting-crop swinging in his hand.

"What's this, Dawson?" he cried. "No gossiping! Go about your business! And you, what the devil do you want here?"

"Ten minutes' talk with you, my good sir," said Holmes, in the sweetest of voices

"I've no time to talk with every gadabout. We want no strangers here. Be off, or you may find a dog at your heels."

Holmes leaned forward and whispered something in the trainer's ear. He started violently and flushed to the temples.

"It's a lie!" he shouted; "an infernal lie!"

"Very good. Shall we argue about it in public, or talk it over in your parlor?"

"Oh, come in if you wish to."

Holmes smiled. "I shall not keep you more than a few minutes, Watson," said he. "Now, Mr. Brown, I am quite at your disposal."

It was twenty minutes, and the reds had faded into grays, before Holmes and the trainer reappeared. Never had I seen such a change as had been brought about in Silas Brown in that short time. His face was ashy pale, beads of perspiration shone upon his brow, and his hands shook until the hunting-crop wagged like a branch in the wind. His bullying, overbearing manner was all gone, too, and he cringed along at my companion's side like a dog with its master.

"Your instructions will be done. It shall all be done," said he.

"There must be no mistake," said Holmes, looking round at him. The other winced as he read the menace in his eyes.

"Oh, no, there shall be no mistake. It shall be there. Should I change it first or not?"

Holmes thought a little and then burst out laughing. "No, don't" said he; "I shall write to you about it. Now tricks, now or"—

"Oh, you can trust me, you can trust me!"

"Yes I think I can. Well, you shall hear from me tomorrow." He turned upon his heel disregarding the trembling hand which the other held out to him, and we set off for King's Pyland.

"A more perfect compound of the bully, coward, and sneak than Master Silas Brown I have seldom met with," remarked Holmes, as we trudged along together.

"He has the horse then?"

"He tried to bluster out of it, but I described to him so exactly what his actions had been upon that morning that he is convinced that I was watching him. Of course you observed the peculiarly square toes in the impression and that his own boots exactly correspond to them. Again, of course no subordinate would have dared do such a thing. I described to him how, when according to his custom he was the first down, he perceived a strange horse wandering over the moor. How he went out to it, and his astonishment at recognizing, from the white forehead which had given the favorite its name, that chance had put in his power the only horse which could beat the one upon which he had his money. Then I described how his first impulse had been to lead him back to King's Pyland, and how the devil had shown him how he could hide the horse until the race was over, and how he had led it back and concealed it at Mapleton. When I told him every detail he gave up and thought only of saving his own skin."

"But his stables had been searched?"

"Oh, an old horse-fakir like him has many a dodge."

"But are you not afraid to leave the horse in his power now, since he has every interest in injuring it?"

"My dear fellow, he will guard it as the apple of his eye. He knows that his only hope of mercy is to produce it safe."

"Col. Ross did not impress me as a man who would be likely to show much mercy in any case."

"The matter does not rest with Col. Ross. I follow my own methods, and tell as much or as little as I choose. That is the advantage of being unofficial. I don't know whether you observed it, Watson, but the Colonel's manner has been just a trifle cavalier to me. I am inclined now to have a little amusement at his expense. Say nothing to him about the horse."

"Certainly not without your permission."

"And of course this is all quite a minor point compared to the question of who killed John Straker."

"And you will devote yourself to that?"

"On the contrary, we both go back to London by the night train."

I was thunderstruck by my friend's words. We had only been a few hours in Devonshire, and that he should give up an investigation which had begun so brilliantly was quite incomprehensible to me. Not a word more could I draw from him until we were back at the trainer's house. The Colonel and the Inspector were awaiting us in the parlor.

"My friend and I return to town by the night express," said Holmes. "We have had a charming little breath of your beautiful Dartmoor air."

"So you despair of arresting the murderer of poor Straker," said he.

Holmes shrugged his shoulders. "There are certainly grave difficulties in the way," said he. "I have every hope, however, that your horse will start upon Tuesday, and I beg that you will have your jockey in readiness. Might I ask for a photograph of Mr. John Straker?"

"My dear Gregory, you anticipate all my wants. If I might ask you to wait here for an instant, I have a question which I should like to put to the maid."

"I must say that I am rather disappointed in our London consultant," said Col. Ross, bluntly, as my friend left the room. "I do not see that we are any further than when he came."

"At least you have his assurance that your horse will run," said I.

"Yes, I have his assurance," said the Colonel, with a shrug of his shouders. "I should prefer to have the horse."

I was about to make some reply in defense of my friend when he entered the room again.

"Now gentlemen" said he. "I am quite ready for Tavistock."

As we stepped into the carriage one of the stable lads held the door open for us. A sudden idea seemed to occur to Holmes, for he leaned forward and touched the lad upon the sleeve.

"You have a few sheep in the paddock," he said. "Who attends to them?"

"I do, sir."

"Have you noticed anything amiss with them of late?"

"Well, sir, not of much account; but three of them have gone lame, sir."

I could see that Holmes was extremely pleased, for he chuckled and rubbed his hands together.

"A long shot, Watson; a very long shot," said he, pinching my arm. "Gregory, let me recommend to your attention this singular epidemic among the sheep. Drive on, coachman!"

Col. Ross still wore an expression which showed the poor opinion which he had formed of my companion's ability, but I saw by the Inspector's face that his attention had been keenly aroused.

"You consider that to be important?" he asked.

"Exceedingly so."

"Is there any point to which you would wish to draw my attention?"

"To the curious incident of the dog in the night time."

"That was the curious incident," remarked Sherlock Holmes.

Four days later Holmes and I were again in the train, bound for Winchester to see the race for the Wessex Cup. Col. Ross met us by appointment outside the station, and we drove in his drag to the course beyond the town. His face was grave, and his manner was cold in the extreme.

"I have seen nothing of my horse," said he.

"I suppose that you would know him when you saw him?" said Holmes.

The Colonel was very angry. "I have been on the turf for twenty years, and never was asked such a question as that before," said he. "A child would know Silver Blaze, with his white forehead and his mottled off foreleg."

"How is the betting?"

"Well, that is the curious part of it. You could have got fifteen to one yesterday, but the price has become shorter and shorter, until you can hardly get three to one now."

"Hum!" said Holmes. "Somebody knows something, that is clear."

As the drag drew up in the inclosure near the grand stand I glanced at the card to see the entries.

Wessex Plate (it ran) 50 sovs. each h ft with 1,000 sovs. added for four and five year olds. Second £300, Third, £200. New course (one mile and five furlongs).

1. Mr. Heath Newton's The Negro. Red Cap. Cinnamon jacket.
2. Col. Wardlaw's Pugilist. Pink cap. Blue and black jacket.
3. Lord Backwater's Desborough. Yellow cap and sleeves.
4. Col. Ross' Silver Blaze. Black cap. Red jacket.
5. Duke of Balmoral's Iris. Yellow and black stripes.
6. Lord Singleford's Rasper. Purple cap. Black sleeves.

"We scratched our other one, and put all hopes on your word," said the Colonel. "Why, what is that? Silver Blaze favorite?"

"Five to four against Silver Blaze!" roared the ring. "Five to four against Silver Blaze! Five to fifteen against Desborough! Five to four on the field!"

"There are the numbers," I cried. "They are all six there."

"All six there? Then my horse is running," cried the Colonel in great agitation. "But I don't see him. My colors have not passed."

"Only five have passed. This must be he."

As I spoke a powerful bay horse swept out from the weighing inclosure and cantered past us, bearing on its back the well-known black and red of the Colonel.

"That's not my horse," cried the owner. "That beast has not a white hair upon its body. What is this that you have done, Mr. Holmes?"

"Well, well, let us see how he gets on," said my friend, imperturbably. For a few minutes he gazed through my fieldglass. "Capital! An excellent start!" he cried suddenly. "There they are, coming round the curve!"

From our drag we had a superb view as they came up the straight. The six horses were so close together that a carpet could have covered them, but half way up the yellow of the Mapleton stable showed to the front. Before they reached us, however, Desborough's bolt was shot, and the Colonel's horse, coming away with a rush, passed the post a good six lengths before its rival, the Duke of Balmoral's Iris making a bad third.

"It's my race, anyhow," gasped the Colonel, passing his hand over his eyes. "I confess that I can make neither head nor tail of it. Don't you think that you have kept up your mystery long enough, Mr. Holmes?"

"Certainly, Colonel, you shall know everything. Let us go round and have a look at the horse together. Here he is," he continued, as we made our way into the weighing inclosure, where only owners and their friends find admittance. "You have only to wash his face and his leg in spirits of wine, and you will find that he is the same old Silver Blaze as ever."

"You take my breath away!"

"I found him in the hands of a fakir, and took the liberty of running him just as he was sent over."

"My dear sir, you have done wonders. The horse looks very fit and well. It never went better in its life. I owe you a thousand apologies for having doubted your ability. You have done me a great service by recovering my horse. You would do me a greater still if you could lay your hands on the murderer of John Straker."

"I have done so," said Holmes, quietly.

The Colonel and I stared at him in amazement. "You have got him! Where is he, then?"

"He is here."

"Here! Where?"

"In my company at the present moment."

The Colonel flushed angrily. "I quite recognize that I am under obligations to you, Mr. Holmes," said he, "but I must regard what you have just said as either a very bad joke or an insult."

Sherlock Holmes laughed. "I assure you that I have not associated you with the crime, Colonel," said he. "The real murderer is standing immediately behind you." He stepped past and laid his hand upon the glossy neck of the thoroughbred.

"The horse!" cried both the Colonel and myself.

"Yes, the horse. And it may lessen his guilt if I say that it was done in self-defense, and that John Straker was a man who was entirely unworthy of your confidence. But there goes the bell, and as I stand to win a little on this next race, I shall defer a lengthy explanation until a more fitting time."

We had the corner of a Pullman car to ourselves that evening as we whirled back to London, and I fancy that the journeo was a short one to Col. Ross as well as to myself, as we listened to our companion's narrative of the events which had occurred at the Dartmoor training stables upon that Monday night, and the means by which he had unraveled tem.

"I confess," said he, "that any theories which I had formed from newspaper reports were entirely erroneous. And yet there were indications there, had they not been overlaid by other details which concealed their true import. I went to Devonshire with the conviction that Fitzroy Simpson was the true culprit, although, of course, I saw that the evidence against him was by no means complete. It was while I was in the carriage, just as we reached the trainer's house, that the immense significance of the curried mutton occurred to me. You may remember that I was distrait, and remained sitting after you had all alighted. I was marveling in my own mind how I could possibly have overloked so obvious a clue."

"I confess," said the Colonel, "that even now I cannot see how it helps us."

"It was the first link in my chain of reasoning. Powdered opinm is by no means tasteless. The flavor is not disagreeable, but it is perceptible. Were it mixed with any ordinary dish the eater would undoubtedly detect it, and would probably eat no more. A curry was exactly the medium which would disguise this taste. By no possible supposition could this stranger, Fitzroy Simpson, have caused curry to be served in the trainer's family that night, and it is surely too monstrous a coincidence to suppose that he happened to come along with powdered opium upon the very night when a dish happened to be served which would disguise the flavor. That is unthinkable. Therefore Simpson becomes eliminated from the case, and our attention centers upon Straker and his wife, the only two people who could have chosen curried mutton for supper that night. The opium was added after the dish was set aside for the stable boy, for the others had the same for supper with no ill effects. Which of them, then, had access to that dish without the maid seeing them?"

"Before deciding that question I had grasped the significance of the silence of the dog, for one true inference invariably suggests others. The Simpson incident had shown me that a dog was kept in the stables, and yet, though some one had been in and fetched out a horse, he had not barked enough to arouse the two lads in the loft. Obviously the midnight visitor was some one whom the dog knew well.

"I was already convinced, or almost convinced, that John Straker went down to the stables in the dead of the night and took out Silver Blaze. For what purpose? For a dishonest one, obviously, or why should he drug his own stable boy? And yet I was at a loss to know why. There have been cases before now where trainers have made sure of great sums of money by laying against their own horses, through agents, and then preventing them from winning by fraud. Sometimes it is a pulling jockey. Sometimes it is some surer and subtler means. What was it here? I hoped that the contents of his pockets might help me to form a conclusion.

"And they did so. You cannot have forgotten the singular knife which was found in the dead man's hand, a knife which certainly no sane man would choose for a weapon. It was, as Dr. Watson told us, a form of knife which is used for the most delicate operations known in surgery. And it was to be used for a delicate operation that night. You must know, with your wide experience of turf matters, Col. Ross, that it is possible to make a slight nick upon the tendons of a horse's ham and to do it subcutaneously, so as to leave absolutely no trace. A horse so treated would develop a slight lameness, which would be put down to a strain in exercise or a touch of rheumatism, but never to foul play."

"Villain! Scoundrel!" cried the Colonel.

"We have here the explanation of why John Straker wished to take the horse out onto the moor. So spirited a creature would certainly have [illegible] the soundest of sleepers when it felt the prick of the knife. It was absolutely necessary to do it in the open air."

"I have been blind!" cried the Colonel. "Of course that was why he needed the candle, and struck the match."

"Undoubtedly. But in examining his belongings I was fortunate enough to discover not only the method of the crime, but even its motives. As a man of the world, Colonel, you know that men do not carry other people's bills about in their pockets. We have most of us quite enough to do to settle our own. I at once concluded that Straker was leading a double life and keeping a second establishment. The nature of the bill showed that there was a lady in the case, and one who had expensive tastes. Liberal as you are with your servants, one can hardly expect that they can buy twenty-guinea walking dresses for their ladies. I questioned Mrs. Straker as to the dress without her knowing it, and having satisfied myself that it had never reached her, I made a note of the milliner's address, and felt that by calling there with Straker's photograph I could easily dispose of the mythical Derbyshire.

"From that time on all was plain. Straker had led out the horse to a hollow where his light would be invisible. Simpson in his flight had dropped his cravat, and Straker had picked it up—with some idea, perhaps, that he might use it in securing the horse's leg. Once in the hollow, he had got behind the horse and had struck a light; but the creature, frightened at the sudden glare, and with the strange instinct of animals feeling that some mischief was intended, had lashed out, and the steel shoe had struck Straker full on the forehead. He had already, in spite of the rain, taken off his overcoat in order to do his delicate task, and so, as he fell, his knife gashed his thigh. Do I make it clear?"

"Wonderful!" cried the Colonel. "Wonderful! You might have been there!"

"My final shot was, I confess, a very long one. It struck me that so astute a man as Straker would not undertake this delicate tendon-nicking without a little practice. What could he practice on? My eyes fell upon the sheep, and I asked a question which, rather to my surprise, showed that my surmise was correct.

"When I returned to London I called upon the milliner, who had recognized Straker as an excellent customer of the name of Derbyshire, who had a very dashing wife, with a strong partiality for expensive dresses. I have no doubt that this woman had plunged him over head and ears in debt, and so led him into this miserable plot."

"You have explained all but one thing," cried the Colonel. "Where was the horse?"

"Ah, it bolted, and was cared for by one of your neighbors. We must have an amnesty in that direction, I think. This is Claphan Junction, if I am not mistaken, and we shall be in Victoria in less than ten minutes. If you care to smoke a cigar in our rooms, Colonel, I shall be happy to give you any other details which might interest you."

Cured Her Drunken Father.

This young lady says:—"My father often promised to stop drinking but returned to it worse than ever. After a terrible spree, he said, 'It's no use, I can't stop drinking.' I decided to give him the Tasteless Samaria Prescription, and did so in his coffee, tea and food entirely without his knowledge. One package removed all his desire for liquor. It is now 15 months since we gave it to him, and we feel sure the cure will last."

FREE SAMPLE and pamphlet, giving full particulars, testimonials, and price, sent in plain sealed envelope. Correspondence sacredly confidential. Enclose stamp for reply. Address—THE SAMARIA REMEDY CO. 23 Jordan Street, TORONTO, Ont.

W. D. Cowan of Regina expresses typical Western taste.

Western people are noted above everything else for their desire for the very best in the way of things which go to make up their home surroundings. A large part of the year has to be spent in the home and they believe that nothing is too good to make home attractive.

That Dr. W. D. Cowan, a most prominent Westerner, should prefer the New Scale Williams to any other piano bears out this Company's contention that the New Scale Williams is pre-eminently the Great Canadian Instrument, as the following letter shows:—

"The New Scale Williams Piano that I purchased from you recently pleases us in every particular and I cheerfully recommend this make of piano to any one thinking of purchasing one. I considered very carefully all other makes before buying mine, and decided upon a New Scale Williams as the best investment for my money. It has the richest tone, and in every way it is superior to anything I have seen and it gives me great pleasure to recommend it. Wishing you continued success, I remain,"

Yours respectfully,
DR. W. D. COWAN.

Good Bread should please the Eye as well as the Palate.

Why does the dainty housewife delight in snowy napery, glittering cut-glass, burnished silver, delicate china and all other table allurements dear to feminine hearts?

It is not that we appreciate the appearance of our food almost as much as the taste of it?

Bread may be ever so wholesome, well-flavored and made of scientifically milled flour, but with all these qualities we want it to look dainty, appetising, snowy-white, with nut-brown crust, and be firm and silky in texture.

Royal Household Flour makes just that kind of bread.

The electrical purification and sterilization of Royal Household Flour makes it yield not only absolutely pure bread, but bread of snowy whiteness and beautiful texture—bread that will grace the prettiest table or give beauty to the humblest meal served on the plainest dishes.

You can prove this by trying a 25 lb. bag—you must have flour, why not have the best.

OUR BOYS and GIRLS

Conducted by Polly Evans

Jack Horner's Pie.

LAST month you heard of the harvest moon. This week you will see another moon with the same peculiarity — coming up for two or three nights at the same time. This moon is called the hunter's moon — not, as generally supposed, because it is then so light that hunters can shoot by moonlight, but because the harvests having all been gathered there is nothing to interfere with the sportsman's good time.

Some of you may be interested in airships; some of you may even have seen them circling around your heads up above the houses, as in New York last month. Who knows, long before you are grown, we may be traveling through the air just as naturally as we now take a trolley or railway car. It would not be half so surprising as it was to our grandparents when they saw the first locomotive, for now we are getting more and more used to marvels.

After all, traveling in the air is not such a novelty. For many centuries people have been making experiments in aerial navigation. Do any of you recall the old Greek myth of the Escape of Daedalus and his son Icarus from the wicked King Minas? Daedalus made wings of feathers cemented with wax and away they flew. Unfortunately, Icarus forgot to obey his father's command, and was so fascinated with being like a bird that he soared up and up and up till the sun melted his wax wings, when down he droppel into the ocean, and only his father escaped. What is this fable but a hint that the old Greeks dreamed of airships just as we do?

Still another Greek tradition of air travel is that of a "wooden dove," invented by the mathematician Archytas. This dove, it was said, could fly for a long time, and was set in motion by "hidden and inclosed air."

Through the Middle Ages they used to speculate on air travel. There was an Englishman — Bishop Wilkins—who believed the moon was inhabited, and grew so enthusiastic about intercourse between the two worlds that he tried to have Parliament pass a sort of aerial navigation act to accommodate the man in the moon as well as the men of earth. This visionary old bishop used to prophesy "that in future ages it will be as usual for a man to call for his wings when he is going on a journey as it is now to call for his boots." People always laughed and mocked at the bishop's ideas; and as he lived back in the seventeenth century, and wings have not yet rivaled boots in the twentieth-century wardrobe, I fear the worthy churchman deserved it.

Speaking of flying, recent experiments show that the little pigeons which circle so easily around our heads can fly fifty-five miles an hour, while the great express trains of man's invention are easily beaten by swallows, who often reach a speed of ninety-two miles an hour.

There is a plant down in South Africa, called by the hard name of "mesembryanthemum," which so closely resembles a pebble that it has been picked up in mistake for one. The leaves of another variety of this plant, which are about as large as ducks' eggs, resemble a stone of brownish gray color tinged with green; still another species looks like quartz pebbles.

Fortunately, this plant of the big name has a good many other names, some of which are so curious you may enjoy hearing them. There are about three or four hundred varieties of the mesembryanthemum, which, as a rule, has thick, fleshy leaves, and white, yellow or rose colored flowers. The fruit is a capsule which when the rain strikes it swells out, opens up and scatters its seeds. The flowers, as a rule, only bloom about noon, so they are sometimes called the midday flower. Other names for certain varieties are fig-marigold, pig's-face, dog-chop, cat-chop, Hottentot-fig, the hatchet-leafed marigold and the ice plant.

HERE is a picture of the ice plant. The leaves are covered with glistening bladder - shaped hairs that sparkle in the sun like particles of ice. The hatchet-leaved marigold has a leaf exactly like an axe or cleaver. The whole plant of the Hottentot fig or kou is beaten or twisted by the natives, then is allowed to ferment and is chewed like tobacco. It is intoxicating, and also acts like opium in dulling the senses. In this country the mesembryanthemum is only found, as a rule, in greenhouses.

You all know of the Queen whose nose the blackbirds nipped off as she was hanging out clothes; but Polly Evans is going to tell you of a real, live Queen who only a few years ago was set to scrubbing floors in her own palace. This was Queen Sophie, the wife of King Oscar of Sweden, of whom you have heard not long ago. The poor Queen had been very ill, and the doctors said exercise was the only thing that would save her. Unfortunately, her lungs would not stand the nipping cold out-of-door air of Sweden, so she was ordered to do housework. First she was set to scrubbing floors, and after that she was sent into the kitchen among the pots and pans to learn to cook. After a week or two the royal lady claimed they overworked her. As she still must exercise and could not go out, they brought her horse into the palace, covered the floors with cocoa matting, put in a padded railing, and made the poor Queen canter around every morning to piano music. This was hard on the horse, as well as the Queen, for the beast was so frightened at seeing himself in the mirrors that it was necessary to cover them.

The Proving of Sissy Wainright

DICK, Rod, Hen! Hi, there, fellows, where are you?" shouted Tag Smith late one Friday as he rushed into the Crowningshield barn, where the S. G. T. C. was to hold its weekly meeting of arrangements.

The mystic S. G. T. C., whose members were sworn to eternal secrecy and undying loyalty by solemn initiation rites, was a club of great distinction in the town of Portsmouth. To some time join its exclusive circle was the aspiration of every youngster in the place.

"Ho, fellows! You can't fool me! I'm on to you. You might as well show up if you want to hear some news," called Tag.

For a minute there was silence. Then a shower of corncobs, apple cores and hay fell on the unfortunate Tag, as with a wild whoop down the ladder from the loft swarmed eleven boys, from 14 to 16 years of age.

"Montague Wellesley Smith, you are hereby fined 25 cents for delaying the session of this important body, which will immediately convene in its hall of assembly," said President Rod Crowningshield.

"Chuck it all, fellows, you'll not fine me when you hear my news," responded Tag, as the boys scrambled into a roomy old coach that had stood in the Crowningshield barn for fifty years, and was the usual meeting place of the S. G. T. C.

"The meeting will come to order. We will waive roll-call and reading of the minutes to hear what High Exalted Brother Smith has to divulge," announced the president.

"Your Most Serene Almightiness, I beg leave to divulge, as you so elegantly term it, an invitation to this body from our uncle, James Stanton, to a nutting party to-morrow on Mount Marvel."

"Bully!" shouted Hen Newton. "I move we accept unanimously."

"There is but one drawback," continued Tag. "My misguided relative has asked some damsels, also Sis Wainright."

"Oh!" groaned the S. G. T. C. in chorus.

"A Merry Party Was Packed in the Hay Wagon"

"The ladies might be endured, but Sissy is a pill that jags the throat. To think his mother had the face to tell mine 'she wished he were a S. G. T. C.,'" sniffed Jack Peters.

"Well, I move we waive all objections and accept," said Rod. "But ere we adjourn let's drink a bumper of this raspberry vinegar to making it hot for Sissy to-morrow."

Early next morning a merry party, packed in Mr. Stanton's long hay wagon, set out to gather nuts on Mount Marvel.

The S. G. T. C. was in full force, while the girls, with their bright faces and gay laughs, proved a welcome addition. The one outsider seemed to be Barton Wainright, otherwise "Sissy."

Mrs. Wainright, having lost several children, cherished with undue care her one remaining son. Barton, from living entirely among older people, had a manner which the boys dubbed "airs," while his natural neatness made him particular in his dress to the point of "sissiness," according to the same critics.

The long ride to the foot of the mountain was enlivened by songs and jests and a story from Uncle James of an exciting nutting expedition of his boyhood, when an Indian played an important part.

On the ride, barring an occasional tickling from a wisp of hay, Barton fared fairly well, the S. G. T. C. fearing the keen eye of Uncle James; but in the climb up the mountain the boy's neat appearance suffered from unexpected splashes of mud and from a sudden trip-up in fording a shallow, sparkling stream.

The party was soon hard at work, each striving to win the prize offered by Uncle James to the swiftest picker.

Barton's pile did not increase rapidly, owing to many a red-brown nut dropped in the bags of the smaller girls. Frequent burs from the overhanging branches hit him with stinging swiftness. Strange to say, these burs always fell from trees up which one of the S. G. T. C. had shinned.

After lunch, which was vastly relished by the hungry party, Uncle James said:

"I am going down to see if the horses are fed. Be careful how you wander far from these trees; there is an ugly precipice near here."

Somehow interest had waned in nut picking.

Rod proposed prisoner's base. He was one of the captains and Tag Smith another. Soon the woods rang with shouts as the players dashed wildly among the trees.

"Let's give Sissy a chase," whispered Rod to Hen Newton. "I don't believe Miss Nancy can run; look how he never comes out farther than that red maple. We'll corner him and keep him in prison the rest of the game."

But "Sissy" developed unexpected powers as a sprinter; he turned and doubled the trees till neither Rod nor Hen could touch him.

"He Lifted Rodney to Safety"

As he rounded a slender spruce sapling, Rod, who was gaining on him, could not stop. Suddenly he disappeared. There was one agonized scream of fear and then silence.

"Rod's over the precipice! Rod's killed!" shouted Hen.

Quickly the party gathered to the spot, the stunned boys and girls not daring even to look for their comrade.

At the first scream, Barton turned and ran quickly back. Cautiously he approached the edge and looked over.

"I don't believe Rod's dead, boys," he cried. "He has not fallen all the way, but is caught on a bush. He seems to be hurt, though. There's a ledge below that bush; if I can reach him and pull him on it, he'll be safe till help comes. I'll go down and see what I can do."

"Think of your mother, Barton," whispered Nellie Grant. "What would she do if anything happened to you?"

Barton turned rather pale.

"My mother would tell me to do my duty," he said bravely. "Besides, I'm used to climbing. Some of you fellows run for Mr. Stanton and ropes."

Quickly removing his coat, Barton went over the edge of the cliff. Cautiously he picked his way until the ledge was reached. Then, with a great effort and swaying under the heavy strain, he lifted the unconscious Rodney to safety.

To the terrified watchers it seemed an age until Mr. Stanton and several farmers arrived, and with strong ropes pulled up both boys. Rodney was still unconscious, while Barton was livid from a wound in his head and a sprained arm.

The ride home was a silent one, though, as Uncle James said, "they could all thank Barton that it was not a tragic one instead."

The doctor soon restored Rod, unhurt, but Barton's wound was more tedious, confining him to the house.

The next day, Sunday though it was, there was a special meeting of the S. G. T. C. in Rod's room.

It read:

"The Saturday Good Time Club will be honored if Barton Wainright will become a member."

Queen Janna's Cure

One morning as the lowest scullion of the palace went down to the cellar to shovel the royal coal to light the royal fire to make the royal cup of chocolate for the Queen's breakfast, he heard a queer "Goo-ah-goo!" from the warmest corner of the coal bin.

"What's that I hear?" shivered the scullion; "can the demons whom Mother Know-it-All tells me lives in the heart of the great mountain be come to carry me off for stealing their little coal-black brothers; those brothers with the glistening eyes that snap so savagely when I warm them in the flame?"

"Ah-goo! ah-goo! ah-goo!" sounded again; then was heard the rippliest, chirpiest tones, like a whole nest of humming birds poised on a thicket of their favorite scarlet trumpet flowers.

"The demons do not appear bad-tempered this morning," said the scullion; "I'll just take a peep and see what they are like."

Fearfully he crept along toward the corner of the coal bin, the light from his tallow dip throwing on the whitewashed walls weird shadows, that made him shiver and shake worse than ever.

"Goo! goo! goo!" sounded right at his feet.

There in the coal scuttle, which last night he had left half full of coal, on a wonderful wadded quilt of light-blue satin, studded with silver stars, lay—a tiny baby.

It was the roundest, pink and white ball of a baby you ever saw, with fluffy yellow hair, curling tight to its little head, great blue eyes, that twinkled and twinkled, a cunning little nose and a rosy, cupid's bow of a mouth, that smiled every minute and never once quivered into a cry.

"Good lack," cried the scullion, "it do beat all. Whence came this kid?"

"Ah, gooly! googly! goo!" chuckled the baby, blinking smilingly at the twisting candle flame in the scullion's trembling hand. Then the little creature reached up its tiny hand and caught hold of the scullion's dirty, black finger, holding on tight.

Suddenly a thought struck the scullion.

Greatly excited and still shouting "The cure!" he picked up coal scuttle, baby and all and ran up the palace stairs, the baby laughing harder than ever in its wonderful new chariot.

Now it happened that a cloud hung over the palace of Nilenfanta. Beautiful Queen Janna, who should have been the merriest, happiest queen in the world, grieved and grieved day and night. Nothing pleased her; nothing could make her smile.

The King, her husband, who adored her, and who remembered the day when he had brought her home a gay, sunny Princess, always laughing, was terrified at the change in her. From worry about his Queen he also had become sad. The courtiers, too, who always followed the royal lead, went around with long faces. In the whole palace gloom reigned.

Not that good King Charitas had not tried every means to restore the sunny spirits of his Queen. Bushels and bushels of gold had been spent in efforts to make her smile. They had brought her clothes of silk and satin and velvet, cobwebby laces and rare jewels. The King had hired Parisian harlequins, English Punches, Dutch clowns and even a whole troupe of pickaninny cake-walkers from America to try to amuse Queen Janna. There had been balls and parties, singers of comic songs, a green parrot that "ha! ha! haad!" so loud that all hearing him were convulsed, and even a little pugdog who stood on his head and twirled in the most comical way.

But it was all in vain.

The Queen still moped and sighed, never speaking nor smiling. No one could find out what ailed her. She wanted something, but what she herself did not know.

So the King sent messengers to scout far-off lands in search of this great remedy that was to set the Queen a-smiling.

This morning the mournful, long-faced court was assembled in the royal bedchamber, waiting to serve the King and Queen's chocolate and toast.

"What delays that scullion?" whispered the first lady of the Queen's shoebox to the lady of the stocks and girdles.

"Horrible!"

"The Cure! The Cure!"

A moment's silence!

Then Queen Janna just snuggled the tiny pink and white morsel up close to her and laughed out loud, "Ha! ha! ha!"

"Ho! ho! ho!" shouted the delighted King.

"He! he! he!" echoed the courtiers.

The scullion grinned an ear-wide grin, for he knew his fortune was made.

As for the baby, she chirped and chuckled with glee, for she knew she had found a happy home that she could always keep gay.

If you listened right hard, I wouldn't be surprised if you could hear them all laughing right now in the once sad palace of Nilenfanta over the pranks of that wonderful baby.

Puzzles & Problems

Two Charades.

My first, it is said, is as good as a mile;
My second the Populists think is most vile;
My whole, just a lack of my last, one might style.

A river of Scotland, too;
A single ring of a chain, or a torch,
Should reveal my second to you.

My third a tossing about is
A path and a furlong of land;
'Tis also that form of the verb to go
With which has should not walk hand in hand.

My whole is a failing in duty,
An offender or culprit as well;
Now, girls and boys, put your wits to work
The name of it soon to tell.

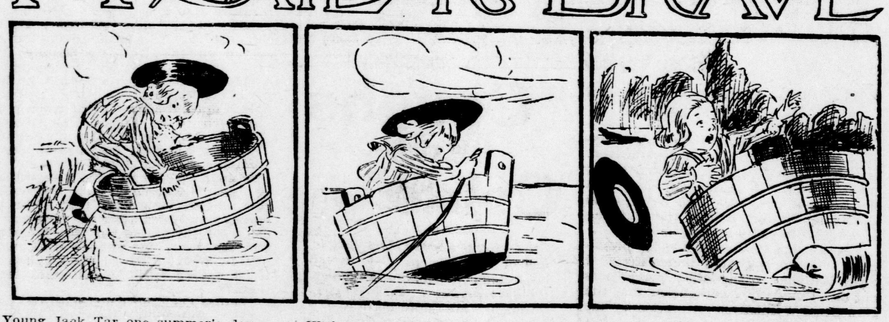
Rainbow Chain of Balls.

Recently Polly Evans told you how to prepare a home-made ball. If you have tried it and have found it is not hard to crochet, why not make a chain of balls? These are splendid to amuse the baby.

Wrap seven small balls about one inch or an inch and a half in diameter. Crochet covers for them in the manner described for a home-made ball. Make each cover a color of the rainbow, as red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo and violet.

When the balls are finished crochet hangers to match. Straight bands of plain crocheting will answer nicely. Make these hangers of different lengths, and fasten all to a rubber or ivory ring.

A Sailor Brave



Young Jack Tar one summer's day
From his family ran away;
When to a sparkling stream he came,
"Since I do bear a sailor's name,"
Quoth he,
With glee,
"I'll set forth on the raging main."

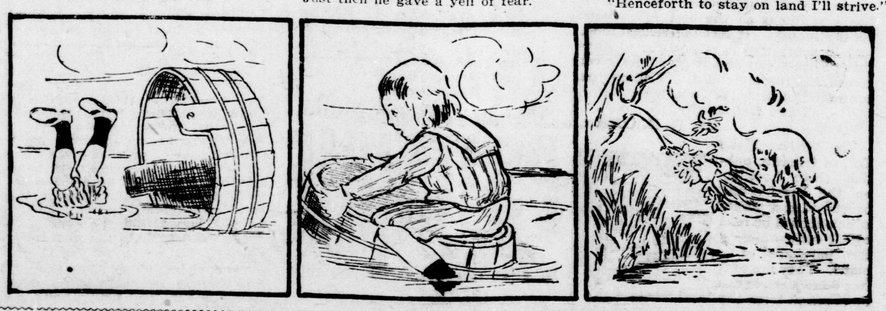
He put to sea, this skipper brave,
Unmindful of the rolling wave;
He took no crew, no sail, no oar
With which to cruise from shore to shore.

Said he,
"You see,
So staunch a barque needs nothing more."

To beat Columbus was his aim.
"I sure shall win undying fame;
Perhaps a whale I'll even spear."
Just then he gave a yell of fear.

A rock
Did block
His vessel's path, and it did veer.

The skipper's fate, alas, you note;
He took a tumble with his boat;
He could not swim, nor float nor dive,
So when the shore he gained alive
He said,
With dread,
"Henceforth to stay on land I'll strive."



TOO APPROPRIATE

MARION SUTHERLAND was a very precocious baby; when but 3 years of age he could read all the Psalms. His special delight, however, was to spell out and ask the meaning of the big words he saw on circus posters. In this way the little fellow acquired the idea that all words he could not understand stood for animals.

One day, when seated in his mother's lap in a crowded street car, a very majestic and handsomely dressed woman, though unusually stout, was holding on to the strap directly in front of them. A sudden lurch of the car threw her on the child's lap.

With an apparent smile he stooped, saying, "My dear, you must have thought you were struck by an avalanche."

To the intense mortification of his mother, Marion looked up and replied, in clear tones, heard by all in the car: "No, I didn't, I fot it was a wiononceros."

The lady, flushing deeply, laughingly said: "Oh, I see you have been at the Zoo."

"Yes I have," replied the child, "and I saw a hippopotamus there, too."

A QUEER OCCUPATION

SOMETIMES people choose queer ways to earn a living, but I wonder if you girls and boys know that about three or four hundred people in Paris support themselves by picking up old cigar and cigarette stumps they find on the streets? Not a very pleasant way to live, Polly Evans should say, but since these cigar pickers often make over a dollar a day by their strange occupation, I suppose they do not care very much about the unpleasantness.

These cigar pickers are often old, old men, who are too feeble to work at anything else, but sometimes they are young boys. They walk the streets for hours, searching carefully, and when they have found enough stumps they take them down under the bridges on the River Seine and prepare them for sale.

The end of the cigar that has been in the mouth is cut off and thrown away, then the rest is carefully chopped and put into neat packages of tobacco, which is sold to poor people for about a fifth less than they would have to pay for it in the stores.

HORNET CHASERS

CHASING hornets is such a dangerous pastime that you may like Polly Evans to tell you of a way it can be done without fear of being stung.

Divide any number of players into two camps—the chasers and the hornets. Place a mark or target either on a fence or on top of a pole to represent a hive. Each hornet has a tennis ball with which he seeks to hit the hive, around which the chasers are grouped,

Every ball driven back from the hive counts a point for the chasers. A ball touching the hive indirectly, even after it has been touched by a chaser, is good and counts for the hornets.

The hive is attacked and defended by the right and left hand alternately, as the umpire commands.

The side first making fifteen points wins, after which parts are changed, the hornets becoming chasers and vice versa.

NURSERY SEESAWS

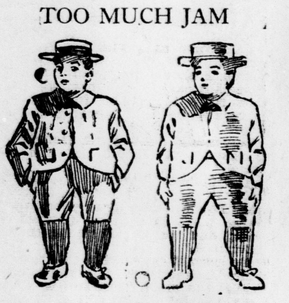
ONE of the great pleasures of summer is seesawing—to get a board over a fence or an old saw horse, and then up-and-down, up-and-down, "see-saw, Margery Daw," three or four of us on an end at once. Isn't it great sport?

No wonder we give it up regretfully when the cold days drive us in the house! But then we do not have to give it up in these days. For fine seesaws come for the nurseries—nice, smooth, planed boards on rather low standards, so that even the baby would not be much hurt if he fell off.

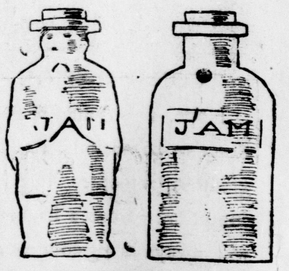
You can buy these house seesaws rather cheaply in the stores, but any boy with a tool box can make one for himself.

Get from a carpenter a long, not too thick, board, about a foot wide, plane it very smooth, so there is no danger of splinters, then oil and varnish it so that it will not show dirt. For the standard, cut in half the handles of two brooms and fasten them obliquely two to each end of another board, about six inches wide and four feet long. For greater strength stay these legs about three inches from the floor with longer pieces of wood cut from other old brooms.

TOO MUCH JAM



BEHOLD the sad end of young Sam,
Who spent his whole life eating jam,
Gooseberry, strawberry, raspberry, plum,
Quince butter, marmalades, peaches in rum,
Pineapple, currant—he'd spread them on thick;
Yet strangely enough he was never made sick.
Though his mother would scold and his father bewail
The fate that on jam-eaters fell without fail,
Greedy Sam, heeding not, ate of jam such a lot
That one terrible day he turned to a jam-pot.



A THOUGHTFUL BABY

MRS. S— always sang her small 2-year-old son to sleep with songs from Mother Goose, but as the little fellow insisted each night in hearing every one of the nursery jingles, she decided to give him music with less exciting story.

One evening she was singing Longfellow's "The Day is Done," when the child in her arms looked up and said:

"Muzzie, ven vill the day be done?"

"When is a day done, dear? When the sun goes to bed each evening."

"No, muzzie," said this mere baby with an earnest, thoughtful look in his big brown eyes, "I mean ven vill all the days and nights be done?"

TORONTO.

Toronto, Oct. 6.—Total stock receipts at the city cattle market this week were 242 cars, with 3,791 head of cattle, 6,294 sheep and lambs, 1,546 hogs, 250 calves and 24 horses. There was an improvement in trade the latter end of the week. Had it not been for such heavy runs prices would doubtless have shown more decided strength, with good advances. As it was, the larger offerings, including too large a proportion of inferior quality, had a tendency to offset the upward trend of the market for the better qualities. The export trade has been quiet, but there has been a very active trade in feeding cattle, and a good number of this class are still wanted. The best butcher cattle were in good demand, the market holding steady to firmer. Roug common stockers and canners fetch only poor prices.

There were only six cars of stock delivered today, mostly sheep and lambs. Everything was cleared off in a steady market.

GAVE PURSE OF GOLD

The Talbot Street Sunday School was the scene last night of a very happy social function, given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Brown. For many years Mr. and Mrs. Brown have been connected with Talbot Street Church, the former as Sunday school superintendent, and Mrs. Brown, in the choir, and on the occasion of their leaving to make Bay City their future home, a large number of friends assembled and several addresses were read, in which tributes to the work of each were conspicuous. A well-filled purse of gold and a written address was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Brown. On behalf of the deacons of the church, Mr. John Bendsall read an address. Several musical numbers were rendered, a solo by Mrs. Arthur Brown, and a duet by Mrs. Mills and Mrs. Brown being among them.

The best wishes of many other friends in the city will follow Mr. and Mrs. Brown to their new home.

SURPRISED AL DAVIS

London Old Boys of Sarnia Present Him With Gold Locket.

Mr. A. L. Davis, representative of the Carling Brewing Company, was most agreeably surprised at Sarnia on Wednesday by the members of Dunn's Band. Mr. Davis was in the town on business, but was persuaded to go across to Port Huron in the evening, and on his return was met at the dock by the band and escorted to the Chapman House, where a splendid banquet was spread. The band and about thirty of the London Old Boys acted as hosts for the occasion. Mr. E. T. Bates was toastmaster, and speeches were made by Messrs. Sinclair, Kerwin, Lachinger, Atkins (London), and Professor Dunn. Mr. Kerr, Mr. Buchanan, and the chorus contributed musical selections.

After this programme, Mr. Davis was called upon, and on behalf of the band and the Old Boys, was presented with a handsome gold locket, inscribed "Hello, Al, when did you get in? From the London Old Boys." On the reverse side, "To Al L. Davis, London, manager of Dunn's Band."

Mr. Davis was completely taken by surprise, but made a suitable reply. A pleasant evening was then spent. Mr. Davis entertained Dunn's Band during Old Boys week, and they took this method of expressing their gratitude to him.

LIPTON MAY TRY AGAIN

Houston's Silence Would Intimate That He May Challenge.

London, Oct. 7. — Sir Thomas Lipton has not intimated giving up the idea of challenging for the America's cup next year. His secretary told a correspondent today that at present Sir Thomas is in the country recovering from the effects of a recent riding accident.

R. P. Houston, who is credited with the intention of challenging for the cup, is the head of the shipping firm of R. P. Houston & Co., and a member of Parliament for Liverpool. He was not at home to callers on this subject, either at his city office or west end residence, and his steward said Mr. Houston had nothing to say on the matter for publication, which tends to corroborate the report that he is considering a challenge.

He has never been prominent in yachting circles and belongs to no well-known yacht club. He is a wealthy bachelor, 52 years old.

ETERNALLY DRY

New Southern Indiana Town Bars Intoxicants for All Time.

Chicago, Oct. 7. — A dispatch to the Tribune from Louisville, Ky., says: A new town has been laid out in Southern Indiana, Dubois County, and it bids fair to occupy a unique position as one of the conditions to property ownership is that no fermented liquors or intoxicants shall ever be sold within its confines. This means an eternally dry community.

The place is called Cuzco, and is 15 miles from French Lick Springs. Every deed issued contains a clause that if whisky is sold directly on the premises the land shall revert to the original owner, W. H. Nicholson, or his heirs.

Change Their Fiscal Year.

Montreal, Oct. 6.—The report of the directors of the Dominion Iron and Steel Company, to be presented at the annual meeting of the shareholders here on Oct 18, has been issued. This report is up to Dec. 31, but in future the fiscal year will be closed on May 31, as being more suitable to the business of the company. The report states that in the first five months of 1905 the earnings of the company fully provided for the fixed charges and sinking fund. The directors announce that in accordance with the understanding under which he accepted the office of director of works, Mr. Graham Fraser desires to be relieved from further service at an early date.

PERSIANS JOIN IN THE HOLY WAR

Cross Into Caucasus to Help Tartars Exterminate the Christians.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 6.—Prince Louis Napoleon, the new governor-general, confirms the alarming report that large numbers of Persian tribesmen in the North Caucasus have joined the Tartars in their holy war.

The shah is much alarmed about the affair, and has telegraphed his regrets to the Czar, together with an assurance that troops have been sent to the frontier to prevent Persians from crossing into Russian territory, and that the frontier officials must answer with their heads for any failure to perform their duty.

Documents have been seized at Batoum which show that Turkish agitators are urging the Tartars to carry the holy war throughout the southern provinces and drive all Christians off Mohammedan soil.

TO SAVE THE FALLS

American Civic Association Appeals to United States and Canada.

Cleveland, Oct. 6.—The American Civic Association at its sesion here today adopted resolutions calling upon the governing powers of the United States and Canada to do something to save Niagara Falls from what was termed "commercial vandalism." A committee was directed to send telegrams to President Roosevelt and Governor-General Earl Grey requesting that they appoint a joint commission to suggest the best way of preserving the Falls for the benefit of future generations. There was considerable discussion and the encroachment of corporations upon the natural wonders of the Falls was severely condemned.

OFF FOR KINGSTON

Forger and Bigamist Sent Down From Sarnia for Stiff Term.

Sarnia, Ont., Oct. 6. — Two young men, James J. Kitchen and William Crowder, were before Judge MacWatt this afternon for sentence. Kitchen was charged with forgery.

He is the young man who a few weeks ago passed a forged check on Cook's bank here for $425. His home is on St. Joseph's Island.

The judge sentenced him to two years in the penitentiary at Kingston.

Crowder is the young man who was arrested at Wyoming some time ago on a charge of bigamy, and of which he was found guilty.

A sentence of two years and three months in Kingston penitentiary was imposed on him.

BLACK HAND CAPTURES

Rescued Boy Says Woman and Another Boy Are Prisoners.

New York, Oct. 6.—The 6-year old kidnapped boy Tony Marendino said today that in the house where he was kept a prisoner in Upper Manhattan, a woman and another boy were also kept prisoners by a man and a woman who had held him captive and that they were trying to escape. Tony said his captors had threatened to kill him if he made a noise and had beaten him with a stick, but that he had plenty to eat and a good place to sleep.

The Brooklyn police today arraigned Faivoire Pitonia, of that city, in court and accused him of having acted as a go-between for the kidnappers. He was held in $5,000 bail, which was promptly offered by Marendino, the father of the boy Tony. The bail was refused pending an inquiry.

The police suspect that Marendino paid the ransom demanded, but Mrs. Marendino wholly denies this today.

BEEF TRUST TO FIGHT

Demurrers Entered Against Charges of Unlawful Conspiracy.

Chicago, Oct. 6. — Demurring to nine counts, pleas of not guilty on one count are being entered this afternoon by the 17 men and 5 corporations indicted on charges of conspiracy to monopolize the meat business.

The demurrers are general and charge ambiguity, vagueness, uncertainty and indefiniteness, against seven of the counts.

Allegations are made that double charges are contained in two of the remaining counts.

The first count, to which the plea of not guilty is entered, alleges unlawful conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce among the several states.

FIRE AT TILLSONBURG

M. C. R. Station and Two Adjacent Barns Destroyed.

Tillsonburg, Oct. 6.—The M. C. R. depot here was yesterday destroyed by fire. The fire started in the roof of the building, which was a wooden structure, 80 feet long, and had made such headway before it was discovered that the building could not be saved. The tickets, records, telegraphic instruments and the greater part of the furniture were saved. The fire spread to two barns that stood a short distance south of the depot, and both were destroyed. The fire is supposed to have been caused by a spark from a locomotive.

NOW LODGE UNDER WARRANT

A Chippewa Lodge Raised From the Grade of Dispensation.

St. Catharines, Oct. 6.—Masons from this city joined others from all over the district in the consecration of King Edward VII. Lodge at Chippewa the other evening. The hall was crowded with the finest Masonic gathering in the Niagara Peninsula for a long time.

The grand master was represented by R. W. Bro. McDonald, of Hagersville. D. D. G. M. of Niagara district, No 10. R. W. Bro. Bald, of Thorold, acted as D. D. G. M., and W. Bro. Leubsdorf, of this city, was grand director of ceremonies.

LIFE MILLIONS FIGHT BLACKMAIL

An Insurance Company Spends $1,103,920 in Five Years to Kill "Holdup" Bills.

New York, Oct. 6.—In five years the New York Life Insurance Company has spent $1,103,920 for "supervising" legislation in the United States and Canada. So testified John A. McCall, president of that company, before the Armstrong legislative investigating committee.

In making the statement President McCall declared that three-fourths of the insurance bills introduced in the legislatures of the several states every year were blackmailing bills pure and simple.

Of the $1,103,920 paid by the New York Life for legislative supervision, $476,927 was paid to Andrew Hamilton, who spent it in the various States without returning vouchers or accounting for it to the company.

The $476,927 spent by Andrew Hamilton does not, however, include the $235,000 paid to him for use in acquiring real estate in the rear of the home office building.

The further fact was disclosed also that Hamilton, in addition to the $476,000 and the $235,000, has $75,000 more of the New York Life Insurance Company's money, which, so far as the testimony before the investigating committee shows, has never been accounted for. This $75,000 was paid to Hamilton in 1904 for the purpose originally of paying the state taxes on the New York Life's premiums for the year 1903. But the money, through an understanding with President McCall, was used by Hamilton in connection with his legislative work. This amount, taken with the other two sums mentioned above, makes a grand total of nearly $800,000 which has been paid to Hamilton alone by the New York Life in the last six years and for which, according to President McCall's testimony, the New York Life has had no vouchers except the "judge's" receipts for the money.

President McCall defended the expenditure of so large a sum of money for "supervising" legislation on the ground that the New York Life is "badgered and harassed to death" in every State in the Union every year by the introduction of blackmailing or holdup bills. Three-fourths of the insurance bills introduced in state legislatures were purely for blackmail. It was for the purpose of combating these blackmailing bills that the New York Life maintained a legislative department.

President McCall denied that any of the $1,103,920 spent during the last five years had been used for bribing or corrupting legislatures. He denied that the New York Life was in a pool with the Equitable and the Mutual Life to look after legislation. He said the New York acted alone.

In regard to the contributions to the Republican national campaign committees amounting to $150,000, Mr. McCall declared that he had absolutely no understanding with the Republican managers in either of the three campaigns to which the New York Life contributed as to any favors which the New York Life or insurance companies in general might expect in return for the money.

DROWNED IN CISTERN

Mrs. Margaret McEwan Meets Tragic Death on Son's Farm.

Clandeboye, Oct. 6. — Mrs. Margaret McEwen, 77 years of age, widow of the late Robert McEwen, of this neighborhood, lost her life a few days ago by falling into a cistern. During the course of the day, Mrs. McEwen, needing a pail of water, went to the cistern in the corner of the cellar to get it, and, as far as can be learned, one of the cover boards broke and precipitated her into the water, from which she was unable to recover herself without assistance.

When the little girl arrived home from school after 4 o'clock, she could not find her grandmother and ran to the field to tell her uncle. After a search of the premises, Mr. McEwen, noticing the broken board, dragged the cistern, where he found his mother's body.

ROOSEVELT AND RAILROADS

What President Proposes To Do in Connection With Rates.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 7.—The Post today says that announcement was made yesterday that the administration programme relative to railroad rate legislation is complete, and that as already suggested the plan the President will favor, will be embodied in the Esch-Townsend bill, which passed the House last winter with some modifications in important particulars. The bill will provide, the Post says, as follows.

First—That the Inter-State Commerce Commission shall be given the power to decide, upon complaint, after full hearing, whether a rate is unjust or unlawful; that the commission shall have authority to substitute a rate which shall become immediately effective, and so remain unless and until reversed by the court.

Second—The commission shall have the authority to declare that a rate charged for shipment on private cars is unjust or unreasonable, if it be so and that the common carriers shall be held responsible for such charges.

Third—The commission shall have jurisdiction over terminal railroads.

Fourth—A long and short haul provision of the original Inter-State commerce act will be reasserted.

Fifth—The shipment of merchandise by water and rail will so be provided for as to prevent alleged manipulation of rates made possible in such circumstances under the present law.

Sixth—The commission shall have full authority to examine the books and records of railroads and to prescribe the general form and manner in which records be kept.

WAS IT MURDER OR AN ACCIDENT?

Inquest on the Body of Wright Fails to Solve Ingersoll Tragedy.

Ingersoll, Oct. 6. — The adjourned inquest into the death of Isaiah Wright, the colored man, whose dead body was taken from the Thames here on Sept. 23, was resumed and brought to a conclusion this evening, the jury handing in the following verdict:

"That Isaiah Wright came to his death by an injury received at the back part of the head, which was produced by some cause unknown to us, which rendered him unconscious before falling into or being placed in the river."

The five prisoners arrested in connection with the affair are still at Woodstock, having been remanded for a week, while Crown Attorney Ball makes a searching investigation of the affair. Col. Hegler, K. C., is looking after the interests of the prisoners.

The usual numerous and varied explanations of the tragedy are advanced, but the prevailing theory is that in a good-natured "rough house" on the bridge, Wright fell, and, striking his head, was precipitated into the water. It is suggested that in a panic of fear, his companions, finding him dead from a fall, had thrown the body into the water.

At tonight's inquest, Mr. E. F. Moore, of this place furnished some interesting evidence. He swore he met John Campbell at the corner of Oxford and King streets, near the Daly House, on the night of Sept. 23.

Campbell told him there was a negro in the river. He said there was a whole lot of them down the river, pretty well filled up, the night before. One was a man named Isaiah Wright. Two of the others caught him and dumped him into the river. He didn't mention who dumped him. Campbell said he was there himself.

John Campbell, sworn, declared he was astonished at Mooore's evidence. He had met Moore last summer, and remembered recently having met him again in front of the Daly House, but said he had not mentioned one word as stated by Moore.

Campbell, continuing his evidence, said that Michael Howe, George Bowers, George Hartgell, Ewart Bell, Thos. Wilson, George Daniels, Isaiah Wright and himself met at and left the Kirwin House barn after 10 o'clock on Sept. 22 and went down to the Thames bridge.

Campbell carried a musical instrument. He saw no drinks or refreshments on the bridge. They went to the bridge to have a dance, as there was more room there than in the barn. When the bridge was reached the dance began.

Michael Howe and Isaiah Wright were the only two intoxicated. Campbell took Howe home to the Kirwin House and put him to bed. Howe never got as far as the bridge.

Campbell stayed only an hour at the bridge, helping in the dance that covered the whole bridge from end to end. He was home at the Kirwin House between 11:20 and 11:30. He left everyone at the bridge but George Hartsell, who went home before he did. Wright was there after Hartsell left.

Campbell denied that there was any singing or horse-play on the bridge. When he left the bridge, Wright was intoxicated. All those with him were friendly to Wright, and would have helped him had he been in danger of falling off the bridge. Wright was so intoxicated that it was quite possible for him to fall off the bridge. He didn't see any one fooling around the bridge rail.

Closely questioned by the coroner as to the degree of intoxication in which Wright was, Campbell said that he was staggering when he left the Kirwin House barn.

Medical testimony showed that there was no retraction of the genitals, one of the prominent signs of drowning. And there were no marks on the body that would lead to the suspicion that he had met death by violence. While no doctor was positive as to the cause of death, still they all agreed that he did not die of disease. One doctor had testified that it was likely Wright was in such an enfeebled condition when he entered the water that he did not struggle. Hence none of the prominent signs of drowning were found.

Yet there was a mark on the posterior part of the scalp at the base of the brain. It might have been produced by a blow from a blunt instrument or by Wright's falling on a blunt instrument. Such a blow or a fall might cause unconsciousness. No doctor would swear that it would cause death.

HUNDREDS AFTER RAFFLES

New York, Oct. 6.—The presence of thousands of persons more than usual in Wall street today caused the subtreasury gates to be locked for an hour and so interfered with business between banks and exchanges that the police from three stations were hurried to the financial district to disperse the crowd. The gathering was attracted by an offer of $300, made by a newspaper to any one who could recognize a man whose picture was published in this paper under the name of "Mr. Raffles," and who was advertised to be in Wall street today. Many false alarms were given, each one causing a rush of hundreds of persons in pursuit of some imaginary Mr. Raffles. Such a jam of persons climbed upon the sub-treas-

BETTER PRICES AT THE MARKET

A firmer tone was the characteristic of the local market. The offerings were very large, although hardly up to the standard of the past two Saturdays. The demand was good in most lines and quick sales were the rule.

The feature was the demand for potatoes. There is a report that the rot has effected the crop to a considerable degree, and in consequence there will be a scarcity of this necessary article. The farmers in some localities are shipping them away to outside points already. Three car loads went from Mount Brydges, and it is expected that a car a day will be shipped out of that place during the coming week. The price paid is from 55 to 60 cents a bag in that place. It hardly pays the farmer to bring potatoes to London for the same price or a very slight advance on that figure. There was a good demand for them on the market today, and the prices were from 5 to 10 cents in advance of last week's figures. The ruling price was 70 cents a bag.

The other vegetables were in large quantities. The demand was good, as there is a disposition on the part of housekeepers to lay in a supply; prices ruled firm. A very fine quality of celery was shown, and there was plenty of it.

Poultry was plentiful. The market was a trifle weaker than last week, owing to the quantity offered. Chickens went for about 50 to 75 cents a pair. Not much live poultry was shown. Ducks went at $1 a brace.

Butter was nigh. Some asked as much as 23 cents for crock butter. Most of it sold for 19 and 20 cents. Eggs were in demand, and 20 cents was paid in many places. Very little dressed meat was offered.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

ST. ANDREW'S BROTHERHOOD

Ottawa, Oct. 6.—With Lauder Hall filled with delegates from nearly every city in Canada, and visitors from the United States, Mr. James Catto, Toronto, president of the brotherhood in Canada, this morning formally opened the fourteenth annual convention of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

The Lord Bishop of Ottawa spoke briefly in welcome, and was followed by Rev. Canon Kittson and Mayor Ellis.

Greetings were extended by Hubert Carleton, general secretary of the brotherhood in the United States; George Robinson, of St. Louis; W. A. Habeston of Buffalo.

Mr. H. H. Duncan, of Gravenhurst, was appointed secretary of the convention, with S. W. Smith, Winnipeg; W. A. Ambrose, Hamilton, and F. R. Hughes as assistants.

Notice of motion was given to increase the number of members in the Dominion council from 21 to 30.

The day was largely taken up with conferences on subjects of an exclusively spiritual character. Among those taking part were A. G. Alexander, Hamilton; Rev. T. W. Powell, Eglinton; R. H. Coltan, Toronto; W. Thomas, Toronto, and F. [illegible] Beamsbell, Toronto.

To vote in Dublin one must occupy at least a room at a certain rental, and the law authorities have decided that the room the voter occupies must have a door. Portieres will not suffice.

LOCAL MARKET.

Saturday, Oct. 7.

The fine weather this morning no doubt helped to increase the attendance at the market. The crowd of farmers and buyers present so far as numbers were concerned surpassed that Saturday's attendance. The pleasing feature of the market was the brisk demand for the various lines of produce. Prices as a rule were firmer.

Grain—Oats were higher in price today; sales were made at 91c to 93c per cwt, and occasionally at 95c per cwt. Wheat sold at 73c per bushed. Beans sold at $1 15 per bushel, and barley at 83c to 85c per cwt.

Butter and Eggs — The demand for butter was brisk. Prices were a trifle firmer at 20c to 22c for crocks, mostly at the last-named price. For pound rolls 22c to 24c was most frequently paid. Eggs were well represented; sales were brisk and prices firm at 18c to 19c wholesale and 21c to 22c retail.

Vegetables and Roots—Potatoes were in large supply. Sales were brisk and prices higher at 65c to 70c per bag. They are shipping car lots from Caradoc at 55c and 60c per bag. Tomatoes were higher in price at 20c per basket. Carrots, parsnips and beets sold at 30c per bushel. Turnips, 25c to 35c per bag; onions, 65c per bushel; celery, 25c to 35c per dozen.

Mr. Abel Steel, of Fergus postoffice, shipped a sugar beet to Des Moines, Iowa, which weighed 39½ pounds. There is a prize offered and Mr. Steel thinks he has a chance of capturing the honor

Fruits—Peaches were not so plentiful. Prices, however, was steady at 35c to 60c per basket. Grapes sold at 20c to 25c per basket. Pears were in demand at 90c to $1 25 per bushel. Muskmelons sold fairly well at 40c to 75c per dozen. Apples could be had at any price. The common kinds sold at 60c to 90c per bag, or $1 25 to $2 per barrel. Snow apples were in good demand at 70c to $1 per bushel, the later price being paid for hand-picked. Quinces sold at 40c to 50c per peck. Citrons, 50c to 80c per dozen. Chestnuts, 18c per quart. There will not be a very large crop this year. Hickory nuts sold at 10c per quart.

Dressed Hogs—The demand continues to be brisk at $8 50 and $8 75 per cwt., mostly at the first-named price.

Poultry—There was a large supply marketed. The demand was good at the following prices. Chickens, dressed, 50c to 80c per pair, mostly at 60c to 65c per pair; alive, 45c to 50c per pair; old fowl sold at 5c per pound alive, or 60c to 75c per pair dressed. Ducks sold well at 70c to 90c per pair dressed, and 60c to 75c alive; by the pound 10c dressed, and 7c alive. Turkeys sold from 12c to 14c per pound.

Live Hogs—Prices for Monday will be $6 25 per cwt for selects. Buyers say that prices will go lower. Small pigs sold from $4 50 to $6, according to size.

Honey—The demand is good. Some of the producers have already sold their season's output. Prices the higher at 9½c to 10c for strained, and 13c to 15c per pound for that in the comb.

Butchers' Meat—Lamb was in demand at 11c per pound by the carcass. Beef sold at $4 50 to $6 per cwt. Veal, $7 to $8. Not a great deal of meat offered.

will be forfeited. This is similar to the penalty provided in bylaw 2,424.

The company also proposes to have the Edward street belt line completed by July 1 next, provided permission is given it to use what groove rail it has in stock (which is enough for one-third of the line), the balance to be "T" rail, approved by the city engineer.

Mayor Campbell said today that as far as he could learn there appeared to be an inclination on the part of some of the aldermen at least to rescind the previous bylaw and pass another satisfactory to the railway company. They favor such a step, they say, because the residents of South London are anxious to have the line, and the street railway company cannot be compelled to build it, but may, if it chooses, build the Wortley road stub, which would not benefit such a large number.

Mayor Campbell is of the opinion that if the Edward street line is built, the city will still be entitled to more trackage next year. The present mileage of the street railway is based on a population of 41,000, and it is felt at the city hall that if an official census is taken next summer the city will be shown to have a population of at least 45,000.

Mr. Grant, the assessment commissioner, is one of the city hall officials who are certain the city's population will reach that figure. The assessors this summer managed to get the names of over 43,100 persons, but they do not hesitate to admit that there are very many they did not secure. One of the biggest difficulties they have to contend with is getting the names of men who live in boarding houses. There are many hundreds of these in the city, and the majority of them prefer to miss the payment of the statute labor tax. Not a small percentage of them succeed.

THE FREIGHT MEN MADE BEST TIME

The two teams—one representing the passenger department, and the other the freight department—had been in training for some time under their respective captains, Messrs. W. Reid and J. MacWood, and both had their work down pretty well. However, in the past flukes have happened, and this was the case again today, the result being that No. 1 Company (Capt. Reid) was hopelessly out of one race, and will stand no chance of sharing in the money annually given by the railway to the companies on the system making the best time.

In the wet race, the men of No. 1 had considerable trouble with a coupling, and by the time they had completed the move 89 3-5 seconds had elapsed. The same move was done by the freight company in 66 1-5 seconds.

In the dry race, which was exempt from mishaps, No. 1 Company took 47 2-5 seconds, while No. 2 completed the move in 44 1-5 seconds.

The competitions are being conducted at all the important points on the road, and it will not be known for a couple of weeks yet which companies will share in the money.

However, the car works freight company has done well in the past, and it will not be any surprise if it shares the honors this year.

WINNIPEG WEDDING; GROOM A LONDONER

Mr. Hartley Millman, a Former Resident, Wins a Bride in the Far West.

The Winnipeg Free Press of Thursday contains the following account of the wedding of Mr. Hartley Millman, a former Londoner, and brother of Messrs. Percy and McKinley Millman, of this city:

The weather man has been particularly kind to the autumn brides, and yesterday the brightest of sunshine greeted the several fair maidens who had chosen the first Wednesday in October as their wedding day. St. Stephen's Church was the scene of a charming wedding at 3 o'clock, when Miss Margaret Rutherford Wright, eldest daughter of Mr. Archibald Wright, one of Winnipeg's leading merchants, became the wife of Mr. Hartley Millman, formerly of London, now of Winnipeg. The church was prettily decorated for the occasion with a profusion of palms, smilax and white blossoms. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. W. Gordon, pastor of the church, Miss Grace Mitchell presiding at the organ. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Mary Wright, and the groom's brother, Mr. McKinley Millman, of London, acted as best man. The ushers were Mr. Pattinson, Mr. Markie and Mr. C. W. Campbell.

The bride, who was given away by her father, made a dainty picture in her wedding gown of rich chiffon satin, made en traine and trimmed in panel effect, with silk eyelet applique. The full, girlish-looking bodice had a yoke of rose point lace and her long veil of Brussels net with border of exquisite Brussels lace was caught in her hair with a coronet of orange blossoms. A shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley, with streamers of smilax, studder with tuberoses, completed her costume. The bridesmaid wore a lovely gown of white silk crepe de chine trimmed with tucks and tiny puffings edged with valenciennes lace. The yoke of the bodice was formed of the insertion and frill of lace. A large picture hat of white beaver trimmed with a lace scarf and cluster of Liberty roses was worn with the gown, and her bouquet was a sheaf of the Liberty roses.

The bride's mother wore a handsome gown of purple satin brocade, trimmed with mauve applique and touches of rose point lace. A smart toque, of purple chenille, with flat rosettes of shaded silk and a green breast and a lovely rose point scarf completed her costume.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents, Broadway. The house decorations were entirely of Marguerites, the bride's name flower, except on the bride's table, where pink and white roses were used.

The young bride was the recipient of a great many very handsome gifts, among which was a ring set with a Burmese ruby and two diamonds, from the groom. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a pearl brooch; to the best man a pearl and diamond scarf pin, and to the ushers gold cuff links. After receiving the congratulations of their many friends, the happy couple left by the C. N. R. at 5:20 p.m. for the south, and will visit Chicago, Washington, New York and the Bermudas before returning to take up their residence at 520 Wardlow avenue, Fort Rouge. The bride's traveling suit was of cinnamon brown corduroy velvet with silk blouse to match, and a smart toque of cream and brown velvet trimmed with brown wings.

A TIP FOR MR. McCALLUM.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:

I venture the assertion that more dogs are harbored between Briscoe and Wreay streets, South London, than in any other district of a similar size in London, and to this fact the attention of Inspector McCallum is directed, for it's the earnest wish of a number of residents that every owner of a cur should be compelled to pay for the privilege of annoying his neighbors. Night is made hideous by the barking of these animals, that are allowed to run wild. If the owners do not show some consideration for the comfort of people in the vicinity by tying up their dogs at night, it is promised that silence will be gained by the poison method, and some good lives will be snuffed out with the bad. In order to avoid unpleasantness, tie up your dog

THE PEANUT MAN'S PERENNIAL PLAINT

Finds the "Move-On" Regime Too Rigid—Magistrate Will Consider His Plea.

There is no rest for the peanut vender if he wishes to keep out of the police court, no matter how footsore, tired or exhausted, he must still push his little cart along—an illustration of perpetual motion. One more Italian, Peter Ghitzier, was charged in the police court this morning with obstructing the entrance to a couple of drygoods stores. P. C. Borden took Ghitzier's name last Saturday. Lawyer McDonald defended the peanut man, and succeeded in having the magistrate reserve his decision on this case, and also Dumos's case of yesterday, until next Saturday.

Mr. McDonald ably presented the defendant's cause, referring to the statute which deals with such cases. He submitted that there was no legal justification for fining these men. In Toronto these cases had been carried to the higher courts which ruled that the men may stand in the same spot as long as they pleased, only the bylaw was changed restricting them to certain streets. If these men are obstructing traffic," said counsel, "an information should be laid against them for creating a public nuisance." He wished to submit several authorities on the subject, and the case was adjourned to allow the magistrate to look into these.

"The chief trouble with these fellows," said the court, "seems to be that their route is so limited."

Joseph Fonda, the other defendant, charged with a similar offense, evidently thought that he could not do business successfully under the present conditions. Joseph is looking for another job.

James F. Reale, who had appeared before the court about a year ago, found his reappearance more expensive. He was taxed $3 or 10 days.

The charge of neglect to send his children to school that had been preferred against Joseph Moise, was withdrawn. The children are now attending school.

Several drunks were disposed of in quick order, two being discharged, and two remanded.

UNDER A HORSE'S FEET

Walter Graham Has Narrow Escape From Serious Injury.

Walter Graham, a young man, had a very narrow escape from serious injury or death at noon today. He was going down Queen's avenue on a bicycle, and was riding alongside of a delivery wagon not far from the curb. When opposite the lane next to the London Club, Dan Hardy, driver of the wagon, turned to go in. Hardy had not noticed that Graham had been struck by the horse and knocked down. Graham fell under the horse, which stepped clear over him, but the wheels of the wagon were on his legs when the rig was stopped.

The horse was somewhat entangled with the wheel and backed over the prostrate man. Graham was taken out from under the horse's feet, and the only mark he had was a slight scalp wound caused by the caulks of a horseshoe. He was able to get on the wheel (which was not damaged at all) and ride home. It was a wonder the young fellow was not killed.

LET THE LAMP FALL

Fire did about $100 damage between 5 and 6 o'clock this morning at the residence of Mr. Alfred, 254 Bathurst street.

It appears that for some time past Mr. Alfred has heard strange noises in the house at nights, and on many occasions he has gone through the place from end to end without finding the cause.

This morning, shortly after 5 o'clock he was aroused, and, with a lighted lamp in one hand, he went to the front room where the noises appeared to originate. As he entered, he dropped the lamp, and the fire soon spread to the furnishings. The flames reached the organ, which was damaged to some extent, together with the carpet and some articles of furniture.

TAKING JAUNT ABOUT CITY

The members of the board of works are on a jaunt this afternoon—not an out of town jaunt, but just a little trip around the city, in the course of which they will visit a number of points that have been engaging their attention for some time.

They will visit Front street, South London, and see what can be done to prevent that section of the city from damage by the spring floods. There they will meet Mr. Wills, who has proposed a scheme, whereby the city is to buy a strip of land and enable it to divert the course of the river to such an extent that the flooding of the Clark's bridge section will be an unknown thing.

The aldermen will also go to Tecumseh Park, where Mr. W. J. Reid claims damage has been done to the extent of several hundreds of dollars by the raising of the wall. The latter is now so high that persons can see over the fence from the outside, the result being that if the fence is not raised, the revenue from the park will suffer. Mr. Reid contends that it is up to the city to raise the fence. Otherwise he may sue.

Another place to be visited will be the Hamilton road, east of Rectory street, where the extension of the street railway line has just been completed. The laying of the tracks has caused the center of the street to be raised considerably, rendering it necessary for the city to do something with the sides.

CONDENSED LOCAL NEWS

—Mr. B. R. Barber, one of the international Y. M. C. A. secretaries for India, will spend tomorrow in London, addressing a conference of Christian workers in the Y. M. C. A. parlors at 4:15 p.m. In the morning, Mr Barber will occupy the pulpit at Knox Presbyterian Church, South London, and in the evening at Wortley Road Baptist Church. Mr. Barber is a graduate of Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., and has spent several years in work among the young men of India, principally in the city of Calcutta, so he comes particularly qualified to speak on the work in that country.

—The Service of Praise to be given by the choir of New St. James' Presbyterian Church on Monday evening next, promises to be an interesting musical event. The choir of 40 voices under Mr. E. W. Goethe Quantz, will have the assistance of Mr. Harold Jarvis, Detroit; Mrs. Clyde Green, contralto, Hamilton, and Mr. Angelo Cortese, solo harpist. Each of these artists is too well known to London music lovers to need any introduction, and a musical treat is assured. Mr. Jarvis will include in his numbers "Agnes Dei," by Bizet, with accompaniment for violin, harp and organ.

THE MISSIONARY BOARD.

The general missionary board of the Methodist Church was engaged in committee work last night, and at this morning's session. Nothing of importance will be done until the committees rise and report.

MR. LARKE'S LECTURE.

The lecture by Mr. J. S. Larke in the Collegiate Institute on Tuesday evening, under the auspices of the London and Middlesex Historical Society, promises to be exceptionally interesting. Mr. Larke, who is the Canadian commissioner to Australia, will deal altogether with that country, regarding which he will give much information.

DEATH OF MRS. WAGNER.

Mrs. Ellen Wagner, relict of the late Simon Wagner, died on Friday morning at the residence of her son-in-law, Samuel Lewis, Hyde Park. Deceased was highly respected for her many estimable qualities. She was born in Corwall county, Canada, 76 years ago. The funeral will take place on Monday to Delaware cemetery.

A FAREWELL PARTY.

A happy party of nearly 40 people gathered at the home of the parents of Miss Florence McKenna on Dundas street east, last evening, the occasion being in honor of the young lady herself. An evening of very enjoyable pastime was spent. Miss McKenna leaves tonight for Chicago, where she has obtained a position. The heartiest wishes of all her friends will follow her in her new home.

CONGREGATIONAL ANNIVERSARY

The anniversary services of the First Congregational Church in this city will be held tomorrow. Rev. W. T. Gunn, M.A., B.D., of Embro, who served as secretary to the jubilee movement, and whose efforts at that time were crowned with such success, will occupy the pulpit at both services. Rev. D. S. Hamilton will take Mr. Gunn's place in Embro.

CHARGED WITH EXTORTION.

W. T. Westby, who was committed for extortion by Police Magistrate Love some time ago, was up before Judge Macbeth this morning, and elected to be tried by the judge. The trial has been set for Wednesday next. This case is the outcome of a letter written by Westby to Brammer about payment for some windows alleged to have been broken by Brammer's son.

A BIBLE SOCIETY MAGAZINE.

At a meeting of the general board of the Canadian Bible Society held in Toronto yesterday, a model constitution and a bill of incorporation, to be presented to the Dominion Parliament at an early date, were considered. It was agreed that the board commence the publication in January, 1906, of a monthly magazine entitled "Bible Work," the magazine to be edited by Rev. R. E. Welsh. Rev. R. E. Welsh, the new general secretary, was introduced and left a fine impression concerning his ability to oversee the work of this great society in Canada.

FEWER DIVISION COURTS.

A board, consisting of the two county judges, the inspector of division courts, the warden and the sheriff met today to discuss the proposed abolition of division court districts Nos. 4, 8 and 9. After much discussion, it was decided to leave the division courts as at present. Consequently there will be no change in the sittings of these courts.

SPECIAL RELIGIOUS MEETINGS.

A unique series of meetings will be started this (Saturday) evening, and hereafter held on Friday evenings during the coming winter, at Channing Hall, 276 Dundas street, under the auspices of the Liberal Christian Union, which was organized in this city a year ago. Some interesting addresses are booked for an early date. Among others, Mr. Barnett, of Stratford, well known as a Shakespearean scholar and collector, will give an address on his speciality; Mr. H. W. Brick, of Wampole & Co., manufacturing chemists, Toronto, will speak on the chemistry of everyday life, and Mr. W. P. Hinton, general passenger agent, Canada Atlantic Railway, Ottawa, will deal with railroad and transporation interests from the religious standpoint.

WILL USE THEIR CHURCH.

The congregation of St. James' Presbyterian Church, Oxford street, will worship tomorrow at both services in the church auditorium, which has been undergoing alterations for some time. The work necessitated the holding of services in the schoolroom, and while the gallery is not yet completed, the improvements are so far advanced that the use of the church proper can be resumed.

WEEKLY HIGH COURT

A Number of Cases Dealt With by Mr. Justice Maclaren.

A session of the weekly high court was held this morning at the court house, over which Justice Maclaren presided. The following motions were heard:

In the case of Cundick vs. Hewitt, W. H. Bartram moved for confirmation of judgment by consent. Motion granted.

In the case of Graydon vs. Redan, Mr. Perrin moved for plaintiff to have other parties added as defendants. Motion allowed, and fifteen days given the parties. Judd for defendants.

In the case of Elizabeth Becker, a petition for advice, was adjourned for three weeks. Winnett for petition, and Essery for other parties.

Mr. George C. Gibbons, K.C., for the executors of the estate of Benjamin Vantyle, made a motion for the payment of money into court. Motion granted.

SNAP-SHOTS AT VARIOUS SPORTS.

It is to be regretted that the pacing marvel—The Broncho—did not tackle the Eastern flyers. She paced several miles between 2:03 and 2:04 and would have given Maud Keswick a chance to show how fast she really is. If the Canadian mare improves, as she no doubt will, she will be easily the fastest pacing mare in the world.

According to the statistics of the American Association, Eddie Siever, the former Londoner, ranges first in pitching feats, with ten shut-outs to his credit. He pitched two two-hit games, three four-hit games and five five-hit games. He also holds the record in his league for strike-outs—eleven in one game. In one game, not a man reached first base in the last seven innings, and he struck out the three men up in the ninth. Not bad for a pitcher who was supposed to be all in.

Pope Pius X. is coming out as a patron of sports, says a cablegram from Rome. The Catholic gymnastic societies of Rome are holding meetings, lasting from Thursday until Sunday, in the Corte delia Figna of the Vatican gardens. There will be foot races and bicycle contests, and on Sunday the Pope will give a reception to the gymnasts and distribute prizes to the winners. A union of all the Catholic recreation societies of Rome is about to be formed.

Negotiations between Arthur Duffy, former champion runner of the world, and Archie Hahn, the crack Western sprinter, may result in a match race between Hahn and J. W. Morton, the English champion, at Madison Square Garden, New York, next week. Duffy is in charge of the athletic events which are to be a big feature of the second annual physical culture show at the garden next week. He has secured Morton's promise to appear in the games which are sanctioned by the A. A. U. and in which only registered amateurs can appear. Duffy is trying to arrange a hundred yard race between Hahn and Morton.

One distinguished correspondent whose attention was claimed by the Philadelphia series, called it the "apotheosis of baseball." That's it. When you are tossed into the territory of the humble technical artisan there is nothing like hoisting the subject to be treated up to your own literary level, says an exchange.

Abysmal brutes in pugilism also add much to the literary elevation of these pastimes.

Mooney Gibson's tots and Teddy Roosevelt Clymer are the best of friends. They have the grand stand at Pittsburg to themselves while they are waiting on their pops to dress after the games, says a Pittsburg correspondent.

Admiral Dewey, a son of Nancy Hanks, by Binger, lowered his record to 2:04¾ the other day. This colt is fast, but bad legs prevented his going to the races.

Dan Patch paced a wonderful mile on Thursday, when he went the ring in 1:56. Audubon Boy is not performing up to expectations these days. Dan is champion again for sure.

Christy Matthewson was presented with a $300 diamond ring by his team mates the other day. That's almost as good as having Chauncey Depew's job in the Equitable Insurance Company.

You can't beat those Athletics. Bender pitched two games against Washington Thursday and won both of them. More than that, Big Chief made five hits out of six times up, and saved his own games. Connie's freaks are there when called on.

A big bunch of trouble seems to be coming the way of all the Toronto Rugby teams. Judging from the number of injured ones after every practice, the latter must be strenuous affairs. Each team ought to establish a medical corps if the papers are telling the truth.

The Tigers are with us today and are going to give us a run for our money. Some dopester says they are not as fast as last year. That is not the way we look at it. If that back division is not very fast, we don't know anything about it. Sep Dumoulin may not be in shape, but you had better watch him, as he will pull off a few plays that will be good enough.

BOYS AND GIRLS OF COLLEGIATE HAVE ANNUAL FIELD DAY SPORTS

The London Collegiate Institute annual field day sports were held yesterday afternoon in Tecumseh Park under most favorable weather conditions.

Several hundred of the younger generation assembled at the school, and, preceded by the Twenty-sixth Regiment Band, marched in line down Dundas street to the park. The teaching staff brought up the rear of the procession. At the park fully as many more young people were waiting, the fair sex being especially well represented. The utmost enthusiasm prevailed throughout the entire afternoon, and college yells and horns were the order of the day. An extra long programme of sports was carried out and interest never laxed in the games until evening approached.

The entire programme was put through with the exception of the stilt race, the tennis and the walking match for teachers. The latter were too busy attending to the other events to have one of their own. Each event was keenly contested, and the winners won hearty applause. The hands of the officers in charge were full, figuratively speaking, all afternoon, and to them is due the very successful outcome of the day's sports.

The football match between the L. C. I. and the Y. M. C. A. was a feature of the afternoon's sport. The familiar voice of Mr. R. A. Little was heard on the field, this time as referee, but his interest in the good old game led him to applaud every worthy play of his schoolboys, although he was fair in every way in his rulings. The result of the game was a tie—1 to 1—which was not played off owing to the lateness of the hour. The respective players were:

Y. M. C. A.—Goal, Benson; backs, Nelles, Gillies; halves, Daly, Wickett, McMillan; forwards, Flett, Gilmore, Brock, Crawford, Barthel.

The ladies' baseball match resulted in a victory for Miss Wilson's team. They became acquainted with the opposing pitcher's curves in the third and fourth innings and the result was a tally of 25 runs. The final score for five innings was 30 to 18. The teams were as follows: Misses Mina George (captain), Lilian Ovens, Laura Woolverton, Marjorie Head, Irene Stevenson, Frances McLean, Ethel Pelton, Ina Blackburn and Wilhelmina Sage. The winning girls were: Misses Wilson (captain), Carswell, Simpson, E. Campbell, O'Mara, Gibson, Kidner, Livingstone and McGuire. The score by innings:

						Runs.
Miss Wilson	5	0	13	12	*	—30
Miss Wilson	4	0	4	3	7	—18

The basketball match resulted in a tie and will be played at a future date at the school. The tennis games will also be decided later on. The basketball players were the Misses George (captain), Carswell, Gould, Kennedy and Fox, on one side, and the Misses Blackburn (captain), Head, Simpson and Van stone on the other.

Several tug-of-war contests were on the programme. That for the senior girls was won by Miss Flood's team, composed of the following: Misses Dyer, Simpson, Kennedy, Vanstone, Girard, Evay and Carruthers. The losing team, captained by Miss Bawden, included Misses George, Wood, Tory, Wright, Ethel Jones, Merchant and Claris. The bandsmen enjoyed an impromptu contest, in which Mr. Pocock's side proved superior.

Throwing baseball, open event—1 Miss Simpson, 139 feet 6 inches, a remarkably long throw for a girl; 2 Miss Casswell, 3 Miss Campbell.

The school championship was won by A. I. Walker, son of Mr. J. Walker, of Maple street. Walker and L. Sage were tied for first position. Several pieces of paper, each with a different event written on it, were placed in a hat, from which one was chosen. This one happened to have on it the 100 yard dash, which was the particular class of event that Walker excelled in. The race was run off and Sage was beaten. At the matriculation examinations last summer Walker captured the Gibbons Memorial medal, thus proving that his proficiency in his studies quite equals that of his physical powers.

The list of field day officers is very lengthy. Among those conspicuous on the field yesterday who were untiring in their efforts were Messrs. Govenlock, B.A.; George Gibbons, jun., F. H. Screaton, Dr. J. H. Downing, Ald. Gillean, D. W. Blackwell, S. J. Radcliffe, B.A.; Rev. Canon Dann, J. S. Barnard, G. A. Andrus, J. A. Dickinson, W. H. K. Mooney, B.A.; A. W. Keith, B.A.; F. P. Riddell, B.A.; A. McVicar, B.A., and Lieut. Gregory.

Mr. Nicholas Wilson was a happy spectator from the grandstand, and enjoyed to the full the afternoon's sports.

GENEROUS FELLOWS AT WINDSOR MEET

Put on Seven Races Yesterday, All Under Selling Allowances.

Windsor, Ont., Oct. 6.—As a favor to the horsemen seven races were offered again today, all under selling allowances. Four of the seven were all six furlongs. The race for 3-year-olds and up was the finishing of the events, the others being for 3-year-olds exclusively. The mile and a sixteenth was also split, and the afternoon's best field met in the latter end of it. The other race was for 2-year-olds and at 5½ furlongs, and its field of ten included some pretty shifty youngsters. Altogether the card held out promise of interesting sport over a fast track.

Word has been received here that the Atlanta meeting has been declared off. Several of the horsemen had arranged to ship there.

First race, 6 furlongs, 3-year-olds, selling — Merry George, 106 (W. Doyle), 7 to 2, 8 to 5 and 4 to 5, won by a nose; Billy Wake, 101 (Hodges), 50 to 1. 20 to 1 and 5 to 1, 2; Affrey, 101 (Freeman), 10 to 1, 4 to 1 and 2 to 1, 3. Time, 1:15 3-5. Rhino, Wabana, Doc Wallace, Girl from Dixie, Whirlpool, Judge Nolan, Dutch Frigate and Hazel Baker also ran.

Second race, 6 furlongs, 3-year-olds and up, selling — Muldoon, 93 (Swain), 6 to 5 and 1 to 2, won by a neck; Pure Favor, 98 (B. Miller), 10 to 1, 4 to 1 and 2 to 1, 2; Four Leaf Clover, 98 (Jenkins) 3 to 1, 6 to 5 and 3 to 5, 3. Time, 1:15 1-5. King's Charm, Mamie March, Lord French, Oliver Mac, Dart, Amber and Dixie Andrews also ran.

Third race, 5½ furlongs, 2-year-olds, selling — Alma Garda, 107 (M. Preston), 2 to 1, 4 to 5 and 2 to 5, won by three-quarters of a length; Pentageon, 101 (Russell), 8 to 1, 3 to 1 and 8 to 5, 2; Skeptical, 102 (Shea), 5 to 2, even and 1 to 2, 3. Time, 1:07 4-5. Utah, Ossineake, Henry Waring, Wizard, King, Annie Berry, Cantrome and Lady Travers also ran.

Fourth race, 1 1-16 miles, 3-year-olds and up, selling — Lord Hermence, 105 (Munro), 3 to 5, won by five lengths; Lee King, 97 (Freeman), 3 to 1, even and 1 to 3, 2; Polk Miller, 100 (M. Preston), 50 to 1, 15 to 1 and 6 to 1, 3. Time, 1:49 2-5. Hopedale, Gladys McConnell, Mizzenmast and Patricius also ran.

Fifth race, 6 furlongs, 3-year-olds and up selling — Miss Cornet, 102 (A. Walsh), 4 to 5, won by half a length; Sunny Brook, 98 (Russell), 15 to 1, 6 to 1 and 3 to 1, 2; Jim Ferrin, 102 (Doyle), 15 to 1, 6 to 1 and 3 to 1, 3. Time, 1:14 3-5. Litle Red, King Crane, Itaska, Termagant, Ascott, Derusey and Tricula also ran.

Sixth race, 1 1-16 miles, 3-year-olds and up, selling — John Garner, 89 (T. Moreland), 20 to 1, 6 to 1 and 3 to 1, won by a length; Arab, 105 (Swain), 4 to 5 and 1 to 3, 2; Jehane, 103 (Munro), 2 to 1 and 7 to 10, 3. Time, 1:48 1-5. Labor, Showman, Benckart and Lemon Girl also ran.

Seventh race, 6 furlongs, 3-year-olds and up, selling—Caper Sauce, 104 (Doyle), 13 to 5, even and 1 to 2, won by a length and a half; Highland Fling, 109 (Lee), 5 to 2, even, and 1 to 2, 2; Miss Affable, 107 (A. Walsh), 11 to 5, even, and 1 to 2, 3. Timeß 1:.4 1-5. Sarner, Miss Gaiety, Anne Davis, Virgie Withers and Mon Amour also ran.

CLOSE MATCH WAS WON BY BOTHWELL

Bothwell, Oct. 6.—Two rinks from the Chatham Bowling Club played here this afternoon and were defeated by a score of 37 to 33. The rinks were in splendid condition, and the play was very close, neither side making more than two at any end. The score:

Majority for Bothwell, 4 shots.

THE GUN.

NEW RANGE OPENED.

Goderich, Oct. 6.—The Government rifle range, which has been under construction for some time here, is now completed, the event being celebrated by the Huron Regiment and the County Rifle Association with a big shoot. Teams from the different companies of the Thirty-third and from the various civilian clubs are competing in three events, and there are besides three individual competitions.

THE RING.

AN OFFER FOR SCHRECK.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—William Hogan, manager of Mike Schreck, has received offers for his man to fight Al Kaufmann in San Francisco, and Gus Ruhlin in Dayton, Ohio. Alex Greggains wants to match Kaufmann with Schreck, and the Dayton Gymnastic Clubs wants a go with Ruhlin in November. Hogan wired the two managements his conditions, and is awaiting replies.

The annual field day sports of Western University Athletic Association will be held on the afternoon of Wednesday, Oct. 18. The date was fixed at a meeting of the association held at 'Varsity last evening. The following officers were chosen for the year:

Patrons—Hon. Adam Beck, Hon. C. S. Hyman, T. H. Smallman, John Labatt, Geo. C. Gibbons, Dr. Merchant, S. J. Radcliffe.

President—Dr. J. B. Campbell.

Secretary—Henry M. Short.

Treasurer—A. G. Girard.

Executive Committee—Medical representatives, J. Adams and Cal Brown; arts, A. B. Connor; divinity, C. F. Washburn.

BASEBALL.

HART TO RETIRE.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 6.—From a statement made by James A. Hart this season will be his last as the head of the local National League baseball club. Some time ago it was announced that an option on the club had been given to Charles Murphy and other parties, and it is practically assured now that the option will be taken up immediately at the close of the season, whether he sells out all his stock or not. The new owners of the team will be Charles P. Taft, of Cincinnati, and other Ohio men associated with Mr. Murphy. Garry Herrmann's name has been also mentioned as one of the buyers. That has been denied, as Mr. Murphy says the new owners are men who hold no stock in other teams.

PARKHILL BLANKED.

[Chicago Tribune.]

The bleachers are as empty as can be;
The rooter homeward takes his weary way
And leaves the field to darkness and to me.

Now fades the glimmering landscape on the sight
And all the air is hushed, and calm, and still—
"O, soak it! Kill it! Bust the cover, Bill!"

Tells nothing of the fan who voiced his grief
In one wild burst of most impassioned sound
Wherein he said the umpire was a thief.

Around that diamond now so dimly seen
The player rushed until his legs were blurred,
And, O, the bleachers' grief was tensely keen
When he was run to earth, and died at third.

Let not ambition mock their useful sport,
Nor jeer the captain's sacrificial sign,
Nor grandeur hear, aweary, the report—

The boast of averages at the bat
And all the bases that the pitcher gave
To shun the long three-bagger now fall flat—

Full many a strike is born but to be fanned

Next to the madding crowd's applauding strife
The pitcher lifts our hope—and then it falls
While we object: "What's that? Not on your life!

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day;
"Say, mister, did you hear what was the score?"

MINARD'S LINIMENT USED BY PHYSICIANS.

The robbery of a jewelry store on Broadway, New York, effected by entrance through a plate glass window on either side of which was an all-night drug store and an all-night restaurant, was a crime of peculiar boldness.

BIG CITIES DID NOT COME IN International Hockey League Will Include Same Teams as in 1904.

Houghton, Mich., Oct. 6. — With the approach of winter hockey enthusiasts are commencing to speculate as to what will be done in the great Canadian game in the United States this season. The International Hockey League, embracing Pittsburg, American and Canadian Soo, Houghton and Calumet, is still intact, and promises to be an important factor in the game in this country this winter.

Until a few weeks ago the indications were bright that Chicago, Duluth, and possibly, Minneapolis, or St. Paul, would affiliate with the league, but as no steps towards entering have been taken, the prospects are not very encouraging.

"Riley" Hern, for the past two years goalkeeper for the Portage Lakes, returned from Stratford, Ont., this week, where he has been spending the summer. Hern is the only member of last year's team who will play this winter who is now in Copperdom. "Doc" Gibson, the veteran player, conceded to be without a peer on the defense, and the man who introduced hockey in Copperdom several days ago, has decided to quit the game, and will not play with the Portage Lakes this winter. Of last year's team the only other players who are likely to return are Holden and Lake.

"Hod" Stuart, captain of the team last winter, and who, outside of his rough tactics, is considered one of the best players who has ever stepped on ice, has been debarred from the International League, and the indications are he will quit the game for good. Stuart last season plainly evidenced his grudge against Portage Lake, and throughout the entire season was bitterly condemned for his rough and brutal tactics.

Arthur Sixsmith has been chosen manager of the Pittsburg team for the coming season. Sixsmith is a clever man at the game, and his selection is gratifying. Very little has been heard here as to the prospects in the two Soos for the coming year, but it is certain that both teams, particularly the American Soo, will have strong aggregations.

FAVORITES TOOK THE FOUR EVENTS

Collared Everything at the Lexington Grand Circuit Meeting.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 6. — Favorites took the four events decided at the fourth day of the trotting meeting here today. Emma Brook, half-sister to Miss Abdell, the Futurity winner, challenged the favorite, Albert C., and in the second heat led him to a break in the stretch, and easily finished first.

The best time of the day was made in the 2:18 pace.

After finishing seventh in the first heat the favorite, Dan P., won the next three. Lillie R. took the first heat, finishing almost abreast with Tommy Burns, Lilly Clay and Reproachless. In the three following heats Fred Miller was the challenger, and forced Dan P. to the time of 2:08, 2:09½ and 2:08¾.

The 2:18 trot, unfinished, was handily won by A. Penn, the favorite, who had taken the first and fourth heats Thursday. Summary:

SARNIA HAD WIND IN ITS FAVOR; WON GAME IN THE SECOND HALF

Petrolea, Oct. 6. — Sarnia defeated Petrolea here today in the first local game of the season in the junior O. R. F. U. series by a score of 10 to 8.

Petrolea won the toss and chose to kick with the wind in their favor, and in the first half scored 8 points to Sarnia's none. The second half, with the wind in their favor, Sarnia scored 10 points by good kicking. A bad fumble by Petrolea full back gave them a touch line which was nicely converted by Clarkson. A safety touch and two rouges completed Sarnia's scoring.

The locals have much the heavier team and barring the bad jumble by the full back played a good steady game but made a mistake in not kicking the ball more while they had the wind in their favor.

The teams lined up as follows:

Petrolea.		Sarnia.
Dunfield	Full back	Burnie
Boyce	Half	Clarkson
McKittrick	"	Williams
McMullen	"	McKenzie
Blake	Quarter	Le Suer
Thomas	Snap	Parsons
J. Webb	Wing	Leckie
Tanton	"	Tremblay
Howlett	"	Young
F. Webb	"	Parker
Rainsberry	"	McCart
Jackson	"	Beer

Referee, Frank D. Woodworth, Toronto.

Umpire, M. Hague, 'Varsity.

Referee Woodworth is the best official ever sent here. His decisions were good, and he kept the players hustling all the time. One man on each side was ruled off for scrapping.

BEAT CLIPPER STRAIGHT HEATS

Dr. Routledge's Little Joe Had Speed to Spare in Race at Ingersoll.

The races at the Ingersoll fair yesterday were very good indeed. The free-for-all brought a good field together. The presence of the two London matinee horses, Little Joe and Clipper, added a great deal to the interest manifested. Dr. Routledge's good little horse was in fine form and got away with the race in straight heats. He was not extended at any time. Clipper and Dolphy W., the St. Thomas horse, had a merry race of it for second money. The London horse led on the start in every heat, but the other caught him on the way home and beat him handily.

The 2:50 pace was won in straight heats by McCarty's (Thamesford) fast little mare Lenna. She won in straight heats, although Dr. Wood's pacer, Madge W., made her step lively in the stretch to win. The summaries:

Free-for-all:

Little Joe, Dr. Routledge, Lambeth	1	1	1
Dolphy W., A. S. Smith, St. Thomas	2	2	2

THE TURF.

BELMONT LEADS WINNERS.

August Belmont heads the list of winning owners at Brighton for the week just ended, with $13,146. Sydney Paget stands second with $12,075, James R. Keene is third with $12,048, followed by the Barbarity Stable with $8,250.

MAHER DOING WELL.

Sam Heapy is by long odds the champion jockey of the Belgiam race courses. He has won 100 races out of 312 mounts, giving him an average of thirty per cent. Danny Maher still has a commanding lead over all the jockeys riding in England in percentage of wins, and is almost even with Wheatley in actual wins.

RACE WAS GOOD FOR $10,000.

Cairngorm's recent victory in the Brighton cup recalled the fact that his sire, Star Ruby, won a four mile race at the Bay District track in 1895, when in two previous races he had won at a mile and a sixteenth and a mile and an eighth. The Paget colt's share of Saturday's race was $9,000 and a $1,000 cup.

ROSEBEN MAKES A RECORD.

New York, N. Y., Oct. 6. — D. C. Johnson's Roseben, carrying the heavy impost of 147 pounds, made a new world's record for six furlongs, circular track, when he won the Manhattan handicap at Belmont Park today. He stepped the distance in 1:11 3-5, which is one-fifth of a second faster than Dick Welles' time made at Washington Park, Chicago, in August, 1905. The race run by Roseben today stamps him as the best sprinter in America, as the son of Ben Strome—Rose Leaf, picked up his 147 pounds and handled it like a feather. The victor was popular, but when the time was hung out, the great crowd burst in cheers, which were continued for fully five minutes. O'Neil sent Roseben into the lead at the start, with Aeronaut close up. Aeronaut held on to the stretch, where Roseben drew away and won, galloping, by four lengths. Dreamer, favorite, won the Dixiana stakes.

A SUSPENSION QUESTION.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 6.—The board of directors of the American Turf Association met last night, and let the contract for racing news service at all the association tracks to the Mitchell News Company of New York. A new rule was adopted providing that when a jockey, trainer, horse or owner is suspended by the judges at any track, such suspension or ruling shall only be until the next meeting of the board of directors. The rule thus insures speedier final action for the persons affected and also relieves the judges of responsibility of ruling a horseman or an animal off for life.

YESTERDAY'S WINNERS.

At Belmont Park—St. Roma 8 to 1, Kinleydale 7 to 5, Roseben 3 to 5, Dreamer even, Water Tank 5 to 1, New Mown Hay 6 to 5.

At Louisville — Nona W. Hogan, Ebony, Bonnie Sue, Matabon, Orient.

HEIR TO FORTUNE GONE

With $10,000,000 Coming to Him Runs Away From Luxury.

Pittsburg, Oct. 6.—Gassaway Davis, favorite nephew and heir presumptive of Henry Gassaway Davis, of West Virginia, recently the Democratic vice-presidential nominee and one of the wealthiest men in the State, has disappeared from the Homestead steel works, where he was employed as a fireman under an assumed name, and his wealthy relatives are exhausting every means to find him. The young man, who has always been noted for his love of adventure, has been gone for a month and has made no claim on the company for the pay envelope which lies in the office subject to his call.

It was about a year ago that the young man told his wealthy relatives that he was going out into the world to earn a living with his hands. At their solicitation he agreed to adopt an assumed name when occupying a mental position, and it was as "Oliver Hall" that he secured employment in the steel works.

From information today given the authorities by J. H. Davis, father of the young man, Henry Gassaway Davis, his uncle, kept close watch on the runaway nephew, and when he discovered him in the Homestead mills as Oliver Hall a few days after he started to work as a locomotive fireman he simply smiled and kept quiet.

A few days ago, however, when one of the Davis family went to the Carnegie offices at Homestead and asked to see Oliver Hall, the information was given that Hall had left the employ of the Carnegie company some time ago, a month or more, and that there was a balance in the pay envelope coming to him. The young fireman had disappeared and no one knew anything about him.

The messenger returned to West Virginia in haste and scattered the news that "Young Gassaway" had disappeared more than a month ago. J. H. Davis, his father, has come to the Pittsburg district to take up the search in person, while Henry Gassaway Davis has wired and telephoned to influential friends here to keep a lookout for the boy, who, it is understood, is to be made his principal heir.

"Young Gassaway" Davis has always had love for adventure, and it is said won the heart of his uncle by announcing when the latter went to Wasington as United States senator that he, too, must be taken along. It is said that he was placed as a page under another name by the senator from West Virginia. The young fellow has on several different occasions since then disappeared and turned up under assumed names in the cabs of some of his uncle's coal road locomotives in West Virginia. The millionaire uncle, fearing the boy would be killed, gave orders that he be not given dangerous employment.

Gassaway Davis is described as being slender and a trifle over six feet in height. He is smooth of face and does not look or act like one who looks forward to a $10,000,000 legacy. He is much at home in a locomotive cab.

TO OPEN RATE CAMPAIGN

Roosevelt Discusses Framing of a New Railway Measure.

Washington, Oct. 6.—President Roosevelt today took the first step in the strenuous campaign which he intends waging during the coming winter for railway rate legislation. He conferred with Representative Townsend of Michigan, part author of the Townsend-Esch Bill, which passed the House of Representatives last winter and which was held up in the Senate. Mr. Townsend was invited hither by the President and will call at the White House again tomorrow to discuss with Mr. Roosevelt the details of a new bill to be introduced as soon as Congress reassembles. It is unnecessary to repeat that President Roosevelt intends making railway rate legislation the most prominent feature of his national policy during the winter. Not only will he treat of the subject at some length in his annual message, but he intends to discuss it publicly during his forthcoming tour of the South.

A member of the Cabinet is responsible for the statement that it is the President's purpose to urge railway legislation upon Congress in his annual message, and then, if within a reasonable time that body does not respond, to send in a special message even stronger than the first. Again waiting with all proper patience for results, and not securing them the President will a second time send in a special message, "putting it up to" the national legislators.

MESSRS. C. C. RICHARDS & CO.,
Yarmouth, N. S.:

Sirs.—I came across a bottle of your MINARD'S LINIMENT in the hands of one of the students at the University of Maryland, and he being so kind as to let me use it for a very bad sprain, which I obtained in training for foot races, and to say that it helped me would be putting it very mildly, and I therefore ask if you would let me know of one of your agents that is closest to Baltimore, so that I may obtain some of it. Thanking you in advance, I remain, yours truly,

MR. HOWARD'S RECITAL.

Lovers of Shakespeare in this city were last evening given the opportunity to hear Mr. Howard's rendition of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," at the Masonic Temple. Even more pleasing then Mr. Howard's previous efforts in Macbeth was his work of last night. Mr. Howard's enunciation is peculiarly good and pleasing. Eminently successful have been his readings, and with anticipation will many look forward to future recitals.

SUICIDE WAS VERDICT.

The inquest into the death of the unfortunate Englishman, Hume, who drank carbolic acid at the Boswell House, was concluded last night, and the jury brought in the following verdict: "That William Hume came to his death on Monday, Oct. 2, 1905, at the rear of the Boswell House, from his own act, by taking carbolic acid." Coroner MacLaren examined the following witnesses: Jerry McDonald, W. Brown, Brammer Harrison, Israel Levi, Dr. Teasdall, W. F. Bell, Detective Rider and J. E. Platt.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTIONS.

E. A. Hardy, B.A., teacher training secretary of the Ontario Sunday School Association, will spend the coming week in Middlesex, attending and taking a principal part in a series of local Sunday school convention. His topics are of a practical kind, such as "The Preparation of the Lesson," "Lesson Analysis," Problems in Teaching," etc., and his talks should be helpful. Sunday and Monday he will spend in Strathroy and vicinity; Tuesday afternoon and evening he will be at meetings in the Baptist Church, Mount Brdyges; on Thursday he will attend the Dorchester annual Sunday school convention at Putnam (three sessions), and on Friday, the 13th inst., he will assist at the convention of Delaware and Westminster Townships to be held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, 8th concession, Westminster, morning and afternoon.

GOING TO CHINA.

Charles C. Elliott, M.D., has been accepted by the council of the China Inland Mission, and his passage is booked to Shanghai on the C. P. R. steamer leaving Vancouver at the end of this month. A farewell meeting has been arranged to take place in the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium next Thursday evening, and it is hoped there will be a large attendance to listen to the young missionary and other speakers. Dr. Elliott is a graduate of the Medical College in this city, and he also studied for a time in Edinburgh. Since then he has been practicing in the Wardsville district. The director of this China Inland Mission, Mr. Henry W. Frost, is well known in the Eastern States and Canada as a Bible teacher. He has visited London before, and doubtless those who heard him will be glad of the opportunity to hear him again. Mr. Frost has been the leader of the work of the C. I. M. on this continent since its commencement seventeen years ago, and he has visited China on three occasions.

DEATH OF JOHN SNELL.

At the advanced age of 85 years and 7 months, Mr. John Snell, one of Exeter's most respected citizens, passed away the other day. The late Mr. Snell was born in Devonshire, England, and in 1834, with his parents, emigrated to Canada. Special inducements were offered to settlers in this part of the country, and the Snell family decided to locate here for a time. Shortly afterwards they traded their property, which was situated near the present market, for a calf, and together with the latter trekked north and settled a little south of where Exeter now stands. Mr. Snell remained for nearly 45 years on his farm. He married early, but he survived his wife for nearly 36 years. A sister, Mrs. George Samwell, and a brother, Mr. Charles Snell, survive him, as do also six children—Mrs. A. Bagshaw, Mrs. James Ford, Mrs. A. Ford, Eli, Charles and George.

A SUNNY SEPTEMBER

Government's Official Summary of Month's Weather in Ontario.

The Government's monthly weather report says: In Ontario the weather in September was unusually warm, and in most districts the proportion of bright sunshine also exceeded the average. In southern and western portions of the Province, also at most places in extreme eastern counties, it was exceedingly dry, while elsewhere on the contrary it was unusually wet. Showers were frequent at most places from the 2nd to the 6th, also from the 11th to 19th, and on or about the 3rd, 13th, and 18th, the rainfall was heavy. Cool weather prevailed from the 13th to 15th, also from the 24th to 26th, when light frosts occurred at night at many stations.

TWO JAPS WILL BE ADMITTED TO NEXT GENERAL CONFERENCE

Representatives of Flowery Kingdom to Sit With the Methodists in 1906.

The fourth session of the Methodist mission board of Canada assembled at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in Dundas Center Church, with Rev. Dr. Carman in the chair. After the devotional exercises, Rev. J. J. Rae presented the report of the committee on home work and estimates committee.

Indian work	50,000
Property account	15,000
Total	$365,000

Home Missions	$133,120 00
West China	17,780 00
Japan	30,417 00
Foreigners in Canada	11,047 00
French work	8,594 50
Traveling and chairman's expenses	2,865 00
Sundries	50,000,00
Indian work	111,418 10
Total	$365,241 60

The committee on a delegation to China and Japan, through their secretary, Rev. Dr. Benson, recommended that Mr. H. H. Fudger, lay treasurer, should accompany the secretary, Rev. Dr. Sutherland, on that visit, and that each share alike in the duties and responsibilities involved in the work. In the event of Mr. Fudger's inability to attend, the matter of choosing another delegate in his stead, will be remitted to the local sub-committee at Toronto, to take the necessary action in the matter.

Rev. Dr. Sutherland asked that the matter of inviting representatives from Japan to the next general conference, and on motion it was decided to appoint two delegates to the next general conference in September, 1906.

Rev. Dr. Ryckman presented the report on French work. It dealt with it under two heads—evangelistic and educational. The former was characterized by great difficulty, as the Catholic Church forbade its members to attend the services. Nevertheless, the work had a great moral value. The educational work was most encouraging. The institution in Montreal was very valuable property. The school was taxed to its utmost capacity at present, and additions were necessary to carry on aggressive work. The report was adopted.

"THE WORST EVER"

Strathroy Age Thus Dubs New Mail Service on Sarnia Branch.

The feeling of the people of Strathroy regarding the new time-table and mail service on the Sarnia branch of the Grand Trunk is voiced by the Strathroy Age, which says:

"The changes made in the mail service to Strathroy and the surrounding country by the change of time-table of the Grand Trunk Railway, which came into operation Monday last, are not received with favor by our business people, and justly so. The service as it now stands is the worst that the town has ever received. It practically leaves us with only one service a day from the east, as the evening mail is not received until after business hours. It seems incredible in these days of busines dispatch, when everything has to be done so promptly, that the railway or postal authorities could not have foreseen that to even communicate with London, a distance of twenty miles, that it really covers two days to get a reply. A service like that is not up-to-date, and will not be tolerated, if our people show the business disposition that we think they possess. Our business interests demand the very best service possible, and if we show a united front, we feel sanguine that the present miserable arrangements will not last long. Our city fathers took action at their meeting Monday evening to petition the railway authorities for a change, but we should not permit the question to rest there. The matter should be laid before the Postmaster-General, through our representative, Mr. W. S. Calvert, who, we are sure, will be only too pleased to do what he can to assist in remedying the serious blow struck at our business institutions through a very defective mail service."

DIED UNEXPECTEDLY

Mr. T. R. Layborn Passes Away While Visiting in St. Kits.

Mr. Thomas R. Layborn, father of Major Layborn, of Wolseley Barracks, passed away at the home of Mrs. S. D. Woodruff, St. Catharines, on Thursday, where he had been visiting for about six weeks. Though he had been ill for some time, his condition was not thought to be serious. The late Mr. Layborn came from Netherland Battle, Sussex, England, together with Mrs. Layborn, who, with her daughter has been spending the summer in St. Catharines. A widow, a daughter and two sons survive. The later are Major Layborn, of this city, and Algernon Layborn, of Hamilton.

FOOD AGAIN

A Mighty Important Subject to Everyone

A Boston lady talks entertainly of food and the changes that can be made in health by some knowledge on that line. She says:

"An injury to my spine in early womanhood left me subject to severe sick headaches which would last three or four days at a time, and a violent course of drugging at the hands of old-fashioned physicians brought on constipation with all the ills that follow.

"My appetite was always light and uncertain and many kinds of food distressed me.

"I began to eat Grape-Nuts food two or three years ago, because I liked the taste of it, and I kept on because I soon found it was doing me good.

"I eat it always at breakfast, frequently at luncheon, and again before going to bed—and have no trouble in 'sleeping on it.' It has cured my constipation, my headaches have practically ceased, and I am in better physical condition at the age of 63 than I was at 40.

"I give Grape-Nuts credit for restoring my health, if not saving my life, and you can make no claim for it too strong for me to indorse." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich.

ALLEGED THIEF CAUGHT

Gave Two Different Names When Questioned by Police.

On Wednesday night last the slaughter-house of Walter Webb, of Dorchester, was entered, and a quantity of hides and a dressed lamb were stolen. Webb reported his loss and warned the near-by cities to be on the lookout for his property. On Thursday a man drove into Ingersoll with an old butcher's outfit, and offered some hides and a dressed lamb for sale. Suspicion was directed at him as the probable Dorchester thief. He was taken into custody by Chief Zeats. The man did not tell a very straight story, and in the process of questioning gave two different names, George Johnston and George Adair. He claimed he bought the hides.

Webb was sent for and identified part of the stolen property as his. The rest belonged to Robert Meadows of the Hamilton road.

It is suspected that the horse and rig were also stolen. The police think that the rig belongs to some person in this city.

"BILLY" GRAY IS "IT"

Conservative Club Chose Him for Another Term as President.

The Conservative Club, at its meeting last night, re-elected Mr. Wm. Gray as president. Vice-President T. W. McFarland occupied the chair, and delivered an address. The salary grab was severely criticised. The club also passed a resolution congratulating Premier Whitney on his strong administration. On the platform and among the speech-makers were Hon. Adam Beck, Dr. Roome, ex-M. P., A. T. McMahen, P. H. Bartlett, J. C. Judd and others. Mr. W. G. R. Bartram acted as secretary.

As Mr. Gray was in New York, a telegram, announcing his election, and also wishing him a pleasant holiday in the old land, was sent. The meeting adjourned for two weeks, when the election for the contested offices will take place.

The following nominations were made by the meeting:

Honorary President — Mr. T. H Smallman.

Second Vice-Presidents — Dr. F. P. Drake, Mr. J. R. Minhinnick, jun., Mr Wm. Howie.

Treasurer—J. C. Hazard.

Auditors—James Granger and E Rechnitzer.

Queries Answered.

BEACONSFIELD.—A owns a lot; A and B agree to plant it in potatoes, B to do all work, and each to have equal share in potatoes; not to be dug until all dug. Now, unknown to A, B has dug the best half of the potatoes and A heard from some one to whom he had told it that B got 14 bags. B dug the other piece and only got seven bags. A dug the row next to where B left off, ¾ of a bag in one row. Now B dug 17 rows for himself and A is sure B got 14 bags as where B started would be a better crop. Can A compel B to bring back 3½ bags, or what redress has A? Ans.—If A can prove that B took 14 bags he can sue B for damages equal to the value of 3½ bags.

WHISKERS LOOKED BLUE

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 7.—Dr. Howard A. Kelly, of the Johns Hopkins Hospital, returned from Europe today. He left Baltimore in May in order to go to London, where, with Drs. Halsted and Welch, of the Johns Hopkins, and Dr. William Osler, now regius professor of medicine at Oxford University, he sat for Sargent for a group portrait to be presented to the Johns Hopkins University by Miss Mary Garrett, of this city. The painting is now about completed. The sittings occupied about a month.

Speaking of the painting, Dr. Kelly said: "Dr. Welch was not entirely satisfied with the artist's work because his beard appeared blue. Dr. Welch thought the color of the beard ought to be changed, but Mr. Sargent would not agree to it. He said the whiskers looked blue to him, and blue they must remain.

"The peculiar color was caused by the hood of Dr. Welch's gown. All of us were in academic costumes, consisting of black silk robes with hoods of different colors. It was decided that the robes should not be of bright colors, but that the hoods should. Dr. Welch's hood was blue, hence the blue reflection in the beard. Dr. Osler's was red, Dr. Halsted wore pink, the Yale color, and I wore the green hood of medicine."

CAN'T SAY ENOUGH IN THEIR FAVOR

Why Miss Gusty V. Campbell Recommends Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets to All Her Friends Who Have Stomach Troubles.

"I cannot say enough in favor of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets," so says Miss Gusty V. Campbell, Little Shippegan, Gloucester county, N. B. Of course, Miss Campbell has reasons for making a statement like this, and here they are:

"I suffered from Dyspepsia for two months, and was always getting worse till advertisements led me to use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. One box cured me and I can honestly recommend them to anyone suffering from Dyspepsia."

The moral of this is that if you take your stomach trouble before it gets too firm a grip it is easily cured by Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. One box cured Miss Campbell.

But as in Miss Campbell's case, stomach trouble, if neglected, always grows worse. In its worst stages it takes time to cure it. But Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets will do it.

It has long been a debated question whether the wolves would return with the increase in the number of deers in Northern New England. Certain it is that four were seen at East Middlebury, Vt., last week, and the same ones, or others, have been seen before in the same vicinity.
