Archbishop Walsh.
(From the Toronto Catholic Review, Dec. 7.)
The installation of his Grace Archbishop Walsh in the Metropolitan See of Toronto, took place on Wednesday evening, the 27th ult., at St. Michael's Cathedral. The distinguished prelate was received by the clergy and laity of Toronto in an ardent and affectionate manner, and with every mark of respect and gladness. He did not come to his new charge as a stranger, for in earlier years he had labored in Toronto, and friendship and love had grown around him here. This relationship the Archbishop himself referred to in a few beautiful words which he delivered with much tenderness and with evident feeling. "You are no strangers to me," he said, "for I spent thirty years of my priesthood among you. I return in my advanced autumn. I come back to you Toronto in appearance, it is true, for time and labors and cares have left their marks upon me, but unchanged, I am sure, in my heart's best wishes for you."
Dr. Walsh's return drew forth the most joyful manifestations of the respect and affection felt for him by the Catholic people, and his entrance into the city would have been a royal one had not a violent storm of rain and snow rendered impossible the carrying out of the programme arranged upon. Not by Catholics alone, but by the citizens generally of all denominations, was the coming of the Archbishop to Toronto, looked forward to with anticipation. That this was the true feeling in the city was evinced by the deep sense of pain and indignation which on the next day it became known that an event so pleasing to all had been disturbed by the black-guarding of a band of hoodlums. A cowardly outrage on the distinguished and patriotic prelate on the public streets. The details which will be found in this report tell the nature of the attack, which was so sudden and so silent as to have attracted scarcely any attention on the time. To say that it marred the spirit of the popular demonstration would be an exaggeration. The welcome which the new Archbishop received as Hamilton by a representative body of the Catholic citizens of Toronto must have given him an idea of the warm feelings with which his people awaited him. The throng which assembled at the Union station on the arrival of the Archbishop in the city left no room for questioning the affection which ruled aside all sense of inconvenience by weather. All along the streets through which the Archbishop passed, St. Michael's Cathedral greeted him everywhere with cheers. At the Cathedral, after the pontifical brief had been read by one of the administrators of the archdiocese, addressed by the clergy and laity were presented to his Grace. His replies to these were clear, strong, deliberate expressions upon the reception of the high office which he had accepted.
THE FAREWELL AT LONDON.
The farewell to Archbishop Walsh at London was marked by every thing expressive of regret and affection. At 9 o'clock on the day of his Grace's departure a solemn mass was sung in St. Peter's Cathedral in the presence of the Archbishop and Clergy. Rev. J. Bayard, of Saris, officiated, assisted by Rev. Fathers Brady, of Woodstock, and Aylward, of St. Thomas, as deacons and readers. The Archbishop and Fathers Kennedy being masters of ceremonies. The departing Archbishop was attended by Rev. Father Kilroy, of Stratford, and Rev. Father O'Connor, of Sandwich, administrator of the diocese. Archbishop Cleary was attended by Fathers Wagner and Murphy. The mass comprised Mozart's Twelfth and Haydn's No. 3, and was beautifully rendered.
At the conclusion of the mass the priests of the diocese advanced and formed a half-circle around the Archbishop's throne. Their address was then read by the Rev. W. Flannery, P. P., of St. Thomas. The address recounted in eloquent words the meritorious works which were the results of the Archbishop's life and labors as a priest and bishop; the growth of the church and the multiplication of parishes; the progress of religion; and his Grace's many acts of private charity, his personal kindness to his priests, and his practical sympathy with the poor and afflicted. The address spoke also of the archbishop's departure brought them, and was supplemented with the gift of an archiepiscopal outfit, the joint offering of the clergy and laity of London.
The Archbishop replied in a very feeling manner. He thanked the priests for their address, and for the magnificent gift of the friends, whose friendship was that of a lifetime. He was grateful to the priests for their support and constant cooperation. If he had succeeded in building schools and churches it was because of the hearty support he had received from the priests. Some time ago, when the late bishop of Peterborough was in that diocese collecting, he said that during the whole time that he was among the priests of the diocese no word of disloyalty against their bishop was ever uttered, nor any criticism of his actions ever spoken. This statement redounded more to their glory than to the glory of the bishop whom they respected so much as to have that said of them. It showed, too, the spirit of true faith. For the priests of the church and ministers of the Gospel, the only true happiness was to keep as near to God as possible, and to be true priests, not only in faith, but in an honest, conscientious performance of their Christian duties. He hoped and prayed that they might keep loyal in their adherence to the church and in their support of and cooperation with their successors.
The Archbishop replied to the Archbishop's reply, about forty gentlemen of the Cathedral congregation, advanced to the sanctuary where

Mr. Thomas Coffey read an address on behalf of the laity of the diocese. The Archbishop's reply was very affecting. After thanking them and exhorting them to go on bravely for the cause of God and assuring them of his love, the Archbishop's concluding words of farewell were almost inaudible, his feelings apparently overpowering him, while traces of emotion were visible on many faces in the Cathedral.
At the conclusion of the ceremony the Archbishop, a banquet was given in the palace to the Archbishop, at which good music and social intercourse were prominent.
An address was presented to Father Walsh, nephew of the Archbishop, by Father O'Connor, of the Rock Hill, on behalf of the priests of the diocese. The address spoke of their regret at parting, and was accompanied by a well-filled purse. Father Walsh replied suitably, and in a few words of the proceedings was a speech by Archbishop Cleary.
At about 1:30 the congregation re-assembled at the Cathedral, and escorted the Archbishop to the Grand Trunk station. The procession was headed by the 7th band. At the station a last farewell was given.
MEETING HIS GRACE.
At 3:40 p.m. a special train was in readiness at the Union Station to carry the Toronto reception committee, the representatives of the several societies and parishes to Hamilton, and to return with them in time for the public demonstration and the ceremony of installation at St. Michael's Cathedral. A Director's car of the Grand Trunk Railway contained the members of the committee, and in it the Archbishop and bishops were brought down from Hamilton to Toronto. Hon. Frank Smith, as chairman of the reception committee, was in charge of the deputation.
ARRIVAL IN TORONTO.
The Union station could not hold all the faithful people who braved the storm that they might properly welcome the Archbishop to Toronto. The crowd overflowed out to York street, and although the rain fell incessantly and relentlessly down, they patiently awaited the arrival of the train bearing the Archbishop. Although the surroundings were the most depressing, every body was cheerful and enthusiastic. The course, the idea of carrying out the original programme had to be abandoned, as an organized street procession would have been an utter impossibility.
The train should have arrived at seven o'clock, but it was thirty-five minutes past the hour when the first gleam of the head light burst upon the assemblage as the engine swung round a curve and a muffled rattling into the station with its load, pulling up at the north platform. A mighty shout of welcome went up from the crowd as the Archbishop, who had been in the car, stepped little procession from the police fall back to make room for his Grace. Attended by Hon. Frank Smith, he walked briskly to the carriage of the train, which was waiting and entered, followed by the Senator and Father Walsh. It was at this juncture that the cheering began in earnest, and there was no cessation of the enthusiasm on the part of the crowd until the Archbishop was safely within the portals of the cathedral. Those who had accompanied him entered the fifty or more carriages that were there, and the procession on wheels started up town with the Archbishop in the lead. Guarding his carriage was a cordon of police on horse and on foot, and it is well that they were there, for before the procession had reached front street it became evident that in the great throng were persons who were not so cordially disposed towards the Archbishop as those who were participating with such enthusiasm in the reciprocal demonstration. The first indication of hostility was conveyed by a few derisive shouts, to which little attention was paid, but as the aggressiveness of the shouters became more manifest, and as so many young men formed themselves around the Archbishop's carriage, to defend him should any attack be made upon him.
At Wellington and York street the windows of the vehicle were shattered to add insult to injury the Archbishop's ears were greeted by the song, "We'll hang the Pope on a Sour Apple Tree." The line of carriages turned rapidly to Yonge street, the shouting was recommenced with increased vigor. The vigilance of the police was redoubled and their strength augmented by the officers who joined them along the route. The crowd became more dense as the procession passed up Yonge street, and at Queen street a block-ade was only prevented by the caution of the police. When the Archbishop's carriage was opposite Bond street it was assailed by a regular fusillade of missiles projected from a knot of disreputable youths who stood on the corner. The windows of the vehicle were shattered and the occupants escaped without injury. The long line turned up church street, and proceeded without interruption to Shuter street where another cowardly attack was made upon his Grace. A chorus of derisive shouts and groans was followed by a shower of stones, one of which entered the carriage and struck his Grace upon the wrist, causing it to bleed, and causing an extremely painful wound. His carriage finally drew up opposite the main entrance of the cathedral on Bond street and he passed in. He took to the credit of the friends of the Archbishop that they made no attempt to retaliate upon the hoodlums who had so unjustly insulted and assaulted him, for a move of that kind would undoubtedly have precipitated a riot. The police were seen as possible put an end to the frequent manifestations of hostility. They were under the command of an Inspector and numbered 140 men.

circles than that of Judge Thayer, his father. Judge Thayer has been for years an active and, in many instances, a pronounced member of the Diocesan Convention of Pennsylvania. He is considered to be an authority on canonical law, and is a foremost member of the church.
General Thayer is a graduate of the West Point Military Academy, and stood high in his class. He did not remain long in the army, but soon resigned and accepted a position as civil engineer with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. While he held the position he was appointed Brigadier-General, commanding the First Brigade of the National Guard from whence comes his title.
Subsequently, General Thayer was appointed Superintendent of Fairmount Park, and he has held the place without interruption for about ten years.
He was sent some year or so ago by a friend a book which treated of the Catholic church as being antagonistic to the principles of Americanism and republican institutions. As he himself says, this book led him to study the religion of the world. He applied for enlightenment and information to Archbishop Ryan. The Archbishop took him under his personal guidance and teaching. General Thayer soon brought his wife and children to join him in the teaching, and on last Saturday he, together with his entire family, was baptized and received into the Catholic church at the archiepiscopal residence at the Cathedral.
General Thayer was seen at his home at Chesnut Hill last night. He met the visitor at the door and ushered him through the hall and into his elegant and richly furnished parlor.
He was asked if it was true that he had renounced the Protestant church in favor of Catholicism.
The General hung his head in thought for a second or two and then, with a smile upon his face, replied:
"I feel very thankful to God that I am now a member of the holy Catholic church and a believer in the true faith."
Relapsing into a study which lasted until it almost became painful, General Thayer finally continued:
"I am very sorry that any publicity is to be given to this matter, and I can hardly see how the public is interested in it. But you have asked me a fair question and there is no reason why I should hesitate to answer. My paramount reason is because it brings me nearer to God and into a closer communion with him. It is no sudden decision I have made, and my course is not the result of a sudden determination. I have been studying and considering the subject for two years. I have examined all the Christian religions and none have pleased me so well as the Catholic religion. I have read the Bible and I have read the lives of the great men of the world, and I have seen how the Catholic belief is the true religion of the Lord Jesus Christ."
In the most earnest manner General Thayer desired it to be understood that he did not desire to imply that he had any ill-feeling towards any Protestant church and did not want to be placed in the position of criticizing the acts or beliefs of others.
"The Catholic faith," he explained, "hangs on faith, hope and charity, especially the latter. As a body the Catholic church shows charity for the forgiveness of our neighbors."
General Thayer spoke at length, showing that he was most thoroughly convinced of the correctness of his belief. He said that all good Catholics were ready to die for their belief, and would, indeed, be glad to do so. "My action is final," he added, in conclusion, "and I am glad to say that my wife and three children believe as I do, and are now members of the holy Catholic church and believers in the old faith."
Judge Thayer, at his residence last evening, without expressing any surprise at the course of his son, said: "If he has done such a thing he has not said anything to me about it. My son and myself are on the most affectionate terms, and he came to see me four days ago, when he did not say anything of this reported action."—Philadelphia Times, Nov. 21.

Conversion of a Preacher.
The following beautiful incident is one of the contributions of the columns of the Washington, D. C. Church News, by "Antiquarian":
An incident that happened while Father de Necker was living in Washington illustrates his great faith in the prayers of children, which was as notable a characteristic as his admirable energy. He was called by a Catholic relative of a sick girl—Joseph named Vinton, who was a brother of Rev. Dr. Vinton of Trinity church, New York city, and a secretary to one of the members of the Cabinet. Though kindly reproval, Father de Necker was unable to resist the entreaties of the child to excite the sick man's interest in the teachings of the church. One night as the good Father was returning from his fruitless task he thought of the orphan children, with whom he was a great favorite. He almost ran to St. Vincent's asylum, but there the Sister told him that the little ones were all in bed.
"Please call them up," said Father de Necker, "and tell them to say a 'Hail Mary' for the conversion of a poor dying man."
The Sister complied with his request, and Father de Necker went home with a hopeful heart. Before going to his own room he stopped to tell Father Ward how unsuccessful his work had been and how he had set the orphans praying for the success. While they were conversing the college door bell rang, and then a Brother came to tell Father de Necker that he was wanted right away at Mr. Vinton's house.
Suffice it to say that the orphan prayers had "pierced the clouds." Mr. Vinton died that night a Catholic, only a few hours after he had received the sacraments of the church. Father de Necker preached the funeral discourse at St. Patrick's church before the President, the Cabinet, prominent citizens and distinguished Government officials.

CANADIANS
Work Too Hard!
The Health is Broken-Down System, often ends in Inanity.
Thousands of over-worked business men, worried householders, nervous mechanics, and tired women, in all parts of the Dominion are to-day in a terrible position. Their nerves are weak, digestion poor, head aching, and they cannot sleep, work or live in comfort. This is what fills our Inmate Asylums. This is the cause of that terrible Pauper. Before it is too late, use Dr. Philip's wonderful discovery, Philip's Compound. For the whole system, and tones up the overworked body and brain. Do not despair, but use this wonderful remedy, and be restored to health and happiness, the same as was Mr. John L. Brodie, of Montreal, who writes: "I have great pleasure in recommending your Philip's Compound. My system was run down and I was fastidious, could not sleep well at night and was nervous. I commenced taking Philip's Compound and improved immediately. I am now able to undertake my business and endure any amount of excitement without bad effect."
Philip's Compound can be purchased at any druggist's for one dollar, or sent direct from WILLIS RICHMOND & Co., Montreal.

FROM THE HEIGHTS.

By JOHN BUTLER O'BRIEN, Esq. [An old man, with a white beard and a pair of spectacles, sat on a bench in a park...

SIMON VERDE.

He resembles his mother, who was an angel. She deserved eternal happiness for the part she had with her husband. Simon had been looking round as if seeking something, and at last said: "Mother, where is the child? I don't see her."

CHAPTER III.

The next morning Simon set out with his inseparable companion, the good Papalina, for a neighboring estate, where he generally brought pink-blossomed flowers to sell in the market.

spring, the sky was threatening rain, and great drops of rain fell, heavily, from the clouds. Simon was passing through the olive yards that extend for some distance outside the town, and crossing a rocky bog wetted by the stagnant waters of a small, sluggish spring. He was arguing with himself as to having been persuaded to sell his chest, and from time to time said in a broken voice: "It can't be helped. In this world one cries and another laughs. The crookedness of this Alcade is, like the mercy of God, infinite!"

"My son, if he is discovered, God knows how you will get out of it. At least, it will take all you do to." "True, mother, I have foreseen him; but when I found him he was dying of want and hunger. He told me he had no shelter; he got over me. What could I do? I wish I had never met him. Still, if I must have anything to regret, I would rather it were for having saved a fugitive than for having refused to help my neighbor, as God commands."

"Just like my lock again," thought he. They have caught the rebel, and I am released. What sorrow for my mother and daughter! "Simon," said the Alcade, when he was brought before him, "there has been a requisition for a factious rebel who is said to be about here. Last night you hid a man in your house. Say who it was."
